Thanks to all

SANFORD — More than 450 people stood in line to be fed at the Sanford Rescue Mission on 13th Street yesterday. Mother Blanche Weaver, director of the mission, said.

"We were blessed with lots of food and many volunteers," Weaver said.

She said that more than 100 meals were also packaged up and delivered to those who could not come to the mission in person to eat their Thanksgiving meal.

On Wednesday, about 200 people dined on soup, bread and apples at the Mayor's Souper Supper.

"That's really not an indication of the amount of money we were able to raise," Mayor Bettye Smith said. "A lot of people made contributions, but did not come to eat."

Smith said the money, which will be donated to the Rescue Mission and the Sanford Christian Sharing Center, will not be counted until early next week.

Freeman in stable condition

ORLANDO — Marilyn Freeman, who was critically injured when her live-in boyfriend stabbed her repeatedly with a kitchen knife during an argument on Monday, is now in fair, but stable condition at Florida Hospital-South in Orlando.

Her boyfriend, Daniel Jerome Livingston, remains at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility without bond, charged with attempted murder.

"It looks like she's going to make it," said hospital spokesman Renee Kupkowski. "There isn't a date set for her release from the hospital, but she is doing better."

Freeman was stabbed several times in the face, the chest, the stomach and both arms during an argument that began when Livingston accused her of dating other men. She was in critical, but unstable condition when she was brought into the hospital on Monday afternoon.

City, residents continue to battle drainage problems

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Although Goldsboro residents say city officials have made a soggy effort of correcting their flooding problems, officials say they're doing as much as quickly as they can.

And City Manager Bill Simmons said even after the city spends $12 million to $16 million to address the neighborhood drainage problems during the next decade, occasional flooding may still occur.

"I don't think anybody wants us to tear out whole city blocks to correct flooding problems," said Simmons this morning.

Tuesday's historic 10-inch plus gully-washer left at least 25 families in the city flooded out of their homes for a day or more. Five families were given refuge by the Central Florida Chapter of the American Red Cross. The remainder sought refuge with family and friends. At least a dozen of the flooded homes were in Goldsboro, said Mike Hoening, city fire battalion chief.

—City Manager Bill Simmons

But as Tuesday night's floodwater has begun to recede, residents of this former town say they have had an unwelcome reminder of their long-standing drainage problems in this low-lying area in the vicinity of West 13th Street. Many of the streets and yards become ponds after even a common summer downpour.

Last year, a group of Goldsboro residents asked commissioners to fix the problem. Despite promises, they say, little has been done.

"They should have done something a long time ago," said Benny Joseph, a resident of West Eighth Street. "They made a lot of promises last year, but they haven't done a thing."

Both Mayor Bettye Smith and commissioner Bob Thomas say they believe the city is doing all it can to correct the immediate problems caused by this week's downpour. Simmons said washouts in West 12th Street and other streets have been filled and city crews are waiting for waters to recede in ditches so they can clear plugged drain pipes.

Retailers appear on verge of a good holiday season

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — While some were still rubbing the sleep from their eyes and wishing they had not had quite so much turkey and pumpkin pie yesterday, there were about 30 people waiting outside the Wal Mart in Sanford for a chance to be among the first shoppers of the Christmas season this morning.

Grace Byrd, assistant manager of the store, said she was "surprised" by the crowd. "We didn't expect there'd be so many out there that early," she said. "We figured there'd be a few people when we opened, but seven o'clock is awful early for most folks."

Buoyed by months of steadily rising sales, the retail industry appears on the verge of its best holiday shopping season since 1988.

Several signs pointed to a better Christmas season as retailers awaited today's traditional start — the day after Thanksgiving, when stores and malls are mobbed.

Most important is the fact that "sales have been steadily moving up since last spring," said Daniel Barry, a retail industry analyst with Merrill Lynch & Co.

Surveys, including one released Tuesday by the Conference Board, have shown consumer confidence improving. The business research

Historic Sanford Tour of Homes

They're converts to house from another era

By DEL FREEMAN

SANFORD — Jon and Jami Meeks didn't intend to purchase a historical home, but after they looked around, they became converts.

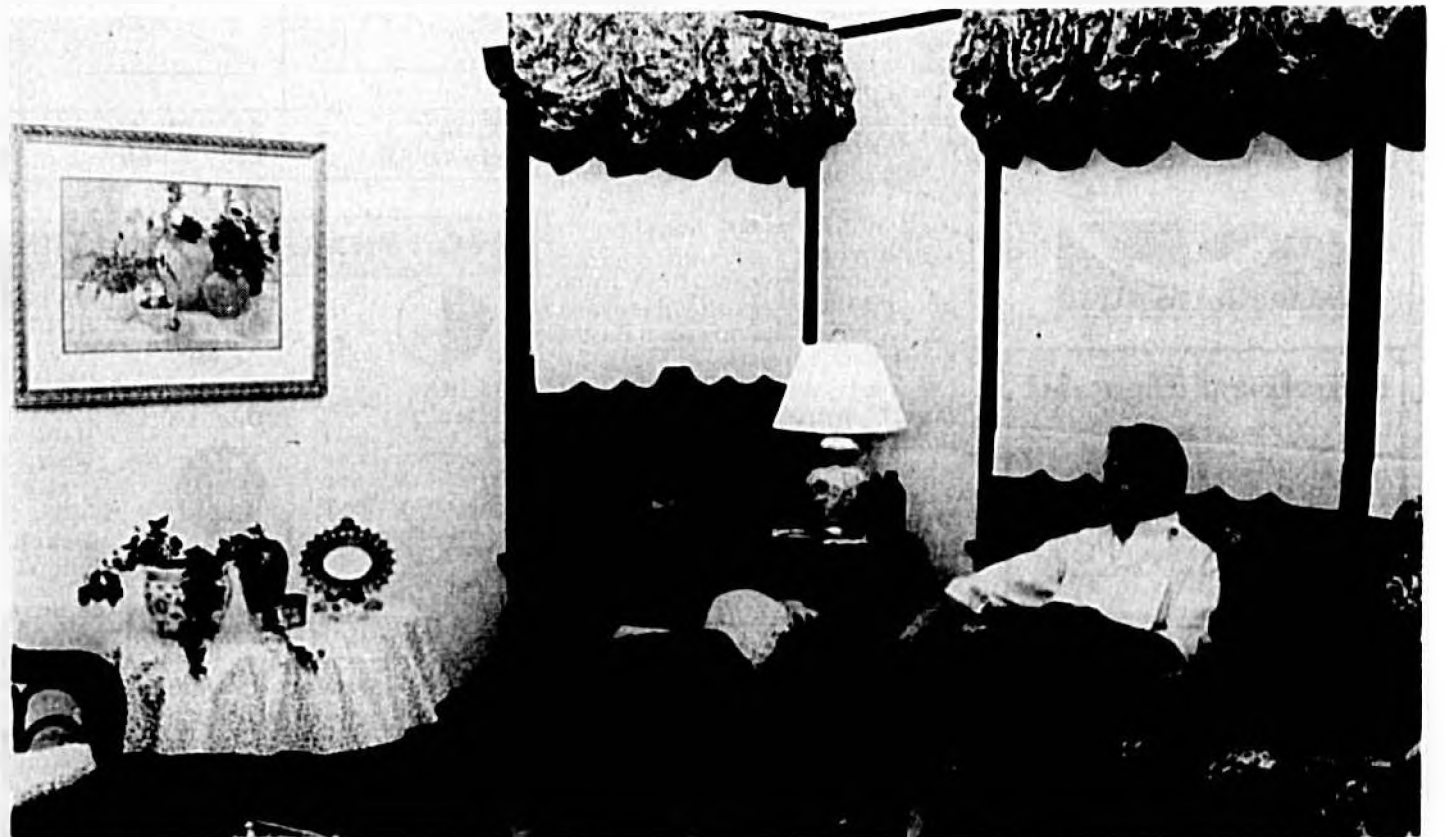

"We looked at three or four in this area on a couple of occasions before we purchased this one," said Jon.

Their home at 621 S. Park Ave. will be featured on the Sanford Historic Trust Tour of Homes Dec. 5 and 6.

The Meekes purchased the home from descendants of the original owners, Harry and Rebecca Stevens, and are only the second owners of the 1913 home. They chose it, they said, because it was in such good repair. The Stevens's daughter, also Rebecca, lived in the home for a number of years and taught school at Sanford High School, and the Meekes bought the home from her.

"She came to visit a couple of weeks ago so we could show her what we had done with the home," said Jami. "She told us they used to close the pocket doors and use the Woman, boy renew affair

BHALIMAR (AP) — A 45-year-old woman who was placed on probation for having sex with a 13-year-old boy has admitted in court that they renewed their affair.

The woman also admitted the renewed affair during a hearing Wednesday on charges she had conspired with the father of the boy's grandparents to circumvent and violate her probation.

Afterwards, Assistant State Attorney David Fleet said he will seek a prison term when Circuit Judge G. Robert Barron sentences Mrs. Mauer on Dec. 9.

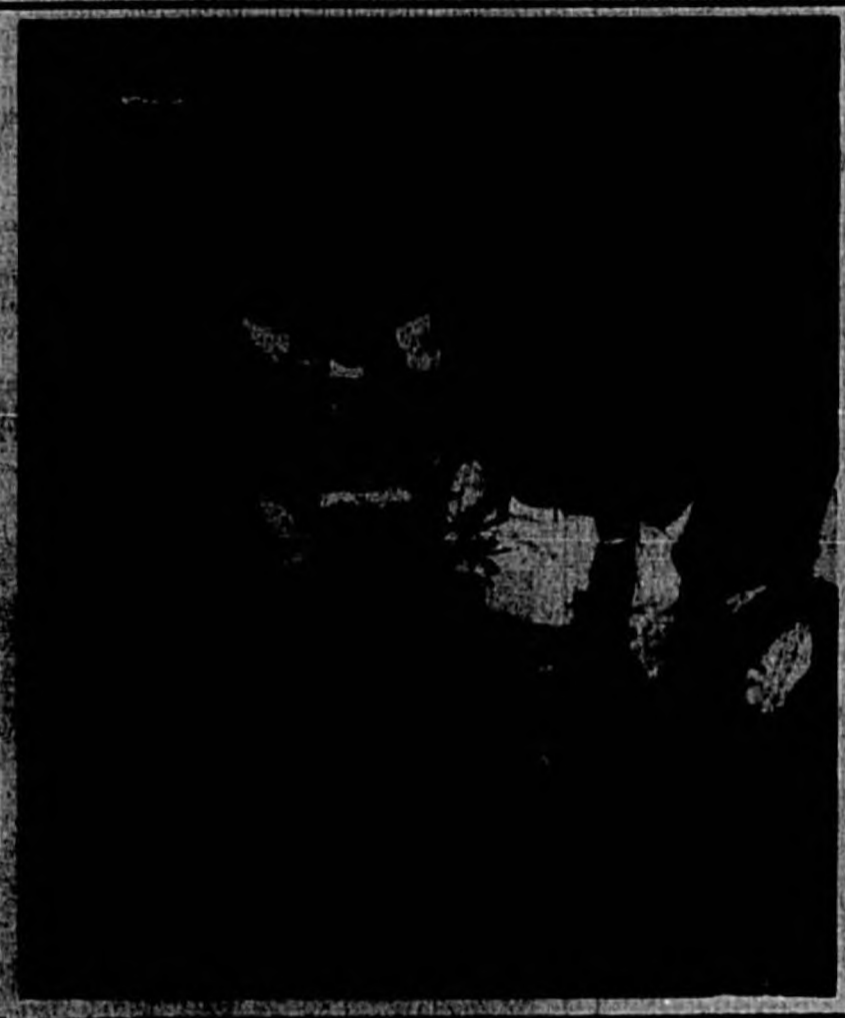

The entire situation is tragic in the sense that this young boy is familiar with something that he most likely is not mature enough to handle," Fleet said.

