SANFORD - Life can be rough in the public housing of Sanford.

Drugs are bought and sold on many street corners. Sex is a commodity to be traded. Nearby, little children in hand-me-down clothes make an all day plaything of a yellow tape marked "Police Line Do Not Cross.

Yet in this place where poverty reigns with an iron fist, a group of concerned citizens is trying to do something to reverse the trend.

ORLANDO - Nearly 150 African Americans demonstrating their commitment to their family and community, participated in "The Black Family: Alive and Well" seminar Saturday at the University of Central Florida.

The seminar, sponsored by the Central Florida Chapter of the International Black Women's Congress, focused on self-empowerment for the black community, event coordinator Corine Varn-Wilson

"We organized the seminar in order to dispense information we think is pertinent to the African American community," she said. According to Varn-Wilson, the black community needs guidance on a variety of issues if black families are to remain strong.

Issues discussed facing the black community include teen pregnancy and parenting, communicable discases, staying strong spiritually, keeping families together, communicating with each other, and accepting responsibility for your actions.

"We feel the need is so great we must continue the process (of presenting information on these topics) on an ongoing basis." she said.

SANFORD - Over 540 sailboats and 41 sailboards spread out over Lake Monroe as part of the 1995 Seminole County Sailfest. The event, which moved to Lake Monroe in 1981, is sponsored by Laser Boats, AT&T wireless services, the Greater Seminole County Chamber of Commerce, and the Seminole County Convention and Visitors Bereau.

Tom Gardner, an Orlando accountant and member of the Orlando Yacht Club, started the Tangerine Bowl regatta in 1974 on Lake Mineola. It was later known as the Citrus Bowl regatta, and was called Sailfest after moving to Seminole County in 1981.

"The combination of the lake, the Marina Hotel and the Sanford marina makes Sanford a good location for this event," said Sailfest Committee member Hal Downing. "As the event got larger, we needed a bigger facility, so we moved it to

Doctor has punishment reduced

MIAMI - A Tampa doctor who cut off the wrong foot of a diabetic patient then amputated another patient's toe without her consent, received a six-month suspension and $10,000 fine Saturday by a board of his peers.

They reduced the recommended two-year suspension. Last month, a state hearing officer proposed the stiffer two-year punishment and also recommended Dr. Rolando Sanchez pay $15,000 in fines and be directly supervised by another surgeon during a five-year probation.

Sanchez's attorney, Michael Blazicek, argued Saturday that the punishment was equivalent to a death sentence for a doctor, and the 15-member state Board of Medicine agreed during a meeting in Miami.

They unanimously voted for a reduction, citing the doctor's previously unblemished record, his damaged reputation, and noting the diabetic's other leg probably would have had to have been amputated anyway.

"I'm not saying what he did wasn't wrong," board member Dr. Edward A. Dauer said. "But doctors are not God and hospitals are not heaven."

Since Sanchez can apply the 140 days he has been suspended under an emergency order, he could be back in the operating room by early 1996.

He has 30 days to appeal the board's decision to a state appeals court. Biazicek wouldn't say if he would.

"It's fair," Blazicek said after the decision. "It's a little harsh. The doctor has suffered significantly."

Sanchez would only say: "I'm tired."

State and federal investigators found a series of procedural mishaps at University Community Hospital contributed to the wrong-foot amputation of Willie King, 52, on Feb. 20.

"There are things Mr. King would like to be able to say about it, but the settlement precludes him from being able to talk about it at all," Peter Brudny, King's attorney, said Saturday in King had agreed to have his right foot amputated below the knee because it was gangrene. Sanchez realized he was removing the wrong leg about halfway through the operation after a nurse read through some paperwork.

Several months later, Sanchez amputated the toe of a longtime patient without getting her consent. The state board found he failed to appropriately warn her that amputation was a possibility during the procedure.

The mistakes made headlines around the world and provided joke fodder for late-night talk show hosts David Letterman and Jay Leno.

The mistakes exposed other errors at the hospital that included a wrong-knee surgery and the partial sterilization of a woman without her consent.

State and federal investigations followed, and the state Agency for Health Care Administration temporarily closed the operating rooms and fined the hospital $536,000.

Reformers get serious about grades

TAMPA - if lawmakers go along with the idea, public high school students will need a grade average of C or better to play sports or participate in extracurricular activities.

The requirement would be phased in gradually beginning with next fall's freshman class, according to twin proposals Friday of the 25-member Florida Commission on Education Reform and Accountability.

One would raise the state's graduation requirement from a 1.5 grade point average to a 2.0. The other would require that students involved in extracurricular activities maintain a 2.0

Florida graduation now generally requires a 1.5 or a D in 24 specific credit subjects.

Two counties - Alachua and Gadaen - already require the higher C average.

"We have tried the lower expectations," said Education Commissioner Frank Brogan. "We've tried being overly sensitive and tried not to offend any students, and we can see where it's gotten us. It's time to push for higher standards and higher expectations."

Both the raised graduation requirement and the higher standard for participation in extracurricular activities — sports, music groups or school clubs - easily won unanimous approval from the commission.

The mission of the board, composed of educators, parents, politicians and business leaders, is developing educational guidelines to help Florida's 2,500 public schools prepare 2.5 million students to succeed outside the classroom.

The big question is what will happen to students whose grades fall in the no man's land between the current standard and the proposed standard.

