

Increase In Farms

"These changes strengthen the basis of the nation's agriculture and, combined with other developments such as greater farm income and savings, indicate marked progress in the well-being and security of an increasing number of farm families," the Institute stated.

"One of the important factors in the decline in tenancy was the general prosperity in agriculture in recent years, a development which gave many tenants the financial means to buy farms of their own. Likewise, greater opportunities for employment off the farm in business and industry since 1940 led many tenants to give up farming entirely. Contributing to this trend were the great technological improvements in farming and rapid mechanization in recent years which permitted agriculture to raise more food and fiber than ever before with fewer people."

The peak in farm tenancy was established in 1935 when approximately 2.9 million farms, or 42 per cent of all farms, were tenant-operated. In the following decade the number of tenant farmers declined more than a million and their proportion of all farm operators fell to 32 per cent. A sample survey of 11,000 farms conducted by the Department of Agriculture early this year indicated that the proportion of tenancy at that time had declined further to around 27 per cent.

The highest number of sharecroppers on record was 776,278 in 1930. Fifteen years later, in 1945, the number had dropped to 446,666. This represented a decline of about 42 per cent as compared with a drop in all farm tenancy of 35 per cent from the 1935 high point to 1945."

4. Relate scientific research more closely to strategic planning.

The failure to have war planning geared to feasible scientific developments was said to constitute "one of the most glaring deficiencies in the whole panorama of the national security organization."

The joint chiefs of staff (the commanders of Army, Navy and Air Force) "feel that their strategic responsibility must not be impaired, yet the simple fact is that the joint chiefs of staff are not now equipped for technical evaluation." Such evaluation requires scientific analysis "of a sort not generally found in uniform."

Forrestal yesterday announced the creation of a joint chiefs-research board group on weapons evaluation.

5. Speed up plans for civilian mobilization in case of war, including economic, industrial and manpower mobilization. In another section, the committee said the condition of the nation's stockpile of strategic materials needed for a war is "deplorable."

6. Make adequate provision for use of and protection against "unconventional means of warfare." This includes "not only the atom bomb, but the other radiological and biological and chemical weapons that have appeared, definitely and terribly, upon the horizon of warfare."

Newspaper Prizes

"If you will look over the famous old newspapers of our early days, or read American political history, you will find there was virtually no effort by any paper to give both sides of an election campaign. The early papers were party organs, and the famous early editors were passionate spokesmen who saw no good in, and therefore no reason to report, anything the opposition did or said."

"From the two standpoints of editorials and news content, more newspapers probably gave less cause for offense this year than in any previous election. Yet they obviously got in bad."

"The answer seems to get down to a third factor which was emphasized more in this campaign than previously."

"This factor was the element of prophecy—or predicting the result, of trying to forecast what was to come. There's where the papers fell flat on their faces. The polls, columnists and assorted experts proved so wrong that their failure was an outstanding feature of the campaign from a newspaper stand-

British Investigate Carrier Sabotage

(Continued From Page One Sec. 2) in Normandy the American Army made advances measured in terms of yards rather than miles. The landscape offered almost as much resistance to progress as did the dug-in enemy.

The chief obstacles were the famous Normandy hedgerows. They were massive banks of dirt, centuries old, and topped by thick growths of shrubbery and small trees.

"When our tanks hit them, it was like cracking into a stone wall," said Culin. "And if we tried to climb over them, the underbelly of the tank was exposed."

The German anti-tank guns then could rip us open like sardines cans. Our own tank guns were pointed at the sky; useless. We couldn't defend ourselves."

The problem was to find a way for the tanks to force a path through the hedgerows, guns firing, instead of clambering over them. At first combat engineers were sent out on foot to blast holes in the hedgerows. But they were picked off by German infantry.

"One day my commanding officer called a meeting of non-coms to get suggestions," said Culin. "I didn't know anything about mechanics or engineering, but I had seen a lot of German iron roadblocks."

"I suggested putting sharpened chunks of iron from these roadblocks on our tanks so we could dig through the hedgerows."

"They tried it. They welded four flanges to a crossbar, fixed it to a tank, and the 15-ton vehicle pitch-forked its way right through the nearest hedgerow."

"General Bradley heard about it and came down to watch a demonstration," said Culin. "He saw it worked, and swore us to secrecy. He then secretly had 600 of our frontline tanks equipped. They were to spearhead our attack."

