The 43rd annual meeting of the agricultural workers of the South was recently held at Memphis with over a thousand delegates present from 14 states. On the speaker's list was Robert T. Mc-Millan, professor of sociology, Oklahoma Agricultural college, who taid them that the war would be followed by unemployment of colossal proportions; that it would increase public debta, lower wages, bankrupt nations, bring social and political unrest and affect our moral and religious life by the lowering of ideals. It may not be so bad as all that but it certainly will have its train of evils, like the physical collapse that follows a faver.

for them to buy, for the output of automobiles has been shut off and the production of many other articles, such as radios and household appliances, has been curtailcd.

As a result, thousands of farmers are wisely deciding to invest eart of their incomes in improving their homes. By doing so they are betterng their living conditions and at the same time. improving the value of their proj

The great changes that have

The great changes that have been made in farming in recent years by electrification and improved plumbing have made many farm houses obsolete. With electricity and running water now widely available, the farm family is entitled to a home up to the best city standard.

Important among the advantages now possible through new dwellings and remodeling is insulation. Many farm homes have been notoriously hard to heat and keen comfortable. Insulation makes the house more livable the year around. Less fuel is required for heating and in summer the rooms are cooler.

The long-refuged German bat-tleships Gneisenau and Scharn-horst and the cruiser Print Eugen slipped away from their French coast anchorages Thursday with a strong air and suf-face escert and engaged the Royal Air force and the British Navy in the greatest land-sea-air battle off the Dover coast ince the fall of France.

After the furious battle, to which even the shore guns on the Dover cliff added their thuns der, the German ships were last reported escaping to new base in the Helgoland bight. The cost was great to both to free the 25,000-ton battleships and the Prinz Eugen, a survivor of the Bismarck-hood sinkings, for new Nazi implements in the attle of the Atlantic.

hattle of the Atlantic.

The British acknowled red they lost 42 planes including 20 hombers and said "casualties in our destoyers were not heavy."

The joint Admiralty-Air Ministry communique early Friday morning placed the German losses at 18 fighter planes and said observations through muggy weather indicated bomb blows were falling back before the winmain enemy units and a torpedo lat was made on a destroyer.

When last alghted the enemy units were reported making for poets in the Falgoland light.
