Nazi Armies Head For Channel Ports In Northern France

Invaders Apparently Have Abandoned Onslaught On French Defenders Of Paris
300,000 British Are Endangered
French Insist Nazis Have Not Captured

PARIS, May 20.—(AP)—The Nazi blitzkrieg drive toward Paris—apparently stalled by staggering losses—veered toward the English channel today.

For a moment, it seemed, the Germans had abandoned their onslaught against the French capital.

The German high command said the Nazi drive to the west had gained 20 to 30 miles on a line northward from St. Quentin, which is 80 miles northeast of Paris, to the English channel. It was estimated that the drive had stalled there for a quick, short attack on England. The channel port of Calais, presumably one of the main German objectives, is only 20 miles from Dover, England.

A sudden shift in Nazi tactics came as Gen. Weyand, new commander of the Allied high command in France, said the German drive toward the English channel had been stopped.

The French military authorities admitted the enemy was attacking furiously in the region east of Calais, only 70 miles from the channel port of Dunkerque, but that the channel from Dover.

The Nazis said the British were being driven back under a fierce attack toward the channel.

The French said they had repulsed a series of German attacks, and that they had inflicted heavy losses on the invaders.

General Weyand Takes Command Of Allied Armies

New Chief Of Staff Was Right Hand Man Of Foch In 1916-18

PARIS, May 20.—(AP)—The highest command in France today is in the hands of a man who was the right hand of the late Marshal Ferdinand Foch in the last of the world wars.

Gen. Maurice Weyand, 67-year-old general known during the World War as the shadowy right hand man of Generalissimo Foch, was given command of Allied forces in all theaters of operations as German light units pounded at the gates of the textile manufacturing city of St. Quentin.

The fight on the outskirts of St. Quentin, which is 80 miles northeast of Paris, to the English channel, was estimated to be expected to last within 24 hours whether the Nazis would drive on toward the Channel ports or turn southward down the Oise River valley toward Paris.

French forces bottled the Germans there as the Germans swung their attack westward along a 50-mile front between the Somme and the Aisne Rivers.

Weinstein Urges Members To Send Boy To Camp At Tallahassee

Ocean Walter was speaking on Andrew Carnegie who put on the program at the Rotary Club today.

Mr. Weinstein presented a radio program, presumably from the Kew-Forest Club in New York City, which urged members of the Tallahassee Rotary Club to send a boy to camp at Tallahassee.

Mr. Weinstein, who is in the city, said he had just returned from a visit to the New York World Fair.

He said that the camp is a fine place for boys, and that it is a good chance for them to see the world.

He urged the members of the club to send a boy to camp, and to make it a family tradition.

Acquisition Of Islands Is Favored

Senate Sentiment Grows For Taking Of Allies' West Indies Possessions

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(AP)—Senate sentiment appeared growing for American acquisition of Allied islands in the West Indies to increase Panama Canal security.

Some lawmakers proposed the transfer of property as part payment of world war debts; others suggested the United States take over the islands in event Germany wins the European war.

Some islands in the Caribbean, stretching between Florida and the east coast of South America, however, are dozens of little islands which are owned by the British, French and others, with a striking distance of the canal. Further out in the Atlantic to the north, are British's Bermuda Islands which offer a possible base for airplane attack either on canal or to United States mainland.

Senator Miller (D-Ark.) proposed taking the islands as a preventive measure.

Senator Clark (D-Mo.) others advanced the war debt idea.

Only Two Hours Required For Okey; Senate To Debate Measure Tomorrow

Speedy Realization Of Air Goal Sought
Essentials Of Plane Program Outlined To Industry Heads

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(AP)—The $1,823,941,000 Army bill, unprecedented in peacetime, won the quick approval of the Senate Appropriations Committee today while the nation's military chiefs urged a speedy realization of the President's goal of an air armada of 50,000 planes.

The leaders arranged to start a Senate debate on the big Army supply bill tomorrow, and to urge the House for the consideration of Senate amendments by midweek. The appropriations committee reported only two hours to vote the bill.

The total in the bill, $1,823,941,000, includes money for immediate expansion of the aviation industry in the weeks of high-rank government officials, to be built on a 50,000 plane goal as quickly as possible.

Essentials of the air program was outlined today by ranking Army Navy, Treasury and Agriculture officials, leaders at manufacturers of airplanes, machine tools, and allied products.

Candidates Launch Campaign For Week's Campaign

Candidates in Florida's Democratic primary election are busy today in their drive for votes in the second driving race.

The first week-end holiday season of the race is the Tuesday and Wednesday of the primary election, with the Florida gubernatorial election on Thursday.

