Red Cross helps victims of flood

SANFORD — Due to torrential rains last night, today, and heavy rains expected over the weekend, Thanksgiving will not be so pleasant for more than 25 families in the Sanford area.

The volunteer Disaster Action Team of the Central Florida Chapter of the American Red Cross have been working all day to help local families affected by the flooding in and around Sanford.

Out of 25 families affected, five families will be housed by the Red Cross over this Thanksgiving holiday weekend. The other families will stay with friends and relatives and will receive other Red Cross assistance in the days ahead.

Thanks to the local McDonald's chain, hamburgers, orange drink and cookies are currently being provided to those affected, some who haven't eaten since yesterday, through the Red Cross Emergency Response Vehicle.

Lodging, clothing and groceries are also being coordinated at this time.

Red Cross officials estimate initial relief costs at approximately $3,500.

Woman suing Sheriff's office

A Deltona County woman is suing the Seminole County Sheriff's Department claiming a 1990 collision with a deputy left her with medical and emotional injuries.

The suit filed on behalf of Dovie Little requests at least $15,000 for pain and suffering as a result of the August 15, 1990 accident. The suit was filed at the Seminole County courthouse by Orlando attorney Hart Baker.

The suit claims that Little was driving her car on 15th Street when it was struck in the rear by a deputy driving a Seminole County patrol car. The suit claims the deputy did not take reasonable care in his driving and caused the accident.

Since that time, Little has suffered symptoms which include pain, disability, disfigurement, medical expenses and loss of income, the suit states. The suit claims that all of the injuries are permanent in nature.

Baker has asked for a jury trial on the matter, although no court date has yet been set.

Thanksgiving - the first holiday

The observance of Thanksgiving was the first annual holiday by presidential proclamation. President George Washington proclaimed Nov. 26, 1789 to be the first Thanksgiving Day. Both houses of Congress had requested Washington to recommend a day of public thanksgiving and prayer.

The congressional request said it should be observed, "By acknowledging with grateful hearts the many and signal favors of Almighty God, especially by affording them an opportunity to peaceably establish a form of government for their safety and happiness."

The proclamation was issued on Oct. 3, 1889. Tradition associates the day as being marked by a feast, in keeping with the meal shared between the Pilgrims and Indians after the Pilgrim settlement was established near Plymouth Rock in the 1620's.

During the years, scholars have attempted to dispel the story. Some have claimed that the Pilgrims invited the Indians to the meal and later captured or murdered some of them.

Thanksgiving however, continues as a time to gather friends and loved ones together, to share a meal.

The holiday ranks near Christmas and Easter, in business closings. It is also the day for huge parades and football classics.

The only thanks not given may come from turkeys, who give their lives for today's observance, but the turkey farmers more than make up for it in showing their appreciation for having the largest sale period of the year.

Customer survey fails to endorse increase to call Orlando

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — City officials say north Seminole County telephone customers failed to endorse a $3.25 increase in monthly charges to call Orlando toll-free, although most survey respondents said they would accept the increase.

If the results are officially upheld, the mayors of Lake Mary and Sanford and the chairman of the Seminole County Commission, say they will continue to push for an 80-cent increase rejected by the Florida Public Service Commission Aug. 18. Should the PSC uphold their earlier decision, the local officials say they will accept a 25-cent per call plan, at least for now.

"If they reject the position we've had all along, I would recommend the 25-cent plan and then have a re-evaluation in two years," said Lake Mary Mayor Randy Morris.

"We don't have anything to lose with that option," said Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith.

"My position is unchanged," said county commission chairman Bob Sturm. "We've already paid more than we should for a number of years."

City Manager John Litton said he counted the ballots at the PSC's Tallahassee office last week. Litton said he counted 6,824 "yes" votes and 5,726 "no" votes for the $3.25 increase.

PSC communications specialist Julian O'Pry said under the survey rule in effect at the time, a majority of all of the approximately 37,000 Southern Bell customers in north Seminole County must support the plan before the PSC will SANFORD — Community celebrations for Thanksgiving got underway Tuesday and really kicked into gear on Wednesday.

There was a little something for everyone, including those who might not have a lot to be thankful for the rest of the year.

At the Crooms School of Choice there was a grand meal for the needy from the community who were invited to eat. And at the Sanford Civic Center, the Mayor's Soup-er Supper attracted a crowd of those who hoped to help buy food for the hungry.

On Tuesday evening the Sanford/Lake Mary Christian Ministerial Fellowship, an interdenominational ministry, sponsored a Community Service of Thanksgiving at the Congregational Christian Church of Sanford.

The offering from the communitywide service was donated to the mayor's second annual Soup-er Supper. According to the Rev. Tom Tkachuk, who organized the event more than $380 was raised for the Soup-er Supper.

"It was really tremendous to see the outpouring of love from the community," Tkachuk said.

Proceeds from the Soup-er Supper will be split equally between the Sanford Christian Sharing Center, Poincetta Avenue and 25th Street, and the Rescue Outreach Mission, on West 13th Street.

At the Crooms dinner people were waiting to get their food half an hour before the doors opened.

"We just started serving early," principal Barbara Kirby said. "There are so many here who need to be fed."

The dinner, prepared by teachers, students and administrators at the school has become an annual tradition in the Goldsboro community among those who might otherwise have nothing to eat for the holiday usually highlighted by food.

Turkeys were donated to the SANFORD — A group of inmates at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility, who partake in the facility's work release program, believe they have an obligation to help those who are less fortunate than they.

The men, who are serving time on charges ranging from drug use to white collar crimes, have collected $235 which they gave to the Sanford Christian Sharing Center. The money was used to purchase turkeys and hams for the holiday food baskets that were distributed by the center for Thanksgiving.

SANFORD — The head of a three-county coalition raising questions about the death of a black man at the hands of a Volusia County deputy said he is satisfied with the response of the governor's office and the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

"I feel like Tallahassee will take a very good look at this. I think they will take this very seriously. I'm as confident as I've ever been with the state," said Johnell Jackson.

Jackson and six others traveled to Tallahassee Monday where they met with Tracy Whitman, a legal aide of Gov. Lawton Chiles, who promised a further review of the case and a possible civil inquest by the state. The coalition representatives also spoke with FDLE officials who released the agency's investigative summary of the matter.

The coalition is raising questions about the shooting death of an Osteen man, Leonard Acree, 33, by Volusia Deputy Michael Philbrick in August in Deltona. Acree was shot 11 times by the deputy who said Acree attacked him.

"We are not saying it was not self-defense. We are asking why 11 shots?" Jackson said.

In addition, the coalition has questioned why Philbrick was hired

Probation procedures scrutinized

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A review of Seminole County Probation Department procedures may follow the arrest Monday of an employee on charges she stole a probationer's check.

County Administrative Judge Fred Hill said he would review the case and determine if department procedures should be changed.

"I don't know if this case indicates any changes are warranted," said Hill. "But if they are, you can be sure we'll make them."

But county probation manager Yvonne Taylor expressed confidence in her department.

"I feel confident with our procedures which allowed us to catch this," said Taylor.

According to arrest reports, Hazel Patricia Carter, 34, 2013 Water Edge Drive, Deltona, was arrested Monday and charged with the theft and forgery of a $120 money order received by the department Aug. 25 in payment for court-ordered fees. Carter was taken to the Seminole County jail and held on $1,500 bond, according to arrest reports.

Police state Carter altered the money order, which had been payable to the county, and made it payable to United Telephone. Reports state that when the probationer came into the office to make a final payment, she was told her first payment had not been received.

