Friends, Family And Employees Are All Key To The Alcoholic's Recovery

Denial that a problem exists, denial that the alcoholic and family and friends are unable to cope with the sickness.

And, according to the Rev. Joseph L. Kellermann, director of the Christus Council on Alcoholism Inc., the "primary persons in the life of an alcoholic (although well-meaning) actually perpetuate the illness and thereby prevent recovery."

Dr. Kellermann calls the denial a "merry-go-round." He describes the typical alcoholic as a man between the age of 30 and 55 with better than average intelligence, skillful in certain areas, and usually quite successful in a particular field, but characteristically the alcoholic as very sensitive, lonely and tense, immature in a way that produces dependence. He sees him as a person who acts in an extremely independent fashion in order today to excuse his dependency.

The alcoholic, Dr. Kellermann says, has found that the use of alcohol has profound effects on him psychologically. It seems to dissolve his inhibitions, reduce his tensions, remove loneliness and solves problems, for the time being. He finds that a few drinks will relieve an unpleasant or undesirable situation and the use of alcohol becomes the most important thing in his life. "The alcoholic drinks to escape, but this is not a matter of choice," Dr. Kellermann says. "It is a necessity, for the first indication of an alcoholic is the inability to drink temporarily or socially." While the alcoholic may drink openly, it is likely he will begin concealing the amount he drinks. This concealment, Dr. Kellermann says, is the first aspect of denial. "Repeated denial by concealment indicates the tremendous importance of the psychological effect of excessive drinking and the inability to stop after one or two drinks."

Symbolic 'merry-go-round' of denial signifies how the alcoholic is helped to drink by well-meaning people and kept on a carousel of alcoholism.

"A profound change can be seen in the alcoholic after a few drinks. He now has a sense of 'success, well-being, self-sufficiency and his sense of omnipotence is enlarged,'" according to Kellermann.

"It is now right and all others are wrong, if there is a difference of opinion or objection to his drinking," Kellermann says.

With the drinking alcoholic, Kellermann says, there is a "continued revelation of emotionally, irresponsible and antisocial behavior, of which drinking under the influence is a clear example." "If drinking continues long, though the alcoholic creates a crisis, gets into trouble and ends up in a mess. A dependent person acts in a very independent fashion, drinks to comfort himself that this is true and then the consequences of drinking puts him in a condition in which he depends upon others to protect him or remove the consequences. When he ends up in a mess he just waits for someone to happen, ignores it, walks or runs away from it, or cries for someone to get him out of it," Kellermann says.

Those who get him out of trouble are known by different names and by helping the alcoholic feel his illness, according to Dr. Kellermann's scenario.

Kellermann lists the "enabler." He says this "enabler" Mr. Cicou's own anxiety and guilt will not let him enable the predicament of his friend, the alcoholic. He enacts the predicament of his friend, the alcoholic, to save the alcoholic from the immediate crisis and relieves the unbearable tension created by the situation.

This denies the alcoholic the process of learning by correcting his own mistakes and conditions him to believe that there will always be a protector who will come to the rescue, despite the fact that the enabler insists he will never again "save him," Kellermann says.

The enabler always does, despite his protests, and always will, the alcoholic believes. Dr. Kellermann says the enabler is usually a professional, a minister, a doctor, a lawyer, a close friend.

The second person in the cast of characters in the "victim," Dr. Kellermann notes. This is the boss, the employer, the someone who assumes responsibility for getting the work done if the alcoholic is absent due to drinking, or to half on and half off the job due to a hangover. By the time this happens, the alcoholic has been drinking for 10 to 15 years.

Groups Fight Bill To Gut 1 Add To Other

By Donna Estes

Officers of the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council and the St. Johns River Water Management District flew by chartered plane to Tallahassee this morning to try to halt proposed legislation that would "gut" the planning council and give the water management district power and responsibilities it doesn't want.

Leaving from Orlando Executive Airport were County Commission Chairman Sandra Glenn in her role as chairman of the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council; Cliff Guillot, executive director of the council; and Fran Pignone, chairman of the St. Johns River Water Management District Board of Commissioners.