A study of high school grades from last school year showed that 95,336 students had GPA's that fell between 1.5 and 2.0. which amounted to 17.7 per cent of the high achool students. Brogan and others believe raising the standards will not result in widespread dropouts and failures. Instead, they say, students will rise to the occasion. From Associated Press reports

Jeff Jordan Keeping your old car? Tips for happy

ownership

By BOB SCHMERLING Herald Correspondent

Part 1 of two parts

So your car is getting to be a few years old, and you're thinking of trading it in for a shiny, new model. But, guess what! Thanks to airbags, antilock brakes, increasingly complex on-board diagnostic systems, as well as a strong yen and a touch of inflation the average price for a new car is now over $20,000. That's right! What used to buy a high-end sports car just ten years ago merely buys you an average family sedan today. So, what to do? You can give in and buy that new model, but then you could have four of five years of $400 a month payments. You could lease a new car, but then you pay thousands of dollars to use it and then you have to give it back. You could buy a used car, but then you're not sure how it was treated, and you're not sure if it has any hidden problems that are difficult to uncover before buying it. Or maybe you can just hold while longer.

The fact is, the high price of new cars is causing more people to hold on to their cars for longer than they used to. Seven to 10 years is not uncommon. Unless your current car needs several major repairs in a short period of time, it's almost always cheaper to hold on to you current car than to buy a brand new model. The trick to to maintain your car properly so you can keep it running smoothly for as long as possible. If your current car is comfortable and in good running condition, you'll be less likely to be seduced by an expensive new model. If you ask any mechanic, he'll usually say that the most important thing you can do to your car is to change the oil regularly. Most mechanics recommend changing it every 3,000 miles, but if you do more highway driving than in the city, you can ☐ See Cars, Page SA

SHS music director's original symphonic piece is published

By YICKI Book Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD - More proof that Sanford is not a town isolated from cultural successes has come from the music department at Seminole High School.

Jeff Jordan, director of the musical programs at the school, has had one of his original symphonic pieces published.

The piece was composed in the spring of 1994 by Jordan in memory of Nelson Thornton,

The Seminole High School Symphonic Band premiered the work last year.

The way we were: The first Interfraternity Christmas Dance

Several months ago, Kathryn account of the first interfraternity Christmas Dance as related in the Banford Herald. This first dance, which became an annual event, was held Dec. 25, 1948, at the Mayfair Inn. Katheryn and I both think that you will enjoy reading about this as it will bring back memories of a delightful event which was held for many years. I know it was an annual affair at least through the mid 1960s and was probably discontined when the Mayfair Inn closed.

Plane for this first dance were under the direction of Joe Mc-Caslin, chairman, and his committee members Elizabeth Whigham, George Eick, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Higgins, Audrey Bach, Jack Woodruff, Jr., national officer of Kappa Chi Alpha fraternity.

Attractive decorations included a profusion of gally colored balloons which were effectively used in the ballroom, lobby, card room and Bamboo Room. Across the wide balcony in the ballroom the Greek letters of the sororities and fraternities glittered against a red background. On each side of the orchestra stand were large peppermint canes.

About 600 Banford members of the various college sororities and fraternitites and their guests enjoyed dancing throughout the evening to music of Paul Cobie and his Mayfair Inn orchestra.

I will list those who attended this first Christmas Dance, knowing that most of you old timers will recongnize the through these, many memories involving these people will be brought to each of your minds, and some of you will see your own names here. Enjoy!

Florida's women police chiefs overcame harassment, abuse

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA. Fla. - Nancy Newland could handle the groping, verbal abuse and un-wanted advances from male officers. But she couldn't crack the glass ceiling at the Pensacola Police Department.

Only by leaving after 15 years that included repeated rejections for promotion to a supervisory position did she become a top cop. Now, Newland is one of just four women among Florida's more than 500 police chiefs.

The four female chiefs lead small departments and have each confronted harasement or bias, or both, during their ca-

"I have been groped. I have been fondled," said Newland, now campus police chief at Pensacola Junior College. "I can deal with most of that — and I mean physically. I have knocked some men down.

But what really hurs me, and what hurs women in law enforcement, is the gender bias that doesn't allow us to go

Newland, 43, realized she had to leave in 1989 after repeatedly being passed over for sergeant. She said she also was told by her chief, who has since retired, that he would never let a woman be a supervisor.

She became a state attorney's investigator and then a consul-tant until she got her present job in February 1994.

Newland believes she was hired, although lacking supervi-sory experience, because of her education - a master's degree - wide-ranging law enforcement credentials, part-time college teaching and participation in numerous community groups and activities. Bonilyn Wilbanks, 46 followed a similar path with 15 years in three larger departments before being hired as police chief in Virginia Gardens. a tiny Miami suburb with seven full-time officers, five part-timers and three reserves. The former nurse has a master's degree in computer science and is working on a law degree.

Although she made sergeant with the Broward County Sheriff's Department, Wilbanks said she, too, faced bias, harassment and abuse, including a broken wrist in a training exercise that she believes was no accident.

She said someone threw dead pigeons at her car and backups failed to respond to her calls for assistance in dangerous situa-

Newland and Wilbanks said they could have filed sex dis-crimination suits, but neither did, fearing their careers would be over even if they won.

"We basically knew if we filed a lawsuit we were doomed," Wilbanks said. Newland agreed: "You can win a battle and lose a war, and I don't believe I would be sitting in this seat if I had fought that battle too hard."

Florida's other female chiefs -Linda Herrington in Oak Hill, a small town between Daytona Beach and Titusville, and Joan Waldron in Stuart - came up through the ranks but not without obstacles.

Herrington, 48, said the former chief of the nine-officer Oak Hill department would make derogatory comments about her and refuse to let her make arrests.

Waldron, 50, heads a 56officer force with a large corps of volunteers. She had more than 20 years in law enforcement when promoted to chief 21/2 years ago. She started as a Martin County sheriff's deputy in 1968 and went to work for the city in 1973.

"At that time women were protected," she recalled. "I flew to other states to pick up prisoners and I'd go on search warrants, but it was always, Stay back until the coast is clear. That attitude excluded women from street patrols and SWAT teams and other jobs considered too dangerous but just the kind of experience needed for promotions, the female chiefs said.

But they agreed women are making progress and expect to see more ascending to leadership posts in police departments.