Supreme Court may settle embryo case

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — The U.S. Supreme Court may get the last word in the legal battle over seven frozen human embryos. Mary Sue Davis Stowe, whose 1989 divorce centered on what would become of the embryos she and her former husband fostered while married, authorized a petition for appeal to the high court, attorney R.D. Haas said Tuesday. Now, he said, "We are just hoping and praying they will hear the case."

Haas, one of three lawyers representing Mrs. Stowe, who now lives in Titusville, Fla., said the appeal would be on grounds that constitutional guarantees of privacy were violated. He said he filed papers with the Tennessee Supreme Court to delay its orders on the embryos' disposition until the U.S. Supreme Court decides.

The Tennessee Supreme Court ruled Monday the embryos should be donated to research or discarded. Donating them would require approval from both Mrs. Stowe and her former husband, Junior Lewis Davis. Such approval is unlikely.

AIDS victim goes home for holidays

ST. PETERSBURG — A weak and jaundiced Ricky Ray, the eldest of three hemophiliac brothers with the AIDS virus, left a hospital Wednesday, fulfilling a wish to spend Thanksgiving at home with his family.

"We've got a lot to be thankful for," said his mother, Louise Ray. "Even if Ricky doesn't make it through this, I feel we have our miracle because he is going home even if it is only for a day. He went home, and that means a lot."

The 15-year-old, who like his brothers is believed to have contracted the virus through tainted blood products, entered the hospital Oct. 17 with pneumonia, an inflamed pancreas, a viral infection and internal bleeding.

"Ricky was talking from the very first days he came to the hospital that he wanted to be home for the holidays," said Dr. Jerry Barbosa, his physician at All Children's Hospital.

On discharge he remained in serious condition, on oxygen, unable to eat and dependent on high-calorie fluids to sustain him. Although the bleeding had stopped the pneumonia hadn't cleared and he was still fighting pancreatitis, Barbosa said.

UF creates new college

GAINESVILLE — The University of Florida has created a College of Natural Resources and Environment to coordinate educational programs and degrees sought by students in those fields.

Although the number of those courses now offered by the state's largest school is measured in the hundreds and involves every college on campus, new students have to be detectives to weed them out and integrate them into degree programs, said university Vice President James M. Davidson.

"As such, we've recommended that a specific interdisciplinary undergraduate degree program be developed to provide an environmental major to students from all colleges," said Davidson, who is vice president for Agriculture and Natural Resources.

An interim dean will soon be appointed, and parts of the curriculum are expected to be available by the fall of 1993. A national search for a dean of the college will be conducted once the structure is complete.

"Natural resource and environmental education programs at UF could be formed into one of the top programs among U.S. universities thanks to a decade of recruiting faculty with established reputations and broad experience," Davidson said Tuesday.

Discipline recommended for 2 judges

TALLAHASSEE — An appeals court judge who stole a $30 remote control from a discount store should be removed from the bench, Florida's Judicial Qualifications Commission says.

Another appellate judge should be reprimanded by the state Supreme Court for using his position to endorse a Supreme Court member in a 1990 retention vote, the panel recommended Tuesday.

The Supreme Court will consider the recommendations. It isn't known when the high court will rule.

The commission said Judge Eugene Garrett of the 4th District Court of Appeals in West Palm Beach "intentionally committed a serious and grievous wrong" and should no longer be a judge.

Garrett told the 13-member panel in October his children's scholastic problems, his job stress and the 41st anniversary of his father's death left him so emotionally broken that he stole a VCR on May 31 from a Target store in Delray Beach.

"The stress Judge Garrett was under at the time of the incident was no more and probably a great deal less than the stress he will encounter during the remainder of his work life," the commission said in a 12-page recommendation.

The panel questioned testimony by Garrett's psychiatrist that several months of psychotherapy and medication would prevent a recurrence of emotional problems "which took 54 years to reach a climax."

Names of prostitute's clients must be made public

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — The client list of South Florida prostitute Kathy Willets, the deputy sheriff's wife who tried the now-famous "nymphomania defense," must be made public, the Florida Supreme Court, ruled Wednesday.

The justices, in a 6-1 decision that fortifies public access to court documents, ruled that the list of "John Does" is not protected by the state constitution's privacy amendment because they had taken part in criminal activity.

"Any right of privacy that the Does might have had is limited by the circumstances under which they assert that right," wrote Justice Parker Lee McDonald for the majority. "The circumstances here do not afford them such a right."

Justice Gerald Kogan issued a sharp dissent, comparing release of the names to Nathaniel Hawthorne's novel "The Scarlet Letter," in which a woman is forced to wear the letter "A" in public because of her adultery.

"People have a constitutionally protected interest in their good names," Kogan wrote.

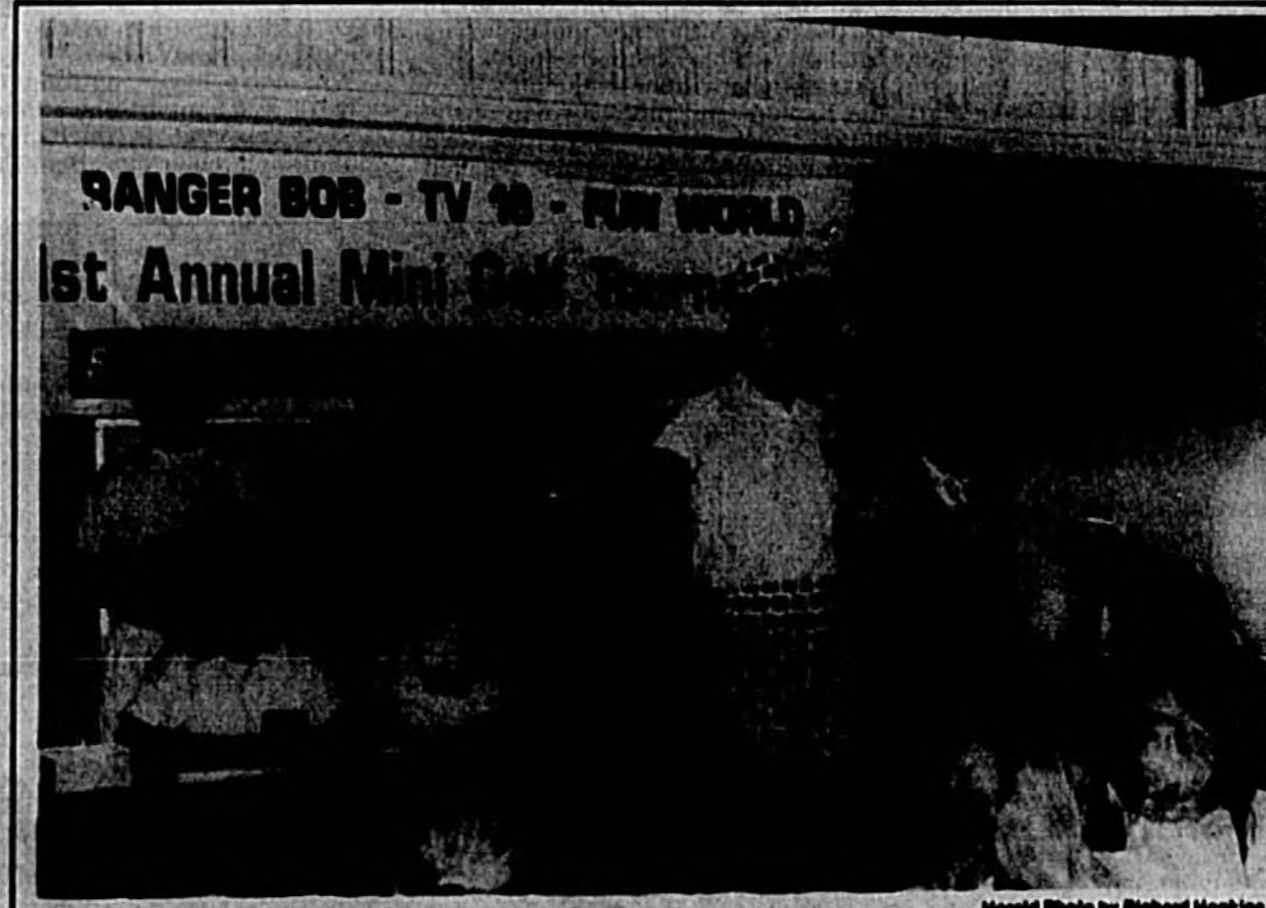

Mrs. Willets and her husband, Jeffrey, who was a Broward County Sheriff's Deputy when the case broke, were convicted of operating an illegal prostitution business in February following a trial that drew national attention. At one point, Mrs. Willets attorney claimed she slept with dozens of men as therapy for nymphomania.