The device caught the Germans completely by surprise, and the American army made a successful breakthrough of the Nazi lines at St. Lo on July 25th, 1944—the breakthrough that carried to the Siegfried Line.

"Later they called me and three others back to corps headquarters and gave us the Legion of Merit for the invention," said Culin. "All I meant to me was a half-day off from the front."

"One of those who got a medal," he grinned, "was an officer who insisted when I made the suggestion that it would never work."

Culin lost his left foot and had part of his right thigh blown off a few weeks later in the Hürtgen Forest when he stepped on a German mine and fell on another one."

"But it didn't make me a pacifist," he said. "Hell, no. I don't think we're doing half enough to stop this thing."

In quick order 130 men in the outfit joined the travelers. They chartered three planes which will leave here the night of Dec. 21, when the Christmas furlough starts, and land them in New York and New England way-points within the following 24 hours. One of the 72nd's planes will stop at Chicago, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

Recruit Paul G. Currier of Brooklyn, organized his 23rd Infantry pals and today he has three planes chartered and a growing list of "me too's."

Men from virtually every unit on the post are clamoring to get on the tanks to force a path through the hedgerows, guns firing, instead of clambering over them. At first combat engineers raised Israeli hopes.

However, the little nation was unable by two votes to muster the strength necessary to carry her into the world peace organization, which would have been a great boost to her prestige.

Only six council members voted for a French proposal to delay the vote for a month. Only four voted for Britain's plan to delay action indefinitely. Without the necessary seven votes, both proposals failed.

Canada had joined with France in seeking the month's delay. Canadian Delegate R. G. Piddell told the Council it should consider the formation of the Arab state envisioned in the 1947 partition plan -- by force, if necessary. He said it should also study how to put into effect the economic union of Jewish and Arab Palestine provided for in the 1947 partition decision.

Soviet Delegate Jacob Moshé called Britain and Syria to doubt the existence of the Jewish state in Palestine. He said Britain saw no reason for postponing the voting on the application.

China said she would vote for indefinite delay because a vote on the application would complicate the work of the new three-power Palestine commission set up by the general assembly before it adjourned here Sunday.

"Kitty Hawk"

"Hawk," as the Wright plane is known after the site where it first flew, and "The Spirit Of St. Louis," the plane flown by Charles A. Lindbergh on his historic New York-Paris flight in 1927.

Both planes now are suspended from the ceiling in the north hall of the museum's Arts and Industry Building. For 20 years the Kitty Hawk was on display in the British Museum in London until it was recently returned to the United States.

As the acceptance ceremony took place, jet planes flashed across the sky and huge B-29's and a B-36 soared over the capital in an air display perhaps even inundated by the Wrights when they built their small flying machine.

Mr. Truman's message, read by his Air Force aide, Col. Robert H. Landers, joined in expressing gratitude to the Wright brothers for their contribution in making the priceless relic available for display in the National Museum.

Mr. Truman's message said: "I feel that the entire nation will rejoice because the historic craft is home again. I can think of no acquisition to the treasures of the National Museum, administered by the Smithsonian Institution, which would exemplify more eloquently the purpose of its founder in providing here in the national capital an establishment for the increase of diffusion of knowledge among men."

POMPANO, Fla., Dec. 17 (UPI)—Orville Wright "almost" witnessed Orville Wright's first flight at Kitty Hawk 50 years ago today.

He missed it because neither he nor any one else knew he believed the contraption assembled by the Wright brothers actually could fly.

Jones, now a commercial printer, at the time was a cub reporter for the Asheville Citizen.

"My assignment was to take pictures of the thing," Jones recalled today.

His city editor told me to draw him and go to Kitty Hawk. It was the most money I ever had my hands on until that time.

I stood around in the cold for two hours and watched the Wright brothers' self-made contraption in and out of the workshop. I got lost at first.

In the early morning of Dec. 17, 1903, I went to the railroad station and waited, fed by my wife until my train came. I bought a newspaper at Goldsboro, and limped down on my inside page found a little story -- the first flight had been made while I was three miles away, sitting by a stove.

issued later in the day by Rep. John McDowell (D-R.I.) of the committee.

Meanwhile, a New federal grand jury went to work to "expose the entire field of a crime." It met for two hours and found one witness, Whittaker Chambers, confessed former communist courier whose account is vital to the indictment of Alger Hiss.

