STATE HAPPENINGS BOILED DOWN FOR THE BUSY

A Brief Resume of Florida Happenings That Will Interest The Hurried Reader

By a vote of 86 to 171, the tax payers of Tampa on Tuesday voted for issuance of bonds to the amount of $1,700,000. The total registration for the bonding election was small, 1,078, but the majority for bonds was over four to one. Only tax payers were qualified to vote on the bond issue under the terms of the charter. Of this big bond issue there will be provided money for bringing the sewerage system up to the needs of a city of 150,000, a new city hall will be built for $200,000, municipal docks on the city's estuary will be provided for. Much new paving and other improvements also will be made. It is the largest bond issue ever voted on in Tampa and was carried by the largest proportionate margin ever given in a bonding election there.

The city of Clearwater has purchased a portion of Tat Island, which will be reserved for public bathing and as an amusement park. The city was wise in securing this property while the prices are low. It will be quite an attraction and will undoubtedly induce many people to locate there for people delight to live with a progressive community where their comfort, health and amusement are looked for by the municipal city.

A. M. Berry of Bowling Green is highly elated over a find of what he believes to be a deposit of diamonds on his place. He bored a well 20 feet deep and the pump brought up a large crystal which has every appearance of being a genuine diamond. If the gem stands the test there will be some tall old digging in that region.

A new college of music and oratory is to be instituted at Miami and will open in that city on the first of October.

Crystal Springs boasts of five and one-half miles of streets and more than eleven miles of ditches. The colony is also rejoicing over its first baby, who is named Crystal a honor of the springs.

It is probable that in the near future Ocala will have a modern, up-to-date fireproof hotel.

Gainesville has been served with a notice by its private owned electric light plant that on August 31 the plant will close down indefinitely, and the city will be out in the dark as well as in the cold. It is thought that management came to this decision when the city decided they would erect their own plant and not purchase the plant now in operation.

John Varner lost a fine buggy horse at Aracdia as a result of getting into a quicksand bed on the west side of the river. Several men were driving in Mr. Varner's buggy and after crossing the bridge drove into the water, which was about eight feet deep. The horse began to struggle and the girls could not get him out. He realized that he was in a bad predicament. As soon as possible help was sent, but the animal was buried up to his neck in the sand. In trying to pry him out one of the forelegs was broken and that nothing could be done to save his life, the horse was mercifully shot.

Reports from the Gulf Coast are that the oyster industry promises to be bigger and better this season than ever before. All of the oyster companies are having their boats overhauled and getting them ready for busy times.

Guavas are riper and the demand for them is larger than ever before. One of the latest delicacies from this delicious fruit is guava cream. It is fine for those who have already acquired a taste for the odorous fruit, but it will not appeal to the not accustomed to the flavor.

Cheer Up!

Sanford won the race, but sweet potatoes and guavas are plentiful and the fish are biting. Life still holds something for us.—Orlando Sentinel.

CHEAPER INSURANCE

Sanford Will Have Reduction in Fire Insurance

CITY WILL BE SECOND CLASS

Long Suffering Public May Be Relieved At Last By Lower Rates

Several representatives of the South-eastern Underwriters Association are in the city this week making a thorough canvass of every part of Sanford, with a view of reducing the insurance rates. They are investigating every feature of our protection, water pressure, fire fighting apparatus and the mode of building regarding the specifications of the Association.

The removal of the fire truck to a more central location and the organization of a better fire department will greatly reduce the rates in the business portions and at last the people will begin to realize something on the investment for the new fire truck. There will also have to be a driver for the ladder and hose wagon, leaving two men on the fire truck all the time, which is another rule of the authorities on fire insurance rates.

The gentlemen who are on the ground and the agents here of the various fire insurance companies are of the opinion that Sanford will be placed in the second class and get a material reduction in rates all along the line.

This will certainly be good news to the long suffering public, for if there ever was a city that needed a reduction in rates it is Sanford, and the work of the insurance people will be watched with great interest, as there will be quite a few changes in insurance laws to be framed at the next session of the state legislature.

WALTER BROWN QUITS PARTY

Ohio Ex-Chairman Formally Joins the Progressives

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 23.—Walter F. Brown, former Republican state chairman, issued the following statement today:

"Convinced that the men who have seized control of the Republican party by reason of their brutal disregard of public sentiment and popular rights have permanently destroyed that party's usefulness in Ohio, as well as in the country at large, I have determined to enlist in the ranks of the Progressive party in the belief that it is destined to be an effective instrument in solving the social, industrial and political problems of our time."

Winter Garden Roasts

The Orlando Citizen refers to that little Winter Garden paper, but we notice that it steals almost bodily a column or so of live stuff occasionally, and puts it under a heading as though it came from a regular correspondent.

The Orlando Sentinel copies from the Packer stuff stolen from the Times and gives credit to the Packer.

We have never been to Orlando, but from what we see and hear, we should judge it to be a real ladylike town. It is too nice to be a county seat where rough men congregate. They ought to move it to tough Sanford where they sell soda water and newspapers on Sunday.