Florida is about at the national average with 1 percent of its police chiefs being women. Two others women chiefs, however, lost their jobs this year

Donna Hansen resigned in April after heading the Fort Myers department for nearly four years, saying she no longer had the mayor's support. In June, a new Opa-locka city manager demoted Evelyn Hicks to lieutenant after she had been chief for only six months so he could bring in his own appointee. Women in law enforcement have to walk a fine line trying get along with male colleagues while avoiding the kind of fraternization that leads to trouble, the female chiefs say.

"I would have male officers who I knew were married come on to me," said Newland. "I always knew their wives' and children's names. And the minute they would start crossing those boundaries I would just say, 'How's Carol and the children?'"

Her former husband also was a Pensacola police officer and she believes he, too, was denied promotions because he was married to her. They divorced for reasons unrelated to their work and he has advanced in rank since moving to another department.

Wilbanks, who has two daughters, ages 16 and 22, also blames police work for her broken marriage. Her husband, who wasn't a cop, was unable to cope with the constant worry about her safety and the long hours.

(Waldron was single for most of her career but now is married children.

Historic Trust Holiday Tour of Homes

Once again, several residents of Sanford's historic district have opened their homes to strangers and friends for the annual Historic Trust Holiday Tour of Homes.

We have seen the district over the past 15 years emerge from many sad, neglected Victorian homes, some dilapidated rooming houses, to a polished, proud testament of the perseverance of visionaries willing to take a

And take a chance they did.

Many absentee owners who rented by the week to questionable tenants 15 years ago were fond of saying they "couldn't do any better in that neighborhood."

The realtor who sold the Herald editor her home in the district 15 years ago had lobbled her to look in Winter Park or College Park, cautioning that Sanford was riddled with crime and uneducated people. When pressed, the realter agreed to travel from her Maitland office commenting, "Oh, well, you don't have children, you don't really need to worry about the quality of the schools."

Today, Sanford schools are distinguishing lves as positive models for other districts. And today, hundreds of tourists are wandering throught the historic district, admiring the handiwork of residents who d the charm and value of a grand old home; residents who only laugh when friends in new houses ask if they have seen the movie 'The Money Pit;' residents who sigh contentedly when a restoration project is done.

The tour Saturday and today is about accomplishments. The Sanford Historic Trust as a catalyst has built the event over the years into a premier one for Seminole County. Residents who live in the district and continue to restore the old homes enable the Trust to sponsor the tour every year. And the innovative businesses that have sprung up only add to the ambience. Reference the Higgins House Bed and Breakfast, in which tourists can experience a bit of old Sanford as we know it. Or the Rose Garden Tea Room. where an elegant meal is customary and as far removed from our daily habit of fast food

We encourage you to go on the tour and see how much the historic downtown has changed and how it continues to change.

what is all this talk I hear coming from the Southern Sentiets about gay people being a threat to the family? Re: Your story on the Southern Baptists

Using gays as the scapegoat for the demise of the family is reprehensible nonsense. With a 50 percent divorce rate, adultery, toenage pregnancy, abused women, financial conditions which require both parents to work and leave children home alone, abandoned and abused children, and so forth, it doesn't take much effort to see that heterosexuals have succeeded quite well in crippling the family without any help from gays and leablans.

I am a frequent visitor to Florida, and I applaud the Dieney company for recognizing that families today come in all shapes and sizes.

Wouldn't it be nice if the Southern Baptiets worked to noive the real problems that families face, instead of chasing after and blaming

No way to spend the golden years

In retrospect, what was the economic plight of Americans aged 65 and above in 1986? At that time 1/3 (331/2 percent) of all citizens at that age level lived in poverty. Almost three decades later the population 65 and over has increased dramatically. Today 12 percent of older Americans live in poverty.

Medicare was created in 1965 as an integral part of President Lyndon Baines Johnson "War on Poverty." The delivery of medical services to this segment of our population has become an acceptable part of American life. Thus, the current debate over Medicare emanating from Washington D.C., brings worry and consterna-tion to many senior citizens struggling to live with dignity on fixed income.

The fact that longevity has become an American medical accomplishment attests to the fact that medical care received over the years, since Medicare was exacted, has been effective.

Certainly there are many complaints about some medical procedures and supplies being grossly overpriced. While there is concurrence that these types of excesses should be curtailed designating Health Maintenance Organizations (HMO's) as the sine qua non to curtailing medical care is most questionable, particularly since the HMO's are profit driven corporations for whom the botton line is financial gain. The objective of Medicare recipients is to secure quality medical care in conjunction with their medical needs without any consideration for HMO's profit

Political leaders talk glibly about how won-derful it is going to be for citizens receiving medicine to choose their HMO's. How many individuals age 65, 70, 80, and 90 want a catalogue of Hido's to wade through and discern which one would be best for him? Do they really want to be placed in the position of shopping from one HMO to the other, constantly changing doctors and experiencing upheaval in securing medical care, when they are ill? Confidence in one's doctor-patient-relationship is enhanced when individuals select their physicians, without being limited to participating doctors. Are users viewed collectively as HMO recipients governed by rigid guidelines or individuals whose medical needs are the salient deciding factors?

Another facet of the HMO dilemma for users is the $5 when he/she is advised that the cost will be $45, $60 or whatever the particular drug costs. If one has limited income and it is August when the HMO's maximum is reached, difficult choices have to be made for the remainder of the year. The choice will be between medication and other basic needs.

Personally I reject the notion that doctors who address my medical needs are going to be so pressured by HMO guidelines and that my health needs may become secondary to HMO's profit motives. I trust governmental Medicare more than corporate HMO's. If I have a problem with a government agency I can make my concerns known to elected officials through mulitple means. As an ordinary citizen I have no redress with corporations. I have no real means of impacting their operational mode short of litigation and this is no way to spend one's golden years.

