Should governments in Seminole County — the county, the cities and the School Board - be consolidated? A group of citizens, most of them former elected officials, agreed Thursday night to put the Seminole County Legislative delegation on notice that a local law will be proposed to create a government study commission to look into consolidation. The study, according to the proposed legislation, would call for $30,000 funding over a two-year period from county coffers. At the same time, the group decided that it would appoint members of the study commission, a total of 17, refusing to leave the appointments open to recommendations from any of the city governments, the county commission or the legislative

Altamonte Springs City Commissioner Cal DeVoney, one of those who organized the meeting, said appointments by the elected officials would by necessity become political. State Rep. John Mica (R-Orange County), who was a consultant for the Orange County governmental study commission several .

years ago, explained the methods of studying local government with a view toward limited or full-scale consolidation. He noted that efforts toward consolidation or charter county government have failed in 75 percent of the cases in Florida. He pointed to successful instances, specifically Jacksonville, which was not a total consolidation and for all intents and purposes abolished county government there. Because of the method used, whereby city residents voted separately on whether to retain or abolish their city governments, several cities including Jacksonville Beach and Neptune, were not consolidated with Jacksonville. Mica said that in his opinion it is not necessary to have individual elections in the cities. "You could have consolidation and not put the question to each unit of government," he said.

"The League of Cities is trying to get law through to give each unit the right to be in or out," Mica said. The state representative said a "major crisis" is needed for consolidation to be approved by the voters and the crisis

Former Altamonte Springs City Commissioner Dan Dorfman sked that the group state its purpose, which he had believed was to determine if inefficiences exist. "I'm not convinced con-

"The purpose is to make our government more effective, more responsive and more efficient," Michael Davis, legal counsel for the Seminole County Republican Executive Committee said. The proposed legislation would create the study commission's term from Oct. 1, 1978 to 1980, Davis said, adding the group's function would be to "gather facts and make recommendations not wave flags or banners."

Tom Kanelis, president of the Seminole County League of Civic Associations, said many citizens have approached him about the need for such a study, particularly concerning "double taxation and multiple jurisdictions," adding many are fearful of being annexed by cities.

Mica said the group would have the authority to go into every overnmental unit and "look at anything you wished."

Also attending Thursday's meeting at the invitation of DeVoney, included ex-Oviedo Mayor Leon Oiliff; Bob Cuevas, recent unsuccessful candidate for the Altamonte Springs City mmission; former Lake Mary Councilman Virginia Mercer; past Casselberry Council Chairman Charles Glascock; former County Commissioner Al Davis; and Gloria Ward, a past unsuccessful school board candidate and current member of the Seminole County Planning and Zoning Commission

The next meeting of the group was scheduled for 7:30 p.m., Nov.

Private Landfill Firm: Full Steam Ahead

year-old admitted lush, was Thursday morning.

The man in charge of plans for a proposed private landfill in northwestern Seminole County says his company's 275-acre site is large enough to accommodate county-wide landfill service.

But, said Hal Johnson, manager of market development for Illinois-based Waste Management Inc., the company will proceed with its private landfill "whatever the county does."

Johnson said his company owns Dump-All, which provides garbage collection for commercial, industrial "and some itial" customers in Central Florida. Dump-All trucks now haul garbage to the county's Sanlando transfer station near Altamonte Springs but, it would be more economical for the ompany to own a landfill in the county, Johnson said.

Waste Management has applied for a special exception to the gricultural zoning of a 275-acre tract off SR-46, three miles west of Interstate-1, which would permit operation of a sanitary landfill at the site. The company has an option to purchase the 275-acre site which is part of a 405-acre tract owned by a Riviera Beach bank, contingent on local and state approval to operate a

A hearing on the proposal before the county's Board of Adjustment is scheduled 7 p.m. on Nov. 21 in room 263 of the courthouse in Sanford. At a Wednesday night meeting of neighborhood residents, officers of the Sylvan Lake Association vowed to fight the proposed landfill. The group today began a "house-tohouse canvass of the neighborhood,". Pet 7 Thomas, the rejection of Waste Management's bid to provide county-wide landfill service. The county is looking for a centrally located

Johnson said the move for a private landfill is "not really" an attempt to nudge the county into reconsidering its April 26

'We'd like to have the county consider using the site. Our option to purchase the land is based on a site large enough to accommodate countywide landfill service. . . We're not going to submit another bid offer to Seminole County. We've decided to pursue it ourselves. We don't care what the county does. We'd like o have them consider using the site, but it's up to them," said

The landfill would be operated for "15 to 20" years, after which it would be "converted to some recreational use. We have preliminary plans to convert the site to a golf course and recreational park when we're done, but that's just one of many bilities." Johnson said in a telephone interview from the Oak Brook, Ill., corporate headquarters of Waste Management.