Main street is being graded and a fine road is being made out south, but that poisonous old frog pond ought to be drained. If Winter Gardenites would holler loud and long for what they want they'd get it. That's what Sanford and Orlando do.—Winter Garden Times.

Miss Sarah Warrew Esterby entertained a few of her little friends on Tuesday afternoon at her home. The occasion was the ninth birthday of the little hostess. The little folks had a fine time.

Services next Sunday morning and evening at the Baptist church, at the usual hours, conducted by Rev. H. C. Garwood, who is supplying the pulpit of this church during the pastor's absence. A cordial invitation to everybody.

W. T. Haizlipp, auditor of the Citrus Exchange was in the city several days this week.

Atlantic Coast Line Exhibit Car Tours Through the West

The Agricultural and Immigration Department of the Atlantic Coast Line is getting up an exhibit of farm products, vegetables and fruits, and will take this exhibit to the west the latter part of this month, to be shown at various western state fairs, with a view of showing the resources of the territory through which this line operates.

They have had one of their new steel-framed express cars overhauled and painted up in a suitable manner for the purpose of transporting the exhibit.

They have also advertised in the farm papers of the west, and in the local papers at the points where the exhibits will be made, and it is expected that their exhibit will attract a great deal of attention, and should be the means of bringing a great many settlers to the "Nation's Garden Spot."

Messrs. Wilbur McCoy, Agricultural and Immigration Agent, Jacksonville, Fla., and E. N. Clark, Agricultural and Immigration Agent, Wilmington, N. C., will be in charge of this exhibit. They will distribute illustrated literature giving information about the south, and will no doubt be called upon to answer numerous questions.

The success of their undertaking will depend, to a certain extent, upon the cooperation they receive from the farmers along their line. In order to get the best results from the public spirited work of the Atlantic Coast Line, it will be necessary for our farmers who have suitable products for this exhibit, such as native forage, corn, small grains, good samples of fruits and vegetables put up in glass, to communicate at once with E. N. Clark, Wilmington, N. C. They are also very anxious to borrow or buy a few good agricultural views.

As they will leave Wilmington Aug. 27th, with their exhibit, it is very important that you communicate with them at once if you have anything that you think is of special interest.

Asleep at the Switch

We had always heard that there are some mighty sleepy towns in Georgia, but we find now that they have also about the sleepest people in the country, according to a dispatch which states that a 12-year-old boy walked off a moving train near Tifton while asleep and didn't wake up until he was two miles from the railroad. Evidently he wasn't inconvenienced by the rush of traffic and the whirl of progress. Down in South Florida he wouldn't have gone twenty feet before he would have been run over by an automobile, bumped into a sky scraper, stumbled into a million dollar truck farm, or fell into an orange grove. In any event, he would have waked up and forthwith became so imbued with the spirit of progressiveness that pervades the Florida atmosphere that he would have gone back to try and mail a little of Florida's progress into his native state, which, however, won't do much good now. We've got a head start and are leaving all states behind in the march of progress, and it would be a waste of time for any other state to try to keep up with the pace we are setting.—Lakeland Telegram.

United States Senator A. C. Bacon won the distinction in the Democratic state primaries Wednesday of being the only man to be sent to the Senate four successive terms from Georgia. Returns up to midnight indicated that he carried 130 to 146 counties in the state. His election is assured. In the gubernatorial race John M. Slaton of Atlanta won a sweeping victory over his opponents, Joe Hill Hall of Macon and Hooper Alexander of Decatur. Alexander, who entered the race on a prohibition platform, lost his own county and home town to Slaton.

Charging that some members of the New York police department knowingly permitted the escape of "Gyp, the Blood" and "Lefty Louie," the missing gangsters indicted for the murder of Hern Rosenthal, District Attorney Whit today announced the offer of a reward of $5,000 for the capture of the fugitives.

Speaker Champ Clark soon will take the stump in Maine for the Democratic ticket, according to an announcement by Governor Wilson tonight. The Democratic presidential nominee said that Edward Coltra, national committeeman from Missouri, had so informed him over the telephone from New York and that he was "pleased to hear it."

In the presence of all the Salvation Army commissioners and the principal officials in London at the international headquarters, General Booth's testament, entrusted to the army's solicitor twenty-two years ago, appointing the late commander-in-chief's son, Bramwell, to succeed him, was opened today and read. Bramwell Booth, who has been chief of staff of the Salvation Army since 1880, accepted the succession formally and with much feeling. WWW mally and with much feeling. His speech was a prayer and the Scriptural reading was followed by an impressive service.

The Rev. William Booth, general and commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, died in London, England on Wednesday. He was born at Nottingham in 1829. The veteran Salvation Army leader was unconscious for forty-eight hours previous to his death. The medical bulletins had not revealed the seriousness of the General's condition, which for a week past, it is now admitted, was hopeless. Twelve weeks ago General Booth underwent an operation for the removal of a cataract in his left eye. For two weeks after the operation indications justified the hope of the General's recovery. Then septic poison set in and from that time, with the exception of occasional rallies, the patient's health gradually declined. The General recognized that the end was near and often spoke of his work as being finished.