She eventually pleaded guilty and was sentenced to probation, but is now jailed for breaking probation. Her husband was first sentenced to six months, but various related charges since have netted him at least three years in prison.

Testimony indicated Willets ran the enterprise and even filmed his wife in bed with clients from a nearby closet.

Those clients fought to keep their names out of the news media even after defense lawyers shared them with prosecutors, which meant they became public records under Florida law.

Killer of journalist identified

LIMA, Peru (AP) — A newspaper reported Tuesday that a witness has identified an imprisoned Shining Path cadre as involved in the beating and strangulation of a U.S. journalist in 1989.

The body of Todd C. Smith, a reporter for the Tampa Tribune in Florida, was found in November 1989 on the outskirts of Uchiza, 245 miles northwest of Lima, in Peru's coca-growing Upper Huallaga Valley. He was 28.

Smith had come to Peru on vacation to look into the drug trade in Peru. A sign found with his body indicated his killers mistook him for a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent.

Lima's daily Expresso reported Tuesday that a witness identified Jose Antonio Manrique as one of the men who tortured and killed Smith. The paper said Manrique is being held in Lima's Canto Grande prison on subversive charges.

Interior Ministry spokeswoman Rosa Corrales said she had no immediate confirmation of the report.

"When I was sleeping in a corner of the cabin, the Shining Path members brought in a young white man, whom I later recognized as the North American journalist from photographs published in the newspapers," the paper quoted the witness as saying. "They began beating him savagely and shouting at him, demanding to know the reason for his visit to Uchiza."

The newspaper said the witness, who identified Manrique during a judicial investigation, was under police protection. The witness' identity was withheld.

The witness said Smith's hands were tied while he was beaten on the head and chest and that when he lost consciousness, the rebels strangled him.

According to Expresso, Smith's personal effects were found in Manrique's possession when he was arrested sometime in 1990. The newspaper said another suspect, Hector Adolpho Rodriguez, was also being held.

Peru is the source of more than half of the world's supply of coca leaf, the raw material used to produce cocaine.

Deadly game nets defendant 30 years as career criminal

MELBOURNE (AP) — Albert Denver Ingram was a career criminal, and his biggest crime was handing a woman a gun she used to kill herself, a judge has ruled.

"In the culmination of your career as a criminal, you participated in the destruction of another person's life," Circuit Judge Edward Richardson told Ingram Tuesday in sentencing him to 30 years in prison.

Ingram, 49, pleaded no contest in October to assisting Kathy Ann Humphreys kill herself as they played Russian roulette outside the Corner bar in Cocoa, Ms. Humphreys, 35, was the mother of three children.

"This was far from a game," the judge said. "It was a true human tragedy."

Ingram told police he met Ms. Humphreys at the bar the night of April 5 and they had drinks. He said he was despondent over his wife's death and felt life wasn't worth living.

The conversation turned to suicide. Ingram drove to his trailer home, got his roommate's loaded .357-Magnum revolver and returned to the bar. He told authorities he emptied the chamber except for one bullet and he and Ms. Humphreys spun the cylinder.

The pair argued over who would go first, but the woman took the gun and it fired, Ingram said. He told police he had promised to reload and shoot himself if Ms. Humphreys died first, but he panicked, wiped off the gun and drove home. There, he called his mother, who told him to call police.

Richardson sentenced Ingram as a violent career criminal, citing a record of armed robbery, burglary and escape that has spanned more than three decades.

In 1974, after being convicted of robbery, Ingram grabbed a bailiff's gun and escaped from a Bibb County, Ga., courtroom. He was caught and served a 15-year prison sentence.

Ingram will serve at least 15 years before he is released, prosecutor Russ Bauch said.

Defense attorney Doug Reynolds told the judge the woman's death had taken an emotional toll on Ingram, pointing out that his hair turned from blond to gray over the past six months.

The comment angered Ms. Humphreys' youngest sister, Mary Ann Snoddy.

"She's dead, and he's worried about gray hair?" Ms. Snoddy asked. "Whether or not he pulled the trigger, he murdered her, judge, and there is no reason he should be allowed back on the streets."

Another sister, Helen Sawyer, said she prayed Ingram would not forget the looks on the faces of the victim's three children, who were in the courtroom.

Spirit of giving, of saying thanks

To examine the meaning of this holiday, the name might be briefly split into two words, "Thanks," and "giving."

In most cases, thanks might be difficult to express if others refuse to give.

Probably no other holiday focuses as much on the needs of those who have little. Unfortunately, much of the help is only for this one day, and this one meal.

In Sanford, Lake Mary, and the surrounding areas, many organizations have been conducting special fund raising events. Proceeds go to insure that the less fortunate will have reason to give thanks for this day.

Turkeys have been cooked and sold, soup, and even grits have been served. Money obtained from these events will help provide a special meal for families selected by various churches in the area, as well as the Sanford Christian Sharing Center and the Rescue Outreach Mission.

None of this help would be possible without the people who work on the projects, and the citizens who participate through their financial support.

The city officials and citizens who worked diligently yesterday at the Lake Mary Civic Improvement Association building cooking turkeys for sale as well as give-aways; those who helped in the Sanford Chamber of Commerce turkey sale; the persons who volunteered to cook at the Mayor's Soup-er Supper; and the church workers, many of whom gave hours of their holiday time to help others. Each of these has reason to give thanks for the opportunity to help.

Tomorrow however, after the turkey has been reduced to left-overs and the football games have finished their fourth quarters, it is important that those who have, do not overlook those who have not.

Thanksgiving and Christmas may be the holidays where people see the need to help others, but the need goes on throughout the entire year.

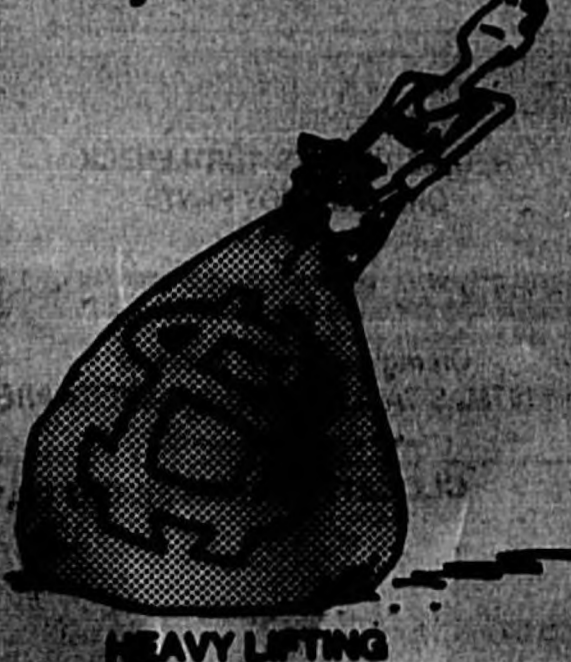

Whenever a function is held, become involved. Practice the joyful task of giving throughout the year. Let us be thankful for having enough to join in the giving, and possibly help make Thanksgiving occur throughout the year.