The pro-choice civil libertarian

American Civil Liberties Union of Florida, is so consistent a civil libertarian that she is occasionally at odds with the national ACLU office. Blumner, for instance, sees no logical conflict between being a vigorous feminist while also supporting the First Amendment rights of Archie Bunker-style males.

In a case involving sexual harasement by means of allegedly pornographic images at a shippard, a federal district judge ordered the removal of all "sexually suggestive" posters from the walls and forbade any personal reading material that might offend any female worker. Robyn Blumner urged the national ACLU office not to concur in these overly broad prohibitions, emphasizing that "sexists have First Amendment rights too."

Recently, in her regular column in t : Bt. Petersburg Times, Blumner, who is strongly pro-choice, challenged the abortion rights community to consider the harm it is doing to community to consider the harm it is using in free speech. Pro-cholours, she said, have caused "a cumulative roll-back of First Amendment protest rights to the point where the "pro-life picketer has been effectively emasculated and can exert no more pressure on his or her target than a renderide billboard."

Municipal ordinances and court injunctions.

Blumner notes, have led to the establishment in a number of cities of buffer sones around abortion clinics. Pro-life demonstrators are barred from those sones.

Of course, Blumner writes, such enforced Or course, Blumner writes, such enforced limits on "sealots and their indefatigable protests" may well be a relief to pro-choicers, including herself; but "we are mortgaging our liberty for a little peace and quiet."

Blumner recalls that picketing, "an American tradition," was tumultuously evident during the civil rights protests against Jim Crow businesses in the Bouth. But, "had the civil rights protests against against states."

crow businesses in the Bouth. But, "had the civil rights protesters been restricted to a spot down the block from the businesses they targeted, would their distant chants have effectively made shoppers guilty enough to avoid patronizing those stores? ... It doesn't work if you're not close."

There is also a question of class advantages in the restrictions on picketing. "If a major corporation wishes to change public opinion and bring pressure to bear on an individual or the government." Blumner writes, "it hires the government," Blumner writes, "it hires lobbylets, files lawsuits and takes out ads. Most Blumner does not propose there be no limitations on pro-life protests at abortion clinics: "If protesters are trespassing on private property, interfering with the flow of ve-

In October, the Rev. Al Sharpton, a trombone of the First Amendment, led 400 protesters in a demonstration outside Justice Clarence Thomas' home. The demonstrators were vehemently objecting to the justice's decisions on matters concerning race. It is safe to say that Clarence Thomas and his wife did not enjoy the attention.

However, says the persistent Robyn Blumner, "If Sharpton had been basished a football-field length away, would Thomas have known or even cared about the demonstra-

WASHINGTON -- President Clinton's decision to send 20,000 American troops to Boania as part of a NATO peacekeeping operation has prompted a huge sigh of relief at United Nations headquarters in New York - a fact that should give the president great involvement is a depressing one if examined closely, and suggests that Clinton's decision could cost him the presidency.

While U.N. peacebseping officials generally praise Clinton's decision to deploy troops, they uniformly warn that agreements by the warring factions in the former Yugoslavia have been frequently broken. "Only when the use of force occurred, like NATO attacks, did the Serbs capitulate," a U.N. official told our associate Dale Van Atta. "So the U.S. must be prepared to use force time and time again. There will be casualties. Perhaps many

There are other lessons to be taken from the U.N.'s missteps and misadventures in Bosnia -- perhaps the most important being that leadership and commitment must begin at the top.

U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Chali never wanted to get involved in Boania to begin with. He called Boania a "rich man's and wondered aloud why the U.N. didn't intervene in similar crises in war-torn African nations like Rwands, Burundi and, initially, Somalis.

initially, Somalia.

While Clinton appears committed to the cause, he must convince a congressional majority to follow him -- or, at the least, retrain from making it a political issue that could damage troop morale and undermine the peace effort.

The second lesson is that mandates to the troops must be realistic and conclusive -- traits not commonly associated with President Clinton. The General Assembly approved two doesn resolutions to the meet here in Sarajevo."

Mandates were approved that were doomed to fail. Six U.N. "safe areas" were designated, two of which were overrun by the Serbs when they were good and ready. They fell because the U.N. forces wouldn't smoot back.

"We were never asked to de peace enforcement," Boutros-Ghall told us earlier this year. "We were never asked to impose peace. When (the Security Council) adds to the mandate certain additional obligations or objectives, without effering to us the equipment and the additional forces, then, by definition, we will not be able to solve the problem."

do what they can to turn the lives of those young people who have run afoul of the law at least

BRO, or Brethren Reaching Out, originated earlier this year with Alvin Johnson who said God gave him the program concept as he drove along the highway. It was organized by Johnson with the assistance of his pastor, Rose Davis, and the cooperation of the Sanford Police Department.

On Saturday, while Johnson talked to those who had gathered for the program's first open house, Sanford police Cmdr. Dennis Whitmire and Deputy Chief Joe Dillard helped organise some activities. 5gt. Willie Hardin, meanwhile, worked carefully at the portable barbecue pit making scrumptious trays of chicken and hot dogs for the crowds to enjoy with potato chips and orange drink.

"We're going to teach these young people about self esteem and about what they can do to make their lives better, Johnson said.

A red mylar ribbon fell aside on the front porch of Apartment 416, where they hope to make a difference for so many.

The crowd that gathered there for the ceremony was small, made up mostly of very young children and their mothers and grandmothers. The older children and young adults whom the program hopes to serve stood, arms crossed deflantly, and listened more intently to the heavy beat of the music blasting from the radio of a car that cruised the streets in the area.

A prayer, followed by a simple hymn, a Bible reading and a recorded gospel song and a few impromptu testimonials by a gaggle of nervous young girls, were not of much interest to the young men.

"But this ean work," Johnson said. "We can turn these lives around and make a difference."

