Interstate blocked after 5-car pile-up

A five vehicle collision on westbound Interstate 4 near the Seminole-Volusia County line tied up traffic for two hours and 20 minutes on Saturday afternoon, but no one was injured.

According to a spokesman for the Florida Highway Patrol, no one was charged in the accident which occurred shortly after 1:30 p.m.

According to the FHP report, Robert Bridger's 1982 Ford pick up truck was stalled on the bridge. The 32-year-old Sanford man was in the vehicle, attempting to restart it.

A 1987 GMC tractor trailer, driven by Edith Rush, 57, of Winter Garden; a 1980 Mack tractor trailer, driven by John Rayno, 37, of Clermont; a 1989 Ford car driven by Samira Abdeljaber, 19, of Sanford and a 1992 Ford pick up truck, driven by David McLain, 30, of Sunrise, Fla., all tried to change lanes or stop to avoid hitting the stalled vehicle.

Instead, all the vehicles collided or hit Bridger's truck.

"It's amazing that with all those vehicles, especially the tractor trailers, that there were no injuries," the spokesman said.

The westbound traffic was reportedly brought to a stop as far back as DeLand, the spokesman said, while officers investigated the accident scene and cleaned it up.

Tots get computer experience

The City of Longwood Parks and Recreation Department will offer a new program for children called Computertots beginning in August.

The one week "mini" camps will be conducted at the Ed Myers Recreational Building on Wilma Avenue, Longwood. Children ages 3 and up will receive instruction from a specially-trained teacher while they experience "hands-on" exploration of the world of computers.

Classes are 30 minutes in length for Tots (ages 3-5) and 45 minutes for Explorers (6 and up). Each session consists of four classes Tuesday through Friday. The fee for Tots is $25 and $32 for Explorers.

Registration will be August 2 from 9 a.m. until noon in the Ed Myers Recreational Building. Classes begin Tuesday, August 3. Class sizes are limited so pre-registration is imperative.

For additional information, call Sandy Lomax, City of Longwood Parks and Recreation Department at 260-3443 or Diane J. Smith, Computertots, at 904-789-0585.

Plugging artesian wells

SANFORD — The St. Johns River Management District will hold an informational presentation on plugging artesian wells Wednesday at Oviedo Women's Club, 414 King St., Oviedo. The meeting begins at 7 p.m.

Artesian wells are natural and man-made punctures in the underground drinking aquifer that due to pressure, flow continually. More than 1 million gallons of water are lost annually from the 185 known wells, twice the drinking water demand for the city of Oviedo. A total of 147 wells have been plugged with concrete in the Seminole County, saving nearly 5 million gallons of water annually.

Under a district program, property owners' expenses of capping will be limited to $600. The remainder will be paid by the district. For more information or to anonymously report a free-flowing well, call 1-800-741-WELL (9355).

Local schools get state money

SANFORD — Lakeview and Sanford Middle schools have been named as two of 80 schools in Florida to receive State of Florida Technology Education Grants, to convert Industrial Arts classrooms into computer laboratories. Each school will receive $135,000.

The grants will provide equipment to assist the schools in developing state-of-the-art technology education facilities. The laboratories will be designated to integrate math, science, and language arts with technology in relevant and dynamic activities.

Armed Sanford woman thwarts crime in home

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — William Miller says that his neighborhood on Park Avenue on the southern edge of the historic section of Sanford has always been a safe one.

He and his wife, Carolyn, took matters into their own hands to ensure it stays that way.

At about 4 a.m. on Saturday, someone broke into their home by knocking out a glass panel in a French door at the rear of the house and reaching inside to unlock the door.

"We heard some noises downstairs," William

Miller said. "I thought I was dreaming or that something had fallen outside, but when we heard some footsteps downstairs, I knew there was someone out there."

He said that he called 9-1-1 and his wife took out her .38 calibre gun and looked downstairs from the balcony and saw a "young, white male wearing shorts and no shirt" coming toward her.

Her husband said she "fired two shots over his bow just to warn him" and that the intruder "jumped out of his sneakers" and ran out of the house.

Police have taken the sneakers as evidence in the case.

The intruder was not struck by either bullet.

Miller said that his wife has had the gun for 23 years and this is the first time that she has ever fired it.

"This is such a quiet neighborhood," Miller

Longwood mayor, police chief spar over budget

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — The ordinance establishing the Longwood Police Department in the city charter was about 72 hours old Thursday when the city commissioners decided that some fine-tuning, possibly an amendment, may be in order.

After discussing the 1994 police budget, Chief Greg Manning requested a work session with the commissioners to clarify the manning provisions in the newly passed ordinance. He said it was his intent to keep the number of officers at the current level of about 2.5 per 1,000 population. There are 30 sworn officers and four clerical workers in the police department, the chief said.

On Tuesday, Mayor Paul Lovstrand said his research indicated the guidelines in the ordinance passed July 14 would require the city to add from 10 to 19 new officers at a cost between $400,000 to $800,000 a year. Lovstrand was the only commissioner voting against the ordinance. The ordinance will be presented to the voters in a November referendum.

Manning said he would like to discuss the situation before the citizens become alarmed. The change in the charter was not meant to add police personnel, Manning contended.

Commissioner Harvey Smerilson, who proposed the ordinance, challenged Lovstrand's figures indicating the city could be required to staff the department with 3.2 or 3.5 officers for each 1,000 residents. Longwood's population is nearly 14,000.

Pat Huckenberry of the Friends of the Longwood Police Department, said it was not the group's intention to increase the number of officers in supporting the charter amendment, just to remove the department from politics.

Despite Lovstrand's opposition to a work session, the commissioners agreed to discuss the ordinance July 22, prior to reviewing more city budgets. Although a consensus might be reached on the manning provisions, no official changes could SANFORD — A bank of eight foot Gauss speakers throbbed with the beat of popular rap songs in the recreation area along 8th Street at Castle Brewer Court housing complex on Saturday afternoon.

Occasionally a police siren ripped through the air above the sound of the music.

Sanford Police officers were not responding to the scene to shut the music down. As a matter of fact, they were encouraging it.

The Kids and Cops Day at Castle Brewer Court was designed to introduce the community to their newly-established Community Policing Team.

Officers on that team have been permanently assigned to the complex where they will be highly visible to act as both law enforcement officers and positive role models for the youngsters.

On Saturday, officers wandered

Verdict is in on drugstore's real identity

Morning folks! Remember the photo of the drugstore we ran not long ago in the Herald and there was a big question as to whether it was a picture of Roumillat & Anderson's or the old Union Pharmacy. Now most everybody knew Roumillat's was located at First and Park but you had to be a real old timer to remember that Union Pharmacy was on the southside of East First Street's 100 block next door to the McCrory store.

WAY BACK WHEN

JULIAN STENSTROM

Well, here are the figures: Seventeen folks told us it was the drugstore owned and operated by Gene Roumillat and Bruce Anderson. On the other hand, 17 folks remembered it as Union Pharmacy owned and operated by a Dr. Walker who lived on East 20th

See Stenstrom, Page 2A

Street in Sanford.

Union Pharmacy was remembered because it had a wide open storefront from sidewalk to sidewalk and when closed at night had folding doors clear across the front of the store.

A lot of the folks who "voted" for Union Pharmacy were clerks at McCrory's on one side of the drugstore or clerks at Speer & Son on the other side of the store. Also, not one person who thought the picture was of the Roumillat store even remembered the Union Pharmacy and its wide "open" front.

Here is what convinced us the photo in question was the Union Pharmacy. And, my regrets go to Lucy McLeod of 1401 South Summerlin Avenue, Orlando 32806. Lucy is the daughter of the late Gene and Hortense Roumillat and the sister of the late Francis Roumillat.

Since the original of this column had been written I had word from Abbeville, Ala. that our old friend Rhett Smith had passed away. Now, if you wonder what this has to do about the photo of the drugstore, it was just a short time before Rhett, the son of Dr. H.D. Smith, died. He had written and told me he once ran the Union Pharmacy soda fountain for Dr. Walker.

I verified all this with Mary Nell (Smith) Morrison. She said Rhett died just three days before his 80th birthday. Mary Nell said she had already sent Rhett a "Happy Birthday" card before she got word of his death. She, too, recalled Rhett working the soda fountain and the Union Pharmacy.

So the verdict is in.

Before you warm up your coffee I gotta bow my head in shame and ask forgiveness for something I didn't do rather than something I did do. A couple months ago Sheila Britt Cameron sent me a photo of Roy Britt's Gulf Service Station located at 15th and Sanford Ave.

The picture was published in the Herald, showing a car being filled with that "Good Gulf" gasoline. It also showed Bill Wiebolt's English Ford being serviced on the lift. Now here's where I "messed up." There was an attendant in the photo cleaning the windshield. I overlooked using his name. He was James Davidson. And, Sheila had provided me with the name. I just flat out overlooked it including Davidson's name. I know I offended Sheila. So, if I offended anyone else, I'm sorry.

I did a little bit of investigating and found out Davidson at one time might have been called "Nimrod." That didn't ring too many bells around Sanford. But, to be sure, I called an ex-major league pitcher, Sid Hudson in Waco, Texas. Hudson had hurred for Sanford in the Florida State League in 1938. Between the '38 and the 1939 season Sid worked for the Sinclair Service Station at Second and Park, leased by Ray Fox Sr.

Fox and Hudson had an attendant who worked for them with a name similar to "Nimrod." So, just to avoid any confusion I called Hudson and found out the attendant at the Sinclair station was named "Ramrod." Consequently, "Nimrod" and "Ramrod" were two different people. So, James, I again apologize for not mentioning your name in the photo. As a reporter I was always taught to mention as many names as possible. Why? It's simple: Names make news!

