Longwood, union head back to negotiating table

By SANDRA ELLIOTT Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD - It is back to the negotiating table March 29 for the Longwood City Commission and the local representatives of the International Union of Operating Engineers.

The city commissioners set the 6 p.m. executive session to begin work again on a contract with the unton.

Months of work on a proposed contract with city operating engineers of (AFL-CIO) local 673 went down to defeat March 1 when angry taxpayers swarmed into the last commission meeting to oppose passage of the measure. A major objection to the contract was a provision for automatic step salary increases. Taxpayers urged the commission to kill the contract claiming it would result in high taxes which, in tough economic times, they could not afford. Despite efforts by some commission members and city administrator Jun-McFellin to convince taxpayers the contact would not bring about higher taxes, the citizens were not swayed.

McFellin said members of the IUOE had asked for guidance from the commission in proposing a new contract. If the provision for stepincreases was removed from the proposal. McFellin said, the union negotiators wondered if the commission would be interested in reconsidering the contract.

Although some of the commissioners began discussing portions of the contract they had not agreed with, Mayor Paul Lovestrand, twice urged the men to meet in executive session to air their thoughts on the subject. Commissioners Rex Anderson and Fred Pearl voted against the executive session but the three remaining commissioners. Steve Miller, Harvey Smerilson and Loy estrand prevailed. Protection bill approved

Detector checks crowd for abortion clinic bill debate

By Bill Bergstrem Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Backers of a bill to protect abortion clinics said the need intensified after a doctor was killed last week at a Pensacola clinic.

The bill won approval Monday in a Senate panel. Debate on a companion measure was expected today in a House committee and possibly Wednesday on the House floor.

Lawmakers also continued to discuss how to deal with prison crowding, and Senate President Ander Crenshaw said tent-like releases and save money.

A Senate panel kept alive a proposed 25-cent-a-pack eigarette tax to build prisons as it approved changes in sentencing guidelines designed to keep violent criminals behind bars longer.

Witnesses and spectators were screened with a metal detector for the Senate

Criminal Justice Committee meeting on the abortion protest measure.

"Hopefully, it will get the state attorney to look at people on 10-foot stepladders in back of 8-foot stockade fences screaming I pray for your death in the name of Jesus' and look at that as assault," said Ruth Arick, community relations director for three Florida clinics. But others said increasing penalties for repeatedly blocking access to medical facili-ties could be unconstitutional.

The U.S. Constitution bars laws aimed at a particular person or group, said Carole structures could hold off early inmate releases and save money.

"I think it's a very dangerous bill that you're passing, and I hope you don't pass it." said Thomas Horkan Jr., lobbyist for the Florida Catholic Conference.

"This country was founded on dissent and we've got to protect dissent," said Sen. Gary Siegel, R-Longwood, a committee member. "I'm pro-choice, but this bill is not the way to handle it."

The Senate panel voted 4-3 for the bill (SB 1714) by Sen. Jim Boczar, D-Sarasota. Siegle and Sens. William Bankhead, R-Ponte Vedra Beach, and Robert Harden, R-Fort Walton Beach, voted no.

Arick and others backing the bill wore black ribbons in memory of Dr. David Gunn, slain Thursday in Pensacola. The House Criminal Justice Committee has passed a similar bill (CS-HB 1429) by Rep. Elaine Gordon, D-North Miami.

Gordon said she defends people's right to protest, "but there has not been any enforcement of the constitutional guarantee of a woman to have access to a facility where she can have medical treatment, including termination of pregnancy."

If it were written into the Florida Constitution, bans on discrimination could be based only on race, color, religion. gender, national origin, age, handicap or marital status.

American Family Association affiliates are expected to file similar amendments in about 11 states, said Jeff Peters, chairman of an opposing group, Floridians Respect Everyone's Equality.

Caton's group led the "Take Back Tampa," campaign that repealed a gay rights law last iall. The organization would have to obtain 429,000 signatures by Aug. 9, 1994, to get the proposed amendment on a statewide ballot the following November.

Florida doesn't have a state gay-rights law but communities with ordinances include Key West, where gays flock to a colorful annual parade, Miami Beach and Palm Beach County. Gay-rights proposals are pending in Broward and Alachua counties.

The proposed amendment came on the heels of separate decisions by two circuit judges striking down Florida's existing law banning homosexuals from adopting children. The rulings both said a 1977 law passed during beauty queen Anita Bryant's anti-gay crusade was discriminatory and unfair. A bill filed in the Florida House would repeal the law, but it has been stuck in committee after getting only one hearing.

STUART — Reporter Tim Roche has become a Martin County Jail inmate, saying he was determined to defend his word and journalistic principles even though he feared "the unknown" of jail life. The 24-year-old journalist walked past a rolled-back jail door at 10:30 a.m. Monday. leaving his attorney, editor and colleagues behind. He began a 30-day contempt sentence for refusing to divulge a source.

Defense: Blame King for beating

By LINDA DEUTSCH AP Special Correspondent

LOS ANGELES - The defense in the trial of four police officers charged with violating Rodney King's civil rights opened its case with a bid to persuade jurors that the motorist was responsible for his own beating.

Paul DePasquale told the jury Monday that his client, Officer Timothy Wind, merely reacted to King's refusal to obey orders to lie still.

'Mr. King directed the behavior of Tim Wind, directed beating, denied provoking the officers who clubbed, kicked and shocked him.

At the conclusion of the government's case, U.S. District Judge John Davies rejected a defense request to dismiss the charges on the grounds that prosecutors didn't present enough evidence.

Defense attorneys claim the officers believed King was high on PCP the night of the beating. Government medical witnesses said King showed no signs of PCP intoxication, and King testified he never took the hallucinogen.