The words thanks and giving may be separated for momentary consideration, but they should remain together as this holiday indicates. There should not be giving without thanks, and there cannot be thanks, without giving.

Give pardons to Weinberger & Co.

The period between Election Day and Inauguration Day is no fun for a defeated president, and one could forgive George Bush for feeling rebelliously unwilling to do anybody any favors just now. But there is one great act of healing which is within his power, and which would conclude his presidency with a gesture that history would deem profoundly wise. That would be to pardon Cap Weinberger and all others charged with offenses in connection with the Iran-Contra affair.

Let's begin by remembering what all the shooting was about. The Democrats, naturally, professed to view the sale of a limited number of arms to Iran, in violation of our public posture against having anything to do with the regime, as somehow profoundly evil, though in fact it was at worst simply a well-intentioned mistake, occasioned by President Reagan's deep concern for the plight of our hostages in Lebanon.

Even the diversion, unknown to Mr. Reagan, of part of the proceeds of the sale to the Nicaraguan Contras (assuming it ever occurred) was "illegal" only if one relies on a series of self-contradictory laws (the "Boland amendments") passed by Congress — laws whose seriousness can be gauged by the fact that Congress neglected to prescribe any penalty for violating them.

Yet the Democrats have insisted on treating the whole affair, and the failure of officials of the executive branch to tell them all about it, as some great lesson in the constitutional obligations of the executive branch to a Congress of the opposite party.

Significantly, despite the desperate efforts of special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh to salvage something from his six-year, $40 million fiasco, not a single person has yet been convicted in connection with either the original arms sales or the alleged diversion. A handful of small fry, faced with ruinously expensive legal bills, have pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor of withholding information from Congress, and that's all.

But Mr. Walsh has one last hope, before his investigation goes down the tube. Discovering that the personal notes of Reagan Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger, which Weinberger had voluntarily turned over to the Library of Congress, contain comments on executive branch conferences dealing with the arms sales, Walsh has indicted Weinberger for failing to bring these records up during interrogations by his office. The irony is that the notes demonstrate that Weinberger himself strongly opposed the very sales that Walsh has tried so long (and so unsuccessfully) to criminalize.

So now Casper Weinberger must find the millions it will take to round out Lawrence Walsh's record as a total failure, or stand convicted of having tried to conceal his own opposition to the alleged misdeeds that Walsh was assigned to investigate.

This pathetic farce, born of the inevitable conflict between presidents and Congresses of different parties, and perpetuated by the natural desire of the Democrats to keep the show going as long as there are any Republicans left unindicted, unimpovertished, and undefamed, can be brought to an end by George Bush with a stroke of his pen.

The period between Election Day and Inauguration Day is no fun for a defeated president.

Clinton and sins of transition

There are certain rites of passage: it is a bit bracing to note, for example, that three of the senators I first interviewed upon becoming a Washington correspondent are buildings now.

Richard Russell of Georgia, Everett Dirksen of Illinois, Philip Hart of Michigan — they stood tall in the Senate in 1967 and they stand tall along Constitution Avenue today, as the official names of the Senate office buildings.

But big news was also made back then by another senator who is not yet taken for grants: J. William Fulbright of Arkansas. His historic televised foreign relations committee inquiry into the Vietnam War produced a public grilling of a secretary of state; Dean Rusk professed to see no wrong in a policy that had gone very wrong indeed. Fulbright called it "the arrogance of power."

It is even more bracing to recall how, as a witness 25-year-old correspondent for Newsday, I made it my business to get to know all the important people (Fulbright, his top aides, etc.) — but I never bothered to trade with anyone on unemployment as the committee's young messenger, that kid with Bushy-like hair and a professorial face who was always hovering, was eager to please. I never bothered to even introduce myself to Fulbright's gofer, Bill Clinton, who was then matriaculating at Georgetown U.

And it is bracing to observe that, while Clinton's boss was unmaking an administration's "arrogance of power," another fellow who is now a great power — George Stephanopoulos, the president-elect's director of communications — was matriaculating in kindergarten.

It is good that we will soon have, not just a new team but a new generation, running things in Washington. But it will be a shame if, because of ignorance, compounded by inexperience, they don't cause how quickly Washington can wind up running them.

Indeed, Bill Clinton's best and brightest may be committing some of the same errors we've seen repeated in the recent transition of power: in 1960 (Johnson-Nixon), 1976 (Ford-Carter), and 1980 (Carter-Reagan).

These errors occur because advisers who spent a year thinking about campaign tactics haven't shifted gears so fast as official Washington has. Clinton's advisers seem to be operating as though they are still running a campaign — thinking about how to raise (or not raise) "expectations," how to "spin" the Boss' every pronouncement, but official Washington (which includes the media) is already parsing every word and wink from Clinton and his advisers as policies for running the country.

That's why the president-elect made news three times so far, without achieving the emphasis he wanted:

1. Ethics. Clinton wanted to signal a Bright New Day and wound up being criticized for Washington hypocrisy-as-usual. He announced tighter-than-ever guidelines for transition aides. But aides seemed surprised when reporters asked obvious, legitimate questions about special interest ties of Clinton's top advisers. These could have been anticipated and resolved in the original announcement.

2. Gays in the military. Clinton must keep his campaign promise, but he didn't have to make this issue the first controversy of his yet-to-be-installed administration. Prudent consultation with military leaders should have preceded his public comment, not followed it.

3. Haitian refugees. Again, a promise must be kept. But lately Clinton has sounded like he might renge on admitting the refugees into the United States. Statements made in advance of a fully proposed program inevitably trigger stories about warring and wailing, as Clinton's spokesman would.

These mistakes weren't caused by an arrogance of power. They are rooted in an ignorance of power, a naivete about implied power and how quickly it shifts here. And they can be easily corrected, once the Clinton Clan grasps the unique essence of national government.

There are certain rites of passage.

An open letter to Socks Clinton

Dear Socks: Let me introduce myself. I am Samantha, a female tabby and native Washingtonian, born at the Animal Rescue League in March 1988. At the tender age of six weeks or so, I allowed myself to be adopted by the character who writes this column. He calls himself a Curmudgeon, but he didn't know the meaning of the word until the day he took me home.

First thing I did when they set me down in the kitchen, I strolled over to the dog of the house — Pendleton is his name — and I gave him a smack across the nose. Left ock, I think it was. Never had a minute's trouble after that. I am boss, queen of the manse. The dog knows. My feeders and litter-changers know.

I tell you this story, Socks, because frankly, you need a little assertiveness training. Remember what Cervantes said: "Those who'll play with cats must expect to be scratched."

When those cameramen held you aloft the other day there in Little Rock, you should have swatted one of them squarely across the nose. Drawn a little O-positive, if you know what I mean. It would have been the last time one of those Vainglories grabbed you.

And letting those paparazzi lure you through the gate at the governor's mansion with a little catnip so they could photograph you. Really, Socks. Beguiled with a little herb. Least you could've done is make them bait you with Whiskas Original Recipe. What it boils down to is dignity, Socks. "The cat is the most dignified of all animals," wrote novelist Louis Bromfield. "He is uniquely sensitive to any threat to his dignity." Remember that, Socks. You will be representing an ancient and noble breed. You must retain your dignity.