By the way, while gabbing with Hudson on the phone, he rattled off a bunch of names of you folks he still remembers. "Tell 'em all 'hello' for me. I still look back on Sanford in 1938 and 1939 as two of my favorite years in baseball." Oh, yes, Sid's still in the game. He's the pitching coach for the Baylor University Bears baseball team.

By the way, Sheila, for some reason, moved to Fort Walton Beach about four or five months ago. She's now back in Sanford. Once you get that Sanford sand between your toes you can't seem to stay away from this place.

I know, I lived in California 12 years, traveled to most of the country's major cities, but there was never a day I didn't miss my beloved Sanford. And, how can you. When you think about your ancestors, your parents, your ministers, your teachers and the friends and folks who had faith in you and trusted you and were the people who made this town's history, you have to love Sanford.

said. "Nothing like this has ever happened. We've lived here for 11 years and this is the first time anyone has tried to get in here."

Miller said, however, that police officers who were investigating the incident said there had been three other break-ins in the area. He said they did not know if the same man who broke into his home had been involved in the other break-ins.

According to police spokesman Sgt. Aaron Keith, in a near-by incident a woman was struck on the head with a wrench by an intruder in her home on Laurel Avenue. He said it is not known if that was the same man who entered the Millers' house later.

Keith said he could not confirm there had been three other robberies as the reports for Friday night's incidents had not yet been completed.

"It was a busy night," he said. Miller said that the man who broke into his house had apparently gone into his unlocked car and looked through the contents of the glove box, but took nothing.

Miller said he went to his neighbors later on Saturday morning to tell them what had happened.

"They were shocked," he said. "We had probably all gotten a little careless because nothing like this has ever happened, but we're all going to be a lot more careful now, I think."

Miller said that he hopes the shots his wife fired over the intruder served as a strong warning to that man and "his friends" to stay away from that neighborhood.

Police had not yet found the intruder as of late Saturday afternoon, but they were continuing to try to locate him.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Lottery's earning power slipping

By BILL STENSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A $50 million slump in lottery ticket sales has revived fears that at 5 years old, the game of chance is past its prime and can't be counted on to help pay for Florida schools.

Lottery Secretary Marcia Mann said the lottery performed better than expected after Hurricane Andrew wiped out 37 ticket-selling establishments in South Florida. Noting that summer sales are running $6 million a week above last year's pace, she remains optimistic the lottery will snap back.

But legislative revenue forecasters say lottery interest has peaked, with only occasional high Lotto jackpots and new twists in the games keeping ticket sales from lagging.

"We expect a leveling off, with only modest, modest growth at this point due to population growth," said Pam Johnson of the Legislature's Economic & Demographic Research Division. "This is a normal state of affairs for what is considered a mature lottery."

Sales for the 1992-93 fiscal year that ended June 30 were $2.17 billion, down from $2.22 billion in 1991-92, the lottery's best year.

The lottery still sent $832.9 million to education, less than a 1 percent drop from $839.5 million the year before.

Such a small variation isn't a problem for schools because the lottery ranks fourth behind sales-tax-produced general revenue, property taxes and federal funds as a source of money. Education Commissioner Betty Castor said.

"We knew there would be a period where the dollars would level off, and that's what's happened," said Castor. "There was initially a lot of misunderstanding that it was doing more for education. It's one variable."

She said the lottery's whole contribution is 6.8 percent of the education budget, enough to run schools 13 days of the 180-day school year.

Some lawmakers question whether the revenue justifies the lottery. Some, like Rep. Robert Starks, R-Winter Park, say gaming for schools has philosophical problems.

"In education, we strive to teach character and values, such as work hard and you'll get ahead," said Starks, who proposed an unsuccessful amendment to shut down the lottery earlier this year.

"But on the other side we advertise play the Lotto and become a millionaire," he said. "We give rising expectations to people that will never be fulfilled."

Starks also objected to the use of lottery money to allow general revenue money once spent on education to be diverted elsewhere.

"They're ripping off the taxpayers by not spending the money where it's supposed to go," he said.

It also concerns Gov. Lawton Chiles, who has tried unsuccessfully to pass "lottery buyback" and "lottery justice" measures to raise general fund spending to its former level and let lottery money go for education enhancements, as voters were promised before the games began in 1987.

Money from the general fund now makes up about 50 percent of the education budget, down from 60 percent before the lottery began.

Castor didn't recommend abolishing the games. "The source is there and the lottery has been very successful," she said.

Rep. Miguel DeGrandy, R-Miami, has urged quick changes to keep interest alive.

"You have to forecast when the lottery is going into decline, which is now, not three years from now when you've lost $150 million for education," DeGrandy said. "The lottery is hitting that stage of its maturity cycle where it has capped off."

The change he's been unable to get through the Legislature is an optional lump-sum payout instead of the 20 annual payments Lotto jackpot winners get.

The Department of Elderly Affairs, Silver Haired Legislature and other groups back that idea. With a 20-year payout, DeGrandy said, "If you are 70 years old, you are not going to live, according to actuarial tables, to collect the last payment."

While he wants to change the lottery, DeGrandy also wants to keep it.

"It's a voluntary tax, which is not inappropriate in today's society," he said.

Despite nearly 14 million-to-one odds against a big Lotto win, a ticket provides a lift, at least until the numbers are drawn

Getting to the heart of the matter

The preview of Open House for the Heart Center at HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital Friday gave medical personnel and others who had a hand in shaping it a chance to see what all the hard work was about. Roy Vinson, executive director of the hospital, Donna Windsor, nurse manager of the heart center and Meredith Scott, M.D., head surgeon for the center approve. The facility, opening in August, will be the only open heart surgical facility in Seminole and West Volusia counties. The public can preview the facility today from noon until 3 p.m.

Abortion clinic protests upset neighbors

By The Associated Press

MELBOURNE — Neighbors with "No Trespassing" signs in their front yards are fed up with the protests outside an abortion clinic, saying they have become prisoners in their own homes.

The Aware Woman Center for Choice has been operated for 12 years in the Grandview Shores neighborhood, and Operation Rescue National bought a house directly across the street from the clinic last spring.

With a history of protests going back years, the clinic is one of the focal points of the seven-state "Cities of Refuge" anti-abortion campaign ending Sunday. The 10-day demonstration has produced no arrests by Melbourne police.

A dispatcher did not give her name described the clinic Saturday as "real quiet." Margaret Thomas of The Feminist Majority, who has organized clinic supporters, estimated about 10 anti-abortion demonstrators and 70 pro-choice activists were on hand.

Another Aware Woman clinic in Port St. Lucie had abortions scheduled Saturday and drew about two dozen protesters for a prayer vigil, said clinic operator Sheryl Belair.

With all of the protests, Dorothy Breen is fed up. The Melbourne woman invited 20 children to her daughter's fourth birthday last December, but only three showed up.

"The other kids' parents said they were afraid for their children to come into this neighborhood," Breen said last week. "We tried to make it up to her with presents, but we're tired of living like this. We're tired of the protests and the noise. We're tired of being afraid."

But for people on Dixie Way, there is no end in sight.

"It just gets worse," Breen said. "Now they bring in busloads of protesters, singing and screaming and using megaphones. We shut our doors and turn on our air conditioners and we can still hear them."

Tony Feole, who also lives on Dixie Way, said protesters are ruining the neighborhood, noting anti-abortion demonstrators have shown pictures of unborn fetuses to neighborhood children. "Talk about vulgar," he said. "I'd rather the kids look at Playboy."

Breen said protesters once tied a noose around a plastic doll and hung it from a tree near the clinic. "Try explaining that to a 4-year-old," she said.

Most of the residents' anger is directed at the abortion opponents, blaming them for harassment, littering and illegal parking.

Breen and her children placed nearly a dozen handmade signs in their front yard this month telling protesters to go home, but she said some still tried to park on her lawn and called her a "baby killer."

State Farm asks rate increase

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — State Farm is asking to raise homeowners premiums an average of 23.5 percent in Florida, joining a long list of companies asking rate increases in the wake of Hurricane Andrew.

The state Department of Insurance will wait for more documents from State Farm before scheduling a public hearing on the proposed increases, spokeswoman Karen Chandler said Friday.

State Farm needs to raise rates to be financially prepared to cover potential claims of its 1.35 million policyholders in Florida, spokesman Bill Sirola said.

Increases would be higher in higher-risk areas. State Farm's average annual homeowners' premiums in coastal areas of South Florida would go from $469 to $606, a 29.2 percent jump.

The Bloomington, Ill.-based company is Florida's largest homeowners insurer. It had 26.5 percent of the market in 1992, followed by Allstate with 17.7 percent; Nationwide with 3.8 percent and Prudential with 3.4 percent.

More than 100 insurance companies have rate increase requests pending, many as a result of claims paid following Hurricane Andrew, Chandler said.

State Farm had $3.7 billion in claims resulting from the August storm and reported a $1.2 billion loss for 1992. Its first annual operating loss since 1969, Sirola said.

Unlike other insurance companies that propose dropping a total of 844,000 homeowners' policies in Florida to avoid risking a repeat of the Hurricane Andrew losses, State Farm hasn't asked to cut back its Florida business.

Though limiting new business in the state, the company won't drop current policyholders, Sirola said. "Our philosophy says that we stay with our customers."

One consumer group, the Florida Consumer Action Network, says State Farm has the financial ability to offer more coverage in the state.