"We'd start probably with 15 or 20 acres and phase it in 20-acre stages. Twenty acres lasts about two years. After five to 10 years, we would initiate some type of resource recovery system,

The federal Environmental Protection Agency has require The federal Environmental Protection Agency has required localities to develop solid waste resource recovery plans which would involve recycling metal and other substances plucked from collected garbage. Implementation of the plans is not required by the agency, however. And Johnson conceded the "state of the art of solid waste resource recovery is still in its infancy." He noted such programs can "increase the life-span of a landfill."

The company is the prime contractor in New Orleans for the nation's first full-scale resource recovery system.

Waste Management will also design and construct the nation's first experimental plant to convert urban solid waste into

The $2.8-million plant is under construction near Pompano Beach and will process up to 100 tons a day of urban solid waste, converting it to methane, a company press release says.

Johnson said all local and state standards for landfills would be met. "We wouldn't want to damage our reputation here. We are a garbage company. We want to expand, and we can't do that without good operation of our facilities."

Waste Management operates landfills in Ft. Lauderdale (its regional headquarters), Pompano Beach, Jacksonville and Ft.

The company and its 100 operating divisions employ nearly (2) 4,000 people and serve 1.1 million residential, commercial, industrial and municipal customers in 27 states, the District of Columbia and two Canadian provinces, according to company tional materials.

The company operates more than 50 sanitary landfills. In DuPage County, Ill., Waste Management is developing a 180-acre recreational park, using solid wastes to create ski hills and other facilities. The project, the company says, has received

Andrew Young: Hell Faces "Sinful" John Vorster

YOUNG ON HELLFIRE: It came to something of a sermon Thursday when U.N. Ambassa-dor Andrew Young addressed the National Council of Churches in New York. Young - himself an ordained United Church of Christ minister - said South African Prime Minister John Vorster has put his soul in danger with policies that "jeopardize the lives of 19 million people." Says Young, "Lord have mercy on the hell that faces John Vorster and the sinful life he has adopted as national policy." Young's comment comes one day after South African Police Minister Jimmy Kruger referred to Young as a "racialist."

Abzug: She Issues Warning

STORM WARNING: Bella Abzug has a warning for right wingers who plan to attend the National Women's Year Conference Nov. 18-21 in Houston. They'll get their say, but they'd better say it quietly. Mrs. Abzug leader of the conference on equal rights for women — says, "I do not respect the Ku Klux Klan, the John Birch Society, the National Rifle Association or any of the other ultraright wing groups that have been attacking the conference ... They will be given every opportunity to present their views ... but they have no right to interfere ..."

Prince Charles: He Avoids Kiss

ROYAL KISSOFF: Prince Charles left Adelaide, Australia, Thursday, a bit miffed at reports he kissed 28-year-old Sylvia Cresnar upon his arrival. Charles says she's the one who did the kissing, and he snubbed her roundly on his departure. Miss Cresnar, a model who says she poses nude for magazines. showed up at the airport with roses and a friendship ring for the prince, but a burly policeman barred her way. Wailed Miss Cresnar as Charles strode past — ignoring her - "I've fallen in love with him."

Ford: He Dedicates Hospital

FORD DEDICATES: Former President Gerald Ford did the honors Thursday, dedicating a $6.8 million, 200-bed addition to Emanuel Hospital in Portland, Ore. He called the project "a great tribute to the people of the city of Portland" because the hospital chose to expand in the inner city.

Important Art Discovery

PAYING THE DEBT: Jacob S. Rubin had no idea the portrait of George Washington he donated to the New Bedford, Mass., public library was an original by Gilbert Stuart, and he certainly had no idea it was worth $500,000. The 82-year-old Rubin bought the canvas several years ago for $500, and donated it when he couldn't find a buyer — even at $100 — to raise funds for his boys' club. Art authority Charles Merrill Mount confirms the value of the painting — calls it "the most important discovery of my lifetime." Rubin, who emigrated from Russia in 1908, says he's not sorry he gave it to the public - that "America owes me nothing. I owe it every-teacher William H. Kruzkomp who termed conditions there "hazardous" has asked the Seminole County School Board to look into the matter. . Kruzkamp said problems have been encountered during the reroofing of the school, which has been going on since school opened.

Teague Teacher Warns Board Of 'Hazards'

"I would like to inform the school board of some conditions which are, in my opinion, hazardous," Kruzkamp said. He said falling plaster, falling bolts, odor from the tar machines and mildew inside the school from rain damage caused by leaking roofs were disrupting classes at the school.
"There has been some lightweight concrete which has fallen on to desks, but only when students were not in the school," Kruzkamp said. Sims expressed concern about the safety of children attending the school and asked Hugh Carlton, director of auxiliary services, what steps had been taken to eliminate danger to students and faculty.

"We know we have some problems, and we do not consider them minor, because anything concerning the safety of the students cannot be minor," Carlton said.

"We met today with the foreman of the construction crew, officials of the company, and the principal and viceprincipal of the school. I think hese problems won't happen Carlton also noted that mildew odor in the school is 'unbearable" and said he hoped that when the new roof was on and the building completely dry the school board would allow the interior of the school to be redone. He said work on the roof would continue for another three to four weeks, and re-

Economics And The World

Cheer did not seem to be an emotion in abundance at the recent meeting of the world's 131 richest nations in Washington, D.C.