Under the tutelage of the Sanford Housing Authority Resients Council (SHARC), the BRO program will work with the Sanford Police Department, HRS and various Juvenile Justice programs. SHARC will provide volunteers from among the residents and guidance on working with those who live in the public housing.

'We want to be able to work together to make a difference," said Whitmire.

Cars

Some people feel that synthetic oil offers extra protection, and it is less likely to break down in Florida's hot climate. No matter which kind of oil you use, however, changing it regularly is important because contaminants can build up in the oil over time and cause engine damage if they (along with the oil) are not removed. If you decide to use synthetic oil, expect to pay about twice as much for an oil change.

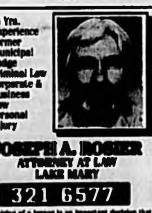

The important thing to remember is that a very thin layer of oil is all that keeps the metal parts in your engine from grinding together, so it's important to keep oil in as good condition as possible. With the wide selection of shops that will change your oil in just 10 or 15 minutes without an appointment all for just about $20, there's no reason to ignore your car's motor oil. Of course, motor oil is not the only fluid in a car that needs periodic attention. Anti-freeze, or radiator coolant, is another. In a hot Florida summer, it is especially important, because you car needs as much cooling power as it can get then. You should check you coolant level at least once a week, and if it is low, add the appropriate amount of a 50-50 mixture of coolant and water. Most newer cars have translucent reservoirs that make checking and adding the coolant easy, but if yours does not, you'll have to check the radiator directly. If this is the case, remember to never open a radiator cap when the engine is hot, because you could easily get scalded. If you notice any persistent leaks, you should get them checked out quickly.

Like motor oil, it is also important to change the radiator coolant regularly. However, you don't have to change the coolant every 3,000 miles; most mechanics recommend about once in every 15,000 miles, or once a year (the beginning of summer is a good time). It's important to change the coolant because as the coolant is used, it can break down and start to corrode your cooling system. Of course, this can lead to expensive repairs. Many of the same shops that can change your oil can also change your radiator coolant.

Another fluid that needs periodic attention is brake fluid. Bob Handren, an area resident who owns a modified 1967 Oldsmobile 442 W-30, recommenda having your car's brake fluid flushed once a year because it can absorb moisture... especially in Florida's moist climate-and this can lead to corrosion of your car's breaking

Finally, if your car has power steering and/or an automatic transmission, don't forget to check their fluid levels periodically. Automatic transmission fluid should also be changed about once every year or two.

Phar-Mar co-founder sentenced to prison

CLEVELAND - Phar-Mor Inc. co-founder Michael Monus was sentenced today to nearly 20 years in prison for a fraud and embezzlement scheme that sent the discount drugstore chain into bankruptcy court.

Monus, 48, was sentenced to 235 months in prison, a $1 million fine and five years' probation. He was immediately taken into custody.

"In the 10 years I was at Phar-Mor, Phar-Mor grew to 300 stores in some 35 states and 20,000 employees," Monus told U.S. District Judge George White. "The important thing is not the numbers to me ... but the employees — all those dedicated, loyal and highly motivated people.

"I want them to know the sorry and regret that I have. The sorrow and regret will live with me for the rest of my life."

White refused requests to allow Monus free on bond while a conviction is appealed and to allow him to report voluntarily to prison on Jan. 15 after his son's bar mitzvah.

Earlier this year, Phar-Mor emerged from nearly three years of U.S. Bankruptcy Court protection, after shedding about two-thirds of its stores and cuiting thousands of jobs.

Finn and Walley pleaded guilty to fraud and tax charges and agreed to testify against Monus.

Monua' first trial, in 1993, ended in a hung jury; charges of jury tampering are pending.

In his second trial, Monus was convicted on all charges: 96 counts of interstate transportation of stolen property, five counts of wire fraud, two counts each of bank fraud, mail fraud, and filing false income tax returns, and single counts of obstruction of justice and conspiracy.

The company estimated its losses at $500 million. Prosecutors put the total loss at up to $2 billion, including about $1 billion lost by investors.

New to the business community

On Dec. 1, telephone compa-nies, including BellSouth, began sharing Caller ID information on calls. This nationwide extension of a service previously available only within each telephone company's service area, is the result of a Federal Communications Commission (FCC) ruling. The ruling also standardise options for callers who wish to block transmission of their telephone number to users of Caller D-type services.

From Stell Reports

According to Larry Strickler, Bell South spokesman, the FCC ruling dramatically increases the value of Caller ID to Florida's Caller ID customers.

"Caller ID customers soon will be able to identify callers from all across the nation, instead of just here in the Southeastern United States," Strickler said.

For callers not choosing to reveal their identity, the PCC has mandated per call blocking at no charge. Per call blocking is activated by entering *67 from touch-tone phones or 1167 from rotary dial phones before dialing the number for a call.

For callers who have "permanent" per line blocking, the PCC has mandated provision of a means for temporarily unblock-

"A means for enabling delivery of Caller ID information on some calls is necessary." More than a dozen of the testers who analyzed the toys in August returned Thursday afternoon to the headquarters of Consumers Union, the magazine's publisher, for the release of the ratings.

The toy testers got another chance to play with the toys. They shot each other with Nerf Ripsaws (Kenner, $15). Skyblaster Turbo Catchers (Oddzon Products, $25) and The Adventures of Batman and Robin Space Shooters (Milton Bradley, $10). They chased after each other in games of Backwards Bask ball (Kenner, $20), tried to pull each other off plate-sized tester-ing bases in Tugger War (Pre-seman, $10) or huddled off in groups to enjoy less physical

But Gooey Louie (Pressman. $13), sat pretty much abandoned. Gooey Louie, a plastic head with strands of green stuff in his nose and a pink and blue brain, was ranked "poor" when the kid testers first had at him in August. And their opinions apparently weren't changed.