"They're one company whose surplus reserves are so great that they could substantially increase policies," FCAN spokesman Monte Belote said.

"We would like to have our customer base stabilize where we are now," said Sirola.

No. 2 Allstate has proposed dropping 300,000 policies in the state, though it has agreed to abide by a six-month moratorium on cancellations lasting until Nov. 14.

Prudential, which seeks to drop more than 25,000 policies, lost a bid in federal court this week for a temporary injunction setting aside the cancellation ban. U.S. District Judge Maurice Paul said he'll hear Prudential's arguments against the moratorium, though refusing to lift it in the meantime.

Boy, 12, accused of raping his sister, 5

By The Associated Press

TAMPA — A 12-year-old boy has been charged with raping his 5-year-old sister in the bathroom of their home, according to police.

The mother told police that she heard the siblings behind the locked bathroom door Thursday. She later questioned the daughter and, from her answers, concluded the two had intercourse, said police spokesman Steve Cole.

The mother immediately called police and the boy, whose name has not been released because of his age, was charged early Friday. He was being held at the Hillsborough County Regional Detention Center for juveniles.

His sister is at home with her mother and two older brothers.

No decision has been made on whether prosecutors will attempt to treat the 12-year-old as an adult or if he will be left in the juvenile justice system.

Cole said detectives have not closed their investigation because there is an indication, based on a doctor's examination, that this was not the first time the 5-year-old had been assaulted.

Prostitution sting nets Sanford man

By NICK PFREIFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

Members of the City/County Investigative Bureau conducted a prostitution sting operation near a motel in Fern Park late Thursday and early Friday. Four men, including a Sanford man, were arrested. As a decoy, officers were using an undercover female officer who was posing as a prostitute.

Arrested were Jose Mario Lopez, 35, 396 Stillforest Terrace, Sanford; Calogero Schifano, 59 of Casselberry; Michael John Gallagher, 32 of Apopka; and Mark Carroll, 31, of Casselberry.

Arrest reports indicate Carroll was arrested near a shopping center a short distance from the Fern Park operation.

Each of the four was charged with assignment to commit prostitution, and transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Before opening business, do your homework

Much time is spent during area city commission meetings, hearing appeals to overturn a decision made by Planning and Zoning departments. Many times, the appeals are the result of a lack of homework.

Times have changed. No longer can a person merely buy a building and open a business. Cities have established codes for business development which must be followed. The codes are intended to preserve and protect the people of the entire community.

The codes cover what use can be made of an existing building, what can or cannot be sold and/or manufactured, and other requirements.

Too often, efforts get underway toward establishing a new business without the prospective client knowing the restrictions. Prospective store owners end up paying real estate fees, legal fees, and possibly other costs involved in drawing diagrams or site plans.

Before any plans are made or documents signed to open a new business, information should first be obtained.

In Sanford, the first step should be to contact the Land Development Coordinator, who is aware of the codes, and can assist in determining whether a building meets the requirements of the prospective operator.

In Lake Mary, the City Planner can give advice on specific uses of structures or operations which may or may not be permitted at various locations. This again, is based on city codes which must be followed.

Another move should be made in dealing with situations where sales or manufacturing might be questionable in a residential area. As an example, people living nearby may object to the sale of alcoholic beverages at a proposed neighborhood store.

Homework in this case should involve personal contacts with the neighbors to determine if there are any objections. If the consensus is against it, but the prospective store owner believes such sales are necessary for a successful operation, another location should be considered.

City boards have shown a tendency to adhere to the wishes of people who may object to a particular business proposal.

City officials agree, prospective business owners or operators should take a close look at codes governing commercial establishments, before making the first attempt at seeking government approval.

Doing homework can save everyone a great deal of expense and time.

Humane Society responds

When we read Evelyn Younger's letter to the editor on July 4th, 1993, our first instinct was to view it as the ranting of a bitter woman. We don't understand people who zero in on the unfortunate and maliciously kick them when they are down. We are hesitant to enter into a sparring contest with them, but we feel that we must make the public aware that the accusations contained in Ms. Younger's letter are totally unfounded.

It is not true that the Humane Society of Seminole County is almost broke. The money donated to help the shelter rebuild is being held in a designated account labeled "building fund" at one of our local banks. The insurance company's settlement is included in that account. The dog food which was donated is being used to feed the animals at the shelter.

As for the bequests, the Society is required to follow the stipulations contained in the will. If the will stipulates that the monies are to be used for the care of the animals and not for construction, then this must be done.

We are sure that 10 years ago $125,000 went a lot further than it does today, especially considering that hooking up to the county sewer system is going to cost in excess of $100,000. There are no options when it comes to hooking up to the sewer system. It must be done or there can be no new building.

The directors of the Humane Society of Seminole County have asked the architect to design a building that can house the animals in a safe, comfortable environment and that the structure be as fireproof as possible. They don't ever again want a repeat of animals burning to death in an old, poorly constructed wooden structure.

What future for powerful river?

Americans have sung about and read about the mighty Mississippi River. The line "Old Man River, it just keeps rolling along," is most appropriate. "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," "Life on the Mississippi," and "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" written by Samuel Longhorne Clemens (more popularly known as Mark Twain) acquainted us with the Mississippi.

Today our television screens tell a very different story of the Mississippi. Our hearts empathize with all of our fellow Americans affected by the rampaging Mississippi River. The pictures remind us how powerful the forces of nature can be.

Natural phenomena like hurricanes, floods and earthquakes can wreak havoc with our organized communities. When Hurricane Andrew trampled parts of Florida, help poured into the impacted areas from all across the country. Now it is our turn to help those in the West.

The Mississippi is a major river in North America draining with its major tributaries, an area of 1,244,000 square miles or about one eighth of the entire continent. Rising in Lake Itasca in Minnesota it flows southward collecting the waters of its major tributaries, the Missouri, the Ohio until it enters the Gulf of Mexico. The Mississippi drains all or part of 31 states in American and two Canadian provinces.

From its source at St. Paul, Minn., it is a clean fresh stream. From St. Paul to the mouth of the Missouri it is a powerful river. It gathers the streams and rivers of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa.

SEMINOLE OPINION

The Algonquian speaking Indians named it Father of Waters — "Misi" meaning big and "Sipi" water.

In 1927 another disastrous flood took place in the lower Mississippi Valley. At that time 26,000 square miles of land was flooded. Communication and transportation was disrupted. Farms, factories and entire towns were temporarily under water. The cost of that flood was approximately $1,000,000,000 in damages. The death count was over 200 lives.

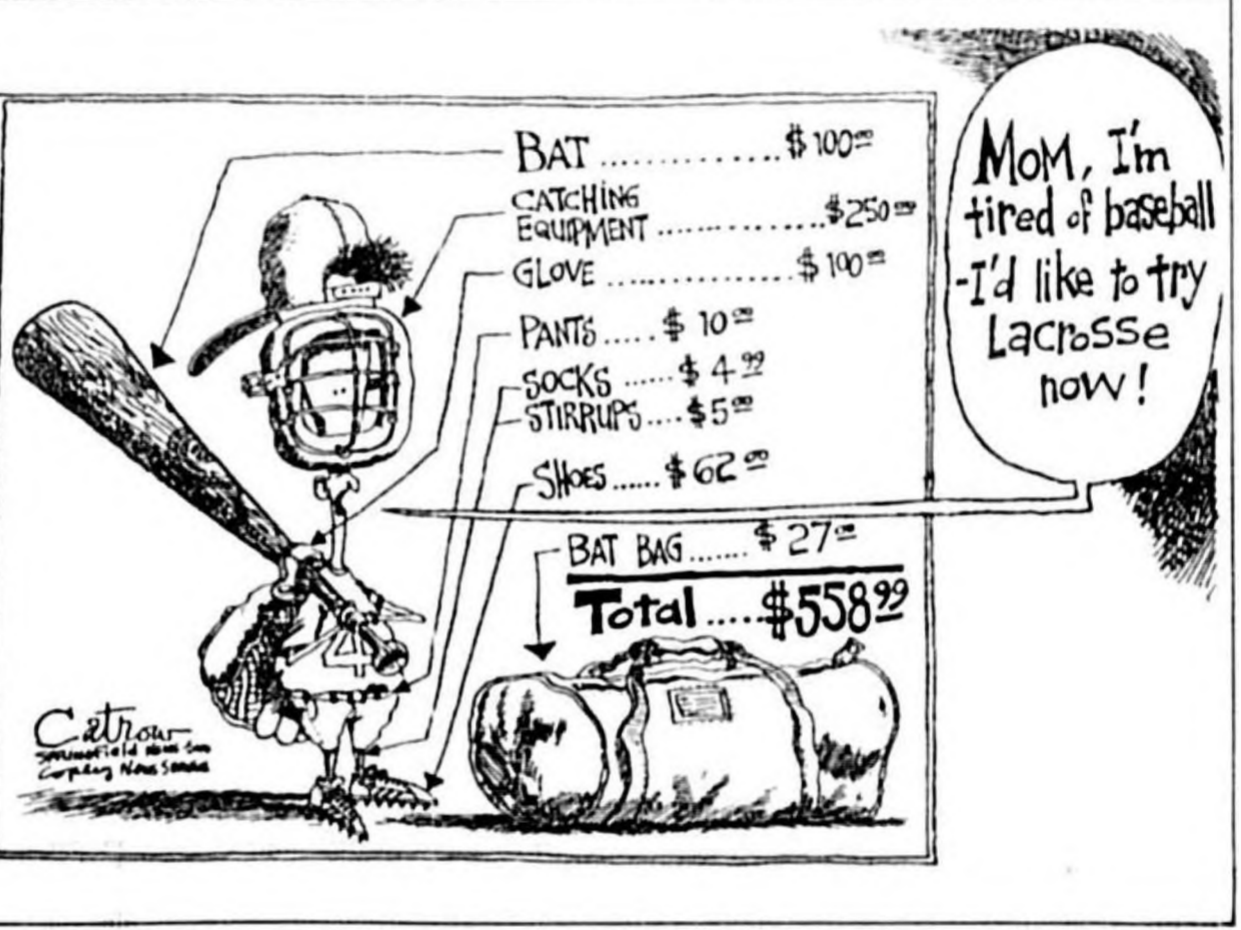

The Mississippi also became the final resting place for Hernando DeSoto, commander of the first non-Indian expedition to explore the river. In May 1541 when DeSoto and his men reached the river near Memphis, Tenn., the river caught them unaware and took its toll.