Still, the defense elicited testimony that PCP can give users immense strength and keep them from feeling pain. Sgt. John Amott, a prosecution witness, said PCP creates "the Incredible Hulk syndrome" in

The final hours of the government's case focused on what prosecutors portrayed as a cover-up by the defendants.

Lt. Patrick Conmay, a watch commander, said Koon never mentioned that King was clubbed while on the ground and never indicated King was scriously hurt.

Koon "Indicated the Injuries were of a minor nature," Conmay said. "He specifically described a split lip." King suffered broken bones in his face, bruises and a broken leg.

Also Monday, prosecutors and lawyers representing three black men charged in the videotaped beating of white trucker Reginald Denny at the outset of the riots last year said they are willing to discuss plea bargains. The riots broke out after the officers in the King case were acquitted on state brutality charges.

Plea bargains could prevent another racially volatile trial from overlapping the King case. The defendants are scheduled for trial April 12.

PENSACOLA - A black cross with red flowers hung outside in memory of Dr. David Gunn as the Pensacola Women's Medical Services clinic reopened for the first time after he was slain there.

On Monday, there were no demonstrators as there had been when Gunn was shot three times in the back last Wednesday, and no abortions were performed. Clinic administrator Brianne Dorsey and her assistant answered the phones and made appoints into for abortions. While talking with reporters outside the clinic, Dorsey was composed until she spoke of her friendship with Gunn. "I'm really upset that this has happened to Dr. Gunn," she said, her voice cracking. "We were roommates for awhile, for six months. We had a real good relationship. He is a wonderful man, a great doctor and I'm going to miss him dearly." She said Gunn, a strong proponent of women's reproductive rights, would have wanted the clinic to get back to business-as-normal. Dorsey declined to say when abortions would resume, but John Burt, regional director of the anti-abortion group Rescue America, said it would be Thursday.

"We know that's when they will be doing them," said Burt. who led the demonstration last Wednesday. "We called and made an appointment." Burt said he expected the demonstration to be small with only the usual dozen or so local protesters.

Dorsey said security would be increased. She declined to give details, but locksmiths and alarm installers could be seen at work in the building later Mon-

Confidential about signs of the times

(Confidential to the 300 or so business owners who failed to meet the county's Dec. 1 deadline to lower their point-ofsale signs to the 15-foot level)

A uniform sign height:

 is safer along busy roadways. Customers looking for your business will not have to divert their attention from high to low while trying to see your sign while trying to avoid crashing into the idiot that appears ready to slam on the brakes any minute. They'll appreciate that. And customer appreciation translates to increased profits through repeat business.

 looks nicer. It's tidier and less intrusive to the natural surroundings distinguishing Seminole County from the urbanized clutter south of here. Many folks will choose to shop in Seminole County because of that pleasant setting. You would be contributing your share to the preservation of that ambiance for those shoppers. They'll appreciate that. And customer appreciation translates to increased profits through repeat business.

It is understandable to initially react negatively to a government-imposition that taps into the bottom line. Businessmen already carry an unreasonable federal, state and local bureaucratic burden. The required expense of paying $100 to $1,000 to lower a sign seems unfair. In some cases it is. The county has a process to deal with reasonable situations and hardships.

Sometimes government regulation, like any capitol expenditure, can be painful up front. But in the long run, astute business owners look to make their investments pay off. An investment in a more attractive community can do just that.

...Make smorgasbord a veritable feast

The various sign regulations in Seminole County reminds us of diners at a Chinese restaurant. The county, Lake Mary, Casselberry and Oviedo have selected from Column A, a 15-foot limit. Altamonte Springs has selected the 20-foot Column B. Sanford, Longwood and Winter Springs have opted for Column C, allowing a 25-foot feast.

in 1989, Lake Mary and county commissioners showed a remarkable amount of cooperation in adopting the Lake Mary Boulevard "gateway" ordinance which establishes a 15-foot sign height limit along

Subsequently, after months of discussions and debate, county commissioners set the same sign standard throughout the county. It was their way of saying the entire road system in the county can carry over some of the beauty that will be the hallmark of the

Now is not the time to retreat from that vision. Instead, the county and cities should begin discussions, perhaps through CALNO, about a coordinated sign regulation policy. Such a plan would dramatically reduce the visual noise of an up-and-down sign acheme and provide residents and visitors a pleasing menu of options.

But such discussions must provide consideration for sign owners who have recently complied with one regulation only to face another. Improving community standards is one thing. Bureaucratic bombardments is quite another.

Let's work together for a more beautiful, profitable county.

Case raises questions about Reno

By most accounts, Janet Reno boasts an unblemished record as chief prosecutor of Dade County, Fla. However, the latest attorney general nominee very well may bear responsibility for one of the gravest miscarriages of justice this nation has ever seen.

Before the Senate confirms Reno as the federal government's top advocate, its members should acquaint themselves with a stunning report by investigative journalist Debbie Nathan, in the quarterly journal of the Institute of Psychological Theraples.

.Nathan sees striking parallels between a child molestation case Reno handled nine years ago and the notorious McMartin Preschool case in California. The difference is that, while accusations of violence and cult rituals in the McMartin case were proved to be a fiction and the defendants were acquitted, Reno made similar charges stick in her highly celebrated case.

Back in 1984, the voters of Dade County were not so sure that they wanted to return Reno to her elected post. She found herself in a tough political fight against a challenger who planned to make child protection one of his major campaign issues.

Right about that time, Reno was informed that a handful of parents. living in the affluent Miami suburb of Country Walk suspected that their children were being molested by a local baby-sitting service. The Dade County prosecutor decided that she could ride this explosive case to re-election.