Railroad Commissioner Jerry Carter spent the weekend in Jacksonville and planned to return to Tallahassee on Monday.

The Florida Education Commissioner went on the air and urged every one to visit the aqueduct this summer.

He had scarcely finished speaking when another speaker was on the air with some more news flashes regarding the mysterious squelch. The talk was turned over to a news man on top of the Columbus Broadcasting System's building who gave an eye witness account of the squelch's movements.

It wasn't long before anti-aircraft fire broke out.

The story was written by A. E. Peterson of this city. Continuity was by Frank Rhimes and good efforts by Frank Baker.

$155.39 Raised By Red Cross On Quota Of $1,200

Local Chapter Seeks To Reach Goal By End Of This Week

While hourly from Europe a new wave of 15 of last week and more in excess, the local chapter of the American Red Cross is endeavoring its efforts to raise its quota of $1,200 which will be used to alleviate suffering and provide much needed food and clothing to the old men, women and children who have been driven from their homes.

Mrs. James G. Hixon, Jr., chairman of the local Red Cross chapter, said today:

"At noon today, Mrs. Sharon reported that the chapter had received $155.39 on its quota of $1,200 and she said these contributions with the Red Cross are hopeful that this quota will be reached by the end of this week.

Tables at which volunteer workers preside have been set up in the business district where donors may leave their contributions if they may leave them at either of the local banks or send them to the treasurer, Mrs. Jess Adams. In the rural communities, chairmen have been appointed who will also receive contributions.

The first rural community report was Lake Mary which turned in $7 today.

Calling upon every peace loving citizen to support the drive, Mrs. Sharon pointed out that war refugees leave behind them their homes and their means of livelihood. Their flight is menaced by destruction from the air and from the mechanized weapons of death on every side.

She pointed out that the American Red Cross is rushing to them medical and hospital supplies, surgical dressings and warm clothing. It has called upon the people of America to express their sympathy for these victims by raising at least $1,000 for their relief," she added.

Expressing appreciation on behalf of the local chapter to those who have served thus far in this drive, Mrs. Sharon asked that any persons desiring to volunteer their services in the drive to raise funds, contact her or Mrs. Jess Adams.

Those who have assisted in the drive to date are Mrs. G. A. Speer, Jr., Mrs. H. D. Freeman, Mrs. R. L. Trasher, Mrs. I. P. Park, Mrs. F. E. Hall, Mrs. P. D. Scott, Mrs. G. W. Spencer, Mrs. J. A. Adams, Mrs. P. S. McCaskey, Mrs. James A. Wright, and Mrs. Jess Scott.

C. E. Bradshaw Sustains Broken Ankle In Fall

Charles E. Bradshaw's enthusiasm for baseball, whether it be his own or his team, landed him in bed late yesterday with a broken ankle.

The Atlantic Springs backer of the Seminoles, past-president of the State League team, was out in the yard with his boy, Charlie E. Jr., enjoying the national sport when he tripped over a sprig of grass, while making the best effort what could have been a circuit cut, fracturing one of the small bones in his ankle.

The score of that afternoon had not come as it stands at present, a home run, that he didn't quite get home, one broken ankle, one plaster cast, and one bed upon which Colonel Charlie will have to remain a few days while his rattling Seminoles continue their quest for their second state league pennant.

AVOID EXCESSES: Who hath...

Who hath sorrow? Who hath joy? Who hath sorrow? Who hath joy? Who hath sorrow? Who hath joy? Who hath sorrow? Who hath joy? Who hath sorrow? Who hath joy?

HEAVEN

From Bonnet Sequences
If you have mourned the death of lovely things,
Fondled the fate of downy
wings that fly,
Well-doomed, into the heart of flame to die
And strew the earth with firecorrupted wings—
Be comforted: There is a tale that brings Assuagement, in the outer realm of sky
That blooms a star, unknown to human eye
A star where most celestial fragrance elings.

There, healed and whole again,
The "right" wings fan like white petals or updrifting snow.
Beacons of no-faded light direct their way:
No searching heat allures, no
traitorous glare,
No everlasting summertime
they go,
They're in star-mist over and underneath the sky.

Campaign Of Movement

The Maginot Line has been led for years to believe that the Maginot Line was impregnable. Built at the cost of billions of dollars, and perfected with all the scientific and engineering skill which the shrewdest military strategists in the world could assemble, the French people had been drugged into a false sense of security as they indulged in partisan politics and neglected their airplanes and other offensive weapons.