Mrs. Mauer's husband, Eugene Mauer, declined comment except to say they still are married.

The latest charges were filed after the boy's grandmother sued Mrs. Mauer for filing in his court Aug. 11, according to the younger's statement. Mrs. Mauer has been jailed since that time.

The boy wrote that he had invited the woman for a late-night rendezvous in his bedroom on the granddaddy's house.

"I was going to tell her we were breaking up," the boy wrote.

Air Force man gets life for molesting a child at center

By Associated Press

BHALIMAR — An Air Force sergeant has been sentenced to life in prison for molesting a child at his wife's day care center in nearby Fort Walton Beach.

Circuit Judge G. Robert Barron sentenced Acosta on Wednesday to life for sexual battery on a child and 15 years for committing a lewd and lascivious act.

A jury convicted him Sept. 16. The judge rejected Acosta's plea for mercy.

Although charged with molesting only one girl, Barron permitted jurors to hear evidence linking Acosta above against three other girls cared for by his wife.

In his statement to the judge, Acosta accused Assistant State Attorney David Fleet of introducing ing improper evidence and withholding information that would have been helpful to the defense. Fleet denied the allegations.

Later, Mrs. Acosta said she would stand by her husband of 17 years. "My husband is going to prison for something he didn't do," she said.

The Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services shut down Mrs. Acosta's day care center. She accused the agency of brainwashing children into believing they had been abused and of racism because her husband is Hispanic.

"I brought my daughter here because she wanted to see justice being served, and justice was served," one mother said.

"The doctors recommended that her seeing this and knowing that the bad man can't hurt her anymore will help her recover," she said.

Man runs off road

Lake Mary police arrested Jason A. Bratger, 22, 206 N. Sir Lawrence, Sanford, on Wednesday. Police report seeing him drive off the roadway near 880 W. Lake Mary Boulevard. The car became lodged in the ditch. Officers charged him with driving with a suspended license. A computer check revealed he was wanted on a warrant charging him with failing to appear in court. No other charges were immediately identified.

Cab driver unpaid

Sanford police arrested Petrice Nicholas, 34, #85 Shenandoah Village, Sanford, on Tuesday. He was located at 2100 S. French Avenue. According to the police report, a cab driver reported bringing Nicholas to that location, but said Nicholas left without paying the $10.70 in cab fare. Nicholas was charged with theft.

Cocaine arrest

Sanford police arrested Albert Howard Harris, 35, with no local address, at 7th Street and Pine Ave., on Tuesday following an undercover drug purchase. He was charged with sale and delivery of crack cocaine.

Sting nets arrest

Altamonte Springs police arrested Michael Robert Largent, 20, 100 Slade Drive, Longwood, following a sting operation Tuesday at 420 E. Altamonte Drive. Although details of the arrest were not immediately revealed, Largent was charged with sale and delivery of a controlled substance.

Domestic violence arrests:

David Wayne Neeland, 35, 252 S. C.R. 15, Lake Mary, was arrested by Lake Mary police early Wednesday at his residence, following an altercation with a female. He was charged with battery, domestic violence.

Terry Lynn Manley, 28, 4270 School Street, Sanford, was arrested at his residence by Sheriff's deputies Tuesday. Police said he had been in a fight with his brother. Manley was charged with domestic violence, battery.

Warrant arrest:

Jonnie Earl Beveritt, 35, 1800 Sipes Ave., Sanford, was located by Sheriff's deputies at his residence Tuesday. He was wanted on a warrant charging him with violation of parole on a conviction of sale of cocaine.

Incident reports:

Wanda Harmon, 579 Andrews Road, Sanford, reported $4,000 in clothing and $11,200 in jewelry were taken from her residence Tuesday.

Helen Esptaltler, 489 Sun Lake Circle, #307, near Lake Mary, reported her vehicle parked in the lot near her home, had apparently been burglarized. She told Sheriff's deputies the driver's seat and steering wheel had both been adjusted from their normal positions. Nothing was immediately reported missing.

A large refrigerator trailer, owned by Enterprise Truck Brokers, was reported stolen Tuesday, while parked at 1300 S. French Avenue. Police report the theft probably involved the use of a large truck to pull the trailer.

A VCR and microwave oven were reportedly taken Tuesday from the home of David Sauls, 404 Colonial Way, in Sanford.

A blue golf 3-wheeled vehicle was reported stolen Tuesday, while parked at the rear of the Amtrak building, 600 Persimmon Ave. in Sanford.

Two bikes, valued at $575, were reportedly stolen Tuesday from the home of Joani Williams, 2740 Ridgewood Ave., #51. Police said the thief cut chains which had secured the bikes to the porch.

Vaccine's success draws attention to its failures

By JEFF BORN
Associated Press Writer

GARDNER, Mass. — The parents of 13-year-old Ryan Burns blame his epilepsy and mental retardation on a vaccine that was meant to keep him from harm.

The family is one of thousands with claims against the U.S. government for alleged health damage from the childhood vaccine for pertussis, also known as whooping cough.

Yet the overall story of the vaccine is one of scientific triumph. It is credited with turning whooping cough into a rather exotic disease.

A half century ago, the bacterial ailment, with its prolonged cough, could kill 7,000 people a year in this country. Fewer than 10 have died annually since 1981, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta.

More than 40 states legally mandate the vaccine. About 22 million doses are given each year, usually in a five-shot series.

Yet the vaccine's very success has made the shots less attractive to some parents and doctors.

"For an individual child, the risk is greater from the vaccine than the disease," said Dr. Joanne Halem, medical director of the National Vaccine Information Center in Vienna, Va. The center is run by a parents' group for vaccine victims.

The vaccine introduced in the 1940s contains a dead pertussis cell that fosters antibodies to fight the disease. But it also carries a neurotoxin that can cause problems. They sometimes lead to local swelling, fever, or high-pitched crying.

Some doctors suspect the vaccine brings on neurological damage, seizures and even a potentially fatal allergic reaction in a small number of cases.

Parents, doctors and drug makers reported about 7,300 adverse reactions and 250 deaths after pertussis vaccinations for the 20 months ending July 31. However, the reports do not establish a definite causal link, according to officials at the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

"We have not been able to tie it in with death or even brain damage," said Dr. Walt Orenstein, director of the CDC's Division of Immunization.

Ryan Burns came down with a fever after his first pertussis shot at 3 months old, according to his mother, Donna.

By the time he took his fourth shot around 18 months, he was suffering choking fits, severe diarrhea, and a bleeding rash. He later developed seizures and didn't begin talking until he was 4.

"I had a normal boy almost 13 years ago to the day. Every time we went to the doctor for his physical, he got worse and worse," his mother said.

Mrs. Burns filed her case with the U.S. Claims Court in Washington on Sept. 12, 1990. It was recommended for dismissal, but Mrs. Burns last Friday asked for a formal review before the court.

Her request for compensation asks only enough to guarantee the boy's $39 monthly medical insurance payment and his education through high school.

The U.S. government, fearing that legal costs might drive enough makers from the business to threaten the vaccine's supply, set up formal mechanisms in 1988 to pay for claims for pertussis and several other vaccines. Those injured prior to Oct. 1, 1988, are compensated from an $80 million annual congressional appropriation. Later victims are covered by a pool funded by a tax on the vaccine.

About 3,200 pertussis claims were filed as of Nov. 18, according to the Public Health Service.

Critics and its supporters agree the ultimate solution will be a safer vaccine. Some say a vaccine licensed earlier this year for use in older children represents just such an advance, but government scientists say more research is needed to evaluate its effectiveness in younger children.

Drug companies are quick to point to the good done by the vaccine.

"People forget what it was like before we had these tools of immunization," said Beth Waters, a spokesman for Connaught Laboratories in Swiftwater, Pa. "Babies died." However, parents of victims find little consolation in that perspective.

Man reportedly confessed to his family's slaying, hiding bodies

By The Associated Press

SEATTLE — A man accused of hacking his wife and two children to death, then stashing their bodies in a storage locker for 12 years, admitted the hatchet slayings when he was arrested, court documents allege.

Trial is scheduled to begin Monday for Mark James Bender, charged with three counts of first-degree murder.

Recently filed court documents say Bender told detectives he first killed his 35-year-old wife, Barbara, and then murdered the two boys, Mark, 15, and Brian, 8, at their home in suburban Federal Way in April 1980.

Their bodies weren't discovered until last summer, when two men bought the contents of an abandoned rental storage locker at an auction. Mrs. Bender and the boys originally were believed to have left town in a domestic dispute.

Jury selection won't begin until after the judge rules on a number of pretrial issues.

The 50-year-old used-car salesman was arrested July 25 at his home in Nampa, Idaho.

Pretrial documents quote the as-telling police after his arrest: "I'm not saying I didn't do it. I did do it. I didn't plan it. Did I have an alcohol problem? Yes, a big one."

Bender told police that he was eager to get back to Washington, according to the documents. "What's done is done. I'd just as soon get out of Idaho," the statements say.

Defense attorneys Theresa Olson and Dave Roberson have asked Judge Anne Ellington to suppress Bender's statements. Police should have stopped questioning Bender before he made those remarks because he expressed an interest in seeing an attorney, they contend.

The defense also has entered motions to move the trial out of King County because of pretrial publicity and to prohibit prosecutors from telling jurors that Bender was convicted of attempted robbery in Idaho in 1982.

When Bender was arrested, he was living with his new wife, Anna, and a stepdaughter, Tracy. Both support him and will attend the trial, said Olson.

The locker's contents were auctioned after Anna Bender stopped making rental payments on the storage space without her husband's knowledge.