Reno brought in the husband-wife team of Joseph and Laurie Braga to in-terview three dozen children who had at some time been left in the care of Frank and lieans Fuster. The Bragas seemed persuaded, even before videotaping the children. that the Fusters must be guilty of ritual sex

This was not an entirely untenable assumption. Frank Fuster, a 36-year-old Cuban immigrant, had previously been convicted of both manslaughter and fondling a 9-year-old child. State regulators were derelict in failing to uncover the fact that he and his 17-year-old Honduran wife operated an unlicensed day-care service out of their home. Yet, at the outset of the case, none of the children would say that either of the Fusters abused them in any way. So the Bragas went to work on the children to coax them into implicating their baby sitters. By the time the Bragas were finished, the children somehow remembered all sorts of abuses. This brings to mind the horrific case of San Diego naval officer Jim Wade, whose 8-year-old daughter was taken away from him for two years before he was acquitted of having raped and sodomized her. He says child advocate interrogators like the Bragas kept badgering Alicia for 13 months until she finally said, "My daddy did

What Babbitt faces at Interior

As President Clinton asks the nation to confront the challenges of deficit and economic renewal, there is at least one federal bureaucracy swollen with subsidies that's ripe for reform. And the president has the right person on the job to get the work started.

Bruce Babbitt has an unparalleled opportunity to yank the Interior Department — the sleepy steward of our shared natural resources - awake. In doing so, the former Arizona governor can shape up a system with a chronic history of fleecing the taxpayer to subsidize programs that degrade the environment. He can set in place modern principles that those who profit from access to property owned by the people pay the full costs incurred by their actions; that the nation receive a fair return for the wealth private individuals extract from public land; and that we honor the responsibility to transfer our public lands as a reserve to future generations.

Babbitt need not look far to decide where to begin. The president has already provided marching orders to overhaul two of Interior's worst programs. In addition, the department's inspector general, James R. Richards, has documented pockets of neglect and waste. The General Accounting Office, in a series of investigations over the last two years, has added more detail to the reform agenda awaiting a champion.

The bottom line, GAO reports, is that an additional $4.5 billion to $7 billion in revenue can be generated in the next five years by "obtaining a better return for the sale or use of the nation's natural resources" and "charging market prices for all commodities produced from the public domain." A huge chunk of that potential revenue involves land and resources managed by interior.

- Public lands hold an estimated $65 billion to $100 billion in recoverable reserves of hard rock minerals like gold and silver. Yet while mining companies are paying no royalty fees whatsoever into the Treasury for the metals they extract from federal land, a public debt estimated as high as $1 billion has been built up in costs to reclaim abandoned hard rock mining operations. President Clinton calls for a 12.5 percent royalty on hard rock minerals recovered from federal lands, a measure that could net the Treasury $400 million in the next four years. Babbitt's job will be to get this long overdue reform through Congress.

- The Bureau of Land Management "incurs over $30 million annually in unrecovered coats" to manage the public range land grazing program while "permit holders make profits of up to $5 million annually by subleasing their grazing privileges," Richards says. The president has asked Babbitt to propose new grazing rules that will cover the cost of the program and include incentives for ranchers who do a good job in protecting the public range that provides forage for their livestock and for

- Failure to enforce the repayment provisions for government financed water irrigation projects may cost taxpayers another $2 billion. At least another $66 million is lost each year in subsidizing the cost of the water those systems deliver to farmers so they can grow crops eligible for subsidy payments from the Department of Agriculture. The president's economic plan includes provisions to reduce these subsidies.

- Concessionaires at national parks windfall profits," Richards reports. while paying as little as 2 percent in fees into the system that allows them to collect as much as $1.4 billion in gross revenue. This giveaway has been going on while the park service has been accumulating a $2.1 billion backlog in needed maintenance. Babbitt has already said he'll review con-cession contracts with an eye to finding revenue for parks that have "fallen into

- The Bureau of Land Management's "failure" to replant and maintain timber stands on land opened to logging "will result in the loss of almost $2 billion in future revenues," Richards says. Laws requiring the sustainable use of national forests need to be enforced. Loggers, not the public, should pay the full costs of timber sales and restocking

- Simple enforcement of existing royalty contracts for the extraction of natural gas from federal lands could generate additional revenue of $754 million, according to Interior's inspector general.

This list is by no means exhaustive. It is instructive of the costly mess at Interior. President Clinton's economic agenda makes a good start at bringing the era of environmentally destructive subsidies to a halt. At Interior, it's now Babbitt's responsibility to get on with

Put 'risk tax' on tobacco, liquor

Suppose your next-door neighbor is a nice guy and, other than the fact that his dog sometimes gets yours going in the middle of the night, you like him. He and the missus even recycle.

But you can't help but notice that he smokes a lot. Every time you see him out watering his lawn or warming up his car or barbecuing burgers, he has a lit Marlboro between his fingers or his lips. He doesn't do

And although you're not nosy, one time when you were over in his garage borrowing his belt sander you noticed there were enough empty beer cans and liquor bottles in his recycling bins to build a De Lorean.

Now, if you knew that in another 15 years your neighbor would get em-physema, lung or liver cancer, cirrhosis of the liver or a combination of those, and that the brunt of his very expensive medical care would be paid for by Medicare, which is funded by you, how would you feel?

If you'd quit smoking years ago yourself and kept your drinking to a minimum because you were aware of the risks, would you resent having to help pay for his medical care when he knew the risks as well as you

If you're like most of us, you'd still care about your neighbor and want him to have the best medical care. You don't think your neighbor is some kind of evil person who deserves your righteous indignation — or some kind of tax to pay for his "sins." But you also realize he treated his lawn better than his body; and while he always drove carefully to lessen his risk of having an accident and raising his insurance premiums, he did nothing to reduce his risk of contracting horrific, debilitating diseases.

