Lake Mary Begins Impact Fee Legal Process

By Angela Woodhull
Herald Staff Writer

When Lake Mary city commissioners voted unanimously July 3 to begin a four week state required legal process to advertise the adoption of their controversial Impact Fee, it supposedly ended two months of political fire works.

The Home Builders Association (HBA) of Mid-Florida had threatened legal action in a May 15 letter, demanding repeal of Impact Fee Resolution 238 it described as "inequitable and illegal."

"Whenever it's a builder versus a city government, it makes news," explained Commissioner Buzz Petros, who feels the controversy is now over. "The biggest problem was lack of communication," said Petros. "HBA was not aware that we (the commissioners) had already studied impact fees for two years."

The commission will next adopt its impact fee ordinance during a meeting set for Aug. 7, now that the HBA has been satisfied tentatively.

John Howell, attorney for HBA, said, "Commissioner Petros has now presented information that further documents the capital expenses. If there are any problems remaining with the ordinance, we will present our comments to the commission at that time."

Contracted to gather professional documentation in a 10-week study was engineering firm Briley, Wild, and Associates. Supplementing its data with the information collected by Lake Mary commissioners, the engineers will release their findings at next Thursday's city commission meeting.

"Right now the study is in draft form," said planner Linda Lester, "and we will be reviewing it next week. We did quite a bit of work on this project."

Cheryl Lynch, HBA's governmental affairs

director, said, "We feel pretty comfortable now with the Lake Mary ordinance. We are supportive over-all of the ordinance but we would like to see other sources of revenue explored. So we're working with legislators on gas tax increases and other revenue sources that could address service deficiencies. We want to keep affordable housing in this area."

John Howell, attorney for HBA said, "If there are any problems remaining with the ordinance we will present our comments to the commission at that time. I really have to commend the people of Lake Mary. They have been very cooperative and helpful and they have shown me a desire to do things legally and fairly."

A source wishing to remain anonymous explained the background on impact fees. "Lake Mary has a voluntary fire department at this time, but all of the services that are provided by city government must be paid by somebody."

"When a new development of 700 or 800 homes is established, you may need a larger water tank, new fire engines, more police cars... All these things, created to serve the new population, cost money. Current residents would be paying constantly for these new services. So it's an impact—there is an effect."

"The people already here are not getting any increased benefits. So, where there has been rapid growth, the idea of impact fees has come about. New property owners must not pay all but their fair share of coming into the community."

Impact fees have been addressed by the courts which determined there must be a direct relationship between fee amount and improvements. Impact fees cannot be used for salaries, such as hiring a new secretary or increasing the number of police officers. Impact fees are used for capital items only, such as fire trucks, water

Crack Bust Suspect Allegedly Part Of Haitian Drug Ring

By Karen Talley
and Deane Jordan

In what Sanford police say is their largest crack cocaine bust to date, 60 grams of the drug, worth more than $10,000, were seized from a Belle Glade man arrested Thursday at 4:55 p.m. in the parking lot of Bojangle's Restaurant, U.S. Highway 17-92 and Airport Boulevard.

The man was carrying 29 grams of crack at the time of his arrest while the balance of the drug and nearly $3,000 were recovered from the Cavalier Motel room he was staying in, police said. The man's 1981 Subaru was also seized at the arrest, they said.

The amount of crack recovered has the potential "to get more than 1,000 people addicted," according to Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett, who said its seizure "will have some impact on drug availability in Sanford."

Patrick Charles, 22, of Belle Glade, has been charged with trafficking cocaine, possession of cocaine, possession of cocaine with intent to sell and possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana, police said. He was being held without bond at the Seminole County Jail.

Police said Charles was targeted as a major distributor in the Sanford area through a probe begun about three months ago. He is a member of a Haitian drug ring that operates from the Miami area, regularly transporting crack for sale in Central Florida, police said.

Harriett described the arrest as "certainly significant, because it's a seizure of all drugs and money at one time," but added because of crack's widespread

Sixty grams of "crack" cocaine and $3,000 are displayed at the Sanford Police Department late Thursday following the arrest of a suspected drug trafficker from Belle Glade, Fla. The 22-year-old man who police is part of a Haitian ring was arrested after about three months of undercover work by the police. Police Chief Steve Harriett said the man was carrying enough cocaine to addict 1,000 people.

School Tuition Goes Up

By Angela Woodhull
Herald Staff Writer

Harvard and Yale, once known as the most expensive universities in the US, have been outpriced by Bennington College in Vermont where a bachelor's degree now costs $67,800. Bennington, whose high tuition sets a new record in American history, is followed by Barnard, Sarah Lawrence, and MIT as the nation's costliest U.S. colleges, where a year of tuition and fees averages about $16,500.

At Stetson University in DeLand residents will pay about $9,000 this year while commuters will spend about $6,400 for tuition and fees. "Comparatively, we are certainly not at the high end," said Mark McMasters, assistant director of admissions. "Even when compared against other institutions in Florida, we're about in the middle."

Showdown: The U.S. Vs. Apples

ROCKFORD, Ill. (UPI) — The U.S. attorney's office has filed suit against 672 cases of apples, claiming they were overprocessed with a preservative and unfit for human consumption.

"A quirk in the Food, Drug and Cosmetics Act makes us sue the product, not a company or person," a spokesman at the attorney's office said Thursday.

The case, the United States vs. 672 cases of evaporated apples, was filed last week in federal court in Rockford.

The attorney's office discovered evaporated apples processed by Del Monte Corp. had been exposed too long to a preservative, the spokesman said.

"So we sue the apples and wait for the company to either admit the apples are theirs or sit and do nothing. In which case we order the apples destroyed," he said.

The apples are sitting in Del Monte's Rochelle plant and can not be packaged for sale until the matter is resolved.

Waite To Return To Lebanon Soon

Waite said he was speaking on behalf of the pope and the archbishop in calling on the kidnapers to engage in further discussions and try to resolve the kidnap problem on the basis of "religious grounds."

Creamons Will Seek Charges

Candidate Suspect In Vandalism To Opponent's Signs

By Deane Jordan
Herald Staff Writer

A former aide to U.S. Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Florida, and candidate for a Florida house seat was implicated early today in the destruction of an opponent's political sign in Altamonte Springs.

An arrest was not made at the scene because the owner of the sign, Joe Creamons, could not be reached by authorities.

Police are not naming the suspect.