Owing to the almost entire failure of the corn crop throughout the greater part of Central America, much suffering exists there, according to advices received in the U. S. Many of the poor classes have been reduced to the verge of starvation, it was said, with little prospect of immediate relief generally. The situation has become graver during the past two weeks.

More American bluejackets are necessary in Nicaragua, it was made apparent to government officials today, if the safety of American life and property there is to be assured. For the present, Managua, the capital, with the American railroad station, steamboat wharves, legation and the residence of the American customs officials and many others is considered safe but American Minister Weitzel, after consultation with Colonel Smedley D. Butler, who is in command of the American marine forces in Managua, informed this government that he has taken notice of the report that General Selodon, one of the rebel leaders, has promised his men that they may sack and pillage the capital and he has determined that they shall not be allowed to do so.

FEAR CREEPING RAILS

DANGER THAT GETS ON NERVES OF RAILROAD HEADS.

Periods of Intense Heat or the Steady Pounding of Long Trains Are the Causes—Frequently Result in Wrecks.

A railroad track, properly ballasted, bolted and fish plated, looks like one of the most solid structures in the world. That it would and can actually creep forward—rails, ties and all—seems almost incomprehensible. Every double track railroad in the country, however, has to fight just such a condition. Railroad rails will actually creep forward along the ties. Solid and ponderous as they are, the steel rails are not immune from the effects of heat or the steady pounding of long trains moving over them, always in the same direction.

On the railroad tracks laid down over Eads bridge this peculiar phenomenon may be observed any day in the week. Rails creep just as rapidly over this structure in January as they do in August. Many trains roar over this piece of track suspended over the Mississippi. The constant pounding of these heavy trains and heavy engines sets the track a-creeping. Fifty feet of rail a month is cut from the east end of the east-bound track and from the west end of the track over which the west-bound trains pass.

The rails travel twenty-two inches every day all the year round. In about two years a given rail would wander all the way across the big bridge. It has been necessary to put in a "creeper" device on one end and "a feed rail" on the other in order to keep the engines from coming down through an unexpected gap to the bridge floor.

Heat has the same effect on a piece of railroad steel. It will cause it to elongate and press against the rails at either end. Once in a while there is a railroad wreck produced by just such a happening. The hot sun pours down into a cut upon a cinder road bed or upon the rails out somewhere in the prairie and they begin to "kink" and twist under the glare. The next train that comes along at a fifty-mile an hour gait finds itself piled up in the ditch. The rails have crept until they could creep no farther and then they have tried to tie themselves into a knot.

In wet weather the rails and ties on open track show the same tendency to creep as do those on the Eads bridge tracks. Under the pounding propulsion of a heavy train they begin to slide forward, but in these cases they take the ties with them. The whole track moves for many inches and would continue to move indefinitely if the section gang failed to come along and "true" things up again.

Bridges and other structures actually grow longer under the heat of a summer sun and contract under the chill winds and frosts of winter. The Washington monument feels the sun's rays through all its granite structure when the sun gets hottest in summer. Experiments show that it is slightly out of plumb on every hot day. More delicate experiments show that it inclines toward the sun as that luminary moves around the horizon.

Largest Depot in Europe.
"Which is the largest railway station in Europe?" is a question which every newspaper has answered numberless times for inquisitive readers. From now till further notice the reply must be: That at Leipzig. Travelers who know the Fachlerland have always classed the "Leipziger Bahnhof" as the most dingy and ugly in the country.

For ten years artists and architects put their heads together to make it the acme of beauty and convenience, and now for ten years the builder has been busy. It has a frontage of 350 yards; 28 lines of rail run into it; it will see 400 trains a day; there are 50 clocks to tell the time. The finishing touches will take till 1915, and by that time nearly $25,000,000 will have been spent on it.—London Chronicle.

Finds $25,000, Gets $1 Reward.
For ten minutes Edward Stone, brakeman on a St. Paul accommodation train running from Chicago to Libertyville, was the possessor of $25,000. He did not know it. At the expiration of that time Herbert Schoenberg, of Morton Grove, dashed up to him and asked if he had found an old shoe box Schoenberg had left on the train. The brakeman produced the unopened box, and was told it contained the money for starting a new Morton Grove bank, of which Schoenberg is prospective cashier. Stone was rewarded with $1.—Chicago Tribune.

MISTAKEN CHARITY

Peopoe Asking for Aid to Travel Over the Country

That a great deal of money is uselessly spent by charitable organizations upon hypocrites was demonstrated by a case which has just received attention from Secretary R. T. Solsten, of the Associated Charities of this city. It is estimated that $15,000,000 is spent annually for undeserving parties in the United States.

A large number of persons have a habit of going from place to place and appealing to charitable organizations for support. Of late the charitable institutions have not been troubled so extensively as in the past, on account of a transportation agreement which exists between charitable organizations.