You hear lawmakers debating a new round of "sin" taxes, and the word makes your skin crawl. You've spent your entire life having other people trying to cram their morals down your throat, and you don't believe in judging your fellows for personal habits that don't happen to fit your particular ideas of godliness.

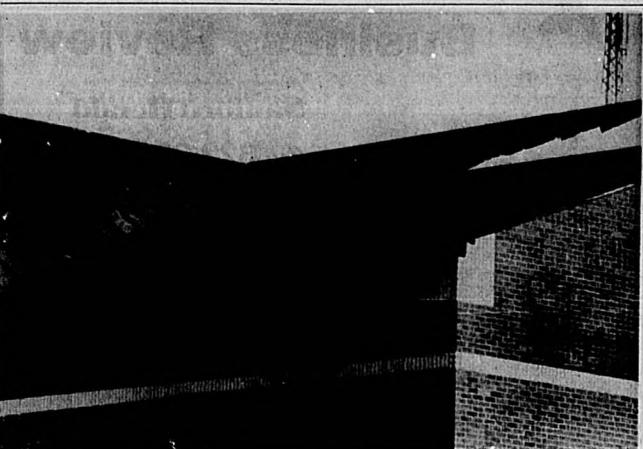

Still, your logic tells you that smoking and drinking are risky behaviors - not unlike driving recklessly, for which we pay in higher insurance premiums. You begin to think that if we tax behaviors that are causally linked to diseases, we should call them "risk" taxes, or even "foolishness" taxes, instead of sin taxes. (OK, OK, so lawmakers probably won't stand still for having their constituents called fools even if they are. The "fools" might not vote

If you come out and publicly announce that you believe the government should tax risky behaviors like smoking and drinking — in the same way private enterprise requires customers to pay if they play, because, unlike the federal government, business has no never-ending cash cow to milk — you'll hear the Holy Beef Argument.

"Well, what are we going to do, put taxes on EVERYTHING people do that's harmful?" people will ask you. "What's next? We're going to tax red meat because the health nuts say that's harmful? What about the cattle farmers? Do you want to ruin them?'

When they complain, you can tell them there are no sacred cows toh, all these beef puns are killing me). You can tell them that, yes, if scientists ever show data that eating beef is filling our hospitals and costing us the billions that smoking and drinking are, you'll be all for taxing beef. You can tell them that risk is a business and that morals don't decide the premiums, actuarial tables do.

Post trashes new owner: 'Who is this nut?'

NEW YORK - The New York Post trashed its new owner in its own pages today after a chaotic. day in which he fired 70 people, then rehired most of them.

"Who is This Nut?" was the headline on one story about Abe Hirschfeld. A front-page illustration showed Post founder Alexander Hamilton

The Post appealed to readers to demand Hischfeld's ouster because of his "basic ignorance of the way our business operates - and his refusal to educate himself."

Approval of airline linked to openings for U.S. carriers

By James H. RUBIN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - The Clinton administration says its reluctant approval of British Airways' $300 million investment in ailing USAir is conditioned on American carriers getting more access to markets in Britain.

The decision Monday by Transportation Secretary Federico Pena, with clearance from the White House, was immediately attacked by the nation's three largest airlines.

The so-called Big Three - Delta, United and American — view the deal as a threat to their dominance of lucrative international traffic.

Robert Crandali, chairman of American

Airlines, said the investment gives British Airwaya unfair competitive advantage and will deal "a severe blow to American's employees. investors and other stockholders."

"The net effect ... is to allow British Airways to divert traffic from U.S. carriers to itself by offering products that U.S. carriers are not allowed to sell," he said. "We are terribly disappointed."

Pena said the British Airways-USAir deal could be killed next year if the British do not make concessions to mpen their skies to U.S. carriers.

He said he had to approve the merger for now or take "the dramatic step" of renouncing a U.S.-British aviation treaty.

"U.S. carriers need a new agreement to gain fair access to the British market and beyond." Pena said at a news conference.

He also said British Airways' plans to invest an additional $450 million in USAir hinges on the British government's willingness to open its skies and airports to U.S. airlines. It also would require relaxation of a federal law limiting foreign ownership of American carriers.

A foreign company is permitted to hold up to 25 percent of the voting stock of a U.S. airline. The $300 million investment gives British Airways a 19.9 percent share in USAir; the proposed additional money would put it over the 25

Foreign investment is seen by many crucial to bailing out the struggling U.S. airline industry, which lost $10 billion during the last three years. USAir reported more than $700 million in losses during the last two years.

USAir and British Airways were delighted by Pena's announcement.

"The agreements meet every test of the law and are in complete accord with the current air treaty between the U.S. and the United Kingdom." said Seth E. Schofield, chairman of Arlington, Va.-based USAir.

"We are delighted ... (at) the opportunity to offer our U S. customers the facility to travel on a global network with simplified service," said John Story, a vice president of British Airways

The decision was halled by Pennsylvania Gov. Robert P. Casey as good news for his state's economy and for 15,000 Pennsylvania employees of USAIr.

FBI tries a new tactic in standoff with armed cult

By SUSAN HIGHTOWE Associated Press Writer

WACO, Texas — Negotiators in the standoff with the Branch Davidians tried to steer the conversation away from the Bible and got two cultists who left the compound to assure those inside that they are being well-treated.

The siege entered its 17th day today. "What we're trying to do is get away from the continuous biblical, Seven Seals conversations." FBI agent Richard Swensen said. "Frankly, we're not here to be converted."

He said two people who left the doomsday cult's compound on Friday spoke with David Koresh and his disciples on Sunday and advised them to come out.

None of these conversations appeared to move any of the occupants inside the compound any closer towards resolution." Swensen said.