McDowell had been slated to conduct the committee hearing as one-man subcommittee. Committee investigators had said new witnesses were on tap for quizzing about the activities a decade ago of Hiss, former high state department official now under indictment for perjury.

Ho 14:4: I will beat their backsliding.

The New York grand jury which indicated Alger Hiss for perjury in connection with the theft of State Department papers evidently agreed that he was a "red" if not a "red herring."

We are all in favor of giving the President a raise. With all the entertaining he has to do in spite of the present high cost of food, he needs it. But if he got a $75,000 raise, he could keep only $17,000 of it, on account of income taxes.

Chiang Kai Shek should heed the advice of his friends and resign as President of China, not because he isn't the best man available for the job, but because he has been carrying the load for over twenty years, a load which entailed an impossible situation. And that is long enough for anyone. Besides, if he doesn't resign, they'll probably cut his head off.

Congratulations to Richard Bass on winning both the Peter School trophy and the Lions Club award for football prowess and to Charles Andersen who received the new Kader trophy. It is a great honor to be thus singled out from among eleven good men as the outstanding player. Both of these boys are going places and we predict for them a great future on the football field.

Senator Pepper says he will support the Civil Rights legislation if it defeats him in 1950, even the one which says there shall be no discrimination in employment on account of race, religion or nationality, which he says is limited to interstate commerce, but since the Supreme Court has already ruled in effect, that the Sanford Herald is engaged in interstate commerce, if the government should order us to employ a Chinese as society editor, it would not be the publisher of the Herald who would object so much, we are afraid, as it would be some of the society women about whom she would have to write.

A carload of Sanford people motored to Jacksonville last week to do their Christmas shopping. Although they probably understood that the cost of transportation plus their hotel bill had to be added to the cost of the things they bought, what they did not seem to realize is that every dollar spent out of town for things which could have been bought from local merchants is just one dollar less which the merchants might use to improve their stores and their stocks of merchandise. People who trade out of town are not helping to make the local stores better or to stimulate the progress or prosperity of the community.

The paths of glory lead but to the grave and so do the paths of safety. But how much nicer, when your time comes, to know that you have left behind you, if not footprints on the sands of time, at least a life sublime. Mal Daugherty, who died the other day, was twenty-five years ago a national figure, prominent Ohio banker, his son, Harry, was attorney general in the cabinet of President Harding when the greatest scandal in history of national politics was around his head. Daugherty actually went to jail, but it was all the lawyers in Christendom, most of his money to escape charges of embezzlement, misappropriation of funds, and falsification of reports in connection with the Standard Oil deal.

Opponent Of War

One of the important casualties in the elections to the House of Representatives was Harold Knutson of Minnesota, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. He had held his seat for 32 years, came uncathed through the Roosevelt landlides, and must have felt himself secure.

The change in national sentiment since 1917, when Knutson entered Congress, is seen in the fact that he is the last survivor in Congress of the band that voted against the first war with Germany. There were no less than 50 in the House and six in the Senate. One by one they have died or left public life except Knutson, and now he leaves the House.

The vote for holding to peace, even under provocation, was much stronger in 1917 than in 1941. Only one vote was cast against war with Japan, and that by Representative Jeannette Rankin of Montana, who also had voted against war with Germany 24 years earlier. War against Germany and Italy was declared unanimously in 1941. Miss Rankin not voting.

Knutson has often been accused of isolationism, but his views have altered somewhat in a quarter of a century. Unwillingness to vote for war is not necessarily the mark of an isolationist. True isolationism, which is failure to recognize the nation's responsibilities to the world, still exists in the United States.

The One Person Who Can Hurt You

Warden Lawes of Sing Sing was famous for his advice to those leaving that penitentiary. To a man who was going out into the world again, he would say, "You'll need peace of mind out there, so keep away from your enemies and from those you can't trust. If you were framed, forget it. Bitterness won't bring back the years you spent here, but it will spoil the years ahead and break down your guard against future trouble.

"Remember, the greatest harm your enemies can do to you is to instill fear, hatred, and rage in your heart, and muddle your brain with fury so you will try to hurt them. In trying to harm them you will harm yourself doubly—first with the misery of bitterness, and then by the penalty you'll have to pay if you succeed. No man was ever broken by treachery by ingratitude or by unfairness—only by the bitterness that they sowed in his heart."

Yes realization that there is only one person who can hurt us is vital to every one of us no matter what our age, occupation, or station in life. Doctor, lawyer, penitentiary warden, minister—they all say the same thing: "There's only one person who can hurt you—youself!"—William F. French in Your Life.