Creamons is expected to go to the Altamonte Springs Police Department today to ask that charges be filed against the suspect, police said.

Creamons said the suspect is Greg Gay, 34, of Longwood, Creamons' opponent. Gay could not be reached for comment.

Gay was Sen. Hawkins' representative in East Central Florida, including Seminole County, until he resigned from her staff in March to run for Florida House District Seat 27, the post held by Bobby Brantley of Longwood who is now the running mate of gubernatorial candidate Bob Martinez of Tampa.

According to a police report, a witness, at about 2:55 a.m., heard the sound of wood being broken and saw a suspect near Creamons' sign at 10055 State Road 434.

Officers were called to the scene and located a 34-year-old suspect with wood from the sign in his car. Since Creamons could not be reached, the 6-foot-1, 190-pound suspect was not arrested, police said.

According to Sgt. Jack Martin of the Altamonte Police, if Creamons agrees to prosecution they will ask the State Attorney's Office to press misdemeanor charges.

Creamons said today he will talk with police before determining if he will ask that charges be filed. "There's a good chance that I'll ask charges be filed," Creamons said. "Evidently, the Altamonte Springs police did catch Mr. Gay in the act of tearing up one of my signs... We don't need that kind of people in government."

Donna Creamons, Creamons' wife, said several of her husband's campaign signs have been defaced recently. She said the other defaced signs were in west Seminole County and in Volusia County.

Relaxes Planned Unit Development Size Restraints

City Agrees With P&Z Board On Parcel Size

By Karen Talley
Herald Staff Writer

Sanford took a step toward acquiring its first planned unit development when city commissioners agreed with a Planning and Zoning board recommendation to decrease PUD size requirements for parcels from 100 to one acre.

By relaxing PUD size restraints, while retaining building code constraints, the city has said it will promote both creative and controlled construction.

A PUD rezoning allows flexibility of land utilization, contingent upon site plan review and approval from both the P&Z and city commission.

Commissioners accompanied their Monday evening sanction of the P&Z recognition of the P&Z's recent election of officers. Commended by commissioners were John Morris, elected to his second term as P&Z chairman, and Jay Malone, the board's new vice-chairman. Malone assumes the spot held by Brent Carl, who continues to serve on the board.

Morris, a former Sanford city commissioner, was named to the P&Z in 1981. Malone was appointed to the P&Z last year.

Commissioners also appointed civil engineer John Puder to the Historic Preservation Board and developer Bob McKee to the Board of Adjustment and Appeals.

McKee assumes the spot vacated by attorney Tom Whigham's resignation, and Puder replaces attorney Albert Fitts, who also resigned his position. In accepting Fitts' resignation, commissioners agreed that his longtime ties to Sanford and extensive knowledge of the city's history warranted his receiving a city commission certificate of appreciation.

Evaporation Proposed For Contaminated Water Cleanup

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — The operator of Three Mile Island proposed Thursday evaporating 2.1 million gallons of radioactive water produced in the 1979 near-meltdown at the nuclear power plant and its cleanup.

GPU Nuclear Corp. said the water would be boiled at TMI and the steam released into the air. The residue would be shipped to a low-level radioactive waste dump in the state of Washington.

Frank Standerfer, director of the damaged Unit No. 2 reactor for GPU Nuclear, said at a news briefing that the steam would contain only harmless traces of radioactivity.

"It's a routine way of getting rid of liquid waste," said Standerfer, who added the disposal process should pose no risks to the health and safety of TMI-area residents.

The proposal was submitted Thursday morning to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, whose approval is required.

William Travers, the NRC's director of Unit 2, said he could not immediately predict whether the agency would approve the plan. But Travers added there appeared to be no safety problems.

Robert Pollard, a nuclear safety engineer with the Union of Concerned Scientists, said he was unable to comment on the safety of the evaporation process without a review of technical data.

"It doesn't strike me as totally out of the question," Pollard said in a telephone interview from his Washington, D.C., office.

In choosing the evaporation process, GPU Nuclear rejected two less expensive disposal methods, including the locally unpopular discharge of the water into the Susquehanna River.

Water from TMI's operating Unit No. 1 reactor and some unrestricted cleanup water from Unit 2 is routinely discharged into the river from the nearby island power plant.

Unit 2 was crippled on March 28, 1979, in a near-meltdown, the worst accident in the history of U.S. commercial nuclear power. The $1 billion cleanup of the reactor is projected to be completed in 1988. About a million gallons of radioactive water was produced in the accident, Standerfer said. Mixed with water used in the cleanup, the pool is expected to grow to a maximum of 2.1 million gallons.

The 2.1 million gallons would fill a 10-foot-deep, Olympic-size swimming pool about two times. Prior to evaporation, the water would be treated to remove most radioactivity.

Under GPU Nuclear's disposal plan, the water would be turned to steam in a boiler set up at TMI by a contractor, Standerfer said. The water would evaporate at a rate of about 3 gallons a minute.

About 90 percent of the water would turn to steam, he said. The remaining 10 percent, in the form of residue, would be solidified and shipped to the Washington dump.

The residue is expected to total between 30,000 and 60,000 cubic feet, Standerfer said.

GPU Nuclear hopes to begin the evaporation disposal next summer and complete the process in 2 1/2 years, he said. The expected cost is $10 million.

His Back To Politics, He's Back In Development

A candidate from Altamonte Springs for his party's nomination as lieutenant governor of Florida, whose running mate recently withdrew from the race to fill Gov. Bob Graham's office, says there will "always be another day" to pursue political aspirations.

In the meantime, he and a business partner will pursue developing 180 acres of land in Altamonte Springs into a multi-family, commercial and retail center.

Bob Hattaway, who ended eight years as a member of Florida's House of Representatives in 1982, and recently withdrew from the race for the lieutenant governor's job along with running-mate Barry Kutun, the candidate for governor, will team up with business associate and friend Charles Bradshaw for the yet unnamed project.

Bradshaw owns the 180 acres the two will develop. Hattaway said the property, which was "80 percent citrus" before killing freezes, is located south of the Highway 436-Forest City Road intersection. He said no cost estimate for the project has been finalized.

"Land values are difficult to determine, but it will be sizable... one of the largest projects in the Seminole County-Altamonte Springs area," Hattaway said.

The plans are still flexible, but Hattaway says tentatively projected are 600 multifamily dwelling units on 30 acres, retail commercial on 78 acres, offices on 25 acres, showroom-warehouses on 19 acres, and 18 acres for parks and recreation. In addition, 10 acres will be designated for road right-of-way use and a hotel is also planned.