Swensen also explained that the FBI shined bright lights on the compound Sunday and Monday nights to protect its agents from snipers. U.S. District Judge Walter S. Smith Jr.,

meanwhile, rejected requests from lawyers for cult members to enter the compound and help negotiate for them.

"One simply cannot point a gun, literally or figuratively, at constitutional authority and at the same time complain that constitutional rights are being denied." the judge wrote.

Cult members flashed a message in Morse code Sunday night: "SOS, SOS, SOS, SOS, FBI broke negotiations. Want negotiations from the press."

The standoff began Feb. 28 when more than 100 federal agents raided the compound to arrest Koresh on weapons charges and search for arms. Four agents were killed in a gun battle. An unknown number of cult members were slain.

Four adults and 21 children have left since the siege began. Koreah has told negotiators 17 children and 88 adults remain in the compound.

Graham: Orlando base may escape the chopping block

By CURT ANDERSON Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - U.S. Sen. Bob Graham said the Orlando Naval Training Center stands a good chance of being removed from the Pentagon's base closing list because it was taken off a similar hit list in 1991.

Graham said the Base Closure and Realignment Commission responded to arguments in 1991 that the Orlando installation was able to train Navy recruits more cheaply than other bases and decided to keep it.

"I think the commission may well take that into account in deciding whether to alter the Department of Defense's current recommendation," Graham said Monday.

The eight-member commission will hold a series of hearings before it decides by June 30 whether to accept or change the Defense Department's recommendations, which include closing the Orlando base and three others in Florida.

"This is not just a rubber-stamp operation," Graham said. "I think there are some various strong arguments to be made on behalf of the Florida bases vis-a-vis other facilities that are currently scheduled to remain open."

Many members of the commission, Graham said, were on the 1991 panel that decided to keep the Orlando base, which trains more than 34,000 recruits and students a year and employs 6.155; civilian and military staff. Its annual payroll is $240 million.

"They are familiar with these considerations.". Graham said.

Once the commission concludes its work. President Clinton and Congress can accept or reject its recommendations but cannot amend them. Clinton on Saturday released $76 million to rebuild the runway and control tower at hurricane-shattered Homestead Air Force Base. which is also on the closure list.

The other Florida bases targeted are Cecil Field. Naval Air Station in Jacksonville and the Pensacola Naval Aviation Depot.

Clinton, at a White House meeting Saturday with Florida reporters, said Homestead should be rebuilt so it can be used as an air field, even if it is no longer a full-fledged air force base.

"We're going to rebuild the capacity of the air base to actually engage in operations," he said.

Dos and don'ts for dealing with people with disabilities

By JENNIFER DIXON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Don't call them crippled, handicapped. retarded or "confined to a wheelchair." They are not "victims" of AIDS or "afflicted" with epilepsy.

They are people - people with

As the Americans with Disabilities Act moves people with disabilities into mainstream America, advocates want the rest of the country to drop words and phrases they say foster prejudice and discrimination.

"People with disabilities feel excluded when that kind of language is spoken." said Washington attorney Peter W. Thomrecently published guidebook on complying with the new law.

"We need to foster an atmosphere where people with disabilities are welcome because for so long they have not been welcome," sald Thomas, who has two artificial legs. "No one calls someone else an ethnic slur they know is inflammatory."

But words like "schizoid," "spastic" or "retard" still creep into conversations about the 43 million Americans with physical or mental disabilities.

Paul Marchand, director of government affairs for The Arc. a national organization on mental retardation, said such language can be dehumanizing.

His organization always refers to the person before the disability, such as saying "a child with mental retardation" and not "a retarded child." The new language can create some difficult problems. The Arc, for example, formerly were called the Association of Retarded Citizens, but some of its members argued that the word "retarded" should not be used to describe them.

"It's been used in a derogatory way for a long time," Marchand Still, they haven't found anything to replace it. And others in the community "think there are bigger problems." Marchand said. "And to some extent." they're correct."

High school campers still in snowy woods after killer blizzard

By PAUL HOWELL

Associated Press Writer

ASHEVILLE, N.C. - Parents today awaited word on the fate of 24 campers caught in the blizzard over the weekend while on a high school outing in the Appalachians. The storm's death toll reached 173, and crop losses Road-clearing in the stormravaged East gained urgency as crews worked overtime to reach the mowbound.

"We're still getting a number of calls" from people in remote areas, said Charles Colwell. emergency director in Kentucky's Perry County. "All our off-roads are still just about Impassable."

In addition to the deaths reported from Cuba to Canada — 32 crewmen were missing after a freighter sank Monday off Nova Scotia, and 16 sailors were missing off Florida.

Searchers on Monday falled to find the 21 youngsters and three teachers in the Great Smoky Mountains after dozens of others on the trip trudged through deep drifts to safety. The air and ground search was to resume this morning.

Bob Miller, a park spokesman. said the campers might even hike out of the woods as scheduled today, as the others did. The campers from the Cranbrook Kingswood Upper School in Bloomfield Hills, Mich., were making an annual spring break trip based on the Outward Bound philosophy of building discipline by confronting natural challenges.

Parents and teachers gathered at the private school outside Detroit to wait for news. They said the students had received wilderness survival training.

"I feel upbeat," said Nancy unaccounted for. "I think the kids are coming out."

"The waiting game is killing everyone," college student Christian Schultz said moments before learning her 17-year-old sister, Kimberly, was safe.

A teacher who was with one of the groups that emerged on Monday was hospitalized in serious condition with hypothermia. Five students in his group were hospitalized overnight for observation. Meanwhile, insurance companies received thousands of claims for storm damage. A.M. Best Co., the leading rating agency for the insurance industry, estimated that the storm caused upwards of $800 million in insured damage.

Crops were damaged across the South, with heavy losses to fruits and vegetables likely to drive prices up in the supermarket.