Guillot, prior to going to Tallahassee to lobby against the legislation supported by Ler Moffitt, speaker of the Florida House of Representatives, said he is a loss to know from where the proposed legislation came and for what purpose.

Currently, the planning council's primary responsibilities are to review "developments of regional impact" and to plan the future development of the entire six-county East Central Florida area. Guillot said while the legislation doesn't eliminate planning councils, it does transfer their primary responsibilities to appointed water management district boards.

The planning council for this area is composed of 42 members, handfuls of them elected officials from the various counties and cities in the planning council. The council operates office in various parts with 35 employees.

Guillot said residents of Seminole County, said developments of regional impact as defined for Seminole County include subdivisions of 1,500 units or more and large shopping centers, such as the Altamonte Mall.

Guillot noted that the St. Johns River Water Management District specifically does not have the added responsibilities or the power that goes with them.

And, he added, the reason for the proposed legislation cannot be to cut bureaucracy because, if the responsibilities are shifted, water management districts will have to hire new people to take care of the new chores.

The East Central Florida Regional Planning Council has existed for 24 years and has been one of the most successful in the state. Its region includes, Seminole, Orange, Osceola, Brevard, Lake and Volusia counties.

The Hooeyou St. Johns River Water Management District includes the counties of Seminole, Orange, Volusia, Duval, Bradford, Clay, St. Johns, Alachua, Putnam, Flagler, Marion, Volusia, Lake, Brevard, DeSoto, Duval, Indian River and Okechobee.

A spokesman for the Seminole County Sheriff's Department said today.

Mr. Anderson told deputies the shooting took place during an altercation between Ringel and another man, who has not yet been identified.

Magnificent Men In Their Flying Machines

Spectators at the Central Florida Air Show, sponsored Saturday and Sunday by the Rotary Club of Sanford, got a chance to inspect the world's largest aircraft, the CSA military cargo transport, and other airplanes up close during the pre-show activities. The Paragators, a parachute demonstration team from Eustis, hits the sky, while wingwalker Johnny Kaskan hangs upside down from the wing as Jimmy Franklin puts his speeding airplane through a loop maneuver. These were just a few of the many attractions this year. See more on the weekend air show on Page 7A.

EMBURY, Lebanon (UPI)—A bomb blew apart the U.S. Embassy today and collapsed reinforced concrete floors on employees, killing at least 28 people, including six U.S. Marines, hospital officials said.

A doctor at the American University Hospital said another 100 people were injured by the blast. The 28 dead included two Lebanese parliament members and the six Marines, the doctor said.

A group calling itself the Islamic Struggle Organization said a local news organization immediately after the blast to claim responsibility. The commander of the Marines had warned earlier in the day that he expected more than 10,000 Shiite attacks on his force.

The explosion ripped off the entire front of the building and the floor collapsed like cards on those working in front, leaving the streets strewn with bodies.

"It ripped out eight front offices and the snack bar, which must have had 15 or 20 people in it," said Kurt

Shahar, a newspaper editor, who was knocked from his perch on the bank of the street here. "It was bad that I happened to be standing."

A few moments later one building's ground floor was seen to crumble outside near an entrance.

The death count of nearly 300, it is a rather high toll for the maximum 100 people that the blast had. Some reports said the explosion was caused by a car bomb.

The highway outside the building was jammed with cars.

Amrallah's Mohamud Dillou was in the building at the time but was reported "all right," by political officer Gary Crocker, who stood on the wreckage-strewn sidewalk offering Marines.

U.S. crews Philip Hahn and Morris Dreger, in Beirut for troop withdrawal talks, he were here and Lebanon were not at the embassy and were safe.

Florida's 'Bullet Train' Facing Roadblocks

IN BRIEF

Fla. Becomes Battleground in Mafia Narcotic War

DANIA (UPI) — A Mafia war that may have taken more than 250 lives in Sicily has spilled over into the United States, including south Florida, according to police officials.