"We haven't contacted major hotel companies yet, but we'll put out feelers to the majors and see what response we get," Hattaway said. He added that the 600 dwelling units may be apartments.

50 acres of the land was annexed into the city of Altamonte Springs last year, and Hattaway says he will file for annexation of the remainder of the land Friday.

"Altamonte Springs has all the necessary ingredients such as water and sewer, and police and fire protection in place," Hattaway said. "We're following what Altamonte Springs has said it wants in that area in their Comprehensive Land Use Plan," he added.

Hattaway said he also has an eye on 60 acres of land owned by Coca-Cola next to the project. That land contains a defunct orange grove and the closed Minute Maid orange juice plant owned by Coke. But he said Coke has offered the property for sale through Cushman & Wakefield of Florida firm.

"I feel that before the Development of Regional Impact process is over, Coke or a new property owner will work with us. It just makes better planning and better sense for the two largest property owners in that area to work together," Hattaway said. With or without Coke's land, Hattaway says, "We're going to proceed with our plans."

He said Hugh Harling of the Harling, Locklin & Associates planning firm will serve as consultant on the project, and work with the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council and the area governmental agencies.

This won't be the first project Hattaway and Bradshaw have worked on together. Two years ago, they completed the Lake Lotus Planned Unit Development of 150 acres.

In addition, Hattaway is developing other projects. Including the Forest City Executive Park, two miles from the latest venture. Planned there are the White Rose Nursery, a Wendy's Restaurant, a Kindercare child care center and 20,000 square feet of office space. He's also developing lakefront property on Prairie Lake, and an industrial park between Longwood and Altamonte Springs on Charlotte Street.

Hattaway, 49, is the president of Altamonte Realty and president of Bob Hattaway Real Estate Corporation.

The entrepreneur says he enjoyed his recent run for state-wide office.

"It was expensive ($1.3 million), but I enjoyed it," Hattaway said. "It was a great opportunity to meet people state-wide, and had we made it, it would have benefited central Florida and Seminole County."

He says he's not considering another political run now, but leaves the door open for future political aspirations.

"There's always another day," Hattaway said. —Paul Schaefer

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — If the San Francisco Giants have been unable to capitalize on their good pitching of late, at least they were able to take advantage of some bad opposing pitching. In addition to hitting more homers than any other left-hander in NL history, the 6-foot-4 first baseman known as "Stretch" became the first player to hit two homers in one inning, and set a major-league mark when he drew 45 intentional walks in his MVP year of 1969. Hassey Back In Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI) — Ron Hassey could probably qualify for a "frequent flier" plan for his flights between New York and Chicago. Hassey, the veteran catcher, has been traded for three times in the last 10 months by the Chicago White Sox but hadn't played a game in a White Sox uniform until Wednesday night. And, when he did, he bounced into two double plays to thwart rallies against the Boston Red Sox. Hoping the "third time is a charm," Hassey came to the White Sox in a six-player trade Tuesday night that sent former rookie-of-the-year Ron Kittle, infielder Wayne Tolleson and catcher Joel Skinner to the New York Yankees in exchange for infielder Carlos Martinez, Hassey and a pitcher to be named later. "Trading is part of the game. Guys get traded," Hassey said. "The guys the Yankees got will help them. The players that came over here should help this club." The Sox thought so much of Hassey that he seemed to be mentioned in every trade talk with the Yankees since Dec. 12.

A.L. Baseball

Then, Chicago acquired Hassey along with pitcher Joe Cowley from New York in exchange for pitcher Britt Burns, shortstop Mike Soper and outfielder Glen Braxton. Before he could even get his uniform fitted, Hassey was dispatched from Chicago back to the Yankees in a multi-player trade that brought pitcher Neil Allen and catcher-outfielder Scott Bradley to Chicago. "It really wasn't a big thing because it was before spring training began," Hassey said. "It wasn't like it was a major thing or anything." Hassey should have been used to short trips to Chicago. In 1984, he was dealt June 14 by Cleveland to the Chicago Cubs in the trade that brought eventual Cy Young Award-winner Rick Sutcliffe and George Frazier to Chicago in exchange for Joe Carter, Mel Hall and Don Schulze. "I really never got a chance to play there," said Hassey, who batted .333 in just 19 games before being hurt and out for

Young Athletes Stunned By Idols' Deaths

By Murray Olderman
If you have any doubts about young athletes being affected by the transgressions of their sports heroes, read the following from Tena J. Jackson of Severn, Md.:
"I enjoyed your article in the Maryland Gazette on the deaths of Len Bias and Gene Lipscomb. I am a 16-year-old, soon-to-be junior at Glen Burnie High School. I love basketball. I play for my school as well as a county recreational team.
"I had watched Len Bias play in more games than I'm able to count, both on television and at the court. I looked up to him, saw him as an idol almost. I'm working toward a basketball scholarship for college and saw Len as someone I could look up to.
"When I heard about his death and its cause, I was shattered. How could my idol, the greatest college basketball player in the country (in my opinion), be dead because of drugs?
"A good friend of mine was killed as a result of a drug overdose just a few months ago. He, too, was an athlete and a good one at that... He had talent, lots of friends, good looks and, unfortunately, an addiction to drugs. A lot of us had high hopes for (him), just as all of us did for Len Bias. Few of us knew of his drug addiction, and his death tore us apart.
"I'm really not sure what it is I'm trying to say... I guess I'm trying to thank you for an input into all that has happened."
Tena, you put things into words very well. You're also growing up.
The drug dilemma is the overriding topic in sports these stop-gap measure. They want to curb the bad publicity stirred up by the cases of Len Bias and Don Rogers.

Mandatory testing doesn't bother me on constitutional grounds. But I'm not convinced it'll be a deterrent to professional athletes. Testing didn't curb drug obsessions of Micheal Ray Richardson or Steve Lucas or John Drew or John Howe. And it hasn't kept several pro football stars from being abruptly phased out of the game. By now, coaches and managers should be aware enough to recognize the symptoms. They don't need a urinalysis to know who the users are. Sure, they'll be fooled occasionally. Historically, there've been drunks (I lump them with the addicts) who hung on to professional careers for a number of years. But ultimately, failure to perform in the game will eliminate sniffers and ingesters and needle-jabbers a lot quicker than random spot-checking.