The Mississippi's potential as a commercial waterway was recognized early. An act of Congress created the Mississippi River Commission in 1879. This commission has responsibility for overseeing the maintenance and improvement of the Mississippi as a commercial asset. The commission supervised a massive program of river work that reshaped the Mississippi. Channels were widened and deepened. Locks and dams were constructed. In spite of all that man has done since 1879, man has been unable to contain the Mississippi.

The devastation produced by the current flooding has not been totally assessed, because it is not over. It is apparent that a great deal of time, human effort and money will be expended to return communities to some semblance of order.

The Mississippi has been an economic lifeline to this country. It is ranked among the busiest commercial waterways in the world. Commerce has prospered and growth has been steady.

Steamboats were quite an industry in the 19th century. The first steamboat on the Mississippi was "The New Orleans" built in 1811. The industry grew and by 1819 there were 191 steamboats. In 20th century America the Mississippi was a virtual commercial gold mine transporting goods to many states. What the future holds for "Old Man River" remains to be seen.

Avoiding tighter tax code

WASHINGTON — Lobbyists and members of Congress can confirm that the sneakiest way to tunnel into the U.S. Treasury is through the tax code. A loophole here, an exemption there and pretty soon you're talking real money.

Last year, special interest tax breaks cost a whopping $375 billion — more than the entire deficit. Over the past decade, such deficit spending has soared by more than $100 billion. As House and Senate conferees gather to hammer out the details of the Clinton budget package, tightening the tax code certainly beats taking an ax to Medicare. But it's unlikely Congress has the stomach to tee off on special interests.

According to Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., a lesson on the power of special interests in Washington can be gleaned from the story of a golf tournament.

"If you rent your home for up to two weeks, you pay no taxes on the rent," Bradley told us recently. "I'm told that it got into the code because a number of years ago, a senator who sat on the Finance Committee had a friend who had a big house close to the Masters golf tournament in Augusta, Ga. And during the Masters, he could rent his house for an incredible amount of money. Therefore, here is this little provision that popped up in this giant tax bill."

This "little provision," according to Senate Finance Committee staffers, costs taxpayers $333 million over five years. What began as a favor to a friend is still on the books as a tax break for anyone who rents out their house for two weeks or less. Despite an ambitious reform attempt in 1986, engineered by Bradley and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the tax code remains a trough of exemptions and exceptions. If pork-barrel projects are federal spending with a zip code attached, then a tax loophole can often be spending with a surname attached, a narrowly targeted benefit for individuals and industries.

Many of these provisions, like the golf course exemption, begin as tiny openings but end up as gaping holes. The secret is in the wording. "People don't want names of companies associated with a provision, so they write it broadly," one Senate staffer says of the tax process. "These things get dissected in the private sector. That's what they get paid for — how to take these parameters and extend parameters. One guy's pork can be applicable to a lot of people."

Ironically, it was President Clinton's hero — John F. Kennedy — who began the modern system of tax code tinkering that ultimately led to the taxpayer revolts in the 1970s and 1980s. This year, the budget Clinton sent to Congress sought to reinstate several of the special tax breaks jettisoned in the 1986 reforms.

All too often, members of Congress are only too eager to comply. "Frequently the [special breaks] are disguised. You have to be a sleuth to know who benefits," Bradley says. "If you're a politician, you have a lot of people petitioning you. This person or that group was against you on health care, but you can offset that if you give them something in taxes."

Some loopholes have become sacred cows to the general public. Any attempts to remove tax deductions for charitable contributions or mortgage payments would trigger rebellion. But most of the favors are tucked away too deeply for most people to notice.

A loophole here, an exemption there and pretty soon you're talking real money.

Skip book about Teddy Kennedy

BOSTON — "Wouldn't it be nice if it just dropped like a stone?"

My friend offers this as a purely wishful thought. The "it" we are talking about is "The Last Brother." We are both too well-versed in the ways of the marketplace to expect that a flap about fact, fiction and fairness will result in a debate at the cash register. Quite the contrary.

In the weeks since Joe McGinniss' book on Teddy Kennedy came into view, or at least preview, it's made more of a splash than a thud. First came the disclaimer: "Some thoughts and dialogue" were "created by the author." Then came the disclaimer of the disclaimer. Then came the debate about biography and "free-form" journalism, about docu and drama, about taking license and just plain making things up.

Now the publishers are hurrying books to the stores. The excerpts are scheduled for Vanity Fair. The mini-series is being prepared for a TV sweeps week — the traditional time for tales of mayhem and mass murder.

As someone who prefers not to judge a book by its cover, or for that matter, by its first 100 pages — the ones that caused this debate — I waited until the entire 631-page tome dropped, like a stone, onto my desk, and I found another reason to wish that "The Last Brother" might be the bombshell that bombs.

Yes, I share the squeamishness about putting words in people's mouths and presenting mind-reading as biography. In the most dramatic scenes in the book, McGinniss tells us what Teddy Kennedy "must have felt..." He writes again and again, "It must have occurred to him..." "He must have known..." and, this is my favorite, "One suspects that Teddy sensed..." Between sensing and suspecting, it's hard to know when you are in Teddy Kennedy's head and when you are in Joe McGinniss'.

But it's the publisher's claims as well as its disclaimers that ring equally false to my ear. They have called the book "searing, yet strangely moving...curiously moving, both startling and surprisingly sympathetic." In fact, it is strangely unmoving, both predictable and not-surprisingly unsympathetic.

McGinniss has made a composite of the very worst images of the Kennedys. It's all there. The Kennedys are again the Dysfunctional Poster Family. Jack's story of PT109 is cast as a cover-up for a screw-up. Even Joe Jr.'s death as a volunteer missing over Europe is a "pointless accident" to which he was driven by competition with his brother, and Jackie, even at 24, is "uninterested in — and perhaps even incapable of — deep emotional attachment." The only one who emerges relatively unscathed by McGinniss is Bobby.

As for Teddy, "the last and the least of them," the "overweight, underachieving, insecure" portrait is as unrelenting as in any right-wing fund-raiser. At least the right wing has the grace to take the senator seriously as a political power.

The author has written as if he were inside Kennedy's head. But what passes for psychological insight is a repetitious description of Teddy as the fat, neglected, ninth child, he family mascot and screw-up. What passes for empathy is the repeated claim that "he was simply unable to meet the demand of being a Kennedy."

McGinniss even turns Ted Kennedy's passion for social justice into a kind of family failure, the result of "having lived his whole life at the bottom of the only society that really mattered to him psychologically — his own family." In the unfair cut he disparages Ted as a parent: "Teddy remained devoted, in his own limited way, to his children." As for his legislative career? He waves aside two-and-a-half decades after Mary Jo Kopechne's death as a long, downward slide. Over these years, I have been more than uneasy with Ted Kennedy's private life, and written so. I don't believe there is a wall separating the private psyche from public performance.

Indeed in the old era of Camelot myth-making, a person's private life, personal character and psychological make-up were ignored. People wrote biographies of Great Men and Their Deeds.

In the post-Camelot era — the open-season-on-Kennedys era — we have become more interested in motive than actions. We are more interested in private behavior than public, in flaws than in strengths. For all the claims and the disclaimers, "The Last Brother" is not a serious biography and it's not a novel. It's more proof that there's more than one way to draw a caricature. This one is pure cartoon.

In the weeks since the book on Teddy Kennedy came into view, it's made more of a splash than a thud.

through the gathering crowd, taking the hands of some of the younger children, dancing with some of the others and taking the time to talk to children and their families at every opportunity.

"The kids really love that DARE car," officer Rick Poovey said. "They all run to that one first."

Ole Johnson, who has been "a fixture" in the Sanford community for years said he was excited to see the young people responding to officers positively.

"It's good to see this kind of response," he said.

Lucy Ellen Miner, 9, who lives in Castle Brewer Court, said she has seen two of her older brothers get into trouble with the law and has decided she wants to stay "on the right side of it" and is glad to see that the officers will be so visible in the area.

"I like to have them out here," she said.

Phyllis Richardson, executive director of the Sanford Housing Authority, said she was pleased with the program.

"This is a very positive thing," she said.

The Sanford Police Department is working to provide a more positive force in the community and they hope that the Kids and Cops program will make that possible, Poovey said.

"I hope we can keep doing this," he said.

be made until the proper legal advertisement is done and public hearings are conducted.

Tempers flared slightly and voices elevated as Manning and Lovestrand played a verbal tennis match over the ordinance. Last year, Lovestrand helped lead the effort to dissolve the city police department.