The Fort Lauderdale News and Sun-Sentinel said today the recent slaying of two Mafia executives of two reputed mobsters in Dania was part of a war over heroin distribution. The paper also said the slaying was the first of several in five other deaths in this country.

Other news items in the distribution of heroin were killed within a 37-day period and included six young Sicilians who knew each other and were allegedly involved in the distribution of heroin. Florida Department of Law Enforcement agents told the newspaper.

Religious Slogan OK

ST. PETERSBURG (UPI) — The Florida Bar turned down attorney Alan H. Barrett's request to put "Jesus Is Lord" in his Yellow Pages advertisement almost a year ago, but now it's reversed its decision.

The bar's Board of Governors has now decided that the phrase is not the equivalent of saying "Keep Florida Green" or "Support the ERA." The board characterized them as statements of opinion rather than religious statements that are more in the nature of personal expression deserving no endorsement.

Barrett, a Catholic, said he wanted to use the religious message because "there are a lot of people out there who believe that Jesus is Lord" whether the lawyer like it or not.

Crimewatch Broke Law

PORT LAUDERDALE (UPI) — City Manager Charles Cullinan is launching an investigation into allegations Crime Watch of Florida has violated state and federal laws, that supporters argue the problems are only being solved by the state.

The state-wide, non-profit corporation which sprang from an anti-crime program of the Palm Beach Police Department says it has more than 80,000 members in the state who encourage citizens to fight crime.

The Fort Lauderdale News and Sun-Sentinel reported a copyright suit Sunday that Crime Watch has violated police facilities and violated Internet revenue laws.

Street Fundraising To Benefit Homeless

WEST PALM BEACH (UPI) — A Catholic social worker has launched a copyright suit Sunday that Crime Watch has violated police facilities and violated Internet revenue laws.

For one month beginning today, Joseph Harrell will stand before City Hall during the day, and sleep on the steps of the Palace at night.

His own meal a day at the Lord's Place, the soup kitchen for the homeless.

He said he hopes: "Help, I am living in the streets to gain support for a family shelter."

Harrell, 43, a Roman Catholic deacon known as "Brother Joe," said he is concerned with the growing number of homeless families arriving in south Florida from other states.

"Our goal is to raise enough money to purchase a house for approximately 180 families per year, each of which will be able to live free rent for up to six weeks while they seek their own home and get on their feet again," said Brother Joe.

More than 400 homeless families in Palm Beach County are housed at $250,000 a month to operate the facility, said attorney Jack Scarola, director of the homeless shelter in Palm Beach.

"Families without funds arrive at our door every day from all over the country, and often they must sleep in their cars or on the street," he said. "We want to begin to meet their need for shelter."

Harrell will work at the Lord's Place, but for the most part, it will be just Brother Joe — dressed in a monk-like habit — standing out begging in the street to demonstrate what families without money are forced to do.

Brother Joe is a deacon at St. Ann's Catholic Church. His pastor has given him 30 days off, with pay, to carry out his work.

The Catholic Archdiocese in Miami and the Parish Council of St. Ann's Church also have given their support to the project.

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Florida's "bullet train" has won the backing of potentially powerful foes — environmental activists — but their numerous roadblocks before Florida's way from Tampa to Orlando, in a state as 20 miles.

An estimated, part of the rapid rail would extend from Miami to Orlando and a second leg would run from Orlando to Tampa. The project might be completed in 1990.

Studies to determine exactly how to build the train and precisely how fast it would travel, people say, are incomplete.

Depending on the route and what Florida officials want, it would travel at speeds of 150 to 200 miles per hour.

Passengers could go from Miami to Orlando in about 1 1/2 hours. Technology might make it possible to speed runs in Orlando in as little as 30 minutes, said J. Parker Wright IV, chairman of Gov. Bob Graham's 50 High Speed Rail Committee.

Graham established the committee of businessmen, bankers, lawyers and engineers in April 1982. He said he announced a Japanese foundation would provide up to $1 billion to subsidize the railroad's Florida Chapter P.A. works.