I know NFL coaches who've released players with recurring habits because they were too disruptive. And no one moaned about their rights being infringed.
But the problem has to be attacked at a much earlier stage — like high school, when burgeoning athletes are exposed to drug-oriented peer pressures. I'd like to know what you school principals and coaches are doing. And like college, when unscrupulous people — including agents — entice athletes with drugs. The educational process has to start before the jock gets enough money to be seduced by the insidious drug culture.
If knowledge of the consequences of drug use won't deter him, get rid of him, just like you do with anyone who falls down on the job. Often, they'll get rid of themselves. I don't see any other way to handle it.

Preventing Sports Injuries Clinic Aug. 25 At Winter Park Hospital

"Preventing Youth Sports Injuries: A Clinic For Coaches & Parents," sponsored by The Wellness Center at Winter Park Memorial Hospital in cooperation with WFTV-9 and the Central Florida YMCAs, will be held on Aug. 12 from 7-9 p.m. in the hospital's library auditorium.
Registration is $5, which includes a handbook on sports injury prevention. A sports first aid kit will also be distributed to each team represented.
"Many sports-related injuries can be prevented, and the first line of defense is an informed coach or parent," Dr. Gwinner Murray, an orthopedist and staff physician at Winter Park Memorial Hospital, said. "For example, a youngster should always get a proper warm-up before jumping into a sports activity. And in Florida especially, water should be available to players before, during and after practice to avoid cramping and fatigue."
Advance registration is suggested since attendance is limited to 225 persons. To register, or for additional information, contact The Wellness Center at Winter Park Memorial Hospital, 646-7443.

MAJOR INDEPENDENTS
1985 UPI ranking — Penn State 3rd.
1986 contenders for UPI Top 20 — Penn St., Notre Dame.
Most improved — Cincinnati followed 29 season with 5-6 last year.
Seventeen starters return, including QB Danny McCoin, who completed 57.2 percent of passes for 1,574 yards and 12 TDs, and RB Reggie Taylor, who seeks third straight 1,000-yard season.
New coaches — Lou Holtz, Notre Dame, replacing Gerry Faust, 5-6 in 1985, who accepted job coaching Akron. Mike Gottfried, Pittsburgh, replacing Fogie Fazio, 5-5 in 1985, who took job as defensive coordinator for ILB at Notre Dame.
Starters returning, starters lost — Penn St. 1985, Army 7-15, Syracuse 11-11, West Virginia 14-6, Notre Dame 12-10, Pitt 13-9, Cincinnati 17-5, Temple 16-4, Boston College 15-7, Navy 9-13, Rutgers 10-13.
Leading players (1985 stats) — Paul Palmer, RB, Temple, (1,516 yards, second in nation in yards gained per game), D.J. Dozier, RB, Penn St., (722 yards in injury-plagued season), Shane Conlan, LB, Penn St., (91 tackles, forced 4 fumbles and recovered 1), Don McPherson, QB, Syracuse, set school records for passing yardage (1,449) and TD passes (12) in season, Shawn Halloran, QB, BC, (completed 53.3 percent for 2,935 yards, 12 TDs and 23 INTs in first year replacing Doug Flutie), Charles Giaman, RB, Pitt, (1,085 yards rushing as sophomore), Tim Brown, WR, Notre Dame, (led Irish receivers with 23 catches for 297 yards and 3 TDs).
Leading newcomers — Jeff Ains, LB, Notre Dame, 16th best high-school recruit in nation as determined for UPI by talent scout Max Entlinger, Michael Davis, LB, and Andrew Stewart, DE, Cincinnati, Major Harris, QB, West Virginia, completed 191-of-348 passes in prior career for 2,907 yards and 26 TDs. Jeff Pearson, OL, Notre Dame, was named high-school All-America by Parade and USA Today.
Coach — Penn St. should regain its class of northern independents as Outback Joe Palumbo returns 16 starters. He must again decide whether John Shaffer or Matt Knizer will be QB. Notre Dame should improve under new coach Holtz and Gottfried has talented crop at Pitt. Temple's Palmer could help Owls, but he is best talent behind No. OL. QB McPherson's a multi-talented performer capable of leading Syracuse to another bowl. BC went 4-8 in first Fiddle-less season, but could be better if injuries are averted. Army has been to bowl games in each of last 2 seasons, but Coach Jim Young must replace 13 starters. West Virginia went 7-3 last year. Rutgers should be a bowl team if they are able to match that. Rutgers struggled at 2-8-1 and face difficult schedule. Navy was 4-7 with star TB Napoleon McCallum, but he's gone.
Key games — Temple at Penn St., Sept. 6, 4-7, who gave Nittany Lions tough game last year, seek first victory in series since 1932. Penn St. at Alabama, Oct. 25. Lions play second game on road. Syracuse at West Virginia, Nov. 22. Orange seek to avenge last year's 13-0 loss. Pitt at Penn St., Nov. 22, annual battle for state supremacy as Panthers remember 31-0 loss in '85. Army-Navy in Philadelphia, Dec. 4, annual battle between service academies.