I do wish to compliment you, however, on the wonderful way you have trained the Litter Changer-Elect. After the scene with those cameramen picking you up, he put out the word that invasions of your privacy would not be tolerated. "Special note to all press from the highest authority," read the warning from the Clinton staff. "Don't touch the cat again." Nice.

Let's talk about dogs for a minute. You realize, of course, that you will be getting a lot of grief from canine fanciers who think your Litter Changer should get a dog. Cats are finicky creatures, they say. Dogs are more macho. Conjure up images of hunting and guns and all that.

This, of course, is errant nonsense. The pages of history are replete with the names of men who revered cats: Sir Isaac Newton, Dr. Samuel Johnson, Edgar Allen Poe, Charles Dickens, Alexander Dumas, Robert Southey, and even the prophet Mohammed.

Couple of other bits of advice, Socks. Your Litter Changer is going to be cornered many times by people he doesn't want to talk to, so you should work on all the standard cat tricks that could be used to divert the diabolical: The Hairball Retch, the Devil's Dash, the Riving Stare, and the Tummy Trap, where you invite them to scratch your belly and then apply the four-paw clamp.

And finally, try not to write any memoirs like that silly Mills. The dog couldn't type and had to use a ghostwriter. If you absolutely cannot resist the temptation to record your observations, then please learn a little WordPerfect.

It gets back to dignity, Socks. Remember your dignity.

Best of luck. Bless your friend, Samantha.

I tell you this story, Socks, because frankly, you need a little assertiveness training.

to participate in the project. "We're all working," he said. "We have some money and when I suggested this the others were ready to help."

Preston Allen, a counselor with the work release program, said the goal of the program is to help the residents get their lives back in order and to "start thinking straight."

He thinks the dozen men who contributed to the money for this cause are on their way to returning to society as more productive, caring people.

"I believe they are getting their lives straight again," he said.

Juan Adriatico said he is serving time for "crimes against the environment." He said he filed in some wetlands when working as a developer last year. Now he feels it is important to do something for his fellow man.

He believes that helping to feed those who are hungry will help others hear the gospel, which he would like to spread to as many as possible.

"If someone is hungry," Adriatico said, "he is not going to listen to the Word of God."

Some of the other residents who did not want to give their names said they thought the plan was a good one.

"I know what it's like to have no food and little hope of getting any," one man said. "I want this for them. I don't need any recognition for me."

Anderson said that the residents all agreed that the project was a worthy cause and they believe they can make a difference, even if it is a small one, in the lives of some people.

"We are doing something that I guess we hope someone would do for us in the same situation," he said.

when he had three previous complaints of brutality against him, including an incident in Allentown, N.H., where he was investigated for beating a prisoner in a cell.

Philbrick was fired Tuesday from the department because officials alleged he concealed the previous incidents of brutality when applying for the Volusia job.

Jackson said the FDLE investigative summary does give reasons to question whether excessive force was used.

"It does give us some belief that excessive force was used. Now there is the question of proving this by legal standards," he said.

The report does quote two witnesses who said the deputy fired a second burst of shots when Acree was on the ground. The report states that "(Mrs. Sharon) Kramewski further stated that the deputy then fired several shots at the black male, who she describes as already being prone on the ground."

The report also quotes a Mrs. Sheralee Johnson who testified that, although the first shots were justified, she thought the final three were fired when the suspect was on the ground (and) "probably didn't pose a threat to the deputy, and the last three shots were not justified."

The report quotes Philbrick as saying Acree wrestled his sap baton away from the deputy's gunbelt and began hitting him with it while shouting, "I'm going to kill you." Witnesses confirm the deputy was being hit with the baton when he started firing at Acree.

The summary also states that "It should be noted that in the opinion of the medical examiner, the wound locations and respective trajectory do not support or suggest that deliberate shots were fired while Acree was lying prone on the sidewalk."

The report notes that while Philbrick had never been involved in a shooting before this incident, that he had been the subject of an internal and criminal investigation relative to the use of excessive force.

During the years 1980 and 1982, Acree had a total of 20 arrests, including aggravated assault on a police officer and resisting arrest with violence, the report noted.

Jackson said his group will obtain a copy of the medical examiner's report today before making firm plans about other action.

project by several Las Vegas hotels, as they have been in the past.

The lunchroom staffs at Midway and Goldsboro elementary schools and Sanford Middle School donated their time to cook the stuffing.

"We had a complete traditional dinner," Sid Pollock, the Crooms school volunteer who coordinated the event. "It's kind of like a bit of stability for these people who don't have much stability."

Many of those who were fed at the dinner are homeless.

Some are indigent and could not afford a traditional meal with all the trimmings.

"They might have been eating a peanut butter and jelly sandwich just like every other day," Pollock said.

For those who could not come to Crooms, the meals were packaged up and brought to their homes. More than 500 meals were sent out to the community.

The crowd was slower in arriving at the Souper Supper. Few were seated by 5:30 p.m., half an hour after the event began, but Mayor Bettye Smith said many bought tickets, but really had no plans to come and eat.

"I think the idea is to raise money for these organizations and people just want to help," she said.

Paul Porter, a partner with Conklin, Porter and Holmes, said that he bought a ticket at the door even though his company is a corporate sponsor of the event.

"This is a good cause," he said. "I don't mind giving when it comes to something like this."

Phone

The 6,824 "yes" responses would fall short of the more than 18,000 votes needed to approve the plan under the rule. Even under new PSC balloting rules, the votes would fall to endorse the plan.

O'Pry said the PSC tally would not be released until Jan. 7 and refused to assert the accuracy of Litton's count. The PSC will review the results and the recommendation of PSC staff Jan. 19. PSC staff had recommended the 25-cent-per-call plan should the $3.25 per month plan fail.

Last year, Lake Mary commissioners, with Sanford and county commission following suit, asked the PSC to extend the local service calling area for north Seminole County customers to include Orlando. Many Seminole County residents work in the Orlando area and there is a significant amount of trade between the two communities, they argued.

Further, Seminole County officials argued the monthly rate should be no higher than the fee paid by Orlando customers because local residents would receive a similar level of service. North Seminole County customers were already 60 cents less than Orlando customers for about half the calling area.

Southern Bell officials argued there was not enough telephone traffic between the two communities to warrant the limited fee increase, but were willing to accept the $3.25 increase.

Contribute

Kirchner reported a total contribution amount of $1,092 during the first six weeks, with $697.53 in expenses.

Contributions included $300 from Reflections, $500 from Laura Bracken, and $100 from Andrew Bracken.

In all cases, campaign contributions were given for lesser amounts.

Sanford's city election is scheduled for Tuesday, Dec. 8. If required in the multiple-candidate district 1 race, a run-off election will be held on Dec. 22.

My Little Boy and Me

I dreamed I held you, just the other day.
You hadn't really changed, three years ago today.
I do remember laughing, as we began to play.
You held my hand so tightly, And squeezed my face so hard.
That little boy that I so love, was home, in my arms.
I told you how I'd missed you, and how very hard I've tried to carry on without you, when it hurts so much inside.
You looked at me and smiled, somehow knowing what I had said.
I remember, I started crying, as the dream quickly fled.
My tears continued falling, as I sat you, "Let him stay."
I wrote at that same moment. The rain, had washed it all away.
I guess I'll never know, why you had to leave.
But I thank you for that "special dream," of My Little Boy and Me.
I LOVE YOU AND MISS YOU JARAD DAD

Coach

 Two years (when Lyman was 3-17). Bill Scott was playing a lot of young kids and laying the foundation for this year's team," said Lawrence. "Then those kids became seniors and Larry took over."
 "Larry has done a good job of putting those pieces together."
 As Baker is quick to point out, the transition the Greyhounds had to make from playing for Coach Scott to playing for him was eased immensely by the efforts of assistant coaches Jack Bloomington, Reedy Cox and Ed Zarembo.
 "I think our staff is as good as anybody else's" said Lawrence. "Larry's done an outstanding job, no doubt about it."