One of the reasons for establishing the police department in the city charter is to remove it from possible political attack. At the present time, it takes only three votes from the five-member commission to enact change. In order to change the city charter, it takes a unanimous vote of the commission.

Due to the language in the ordinance, Lovestrand said he believes the city would have no choice in determining the number of officers because it is based on the city population. He said he had also consulted two attorneys who said the language would require the hiring of additional police.

Smeritson and Manning both argued the ordinance provisions from the Federal Department of Justice's 'Crime in the United States' for the South Atlantic Region were only recommendations not requirements.

What Manning level that is good for Longwood is not necessarily good for a Texas town of 14,000 on the Mexican border. Manning remarked. The city does not have the crime to warrant increasing the police force nor the budget to support an increase, he added.

Manning alleged that Lovestrated played a game of deception, waiting until after the ordinance was passed to reveal his feelings about the manning figures instead of sitting down and discussing his concerns prior to the final vote. The mayor retorted, "I didn't play a game of deception I did my homework." After the ordinance was drafted, Lovestrand said he went to the library to look up the guidelines.

Smeritson commented the mayor was "doing what he did last year" attacking the police department.

Commissioners Rex Anderson and Fred Pearl joined Smeritson in calling for a brief work session at 6:15 p.m. July 22 to discuss the issue. Commissioner Steve Miller did not attend the session due to business commitments.

"I'll admit I signed a false statement to the Volusia County School Board," said Howell Friday. "I made a mistake in signing a piece of paper. If I lose my seat because of it, fine and dandy I spend a lot of time in DelBarry, but my home is 1109 Park Avenue."

Howell is under investigation by Gov. Lawton Chiles' legal office to determine whether he is a legal resident of Sanford. If not, Chiles could declare a vacancy in his District 1 seat and the remaining commissioners would be required to appoint someone to fill it for the remainder of Howell's term, ending in December 1996.

The investigation was spurred last month by Bill Kirchner, Howell's opponent in the 1992 city commission runoff.

Property Appraiser Bill Suber denied Howell's homestead exemption for his Park Avenue house in part, because of an enrollment application Howell signed last year to admit his son in Volusia County schools. Howell has appealed the decision. Barbara Foster, Volusia County school attorney, refused to release the form, citing student confidentiality reasons.

Howell said his son now lives in DelBarry with his friend Laura Sollen. Howell said he gained custody of the child five days before the school year began last fall and had to act quickly on behalf of his son.

"I'm a father who's trying to do what's best for his son," said Howell. "It was a last-minute thing I made a mistake, but you do whatever you have to do for your child."

Howell said his son has been accepted in the Baptist Christian Home in Lakeland, Fla.

Howell said he harbors no anger towards his former opponent for spurring the investigation, but said he was disappointed.

"The only thing I'm disappointed about is we sat around after the election and discussed my son," said Howell. "He asked about my son many times after the election. He knew all about him."

Kirchner has declined comment.

Ask Teena

Do you want to speak your mind?

By ANNA HIGGINS
Special to the Herald

Freedom: The state or quality of being free; exemption from arbitrary restrictions on a specific civil right.

What are the consequences of freedom? Under law, only accountability for the effects of your own words. However, in school the consequence for speaking your mind is often punishment, depending on what's on it.

I interviewed 15 people on the question "If you had complete, total freedom of speech with no consequences, what would change about your words and actions?"

The poll showed that some of us use freedom as a shield and don't care about the consequences. It also seems that most use the threat of repercussions as an excuse to dodge the opportunity to express ourselves and voice our opinions. Could anyone really want consciousness, consequenceless freedom of speech? Fully exercised it gives everyone else around you the right to label you as a hypocrite, a freak, and advocate, a bimbo, a nerd. Would many people really want to open themselves up to the criticism that free speech provokes?

"For the most part, I say what I want and write what I want so not much would change except I wouldn't worry about people reading what I wrote because I couldn't be committed for it. I guess I would have more of a social life because I wouldn't be grounded all the time." (This from someone who creates poetry, songs, and artwork almost exclusively on subjects such as suicide, homicide, the evilness of Elvis, and the non-existence of Wyoming).

"Probably nothing because I usually speak my mind."

"I'd be about the same as I am."
"Same here."
"Nothing, I still cuss and everything, but you couldn't do anything about it, I'd change when I said it in class and stuff — they couldn't do nothing about it."

Anna Higgins

"I'd be able to cuss my parents out."
"I would be very rude to my relatives."
"I'd tell the president about himself."
"Nothing. There is nothing to improve about perfection" (speaking about himself).
"I don't know."

Most kids seem content with the expression that they already engage in. On the flip side, some of us censor ourselves because of the fear of what others will think of it. No one can criticize you if you don't open yourself to criticism by placing your ideas on the table. Freedom comes with that stipulation. That is why no one really seems to want total free speech. Greater freedom brings greater responsibility for the results of your actions. Free speech and what we say or don't say is a reflection of conscience. Does anyone want to speak their mind?

DEAR TEENA:
I got a speeding ticket and my mom took my car away for a month and she's making me pay the ticket.
I think she's over-reacting.

CARLESS, SANFORD

DEAR CARLESS:
I think your mother is trying to teach you a lesson about responsibility.

She wants you to understand that driving is a privilege, not a right.

You only broke the speed limit by a couple of miles an hour, but you broke the speed limit and you got a ticket. You've got to take responsibility for that.

She took your driving privileges away to make sure you think about it. Do that.

And when you get your car back, be more aware of things when you get behind the wheel.

DEAR TEENA:

I'm pretty much a social misfit, but I don't care.

I have really short hair. I wear a lot of my mom's clothes from way back in the 1960s and 1970s. And I like art and classical music.

Needless to say, I don't fit in with most of the kids, but I am who I am.

My problem is that my sister says I embarrass her. I don't want to embarrass her, but I don't want to change me to please her either.

DON'T FIT, LAKE MARY

DEAR DON'T:

It sounds like you're pretty secure with who you are. That's great.

I think you need to talk to your sister about tolerance and acceptance. It sounds like she is not willing to accept you for who you are. She wants you to conform to a pattern she has formed of what you should be.

Tell her that the world is made up of all kinds of people. She has to learn to live with all of them.

It doesn't matter if you like Mozart or Metallica. It doesn't matter if you wear go go boots or grunge. As long as you are at peace with who you are, she must learn to live with that person.

DEAR TEENA:

My dad is a total geek.

He wears black socks with sneakers and wears tacky shirts all the time.

I'm embarrassed to be seen with him, but he's always coming to my games and to things I do at school.

GEEKED, LAKE MARY

DEAR GEEKED:

It sounds to me like you have a pretty neat dad.

He may dress a little weird, but he seems to care about you and the things you are involved in.

Some kids are not as lucky as you. Their folks don't ever go to their games or take an interest in anything that they do.

Be thankful that he cares about you and don't worry about what he looks like.

If you don't like his clothes, maybe you can get him an outfit that you think is really cool and tell him that you think he looks great in it, but don't put so much emphasis on that.

IN BRIEF

Kids head for R.O.C.K. camp

This summer, more than 200 Florida children and teenagers with cancer will pack their bags and head out for the adventure and excitement of summer camp. The American Cancer Society Florida Division's R.O.C.K. (Reaching Out to Cancer Kids) Camp gives kids with cancer a chance to experience the fun and camaraderie of summer camp.

From July 18 to Aug. 7, the campers, ages 6-18, will gather in Brandon to enjoy activities such as canoeing, fishing, horseback riding and swimming at Florida's first and only camp exclusively for children with cancer.

The children are transported from cities throughout the state and attend camp at no charge to their families. The $750 it cost to send a child to R.O.C.K. Camp is totally funded by donations made to the American Cancer Society.

Each year special guest stop by to "rough it" with the campers. The Disney characters will be on hand each week, and General Norman Schwarzkopf is planning to attend as well.

WPMH to hold open blood drive

A safe and adequate blood supply is critical for the health of all Central Floridians. Without blood from the community supply, many medical and surgical procedures would not be possible and the lives could be lost. Winter Park Memorial Hospital invites the community to an open blood drive on Monday, July 19. Free cholesterol testing will be available to anyone who donates a unit of blood. Reservations are not necessary, but appointments are being scheduled to decrease waiting time.

The Blood drive will be held Monday, July 19, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Medical-library auditorium, Winter Park Memorial Hospital, 200 North Lakemont Ave., Winter Park. There is no fee. For more information please call 646-7443.

CDC battles youth violence

By LAURAN NERGAARD
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — Most doctors only treat victims of the violence that has become epidemic among America's youth. Mark Rosenberg is trying to prevent the bloodshed.

He's leading a new public health battle by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention — a radical effort to control youth violence that's drawing criticism from other scientists and the gun lobby.

"Kids are killing kids and we think it's a fact of life in this country," said Rosenberg, the CDC's top expert on violence. "But people thought smallpox was a fact of life, too, and it's been eradicated from the face of the Earth."

But how do doctors stop a teen-age shootout that killed a 13-year-old passerby as she walked home from an Atlanta library? Or keep a Kentucky 17-year-old from taking his class hostage and killing a teacher and janitor? Or prevent a 13-year-old boy in Pennsylvania from shooting himself because an official spotted the gun he

"Kids are killing kids and we think it's a fact of life in this country. But people thought smallpox was a fact of life, too, and it's been eradicated from the face of the Earth."

brought to class?

That's what the CDC is spending more than $6 million to learn — what puts children at risk and how to lessen the chance they'll grab a weapon at the first sign of conflict.

"There are things people can do to stop violence," Rosenberg said. "We're going to discover them, on the basis of science and not politics."