The fact, however, that vagrants are still hoodwinking some organizations has led to the agreement that no person will be sent from one town to the other unless he is unable to pay his fare, that his prospects will be subsequently improved, that the applicant will have resources for maintenance at destination, and that the applicant has legal residence in the place to which he desires to be sent.

Just such a type of vagrant appeared in this city on June 20 and appealed to the Associated Charities for help. The man gave his name as Henry Schultz. He came here from Chicago with a boy and girl, the latter three years of age and the former five. He had gone to Chicago from his former home in Easton, Pa., and claimed that his wife had left him, accompanied by an illegitimate child.

He asked Secretary Manning, then in charge of the local institution, to give him transportation to Tampa, where, he said he would live with relatives, Emma Dufel, Christian Marion and Neil Maxwell, the latter of whom is said to be Schultz' cousin. After some hesitation transportation was furnished, but no relatives were located in Tampa, and Schultz, having made a little money and distributing bills, landed again in this city. Wherever he went he was always "looking for relatives." When he was in the north his relatives were in the south, and vice versa.

He was sent to New York, and later went to Harmony, N. J. While here he discovered that he had relatives in St. Petersburg, but was not sent down to "look them up." Accordingly, Secretary Solsten was very much surprised when a little man appeared before him on August 5. He wore glasses, was "pop-eyed," was remarkably dirty and had with him a little boy and girl.

"My name is Schultz," he said to the new secretary of the Associated Charities. "My wife left me and I am stranded on the road with two children."

Then he asked Mr. Solsten to "please remit" enough money for him to "search for relatives." The little three year old girl was horribly broken out with some skin disease. Mr. Solsten told him in better English and with more politeness that there was nothing doing until his case was investigated.

The little girl was sent at once to St. Luke's Hospital and the boy was placed in the receiving home of the Children's Home Society of Florida. Later the boy developed an abscess of the head and was operated upon. Schultz was placed in the Central City Mission and did duty with a lawn mower, much to his discontent.

He claimed that he had returned to the city via the Clyde Line, but the statement proved to be incorrect, as it was learned that he had applied for help in Norfolk and was later in care of the Salvation Army in Savannah. He had obtained his transportation to New York after his first trip here, through the kindness of a well known member of the Board of Bond Trustees of this city.

It was also learned that he had deserted his wife, leaving her in Easton, Pa., with her illegitimate child which was born two years before her marriage to Schultz. In two months he had dragged two baby children all over the eastern portion of the United States, making his way from place to place by deceiving charitable organizations.

Schultz' plea to Secretary Solsten was that the relatives he had sought in Tampa were going to establish a farm in New Jersey and that he wished to return to them. He left here yesterday on the Iroquois of the Clyde Line, accompanied by the two children, but was compelled to pay some of his expenses. He will be required to return by way of Easton, Pa., where the probation court will make an effort to take his neglected children from him.

Secretary Solsten in telling of this case states that the greatest trouble in properly applying charity work is the constant plea of undeserving characters. He states that this is one of the reasons which compel such institutions to act carefully and investigate, although it sometimes draws criticism from outsiders, who do not know the circumstances. Jacksonville Metropolis

On evidence, unexpectedly, strengthened by the testimony of Sam Schepers and "Jack" Selig, the East Side gang leader, the grand jury indicted Police Lieutenant Charles Becker for the murder of Herman Rosenthal and handed down also the expected indictments against six of his alleged tools, the four gun men accused of actually doing the murder and two who are alleged to have to have taken part in the plot. They are "Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty" Louie, who are still at large; "Dago Frank" Corcoran and "Whitey" Lewis, and in the Tombs, Jack Sullivan, who is alleged to have given the "murder signal," and William Sapiro, driver of the "murder car."

WE WIN WITH WILSON

Sanford should have an active board of trade. We have such a body now but they all seem to be honorary members and never attend or pay any dues.

It only costs $1000 to kill a man in Key West and all the would be killers ought to remove at once to the Island City and indulge their fancy at reduced rates.

The city council seems determined to give the people a few sidewalks in the vicinity of the new depot and now if they will be equally as active in the matter of a brick street it will leave nothing to be desired.

Orlando is thinking of buying uniforms for the police force, in order that the stranger in the city will not mistake the guardian of the law for a cigar sign or a countryman hitch a horse to one in a moment of absent mindedness.

It is rumored that Sanford is to have a reduction in the rates of fire insurance. Well, the city will stand a reduction very nicely, and there will be no objection from any of the business houses if the beneficent insurance trust is desirous of reducing the rates.

We wish to thank Chris Codrington of the DeLand News for his article upon our Pennant Day exercises. The article was not only a good advertisement but it was upon the front page and was the means of interesting many DeLand people in coming to Sanford yesterday. We owe you one, Chris, and you can get back any time that DeLand has something on in the amusement line.