The project got a boost last week when environmental activists got it their blessing. Charles Lee, vice president of the Florida Audubon Society, said he was the governor's committee abandoned on one side to obtain funds for a similar project in California. Officials there exempted a Los Angeles-to-San Diego rail from normally required environmental and land use permits. A move Lee called "an absolute disgrace."

To head off similar problems in Florida, the panel established an environmental task force. Headed by Daytona Beach lawyer Peter Heberster, the group will receive advice from such prominent environmentalists as Margaret Carr, president of the Florida Defenders Council.

Ms. Carr's opposition was a key to obtaining the state's Cross Florida Barge Canal, which still endures. Environmentalists "is the one issue that will give you the most trouble at the legislative level," Heberster said.

Lee and John Hankinson, executive director of the Environmental Service Center in Tallahassee, endorsed the idea of building the rapid rail along express highways. They said that would have a minimal impact on the environment.

Lee called Florida P.A. works use of existing highways for the high-speed train. After Chiles took an internal. Federal transportation officials who previously were cool to the idea by favoring it, Wright said.

But Antrak, the federally subsidized passenger rail, also may be a problem. The rail advisory committee said, because Antrak may claim an exclusive right to domestic passenger service. An American High Speed Rail Corp., an Antrak affiliate, is helping study the railroad's feasibility.

"I don't mind Antrak doing a ride-along survey. I just want to start with a clean slate when we start negotiating for (financial) rights," said committee member Lester Freeman.

"We have a problem with interstate representation of interests that we do not," said Freeman, vice president of the Southeast First National Bank of Miami. "I don't want for all of a sudden Antrak to be here and say, 'Get this, we've got it.'" Another dilemma is how to award contracts for operating the rail along existing transportation facilities. Sun Bank President Jack Winkler expressed concern that "cream skimming" could result if the rail is built in parts and each section awarded to a different contractor.

"It's pretty clear to me that under the regulation now proposed, that could be done," Wells said in reference to yet another problem facing the committee.

The legislation Wells refers to is a draft bill written by several committee members. The proposal, now at the House and Senate transportation committees, does not have the rail committee's support. If passed, it would establish a mechanism for building and generating the railroad.

Wells said legislation through this session, which I am now opposed to, will be waiting on the order of business before our work is done," Wells said.

On up of this, committee members said they're certain of precisely what they are supposed to be doing. Gov. Graham said he believes the bill is do what the committee is to do with its work report to Graham, present legislation to the House and Senate.

A Wright's suggestion, the panel imposed a July deadline on itself for establishing design criteria. Contractors must submit plans by Dec. 31. The committee will review the plans and will have to vote on whether they are submitted.

Despite all the pitfalls that do abound, the silver-haired, gratefully Wright is confident.

"The problems are not insurmountable," he said.

Lech Walusa Arrested; Whereabouts Unknown

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Lech Walusa, former leader of the banned Solidarity trade union, was arrested by Polish police while driving in Warsaw in late April in memorial ceremonies for victims of a Jewish ghetto uprising, witnesses said.

Walusa was taken into custody near Oranienauk, 150 miles north of Warsaw. He had left his home in Gdanisk by car earlier in the day to rebury the 60,000 Jews who died in the 1943 rebellion against Nazi occupation forces.

Walusa's TV news crew behind Walusa in a separate car was also taken into custody, witnesses said they were taken to military headquarters in Oranienauk but released more than two hours later.

Police in Oranienauk said Walusa also had been released, but the American television crew said they saw no sign of him. There was no other word on Walusa's whereabouts.

Witnesses said that a Catholic priest who was riding with Walusa, Rev. Henry Jankowski of Gdanisk, also was arrested while driving in Warsaw in late April.

Walusa was taken from his Gdanisk home and questioned for five hours about his recent travels with Lech Walusa but released more than two hours later.

Walusa was detained the following day for 2 1/2 hours but said he refused to answer questions about his husband's contacts with the fugitive Solidarity leader.