Keeping culture in the schools

A group of Seminole County citizens is showing a devoted attitude toward art. The Seminole Arts for Education (SAFE) is operating as a fundraising body between the school district and United Arts of Orlando. Funds raised will be used to pay for students to attend cultural activities.

The money will help fund trips to the Florida Symphony Orchestra, the Southern Ballet, the Orlando Opera Company and the Orlando Museum of Art.

The group has already raised $10,000 from Seminole County, $3,000 from the City of Altamonte Springs and $2,000 from various SAFE fundraisers.

The money SAFE has raised has been matched by the United Arts organization.

The organization stepped into the financial gap created last year when the state cut money to school districts across the state. Faced with the loss of funds, Seminole County reduced fundings for field trips to arts presentations and exhibits.

The dedication and initiative of SAFE organizers and members cannot be praised too highly. Symphonies, museums, ballets and operas often represent the best of the arts and the best of civilization. They symbolize the spark of creativity in human beings that has been recognized since cavemen drew pictures on the walls of their abode.

In history, there are too many tales of men and women descending to the moral depths. In the finest art are often examples of them ascending to moral and intellectual heights.

Those examples should be preserved and showed to the next generation. Organizers and members of SAFE have undertaken a noble and exemplary task. They should be thanked.

Reporting child abuse

During the trial of George Wayne Clatt, the former associate pastor of Lake Brantley United Brethren Church, Judge Alan Dickey made a remark that should be taken to heart by all citizens.

At a previous church, another girl had made an accusation of molestation against Clatt. She made it to church officials who conducted their own investigation, but did not report it to authorities.

What those church officials did, Judge Dickey noted, was break the law. When one of the church officials who knew about the accusation took the stand in the Clatt trial, Judge Dickey noted the statute of limitations had gone into effect or the witness might need a lawyer to advise him against self-incrimination.

When the accusation was made, those officials had not only a moral obligation but a legal obligation to report it to the state.

Those obligations are spelled out in Florida law 415.504. It basically states that any person that knows or has reasonable cause to suspect a child is abused or neglected shall report the matter to the Department of Health and Rehabilitation Services.

The reason for the law is clear. The number of child abuse cases, both physical and sexual, in our society is increasing, yet at one time this was a crime cloaked in shadows. The law is a statement by society that such abuse is not a private matter, it is a public crime and must be reported.

If those church officials in Volusia County had obeyed the law, a Seminole County girl may have been spared needless mental and emotional suffering.

This is a sound and reasonable law, a valid response to a grievous problem in society. It is a law that needs to be obeyed.

Non-partisan through and through

"Politics," wrote Robert Louis Stevenson, "is perhaps the only profession for which no preparation is (thought necessary)." He was wrong. Punditry is another. The Curmudgeon knows this because so many of his critics know how to do it. They advise me all the time - especially when I write about politics.

Oh, how they advise me. Like the lady from Pennsylvania who was piqued by some of the stuff I wrote about George Bush and suggested I sleep on my words before I print them. Or the man from Maryland who characterized my treatment of Bush as arrogant. Or the many writers who demanded to know my military record after I listed the hypocrisies in Republican ranks who were hammering Clinton for dodging the draft but managed to avoid it themselves.

Or Mr. RW, also from Pennsylvania, who wrote these words:

"Guys like Dan Rafter, Martin Schram, Joseph Spear, Mike Royko, Robert Wagman, Ben Wattenberg, Mike Kinaley, Anthony Lewis, Chris Matthews, Hodding Carter III, Jack Anderson, Juan Williams, William Pfaff, and others, as real men, couldn't carry George Bush's jogging shorts or Dan Quayle's golf clubs!"

The Curmudgeon has concluded from this and other evidence that some of you think he is a partisan critic, and so he has decided to entertain a few inquiries about his politics:

Dear Curmudgeon: When has a Republican ever been complimented in your column? When has a Democrat been bashed? - DB from Blytheville, Ark.

Dear DB: Let me say, for the record, that I don't give a tinker's damn about any political party's agenda. I am a middle-of-the-road populist and a registered Independent who has voted through the years for both Republicans and Democrats, and once I think for a Libertarian. My only interest is the public interest, and that is why I came down so hard on George Bush.

I do not believe that nasty political campaigns are in the public interest. It offends me when a candidate attempts to divert our attention from issues that really matter with vile attacks on the honor and character of a challenger. It especially offends me when the president of the United States, who ought to be above it, does it and then assumes that we will just stuff it down the memory hole afterward.

My heated commentary had much more to do with outrage at George Bush's antics than with an affinity for Bill Clinton.

Dear Curmudgeon: What was your military record? - RW of Pennsylvania (again).

Dear RW: Six years (1963-1969) of honorable service in the United States Army - two active, four reserve. And that's the last time I intend to answer this question.

Dear Curmudgeon: Do you intend to criticize Clinton like you did Bush? - Heather in Hartford Dear HNH: He's already in hot water on about a half dozen issues, but he deserves the same honeymoon as his predecessor. Keep reading the Curmudgeon and give him a critique about June.

Oh, how they advise me.

Ethics rules worry recruiters

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. - President-elect Bill Clinton has promised that his administration will be filled only by the most highly qualified people and they will be governed by the strictest ethics code ever. But many Washington observers and some in Clinton's transition team worry that these two promises pose a potential conflict.

Clinton has announced very strict guidelines for his transition staff. Under the rules spelled out here by transition head Warren Christopher, any paid transition staffer will be prohibited for six months after the transition from doing any business with an agency that he or she was involved with in the transition. In addition, they will be prohibited from using any knowledge obtained in the transition for personal gain or from taking part in any transition matter in which their families, employers or businesses, might have a direct interest.

The Clinton "pre-transition" staff spent much of the autumn gathering information on past presidential transitions and preparing the structure for the transition effort. They spent considerable time studying the massive 1980 transition team put together by Ronald Reagan. While the Clinton team says it has come to appreciate how smoothly the Reagan 1980 transition ran, the rules announced by Christopher are a result of abuses that were said to have occurred during and after that transition.

The Reagan transition team in 1980 numbered almost a thousand people. In numerous cases, the transition's representative to a particular agency or government office came from a law firm or interest group having business before that agency. Not only did the individual involved make recommendations for who should be appointed to top jobs, but completely briefed agency career employees about problems and plans for the agency. In many cases, these briefings were passed along to employers and were immediately used by clients who had business with the agencies.

The Clinton transition guidelines were sharply debated internally before they were adopted. There was a concern that in the changeover of specialized agencies, those involved will have to have a current active knowledge of the agency. Few such people will want to get involved in the transition if it means they will be precluded from earning a living for some period after the transition. What really worries some of the Clinton transition with past federal experience is that the ethics regulations will deter those who are already at the top of lists of potential appointees.

Clinton is determined to close the government-business revolving door, where someone from the private sector joins the federal government for some period, leaves and then takes up business with the same agency. Current rules prohibit a former federal employee from lobbying his or her former agency for six months. One potential Clinton rule being debated would extend the period to as many as five years.

That rule would likely make it difficult, if not impossible, to recruit the best people for specialized agencies or technical people for other agencies.

"I am concerned," one Clinton personnel recruiter said, "especially in the situations where we have to find people with very specific experience and expertise that can only be obtained by working with an agency or in an industry. What worries me is that if a person is precluded from any contact with an agency he works for in the Clinton administration, we will render him unemployable after he leaves government."

"Take an agency like the Federal Communications Commission. For most of the top-level appointments, especially within its bureaus, you have to have people with significant industry or communications experience. What the guidelines may end up saying is that the person will be effectively prevented from returning to his or her profession after leaving government."

One former high-level appointee who left the General Services Administration has withdrawn his name from consideration. He now heads a consulting business that advises clients on how to deal with the GSA. He is the top choice of Capitol Hill Democrats who want to bring reform to the agency. He fears he could not resume his consulting business for some substantial period after leaving government service.

"This was exactly the kind of person we are looking for - experienced, very knowledgeable and already primed to bring about change," said the Clinton personnel source. "But he has opted out, and I'm afraid this is going to be repeated often if the regulations are too strict. We need to stop revolving door abuses, but we also need to attract people who will be assured they have a life after government."

Some in Clinton's transition team worry that these two promises pose a potential conflict.

Kuwaitis are at a loss without Bush

KUWAIT CITY, Kuwait - If this small country had been an American county, it would have been a diehard Bush district during the presidential election. Kuwaitis believe Bush walks on water.

In fact, though their recent October election for the 50-member National Assembly was historic and precedent-setting, many Kuwaitis followed the American election more closely than their own.

Following the Desert Storm victory in March 1991, and the liberation of Kuwait, the U.S. Embassy was so flooded with requests for pictures of President Bush that they eventually distributed thousands of them. These have become the "centerpieces" of Bush "shrines" in many Kuwaiti homes - a portrait in red, white and blue, occupying the center wall of the most important room, sometimes with candles around it or a spotlight trained on it.

Realizing that Bush had been prodded and pushed during the campaign about Kuwait's lack of democracy, many were determined to make reinstatement of the National Assembly a harbinger of their nascent democracy, and a reprieve to the rest of the world.

It was also a chance to deliver a kind of October surprise to the embattled president - something he could point to with accomplishment in the first week of October.

Of the 50 men elected to the Kuwaiti National Assembly, 37 could be described as "opposition" candidates. And these men are pledging to enfranchise Kuwaiti women within the next two years. It's an effort to emulate things American, right down to a proliferation of American-based fast-food outlets and their Kuwaiti imitations.

But despite their best efforts to support Bush, right down to the showcasting free and fair Kuwaiti elections, the president lost. And when their arch-enemy Saddam Hussein shot off his gun in Baghdad to celebrate, there was numbness and fear. Could they count on Clinton, who is the unknown. They're heartened by his remarks about Gulf security, but is he willing to go to war?

Our associate Dale Van Atta learned that behind the scenes what is transpiring is a quiet campaign to pressure Bush, in his final days in office, to attend to a matter left over from the Desert Storm victory: the return of all Kuwaiti prisoners of war from Iraq. This was promised in the peace accords by Iraqi officials, but has not been complied with.

There have been popular demonstrations by relatives of the missing over the last year, and school children are encouraged to draw pictures evidencing their concern for the unaccounted - which are subtly featured in the Kuwait International Hotel, right across from the U.S. Embassy. One private group distributes a commercially polished and moving videotape of the plight of the Kuwaiti POWs.