It is rumored that W. C. Temple, manager of the Citrus Exchange will manage the Orlando ball team next season. If he does Sanford will nominate S. O. Chase to manage our team and The Herald suggests that they play with green oranges and the game be governed by the acid test of 7 to 1.

Yesterday was Pennant Day at the ball park and the formalities were carried out and the winning team received the prize. Very informal affair and a mere matter of form. Of course the matter was settled before the games started and every one knew that Orlando could not win. Nothing could be more pathetic than this hopeless struggle of the little county seat trying to get a team together to defeat real ball players like the Collegians. And then the goat—

"Children under fifteen years of age are not allowed to drive a car in Sanford" says the Herald. The law in most states requires examination and qualification, as well as a reasonable age limit and some states insist upon the driver of a car having a license. In Jacksonville children are frequently seen driving big cars, and from the fact that the cars often contain other children it would appear that the owners and their friends are not only careless of the lives of the innocent bystander, but also care little for the lives of their own offspring. There are likely some laws on the subject, but no one pays any attention to them.—Times-Union.

The experience of Gainesville ought to be a lesson to other towns—but it won't be. The electric light works in that thriving little city is owned by Chas. W. Morse, a gentleman residing in Haverhill, Mass., who has about as much interest in Gainesville as J. Pierpont Morgan or Russell Sage has. The city council of Gainesville passed an ordinance regulating the charge for electric light service. Morse claimed that the tolls allowed by this ordinance were below what they should be, and his lawyers appealed the case to the Circuit Court, which sustained the city council. But Morse had an ace up his sleeve. He has now directed the superintendent of his plant to shut down the plant on August 31, indefinitely, and unless this order is rescinded Gainesville will be without lights. If the council seizes the plant by law and operates it under a receiver, Morse will probably feel that he has again been unjustly treated. But it will be better to treat one man unjustly than 5,000 won't it?—DeLand News.

NOT SELLING GOSSIP

If you were going fly catching you would not use vinegar but rather something sweet. In publishing a country newspaper the same rule will hold good, writes A. J. Heuring, editor of the Winslow (Ind.) Dispatch and the Publishers' Bulletin. You may feel it your duty sometimes to roast everybody and everything for their wrong doings and now and then we find a fellow who feels it his duty to recite the wrongs of the community, but the fellow who sweetens people up a little catches more subscribers and holds them longer. There is lots of wrong in the world and always will be and the country newspaper that attempts to correct all of them will go hungry. There are worlds of people in every community who are always ready to insist that the local newspaper take a hand in everything in the community and the same fellows are usually the first to desert the paper when it gets in bad. We have always found it a better plan to publish a newspaper, giving the news as best we could with as little amount of stuff to wound and spreading all the sweetness possible and leaving the gossip and the regulation of evil to the police who draw pay for it.

EVEN THE EDITOR

For the past four years the editor of The Herald has chronicled the trips of various citizens of Sanford as they hied themselves to the seashore or other summer resorts. In all that time he has never had one week's vacation or hardly a moment that he could take for his own. 'Tis true we have toyed with a vacation of a few hours here or there and felt all the time like the small boy playing truant from school who is liable to be called back at any moment and make up for his few hours of pleasure. Only in his case he received corporeal punishment and we were always forced to work an extra week to make up for lost time.

The time has at last arrived when we can take almost a week at one time and for the next few days we will find out what the sad sea waves are saying at Coronado Beach. There will be nothing on our mind but hair, and very little of that and unless there is very urgent business to call us back it will be the ocean for us. The paper will be left to the tender mercies of the force and the office devil, and the Herald will be between the devil and the deep blue sea, as it were, for the time being. The editor will leave all the cares of business and state behind him, and while we know how difficult it will be for the world to move along for a few days without Holly at the bat, said world will have to drag along the best it can until said Holly has that long deferred vacation.

Meantime, we want all our good friends to brace up and get cheerful for times are certainly getting better when even an editor can take a vacation.

Sheriff Kirkwood is hereby warned not to close The Herald office until we get back, or we will take even those 37 votes away from him the next time he comes up for election.

When one journeys over the principal roads throughout our state, he is surprised that there are so few trees planted along the highways. Generally the few trees found are volunteers which have miraculously escaped their many enemies.

The question naturally arises, why are our roadsides destitute of trees? The principal reason is because the owner cannot protect them. The roadside tree is nobody's tree or rather everybody's tree. The trunk is patched with signs, sale bills, etc., perforated with nails. The branches must furnish gads for driving stock. The traveler, wearied by his horse fighting flies, breaks off the smaller branches and fastens them to the harness in lieu of fly nets. The telephone man regards trees as an arch enemy and sometimes so badly mutilates them that they are offensive to the aesthetic sense, and we wish he had cut them close to the ground to end their miserable existence. The practice of using roadside trees as guy poles is very injurious to them. The small boy finds delight in climbing them, breaking off the branches and in climbing them, especially if they are not bearing trees. Their grateful shade causes them to be used as hitching posts, and the tied animals usually lunch on them.