1986 contenders for UPI Top 20 — Miami, Florida State, South Carolina.
Most improved — South Carolina, 5-6 last year but should rebound with a new run-and-shoot offense and eight starters back on defense. Only four starters return on offense, but red-shirt freshman quarterback Todd Ellis has an offensive arm that should flourish in.
New coaches — Charlie Bailey, Memphis State, replaces Ray Dempsey, who left after a 2-7 record in 1985 and is now retired.
Starters returning, starters lost — Miami 10-4, Florida State, 14-8, South Carolina, 12-10, Memphis State, 10-25, Mississippi, 12-9, Virginia Tech, 10-12, East Carolina, 14-9, Louisville, 17-5, Tulane, 12-10.
Leading players (1985 stats) — Vinny Testaverde, senior QB, Miami, Fla., (passed for 3,238 yards and 21 touchdowns, top Heisman Trophy candidate), Jerome Brown, senior DT, Miami, Fla., 6-3, 275 (9 QB sacks, 75 tackles, Outland Trophy candidate), Selwyn Brown, junior SS, Miami, Fla., (94 tackles, 3 INT including a 100-yard touchdown), Chip Ferguson, sophomore QB, Florida State, stepped in at the end of last season and had an outstanding Gator Bowl (20 of 43 for 338 yards and 2 TDs), Victor Floyd, sophomore TB, Florida State, (averaged 6.9 yards on 90 attempts), Marc Zeno, junior WR, Tulane (caught 73 passes, 1,137 yards, Mike Balfanz, LB, Louisville (had to make 153 tackles on weak defensive unit), Dennis Borcy, senior DE, Memphis State (82 tackles and 208 for career).
Leading newcomers — Todd Ellis, freshman, H.C. Rusty Trull, strong-armed red-shirt from Greensboro, N.C. Rusty Trull, freshman QB, Memphis State, has a good chance to be starter by season's end, Fabian Diaz, sophomore OL, Louisville, transfer from Santa Monica, Calif., Junior College, becomes starter, Chris Baucic, freshman QB, Virginia Tech., may start.
Outlook — Miami, loaded and a challenger for No. 1, will know its chances after playing Florida and Oklahoma in September. With a few breaks, Florida State also could be there, though a finish on par 10th and 20th is more likely. South Carolina should improve rebounding year though a winning record is within reach. New Memphis State coach Charlie Bailey has only 11 starters returning from a squad that won only two games in 1985. Southern Mississippi may get a bowl, especially if it upsets one of the biggies on schedule. East Carolina, Tulane and Louisville hope things will better but probably not this year.
Key games — Miami vs. Florida State, Nov. 1, at Orange Bowl; home team has 20-9 record in this rivalry since Miami did it in 1981; the road team has 20-9 record in series. Miami vs. South Carolina, Aug. 20, at South Carolina. Miami has its eyes on the No. 1 ranking and the Gamecocks are trying to prove they are not as bad as they looked last year. Florida State vs. South Carolina, Nov. 8, at South Carolina. The Seminoles won 54-14 last year but Gamecocks catch Florida State a week after its emotional game with Miami.

FELKER DRAWS ATTENTION

The affable Rocky Felker, who left Alabama as an assistant coach for the head job at Mississippi State back in January, was an immediate success among the more than 400 media members present. Felker, known throughout the conference for the positions he has held with two league schools and remembers from his skills as a player with the Bulldogs in the 70's, was the most sought-after personality on the first day.
His schedule was probably one of the toughest to meet as many writers wanted a chance to talk to the nation's youngest head coach.
"No, I'm not into predictions," Felker said when asked if he predicted MSU to win the SEC. That may have been the best thing he could say in light of the prognostications of his predecessor, Enry Bellard, who said last year that the Bulldogs would be at the top of the heap when the battles were over.
Brewer defends Charlie Brewer once again defended his school's drug testing program and said it would be hard to determine at this point in the NCAA investigation of the Rebels would play any role in this year's season.

Gardening

August Gardening Is Considered Tough Even For Experts

Gardening this time of year is really tough. And, August is the worst, even for the expert gardener. It is usually so hot that most of us limit our gardening chores to mowing the lawn. But, it's a real good time to sit in the shade and dream about a fall vegetable garden.

The wise gardener will have selected a good site for the garden, added a generous quantity of manure, peat moss, compost, or forest humus, and spaded it into the soil. The next step is to pick up a pencil and decide what you want to plant. Then, you'll need to make a detailed map of your garden. Designing the layout of your garden can make the difference between success and failure.

What you need to figure out is the location of each crop, the amount to be planted, planting dates, and the varieties you want to grow. Try to plan your garden so crops that will be planted about the same time, and reach the picking stage at the same time, are close together. By setting up this way, you'll be able to keep the whole garden in production almost continually.

Within each section of the garden, arrange your crops by plant size. Put low-growing vegetables, such as radishes, turnips, mustard, and lettuce along one side. Plant those that will reach medium height, such as peppers, squash, bush beans, in the middle of the section. Then, put tall-growing ones, such as sweet corn, pole beans, and staked tomatoes, along the other side. By doing this, you'll avoid having the low-growing vegetables stuck in the shade of the taller plants. Run your rows north and south, so each row will benefit from the greatest amount of sunlight.

You can plant two or more crops in a single row, as long as they require about the same spacing. For example, you can interplant a fast growing crop, like radishes, with a slow-growing crop. The radishes would be pulled before the slower maturing plants need the space.

Needless to say, don't plant too much of any one crop at a time. Especially those vegetables that must be eaten shortly after they're harvested. To have fresh produce over a long period, plant small amounts of the same crop at 10- to 14-day intervals. This works great for crops that have a short period of peak quality, such as beans, sweet corn, and peas. It's possible to prolong the season of a crop by planting two or more varieties of a vegetable that have different maturity dates. And, be sure you plant sweet corn in blocks rather than in a single row. This gives better pollination as corn is wind pollinated, and you'll pick more filled-out ears.

Crops, such as strawberries, that span more than one growing season should be planted to one side of the garden. Otherwise, you'll find they will get in the way of seasonal cultivation of other crops. Be sure to leave plenty of room between rows, so you can work easily with whatever tools you need to use.

Design your garden so you can rotate crops from year to year. If you avoid growing the same crops or the same type of crop in the same spot more than once every three or four years, you may reduce the build-up of soil-borne diseases which can destroy your plants before you know it.

If weeds, soil-borne diseases and insects, and nematodes have been a problem, you may want to fumigate with Vapam or try "soil solarization." Soil solarization requires no chemical fumigants, but depends on the sun's energy to get the job done. All you have to do is prepare your soil in the normal fashion, making sure it is thoroughly moistened, then covering the garden with a clear plastic sheet for at least four weeks during the hottest time of the year — right now! Be sure you weigh down the edges of the tarp with soil to prevent it from blowing away.

Use clear polythylene plastic sheeting, not black. Sunlight will pass through the clear plastic to heat the soil directly. Black plastic intercepts the sunlight, and soil is heated by conduction only where the soil contacts the plastic. Heat generated when the sun hits black plastic is lost directly to the outside air. The clear plastic produces higher soil temperatures faster than the black plastic.

The garden soil should be covered at least four weeks to do a proper job of killing weed seeds, nematodes, and diseases. But, leave the tarp in place until you're ready to plant. This will maximize the treatment and reduce the chance of recontamination before planting.

It appears, according to research, that most of the effect is obtained from the long-term increase of soil temperatures in the normal root zone. Temperatures of the covered soil six inches deep are about 111°-122° F. This is 14°-23° F. higher than temperatures of uncovered soil in California tests. In Florida, 30 days of solarization of soil infested with rootknot nematodes and wilt fungi increased yields of tomatoes 48 percent over those grown in soil that had been kept fallow for the same 30 days. Will affected 80 percent of plants in the fallow plots, but only eight percent in the solarized plots. I guess that tells you something. It's worth the effort if you really want to be successful.