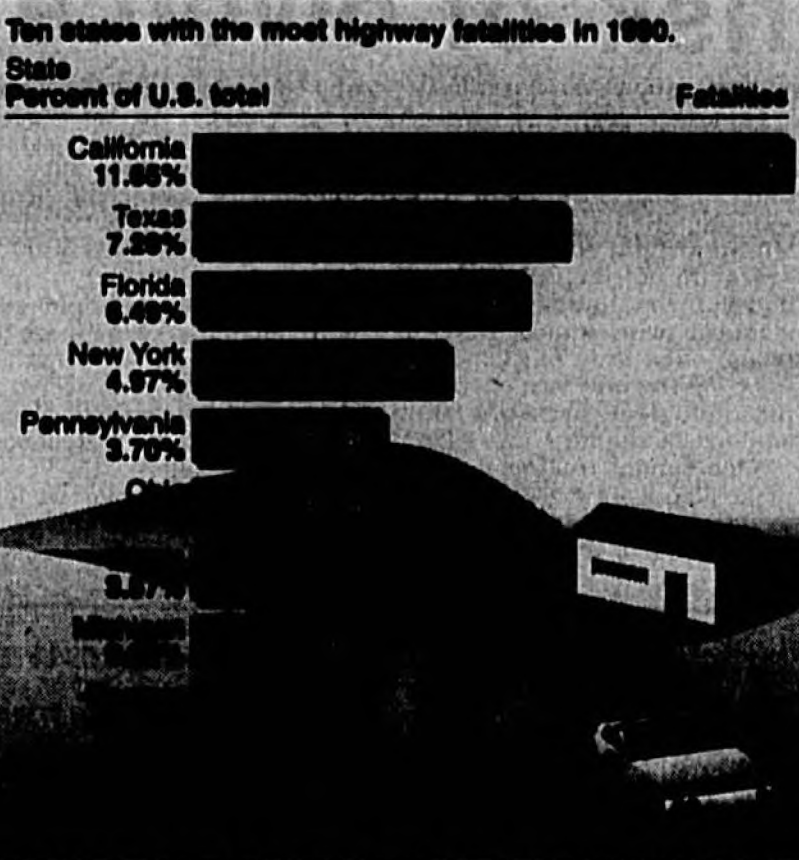

The Iraqis snatched thousands of Kuwaitis and took them to Iraqi prisons during the seven months of their occupation of Kuwait. The prisoners were routinely abused, and some arbitrarily executed. U.S. intelligence services estimate there are still several hundred secretly held throughout Iraq.

Until now, the United States and the United Nations have concentrated diplomatic and military pressure on compliance with the more pressing part of the accords - the Iraqi promise to destroy weapons of mass destruction.

But some Kuwait officials are pleading with Bush to expend the capital, even including military threats if necessary, on freeing their remaining POWs. They argue now that Bush has nothing to lose by strong-arming Saddam before the inauguration.

Kuwaitis believe Bush walks on water.

California had the most highway fatalities in 1990 — over 5,000, which accounted for well over 10 percent of the nation's total.

Charges

Olvera left the scene and was stopped by a Lake County deputy, according to FHP reports. In addition to the DUI/maulage charge, he is also charged with leaving the scene of an accident with a fatality.

He was taken to the Lake County jail, but was out on bail Thursday, according to reports at the jail.

Olvera was elected to the Lake Mary City Council in 1979 and won re-election two years later. He resigned on October, 1992 to run for mayor but was defeated.

Railroad

"I strongly support the development of high-speed rail because we need to ensure that we possess a transportation system that boosts American productivity and international competitiveness," Clinton said.

Clinton also may act to give Amtrak, the nation's passenger railroad system, a measure of the financial stability it long has sought.

Howard Robertson, head of public relations for Amtrak, commented Wednesday, "It's questionable at this time if Sanford's facilities could be helped."

He added, "We hope Mr. Clinton will give us some back-up and provide money for improvement of Amtrak, but until we see what the budget will allow, and what he might do with the money, we cannot make any suppositions."

Amtrak receives limited government subsidies. It nearly lost them altogether in the early years of the Reagan administration. The Bush administration supported subsidies but pushed Amtrak to become self-sufficient as quickly as possible.

Robertson said, "We still intend to be self-sufficient, and hope to do that by possibly 1993."

Clinton takes a different approach. "All industrial nations subsidize passenger rail," he said during the campaign. "Passenger rail service creates jobs, conserves energy and provides an opportunity to avoid airport expansion."

High-speed and passenger rail has a growing constituency in the United States as enthusiasm about super trains expands overseas. Many governors support high-speed rail links between major cities. And there is a large cheering section on Capitol Hill.

"I'm very optimistic about high-speed rail being a successful program in the Clinton administration," said Joseph Vranich, author of the book "Super Trains" and a leading advocate of introducing high-

 "I have checked with the city manager, the public works director and even the fire department and they assure all that can be done is being done," said Smith. "Fortunately, we have a stormwater plan that will help in the future."

"It's ancient history, but it's fact that that this part of the city has been neglected for years," said Thomas. "Hopefully, things will turn around. The city's attitude, I think is positive."

Simmons said the drainage improvement plan for Goldsboro will help, but not fully correct, the flooding problems. Because the community is old and was built on small lots close to ditches, there is little room to install the kind of culverts and other drainage improvements needed to meet minimum standards of the St. Johns River Water Management District, said Simmons.

The water district normally requires drainage systems to be designed to deal with the amount of water that can be expected once every 25 years throughout a 24-hour period.

Because of the construction restrictions, Simmons said the water district granted the city a waiver, allowing it to design for the amount of rain that can be expected to fall once every 25 years, but during a six-hour span.

"Once we're all completed with everything we want to do in 10 years or so, we'll be able to handle a six-inch (storm) event pretty well, but if we get eight or 10 inches, we're still going to have flooding," said Simmons. "It will be better, but there'll still be some flooding."

In the mean time, Simmons said the city is clearing along Mill Creek to allow for faster drainage flow to Lake Monroe. Simmons said the clearing, which has shown signs of easing the problem, has been hampered by the lack of access to the canal.

"We're trying to make a difference," he said.

 kitchen stove in the mornings, and then close off that side at noon and use the fireplace to heat the other side."

The spacious home with its pocket doors between foyer, formal parlor and "back" parlor which the Meekas have made into a sun room, easily accommodated such heating arrangements in an era before central heat was a fixture.

Jon and Jami say their former home was contemporary and they literally moved into their historic home with no furniture that suited the home. They have combed antique stores, auctions and estate sales and, with the help of a decorator friend, have almost completely furnished the home to their taste in the two years since their purchase.

Jon has bricked in a courtyard between the home and a two-story garage with servants quarters upstairs and they have laid out a pleasant garden area which has been fenced in.

Stepping onto the verandah-porch which fronts the Meekas home is much like stepping back into the past, which is just the effect they sought. Original light fixtures in many of the rooms have been combined with effective window treatments and pieces from the past, such as the large, black oscillating fan, and pink and green wicker combined with upholstered pieces in the sun room. Original beveled glass in the large windows assures a flood of sunlight and looks out onto the completed courtyard and foliage.

Perhaps most striking is the wide, three-step plateau leading to the stairway in the foyer, which gives way to the upstairs bedrooms. A smaller, but identical plateau was added from the kitchen area shortly after the home was built by Mrs. Stevens, who grew weary of traveling from kitchen through back and formal parlors and the foyer in order to reach the upstairs.

The Meekas have converted one upstairs bedroom to a study which they eventually plan to move to the third floor attic area, and have furnished the room with old trunks they purchased from Rebecca Stevens, and a framed certificate which belonged to her brother, Dr. Ralph Stevens, which they found in one of the trunks.

A guest bedroom contains a hand-carved bed made by Jami's grandfather, who was in the furniture business in New York and Connecticut. Her grandfather carved his name in the piece, unlike the commercial player piano downstairs, (player roll removed), which reveals his business name: "Lawton — New York" on the inside cover of the keyboard.

A second guest room, the childhood bedroom of Rebecca, houses an antique baby carriage marked with the initials of her brother's child.

Upstairs, the home features five real and one mock transom windows over each of the rooms, and a massive master bedroom which leads onto a sleeping porch, another late addition. The shutter-type windows which run along the sleeping porch have screens that part and open inward and windows that roll out, overlook the garden area and invite a cross-breeze. The Meekas have designated the room an exercise area, and intend to make good use of the home's third set of bathroom facilities which back up to the main upstairs bathroom.

"That's also nice because guests can use the main upstairs bathroom and we have access to this one leading directly from our bedroom," said Jami. No breeze is necessary, however, despite the gracious supply of windows, as the original ceiling fan does that nicely. Installed in the attic area, the fan is covered by long slats that open to draw air when turned on.

The Meekas have stayed with the original plumbing wherever they could, and are refinishing a claw-foot tub for the upstairs main bathroom. A downstairs bathroom leads off the kitchen, with a like space adjacent for a walk-in pantry.

"The thing that struck us about the home was that none of the interior wood or trim had ever been painted," said Jon. They have refinished some of that wood, particularly in the flooring, but only to bring it back to its original luster. Area rugs adorn some areas but the Meekas lean toward natural flooring in wide expanses throughout the home. Like many older homes, the house features a stained glass window at the foot of the stairway, and a hatrack with low drawers, another of her grandfather's pieces, graces the foyer area.

The Meekas have done all the work themselves, and say they heated a long time at first to get a feel for the house. "It definitely has its own personality," Jami said.

They agree that converting a historic home quickly becomes a passion. "It's not quite an obsession," said Jon. "You just have to take it one room at a time." The Meekas both work, and say care of the home requires a good bit of time, but they have no regrets.

"After seeing what you get in a new home compared to this one, I wouldn't hesitate to buy another historic home if we had to leave this one," said Jami.

They hope, however, never to have to leave their historic Park Avenue house, and are directing all their energies into preserving its past heritage, and looking forward to sharing it with participants in the home tour in December.

 organization also found U.S. households will increase their spending on Christmas gifts to an average of $409 from $377 last year.

Lindy Lovett of Lake Mary struggled with nearly a dozen large bags as she stepped toward the parking lot at J.C. Penney's in Sanford. She said she had already spent about $375 on gifts for her family and she still had several more names on her list.

"I guess I'll spend another $100 or $200 more before it's all said and done," she said. She said that while she looked for bargains, price was not a barrier at Christmas.

"I'm cheap the rest of the year," she said. "I can afford to get some nice things at Christmas."

Others were looking for better prices on their first official day of shopping.

Debbie Weigert of Sanford was among those early morning shoppers at Wal Mart.

"I just wanted to beat the crowd and get a good start at the good buys," she said. "I think I got some good deals."

With sales falling better, retailers are generally optimistic, according to The Taubman Co., a big shopping center developer and manager that surveyed 50 large retailers across the country.

"I think we'll do well this season if the morning is an indication," Byrd said.

At the Sanford Kmart store, manager Frances Schembri said that there were quite a few people waiting to get in the door when the store opened this morning.

"And they are making a lot of large purchases," she said. "They are buying televisions, answering machines and phones. They are really spending their money so we're really optimistic for this season."