The objection that trees prevent the roads from drying up quickly is much more than balanced by their grateful shade. It is true it takes some space to grow a tree but the value of the crop shaded by the tree is far less than the value of the tree to the public, the value of the wood produced and the added appearance to the farm. The time has come when our best farmers appreciate the value of roadside trees and are eager for the time when they can plant trees with a reasonable assurance that they will not be destroyed. Laws are needed to protect roadside trees and every property owner should urge his representatives to pass laws protecting trees along the highways.

In this respect the Orlando-Sanford road in our own county is probably as well protected by shade trees as any length of road in the state and in this work our county commissioners have been very active. In time the greater part of this road will be a shady avenue that will be a delightful drive during any part of the day.

BETTER STATE LAWS

At the next session of the Florida Legislature there will be an effort made to curtail the attempted passage of the innumerable laws that every meeting sees brought forth, half of which are never allowed to leave the committee room and half of which were never framed with the intention of being passed, but are brought out of hiding to give certain members the appearance of being busy and attempting to earn their per diem. A much better plan would be for the members themselves to get a list of the really good ones and attempt to put them through.

It is not generally known that there is in the United States what is called a commission on uniform state laws. It is a voluntary association of men representing all branches of professional activity in the law—that is senators, judges, practitioners, professors and experts in special departments. The chairman or the presiding officer of the commission is Walter George Smith of Philadelphia, one of the foremost lawyers in the United States.

The primary idea of the commission is to work out laws of such excellence on a score of great topics as to commend them to the various states. They have, first and last spent about twenty years in their work, believing that a comparatively perfect statute is better to have, though waited for, than an imperfect one which was not to be tinkered after it is set in operation.

The result of the labor of this commission has been to produce, according to the Central Law Journal, no less than ten magnificent pieces of legislation, covering negotiable instruments, warehouse receipts, stock transfers, sales bills of lading, divorce procedure, foreign wills, family desertion, marriage and child labor.

It is known in the profession of the law that the influence of the commission has been very great with reference to legislation of the subjects mentioned. It is busy now in the draft of an act in the subject of corporations and hardly anything can be more important at present than a model bill on that subject which every state so inclined may enact.

It is felt by many who dread centralization at Washington that the states may wisely take advantage of the work of this commission and so obtain uniformity in substance without having increased the grip of the central government on the states.

The Raw Recruit.

F. M. King enlisted in the Spanish-American war and was sent to Jefferson barracks. He was strolling through the company streets smoking a cigar when an officer approached. King saluted.

"Look here," said the officer, "don't you know better than to salute an officer when you have a cigar in your mouth? How long have you been here?"

"Three days," replied King.
"You are excused this time," said the officer, "but don't let me catch you doing that again."

In a short time King met the same officer and walked by without saluting.

"Why didn't you salute?" demanded the officer, stopping him.
"Well, you just told me not to salute when I had a cigar in my mouth," replied the raw recruit.

But he spent three days in the kitchen peeling potatoes for this offense.—Atchison Champlon.

Gas-Electric Works.
A new 90-horse power gas-electric passenger coach just placed on the Great Central railroad in England has fulfilled every expectation as regards performance, reliability and easy riding.

They made the trip over the new road to New Smyrna and report that route as the shortest and best way to get to the east coast from this city. New Hotel for Kissimmee

Kissimmee, Fla., Aug. 20. Arrangements are now being made to finance a new hotel that is to be erected in Kissimmee. Some of the promoters are identified with other interests in the city and associated with them are some capitalists who see in the venture a first class investment. Kissimmee needs a hotel that will have adequate provision for a large number of people. Each year sees a larger number of tourists coming to this section and the present facilities for handling that class of people are not compatible with existing conditions. The local men who are interested in the proposition cannot see anything but a successful termination of the project, and as soon as some minor details are threshed out, the personnel of the men behind the affair will be published.

Tallahassee, Aug. 20. The Governor having called a special session of the Legislature to meet in Tallahassee, Oct. 1, 1912, to consider the matter of amending the charter of the city of Jacksonville, so as to enable that city to own and operate municipal docks and terminals, it has become necessary to call six special elections to fill vacancies in memberships of the Legislature.

Since the adjournment of the Legislature early in June 1911, Senators Buell Cook of Washington county and I. H. Withers of Lake county have died; Senators John W. Henderson of Leon county, S. J. Hilburn of Putnam county and James W. Perkins of Volusia county have resigned.

Hon. Peter T. Knights, a member of the House of Representatives from Monroe county also died a few weeks ago.

The Governor has called special elections in all of said counties to fill the vacancies above mentioned. All of the special elections will be held on the third Tuesday in September. A special election will also be held on the same day for the election of a member of the House of Representatives from Pinellas county, that county having been created by the Legislature of 1911. The official notices of such special elections are being sent out by the Secretary of State today in the manner prescribed by law.