Christmas Can Be Celebrated In July

Christmas in July. This idea was conceived in the hearts and minds of Rev. Willis Patten, Pastor of The First Christian Church, Sanford, the Rev. Edward Webber and mission workers came out on July 27, to give service, cheer and love to the residents of The Good Samaritan Home.

They sang carols, and gave each resident Christmas gifts and ice cream. How happy these old ones were to receive Christmas — they were all aglow and there were many happy and smiling faces. Missionaries of the church helping to spread the joy were the pastor's wife, Phyllis Patten, Doreen and Pat Cavanaugh, who led the singing and music, and Louie Mellor. The residents of Good Sam are indeed thankful to Rev. Patten, Rev. Webber and the missionary department for their offering of love from the church.

Ordination service for Minister Joseph S. Smith will be held Aug. 3 at 3 p.m. at the Bibleway Faith Ministry Church, 175 Division St., Oviedo. Minister Smith, son of Mrs. Gladys Smith, and Johnnie his wife have two boys. Dr. Samuel Stephens is

High School Graduates Speak In Tongue Foreign To Grandma's Ears

DEAR ABBY: Last week I attended my granddaughter's high school graduation and had the dubious pleasure of overhearing a conversation between a gabble of graduates. The conversation went like this:

"Hey, Amy, stand over by the lilac bush so's I can get your pitcher. And for gawd's sake, get that cap tassell out of your eyes! The sucker don't add nothin' to your beauty, you know."

"I seen Kevin and I told him he done real good in his salutory speech, and he — you know — blushed bright red an' an' — you know — acted like the wimp he is."

"Lisa asked me if I was invited to Joe's party an' I go. 'Sure, why not?' an' she goes, 'Well, I thought him an' you split,' and I go, 'No way! Him an' me still have a thing goin,' ya know — like wow!'"

"Ain't this graduation a blast? Really awesome — and I mean it. Everyone got their diplomas."

Abby, what language are these graduates speaking? Where did they learn it? In their English classes? From their peers who have matriculated in several years of training in grammar and still can't speak intelligently enough to be accepted for more than the most menial job?

PERSNICKETY

DEAR PERSNICKETY: The graduates are speaking English, as they learned it from their peers. It was not taught in the classroom — but it was tolerated there. My heart goes out to the young people. Their manner of speaking is not necessarily a fair evaluation of their intelligence. It is more a reflection on an educational system that failed, and on a society that doesn't care.

DEAR ABBY: This is a minister's response to the problem created by small children who disrupt wedding ceremonies by becoming restless, talkative and whining. The parents you wrote about pushed past the ushers who politely asked them to leave the child in the church nursery, which was staffed with licensed attendants.

You were asked, "How can a situation like this be prevented." Your reply: "It can't, unless bouncers are enlisted!"

I have a better solution: When planning the wedding with the bride and groom, I ask their permission to make an announcement before the wedding. If they agree (and so far they have), I walk out in front of the guests, the organist lowers the volume to almost nothing, then I say, "My name is Pastor Paul, and I have two very important requests to make on behalf of the bride and groom: The first: Please do not take flash pictures during the ceremony. The second: If you have a small child who begins to cry, please do not wait, hoping the child will stop, but take the child out immediately so that others will be able to enjoy the ceremony."

The above has worked very well, underscoring an old adage: An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

THE REV. PAUL MCKOWEN, FREMONT, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: In my wildest imaginings, I never thought I would be writing to Dear Abby, but listen to this. After attending a 50th high school reunion, my "first love" wrote to me telling me the old feelings had never died. Abby, he has a marriage of 42 years and I am a recent widow.

He's written some beautiful letters and I have answered all but the last one. Now my good friends, whose judgment I respect, are saying, "No more correspondence with this old flame!"

So far it's been very exciting but harmless. What do you think?

BLONDIE, CLASS OF '35

DEAR BLONDIE: With such smart friends you don't need any advice from Dear Abby.

Listen To Mother, But Check Doctor

DEAR DR. GOTT — My mother's friend says that a girl shouldn't use tampons until she's married. Another friend says that tampons will stretch the hymen, but won't break it. What's the truth here? I'm 15 and active in sports, and using a sanitary pad is getting to be a drag.

DEAR READER — A tampon will break the hymen if the hymen is large and the tampon is inserted correctly. On other hand, the hymen can be broken by physical activity. Further, many girls do not have much of a hymen to begin with, so I think your best option is to discuss the situation with your doctor and determine if tampons would be appropriate for you. Waiting until marriage seems to me to be an overly strict point of view; your mother may be willing to let you use tampons, providing your doctor OKs them.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Can my girlfriend get pregnant during her period?

DEAR READER — That would be highly unlikely, but, unfortunately, it is possible.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My brother is 18 and still wets the bed. What can be done about it?

DEAR READER — The answer depends on the reasons your brother continues to wet the bed. He may have a physical problem, such as incontinence, that should be investigated by a urologist; or his bedwetting may be due to emotional factors that could best be addressed by counseling. Either way, this problem is clearly abnormal for an 18-year-old to have. I'd start with a physical examination first and then move into counseling if that is needed.

DEAR DR. GOTT — How is manic depression treated? The doctor has my husband on four uppers and four downers a day, but if depression is caused by a chemical imbalance, why so many drugs?

DEAR READER — Manic depression (abnormally wide mood swings) is better treated with other medicine — like lithium — than with stimulants and depressants. I think your husband should get another opinion.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have a sweet taste in my mouth all the time. Blood tests appear normal. My doctor isn't concerned. Should I be?

DEAR READER — Not necessarily. But I'd advise you to see a dentist. Dental conditions, including cavities or denture problems, may cause both sweet and foul tastes in the mouth.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, Ohio, 44101.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
 A safety play is a bridge insurance policy. The premium you pay is usually one trick. At rubber bridge it's worth the price to guarantee your contract.

clubs split 3-2, he could make at least one overtrick and maybe more. But if they did not behave, playing out A-K-Q might doom the contract. At rubber bridge there is little choice. Clubs will split 4-1 a little more than 28 percent of the time, so playing a low club at trick two is cheap insurance.