However, consultant Walter Loeb said, "The retailer remains wary." After being burned by three straight disappointing Christmas seasons, they've learned a conservative approach is the safest.

Loeb predicted an industry-wide increase of between 6 percent and 6.5 percent. Merrill Lynch's Barry noted that Christmas 1991 was so bad, any improvement is going to look good.

Last year, many retailers reported either minimal increases in sales or that sales had fallen.

Retailers generally expect this to be a "late" Christmas, with most sales coming in the final 10 days of the season. Over the past decade, with more women in the workforce, consumers have generally put off their shopping until the last minute.

If the season gets a slow start or sales hit a particularly slow period — which they often do in the first week or so of December — nervous retailers may begin marking down prices. But for the most part, the "sale" signs that shoppers see will be part of discounts planned long before the start of the season.

Like last Christmas, the season is likely to be fragmented, with some parts of the country and some retailers doing better than others.

Diane Swonk, an economist with First National Bank of Chicago, has forecast a 10.5 percent increase in sales in the Midwest. But retailers in Southern California are likely to struggle.

Study suggests genes influence risk of divorce

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — Genes may play a substantial role in the risk of divorce, apparently in large part by influencing personality, a new study suggests.

A survey of 1,516 sets of twins found that identical twins, who are more alike genetically than are fraternal twins, were also more alike in their rate of divorce.

The genetic effect would not come from any single "divorce gene," nor would it doom people to divorce, said study co-author David Lykken.

Environmental factors like cultural influences would still play a big role in divorce risk, the researchers said.

Lykken and Matt McGue, psychology professors at the University of Minnesota, present their study in the November issue of the journal Psychological Science. McGue said another research team has found similar results in another study of American twins.

In interviews, some scientists agreed with the conclusion of Lykken and McGue's study, but others said the identical twins' similarity may have resulted from their growing up together. Lykken said other studies have shown that identical twins reared apart are just as similar on many measures as are those who grew up together.

The study involved 722 pairs of identical twins and 794 pairs of same-sex fraternal twins, ages 34 to 53. They answered a questionnaire in 1989 about marriage and divorce. About one-fifth of the participants had been divorced.

If genes influence divorce risk, researchers said, identical twins should show more similarity in divorce history because they are identical genetically. Fraternal twins share only half their genes on average.

Researchers asked: If one twin in a pair had been divorced, what was the likelihood that the second twin had been divorced too? The answer was 45 percent for identical twins and 30 percent for fraternal twins.

The study "makes perfect sense," although the strength of the genetic influence vs. that of environment is unclear, said psychologist Mavis Hetherington of the University of Virginia.

She also said that, although the study contributes to understanding divorce, she could not think of a practical way to use the information in preventing divorces.

Richard Rose, a behavioral geneticist at Indiana University in Bloomington, said a large Finnish study in 1975 found no difference in divorce between identical and fraternal twins.

That may mean the Minnesota study does not apply universally, although the Finnish divorce rate was low in 1975 and another twin study there now might yield results like those from Minnesota, he said.

Rose said other research has consistently found identical twins to be more alike in behavior, life choices and life outcomes than fraternal twins.

The new evidence of a genetic influence in divorce is "neither surprising nor disturbing," he said.

But Neil Kalter, a University of Michigan psychologist, said genes are not the only explanation for the findings, because identical twins, unlike fraternal twins, often grow up expecting to be similar and face enormous psychological pressure from adults to be similar.

Such similar treatment might make identical twins more likely to marry at similar ages, by affecting their dating behavior and educational attainment, said University of Wisconsin sociologist Larry Bumpass. If so, they would be more alike on a known risk factor for divorce, because people who marry young are more likely to get divorced, he said.

In addition, it would mean both identical twins had been married for similar lengths of time when they answered the study questionnaire, giving them a more equal likelihood of divorce, he said.

Still, Bumpass said he found the idea of a genetic influence to be plausible.

Glut of Christmas trees hurts growers

By DAVID SHARP
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Maine — A glut of Christmas trees, more competition and the popularity of artificial trees have industry insiders worried that this may be a tough holiday season for growers and sellers.

"There aren't enough people for all the trees," said Albert Gondeck, executive director of the Maine Christmas Tree Growers Association, which represents 250 growers.

Christmas tree growers are expected to harvest about 850,000 trees across northern New England this season — 500,000 in Vermont, 100,000 in New Hampshire and 250,000 in Maine.

The root of this season's tree glut dates back to the early 1980s, when many growers began planting more and more trees.

Now there's a surplus nationwide, particularly in the Northwest and Midwest, said Marshall Patmos, a Christmas tree specialist with the University of New Hampshire cooperative extension service.

The popularity of artificial Christmas trees adds to the growers' woes. Nationwide, 46 percent of homes that display a tree use an artificial one, Patmos said.

Because of the glut, some live trees are starting to appear in the Boston and northern New England markets at ultra-cheap prices — $5 apiece, Patmos said.

In northern New England, Christmas trees typically cost $18 to $30.

The sour economy has also prompted more people to sell trees on the side — but without enough knowledge to do it profitably, others say.

Chuck Masalin, owner of the Sunrise Christmas Tree Farm in Lincolnville, said he warns first-time retailers to be cautious when buying their stocks.

"There are always the optimists," Masalin said. "If you've been in business for a while, then you have to be doing something right. But the person who says, 'I'm going to make a killing this year,' I just don't think that's true."

To beat the doldrums, some growers are turning to new markets or marketing techniques.

Growers in Tennessee are thinking about expanding their market farther south — south of the border, said Jerry Blankenship, agriculture marketing specialist with the Tennessee Department of Agriculture.

"We have talked about shipping some trees to Mexico," he said. "It's just in the planning stages."

Diane Holmes in Kennebunk, Maine, like many choose-and-cut operators, is keeping her business close to home, but transforming it from a mundane tree farm into a holiday experience.

She invites customers inside the house to warm up in front of a wood stove, and offers them hot cider, carols, wreath-making and other seasonal crafts.

Williams admits suicide try

ORLANDO — Orlando Magic forward Brian Williams, who is suffering from clinical depression, said he attempted suicide last month by taking an overdose of sleeping pills.

Williams, removed from the Magic's active roster indefinitely Monday because of his condition, blamed the suicide attempt on his depression. He said he didn't know how many pills he took but that he didn't need hospital treatment.

"The pills weren't strong enough," to cause death, Williams told The Orlando Sentinel in a telephone interview from his home. "But I was pretty drugged up for the next day or so."

AROUND THE STATE

Rice charged with assault

MIAMI — Police were investigating a complaint Thursday that Miami Heat star Glen Rice hit a man in the face with a beer bottle in a pre-dawn incident in a topless bar.

Angel Estevez, 28, who required 10 stitches below his right eye, told police he was sitting across from Rice at the Lipstik bar at about 4:30 a.m. when the player began "looking at him with a bad face."

"He doesn't know why he was hit," said Metro-Dade police spokesman George Reyes. "It apparently came for no reason."

Through his attorney, Rice denied being involved in any altercation.

Huizenga added to lawsuit

ST. PETERSBURG — Florida Marlins owner Wayne Huizenga is accused of working "behind the scenes" to help keep the Giants in San Francisco and out of Florida, a lawsuit claims.

An amended suit filed Wednesday added Huizenga as a defendant to a suit against San Francisco officials. It charges Huizenga, who reportedly said he supported the Giants' move to the Tampa Bay area, "actively worked behind the scenes to foster support for the San Francisco Group ... notwithstanding public stances, promises and statements directly to the contrary."

There was no answer at the Marlins' offices or at a team spokesman's home Thursday.

Huizenga is the first baseball owner directly sued for monetary damages by the city of St. Petersburg and the Giants of Tampa Bay, the investment group that sought to buy and move the Giants.

AROUND THE REGION

Rapp 'returning' to Miami

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — The last time Pat Rapp visited Miami, he was 10 years old and vacationing with his family. His next visit to Dade County is likely to be a much longer one.

Rapp, a former University of Southern Mississippi pitcher, was taken from the San Francisco Giants organization by the Florida Marlins as the 10th player taken in the Major League Baseball expansion draft.

"It was really flattering to me," Rapp told the Hattiesburg (Miss.) American in an interview from the Dominican Republic where he is playing winter ball. "I'm really happy about the whole situation, but it really surprised me."

Aztecs prepare for Miami

SAN DIEGO — Underachieving San Diego State, picked to win the Western Athletic Conference but left without a bowl game when it failed to do so, gets the next best thing when it closes its season Saturday against No. 1 Miami.

The Aztecs are coming off a 45-41 loss to Fresno State that denied them the WAC title. Additionally, Marshall Faulk, the leading rusher in major college football, sprained his right knee and was held to 21 yards and one touchdown.

Faulk didn't practice until Thursday and coach Al Luginbill said he won't decide until pre-game warmups whether the sophomore star will play. Faulk said he should be able to play.

Toon to call it a career

NEW YORK — Al Toon, second in New York Jets history in pass receptions and third in yardage, is retiring from professional football.

A Jets spokesman told The Associated Press that the 29-year-old Toon, who sustained the fifth concussion of his NFL career two weeks ago against Denver, will officially announce his retirement today at a news conference. He had 31 receptions for 311 yards and two touchdowns this season and 517 receptions for 6,605 yards and 31 touchdowns during his eight-year career.

Gliders seek members to make run at nationals

From Staff Reports

ORLANDO — Now it's time for nationals.

While the Florida High School Activities Association-sanctioned high school cross country season ended last week with the FHSAA state championship meets, there are still other races to be run.

This Saturday, for example, the University of Central Florida will be the site of the Florida Regional Cross Country Championships. Organized by the Florida Athletics Congress Junior Olympic Program, this meet will qualify runners for the TAC/USA Junior Olympics National Cross Country Championships.

Locally, Lake Mary High School coach Mike Gibson, Lake Brantley coach Charley Harris and Coach Wise of the Central Florida Gliders are attempting to put together a group of runners to compete under the Gliders' banner.

Running as an individual, an entrant would have to finish in the top 20 to qualify for the national meet whereas each team that qualifies for the national championship meet may bring eight runners, regardless of their individual finish at the regional level.

The Central Florida Gliders will attempt to qualify two teams of eight in each of four divisions: Young Men, Young Women, Intermediate Boys and Intermediate Girls. Runners born in 1974 and 1975 will run in the Young Men and Women divisions while those born in 1976 and 1977 will compete in the intermediate classes.

Each of these four divisions will run 5,000-meter races (approximately 3.1 miles) on Saturday. There will also be a 4,000-meter event for the Youth Class (1978-1979) at 10 a.m. and 3,000-meter runs for the Midget (1980-1981) and Bantam (1982 and later) classes beginning at 11 a.m.

Medals will be awarded to the top 15 finishers in each age group at the regional meet.