The storm and the cold that followed ruined such crops as peaches, blueberries, tomatoes and strawberries, and knocked juice oranges off trees in Florida. "Now it has to be harvested quickly before it decays," said Bob McLean, a Valrico, Fia.,

It was one of the worst U.S. snowstorms this century. In 1958, a storm left 171 people dead in the East. A 1966 East Coast storm killed 165. In 1888, 400 people died in a March blizzard that dumped up to 5 feet of snow in the East.

Governors in several states sought federal disaster assistance.

National Guardsmen worked to deliver kerosene and coal to isolated Kentucky families in Pike County, where 20 inches of snow remained on the ground. It took firefighters five hours to cover 10 miles and reach a woman in labor.

The Michigan campers weren't alone in the woods.

Elsewhere in the Great Smokles, National Guard helicopters airlifted about 60 stranded campers Monday. Dozens more remained stranded. In Virginia, two Connecticut teachers and six boys on a camping trip were found safe.

"We're just so overwhelmed with people in that area trying to Shapiro, whose 15-year-old was get in on this trout lishing ... and a number of hikers and sightseeers to the national forest," said Staff Sgt. Paul Holt of the Tennessee National Guard. "Every time we go in looking for one, we find 10."

Caught up in the challenge of weathering the storm, some were surprised to learn how serious it was.

"We got out and found out it was the storm of the century. and we were riding high on it." said Chris Heffron of Charleston,

Year off does not hurt as TRC improves to 9-0

From Staff Reports

SANFORD - What layoff? After being the dominant Super C slowpitch softball team in Sanford for several years, TRC (Tim Raines Connection) sponsor Tim Raines, the Chicago White Sox star, pulled his sponsorship because the team was not playing with the desire and intensity he wanted.

The team returned this winter and has played like it never left. winning its ninth straight game Monday night at Chase Park to clinch the championship of the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Polar Bear Super C Slowpitch Softball League.

For one of the few times the season the champs were pressured hard, as Mudfish, which stood second in the league standings entering the game, had the score tied at 5-5 entering the top of the seventh inning.

But with their backs to the wall TRC went to the extra-base hit. collecting three triples in the seventh inning to score four runs and going on to post the 9-5 victory.

The other two games were forfeits, with Cafe Sorrento and Sunchase Homes receiving 7-0 wins from Coaches Locker Room and Ken Rummel Chevrolet, respectively.

TRC is 9-0, while Mudfish and Cafe Sorrento are both 5-3. Completing the standings are: Coaches Locker Room and Ken Rummel Chevrolet (both 2-6) and Sunchase Homes (1-8).

Next week the games that were rained out on February 22nd will be made up. At 6:30 p.m. Sunchase Homes will play TRC, at 7:30 p.m. Ken Rummel Chevrolet will take on Coaches Locker Room and at 8:30 p.m. Cafe Sorrento will face Mudtish.

The new champs finally put the game away in the seventh. Stevens led off with a triple and scored one out later on a single by Keith Acree. Brewer earning spot in majors

By R.B. FALLSTROM AP Sports Writer

ST. PETERSBURG - Two days before the St. Louis Cardinals traded for Gregg Jefferies. manager Joe Torre couldn't say enough about his new first baseman, Rod Brewer.

Poor guy. Every organization has a player like Brewer, who is from Apopka and spent a lot of his summer's playing baseball at Wes Rinker's Florida Baseball School at Sanford Memorial Stadium, a guy who just can't seem to catch a break, a guy seemingly destined to fall tantalizingly short of his goal. A guy whose baseball card most average fans never come to cherish. A guy battling to retain his sanity.

"You want an answer," Brewer said, who played football and baseball at the University of Florida. "Why? Then you start doubting yourself. Then you look at your numbers and say, 'That's stupid.' But you sit back and wonder, when am I going to get my shot?" That's a question the Cardinals' front office ean't answer. Maybe it's never. Brewer hit .301 in a September trial last season and was handed the Job when the Cardinals decided not to pick up the option on Andres Galarraga's contract. Torre and general manager Dal Maxvill never needed much prompting to talk at length about how giving Brewer, 27, an opportunity was the right thing to do. We don't know a whole lot about him except for what he's done for us over the years in the minor leagues," Torre said last month. "He really has carned the right to get a shot at starting, especially if you're going to build your ballclub through the organization.

The opening didn't last long. Jeffertes takes over at first despite never having played there, and the spot vacated by right fielder Felix Jose goes to either Brian Jordan or Ozzie Canseco. And Brewer's looking at a bench spot, at best, although Torre came close to guaranteeing him a spot on the big-league roster. "He's on the club, in my mind, right now,"

Torre said. "That made him happy." "I don't now if I'd say I was betrayed." Brewer sald. "Even after the year I had, I guess they had some doubts of some sort about me. Brewer led the organization with 86 RBIs last season, htt 18 home runs and batted .270 for Class AAA Louisville, where he's been parked since 1990 despite big numbers every year. "I've done all I can at Triple A, and I can't do anymore," Brewer said. "It's kind of a big wall there that I can't seem to climb over or get around, although hopefully I can break through this year." The only major knock against Brewer is his power hitting. He had six doubles and no home runs in his 103 at-bat window of opportunity with the Cardinals last fall.

Of course, nobody took into consideration how bad his bat was dragging when he came to town.

Brewer said. "I just wanted to make contact. Later, I was coming around, but then the season ended, so where do you go?"

In Brewer's case, you go to Puerto Rico to continue proving your case in winter ball. He's shown he's versatile, playing right and left field as well as first base, and he's a good contact hitter with 60 strikeouts — an average of one per seven at-bats - last season in the minors. Now he's a backup outfielder and the team's second left-handed hitting pinch hitter after Gerald Perry. And the clock is ticking on his stillborn major league career.