General Maurice Gamelin, who has just been replaced by General Maxime Weygand as commander-in-chief of the Allied armies, has been the outstanding exponent of defensive warfare. He has maintained from the first that the best way for the French to win the war was first to sit quietly behind their fortified lines and wait for the Germans to attack. If they did not attack, the economic blockade would starve them to death.

If they did attack, they would be annihilated, he said. Defensive weapons and armaments, he insisted, were so much stronger than anything modern offense could bring to bear that the attacking army would lose at least three men to every one lost by the defenders. This theory seems to have gained some support in the Finnish war, suffered frightful losses.

However, when the same methods were undertaken by the Germans, they went through the French army and their fortified lines as if they were made of cheese cloth. The French gain some small satisfaction from the fact that it was the "little Maginot Line" and not the main fortifications which were cracked, but this is small comfort to Parisians who can hear the cannon roar, after believing they were fully protected.

So Gamelin is out and Weygand is in. Weygand is a disciple of Napoleon Bonaparte and Ferdinand Foch who believed that "the best defense is a strong attack." Weygand was made chief of staff for Foch at the beginning of the first Battle of the Marne and he served in that capacity throughout the war. Foch's orders always were "Attack! Attack! Attack!" He lost a lot of men that way. He lost more men than seemed justifiable to Gamelin and the conservative clique around him, but Foch won the war.

In the light of what has happened in the last few days, it now seems that the Allies should have launched a blitzkrieg of their own on the Western Front in the first few hours of the war. If the French had gone crashing into Germany as the Germans are now crashing into France, at the very time the main part of the German army was battling Poland, there might have been a different story to tell of subsequent events.

One thing is now certain as a result of the recent German drive, defensive measures have not outstripped the offense as much as had been supposed, and the Allies, if they are going to win this war, will have to fight. The casualties will run high.

"Showdown"

Within two or three months we will have to decide whether or not to loan the Allies, knowing in advance we would never get it back. What shall we do? Deny the money? Say, "We have done all we said we'd do, it's your picnic now?" Obviously we'll wind up as we did in the last war, loaning the British and French what they need. It would at least prolong the day of reckoning between ourselves and the dictatorships.

Because it shocks us into a realization of what is in store for us, the White Paper has performed a great service. It has told us, and offered proof via the State Department, that we can afford to be international ostriches no longer. The only straw we can grasp is that concerning U. S. troops. They, at least, will not go abroad until everything else has been tried. Even then, it will be safer to defend ourselves here.

If a showdown is coming, it is healthier for all of us to get ready for it now.—Jacksonville Journal.

General Weygand Takes Command Of Allied Armies

The French were reported to have recaptured the Moselle River towns of Le Colmar and Landreies north of St. Quentin. The high command said Allied fighters and anti-aircraft guns had inflicted heavy losses during attempted bombing raids.

General Weygand, a native of Brussels who became a citizen of France at the age of 20, was taken from his post as commander of the French forces in the Near East to succeed Generalissimo Gamelin last night after Premier Reynaud put the World War hero of Verdun, Marshal Henri Philippe Pétain, in his government as Vice Premier.

General Weygand was Marshal Foch's chief-of-staff from 1918 until the end of the World War, following the French generalissimo as he was promoted to head of the Allied armies in the Dark Spring of the war's last year. With Germany hitting the Allied armies harder since dawn, a War Office spokesman told of fighting on the edge of St. Quentin and said larger groups of the belligerents were battling "in the woods outside of town."

"Confused and hot" was the way military spokesmen described the battle from the Dixie Canal to the Somme River. German tanks, aviation and artillery were declared joining in "increasing attacks" although the latest reports from the front at 6:00 P. M. said the French troops had stopped the Nazi advance at St. Quentin at least temporarily. However, the battle was admitted to be "up and down" with the advantage swinging.

French counter-attacks in the Maubeuge region, 15 miles north of Landreies and within 10 miles of the French-Belgian border, resulted in recapturing of a number of positions, the military commander said. In Belgium, he added, the withdrawal of British and Belgian troops "progressing satisfactorily." The Allied forces in Belgium were said to be dropping back in a maneuver to keep the battle line straight.

Florida Chamber Seeks Airplane Plants For State

TAMPA, May 20 — President Roosevelt's recent declaration that American aircraft manufacturers should be geared up in producing at least 50,000 planes a year has spurred the aviation committee of the Florida State Chamber of Commerce to seek greater efforts in interesting manufacturers to locate in Florida. It was announced today by M. M. Frost, chairman of the committee.