Registration for Saturday's races is $5 plus a $10 late fee for anyone who registers at the site. To run in Saturday's races, an entrant must be registered with The Athletic Congress (TAC), which is another $8. Competitors should bring copies of their birth certificate on Saturday morning.

There are additional expenses should a runner qualify for the national meet. Members of the Central Florida Gliders will be asked to make a $60 payment to cover travel costs and there is a $6 registration fee for the national race. Both fees will be due this Saturday.

The national meet will be conducted at the Spring Hill College Golf Course in Mobile, Alabama, on Saturday, Dec. 12.

For additional information concerning the regional race or joining the Central Florida Gliders, contact Gibson (333-2370), Harris (321-0442) or Wise (682-1368).

Lyman tops year with Rotary win

By Bill Kerns Herald Correspondent

LONGWOOD — After a season of surprising success, this was the crowning affirmation of Lyman High School's pigskin re-emergence.

On Thursday morning, the Lyman Greyhounds beat Freedom High School Patriots of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, 22-6 in the 19th annual Rotary Bowl as quarterback Todd Cleveland ran for two touchdowns while throwing another.

The bowl victory seals a remarkable 7-4 season for the Greyhounds.

Lyman, which had won just three games the previous two years, won their first two games of the season under first-year coach Larry Baker. After losing their next three, Lyman proved its early success was no fluke by winning its next four before dropping a tough game to Lake Brantley last Friday.

"It was a great way to finish out the season," said Baker, who was named the Sanford Herald Coach of the Year on Thursday. "The season has sort of been like a roller coaster. Thank goodness we got the opportunity to relieve ourselves after going down again with Lake Brantley."

"I'm just as proud as I can be of the character of these kids. I have three kids of my own, but those kids on my team are my sons, they're part of my family. We've had to mold together through some difficult times, and we did that."

Seniors Cleveland and Bobby Washington, who form Lyman's "dynamic duo," came through once again. Cleveland, named Lyman's offensive player of the game, ran for 91 yards and threw for 78 on 6-of-8 passing. Washington, the Sanford Herald Player of the Year, contributed 86 yards on 18 carries and a 19-yard pass to Cleveland.

"All the credit goes to the offensive line," said Washington. "If it wasn't for them, we couldn't have done what we did. I came out (of high school) with my best year overall and I'm glad we finished like we did. I'm happy for the team and the seniors."

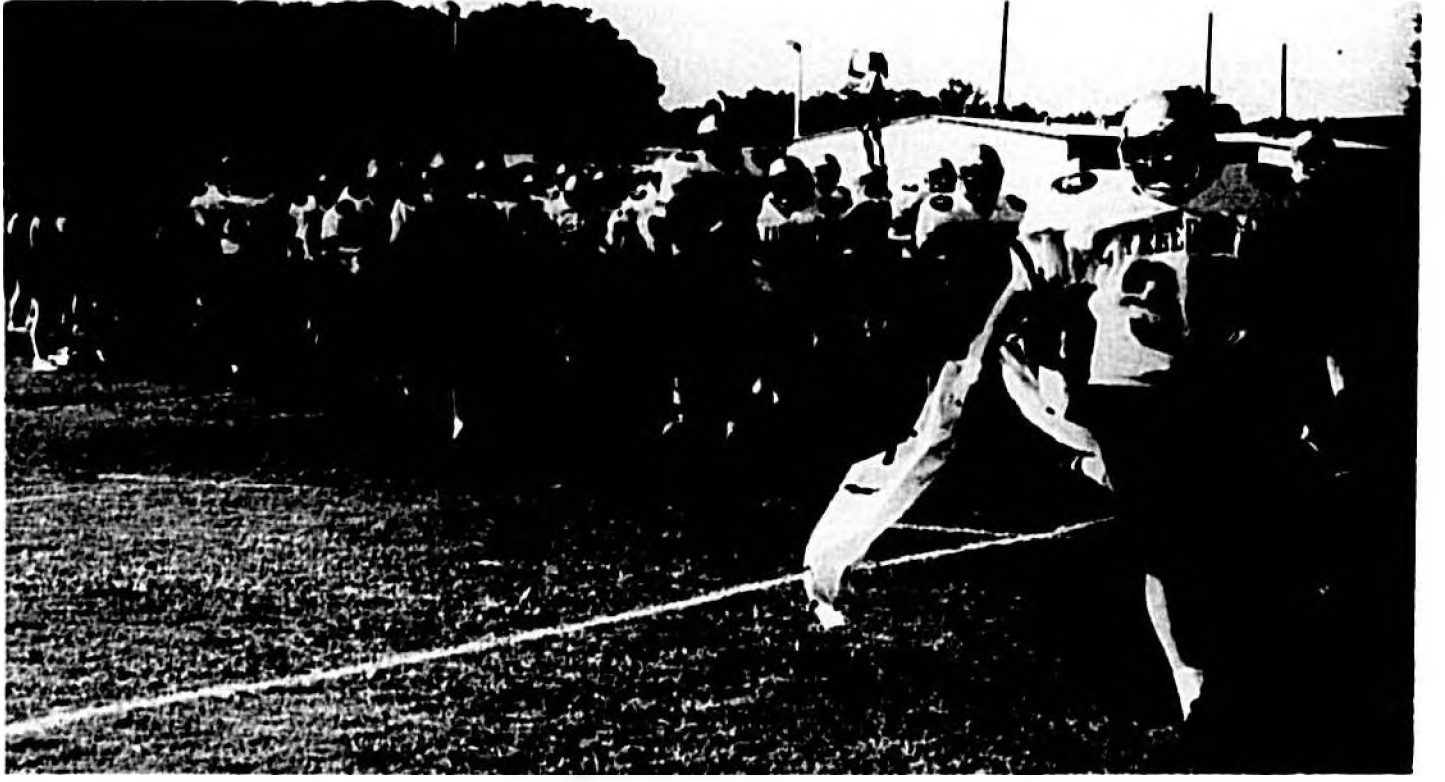

But the win over Freedom wasn't easy. Lyman led only 7-0 at halftime, and was actually out-gained in total yardage (290-286) and first downs (13-10). Big plays made the difference in the closely-played contest.

Lyman's first score came on a nine-play drive late in the first quarter. Cleveland streaking nine yards to the end zone on a quarterback sneak. The Greyhound defense then weathered two Patriot drives inside the 20-yard line while the Lyman offense was shut out until late in the third quarter.

"Their defense played real well."

said Cleveland, who was sacked four times and pressured on nearly every pass. "At the beginning of the game, they contained us on the inside. So we started running up the middle, and our offensive line decided they were going to block. We stepped together. It was good team work."

Midway through the second quarter, Freedom pushed relentlessly to Lyman's right. But on fourth down, a seemingly easy touchdown pass from quarterback Matthew Quartuch was dropped.

On their first drive of the second half, the Patriots made it to Lyman's 19. Lyman defensive M.V.P. LaDaryl Fenney then sacked

Olajuwon won battle but Shaq, Magic won game

By Fred Goodall AP Sports Writer

ORLANDO — Outplayed, but not embarrassed. "I learned a little bit," Shaquille O'Neal said after losing an individual matchup against Hakeem Olajuwon while still helping the Orlando Magic stop the Houston Rockets' six-game winning streak Wednesday night.

"I didn't do a lot tonight and if we had lost, I'd take a lot of blame," the 20-year-old rookie said. "But we won, so I'm happy. The individual battles don't matter. It's which team won."

Olajuwon had 22 points, 13 rebounds and five of Houston's nine blocked shots. O'Neal attempted only 12 shots from the field, didn't shoot any free throws and matched his season-low of 12 points.

Orlando's 7-foot-1, 303-pound center did have 13 rebounds, though, and blocked three shots while altering numerous others. In other words, he didn't score but he did do his job.

"You know what he looks like? A bigger one," said Olajuwon, who's listed at 7-foot, 255 pounds.

"And he's so quick, so powerful. He wants to go to the basket, he's going to go to the basket. I've always imagined myself a couple of inches taller, a lot of pounds bigger. That's him."

Olajuwon and O'Neal have the same agent and worked out together during the summer to prepare for the season. The seven-time all-star taught the newcomer a thing or two then, and again Wednesday night.

Three of Olajuwon's blocks came against O'Neal and the Houston center scored seven of his nine field goals on jump shots. He also made a 7-foot jump hook and laked O'Neal off his feet to drive the lane for his only layup.

"He's a dynamic player ... I have nothing but compliments for him," Olajuwon said. "The only thing he doesn't have is experience, and it doesn't take long to get that. Once he gets that, he has it all."

Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich was impressed, too.

"He's not the factor yet that Hakeem or David Robinson is, but let's give the guy a break," said Tomjanovich, whose Rockets had won six straight since returning home from Japan where they lost the first two games of the season.

"He's a phenomenal player, being so young here in the first month of the season. Everything I've seen about him is superb."

The 107-94 triumph enabled the first-place Magic (63.367 winning percentage) to remain slightly ahead of the New York Knicks (74.334) in the Atlantic Division.

"They've got all the ingredients," Tomjanovich said. "They've got the inside force, they've got the spot shooters, they've got guys who can put it on the floor. They've got a variety of weapons."

Scott Skiles had a season-high 30 points and 11 assists Wednesday night. Dennis Scott, 1 for 9 from the field in a loss to the Knicks last Saturday, scored 28 points and Nick Anderson added 19 for the Magic.

Meanwhile, O'Neal contained Olajuwon in the fourth quarter when the Houston center managed only four points — none before the Magic had built a 14-point lead after starting the period tied 72-72.

"Who won the one-on-one?" said Orlando coach Matt Guokas. "Don't know. Don't care. All I care is that we played as a team. This is a team game, not individual matchups."

Solving baking problems

Bakeware plays important role in success of product

If the cake is too brown or the bread crust too light, don't be too quick to blame the cook or the oven. Baking problems often can be traced back to the type of bakeware that was used.

As interest in baking increases, it becomes more important for people to understand the role the right bakeware plays in creating a successful culinary delight. For example, many people are not aware that bakeware with a non-stick surface requires a lower oven temperature than without this advantage.

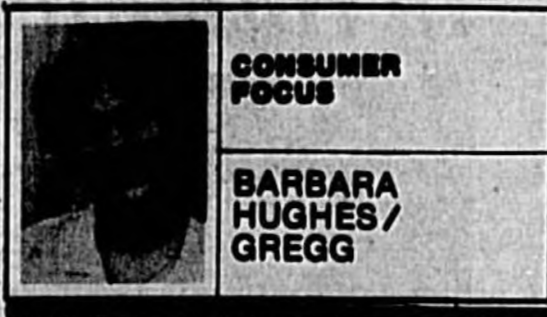

Where a light crust is desired, aluminum is a good choice as it has excellent heat conductive qualities. Other pluses include the fact that it is rustproof and lightweight. However, since aluminum doesn't hold and disperse heat as well as steel, items need to be watched carefully during baking so they don't burn.