This spring, he's often commiserated with fellow backup Tracy Woodson, another player waiting for a chance.

Woodson thought he'd taken advantage of his oportunity last August after the Cardinals sent struggling third baseman Todd Zeile to the minors. Woodson hit .314 with 17 RBIs for that month and batted .405 with runners in scoring position overall.

Brewer thought he'd done the same in September.

"I produced and I put up some very good numbers," Brewer said. "Next thing I know, I'm nothing again!"

The first thing Brewer did when he learned of the deal for Jefferies was head for a batting cage. where he tried to kill every ball.

"It was confusing." he said. "It was very aggravating. It was upsetting."

Chang, Capriati upset, but Courier cruises

By STEVEN WINE AP Sports Writer

KEY BISCAYNE - A year ago at the Lipton Championships, Michael Chang won the final match. This year, he lost his first match. The defending champion was eliminated Monday by unseeded South African Marcos Ondruska 7-5, 6-1. Jennifer Capriati, next up - on the stadium court, then lost a third-round match to Judith Wiesner of Austria 3-6, 7-5, 6-4. Two upsets, but no flukes. Ondruska (ranked 48th) and Wiesner (ranked 25th) applied plenty of pressure with consistently catch in her voice.

"I still can't believe I tost because I had high expectations for myself," said Capriati, 16, the fourth seed. "I'm working hard and felt good coming into the tournament."

"When you're ranked No. 7 in the world, you don't want to lose like this." Chang said. "The No. 7 player is not supposed to lose early." Chang could fall out of the top 10 next week. His second-round departure was the earliest by a defending men's champion in Lipton's 9-year history.

Top seeds Jim Courier and Steffi Graf won easily. Courier beat Byron Black of Zimbabwe 6-2, 6-2 in the second round. Graf routed Nicole Arendt of Gainesville, 6-1, 6-0 in the

"Today couldn't have been much better," said Graf, who has lost four games in two matches. "I didn't make many mistakes. Overall, it was a very good performance."

Courier, the No. 1 ranked player in the world from Dade City who was born in Sanford, is coming off his third title of the year earlier this month at Indian Wells, Calif., improved his 1993 record to 18-1.

"I feel I'm playing close to the best tennis I'm capable of although I don't know what my best can be," he said. "That's what I'm trying to find out."

No. 11 seed Wayne Ferreira, who said he was bothered by the wind. lost to qualifier Kenny Thorne, a former Georgia Tech star, 6-1, 6-1. Third-seeded Stefan Edberg awept Leonardo Lavalle 6-4, 6-3.

Also winning his second round match was former Seminole Community College All-American Mikel Pernfors, who continues a comeback from back problems and other minor injuries. The Swede got off to a slow start, but came on to heat Javier Sanchez of Spain, 1-6. 7-6 (7-5 in the tie-breaker), 7-5.

In other women's play, Mirlam Oremans, ranked No. 78, upset No. 7 seed Anke Huber 7.5, 5.7, 6.2. Defending champion and No. 2 seed Arantxa Sanchez Vicario beat Ann Grossman 6-0, 6-2; No. 3 Gabriela Sabatint swept Dinky Van Rensburg 6-2, 7-5; and No. 5 Mary Joe Fernandez edged Barbara Rittner 6-7 (5-7), 6-3, 7-6 (7-0).

Teacher: Charge parents for kids' acts

DEAR ABBY: I was a public school teacher for more than 30 years. I am now retired. Enclosed is a column you ran about three years ago, it sure hits the nail on the head. Please run it again.

BILL YURRICK, YUMA, ARIZ. DEAR BILL YURRICK: I agree; it's worth another run: DEAR ABBY: I am a retired

woodshop teacher. I taught in the public school system for 27 years. During that time, I had to moonlight at other jobs, as I had some major medical problems in my family. I moonlighted for 16 years as a policeman in three different agencies - city police, sheriff's department and university police. While I was growing up, my parents were the final authority. In fact, I would rather have faced the police than my dad. If I got into any kind of trouble, his thinking was, "They didn't just decide to pick on my son for no reason.. He must have done something to get their attention." That was enough to cause my dad concern about my con-

This type of home authority has changed drastically in our society. If a child gets into trouble, his parents usually become allies with him against all forms of authority - police, schools, courts, etc. By not publishing the names of juventles, a record is allowed to build and attitudes to develop. The family and young lawbreaker become anonymous, and the crimes become more frequent and violent.

When the child gets old enough to be charged as an adult, everybody wonders, "When did he start going wrong?" The truth is, he had been going wrong for a long time but he was sheltered.

It started when he stole the first piece of candy from the grocery store. He was just a 7-year-old kid, so it was "no big deal." It started again when he stole another kid's bike - then it was probably just a "mistake." It started when he was underage and drunk - "Oh, that was just a part of growing up." It started when he forced a neighbor girl into a situation she didn't really want, and it was probably just a "misunderstanding."

While I was a teacher, I had the opportunity to talk to students who told me that they could do almost anything except murder until they were 18, and it wouldn't matter because at 18, they would get a clean slate. I tried to explain to them that you can't change an attitude that has developed during your first 18 years.

I have always felt that if the parents or the single parent who is raising a child will not accept the responsibility for that child's acts or actions, the parent(s) should be forced by law to take responsibility.

As you said, Abby, you cannot legally publish the names of juveniles in the newspapers, but you could certainly publish the names of the parents. Example: "The young son of Mr. and Mrs. John Doe was found guilty of beating up an 80-year-old woman and robbing her of $3."

I say, if you cannot charge the juvenile - charge the parents!