The toll from youth violence is staggering:

- About 10,000 Americans ages 10 to 24 are murdered or kill themselves every year.

- More than half the people arrested for murder in 1991 were under 25. One in 20 youths has taken a weapon to school.

- It's not just an urban problem. The homicide rate for children ages 10 to 14 in New Mexico is the nation's highest.

Some scientists say that while "Violence is a byproduct of the social conditions. ... They have to treat the cause."

Much of CDC's focus is on guns, because its studies have found that simple access to one can make a disagreement end in death.

Rosenberg acknowledges he can't fight such problems as poverty. But he wants to know if teaching children nonviolent social skills from age 3 could make a difference when they're grown. Or if mentors can counter daily images of violence. Or if mothers' support groups lessen the chance of child abuse that in turn leads to violent children.

Sober skipper not enough

By IRA DREYFUSS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Researchers seeking the cause of boating-related drownings say having a sober skipper on board doesn't ensure safety. They believe drunken passengers account for a large proportion of such drownings.

Safety efforts that target the boat operator in a manner similar to designated driver programs ashore "are, in short, missing the boat," says an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The designated driver analogy doesn't hold up for boaters, said researcher Jonathan Howland of Boston University School of Public Health. A drunken passenger in a car is theoretically strapped safely in a seat belt, but a drunken passenger on a boat can fall overboard, he said.

Critics, however, say the study magnifies the risk and minimizes the efforts to control drinking by passengers.

Alcohol use is common on the water, the report said. One study found elevated blood alcohol levels in 60 percent of people who died in boating accidents. It says.

The researchers reviewed the 924 boating fatalities that the Coast Guard reported for 1991. Forty-six percent took place when the vessels were not under way, they said. In addition, the reports indicate operators were at fault for fatalities in no more than 54 percent of cases.

The reports on boating fatalities from all causes are not detailed enough to draw conclusions about the proportion resulting from operator or passenger drinking, the report says.

But they indicate many drownings can't be blamed on something a drunken operator did, Howland said.

Even if the boat is drifting or moored, an alcohol-impaired passenger could be at risk, the article says. For instance, it notes that alcohol impairs balance and muscle control.

Alcohol also may raise the risk of death for a passenger who falls into the water, the article says. Alcohol dilates the blood vessels and thereby increases the chance of hypothermia, the commentary says.

LONG POND, Pa. — Ken Schrader broke his own track record for the second straight time at Pocono International Raceway as drivers tried to put Davey Allison's death behind them.

Schrader's 162.934-mph lap in a Chevrolet gave him his 15th career pole and circuit-leading fourth this season when he beat his month-old record of 162.816. Bill Elliott will start next to him in a Ford on the front row Sunday in the Miller Genuine Draft 500.

Also starting in the top 10 will be, Ricky Rudd, Ernie Ivan, Mark Martin, Jimmy Hensley, Bobby Labonte, Morgan Shepherd, Derrike Cope and Brett Bodine.

Pavin ties Faldo at British

SANDWICH, England — Corey Pavin used a monster putt to tie Nick Faldo for the third-round lead today in the British Open.

Pavin, the skinny 5-foot-9 American, ran in a 50-foot birdie putt from the fringe on the fourth hole as the highlight of a 2-under-par 68.

Faldo, the defending and three-time champion, had to work hard to match par 70 in the windy conditions as, like Pavin, will carry a 202 total, 8-under-par, into Sunday's final round of golf's oldest championship.

Greg Norman and Masters champion Bernhard Langer of Germany were a single stroke off the pace at 203.

It is far from a two-man race, however. Also in contention were Peter Senior of Australia and PGA champion Nick Price. They were at 205, three off the pace.

Wayne Grady, Fred Couples and 23-year-old Ernie Els of South Africa were at 206.

Shula optimistic about Dolphins' chances in '93

By STEVEN WINE
AP Sports Writer

DAVIE — This spring, when the offseason routine of golf and travel left Don Shula in a mellow mood, his guard came down a bit while discussing the 1993 Miami Dolphins.

"We're very capable of winning it all," Shula said.

The quote is buried in a preseason media guide, and that's where Shula undoubtedly would like for it to stay. Speculation rubs against his nature, and now that the coach is back at work — training camp opens Monday — he won't predict whether his team is Super Bowl material.

"You don't sit behind a desk and say it," he grumbled. "It's got to happen."

With 318 career victories, Shula needs just seven more to pass the late George Halas and become the winningest NFL coach of all time. Breaking Halas' record would be a thrill, Shula said — "In a year we won the Super Bowl."

Last season, for the first time since 1985, the Dolphins won the AFC East and reached the conference championship game. But despite their success, free agency and Shula's displeasure with an underachieving offense triggered a shakeup of the lineup. There will be plenty of new names on the roster when the team reports to its new training camp at Nova University.

Offseason acquisitions include receivers Irving Fryar and Mark Ingram, fullback Keith Byars, offensive tackle Ron Heller and defensive tackle Mike Golic. Miami will pay the five a combined $5.4 million this season.

"When you're at the level we're at, being one game away from the Super Bowl, you try to do whatever is necessary to make yourself better," Shula said.

Departures via free agency include discontented receiver Mark Clayton, tight end Ferrell Edmunds and guard Harry Galbreath. On Saturday, the Dolphins waived receiver Mark Duper (see related story). Fullback Tony Paige announced his retirement last week. Running back Bobby Humphrey, arrested and later accidentally shot in the thigh during the offseason, is unsigned and uncertain to return.

□ See Dolphins, Page 3B

Duper waived by Dolphins

Associated Press

MIAMI — Mark Duper, the second-leading receiver in Miami Dolphins history, was waived by the team today with training camp two days away.

That means the Dolphins will enter this season for the first time since 1983 without the "Marks Brothers" — Duper and Mark Clayton, who were Dan Marino's top receivers for the past decade and are 1-2 on the team's all-time receiving list.

Clayton signed with Green Bay as a free agent and now the 34-year-old Duper is gone, made expendable by the acquisition of Irving Fryar, Mark Ingram and first-round draft choice O.J. McDuffie.

"This was a very difficult choice to make, but with off-season acquisitions and the personnel we have on our roster, we made the decision to go in another direction," coach Don Shula said in a prepared statement.

Duper was named to the Pro-Bowl three times, most recently in 1986. He caught 44 passes for 762 yards and seven touchdowns last season.

With 511 catches, he ranks second on the Dolphins' all-time reception list behind Clayton, who had 550.

Duper's 8,869 reception yards in his 11 seasons with Miami rank first on the team. He was a second-round draft choice by Miami in 1982 from North-western (La.) State.

McDuffie agreed to terms for a four-year contract Friday and will join the team for the start of training camp Monday.

The Dolphins also waived defensive back Kerry Glenn and signed wide receiver Mike Williams.

Mind rules governing bass bait

More time, money, and effort is probably expended by Florida fishermen in pursuit of the largemouth bass than for any other species of freshwater sportfish.

Some bass anglers are purists. They scorn live bait and use nothing but artificial tackle. At the other extreme, some bass fishermen turn their noses up at anything man-made and use nothing but live fish. Many of course, will use whatever type of bait happens to be producing at a given time.

Also, there's probably a few bass fishermen who are so afflicted with the passion for catching largemouth bass that they would stick a hook in a tomato and troll it. If there was even a slight promise of success.

At any rate, bass fishermen will fish with most anything. However, those using live fish for bait need to be occasionally reminded of pertinent rules and regulations, according to Lt. Vinard G. Hill, regional public information director of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

"No species of black bass or any part thereof may be used as a bait," said Hill. "Bass fishermen can't use live goldfish or carp either. Bream, speckled perch and pickerel (jack) may be used as live bait by bass fishermen using rod and reel or pole and line.

FISHING

"With the exception of black bass and the special rules which apply to bream, speckled perch and pickerel (jack), all other native freshwater fish may be used as live bait by bass fishermen."

SHUPE'S SCOOP

Live bait will consistently catch larger fish than artificials, because big fish prefer to dine on one huge item rather than to chase down many tiny morsels.

FISHING FORECAST

Bass fishing continues to decline with increasing heat, but bream and catfish are hitting in deep river bends on crickets, mussels, and worms. Dierhard bass anglers would be well advised to fish at night, as fish will be most active after the sun goes down.

Sebastian Inlet is hopping with action. Big tarpon, swarms of spawning snook (season closed), flounder, jack crevalle, and ladyfish are providing non-stop action on outgoing tides. Live bait such as finger mullet or live shrimp are the top offerings, but jigs and swimming-minnow type lures will also work just fine.

Captain Jack at Port Canaveral reports great fishing action. King mackerel and tarpon are just off the beach and in the buoy line. Dolphin and wahoo are numerous in waters ranging from 210-240 feet. Giant grouper and snapper are hitting in 170-240 feet of water. Seas have been calm, and the water is clear. Wise anglers are always on the alert for the afternoon thunderstorms that crop up daily.

Ponce Inlet is not producing huge fish, but action is hot with sheepshead, jack crevalle, bluefish, redfish, whiting, and drum. Live or dead shrimp is the best bait. Fish on the bottom with a No. 1 hook and the lightest weight possible.

Scratch Trio's League, July 12

Conglia also had the highest individual game for the week, rolling a 255, to best Derrick Fritton (247) and Sinnott (236).

city offered men's leagues Tuesday through Thursday nights (including two leagues on Tuesday night) and a women's league on Tuesday night at Fort Mellon Park.