Walusa was traveling to Warsaw to place flowers at the graves of the victims of the 1943 ghetto uprising.

"I respect those people who feel for ideals similar to those of my own kind," Walusa said Saturday. "I am not going up with flowers and a wreath with a ribbon."

Alcoholics Need People's Help

recovery if the others learn how to break the dependency relationship.

"The alcoholic cannot keep the merry-go-round going unless the others ride it with him and help keep it going," Dr. Kellermann says.

"It is true to say that an alcoholic will not recover as long as other people remove the painful consequences of the drinking episodes."

"Of these words alone reside in the alcoholic's life, perhaps the saddest is the wife. Kellermann notes that playing the supporting role of provocation makes her life unbearable."

"She is not a sick woman who made her husband become an alcoholic," he says.

As a result of the marriage she may be an average person. She is caught between the advancing effects of alcoholism and the wall of ignorance and embarrassment inflicted upon her by society. She is vitally involved and needs information and therapeutic help, but because she cannot help her husband's illness, but because she is being destroyed by it," Kellermann says.

He recommends the wife seek counseling from someone knowledgeable about alcoholism, or by attending sessions at a local mental health or alcoholism clinic.

IN BRIEF

Jews Return To Scene Of Nazi Atrocities

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — The mayor of Tel Aviv and a state spokesman from Chicago were among hundreds of Jewish visitors to Poland who felt the pain of the holocaust first hand this week at the scene of the Warsaw ghetto uprising.

"I came to show the present world no leader should take so much power into his hands that he can kill millions," said Irving Rubinstein, the American, who came to the ghetto monument as one of his plane landed on Sunday.

The same sort of power that Hitler hoped to gain in World War II is now within the grasp of those who control the world's nuclear weapons, he added.

Poland's 60, will bear the blue identification tattoo on his left forearm — B3300 — that he received on the Nazi's Berezna concentration camp when he was a teenager.

"I didn't come here to protest," Rubinstein said. "As a personal favor, I came to mourn."

He said, explaining his two elder brothers survived the concentration camps — but his younger brothers and his parents died.

Ships Exchange Fire

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaraguan changed two Honduras coast guard ships and one of its patrol boats in a swap with Honduras foreign ministry accused Managua's Sandinista regime of initiating the exchange of both countries said their territorial waters overlapped in the Gulf of Fonseca.

Both countries said their territorial waters overlapped in the Gulf of Fonseca, a Pacific inlet between the two Central American neighbors.

San Francisco was said to be detained by Nicaraguan authorities.

Disco Fire Kills 25

TAEQU, South Korea (UPI) — Police today charged the charged deaths of 25 South Koreans were a raging fire at a disco.

Police said more than 150 people had jammed the second floor of the "Pratire House" when the fire broke out early today at the club in downtown Taegu, 140 miles southeast of Seoul.

Officers said many of the victims fell in the crush to leave and were trampled. The cause of the fire and the exact cause of the deaths behind them made desperate attempts to escape.

Police had not determined the cause of the fire but suspected an electrical short circuit.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the first time in the history of the country, 90 million Americans have spent more than an hour of their lives stuck in traffic on their way to work from home.

The U.S. Census Bureau says only 6 million of the nation's 90 million commuters ride public transportation in 1980.

Suburbanites who fled the nation's cities to escape crime, taxes and steep housing costs, refuse to give up their cars for any other way than by car. Nearly two-thirds drive alone.

"There's no way it's going to become fashionable to ride the bus. It's absolutely a cultural problem," said William J. Gattis, director of the Central Oklahoma Transportation and Parking Authority.

Other urban planners and highway officials agree that the commuter congestion problem can't be solved unless they've figured out how to do it.

They've tried to make a — some legal, some not — to make the daily commute a little less painful. They try to enter express lanes into Washington by filling their cars with commuters without a chance of making it through a green light on any way and cause the classic traffic snarl.

Joseph Vannucci, a director of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, says he's not in sight.

"We're at the point where somebody committing in their own personal car," it's anybody's guess when they decide how long they have to be delayed before they move out of their car and more into mass transportation," he said.