None of the International Monetary Fund members expected a recession in the near future. But none seemed to think that economic progress would be dramatic, either. Pressure was strong on the United States, the heart of Western economy, to start shoveling more coal on its industrial fires.

However, U.S. Secretary of the Treasury W. Michael Blumenthal, the principal United States delegate, didn't hold out much hope. The United States, he noted, is waging a war on inflation. The United States also is facing a $30 billion deficit in its balance of payments this year.

If we stimulate our economy further, the inflation likely will worsen. And if the balance of payments continues to worsen, unemployment also will become a greater problem.

The alternatives to stimulation of the U.S. economy discussed by the IMF ministers aren't pleasant to contemplate.

Great pressure was applied on Japan and West Germany, the only major Western nations with favorable trade balances, to import more and export less. But that also would be inflationary because it would increase the cost of things everywhere in the world.

The inflationary impact, however, would be the least of the dangers.

A greater one is that if Japan does not rein in its exports, other nations will find ways to bar Japanese goods. Protectionism is not new in the world, and certainly not in the United States. Our first protective tariffs were imposed in 1816 to protect cotton, wool and iron.

The Morrill Tariff Act of 1861, the Payne-Aldrich Tariff of 1909 and the Smoot-Hawley Act of 1930 were protectionist measures that followed panics or recessions. Our experience with each of hem was the same. Other nations retaliated, trade shrank and everybody suffered. By contrast, when the United States shifted to a liberal trade policy in 1934, the entire world, and particularly the United States, benefitted. Even greater benefits followed the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs after World War II and the Trade Expansion Act of 1962.

The experience of the Common Market, which eliminated most of the trade barriers among its nine Western European members, parallels that of the United States.

Today's calls for protectionism miss the entire point. The culprit in the imbalances of payments is not ordinary trade. Trade is good and getting better. Under ordinary, undistorted circumstances, imbalances would tend to work hemselves out.

The culprit is the high price of oil. The United States' deficit in its balance of payments will be $30 billion this year because we will import $45 billion

The United States is inexorably becoming a service and processing nation, one which will depend increasingly on trade.

It would be a double tragedy if this country should endanger its future trade because it cannot curb its profligate and insatiable appetite for oil while it seeks new sources of energy.

With the pre-Christmas shopping season upon us and parking spots harder to find, Lt. Richard Laese of the Altamonte Springs Police Department traffic division has a warning for those who might be tempted to grab the parking places designated for the handicapped at Altamonte Mall. These spots (marked by the signs with the familiar wheel chair insignia) - there are only two at the mall - are only for those handicapped drivers using a wheel chair and not for those on crutches or riding as passengers in cars, Laese said. Vehicles in these parking places are being routinely checked by the police to make sure there is some indication such as special attachment, license or decals that the car is indeed being driven by a handicapped person. Those in violation may receive citations and be fined $15.75 and are subject to having the car towed Laese is especially concerned for the safety of persons in wheelchairs. There are ramps in the curbings at the special parking areas, but when a person in a wheelchair attempted to get up the curbing when forced to park elsewhere, he lost control and the chair went rolling backwards.

So even if you do have to walk a little further the exercise will do you good and it might save you some money and help some handicapped person.

Lake Brantley's Patriots (7-1) will be fighting a letdown, Lyman (1-8) and Oviedo (1-8) will be playing their final games, Seminole (3-5) will be playing at home against a county foe, and Trinity (5-3) will be clinching a playoff berth - all that, and more, this weekend on the prep football scene.

Brantley's playoff hopes were hurt Thursday night when Gainesville eased by Mainland in Daytona, 21-18. If Mainland had won, Brantley would have won the district title - due to their 24-13 win over the Bucs. Gainesville stopped Brantley 13-0; and if the thre teams end up with one loss apiece in district play, the Purple Hurricanes will go to the state playoffs.

Del.and, playing at home, will be trying to capitalize on the situation; but Coach Jim Raley won't let the Pats' spirits sag too much; since DeLand is a district game, and Brantley must win tonight to stay in a tie for first. Lyman winds up its season visiting Seminole probably not too pleasant a finale for the 'Hounds.

Seminole is still on the trail of a 5-5 season — but to get it, they must win their final two games. Oviedo will be trying to win its first homecoming it almost a decade, hosting Apopka. The Lions have a good shot, since Apopka has a matching 1-8 record.

or Lady of the Lakes Catholic Church, 1218 Maximillan, Delton:

Say what you want about the Bible - it lives. It has endured through centuries No matter where you go across the face of the globe you can fine it printed in a vast variety of languages, bringing new meaning to new thousands. Maybe some of it may be a muddle to you. It isn't easy reading, even the revised versions. But because it really is the greatest story ever told it's worth all the study

Think about it. This book has lasted through wars, floods, famines, periods of both depression and prosperity, this over centuries. Get to know it better. Both on your own, and through your church.