Player

 the field except at halftime," Baker said. "He was a two-way performer up to midway through the season."
 "But after we went through that stretch where we lost three games in a row, we decided to keep him on offensive side of the ball so that he could be as fresh as possible."
 Washington responded by rushing for 500 yards in his next three games, scoring 10 touchdowns, kicking nine extra points and tossing his touchdown pass.
 Baker admitted that even in the light of such extraordinary numbers, it was a difficult decision to keep Washington off the field when the Greyhounds were on defense.
 "When you have the versatility to play as many spots as Bobby does, you can be hard pressed to narrow it down to just one position," said Baker, who is this year's Sanford Herald Coach of the Year (see related story).

 "It was a tough decision. We had reached a point where we had lost three games in a row and we felt we needed to do something."
 What Baker and his staff did was limit Washington and quarterback Todd Cleveland to offense and moved Dallas Simpson, Donnie Bell and LaDaryl Fenney over to the defensive unit fulltime.
 Led by Washington, the Greyhounds won their next four games and finished the season 6-4 after going 3-17 the last two seasons. This morning, the Hounds will cap that turnaround by hosting Freedom High School of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, in the annual Rotary Bowl.
 "Bobby and the rest of the team have done a fantastic job," said Baker. "My hat's off to them. But we have one more to go."

Packers, Green Bay faithful pine for return to 'Titletown'

By HAL BOCK
 AP Sports Writer
 GREEN BAY, Wis. — For $25.95, you can still get a single room at the Titletown Motel, just off the street from Victory Blvd, a couple of blocks away from Lombard Avenue and Lambeau Field, home of the Green Bay Packers. The place is a little faded at the edges, but then, until the last few weeks, the Packers have been, too.
 Titletown.
 That has a certain ring to it, doesn't it? This modest town adopted the name for itself in the 60s, when its football team was in the midst of five world championships in seven years, including the first two Super Bowl titles.
 Except for the NFC Central championship in 1972 and cameo appearances in the playoffs that year and after the 1983 strike season, the Packers have drifted aimlessly, losing since Lombard with depressing regularity.
 Now, with three wins in the last four weeks, Green Bay is stirring and the long-suffering fans love it. Each Sunday, they gather at the Candlestick Lounge to watch the Packers play. "We're quite used to the losing," said Debbie Deltrois, who owns the bar. "We expect them to win every time. We hope they'll win, but..."
 Lately they have. After a 2-5 start, the Packers, over Detroit, Philadelphia and Chicago have made November a good month for the Pack. Under a new administration, they're 5-6 now, threatening 500, the mark of mediocrity they've topped just five times since Lombard left town.
 The prosperity is nice, a welcome change from 25 years of living in the past, thinking of their first two Super Bowls when Lombard's team ran football.
 A sign on the back of the bar at the Candlestick offers a Packers Special — $1.75 drinks for a $1 anytime the Pack scores. "It doesn't cost me a lot," Deltrois said. "I get off real cheap."

without even looking.
 Brown has been a Packer for 11 years, drafted in the fourth round in 1982 from Virginia Tech. No one has been here longer. He has played 100 consecutive games and started 103 straight non-strike games. He is the model of consistency, even if his team isn't.
 "All the losing is very frustrating," he said. "But I keep losing it, no matter what. That's what keeps me going — my attitude. Nothing will change that. You come into camp every year thinking, 'This is it. This is the year we turn it around.'" "And you know what? One day we will, the day history will repeat itself and the Packers will win again."
 Teams are not bad for 25 years by accident. They must have a combination of sorry draft choices and terrible luck to be more than 50 games under .500 and to win more than eight games in a season just twice in a quarter century.
 Bad drafts. Bad luck. The Packers qualify on both counts.
 Stuff keeps happening to this team. Their history is full of wasted draft picks, especially in the first round where mistakes are devastating. "The draft has a lot to do with it," said Hall of Famer Paul Hornung, a cornerstone of the championship years. "In order to maintain excellence, you have to draft well. It compounds. If you have five or six poor drafts, you add 10 years to the rebuilding. They've drafted terribly."
 The record supports Hornung. Green Bay has just one player, cornerback Vinnie Clark, left from its 1991 draft. Tackle Tony Mandarich, drafted No. 1 in 1989, has been plagued by injury and illness and has not played again. Running back Brent Faulkner, drafted No. 1 in 1987, is out of football. Defensive back Mossy Card, acquired in a trade for Green Bay's No. 1 in 1986, wound up in jail. Tackle Bruce Clark, drafted No. 1 in 1980, opted instead to play in Canada.
 "A first round pick should be a star for 10 years," Hornung said. "They've drafted terribly. Sterling Sharpe is the only one who's a terrific player. Every No. 1 should be. They should be able to team immensely. They haven't.

 They drafted so poorly and they got some bad breaks. Second and third rounders never came through. Sometimes, you've got to get lucky. They've never had one of those. Everybody has the same list of players.
 They've drowned in inferiority. They have people starting who shouldn't be starting. They've got guys starting who should be on special teams. They went three years without a 100-yard game. By accident, somebody should get 100 yards. They went 28 straight quarters this season without a rushing touchdown. Jim Taylor and I used to get 15 or 16 touchdowns each in a 12-game season. That's 30 rushing touchdowns."
 If Hornung sounds upset, he is. And he is not alone.
 Bob Harlan, president and chief executive officer of the Packers, has been in the organization since 1971, a year before Titletown's last title. The burden for losing now lands on his doorstep.
 Our drafts have not been as productive as they should have been," he said. "The system is there to help. We have not taken advantage of the system."
 Harlan also believes the Lombard dynasty may have caused some of the problems Green Bay experienced after he left.
 "One of the things that hurt was that Lombard was so successful and we thought our person could always handle both jobs," he said. "I think the GM-coach concept hurt. It was successful with Lombard. You don't find many Lombards."
 Green Bay tried, first with Phil Bengson, a Lombard assistant, then with Tom Devine, then with Lombard's star Bart Starr and Forrest Gregg. It never worked. "We were late in transforming to two people," Harlan said.
 The Packers finally did in 1987, hiring Tom Brady and taking the GM duties away from Gregg. A year later, Gregg left, succeeded by Larry Infantino. Last year, both Brady and Infantino were dismissed, replaced by Wolf and Holmgren.
 "Now, it's Holly, Ron Wolf," Harlan said. "The feeling has changed by the executive committee and board of directors make football decisions. That's not true."