While seeking their active cooperation and support have gone forth to Florida's Senators Claude Pepper and C. O. Andrews in Washington, Mr. Frost stated, while letters have been written several of the large manufacturers in the nation asking them to give serious consideration to Florida as a location for plants, testing grounds and other facilities.

These efforts are a continuation of those undertaken some few weeks ago when a comprehensive list of those who are forward in a position to do so. Colonel Lindbergh spoke at the eve of the thirtieth anniversary of the start of his famous New York-to-Paris flight. Arguing that "the air defense of America is as simple as the attack is difficult" when the true facts are faced, Colonel Lindbergh asserted that no air force at present possessed bombers capable of round-trip flights across the Atlantic.

A foreign power could conquer the United States only if bombers were accompanied by an invading army and "great armies must still cross oceans by ship," he said, adding that the transportation of relatively small forces by air was of great significance in Europe but not in America.

"As long as American nations were together, as long as we maintain a reasonable defense force, there will be no invasion by foreign aircraft," he continued. "And no foreign navy will ever approach within hailing distance of our shores."

"Our danger in America is not a sudden invasion which American people bring it on themselves," he said, "but a slow, steady attack on our resources and our morale."

Scott Field Is Center Of Huge Training Plan

BELLEVILLE, Ill., May 20. — President Roosevelt's call for 50,000 fighting planes for national defense focuses attention on Scott Field, future headquarters of the air corps' combat force, where the army is giving basic training to the men on the ground who will keep the planes in the air.

For every pilot, there are 25 to 30 groundlings—men who groom the planes, operate the radios, set up the machine guns and aim the searchlights. Without them, a pilot would be like a locomotive engineer who had lost his crew, brakemen and roundhouse crew. Scott Field last year was designated the basic section of the air corps' technical training school to give 25,000 enlisted men their first instruction in the fundamentals of mechanics, armaments and communications.

The school was plopped down in the midst of a $7,000,000 building program, now near completion, transforming the drab light-gray air station into a gigantic center for the directive unit of the general headquarters air force.

However, transfer of the commanding general and his staff from Langley Field, Va., to Scott Field because of its central location has been delayed at least another year by the finishing project.

Ireland produced about 100,000 tons of peat yearly.

SANFORD FORUM

Editor, Sanford Herald: Your editorial in Saturday's Herald entitled, "Campaign Methods" gave out a false impression.

Mr. Holland tells us in a talk that he will campaign for Governor. He told us about a machine Government that is trying to defeat him. The machine saving their backs to the wall. The machine will get out voters with machines. He too, is trying to leave a false impression. There is no machine government in this country. The machine is a myth. It is a myth in Tallahassee and it is a myth in Tallahassee and it is a myth in Tallahassee.

Mr. Holland said he was republican for Governor of this State. Personally, I don't think he would be so great for us, the common people. No responsible person would have distributed these pamphlets. We don't know who did it, or whom they intended to discredit. You said this and similar attacks had been made over the past few weeks.

By MRS. W. E. WATSON
At the annual meeting of the Garden Club, the Garden Center reports of the year's activities was reported, and it was interesting to note the efforts made not only to establish but to bring into strength a service in Garden Club life that is nationwide, thus placing Sanford in good line with the general progress through its community garden work from a national standpoint.

The Board had recommended the General Club the moving of the "Winter Home" of the Center from the Chamber of Commerce to the home of the general chairman, Mrs. W. E. Watson, 507 Oak Avenue, where through the summer any information may be listed, or reading of reference books under pleasant conditions may be enjoyed on Tuesday and Friday afternoons after 3:00 o'clock. A phone listed with Mrs. Watson, 306-J, will give anyone opportunity to list inquiries regarding plans, life problems, for information also to pass on any information that would be of value for the use of the Center.

The Center wishes to announce an splendid list of bulletins that are free, containing much helpful information on plant life. There will be monthly Garden Notes published with suggestions—what to plant, and what to do

Miss Marjorie DuBose Is Honored At Shower

In honor of Miss Marjorie DuBose, bride-elect of this week, Mrs. I. I. Frazier entertained at bridge and a miscellaneous show Saturday afternoon at her home on Clergy Avenue.

Miss DuBose was presented a shower of gardenias, sweethearts, roses and lilies-of-the-valley from the hostess. Spring flowers were arranged as floral decorations in the home.

Miss Marjorie Torrance was the hostess at a party given by the plant New Zealand smut, to which tomatoes and corn are the borders, here and there. They won't look unattractive and the small amount is little work and great benefit, try it, it's fun. And if you have a porch to screen, quickly plant some pole beans right now—nothing ugly about those fellows.

Prune your shrubs and trees that have stopped blooming. Cut out all dead wood now.