In the past, the city has had a highly competitive Class C league on Monday nights at Chase Park and would like to re-establish the league during the fall season.

If interest dictates, the city can run as many as three six-team leagues every night but Tuesday at Chase, Pinelhurst, and Fort Mellon parks. During the fall, the city's new senior girls' slowpitch softball league will play its games Tuesday night at Fort Mellon.

The leagues are scheduled to begin play the week of Sept. 7.

For more information, call 330-5697.

Girls can register at the recreation department offices, located on the first floor of Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue, or on the day of the tryouts. All participants must pay a $10 registration fee. Players who do not live in Sanford also must pay a $10 non-resident's fee ($15 for a family).

Players who participated in the spring league must register but do not have to attend tryouts; players new to the league must attend tryouts, which will be conducted on Saturday, Aug. 14, at Fort Mellon Park.

Dolphins

Shula's primary task in training camp will be to sort out the offensive line, blamed by many for Miami's lack of punch a year ago. Despite a lineup including seven players with Pro Bowl experience, the offense scored just six touchdowns in the final six regular-season games. Miami ranked 24th in the NFL in rushing, largely because running back Mark Higgs seldom could find a hole.

Center Jeff Uhlenhake is still recovering from offseason knee surgery. Heller likely will become the new right tackle. The starting right guard could be "Earthquake" Eddie Blake, who missed his entire rookie season last year with injuries.

Despite never playing a down in the NFL, Blake has earned notoriety in Miami for struggling to get his weight under 300 pounds.

"I heard he's at 307 now," Shula said. "Blake needs to play. He owes me a year."

Fun World's $1 million expansion

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Fun World, the amusement park which is part of the Flea World complex in Sanford, has broken ground for five new major thrill rides.

The new expansion is expected to cost just over $1 million, and add 15 more jobs, bringing to 30 the number of workers on the Fun World payroll.

Owner/operator Syd Levy explained, "The public loves the park additions we've made in the last year including two new Go-Kart tracks and the Scrambler." He continued, "Now, with the economy on course, we're committed to adding more exciting thrill rides to keep them coming back for more, and to attract more groups and more tourist business."

The new rides will include a Rock 'N' Roll Himalaya, a favorite at fairs and amusement parks that speeds 40 people on a bobsled-like ride to the sounds of rock and roll music and flashing bright lights.

Also to be added, a Tilt-A-Whirl, a 100 foot giant park slide, a Swinger adult swing ride, and a Paratrooper.

In addition to the new thrill rides, Fun World is converting its Fun Harbor Golf Course to a 9 hole "Junior Golf Course" to complement the 18 hole "Dodge City" links, which challenge young and old alike with voice activated golf technology.

Levy expects the addition of these five new rides will make Fun World into a major attraction for both locals and tourists.

During construction, Fun World will remain open as normal, Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. until midnight. The adjoining Flea World market is open the same days from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m.

The company was acquired by Duke Adamson in 1977. He presently serves as president.

Business energy loan interest rates drop

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

A reduction in the interest rate charged for the Florida Energy Loan Program has been announced by the Energy Conservation Assistance Program, located in the Small Business Development Center at the University of Central Florida.

The interest rate is now a fixed rate targeted at 1/2 percent below prime rate. Prime rate is determined by date of application. Currently, loans are being made at the rate of 5 1/2 percent.

The Florida Energy Loan Program is designed to help small businesses reduce energy consumption. The loan fund, established by the Florida Energy Office, makes low interest loans for the purpose of improving the energy efficiency of a structure, and for the purchase and installation of energy efficient equipment.

Amounts of up to $50,000 are available for qualified Florida businesses.

Eligibility is based on several factors: business size, (200 employees or less); profitability (business must have been profitable for the past two consecutive years); and eligible conservation measures.

Loan repayments are fixed at no more than 75 percent of the projected monthly dollar savings due to installed energy saving equipment.

Applications for the Florida Energy Loan Program may be made through the Energy Conservation Assistance Program, headed by energy specialist Rick Dolan.

Dolan's services include analysis of and assistance with leased or owned buildings, on-site energy surveys, analysis of energy bills and charting of energy consumption; analysis of utility rates including demand charges; operation and assessment of lighting levels; and many other areas of conservation.

The Small Business Development Center is part of a statewide program designed to promote economic development by responding to the needs of the small business community. The program is funded by the University of Central Florida, College of Business Administration in cooperation with the Small Business Administration.

Employees train at 'Target University'

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The doors to the new Target store in Lake Mary are scheduled to open July 25. In order to train new employees at the store, Target has undertaken a rather unusual but productive training program.

The training process will continue until the grand opening, with employees undergoing an extensive training program.

Management is calling the training, "Target University." Employees are attending the training program which includes participating in group activities, role playing and other exercises to learn why the company feels guest service is important, and how they can take personal responsibility for providing it.

Target has rewritten the traditional manual on motivational training to fit with its own corporate culture. The training goes so far as to use hula hoops, mini-history quizzes and music to instill a spirited attitude to reflect the company's "fast, fun and friendly" philosophy.

According to Ron Sargent, store team leader, "Target University is not a place, but a concept. Employees attending Target University will participate in some Japanese teamwork rituals and learn the tactics Walt Disney World uses to fill its ranks with spirited people. Classes began during this past week at the Lake Mary Target facility, located at 3810 Greenwood Blvd.

All employees who will be working at the Target store when it opens on July 25, will be required to be graduates of the Target University.

For the children...

Kiwanians share fun with handicapped youths

By ED KORGAN
Herald Correspondent

If you could only see the faces on those children! What a surprise!

The Kiwanis Club of Sanford has sponsored a giant celebration for children attending Camp Challenge in Sorrento for the past 20 years. The Easter Seal camp is held for two weeks out of every year and it is a special two weeks for many of the handicapped children, which is highlighted by the special Saturday program set up by the Kiwanis Club. Meta Brooks spearheaded this year's program.

The children enjoyed the appearances of the Walt Disney family, Mickey and Minnie, Donald Duck, Pluto and Goofy. The characters strolled through the crowded pavilion and hugged, gestured and posed for pictures with many of the children. The characters were made possible through the efforts of Brooks and Billy Higgins.

The children were astounded as they touched, with a zoo attendant right there, a live snake and alligator. They saw a small owl, a hedgehog and several other small and delightful animals. The animals, along with their keepers, were sent over from the Central Florida Zoo. Wilbur's Farms also brought over small petting animals that the children could touch, feel and smell.

The Orlando Predator Dance Cheerleaders were also present. Throughout the day they performed many of their dance routines and cheers. When they weren't entertaining they were in the crowd talking with everyone and even posing for pictures with the kids and the camera buffs that were taking pictures of the lovely ladies.

Students join forces to give HOPE to others

Special to the Herald

Recently, a new project was taken by Betty Crytzer's eight grade Gifted Resource class of Greenwood Lakes Middle School in Lake Mary. This project, called HOPE, was intended to reach out and help the homeless community in the area. Project HOPE proved to be successful when boxes and boxes of clothes and personal hygiene products were donated by caring students and teachers.

It took time and devotion to develop Project HOPE and to make it a meaningful experience for everyone involved. Participants said it taught them a lot about helping others and working as a team.

The main purpose of this project was to help the homeless or needy people in our society by collecting personal hygiene items, to try and help make people's lives easier and maybe more enjoyable. The items collected were:

Soap, toothpaste and toothbrushes, shampoo, clothes and money.

Students began by brainstorming ideas to elaborate on personal involvement in the community. The main object was to eliminate ideas that wouldn't work. This was done to narrow down realistic possibilities. Finally, a consensus on a project now known as HOPE was reached. This broke down into two groups, school participation and community participation.

School participation dealt with collecting items that were to go to needy people. The class planned on who would collect items, advertise, contact teachers, and receive permission from the principal. Execution of these jobs carried on daily for nine weeks.

Community involvement included calling centers to see what product they needed. As centers were called, students found that many items they needed were virtually impossible to collect. Sanford Christian Sharing Center responded by saying they needed hygiene products. So, these items were collected for them. Students felt if others saw what they did, they might pick up on it and expand the project beyond this one class. Some planned to put time into the community by working at Habitat for Humanity.

Devoting time to others is a worthwhile cause, they felt, and that's why the projects were chosen. The planning of project HOPE required much consideration and discussion. By working together, students discovered that anything could be, and can be accomplished.

Teamwork during this project was very essential in meeting. Without teamwork, this project would have never succeeded. Each student helped with the development of advertising, such as making posters and making sure students were aware of the

Dr. Thomas Largen (right) congratulates Dr. Frank Clontz for having served as his surgical associate for 25 years while Alice Toney, Clontz's

Dr. Frank Clontz had the surprise of his life last Sunday afternoon after he had a telephone call from his business partner, Dr. Thomas (Tom) Largen.

Tom telephoned the Clontz home to tell Jean Clontz (who was naturally in on the conspiracy) an urgent matter had arisen at the offices of the two surgical associates and Frank's signature was needed on some important papers. Then Tom hung up the telephone.

In the meantime, Jean and Frank were headed to another party, or so he thought, and it could be said he was a tad belligerent about having to detour by his office en route.

Surprise! Surprise! Upon arrival, Frank discovered a crowd of people there in their Sunday best to honor him at an open house hosted by Dr. Largen on Frank's 25th anniversary as his associate.

Jean said, "Frank was totally, totally surprised. I never saw him speechless. This was the first time I ever saw him when

The open house was arranged by Dr. Largen, Dorothy Chandler, his office manager for 35 years, and "all the girls in the office." Bridge, anyone

The Wednesday Bridge Club is having lots of summer fun gathering at the homes of members.