 That was not always the case. The Packers are unique, a publicly owned franchise with 4,827 shares of stock, 1,866 shareholders and a seven-member Executive Committee that governs the corporation. In 1971, Devine was hired as general manager, each by team president Dominic Olejczak.
 "There were some internal jealousies that go with a small town," Devine said. "I was Olejczak's choice. I told him I wouldn't come there unless I was the unanimous pick of the board, all seven people. I found out later it was five. Two others wanted somebody else. Those two hurt my team to make Olejczak look bad."
 The two holdouts sided with running back John Brockington in a contract dispute, negotiating his deal over Devine's protests. "When they did that, my days were numbered," Devine said. "I was the general manager. They cut me out from under me."
 That was not all Green Bay did to him.
 Unaccustomed to losing and upset by his trade of five draft picks, including consecutive No. 1's in 1973 and 1976 for quarterback John Hadl, the fans were in revolt. One disturbed individual even shot the coach's dog.
 "Shaken, Devine left for Notre Dame where he won a national championship. If he still were here, quite sure he'd be the Packers experience."
 "I think it comes down to a small town with petty jealousies," he said. "That was the common denominator, the small town atmosphere."
 Can all of this be repaired? Wolf's first draft — seven players made the team — and the trade that delivered quarterback Brett Favre encouraged Hornung.
 "Now they've got the main ingredient, a quarterback who backs like he could be great," Hornung said. "Sharpe gives him someone to throw to. They need some running backs. They need some defensive players. They're out there. You've got to find them. Two defensive linemen is enough. They need a third-down back, a guy to give the ball to on third-and-one."

Drug therapy helps in relief of vertigo

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I would like information on benign positional vertigo. I'm currently taking hydrochlorothiazide for control.

DEAR READER: Deep in each ear is a complex mechanism, called the labyrinth, that helps us orient our body position. When we get motion sick, it's the labyrinths that are overstimulated. Close your eyes and move your head. The labyrinths indicate the direction and speed of movement. When you lie in bed on your side, the labyrinths tell your brain the position of your head. It's a great system and it usually works well.

However, once in awhile things go wrong. Vertigo, the perception of spinning or turning, is due to inappropriate stimulation of the labyrinths. They're giving false information to the brain. This is sometimes caused by a presumed virus infection of the labyrinth but, frequently, no cause can be found. Benign positional vertigo refers to vertigo that occurs when the head is in a certain position; the situation can be helped by avoiding the position that initiates the vertigo. In addition, I've had success in treating the condition with Antivert, an anti-vertigo medication. Most cases of vertigo eventually clear up spontaneously.

In my opinion, patients with any form of vertigo should be examined by an otolaryngologist. Such a specialist may be able to discover a cause for the vertigo. Furthermore, some unusual types of ear tumors can cause vertigo, so I believe the symptom should be checked by a specialist.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Our dog had a problem with parasites mange and although he is cured, the rest of us continue feeling a terrible itch. Is it possible to have contracted mange from him and, if so, what can be done to cure it?

DEAR READER: Mange is a contagious skin disease of many mammals, including humans, that is caused by a tiny parasitic mite. In animals, it leads to unremitting itching and patchy loss of hair; in humans, the itch predominates. The infestation is curable with one of many anti-parasite lotions, including Kwell.

It is the middle of the deal. The dummy, North, holds Q-3-2 of spades. West has the K-J-6-5. If West decides it is right to switch to spades, which card should he lead?

The correct play is the jack. If South has the ace, he will lead it out. But if South holds 10-x-x of spades, only the lead of the jack guarantees picking up the whole suit without giving declarer a trick. This is called a surrounding play because West's J-6 surround declarer's 10.

However, there is a situation when it appears you have a surrounding play but you don't. West leads the heart six; two, three, jack. Declarer plays a diamond; two, eight, ace. What should East do now?

If he woodenly continues with another heart, declarer wins nine tricks: one spade, three hearts and five diamonds. However, East should see there is a grave risk that declarer is ready to claim. Probably East's next thought is to switch to a club. But which club?

If East leads the four, declarer just plays low and takes only three club tricks. Similarly, if East tries the surrounding play by leading the club jack, declarer covers and restricts his club losers to three. The only chance to get four club tricks is for East to assume South holds queen doubleton. The correct defense is to cash the club king before continuing with the four. When West leads his third and last club, East is sitting with the J-6 over dummy's 10-3 and the contract is defeated.

Readers are invited to send card-play questions to Phillip Alder, in care of this newspaper. They can be answered only through the column.

Elsie Farley honored on birthday

By HERMAN SCHROEDER
Herald Correspondent

Elsie Farley was the guest of honor at a birthday party at Bram Towers recently, celebrating her 92nd birthday.

Farley was born in Waxahatchie, Texas, Nov. 20, 1900, and grew up in Amelia, La. She moved to Sanford in 1960 where she worked at Yowell's Department Store for 18 years, and at Knight's Shoe Store before retiring.

Farley is a charter member of the Sanford Business and Professional Women's Club and Pilot Club of Sanford. She was in charge of refreshments at the senior dances at the Civic Center for 10 years and worked at the congregational meal site for 10 years.

Farley is a longtime member of the First Presbyterian Church of Sanford, and has been a member of Bram Towers' kitchen band for 15 years. Also, she was the first tenant to move into Bram Towers in 1972. Approximately two years ago she broke her hip and now gets about with the aid of a walker.

Hormone sure cure for teen bed-wetters

My husband is in the military and we live in Heidelberg, Germany. I read your column in the Stars and Stripes newspaper. A few months ago, you had a letter about a 16-year-old boy who was a bed-wetter. His doctor prescribed DDAVP and it cured the boy of bedwetting, which really changed his life.

Well, my daughter who is 19 years old still wets the bed in spite of alarms, diapers, restricting fluids, waking her up and walking her to the bathroom. We tried everything the doctors suggested, but nothing helped.

After reading about DDAVP, I immediately made an appointment with the doctor — telling his nurse on the phone about what I had read in your column. By the time my daughter and I saw the doctor, he had already done some research into DDAVP, and what he explained to us was amazing!

He said that DDAVP is a hormone that everyone has in his or her body. At night, after a person goes to sleep, this hormone kicks in and makes the kidneys absorb more fluid. In my daughter's case, her body wasn't producing the hormone at a higher level at night — hers just stayed the same all day and all night. (Therefore, she wet at night.) She also happens to be a deep sleeper.

Before giving her this medication, the doctor ran several tests on her to make sure there was nothing physically wrong with her. All her tests turned out normal.

Abby, she has been on DDAVP for two months, and since the first night she took it, she has had a dry bed! There are virtually no side effects, except that since the medication is administered through the nose (she uses a nasal spray) her nose gets slightly irritated. This hasn't bothered my daughter at all.

ADVICE

She will probably need to use DDAVP all her life, but when I think of how uncomfortable her life was — plus the endless washing of bed clothes and night clothes — I cannot tell you how happy we have been since we read your article. I wish we had known about it years ago. No one knows what a bed-wetter goes through. My daughter missed camping trips, sleeping over at friends' houses, etc. I am amazed that bed-wetting is such a hush-hush problem.

I know there are worse things in this world that kids have to endure while growing up, but I want people to know that there is help out there. Thank you from my daughter and me — from the bottom of our hearts.

"B" IN HEIDELBERG
DEAR B: I appreciate your writing. Bed-wetters of all ages would feel far less embarrassed if they knew how many "closet" bed-wetters there are: they number in the millions. Trust me.

DEAR ABBY: I know that a person can have his name changed legally if he wants to, but is it possible to change his birth date?

I am 11 years old and my birthday is Dec. 25, and ever since I can remember, whenever I get birthday presents, I was told, "And this is also your Christmas present."

Abby, I don't think that's fair. Is there a way I can change my birthday to sometime in June or July?

CREATED IN MEMPHIS
DEAR CREATED: Not officially, your date of birth is on your birth certificate, which is part of your permanent record. However, if you want to celebrate your birthday on the Fourth of July, nobody can stop you.

P.S. Queen Elizabeth II's birthday is in April, but she celebrates it in June when the weather is better in London.