Barry Schwartz, spokesman for the toymaker, said Goosy Louis was one of the best-selling games on the market and sug-gested that the testers, ages 9 to 13, were a bit older than target age group of up to 7 or 8.

"Let's face it, it's a nosepicking game — kind of gross fun," Schwarts said. Battle Dome (Parker Brothers,

Women's club learns pathway to health is through laughter

By Joanno Lucae Bourg Special to the Herald

"Pathways of Health" was the title of a program presented to the Heathrow Women's Club at the November Luncheon.
"Laugh it up" speaker Angela Kesenbrock, Director of Health Technologies of Seminois Community College advised, "Reep laughing! Laughter releases endorphins (A modelevating brain chemical) Endorphins are a natural tension releases laughter releases. natural tension release-laughing reduces and ill health."

One trick in finding humor in the worst of situations is to blow things abosiusely, ridiculously out of proportion. Say you're stuck in a traffic jam. Imagine the worst: "These cars will never move, I'll be stuck here for the rest of my life. By the time I get home, my children will have grown up, married and had children. They won's even remember me." When your scenario reaches the point of abourdity, you had a smalle. The situation is put in begin to smile. The situation is put in perspective. Now you can calm down.

"Walk it off," she advised. " A study by Florida's State Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services found that participants in an eight week walking program were able to reduce stress they felt at work by 50 percent.

Other guest speaker, Cindy Heroux, Health and Wellness Nutritional Services adjunct instructor then covered topics such as grapefruit diets,-combining meat and starch at the same time-nothing but fruit until noon-and various other mythe and half truths. The speaker advised women to include an abundant variety of fruit and vegetables with a sensible diet.

Exploring nursing home care: Some myths dispelled

Part 1 of three parts

imagine you are 70 years-old, married and have one child. You have been independent all your life. You have a stroke, leaving the right side of your body weak. Near the end of the hospital stay your doctor discusses with you and your family the need to go to a nursing home for therapy.

At the mention of a nursing home you become afraid. You fear you'll be in the nursing home the rest of your life. You are afraid you will not get your medication on time. You are afraid you will lose your independence. Your husband is wondering how he is going to live without you. Your daughter is feeling guilty for not being able to care for you. She is afraid she will be judged and accused of abandoning her parent.

This scenerio shows several myths about nursing homes and points out the emotional turmoil on patients and patients' fami-lies. Just what should you expect from nursing home care?

Entering a nursing home doesn't necessarily mean you will stay until you die. Although there is long term placement in a nursing home, many patients do get to go home after receiving care. Some of the abort term care includes monitoring the diet if you are put on a special dict. teaching about medications, physical therapy, occupational therapy, and speech therapy. Short term care is designed to assist you in regaining strength, regaining skills and learning new skills such as when to take your medication, what you can eat or not eat, etc. The purpose is to get you to function independently. Some diseases such as strokes may keep you from doing all the tasks you did prior to the stroke but the therapy will teach you new skills to adapt to the losses.

You are not a patient in a nursing home. You are actually a resident in the nursing home.

meet your needs. As a resident you are able to decide what you need and how to go about meeting those needs. You then become independent in decision making.

You may depend on staff for a short period of time when physical constraints preclude your independence. For example, if you break your hip and cannot ambulate to the bathroom on your own yet. You are receiving therapy to strengthen you. You may need assistance from staff until you regain the strength to ambulate on your own or with a

Another myth is that as a family member you will be judged for abandoning your parent if you place them in a nursing home. By placing a parent in a nursing home to meet their needs you do not abandon your parent, you are providing for your parent's needs and that is how it is viewed by the staff.

Widespread abuse is yet another myth that is often linked to nursing homes. To secure any professional licenses in the State of Florida, you must undgergo a Florida Department of Law Enforcement background check and an HRS abuse background check. With CNA's (Certified Nursing Assistants) the facility is required to have an FDLE and HRS abuse check done prior to placing a person on the job. The facility also investigates any accumation made by family and or residents and HRS is called so they also can investagate. On rare occassions abuse does occur, it is the exeception and not the rule.

Nursing homes are traditionally run by skilled and qualified staff. Examples are: Registered nurses receive extensive training and pass the same boards as other RNs who may work in hospitals. Licensed practical nurses pass the same boards and receive training just like other LPNs. CNA's are certified by completing a course and passing a test. Nursing homes provide ongoing educa-you are dependent on staff to and techniques to improve on care and to keep up with new advances in medical care.

Every year such nursing homes go through a survey process by the government. From these surveys comes the ratings. The type of license they have are based upon these ratings.

The type of licenses are as follow: 1. Superior: the facility goes above and beyond what the standard license requires. New facilities and those bought within a year of licensing do not receive Superior ratings even if it is the care they are providing. 2, Standard; the facility meets requirements as set by the government. 3, Conditional, the facility is not meeting standards in which some could be lifethreatening. They still operate but they have a certain amount of time to correct mistakes. 4, Moratorium, the facility is unable to admit new Medicaid or Medicare patients due to not meeting government standards. They have a certain amount of time to correct deficiencies. 5, If the facility continues not to meet government standards the facility is closed.

A nursing home is a place at which you should trust the care of the staff to meet the needs of the resident. A nursing home provides nursing care, rehabilitation, dietary needs, psychosocial needs and activities. Each mursing home provides different services and that is why it is necessary for you to check out the nursing homes individually.

Drug dealers hawk their wares on the porches of those houses as children dig in the dirt. unaware of the dangers around 'The only way things will change is if we make a change," said city commissioner Lon Howell.

Charles Rowe, director of redevelopment for the city of Sanford, recommended the city condemn the buildings and take emergency action to raze them. The commission chose to take the slower route of condemnation that could take months of public hearings and debate, citing that emergency action could only be taken in the case of health issues or imminent danger to the public.

Howell, however, agreed with Rowe that action needed to be swifter and more definitive.