Record Holders

Albert Einstein and one or two other professors excepted, New Jersey's best known citizen may be Walter E. Edge, twice governor, once senator, and former ambassador to France. His newly published autobiography, "Jerseyman's Journal," takes just pride in the fact that 27 years after his first election as governor he was called on again to head the state.

This is unusual, but not the record. The longest stretch between terms in a state governorship was probably that of James B. McCleary. He was chosen as governor of Kentucky in 1875 over John M. Harlan, later justice of the Supreme Court for 34 years and known as "the great dissembler." Then followed 12 years in the House of Representatives and six in the Senate. Finally in 1911, 36 years after his first election, the Kentucky Democrats picked him for the second time as their nominee for governor. He was elected, but that ended his run of success. In 1914, while still governor, he tried for a second term in the Senate, but was defeated.

Few men have spread their holding of public office over so many years.

To Tell South's Story

Tampa Tribune

We applaud the action of the Southern governors in creating a Southern Foundation to tell the rest of the nation the South's story. Any individual who has taken the trouble to read the spiteful stuff printed in some Northern magazines and newspapers about the South will appreciate the need of such an organization.

The outright lies which have been published about this region are bad enough. But the trumped-up innuendoes, the sneaky insinuations and the far less obvious half-truths are even worse. The sad fact is that these distortions are being accepted as gospel by those of our Northern friends who know nothing of the South, except what they read in these articles.

To be sure, the South has its problems and needs. The South should welcome knowledgeable and constructive comment on the vital questions which confront this section. But the point to be underscored is that wholesale misrepresentations and smears by the misinformed and the professional bleeding-hearts can only do harm. They are strong for clear and factual reporting of the problems of the South's efforts to solve the questions and the growth and development, both economically and intellectually. Neither an apology nor drawn-out debate is necessary. All we need to do is let the rest of the nation know the truth about this area.

So, by all means, let's get the Southern Foundation to work. If it will operate objectively and constructively, with no trace of a defensive attitude, the foundation will tell the truth about the South and thereby stimulate progress and understanding.

AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

With the mention of the "cold war" the thoughts of the Western world naturally turn to Europe as the focal point of the conflict, because the European Theatre presents a greater immediate challenge to our security and resources.

That's rather a pity because it tends to make us overlook the fact that we are fighting a two-front war and that the Orient also is a vital and growing battle ground in this epochal clash of the lans. And at this juncture no one can say with any degree of certainty where the decisive engagement of the global upheaval will be fought.

The news from the Far East isn't good from the viewpoint of opponents of Bolchevism. With the Nationalist government of China rocking on its heels before the Communist assault, the quarrel in neighboring Indonesia between the Red-influenced republic and the Dutch government has again become critical. An American spokesman in Paris yesterday said the United States probably would call on the United Nations Security Council to take up this issue and that is good news.

You know the fundamental basis of the trouble in Indonesia, which is one of the world's treasure houses for tin, rubber, oils, quinine, sugar, spices and other essentials. The natives want their "independence" from the Netherlands and quickly, the Dutch are trying to hold the heterogeneous mass of islanders into some sort of cohesion that the "mother country" hopes to develop into a commonwealth of nations acknowledging the crown as a bond.

The problem isn't easy of solution. When Indonesia is mentioned the average westerner naturally thinks of Java, Sumatra, Dutch Borneo and Celebes. However, the archipelago comprises 3,109 islands, containing 150 ethnic groups with varying languages and customs, and in different stages of development. Moreover the population of the islands is 75,000,000.

The greatest difficulty revolves about the Indonesian Republic which was established in 1947 and claims to represent Java, Sumatra, and Madura. Moscow-directed Communists are making the public the center of the Red offensive in the islands. However, and the Dutch are striving to bring all seven regimes into one federal government — patterned after that of the U.S. — which would be inaugurated early in 1949.

Everything seemed set for this change when the republican government backed off. This is said to be due to domination of the big republican army by the Communists. The army, which was largely trained by the Japanese and is hostile to westerners, wants the republic to be absolutely free and outside any federal set-up.

Premier Mohammed Hatta of the republic some time ago expressed a willingness to join with the Dutch in working out a commonwealth which would be introduced by the interim federal government. But Hatta apparently doesn't control his army, which totals more than 400,000 men, and so can't make any guarantees.