Hal Kassar, director of Maryland's highway traffic studies, said he's not in sight of alternative to drive people out of their automobiles.

Census Bureau statistics agree, showing declines in the use of public transportation everywhere except in the West.

Philip Fulton, head of the Census Bureau's transportation division, said a 1980 survey found half the respondents in Washington said they would not use mass transportation.

Another 25 percent declined because it wasn't close to their homes. The rest said mass transportation was inconvenient or it took too long to get to work.

In school, commuters try to get to work faster by taking the system.

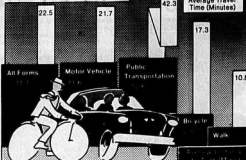

In Washington, they get to work faster by taking the system. They get to work faster by taking the system. They get to work faster by taking the system.

The lanes are open to cars with at least four occupants, and Sgt. Dennis Robertson, a Virginia state trooper, says people "just go ahead and take the chance they won't get caught. And they have every excuse in the book. 'I'm late for work,' or, 'I got locked into traffic.'" from the peace movement with a scandalous, cheap, irrelevant gimmick," he said. "But we reclaim our basic rights are necessary for lasting peace."

The anti-nuclear crowd crowded the streets with a "handful" of supporters ready to strip for peace but said he expected their mood to spread through the crowd of demonstrators and create a unique sense of unity.

He suggested, in case of cold weather, marchers should wear plastic over their birthday suits.

The average American requires a bit more than 20 minutes to get to work, but individual times and distances traveled can vary widely depending on the type of transportation. In a Census Bureau study, those using public transportation required the most time but traveled an average of only 6 miles more than those driving their own cars. Those depending on their own feet posted the shortest average time and distance. Of all commuters, 67 percent drove alone to work, 17 percent carpooled and six percent used public transportation. The remainder consisted of walkers and users of miscellaneous transportation such as motorcycles.

If there are only three people in the car, they spent their fourth person was sick today.

Getting caught without four lives living in Northern Virginia express lanes into Washington costs the driver $45 and court costs.

"We recently arrested some people with pillows stacked up on the back seat with a wig on top and a coat draped around them," Robertson said. He said police arrested a man last month with two mannequins in his back seat, fully dressed.

"The last person we caught had gotten away with it for some time," he said. Secret Service agents tipped off police when they spotted the car parked near the White House. The woman, who lives in a Virginia suburb, had taped newspapers to the mannequins' heads to make it appear they were reading the newspaper.

"Some people make a big game out of it," Robertson said.

Car pool lanes, born in the gasoline shortage of the mid-1970s, were designed to encourage gas conservation in return for a ride in the fast lane into city centers. The lanes can cut commute times roughly, with 125 miles of toll roads, boasts one of the country's worst commuters. Gary Lee, a Chicago area resident, says he's stuck in traffic on the Chicago Transit Authority's 44th Street branch in 1979, even in the worst of times.

Lee said the problem has a lot to do with the large number of commuters in the city. "Virtually every expressway in Chicago but one is jammed," he said. At 6:30 a.m. the morning rush about 2.5 million of the city's 2.8 million commuters are on the road.

New York officials call gridlock a major problem. To the extent that the city now has overheard signs on sidewalks at intersections, they're trying to get rid of them. "Prevent gridlock, don't stop your car in an abandoned area." Accompanying the warning is a picture of the intersection, with photos in a shaded to show where you can go and where you must stop.

New York public transit commuters have come up with a few ideas of their own. Some have been caught sticking tokens from collection boxes.

They'll stick material in the terminals so the tokens don't fall down too far, then suck the tokens from the terminals. A recent report said. It costs the city money and is considered highly undesirable.

A suburban scam has also been reported. Where Connecticut commuters bound 35 cent local tokens to the back of the 75-cent New York subway token.

San Francisco has its share of problems with more than 2.5 million commuters commuting to work each day — 1.6 million of them alone in their cars.