"We have drug dealers selling crack over here with teeny kids playing over here," he said. crossing his arms across his chest and shaking his head. "If that's not a danger, I don't know

Rowe said the houses are a health hazard and a danger to the community. Tearing them down is the only solution to the problem.

"I'm in a hard place here," Rowe conceded. "These homes were owned by whites for years and they were in bad shape and no one did anything about it. And now they're owned by blacks and they are in just as bad shape and we're coming down on them. But the fact remains that they have to come

Margaret A. Jones has owned the houses since 1979.

She said it has been a nightmare that culminated last month when she discovered broken sewer pipes on the property that were causing the houses to shift and crack.

"I knew there was problem all along, but I thought there were just filthy tenants," she said. And they told me that at the city. They just told me these people were probably flushing things down the toilet, but that

She said the sewage lines on the property are old and have not been maintained. She added the old system was supposed to have been replaced between 1974 and 1979, but that it was not though it has been "erased" from the city maps.

The houses have been nothing but trouble for her, she said. She has seen tenants die, she said in retrospect, because they have had to live in homes filled with methane gas bubbling up from under the houses.

"It has been a nightmare and I'm glad it's almost over." Jones was approached by Warner Brothers recently. The company wants to buy her houses to take elsewhere and use in the movie Rosewood, a film about the 1920s black town that was destroyed by whites. She said she won't let them have the houses until her curiosity is satisfied regarding the condition of the property and the houses that stand on it.

Next week, a team of geological surveyors, appraisers and contractors will be on the property, at her own expense, to determine the condition of the land, the sewer pipes and the to teach them what it takes to succeed in life.

"Our goal is empowerment of our youth," she said. If black youngsters become knowledgeable on issues facing their community, they will be able to positively impact it, she

"Education is the essential ingredient to a very productive life. Without it, we become stagnant," she said. "If we can get to our youth early, we can make a great impact on them. They will be able to make appropriate choices.

For example, Varn-Wilson said a child who learns not to take drugs, will reject them and inject positive peer pressure into the black community.

By reaching "one child at a time" Varn-Wilson said the black community would be able to renew its commitment to strong families.

'We want the children focused so they can grow up to be healthy and have a strong fami-ly," she said.

While the organization is working to build a stronger black community, Varn-Wilson accused the media of trying to heep the community down.

"The media portrays us as being on the verge of extinction, but we are not. There are a lot of healthy black families," she picture is beginning to shape up and we've got some surprise contenders. Indianapolis, Atlanta, and even Buffalo, find themselves in the driver's seat as the stretch begins. Unfortunately, I was writing a paper for grad school on Sunday and missed most of the action.

I did however catch the final score in th Scattle game. As LOCK OF THE WEEK, the Seahawks not only failed to cover, they failed to win. This is a rare occurence for me so I decided to investigate and determine what happened.

It seems that prior to the kickoff, Jet's coach Rich Lotite made some drastic personnel changes. He decided to go with a lineup full of rookies and reserves, rather than his typical loser squad. I think it's great these players got the opportunity to play, but I regret not knowing this information sooner.

Focusing on Florida's teams, let's take a quick look at the Diagrace of the Sunshine State.

The Miami Dolphins looked absolutely terrible against the Colts, especially on defense, Bryan Cox and his temper trantrums once again failed to motivate this pathetic squad. Marine had another record breaking day overshadowed by a diamal loss. He and Stoyanovich are the only bright spots remaining on this team besides Don

I know, fire Shula and everything will be better. If you believe this two things are most likely true. One you're probably still upset that Hee Haw is no longer on television. And two, you still can't believe you didn't win the lottery Saturday.

Don Shula is not the problem, he's a class act, and a proven winner. The problem is ignorant fans and owners that have elevated players to an obscene level of importance. So if you really want steroids, taunting, and Jimmy Johnson as the new Dolphin trademarks, then keep on "hee-hawing" because you'll probably get your way.

On the happier note let's talk about the boys in orange. The Bucs put in a valiant effort in their loss to Green Bay. For the first time in weeks 1 can't blame the loss on Dilfer. He had an excellent game, and I hope that this is a sign of his maturing as a quarterback. The Bucs played tough ball for as long as they could bare the cold.

After watching the game I'm convinced that we can beat the Packers when they come to the Sombrero in December. We really need to beat the Vikings this week. Warren Moon is still thinking about the beating that Hard "Hulk" Nickerson put on him in October and that will help create turnovers. While it won't be easy, I think we've got a very chance.

Let's take a look at Sunday's schedule and find some winners.

MIAMI (-6) VO ATLANTA The reason behind this line up must be that bettors are figuring Miami has to win if they are going to make the playoffs. They definitely need the game, and if anyone can win with a horrible defense, it's Shula and Marino. Delphine 31, Paleens 36.

MBA ENGLYND (-2) AT MBA CETTYNE ematically the Patriots aren't out yet. With the lucky win a Buffalo last week, this team still has a chance. The Saints are so bad, the Catholic Church is taking Legal action to force them to change their name. Bill Parcella might punch Jim

13. Ottors 10. OTA (-8) TO TAMPA BAT

Huge game for both squade at 6-6. It's not a definite, but whoever loses this one may be out of the playoff race. I would think that our defense can keep this closer than the line. If the offence shows up, we can win this game outright. Busensoru 21, Vikings 20.

QRESS BAY (-11) VS CENCERNATE The poor Bengale, I was hoping they would have a Cinderella season. Sunday may provide the final nail in their playoff coffin. Brett Favre will eat this defense up in a post-Thankagiving feast. Tampa has filed suit against Big Al in what they call Fraud. The playbook he sold to the organization was actually from a Milwaukee high school. Al's alibi? "I was at Harry's for the entire incident, I have not comment." Packers $1,

The Rammies are attempting to salvage what began as a great season. They couldn't ask for a better team to do it against. Do you realise the Rams started this season at 5-0? Talk about a total collapse. They should win this one, but I wouldn't bet on it. Itams 17, Jets 13.