The Smart Aleck

There is a man in our town who thinks he's wondrous wise; though he has lots of junk to sell he does not advertise. He often says: "The people must know I'm in the game; and if they want my doodads they'll come and buy the same. To advertise my jimeracks won't bring me trade or scads, for folks who take the paper refuse to read the ads. They read the sporting pages, they read the household dope, they read what Lillian Russell says of her beauty soap; they read the wedding stories of joyous girls and lads, they read the 'Hints to Hoboes,' but they do not read the ads." The large and clammy spiders build cobwebs in his store, and no one will disturb them by entering the door. The clerks are growing whiskers all filled with fungus blue, and comb them with their fingers—they've nothing else to do. Sometimes a sad-eyed pilgrim, insomnia accursed goes there, in peace and quiet to sleep a little vest. Anon a man who wishes to drop from public view, drops in to see that merchant and stays a week or two. But no one takes a bundle to buy things at that store, where broods the drowsy merchant, and all the clerkings snore.—Walt Mason

Will You Read This? Think About It? Then Act?

Why not take some stock in the Sanford Building & Loan Association, entirely cooperative, managed by home people and for home people, has loaned for building purposes nearly Fifty Thousand Dollars, will construct four more homes between now and January. If you who are not members don't come in we will build a dozen more homes next year. If you do come in and support it we can build two dozen more homes in 1913. In addition to the fact that it is now paying nine per cent annual dividends, every home we build is paying a good prosperity dividend to every good citizen and business man.

If you want a prosperous town, why not cooperate one with another and get it?

If you want to help yourself and your town come in.

Any of the undersigned will be glad to talk it over with you and explain any details. Our financial statement is open to your inspection. If you don't want common stock we will sell you preferred stock bearing 7 per cent dividend, cumulative. But we would rather sell you common stock, monthly instalments, one dollar per share, which now pays 9 per cent and our income grows faster than expense ratio. So we expect to pay a still larger dividend on the common. Why not build a nice town, little by little?

Dick's Orphan

By Emma Ebel

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

"Do I look like the guardian of a nine-year-old girl?" asked Dick Belting of his friend Gordon Amberst, as they sat together in the former's library.

Gordon favored his host with an elaborate scrutiny that included the crown of his head and swept down to his toes, and shook his own head gravely.

"If I wasn't positive that you dyed your hair, Dick, I should say 'no' at once. But being aware that beneath your carefully polished raven locks there lurks many a white and venerable hair, I will say that I believe you're old enough to have an entire orphan asylum in charge."

"She is an orphan," admitted Dick. "Brother's child?" asked Gordon. "You know I never had a brother or sister."

"Confound it, man, tell me about it while I smoke another of your cigars." Gordon helped himself from the box and scratched a match. "It isn't a guessing game, is it?"

"No—remember Miles Wendell?" "Perfectly well. He died in Japan a short time ago—I read it in the paper."

"It's his daughter. He did a favor for me once upon a time, and I told him to command me when he needed a service. In return, he's written me a letter appointing me guardian of his daughter, Elizabeth, and it was forwarded to me after his death. Her mother died long ago—nine years, the letter states. The girl arrived in New York this afternoon in care of a governess or companion. I'm to see her tomorrow." Dick tossed a sheet of paper across the table and Gordon read the feebly scratched lines with interest.

"What are you going to do with her?" he asked.

Dick shrugged his shoulders. "Going to keep her in school for ten years—by that time I shall be a set-led old bachelor and ready to present her to society."

"Ten years from now you will be fifty years old," murmured Gordon. "You will still be good looking, Dick."

"Humph!"

"And will undoubtedly marry Miss Weldon."

"I never suspected you of romantic ideas," returned Dick dryly.

Gordon's round, fat face grew pink. "I may marry your ward myself—I'm five years younger than you are," he protested.

"She isn't an heiress—no fortune hunter need apply," teased Dick. "You need a rich wife, Gordon—you're a spender."

"It's the high cost of living," groaned Mr. Amberst.

"You mean the cost of high living," Gordon laughed. "When shall I see the infant—wonder if she wouldn't like to go to the circus?"

"I'll have you around tomorrow night to take dinner with us if you like."

"All right I'll come—perhaps I can help keep her in order."

When Dick was alone he smoked several cigars before he retired. This guardianship of a young girl had introduced a new element into his quiet, comfortable, bachelor existence. He told himself reassuringly that with Elizabeth at school nine months out of the year it might make very little difference in his life, and yet there were holidays and vacations to be considered. The thought of making this unknown child happy stirred unusual warmth in the region of his heart.

He blushed unaccountably when he thought of the coming of Elizabeth Wendell. "It won't be unpleasant," he admitted as he turned out his light. "If I had married I might have had a daughter of her age—but somehow I've never felt the call."

The next day he went to the hotel where Miles Wendell's daughter was staying with her companion, a Mrs. Armstrong.

"Miss Wendell will join us at once," said Mrs. Armstrong, after she had greeted him. "She has been shopping all the morning and is rather tired."

Mr. Belting stared. "Er—yes. I suppose little girls need plenty of new frocks and so forth. I may have to call upon you to help me out in that respect—I don't know much about fripperies."