It's a tougher decision at duplicate. If all players holding your cards are going to be in game, you may not wish to play safe, since an overtrick or two may give you the best result on that deal. On the other hand, if you are doubled or in a contract that very few other players will reach, then you will surely want to play as safely as possible to make what you have bid. Today's deal illustrates the problem.

Tournament bridge is a different story. Unless you have a bloodhound's nose for smelling out the bad split, play for as many tricks as possible. It's clear on this deal that every tournament competitor will be in three no-trump, so you might as well try to outscore the field in overtricks. Furthermore, if you take the safety play at duplicate, you might just find that on this deal you lose to every pair in the room by a lousy 30 points.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY AUGUST 2, 1988
 In the year ahead you may attempt several very ambitious ventures. You have what it takes to make them work, provided you stay in your areas of expertise.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Doing something for another in hopes that you will receive more in return will backfire today. Try to be helpful out of the goodness of your heart. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences that will govern you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A night out on the town with friends will bring pleasure. However, do not overindulge nor stay out too late, or tomorrow you may regret it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In order to gratify your ambitious aims today, you may unthinkingly tread on a few toes. Your actions won't enhance your image.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's always wise to consider the advice offered by others, but today you may be unduly influenced by unsound suggestions.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Move cautiously today on investment proposals where you are being pressured to put up funds immediately. It's best you sleep on it.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) When dealing with close friends today, be both diplomatic and polite, even if their behavior is provoking and frustrating. This will pass.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's best not to single-handedly attempt arduous tasks today that require a competent helper. Wait until the aid you need arrives.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) All forms of risky enterprises should be given a wide berth today. Play everything close to the vest and don't look for nor expect something for nothing.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) There's a chance family members or relatives may not display proper gratitude for your efforts today. Subdue your ire and keep on trying anyway.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be extra careful today not to pass on gossip about a mutual friend of someone you'll be talking with. Your remarks will get back to and offend the party.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There's a possibility that you may go to extremes today in the management of your resources. The pendulum could swing from stungliness to extravagance.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) If there is something important you want to do today, try to do it free from outside influences. Companions will hinder you.

Artistry In Shells

Photos and Article
By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

There are several schools of thought when it comes to sea shells.

Some are purists, like Sanford's Jim Bates, who has outfitted a special room at his home to showcase the thousands upon thousands of sea shells he has collected over the past 15 years.

Bates, 37, wouldn't dream of transforming any of his shells, which he considers natural works of art, into a shell duck or any other cutesy-type trinket that might appeal to a different breed of shell fancier.

But for those who like "spiffed" up shells, who might want a sand dollar that has been painted with a Florida scene and had clockworks added, or who want a shell "sculptured" animal or other creation, there are dealers like Sanford's Tom Baughman who stand ready to feed that need.

Baughman, with vats of shells from around the world on display at a flea market south of Sanford, said his sand dollar clocks, for which he gets single orders from shops for 2,500, have been selling like hotcakes for the past couple of years.

He learned to paint, he said, just to fill his first order for the clocks, and for the last three years Baughman has had a finger on the pulse of a certain shell market.

Shell collectors who eye his collection are looking for something cheap, usually a conch shell. "Fifty-cents or less is usually their price limit. Many shoppers are tourists, looking for a beachside souvenir. However, he said, many locals buy shells, to add local color to their decor or to give an authentic undersea look to their aquarium.

"There are shells you can't take out of Florida waters, like the queen conch, the horse conch. They're protected now," Baughman said. However, he added such shells can be found in other waters, and suppliers import them into the Florida market.

Although Bates has collected most of his shells himself, starting as a U.S.

Navy man stationed to island duty, he has also bought some from other parts of the world he missed in his shell search.

He goes for variety and said he couldn't pick a favorite out of his massive collection, but within sub groups he has favorites, like a fingernail-sized cowrie shell, which under microscopic examination reveals tiny dots on its surface. There are even smaller dots within those dots, and that excites Bates.

"It's fascinating to see so many different configurations of shells," he said.

Bates added that "There is no chain of evolution that you can refer to shells showing they have evolved from something else." Each is the exoskeleton of a sea creature which hasn't changed and evolved over the ages, he said.

He was first attracted to "the completely different world" under the ocean and then began noticing and collecting shells on his dives.

"It's such an interesting

Jim Bates has a special room for his collection hobby. There's so many of them. There's nothing in here that's fixed, painted or polished," he said of his collection. "It's fascinating to see that the things that are in the ocean can create such color, patterns and shapes."

He has scallop shells from Japan that have individual color ranges from bright yellow, orange and purple to red.

"I don't like shell art," he said. "I don't like shell ducks. To me it's a waste of art. This is the only way shells should be seen - displayed - because they're just so unique."

Even his older shells still excite Bates. He said he visits his shell room probably five times a week for about half-an-hour each time. He singled out a shell and said, "I go over to this shell and automatically it's 1971 again. It's the Indian Ocean again.

"It's probably like a big diamond ring to Liz Taylor. Every time she looks at it she goes 'Wow!'" Bates said.

About five years ago, Bates said, he went a bit overboard with his shells. He started entering Florida shell shows. His shells won awards, but when he found himself angry because he didn't win the third plaque in a show after taking the two other prizes offered, he decided to get out of the shell show game.

"Now it's for my enjoyment. Back then it was an intensified hobby," he said.

In recent months, since Bates completed his shell room, he has shown his treasures to two groups of school children and that's an activity he plans to continue.

Whatever your view on sea shells, they are found or financed art. They can take you to the shore or under the sea in memory, or in some cases, if you put one to your ear, they can bring the sound of the ocean roaring home.

Cousteau's Final Voyage

Rediscovering Paradise

By Mark Schwed
UPI TV Editor

ABOARD THE ALCYONE (UPI) — The creatures in Mexico's Sea of Cortez have their own way of throwing out the welcome mat for Jacques Cousteau and his crew of French divers.

One grand manta ray vaults out of the water high enough to do a triple back flip and then slaps back on the water just yards from the bow.

A school of dolphin, with at least one baby in tow, swims over to the Alcyone. Cousteau's turbine-and-computer-powered windship without sails.

Flying fish streak across the bow and a lone sea lion pops his snout above the water and curiously peeks at the passing humans.

It is almost as if they know Cousteau is on his final voyage.

Cousteau has launched his most ambitious expedition since 1968 when he began the series "The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau" — a five-year "Rediscovery of the World" excursion that will circumnavigate the globe.