Aluminized steel is a top choice of commercial bakers. While it has the heat conductive and rustproof qualities of aluminum, the addition of steel provides superior heat retention, which means that baked goods are much less likely to burn.

Stainless steel is prized for its easy care, durability and rustproof surface. It doesn't scratch and stays shiny-looking longer. However, it is the worst heat conductor of any of the commonly used metals.

Cast iron conducts heat moderately well. It also retains heat for a long time which makes it great for baking crusty breads. However, cakes and muffins may get too heavy and dark on the outside.

Steel bakeware can be coated with tin or with porcelain. Because it is durable and has excellent inherent baking qualities, tin-plated steel is used for many commercial baking utensils. A non-stick coating will hasten the baking process. However, care must be taken not to scratch the surface or it will rust. Porcelain provides a harder layer of protection. However, it does not offer the advantage of a non-stick surface. Other drawbacks of a porcelain coating are moderate heat conductivity and poor crusts on bread.

CONSUMER FOCUS

Once you've come up with the proper tools, how about the proper help? While few of today's cookie monsters will actually become tomorrow's pastry chefs, most children are intensely interested in food. It's one of their greatest pleasures. "Children love learning to cook when parents can take time with the project. Fixing their own food develops self-esteem and helps many fussy eaters accept new foods."

No two children are alike developmentally, however, so cooking activities must be tailored to each child. Safe food handling practices, of course, are important for all age groups.

1/2-3 Year Olds

- Wash fruits and vegetables
- Peel bananas
- Stir batters
- Slice soft foods with table knife (cooked potatoes, bananas)
- Pour
- Fetch cans from low cabinets
- Spread with a knife (soft onto firm)
- Use rotary egg beater (For a short time)
- Measure (e.g., chocolate chips into 1 cup measure).

4-5 Year Olds

- Grease pans
- Open packages
- Peel carrots
- Set table (with instruction)
- Shape dough for cookies/hamburger patties (Caution: children not to put their hands in their mouths while handling raw hamburger meat. It can carry harmful bacteria. They should wash hands after shaping patties.)
- Snip fresh herbs for salads or cooking
- Wash and tear lettuce for salad, separate broccoli, cauliflower
- Place toppings on pizza or snacks.

6-8 Year Olds

- Take part in planning part of or entire meal
- Set table (with less supervision)
- Make a salad
- Find ingredients in cabinet or spice rack
- Shred cheese or vegetables
- Garnish food
- Use microwave, blender or toaster oven (with previous instruction)
- Measure ingredients
- Present prepared food to family at meal
- Roll and shape cookies.

9-12 Year Olds

- Depending on previous experience, plan and prepare an entire meal.
- The Cooperative Extension Service is open to all regardless of race, color, creed or national origin.

Dinner for 131

Widow wants suitors to keep 'hands off'

DEAR ABBY: Will you please tell me why most men think that just because a woman is a widow, she's sex-starved and ready to jump into bed with the first man who asks her?

I have dated several eligible bachelors and I enjoy going to dinner and lunch, but the minute they get me alone, they have six hands — and I have to defend myself.

They say, "All women like to be fondled and petted." Abby, I am an older widow — still attractive — and I enjoy conversing with men. Why don't they realize that two people should get acquainted, and if they enjoy each other's company, perhaps in time the sparks will fly. If not, back off! Why spoil a good friendship by being an octopus?

I am neither sex-starved nor lonely. I enjoy good company and a man's point of view on various subjects. I have tried to tell them that, but they think I'm kidding.

The one man I could really go for has done nothing but give me a hug and an occasional kiss. I'll choose a gentleman anytime. Please print this, Abby. I have four men in mind who need to learn this.

DEAR TIRED OF FIGHTING: Here's your letter. Clip this, make copies, and mail them to the four octopuses you have in mind.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, I was in a large drugstore with my infant son. There was a woman in the store with two boys who looked to be about 3 to 6 years old.

The older boy took a couple of steps away from his mother and, in a small voice, asked a clerk, "Do you have any toys?" His mother yanked him to her and shook him roughly by his neck, yelling at him and using a lot of filthy language. The other boy just stood by quietly, while his brother cried. This made the mother angrier, so she continued to shake him.

ADVICE

I was stunned. My heart ached and I wanted to cry. There were other people who saw this, but nobody did anything.

If that woman could do that in public, it made me wonder how she treats her children at home. I regret not having said something. Was there anything I could have done?

SORRY NOW

DEAR SORRY: I have received letters such as yours many times over the years. This was my reply:

DEAR MOTHER: The scene you witnessed involved a person out of control. You could have very gently and quietly attempted to calm the woman by saying, "I know exactly how you feel. Sometimes taking a child that age shopping is more than we can handle." Without being judgmental, in a soft and sympathetic tone, you would have intervened and brought an out-of-control woman back to reality.

Readers, there is now a toll-free National Child Abuse Hotline (in the U.S.A.) for adults to call when they feel they are losing control. Dial 1-800-422-4453.

Girl wants her father home when she visits

DEAR MARY: I go to my dad's house every other weekend. I want to go there because it's the only time I get to see him, but every time I'm there the same thing happens. We spend time together during the day, but at night he always goes out and leaves me alone. I'm old enough to stay alone, but I just get lonely and sometimes a little scared. I've asked him to stay home on the evenings I'm there, but he says parents have to have time with their friends, just like kids do, and that's the only time he has. I don't want to stop seeing him, but I don't like this either. I don't know what to do.

LOVELY KID

DEAR LOVELY: Since we can't change your dad, let's see what you can do to take care of yourself. First, you might try one more time to explain to him that since you only see him every other weekend, you really wish he could save an evening for you, at least occasionally. Since you can expect that at least on some weekend nights you are going to be alone when you visit him, be sure to take some games, videos or books so you can create your own fun. Finally, you may want to tell him that when he's going out, you want to have a friend spend the night with you. You will probably feel a lot better when you have made your plans for taking care of your needs while visiting your dad.

DRUG COUNSELOR

IN BRIEF

Society to host missionaries

SANFORD — Historic James AME Church's Annie McGill Missionary Society will host all missionaries Sunday at 3:30 p.m.

The theme is "One Hundred Christian Women and Men. Called, Committed, Compelled to Serve."

The words of inspiration will be delivered by Missionary Bonita R. Sherman, a member of New Life Word Center. The community is invited to worship.

Medieval festival set

SANFORD — On Sunday Holy Cross Episcopal Church will sponsor a medieval festival, advent lessons and carols at 4:30 p.m. featuring Holy Cross choir and musicians followed by a medieval dinner. $2.50 for adults, $2 for children under 12 years.

A call to ministers

All Seminole County ministers available to give the invocation at the Board of County Commission meetings held on the second and fourth Tuesdays are asked to register their names and phone numbers by calling Carylon Cohen, Office of County Commission Records, at 321-1130, extension 7861.

First Advent celebrated

LAKE MARY — Christian Fellowship Church, United Church of Christ, will celebrate the first Sunday of Advent on Sunday with Pastor A. Arthur Arvey preaching on "A Light in the Darkness." The church will begin the special program of member families lighting the advent wreath during the worship service. Visitors are welcome. Worship services are conducted at 10 a.m. at the Lake Mary Community Building, 260 N. Country Club Road, Lake Mary. For more information, call 323-3119.

Foreign missions highlighted

LAKE MARY — First Baptist Church Markham Woods, 5400 Markham Woods Road will be having services on Sunday at 10:45 a.m. and 7 p.m. The observance of Week of Prayer for Foreign Missions will begin on Sunday, Wednesday, Dec. 2 at the 7 p.m. service. Foreign Missions will be highlighted in a study given by Brad Parker. Nursery provided. Details: 333-3065.

Advent season begins

OVIEDO — The Advent season begins on Sunday and to herald the coming of the Christmas season, a Day of Reflection is offered to the people of Central Florida on Monday from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Canterbury Retreat & Conference Center, 1801 Alafaya Trail.

Entitled "Preparing for the Holy Days Ahead," this Day of Reflection will be spent in spiritual preparation for the holy days ahead.

Leader for this event is Karen Howe, wife of Diocese of Central Florida Bishop John Howe, and director of cathedral tapes. Karen was the leader for the "Lord, Teach us to Pray" Retreat held at Canterbury in 1990.

Cost for the day is $15 per person and includes lunch; $10 for elders over 65 including lunch.

A big thanks

Baptists of Seminole Baptist Association express thanks to dentists and their assistants who gave of their time to share in a needy ministry.

"We the people of Seminole Baptist Association wish to thank publicly the following dentists and their assistants who gave their time and talents to help us see 102 patients that had bad dental problems.

At our dental mobile unit in Pierson the following dentists worked. Dr. Diane Raggard Wright drove all the way from Brandon to be part of the work. Hats off to you Dr. Wright. Drs. Herminda Rodriguez/Ramos of Orange City, Ron and Hollie Tillitzky of Barberville, and Bill Knapke of DeLand also very graciously donated their time.

At our dental clinics in Sanford Elementary Schools, Drs. William Runge of Sanford, Willie Sherman of Sanford/Orlando, E.W. Zwickler of DeLand and Joseph Calderone of DeBary very generously participated.

We do appreciate your time and efforts to make these clinics worthwhile. We are sure the patients you saw also appreciated your work and service. Any other dentists in our area who would like to be a part of this ministry, please call Meryellen Perkins, director, at 407-574-9700."

A week of thanksgiving

Holy Cross Episcopal Church, First Presbyterian and St. Peter's Episcopal again joined forces for an evening of fellowship and thanks during its Grace 'N' Grits Thanksgiving Dinner Wednesday evening. The dinner attracted over 200 people, right to dine on turkey and all the trimmings. Volunteers, below, filled plates and served the guests of the program. Bob and Bettie Sonnenberg, two of the coordinators of the program, cooked, cleaned, served and made everyone feel very welcome.

Mayor proclaims Bible Week

SANFORD — Mayor Bettye Smith proclaimed National Bible Week, Nov. 22-29, for the City of Sanford, at the request of Beatrice Buck, chaplain of Sallie Harrison Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

The DAR is a sponsor of the 52nd observance during the week of Thanksgiving. Its purpose is to remind all Americans of the Bible's importance to individuals and in the history, life and culture of America as well as to motivate increased reading and study of the Bible, according to Buck.

National chairman of the eight-day event is Betty Duda, of Oviedo. She selected the suggested Bible readings for each day, eight from the Old Testament and eight from the New Testament.

She was honored at the Annual Interfaith Bible Week Inaugural Luncheon this week at The Perre Hotel in New York City.