A few days ago Hatta directed a letter to the Dutch government with a view to resuming negotiations. But the Dutch yesterday stated that the letter and Hatta was speaking for himself. That is, it wasn't a declaration by the republic that negotiations couldn't resume on spy basis.

The most unhappy aspect of the situation is that fighting may be resumed in Indonesia. For that reason possible action by the U.N. Security Council will be awaited with eager interest.

Chapter 12
WHAT HAPPENS AT THE POOL

The brownies with Danny and the Snow Man walked on and on through the forests of Platonia. And where do you suppose they finally stopped? Right beside a dairy pool!

"Here we are," exclaimed Lance, the cross-eyed brownie, as he nodded towards the daisies growing in a miniature wilderness at their feet.

"But, where is the pool?" asked Danny.

"Only wait and see, my boy," said Hugo, the freckle-faced brownie. "This will be the most amazing part of your trip."

"More amazing than riding a falling star?" asked the Snow

Man. The brownies nodded and I think you'll agree they were right. For suddenly those four brownies, including many fields now occupied by the cities and the federal government. These include sales taxes, license taxes and levies on cigarettes, tobacco, liquor, utilities and more.

A city "payroll-and-income" tax campaign of local revenue, including many fields now occupied by the cities and the federal government.

"This is the best news we have had at this meeting on the tax situation," said Mayor delesseps S. Morrison of New Orleans, who took over as president of the association.

"I am hopeful that we can work out with Mr. Snyder a program which will solve the problem of overlapping federal and state taxes and help the municipalities of America in maintaining local government."

Reporting "a continuing financial crisis" in municipal affairs, Morrison said that city costs had risen 18 per cent last year, a greater rise than in the four preceding years. He said many cities are using up their wartime savings and going into debt, just to hold their own.

"Oh, my!" cried Danny when he reached the bottom of the stairs.

"Never had he seen so lovely a pool as this little pool which lay before them, glowing in the reflection of some unknown light, pulsing gently with some unknown current."

"Danny boy, I'm glad we've come," said the Snow Man solemnly. "Anything they say of this need must be true for I couldn't imagine a more enchanted spot."

"But, who'll be first?" cried Hubert impatiently. "Come let's hurry. I can hardly wait to curl my hair."

"I'll have the boy go first," said Lance. "That's the only thing to do."

But Danny, his heart pounding with excitement, shook his head. Now that he was finally ready and truly going to be rid of his twisted tail, he was overcome with thankfulness. He couldn't move at all. "I'll just have to catch my breath first," he whispered, and the brownies smiled for they understood.

Meantime, Flournoy wasted no time in admiring the view. He crept behind some rocks and over the twisting tangled tree roots and finally he found what he was after—the moss covered gate which held the precious water.

"Well, now, fancy that?" thought Flournoy with a grin. "I wonder what would happen if I pulled the gate?"

Now while Flournoy studied the gate the little brownie, Lance, suddenly jumped into the pool.

"What gate—the gate isn't broken off!" cried the brownies in horror.

"What wicked business is this!" roared the Snow Man and he and the brownies began talking all at once.

But Danny standing in the empty pool looked down at his crooked leg and said nothing at all.

Monday: One more chance.

Williams Wins Bat Title, But DiMaggio Cops RBI Crown In AL

CHICAGO, Dec. 17, (AP)—New York's Joe DiMaggio watched Boston's Ted Williams cop the 1948 American League batting and slugging crowns, but the Yankee clipper grabbed the important runs-batted-in with a bag of 135.

Official league statistics today, besides awarding Williams the slugging championship with a .615 percentage and DiMaggio his second RBI diadem, also counted out 43 major and league records broken or tied last season.

Williams, whose .399 average topped the individual batting, finished 17 percentage points ahead of DiMaggio's .386 in the slugging computations, but was third in RBI's with 127, twenty-eight behind Joltin' Joe. The Yankee star played in 153 games, compared with Williams' 137.

Boston shortstop Vern Stephens was second in the RBI column with 135, despite the dubious distinction of hitting into the most doubleplays, 25.

It was DiMaggio's best season at belting home run titles since his high of 107 in 1937 and surpassed by 30 his previous league-leading

Kentucky's Coach Survey Shows Football Crowds Were Figures In Clash At Boston Game Larger Almost Everywhere In 1948

NEW YORK, Dec. 17, (AP)—Adolph Rupp, Kentucky's famed basketball coach, figured in a disturbance at Boston last night at Kentucky's NEA champion trimed, also counted out 43 major and league records broken or tied last season.