Among other places, the journey will take him to China's Yangtze River, Haiti's waters of sorrow, South America's Cape Horn and Mexico's Sea of Cortez.

In 20 one-hour television specials, Cousteau and crews aboard the Alcyone and Calypso will visit lands discovered centuries ago by such explorers as Christopher Columbus, Charles Darwin and Amerigo Vesputi.

The $15 million voyage will be presented on the Turner Broadcasting System's WTBS SuperStation. His next special, "Cuba: Waters of Destiny," airs Sept. 10.

Cousteau will be 80 years old when the voyage ends in 1990. When it is completed, he plans to turn the reins over to his son, Jean-Michel Cousteau.

"What we hope to accomplish is simple — to improve the quality of life," Cousteau says. "My aim is to better understand what's going on in this damn world."

Cousteau, called the "father of undersea archeology," began diving in the 1930s and has been responsible for many developments in undersea exploration: the aqualung in 1943, underwater television equipment in 1951 and the diving saucer in 1959.

But more importantly, he has become a whistleblower for the environment, warning of past, present and future disasters. He speaks for the creatures of the sea, land and air, and he believes humans are the strangest of all.

"Hunters are working to diminish the quality of the race," Cousteau says. "I would commit suicide if I was a hunter."

But he didn't always feel that way. As a youth he made a wager that he could take a curtain rod and use it to spear a fish. He won the bet.

"I did a couple of stupid things like this because I was baffled by the familiarity of the fish," Cousteau says.

Preacher's Daughter Succeeds As Singer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — somebody is going to be there." Dunn, 28, said she sounds "like a total prude, but I'm not."

But before the trip she was concerned about logistical problems she had never before encountered.

"Right now it's extra tough because we don't have a bus. We have a van. There is no way to get away from anybody. In a bus you can crawl into your bunk and stay lost for a couple of days. But when you are in a van you're just right on top of each other."

She said bad attitudes can wreck a band.

"You know, you're tired anyway, wrung out, and tensions can be high in the best of circumstances. You don't want someone there that can create more problems than are necessary. I probably looked more at personalities and how laid back and congenial they were and of course if they are good musicians," she said.

"The first of anything is scary. It's the first time I'm totally responsible for the lives of four other people. Responsible for pay and everything."

"I'm having to get a trailer for my van and I found out you just can't get a trailer hitch. It has to be a custom trailer hitch because of the way it's engineered."

The young singer insists she is going to be "the boss" of her all-male band.

"I'm laid back. So I decided I wanted to find nice clean-cut, all-around type folks. I didn't want any showing up drunk. I wanted people I could depend on. Being on the road is hard enough without worrying if somebody is going to be there." Dunn, 28, said she sounds "like a total prude, but I'm not."

"It's a little bite better"

To Catholics, 'O' Is For 'Objectionable'

By Frank Sanello
HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — The Roman Catholic Church once condemned "Gone with the Wind" because of Rhett Butler's climactic line about not giving a damn. During the '40s, the Church's Legion of Decency also condemned the Christmas perennial "Miracle on 34th Street" because its heroine was a divorcee. During the '50s, "The Moon Is Blue" was condemned because William Holden uttered the word "virgin" on screen. During the '60s, the Legion of Decency changed its name to the U.S. Catholic Conference to avoid the hellfire and brimstone connotations. And during the early '80s, the Conference replaced its C-rating, for "condemned," with an "O" classification, for (morally) "objectionable." Its other ratings remain unchanged: An A-1 classification means all age groups can view a film without moral peril. A-2 is for teens and adults, but leave the small children at home. A-3 is for adults only. And an A-4 film is "not morally offensive, but requires caution and some analysis as protection against wrong interpretations." Until recently, these changes seemed to be cosmetic. In 1983, "Poltergeist" was rated "O" because the film's parents smoked marijuana and their teenage daughter engaged in pre-marital sex, although it took place off-screen. A year later, "Return of the Jedi" earned an A-2 rating (not for small children) because Princess Leia appeared in a skimpy leather bikini. Yet this summer's "Poltergeist II" received a mild A-2 despite salty language and supernatural violence. The Catholic Conference movie ratings have become more sophisticated and less moralistic since Tony Zaza, 41, a filmmaker and college professor, took over early this year from Michael Gallagher, an ex-Jesuit priest. Zaza coordinates a group of 25 consultants — Catholics, Protestants, Jews, housewives, teachers, priests, laymen — who collectively decide on each film's rating. Their decisions, plus capsule reviews explaining how they reached them, are printed in 130 Roman Catholic publications with a combined readership nationwide of more than 500,000. Zaza stresses that the U.S. Catholic Conference is not a censorship board. "We're simply providing a guideline," he says. "The decision about what to see or not to see is a matter of personal conscience." In a typical recent case, "Top Gun," which under the old regime would have automatically been condemned for Tom Cruise's extramarital affair with Kelly McGillis, received the relatively mild A-3 rating (OK for adults). "The romantic interlude was an extremely minor element of the film — and it was shot in silhouette," says Zaza. "Legal Eagles" featured not one but two affairs and still wound up rated only A-3. Zaza criticizes Daryl Hannah's bedroom scene with Robert Redford, but not on moral grounds: "It was a very implausible plot device to keep Hannah in the story. We're trying to give more weight to aesthetic considerations." Violence, profanity and graphic sex still make the Church's new "C"-list. "Cobra" and "Raw Deal" both got the big "O" for excessive bloodletting. "Ruthless People" was condemned for a scene in which a bare-breasted woman hangs out of a car window, screaming. Chides Zaza: "I thought it was a low point in the history of Disney." (Disney's subsidiary, Touchstone, released "Ruthless People.") "The car scene," Zaza adds, "is as explicit as a stag film!"

Happy Birthday MTV

NEW YORK (UPI) — The rocket ship that changed the face of television blasted off at midnight, Aug. 1, 1981. An Apollo spacecraft filled the screen, the final countdown in progress.

"Ladies and gentleman, this is rock 'n' roll," a voice announced at liftoff, as the screen filled with the Buggles singing "Video Killed the Radio Star" and Music Television was born.

MTV's splashy graphics and rat-a-tat-tat pace quickly became the rage. Kids everywhere were glued to the screen "watching" the newest songs.

All this in five years. MTV celebrates its fifth anniversary Aug. 1 with a big month-long traveling birthday bash, "Amuck in America."