Fetal brain transplants show promise in Parkinson's disease

By DANIEL G. MAREY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON — Three new studies provide the strongest evidence yet that transplants of brain tissue taken from aborted fetuses can help victims of Parkinson's disease regain control of their crippled bodies.

The experimental technique, which injects fetal tissue into the victims' damaged brains, could potentially benefit many of the estimated 1 million Americans with the disease.

Victims are afflicted by stiffness, trembling and slow, shuffling walk. As the disease worsens, they often have trouble eating, dressing or doing other ordinary chores.

The new studies are the first major published reports to show that, for some victims at least, the transplants can dramatically change their lives. After the operations, patients gradually found they could walk without falling, drive cars and take care of themselves.

The approach is controversial, however. Federal support for it has been banned for the past four years because of fear it will encourage women to have abortions, the only major source of tissue needed for the operation.

Researchers cautioned that the operation does not help everyone. Among their biggest concerns:

- One woman fell so often she could only get around her house by crawling. Since the operation, she walks well and falls less than once a month.
- One man's hands jerked so badly that he could not eat in front of other people because he involuntarily threw food. After the operation, he celebrated last Thanksgiving dinner with a dozen family members. He also got his drivers license back and drove across the country in a motor home.
- Another man was house bound and required constant care by his wife. Now, he drives and coaches his son's soccer team.
- It's exciting, because the weight of the evidence suggests increasingly that this is a procedure that has a future application in medicine. But all of the groups are agreed at the present time that what we are doing is not ready for wide application. We are still working out the details," said Dr. D. Eugene Redmond Jr. of Yale Medical School.

The reports, published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, were written by teams that have pioneered the procedure during the past five years at Yale, the University of Colorado and University Hospital in Lund, Sweden.

"The most exciting thing is that the transplantation of fetal tissue into the brains of Parkinson's patients is making a clinical difference," said Dr. Curt R. Freed of the University of Colorado.

The operation costs about $30,000, and those done in the United States were paid for with private donations or by the patients themselves.

Eight years ago, the Reagan administration prohibited federal support of research with fetal tissue. President Bush last year vetoed legislation that would have ended the ban. President-elect Clinton has said he favors lifting it.

Parkinson's disease destroys tissue in the brain that makes the chemical dopamine. Patients can be treated with the drug levodopa, which causes symptoms but does not stop the disease.

In the new approach, tissue taken from aborted fetuses is injected into victims' brains to replace cells wrecked by the disease. At least 100 such operations have been performed worldwide. The results of 13 were reported in the three studies.

The reports "will undoubtedly spur optimism," Dr. Stanley Fahn of Columbia University wrote in an editorial. Although the results are encouraging, he cautioned that many questions remain, such as how long the benefits will last, how much fetal tissue is needed and where exactly it should be placed in the brain.

Dr. Hakan Widner and others on the Swedish team found the operation appeared to be especially impressive for countering a form of Parkinson's caused by abuse of MPTP, a synthetic heroin. They treated two patients, both afflicted since 1982, who made dramatic recoveries.

Clinton mixed classy, country for past five inaugural balls

By BOB GOODMAN
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK — Bill Clinton's mother danced barefoot and blew kisses to the band at his first inaugural ball, a homey bash with a quaint theme: "Diamonds and Dealm."

At his last inaugural as governor, Clinton and his wife, Hillary, stood in a reception line for more than four hours, shaking hands with any Arkansas resident who bothered to wait.

The Clintons have conducted five inaugural celebrations, all a tasteful mix of folksy, friendly and fancy. Black tie was optional at the balls — most people wore business suits, but a few wore jeans the first year. Clinton always dressed in a tuxedo, his wife a gown.

Wine — usually Carlo Roso — washed down the cheese and crackers. Jazz, gospel and rock were played.

Americans can expect the same mix of class and comfort at the four-day celebration marking the Jan. 20 inauguration of Clinton as the 42nd president of the United States, event organizers say.

"It will be about being in touch with the American people," inaugural chairman Ron Brown said. "On the other hand, it will have the requisite amount of dignity that is becoming of an American president.

Stealing from the Arkansas celebrations, the Clintons plan to have one or two activities designed for children, a reception that enables them to greet the public, some cheap events and several swanky balls. They also will find a way to thank voters for the victory.

For Clinton's first inaugural in 1979, Mrs. Clinton wore a dusty rose panne velvet gown modeled after her wedding dress. "It was my favorite and I asked her to do something similar for the inaugural ball," Clinton said at the time.

The ball was held at a local armory. Tickets were $20 a head.

A band called "Dealer's Choice," featuring Clinton's half-brother Roger, played rock music. Roger Clinton said his new rock band "Politics" will play at one of the presidential inaugural balls in January.

Folk singer Jimmy Driftwood and gospel group "Loving Sisters" also played for the eclectic Clintons.

The day began with a service at Immanuel Baptist Church in Little Rock, a tradition that held through the 1991 inaugural. Officials say Clinton will certainly include a church service in the presidential inaugural celebration.

Clinton was thrown out of office in 1980 and returned in 1982, making the 1983 inaugural a special event. More than 6,000 people crammed a Little Rock convention center to join the wildest of Clinton's five inaugural balls.

Roast beef sandwiches and baked ham were served to the 2,000 people who attended the $20-a-ticket ball in 1985. The Clintons made their grand entrance on a red carpet. Mrs. Clinton wore a three-piece gold lame ensemble that shimmered in the spotlights.

For the third inaugural in a row, Mrs. Clinton wore the "Kahn Canary," a 4.25 karat uncut yellow diamond found at Arkansas' Crater of Diamonds State Park, the only public diamond mine in the world.

But, again, comfort and accessibility were keys.

"We're going to have a party!" Mrs. Clinton said in announcing the 1985 ball. "Wear what you feel comfortable in. It's strictly black-tie optional."

Daughter Chelsea, now 12, has been a part of every inaugural. In 1985, she was wide-eyed as the Clintons entered the House chamber for the governor's traditional address. "Mommy," the 4-year-old said. "I think I'm going to be scared."

His swearing-in that year prompted Clinton's biggest inaugural gaffe. He nervously raising his left hand, instead of his right, to take the oath of office.

In 1987, 3,000 people broke into cheers when the Clintons had the traditional first dance, this time to "Moonlight Serenade." The applause turned to a roar when he switched partners and finished the dance with Chelsea, then 6.

Balloons were hung in long arches over the room or row from the centerpieces of dozens of tables. One band played swing music from the 1940s, another played hits from the 1950s and 1960s.

Gift Wrap Ideas

Here are some great tips to make your Holiday Gift Wrapping A Little More Unique

- Wrap odd-shaped gifts with tulle or tissue—make a pouf at the top.
- Weave together contrasting ribbons as wrap.
- Tie big pinch bows with twists of wire covered with ribbon when wrapping.
- Spray tissue-wrapped packages with glue or snow, and dust with confetti or glitter.
- Place glittery confetti inside the gift wrap or inside holiday greeting cards for a special surprise.
- Designate an area of the house as a wrapping station. Lay out tape, scissors and wrapping materials.
- Use feathers, shells and confetti.
- Add small bunches of dried flowers or herbs tied with ribbon.
- Tie packages with husks and fabric ribbons.
- Secure ends of package with double-sided tape.
- Use pipe cleaners to secure tags or bows.

With a little ingenuity, you can make your holiday gifts special for every family member and friend.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Imagine the excitement in a young child's eyes when, just before Christmas, he or she picks up the phone, dials a local toll-free number and talks directly with Santa or Mrs. Claus. Imagine also the feeling that an 80-year old nursing home resident gets upon knowing that, by playing Santa or Mrs. Claus on the phone, a child's Christmas has been made even more special.