It's best to avoid unnecessary X-rays

DEAR DR. GOTT: My dentist takes four to six X-rays of my teeth at every six-month visit. Is this necessary and, more important, is it safe? I have strong teeth and have relatively few problems with them, yet I am concerned about the amount of radiation I may be receiving.

antibiotic from time to time, after obtaining appropriate urine cultures.

Stress does not cause urinary infections. However, environmental factors could. These include tight panty hose, certain problems during intercourse and

DEAR DR. GOTT: Many consumers are concerned about the long-term consequences of low-dose radiation, including dental X-rays. My position is that unnecessary radiation (from any source) is best avoided, even though modern dentists use lead shielding over the thyroid gland and chest.

Therefore, query your dentist about the necessity of X-rays every six months. This seems excessive to me, but perhaps he has a valid reason for the tests. If he cannot justify semi-annual X-rays, request that he X-ray your teeth every year - or, better yet, every two or three years.

hygienic difficulties relating to bowel movements. Ask your doctor about these.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please write a column on persistent urinary tract infections. During the last two years I've had about 15 UTIs and I am seeing a urologist. I've been on a prophylactic dose of Bactrim but manage to get a UTI two months later. An IVP has been negative. Why should I continue to take the prophylaxis if it is possible to get an infection while on it? Could stress or environmental factors have brought on the UTIs?

DEAR READER: Some people are inexplicably prone to repeated urinary tract infections. In many cases, the cause for this cannot be discovered and patients must simply tolerate an low-dose antibiotic indefinitely.

You seem to be receiving appropriate diagnosis and therapy. Obviously, no one can predict whether you might develop a low infection that could be resistant to your current antibiotic. This is precisely why your urologist will probably alter your

It lost and East switched to the heart 10, but declarer won with his ace and ran the diamonds, discarding dummy's heart loser. South's 11 tricks were three top trumps, three diamonds, the heart ace, two spade ruffs in hand and two heart ruffs in the dummy.

West shook his head ruefully. "Why didn't you overtake my opening lead with your ace and switch to the heart 10? You can see two tricks: one spade and one diamond. From the bidding, the third trick has to come from hearts. And it has to be established before the diamond king is discarded."

Chiles: Clinton can begin health care reform now

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Bill Clinton's presidency could start immediately fulfilling his campaign promise to reform the nation's health care system by loosening federal restrictions on the states, Gov. Lawton Chiles said.

It will take time to develop a national plan, but the president and the Congress can waive requirements on programs such as Medicaid and Medicare to allow states to try their own solutions, Chiles said this week.

"I think Clinton will understand this. He needs to do something. He cannot go with a national plan right now. This is a step that he could take and allow us to go down the road," Chiles said.

The former three-term U.S. senator will travel to Washington next week for a two-day meeting on health care sponsored by the National Governors Association. He also plans to meet with Dr. Judith Feder, director of health policy for Clinton's transition.

An NGA task force plans to make recommendations to Clinton on how to bring down health care costs and provide access to millions of Americans who have no health insurance but aren't covered by a government program. In Florida, that number is estimated at 2.5 million.

"We don't want all the discussions on a national plan that may go on a long time to slow down the momentum we've got here," said Doug Cook, director of the state Agency for Health Care Administration.

Chiles wants the federal government to loosen some of its grip on health care programs. For example, the governor has proposed separating Medicaid from welfare and allowing those who are uninsured but don't now qualify for the program to buy in, under state supervision.

"We think we can use that flexibility to extend coverage to about 2.5 Floridians who have no health coverage," he said. "We would have all the pieces of the market."

Congress, Chiles added, could require that self-insured companies meet health care standards set by the states instead of forbidding any regulation, as is currently the case. If the companies didn't meet the standards, the states could threaten to enact tougher regulations.

"Without the ability to regulate the self-insurers, we lose all of our stick," Chiles said.

Without such waivers, Chiles said Florida may never meet its goal to bring down cost and provide health care access to all by the end of 1994.

"The only way we can fulfill that is to have the federal government untie our hands," he said.

Beyond that, Chiles hopes to persuade Clinton and the new Congress to allow the states flexibility in whatever national health care reform is finally passed.

"It cannot be like Medicare, like Medicaid, that every state has to perform the same way," he said. "That's our greatest fear, that someone would pass another top-down federal program that puts us in the same straitjacket."

AIDS states

Ten states with the most reported AIDS cases, 1991

State	AIDS cases	Percent of U.S. total
New York	8,063	18.27%
California	7,533	17.96%
Florida	6,017	13.98%
Texas	3,106	7.41%
New Jersey	2,304	5.49%
Illinois	1,406	3.35%
Georgia	1,388	3.31%
Pennsylvania	1,168	2.78%
Massachusetts	957	2.28%
Maryland	831	2.22%

New York state reported the most AIDS cases in 1991 — over 8,000, nearly one-fifth of the U.S. total. California had about 18 percent of all AIDS cases.

Bush adrift

Transition: Foreign policy goes on hold

By BARRY SCHWEID
An AP News Analysis

WASHINGTON — The world will not wait for the United States to change presidents but there is mounting evidence the Bush administration is just marking time, drifting indecisively in its foreign policy.

Two senior senators, Democrat Sam Nunn of Georgia and Republican Richard Lugar of Indiana, suggested gently in a Capitol Hill news conference Wednesday that someone better take charge.

Nunn and Lugar are just back from visiting five former Soviet republics. They seemed most concerned about controls on nuclear weapons and material.

Nunn said that in Belarus some uranium may have been smuggled out and that officials told him smugglers had been intercepted in several other cases.

The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee called the situation alarming.

Nunn and Lugar were sponsors of legislation last year providing $500 million in U.S. aid to help the republics collect, secure and dismantle nuclear weapons. But the process has proceeded slowly.

Nunn said the "clock is ticking."

In other areas, as well, the Bush administration appears to be marking time.

The one serious exception is Somalia, where, responding to warnings that a quarter million people could die by year's end, the administration offered on Wednesday to provide up to 30,000 U.S. troops as part of any multinational effort to get food delivered past feuding clans in the stricken African country.

Meanwhile, although more than 100 Serbian flights have been spotted over Bosnia-Herzegovina, the State Department is still reluctant to allege a violation of the no-fly zone the United Nations set up to protect Bosnian Muslims.

Department officials have been saying for weeks they are trying to determine whether the planes and helicopters were on military missions.

Finding violations would require a decision on what to do about it. That is not something the United States or its European allies want to deal with right now.

In the arms control field, the understanding Bush reached last summer with Russian President Boris Yeltsin to make sharp reductions in long-range nuclear weapons still has not been translated into a treaty.

The idea was to cut down to 3,000 to 3,500 on each side by 2003 or sooner. If the United States helped foot part of Russia's bill, and to eliminate all land-based multiwarhead systems.

The Russians have raised questions about how to implement the big reduction, and the Bush administration has yet to give "a serious, thoughtful response," said Jack Mendelsohn, deputy director of the private Arms Control Association.

Mendelsohn said the Russians, citing economic hardships, asked for some easing of the Draconian destruction terms.

Both sides are not questioning the general goal of the summit accord, and yet the deal, which seems to be in the best interests of the United States, is not getting done.

"On this, like on many other issues, the administration appears to have a soft center," Mendelsohn said.

On another front, the Middle East, negotiators are preparing for an eighth round of talks to begin Dec. 7.

There are no concrete results after 13 months of bargaining and none appears to be in the immediate offing.

Former Secretary of State James A. Baker III, who set up the negotiations, has moved to the White House and is not actively involved, and other American diplomats are maintaining a low profile.

There could be good tactical reasons. Arabs and Israelis are not close enough to an agreement for Baker or other intermediaries to step in.

Still, the Arabs, at least, are calling for American intervention and threatening to consider walking out if there is no progress three or four months into the Clinton administration.

Nunn, looking for reasons for the vacuum in U.S. foreign policy, said Bush was feeling the strain of his election loss and the death of his mother. The president is tired and withdrawn, the Georgian told reporters.

But, Nunn said, "he has a rare and unique opportunity and responsibility to complete important work in the next 90 days. We do not have the luxury of declaring a recess" in foreign policy, he said.

Properly, President-elect Clinton is not intervening. America has one president at a time, he said, and potential troublemakers should not try to use the transition period to challenge America.

The problem, however, is not a frontal attack on American authority. It is that day-to-day issues are piling up and they are not being resolved.

Clinton on high-definition TV, go-anywhere phones

By DIANE DUSTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A cellular phone costs $500 or more to buy and upwards of $25 a month to operate. How quickly those prices might come down will depend in part on the Clinton administration.

High definition television promises pictures nearly as crisp and clear as real life. Whether you'll be able to buy one this decade depends a great deal on how fast the Clinton administration moves.

Fiber-optics. Video telephones. Cable TV re-regulation. Should AT&T be allowed to provide local telephone service? Should the regional Bell phone companies offer long distance? Who should be allowed to provide information over the phone lines?

These are just a few of the dozens of communications issues falling into the lap of the new administration.

The explosion of new technologies in recent years has outpaced both the marketplace and the regulators. But the Clinton administration will be more focused than its Republican predecessors on how best to get the new inventions to consumers, predicted Stuart Brotman, a former Carter administration official who now is a telecommunications professor at Tufts University.

It's partly generational, industry officials say.

"President Bush is a 68-year-old man who held a photo op learning how to use a computer," said Thomas Wheeler, president of the Cellular Telecommunications Industry Association. "Here we have two men in their 40s, one of whom (Vice president-elect Gore) has three computers. They communicate by e-mail."

Pressure also is coming from consumers.

Even at the relatively high prices, cellular phone use has spread to 10 million subscribers since 1983 when the first cellular phone was put into use, according to the industry.

"No other means of communications has ever grown as rapidly as cellular; not land line telephone, not broadcast TV, not cable TV, not beepers, not fax machines," Wheeler said.

But it took the Federal Communications Commission from 1968 to 1983 to find space on the airwaves to allow cellular to operate.

Now, the FCC has been asked to find more space so the many companies that have invented various kinds of wireless telephone systems can get into the market. If enough companies are allowed to compete, the price of cellular phones could be expected to drop.

As for HDTV, testing is under way among four industry groups that have developed advanced television system technology. The FCC in 1994 is expected to choose one of these systems as the standard to which all cameras, transmitters and receivers will be manufactured.

But the timetable could be affected by the changing of the guard at the White House.

Will Clinton give the telephone companies incentives to replace the millions of miles of copper wire webbing the country with high-capacity fiber-optic cable? Or will those who support technologies that can enhance the abilities of copper wire win out?

Will the Clinton Justice Department defend the sections of the new cable television re-regulation law being challenged in court?

By and large, industry and consumer groups are optimistic that the Clinton administration will move aggressively to make new communications technologies available and maintain the traditional U.S. leadership in this field.