More than 25,000 vehicles move daily from the East Bay across the Bay Bridge between 6 a.m. and 9 a.m., said Vannucci. The Bay Area has four lanes reserved at the bridge toll plaza for commuters with at least three occupants.

Those vehicles don't have to stop and don't have to pay.

He said the reserved lanes are empty during much of that morning commute, while the other 15 lanes have cars stacked up a mile behind the toll plaza.

"That temps a lot of the drivers to cheat," he said. "An average of 3,750 cars sneak into the carpool lane every morning — about 15 percent." Cheaters who are caught are fined $300.

Some motorists try to count their dogs as passengers to meet the carpool quota. Another irritant for commuters is the "Gaggle Block." Materials slow down to gape when there has been an accident or other distraction along an expressway.

Earlier this year in-bound traffic was backed up five miles on one Chicago freeway as drivers slowed to watch a car make artificial snow for a carnival.

Undress For Success And Peace

WINDYCOVER, British Columbia (UPI) — Changing clothes and undressing is the primary cause of war, a nuclear war anti-nuclear symposium to be held in June Saturday's annual walk for peace in their birthday suits.

the demonstration through Vancouver's downtown will strip off their clothes to prove "people get peaceful when they're naked."

The Walk for Peace, sponsored by the British Columbia Federation of Women, attracted 3,000 marchers last year.

They are freed by freeing themselves of the restraints of clothing, demonstrators would be released from the "machinery of militarism and human complicity" and could rise to a "higher level of consciousness."

"Some may need to be distracted from the peace movement with a scandalous, cheap, irrelevant gimmick," he said. "But we reclaim our basic rights are necessary for lasting peace."

King Kong At 50: Too Old To Monkey Around

NEW YORK (UPI) — The father of King Kong to live up to his reputation was aged by a middle crisis — his second in recent years.

The monster, who in his prime easily scaled the Empire State Building, was suffering a middle crisis when he was 49, after trying for 10 days to climb the 102-story tower.

He gave up the attempt to prove his manhood Friday when high winds blew him back into his back Kong, who in his

School To Present 'Wizard of Oz'

Everyone loves the cowardly lion in the Wizard of Oz, and all the other lovable characters, like the Scarecrow and Dorothy. You can enjoy seeing these wonderful characters in person on April 21 at 7 p.m. at Sterling Park Elementary.

The Drama, Art and Chorus Clubs have prepared their talents for the production "The Wizard of Oz" Homebound in the drama course, and she and some of the parents made all the costumes. Mike Townsley, principal, will be the actor. The Art Club is painting the sets and will be the stage crew. The sponsor of the Art Club is Lisa VonKnecker. Lisa Hewitt is the choral director and her choral group will sing the songs for the musical.

The students are fourth and fifth graders. The children raised most of the money for the group at carnivals last month. They earned over $100 so they could pay back the PTA the money they borrowed from them.

Admission to the play will be $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for students. The proceeds will be used for a visit to a disaster home.

Winter Springs Elementary School carnival was a huge success. A big thank you goes out to everyone who helped make it so successful.

Suggesting Therapy Is Not A Cop-out

DEAR ABBY: I enjoy reading some of the ridiculous problems you give me people who, if they had one more ounce of common sense, would know what to do instead of writing to me—except for advice.

I am beginning to wonder if you and the professionals in the field of psychology are in business together. Your standard response is "talk therapy." I really need professional help. You need apologues on the scene. All most of these crybabies need is to grow up and use their brains instead of shelling out money to buy a new couch for a psychiatrist.

I AM DISCOURAGED IN DEAR ABBY: Please print this for readers who want to buy a new couch for a psychiatrist.

DEAR ABBY: With therapy I've worked through some painful problems I had buried for years. I've changed, and so have I. I took me three years to get over it, and today I am the happiest, healthiest, someone in this world can handle. And I never could have made it without therapy.

when you tell them that professional help.

My life was so screwed up I tried to commit suicide, but thank God I didn't succeed. A female shrink at the local suicide prevention center took me under her wing and helped me to see that all my life I'd been in a rut, everybody else for my fault.