Williams, whose .399 average topped the individual batting, finished 17 percentage points ahead of DiMaggio's .386 in the slugging computations, but was third in RBI's with 127, twenty-eight behind Joltin' Joe. The Yankee star played in 153 games, compared with Williams' 137.

Third top slugger was New York's Tommy Henrich with a .510 percentage, while Cleveland's Lou Boudreau was fourth in RBI's with 121.

Williams' improvement in hitting, 10 players in the team batted across .400 or more, against only one, Williams, in 1947.

DiMaggio also was the leading hit-by-pitcher victim, being plunked eight times. Pat Sevey, who led the league in hitting, 10 players in the team, struck out 102 times for that unwanted title.

Sevey, however, tied three Major League records on long hits of a game, 12, and most total bases in a game, 16, and most total bases in a game, 16.

Both games were marked by sterling rallies. Munson flipped in 31 points within 10 minutes during the second half, to go ahead 66-60, then faded. NYU, behind by 15-17, late in the second half, almost pulled the game out of the gutter with a thrilling finish.

Hayes, recent upset conqueror of the other players reported from 1947. They are Speebee, Turner and Huffman.

As end, Speebee and Huffman were standouts for their clubs all year. The combination of Speebee catching and Graham passing pulled the Browns out of a few tight spots which played one more game, but they wound up their than last year but more than doubled their record.

Speebee repeated his 114 straight games record for AAC this year, though he was off for 10 days.

The Browns' chosen are Endy, Speebee, Quarterback Tom Graham and Endback Marion Motley, 208 pounds. Newcomer is the Cardinals' selected quarterback, George Baumer, End Mal Keeling and Back Charles Tripp.

The remainder of the squad includes three men from the AAC, Lemire, Lomax and Claude Hollings, former of the Chicago Bears; Tackle Don Hoffman of the Los Angeles Rams and Half back Steve Van Buren of the Philadelphia Eagles, and two from the Conference. Tackle Bob Reinhard of the Los Angeles Rams and Guard Dick Hawesman of the Browns.

The fact that both the Browns and Cardinals placed three men on the team does not necessarily mean that the cards have completely dominated the play in their respective circuits. However, it does now that these players were highly regarded in the success of the strong teams with which they played.

14 Cities Report

While the two leagues have been at odds since the AAC came into existence three seasons ago, the players picked were chosen on the basis of reports from Associated Press sports writers in the 14 cities with major professional football.

The Browns, of course, have dominated the AAC play since the beginning, but that is not so much because of the Brown's brilliant field general, Gilman, stands out today just as did Sid Luckman of the Chicago Bears and Sammy Baugh of the Washington Redskins when they were in their prime.

Graham won the AAC passing title. He completed 173 passes out of 333 for 2,713 yards and 25 touchdowns.

Motley, full-charging fullback from Nevada, is the Browns' man down the middle numerous times this season in his second year as three tacklers. He rarely goes down when first hit. Veterans compare him with Bronko Nagurski, considered as football's greatest fullback. Motley is better than a fair hand at catching passes, too.

Motley led the AAC in rushing, netting 994 yards on 157 carries. He averaged 6.4 yards per carry.

Van Buren Big Gun

Van Buren has been the big gun in the second straight Eastern championship for the Eagles. The former Louisiana State star, like Motley, is tough to tackle. Van is a repeater from the 1947 team and also made the 1946 All-Pro.

Tripp, an All-American at Georgia in 1946, had the best rushing average in the National League. It was largely through his efforts that the Cards won 10 of their first 11 games this season. He is also among the league's leading punters and is rated high in returning punts and kick-offs.

Give General Electric Appliances For Christmas*Rail Pay Hike

(Continued from Page One) without any change in "take home" pay. The board calculated that it would take the equivalent of a 20 percent increase in base rate to preserve the "take home" pay unchanged.

The board estimated its proposed rail pay hike would cost $10,000,000 in 1949. This would include $150,000,000 for the cost of the 16-hour week from September to December 1948 plus a seven-cent increase for all of 1949.

The workers had asked a cut in pay rates to maintain their standard of living away from home.

"And if that happens, we will have an hour less pay," she said.

The so-called "non-operating" rail workers are those who do not operate trains.

The board recommended that all rail workers should be paid the same amount as the rail workers who refused to obey the strike vote.