I really need the Colts to lose this game because my little play lien Translates. Indiv her a chance to my Bille play San Francisco. Indy has a chance to takeover first place in the A.F.C. East, and I think they will. Colts $1, Posthers 14. GARLAND at EANGAS CITY

There is no line on this game because the bookies aren't sure if Hostetler will quarterback for the Raiders. With or without him, anything less than ten points is a great bet. I think the Chiefs will Stomp the Raiders. Chiefs 28, Reiders 13.

BAN DEBGO (-6) YO CLEVELAND The Brownies have lost every game since it was announced they would move. After seeing the Chargers fail to score a touchdown against the Raiders, it's tough to make this bet. I did like the fact that Charger fans seem to be sticking with this team. Will the Chargers make the playoffs? Probably not. Will they beat the Browns? Chargers 28. Browns 18.

DALLAS (-18) we WASHINGTON

Eighteen points! What is this the Super Bowl? I know the Cowboys are much better team, but this is too many points. If I had to bet it, which I don't but probably will, I'd take the points. What a boring game this will be without Emmit Smith.

Cowboys 38, Redshins 18, PHILADELPHIA (-8) at SEATTLE The Eagles are soaring, while the Seahawks are taking a dive. If they hope to make the playoffs they need the win. I can't remember if Philly has a good pass defense or not. Either way, I think they win. Bagies 30, Seahawks 17.
DESIVER (-12) vs JACESCHVILLE

The Broncos had better get it together. They need to put some distance between them and the rest of the A.F.C. stragglers. Twelve points is a big margin, but they scored 33 against Houston last week. Give the points and ge shopping that night. Breaces 37, Jacksonville 17, BAN FRANCISCO (-14) vs HUPPALO

There are certain sames that I am positive about. This is one of them. There is no way my team can best Young and the Niners. I'm positive that the Niners will cover the spread, but I'm pretty sure. Miners 30, Bills 28.

DETROIT (-5) vs CERCAGO

Every week I issue what I consider to be the best pick against the spread in the schedule. This is the same that after research and contempla-tion, I feel most confident about releasing as my LOCK OF THE WHEE.

As five point favorites, New England qualifies as my LOCE OF THE WEEK. Perceils finally has this team believing and playing the way they should. Percells victory on Sunday will raise my LGCE record to a respectable 18-3.

Good luck this week, and if the wife's on your case about the Christman lights, hong them

Floridians want government to continue protecting outdoors

Floridians today say the government should continue to take steps towards protecting the state's wildlife, fish, and environment. That conclusion comes after a detailed survey of Florida residents, including those from both major political parties. According to the survey, 86%

Garden Club members learn about propagation of plants

The Sweetwater Oaks Garden Club recently provided two workshops for their members and interested persons. The successful propagation of plants, both for indoor and outdoor, by Fran Ruos, the club's Horticultural chariman, uses many dif-ferent methods for different plants from woody stem plants like azaleas, to plants like the colorful coleus' using particular mixture of soil and light, but never direct sun.

Areva Barnes brought some azaleas that some club membe had managed to propagate some six months ago with six out of a possible ten plants taking root using the light mist spraying technique with ample drainage that Areva uses for all propaga-tion needs in her sarden. ### Julye crowned 1995 Rotary Bowl Queen

By SHIPLEY BAKER Herald Correspondent

LONGWOOD — Picture this: It's Wednesday night, Nov. 22, during a break in the 1995 XXII Rotary Bowl Competition; six beautiful and appropriately attired high school seniors, each representing one of the high schools in Seminole County, anxiously wait the announcement of the name of the 1995 Rotary Bowl Queen. The suspense ends when Lyman High School's representative Julye Williams is crowned Rotary Bowl Queen for 1995.

Geese and country kissin' cousins fun for collector

By SUBAN WERNIN Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Being the assistant manager for Handy Way in Sanford keeps Agatha Hawkins busy but she still finds time for her hobby of collecting geese and country kissin' cousins. The dining room and kitchen of her Sanford home house all of her little treasures.

Hawkins has collected geese for four years. She began with a set of four wearing tiny country hats. Her collection has now grown to over 30.

Cookie jars, potholders, magnets, towels, rugs and dishes all boost of her love of these white, feathered birds.

"I saw the geese all set up at the Flea Market," she said. "That's what made me start to like them. I have geese from two inches high to 10."

Country blues all accent her home and the geese fit right in the color scheme of things. Most of her collection are ceramic or cloth but she did admit to some glasses with geese that the family enjoys.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) instead of waiting to be told what to do, assume the initiative and try to direct the course of events. You will be better at leading than follow-table? Right, being a defender. It is tough as you are unable to see all your side's assets. But players do find good defensive plays — as in today's deal.

West led the heart two. Treating this card as an honest fourth-highest, South card as an honest fourth-highest, South took East's jack with his king and im-took East's jack with his king and immediately ran the spade jack.

After winning with the king, many Easts would return the heart eight, saying afterwards that they had to return their partner's suit. But this lets the contract make. Declarer just wins with dummy's ace and drives out the diamond ace. The defense collects four tricks (one spade, two hearts and one diamond), but South gets the rest.

However, East found the best defence: He switched to the club six.

If South had guessed the position, he would have wen with the ace, the clubs being blocked. Yet not unnaturally he played lew. New, though, after West with the club queen, he returned the heart queen. South ducked, but had to win the next heart trick. West grabbed trick six with his diamond ace grabbed trick six with his diamond ace and cashed a heart to defeat the contract.

Dennis Miller claims that being a coroner is the easiest job in the world. He asks, what's the worst that can happen? You realise the corpse still has a pulse! It's similar at the bridge table, where the easiest job is being the dummy. In French, the dummy is called le mort: the dead. And most dummies have a males.