This may very well help to bring am assuming that she is close to child crime down. However, it may increase what may now be termed as "child abuse." There may very well be a few warm little butts around. And the 80-year-old lady may have a

DEAR DON: You could have said what I have been thinking for years - and I couldn't have said it as well. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: My son is a 21-year-old senior at a college located about 1,000 miles from here. When "Jack" came home for Christmas vacation, he dated a girl nearly every night of his vacation, so he was obviously very fond of her. When it came time for Jack to drive back to his college, this girl decided to drive along with him - and fly home. (She took a week off from school to do this.) They were caught in a snowstorm and had to stay in a motel overnight. Then, she stayed at Jack's apartment at college for a few days. The girl's mother approved of the trip, but I did not. And when I told Jack how I felt about, it, he became very angry with me. Please give me your opinion of this, as I respect your judgment.

WORRIED MOM DEAR MOM: Your son is 21. and legally an adult, so he didn't need his mother's permission to allow his girlfriend to drive 1,000 miles with him and sleep over at his apartment. (You do not mention the girl's age, so I

> DEAR ABBY: In response to the letter from the couple who had been happily married for nine years and who are childless by choice:

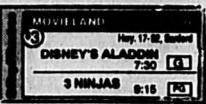

> I have no grandhelldren. Why? Because my children prefer to raise dogs. Well, of course that's their business - but I let them know in no uncertain terms that their choice made me a grandbitch.

Abby, their shocked reaction was absolutely priceless!

No. no grandchildren so far, but I have lots of granddogs and I love them dearly.

DEAR SEATTLE: Thanks. Your letter was a pip. (Make that a "pup" if you wish.)

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please explain thoracic outlet syndrome. What is the cause and what treatment is available. If any?

by Chic Young

by Mort Walker

by Art Sansom

SINCE

I HAD TO ASK

HALLOWEEN

HE FOUND ONE! IT'S DOWNSTAIRS IN FRONT OF THE REFRIGERATOR

DEAR READER: As it exits from the chest, the artery to each arm travels between certain muscles and under the first

On occasion, these muscles (or the ribs themselves) will compress the arteries, leading to numbness and tingling when the arms are held in certain positions. Called "thoracle outlet syndrome," this common condition can be diagnosed using Addson's maneuver: The patient extends the affected arm out from the body, pronates the forearm and forcefully turns the head in the opposite direction.

This maneuver stretches the artery. If the blood vessel is compressed, the additional stretching accentuates the compression. A person with thoracic outlet syndrome will experience symptoms and/or a loss of the pulse at the wrist, indicating an insufficient blood

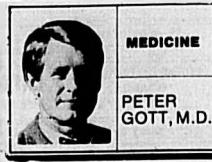

Such patients can often be helped by a sequence of easy exercises to relax and stretch the muscles that pinch the artery. The exercises can be taught by any qualified physical therapist.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband has a serious hiccough condition. He has them for days at a time. They then turn into rasping and hoarseness that pro-hibits audible talking. He suffers from diabetes and congestive heart failure, and we recently found out he has an ulcer in his esophagus. Would the hiccoughs be aggravated by these conditions and what can be done to help him?

DEAR READER: Hiccoughs are caused by rhythmic spasms of the diaphragm. No one knows why these spasms occur, in most cases. More important, no one knows why the antidote works: a teaspoon full of sugar swallowed dry, (a treatment that your husband shouldn't try because he has diabetes).

Some patients with hiccoughs have digestive disturbances that lead to distension of the stomach, which then pushes against the diaphragm, stimulating it to contract. An ulcer in the esophagus could certainly do this. Your husband should be treated for this condition with antacids or drugs, such as Zantac or Tagamet, to heal the ulcer. The hiccoughs should then disappear.

In the former Soviet Union, bridge was illegal. Playing-cards were considered the epitome of capitalist decadence. However, addicts managed to play in secret. The imagery of the clandestine games brings to mind the intrigue of war movies. Aava defeated the game? Now that the Soviet Union has become many different nations, bridge has been allowed to come into the open. And if the people from this part of the world are as good at bridge as they are at chess, there's going to be keener competition for top honors in international events.

Today's deal took place during the Estonian Trials for this year's European Championships, which will be held in Menton, France, It was beautifully defended by Kaarel Kaldjarv, West, and Yuri Aava.

At almost all tables, the final contract was four hearts by South. All the declarers except one got home on a crossruff. They took their three aces, three diamond ruffs in the dummy and four top trumps in hand.

Do you see how Kaldjarv and the spade queen. He continued with the spade six, won by East's 10. Aava cashed the spade ace, on which West threw the club eight. Then Aava produced the killing thrust: He led another spade, on which Kaldjary discarded the club jack.

Declarer could no longer score the club ace: West ruffed it.

Perhaps East was trying for a trump promotion with the fourth spade, but that doesn't detract from the successful defense. How does that expression go about being clever or lucky?

By Bernice Bede Osol YOUR BIRTHDAY March 17, 1993

The most memorable events in the year ahead are likely to be those that are precipitated through friends. They could be brought into being through an unusual chain of events.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Involvements with others will soothe your restless spirit today, so don't be a loner. The spontaneous activities in which you participate are the ones that are likely to be the most fun. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In arrangements where you find yourself in a managerial role today, bend over backwards to be fair. This will evoke the results you desire from subordinates.

accomplishment cycle. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In addition to your other favorable assets, your diplomacy will work to your advantage today. When you pour on the charm, you'll have everyone purring.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Rewards are possible at this time for something you did awhile back that was never properly acknowledged. You've been patient this long, so try to be patient for a little bit longer.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your leadership qualities are very pronounced today, so take charge if you find yourself in a situation that appears to lack direction.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is one of those fortunate days where you could derive benefits not from the things you do, but from things others do for you. Flow with events, no matter what occurs.