It was Mrs. Armstrong's turn to look surprised and then amused. "Elizabeth will not take kindly to our interference," she said. "She has chosen her own clothes ever since she was ten years old."

"Oh!" stammered Dick blankly, conscious that he was talking at cross purposes with Elizabeth's companion. Deftly he changed the subject and waited for the appearance of this precocious Elizabeth, who was undoubtedly a little older than he had had reason to believe. Miles Weldon was such a careless fellow it would be just like him to forget the age of his only child.

"A few years more won't make much difference," he was thinking when the door opened and a girl entered.

A girl of nineteen she was, with small oval face framed in misty black hair; a pair of hazel eyes and a scarlet mouth that smiled at him with charming shyness.

"Elizabeth, this is your guardian, Mr. Belting," said Mrs. Armstrong demurely.

As Dick bent low over the girl's slender hand he recovered his equanimity.

"I was looking for a nine-year-old girl," he said with his charming smile. "I'm afraid I had relegated you to the schoolroom for ten long years."

Elizabeth laughed softly. "How dreadful when I have just bidden good-by to it forever!"

"I even contemplated selecting your clothes," went on Dick gravely.

"Horrors! You will forgive me, too; but I thought you would prove to be quite an old gentleman," blushed Elizabeth, thereby increasing her loveliness. "You see, my father's hair was white—and I thought you were his friend—and were of the same age."

"Your father was fifteen years older than I," explained Dick, rather hastily. He did not want this beautiful ward of his to look upon him as an old man. He stole a shy, anxious glance into an opposite mirror to reassure himself as to his appearance and therein caught the amused glance of Mrs. Armstrong.

"Oh, you are years younger than my father," said Elizabeth, kindly.

"Thanks," murmured Dick, and then producing the letter he had received from her father he gave it to her.

She read it with tender eyes filled with tears. "A mistake has been made," she said as she gave it back to him. "This is a letter my father must have written ten years ago, when he suffered a bad attack of heart disease and believed himself to be dying. There is a later letter written during his last illness. In the confusion following his death the lawyer, Mr. Feltome, must have forwarded you the wrong letter. He had charge of the papers."

"I am glad," said Dick heartily, and then because he could not explain to them how glad he was he made arrangements for them to dine with him that evening and hurried away.

Gordon joined them at dinner, and his amazement at sight of Dick's charge was delightful to witness. To Dick's disgust the fat, good-natured clubman appeared more impressed with the charms of Mrs. Armstrong than with those of the beautiful girl.

"How is your orphan?" he asked Dick one day.

"I hope she is happy," returned Dick with a tender smile, "for she has just promised to marry me."

"Glorious!" cried Gordon, with a squeeze of his big hand. "We will make it a double wedding!"

"Not Mrs. Armstrong?"

"None other. Of course, I know she hasn't a sou and I ought to marry money, but I'm simply gone on her, Dick, and I'll change my whole mode of life just to gain her." Then, anxiously, "Haven't you heard that it was cheaper for two to live than only one?"

"Let's all try it," said Dick soberly.

WOODLAND PARK NOTES

If the clique that has been trying to break up Woodland Park could have seen Sunday's visitors they would realize that the better class of people are not so easily fooled by "Trust" methods. Free passage for awhile means increase of charges if the "Trust" succeeds in destroying competition. The admirable location of Woodland Park, in this county, is being easily reached by land or water, the naturally beautiful grounds further improved, the amusement, management, that safe, sanitary, up-to-date pool, with accessories, etc., are too strong a combination. The community is waking up and does not want to lose this, as evidenced by the lately increasing attendance. The West Side cannot afford to lose this. The Gertrude brought two loads Sunday. Reed's Transfer a big bus load of West Side people, a party of young men who appreciate a clean pool came in an auto, and the usual number of visitors came by buggies, bicycles and afoot. They all paid their way and feel they got their money's worth.

Celery Growing in Indiana

South Bend, Ind., Aug. 16.—Growing celery on an extensive scale has been started near South Bend. Eventually a new industry of considerable importance is expected to be developed, one that will utilize much of the waste land of the Kankakee marsh region.

The farms where the first celery is being raised are near the end of the great marsh which extends within the limits of the city. As the marsh covers several hundred square miles, the vast territory available for celery in Indiana, may be seen. Soil experts say the marsh land is the best for raising celery they have ever seen.

A tract of 600 acres, owned by W. B. Calvert of this city will be used for the first celery fields. The work is in charge of Hollanders brought here from the celery fields of Kalamazoo, Mich. Should the celery growing prove successful the entire Calvert tract and probably other property will be colonized.

Mrs. M. H. Terry left yesterday for Orlando, where she will visit for a few days, spending the remainder of her vacation with friends in Sanford and Jacksonville. Mrs. Terry has spent a very busy vacation, having continued her classes until yesterday, and that she will enjoy the remainder of the time before the opening of the fall term of school in the wish of all her friends.—Lakeland Telegram