For information, call Libby Prevatt, 349-5637.

Escape

Valerie Weld has a sure cure for the summer doldrums, blahs or burnout. Grab some grub duds, a few supplies (but no makeup), your teenagers and head for a deserted beach island.

A group of 12 Sanfordites headed for Upper Capiva Island in two cars with a truck pulling a boat.

Upon reaching the nearly deserted island, the group discovered a few condos and several upscale houses including two they had leased.

Although mosquitoes took over the island at night, daytime attractions included the beach, fishing, shelling and a bird sanctuary, which Val said she enjoyed every morning at 6 a.m.

The only modes of transportation on the island were golf carts, except, of course, a fire truck and a sightseeing airplane.

There were two restaurants, but business was so slow, patrons had to pre-order their meals ahead of time.

Attending the island venture were: Valerie and George Weld and their daughter, Natalie, 13; Miriam and Ken Doktor; Diana and Dan Garris and their daughter, Melissa, 13; Holly and Phil Ricker and their son, Kyle, 7; and Jacklyn Foster, 13.

Alaskan retreat

Dorothy and Herman Schroeder have returned from a "marvelous, wonderful, gorgeous, beautiful" two-week trip to Alaska.

"You should go," Herman said. "Everybody should go. It's so beautiful. I took 84 pictures."

The Schroeders flew directly from Chicago to Anchorage where they were guests of their two nieces and their families.

Herman was impressed with the defense measures taken after World War II. He said one day they rode the train 120 miles to Seward on the Alaskan Gulf and took a boat ride out to the Pacific.

While there, they attended a wedding reception and six birthday parties.

Herman said, "Everything was so interesting — the mountains with all the snow." He mentioned that a big earthquake in 1964 caused the sea level to be lowered eight feet, killing all the trees and leaving valleys with no vegetation except grass.

He said last year a volcano erupted and the ashes are still clinging to the frozen masses of ice on the mountains.

Dorothy and Herman Schroeder bundle up against the Alaskan cold.

The Schroeders enjoyed 19 hours of daylight at this time of year and a temperature that hovered around 80 degrees.

They were amazed at the big, gorgeous flowers "that seem so much bigger and brighter than ours." The only time it rained while they were in Alaska was on July 4. "The sun seemed a lot hotter there," Herman said.

Herman talked about how the glaciers fascinated him. Dorothy was impressed with "just the beauty. It's indescribable."

"It's all so pretty. The mall downtown is absolutely gorgeous." She also talked about a mall on the outskirts of Anchorage.

Dorothy said there are 121 miles of bicycle trails in Anchorage which are used in the winter for skiing.

Alaska is picturesque, breathtaking, beautiful and cool this time of year. Would the Schroeders like to live there?

need for their involvement to make this project succeed. Teamwork was needed most at this time.

I chose not only to get involved with school, I helped advertise, collect and package items, donate items, and speak to classes about our project and how they could help.

This project was a definite success according to statistics. We came from having nothing to boxes full of product. However, one thing that should be considered is that on the average, the number of items we collect decreased as time progressed.

ing could have helped. If we were to do it again, I would personally encourage people to bring in donations.

I worked on several different things during the project, such as advertisements, boxes, signs, and collecting items.

I felt that project HOPE turned out to be a success. The project took a break after soap, but picked up when we got to clothes and donations.

Chad Forbes

I believe that this project was very, very successful. It proved that teamwork and a little kindness can go a long way.

I was involved in project HOPE a lot. I brought in hygiene product each week and brought in two bag of clothes.

I thought HOPE was a very worthwhile experience. It showed me that I could make a difference and help others in need.

items.

I think this was a worthwhile project and was helpful to those who are less fortunate.

During the project, I personally got involved in one main way. I volunteered at Habitat for Humanity.

I think that the project was not as successful as it could have been, but it was for a good cause.

Chip Colandreo

I tried to give my all to project HOPE. I did bring in all items, and encouraged others to do so.

lend any of my time at Habitat for Humanity, yet I feel that I have contributed to this cause.

I think HOPE was a good experience because we learned a lot about helping others people and organizing and implementing plan.

Heather Leonardi

My personal involvement in project HOPE was keeping track of what we collected.

I thought we did a good job on project HOPE. There were some things we could have done better, like holding people's interests and better inform them. All in all, our project turned out great.

Jody Slaton

My personal view on project HOPE is that it was a success, since we did collect quite a few personal hygiene items.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Sunday, July 18, 1993
In the year ahead you might not get out of the starting blocks as quick as you hope, but don't let this discourage you. This is an unusual cycle where you grow stronger and stronger as you near the finish line.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you are overly insistent upon having your own way today, you might run up against someone who is equally adamant about having his/hers own way. A collision is possible. Cancer, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone who knows how to draw you out, but may not have your best interests at heart could get you to reveal things today which, quite frankly, should be kept secret.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Friends might try to involve you in a type of activity today you don't find enjoyable. It may be best to turn them down, rather than participate in an expensive no-fun time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Ambitious objectives can be fulfilled today, provided you have the patience and tenacity to do so. Things you attempt to do in a hasty fashion are apt to fall flat.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your ideas might not be readily accepted by others today, so it will be up to you to prove their validity through action instead of explanation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In a joint endeavor today neither you nor the person with whom you're involved may handle things as wisely as they should be handled where costs are concerned.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There's a possibility you might have to deal with someone today who is rather abrasive. However, this person can be managed if you wear a velvet glove over your armor fist.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 19, 1993
Exciting changes are in the offing for you in the year ahead. Success could be coupled to what you learned from experience. You'll not be tripped up again by obstacles over which you fell previously.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Abide by what your inner feelings tell you is right if faced with opposition from others today, but do so in a manner that does not offend companions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Do not let your intuition or hunches supersede your logic and common sense today. The latter enhances chances for success, the former could diminish it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Unfortunately, you might place your trust today in an acquaintance you know from experience isn't too reliable. You'll have only yourself to blame if havoc results.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

At the seventh table, South adopted a potentially dangerous "safety-play." After winning the first trick with the club jack, he cashed the diamond ace. The jack dropped from West. So declarer continued diamonds and had nine tricks.

Why is this a dangerous play? Give West honor doubleton and East honor third. The ace collects only low cards. Declarer enters dummy with a spade and leads the diamond 10. When East plays low, South has a nasty guess to make. The double finesse eliminates any guesswork.

South was lucky, but East and West were doubly unlucky. They were Tony Dlsley (a former schoolfriend and bridge partner of mine) and Robert Charlesworth. They finished second. If South had adopted the popular line and finished one down, they would have won! Bad luck!

Space shuttle launch delayed

CAPE CANAVERAL — NASA halted the countdown for space shuttle Discovery less than an hour before scheduled liftoff Saturday because of a bad electrical circuit controlling a set of launch pad safety locks. A second launch attempt was expected no earlier than late this week. Launch director Bob Steek said the prime suspect was a failed switch at the pad that will have to be replaced. Repairs will begin Monday once workers have safe access. "It's always a disappointment when a smooth launch count is brought to a halt, particularly when it's caused by heretofore very reliable hardware," Steek said. "This is one of those things where we're going to find it, we're going to fix it and we're going to get on with launching... as soon as we can get there."

of the shuttle. They flew back to Johnson Space Center in Houston to get in some extra training for their satellite-delivery and spacewalking mission. "See you soon, we hope," shuttle commander Frank Culbertson Jr. said. "Thanks a lot for the attempt." Everything, including the weather, had been going perfectly. But with just a few hours left before the scheduled 9:22 a.m. EDT liftoff, all eight safety locks, called "hold-down posts," for the two solid fuel booster rockets were activated and awaiting a firing command. That's not supposed to happen until 18 seconds before launch. The 15-story boosters are bolted to the pad for stability; they are released when explosive bolts in the hold-down posts are detonated when the boosters ignite at liftoff. There are two redundant circuit systems, and only one of them activated posts. Steek said. Steek said he did not know what would happen if the boosters were released prematurely. But if most or all of the hold-down posts failed to release when the boosters fire, the shuttle likely would blow up or just above the pad. During their nine-day flight, the astronauts are to drop off an experimental communications satellite and an ultraviolet telescope to study hot stars. The communications satellite will stay in orbit, but the crew is to retrieve and bring back the telescope for a future flight. A six-hour spacewalk also is planned to test tools needed to repair the Hubble Space Telescope in December. It is the fifth of eight shuttle flights planned this year. Of the first four, only one got off on the appointed day, and that was in January. Last year, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration launched seven of eight shuttle missions on the first try.

Legal pie fight shaping up for Three Stooges heirs

By The Associated Press

GLENDALE, Calif. — A legal pie fight is shaping up over the financial legacy of the Three Stooges. Some relatives of the late comedians lost a court bid Friday to freeze income from Stooges' films and merchandise sales handled by a grandson of head Stooge Moe Howard. Superior Court Judge Charles Stoll refused to extend a restraining order freezing the accounts of Norman Maurer Productions. Trial begins Dec. 13.

"These are just legal pies being thrown back and forth," said Jeffrey Scott, head of the company. He claims Norman Maurer Productions can market Three Stooges' products and merchandise in exchange for paying 10 percent of the profits to Stooge heirs. Norman Maurer was Moe Howard's son-in-law and the comedy team's producer in the 1960s. Jeffrey Scott is Norman Maurer's son. "Curly" Joe DeRita's widow, Jean, and Larry Fine's granddaughter, Kris Cutler, said they're being shortchanged.
