Flood taking emotional toll on victims

CARYVILLE - Some residents of this flood-ravaged Florida Panhandle town have kept their sense of humor, but others are not in a joking mood.

"Floods hold the population down; we like small towns," cracked David Balley during a break in clean up-efforts

Mayor George Anderson said his wife, Doris, has switched from tears to anger.

"She's already cried and cried until she doesn't have anything left," he said, "so now she's more or less spitting it

Flood waters had receded from most of the town and people were busy removing debris or trying to dry out possessions they hoped to salvage, although scattered showers hampered

When the Choctawhatchee River was still in their homes Saturday, four flood victims in a community north of Caryville were arrested on misdemeanor charges after an altercation with Holmes County sheriff's deputies.

Residents had refused to cooperate with limitations on boat visits to their homes designed to prevent looting, said Chief Deputy Joe Roberts. Some witnesses accused Roberts of using builtying tactics. Roberts denied reports that punches were exchanged, saying officers just wrestled one man down.

Five dolphins to go to sanctuary

SAN DIEGO - Five dolphins used for Cold War surveillance but now no longer needed will likely be turned over by the Navy to a Florida animal-rights group that hopes to retrain them to live in the wild.

The agreement has not yet been finalized, and both groups cautioned that the Sugarloaf sanctuary near Key West currently has no permit to release the bottlenose dolphins or even prepare them for the wild.

For now, the sanctuary only has a permit to display the five young males, much like a marine park permit.

The National Marine Fisheries Service would have to approve any attempt to return them to the wild. The Navy has expressed reservations about such an attempt.

citing fears the trained dolphins could not survive in the wild. or would spread disease among wild dolphins. "You basically have to train the animal to again think of itself as wild — to get them to be competitive with the herd, to fish, to deal with things like sharks," said Tom LaPuzza, spokesman for the Navy's command, control and ocean surveillance center.

"Then you have to track them to see what's happening." he

The Humane Society of the United States, which Thursday announced the agreement, has called the Navy dolphins prisoners of war who deserve honorable discharges from military service.

Evidence sealed in tourist murder

Media denied access to lineup photos, videos

By ADAM YEOMANS Associated Press Writer

MONTICELLO - A judge denied the news media access to police lineup photographs and videotapes in the case against four teen-agers accused of killing a British tourist at a highway rest stop in North Florida.

Circuit Judge F.E. Steinmeyer handed prosecutors another defeat Thursday when he denied their motion to switch the trial dates of two defendants suspected of being the triggermen in the murder of Gary Colley during a botched robbery at an Interstate 10 rest stop Sept. 14.

Last month. Colley's companion, Margaret Jagger, couldn't identify 17-year-old John "Billy Joe" Crumitie in a police lineup. But she picked Aundra Akins, 15, from a lineup. Jagger was wounded in

In trying to suppress evidence in the case, prosecutors said they wanted to prevent the news media from obtaining photos and videos of police lineups conducted with Jagger. She returned to Tallahassee from her home in Yorkshire. England to help with the investigation.

Lawyers for a group of Florida newspapers objected to the move. They said the state hadn't proven the evidence would make it impossible for the suspects to get a fair trial in rural Jefferson County, where the killing occurred.

"There's no serious or imminent threat to the administration of justice by keeping these public records covered," said lawyer Gary Williams, who represented The Miami Herald, The Palm Beach Post, The Orlando Sentinel, the Tallahassee Democrat and the Florida Society of Newspaper Editors. Lawyer Gregg Thomas, who represented The Tampa Tribune, said the public "deserves to know the state's conduct in this case, just like they deserved to know the conduct of the policemen in the O.J.

Simpson case.' The St. Petersburg Times also opposed the motion.

Assistant State Attorney Ray Marky argued the media didn't have a right to pre-trial evidence.

"This is not a circus," Marky argued. "That (video) being played so close to trial that has been scheduled would make it well nigh impossible to secure anything but jurors who lived under a carpet."

Steinmeyer said prosecutors waited too long to make their request given the amount of publicity the case has already attracted.

Crumitie is scheduled to go on trial Aug. 22 for first-degree murder; Akina' trial would follow. Steinmeyer denied the state's request to try Akins first. Prosecutors made the move in an apparent effort to improve their chances of gaining a conviction. Steinmeyer said he was concerned switching the trial could give lawyers grounds to appeal the case if Akins was convicted. He said he didn't believe there was enough time for Akins' lawyer, Mark Olive, to prepare for an August trial.

"I simply don't believe it's reasonable at this time to change," he said.

The other defendants, 17-year-old Deron Spear and 14-year-old Cedric Green, will be tried later; no dates have been set.

Steinmeyer agreed to appoint a psychologist to evaluate Crumitie at his lawyer's request. Attorney Dwight Wells said he wanted an expert to determine whether Crumitie was competent to stand trial but declined to discuss the request after the hearing.

Last month, the judge barred lawyers for the defendants from talking about evidence in the case with the news media.

TALLAHASSEE - The average pay for faculty at Flor-ida's public universities dropped less than $300 in a year, but that was enough to push the state's national ranking from 35th to 42nd.

"We have tried very hard to sell our sunshine and no state income tax, but a lot of the young faculty members are saying 'Hey, I can't take that to Publix,' Chancellor Charles Reed said Thursday.

The rankings were calculated earlier this month by the state based on data compiled by the American Association of University Professors, which annually purveys pay.

"Florida is in a national competitive market place and drupping to 42nd makes us loss competitive," Reed said. "It also makes it hard to hol on to the outstanding faculty members that we already have," The average pay for faculty members at Florida's nine state universities was $43,581 for the current school year, compared to 943,879 last year, according to the AAUP survey.

The national average was $49,504 this school year compared to $48,150 last year.

A decade ago, Florida had been gaining on the national average but has alid steadily in the rankings in recent years. "We went a period of three years without giving any raises to our faculty members and everybody else was giving some-thing," Reed said. Last year, Florida gave university faculty an average 114 faculty got raises to keep the average from falling.

Last evening about 10:30, three cars were involved in a serious crash on State Road 46 near Summerlin Avenue. According to Sanford Police, a 1984 Ford driven by Loretta Lee Young of Geneva was travelling eastbound in the westbound lane of 46 when she sideewiped a 92 Ford driven by Robert John Deuso of Casselberry and crashed head on into the 88 Dodge van driven by Ziad Nazih Shami philiprecaution later today.

County bans flag from seal

TAMPA - Hillsborough County has chosen a new county seal after nearly three decades, replacing one with the Confederate battle flag.

By a 4-3 vote Wednesday night, commissioners selected a seal featuring a drawing of the county's 100-year-old brick courthouse, which was knocked down in 1952.

Supporters of the old flag of Southerners of all races and represented Hillsborough County's participation in the Confederacy.

But critics said the flag's association with slavery of-fended blacks. Some said its adoption in the mid-1960s repfederal civil rights legislation.

"If it offends anyone, it should not be on the county seal," said Frank Kimbell, husband of former county commissioner Sylvia Kimbell, who led the fight to change the seal until her death last month.

Those seeking a new flag were well outnumbered at the hearing by supporters of the Confederate flag, who addressed the board during a 21/3-hour hearing.

Some invoked ancestors among hundreds of thousands who died fighting under the flag.

"You're going to stomp on their graves by changing that seal, and it hurts. It hurts." said Scott Alford, a member of the grassroots group Preserving Our Heritage. Alford wore a T-shirt

"I'm Proud."

The new seal, like its predeceasor, is a decorative one, used on coffee cups, water trucks, letterhead and T-shirts. The officials county seal, used to emboss originals of county documents, has no picture.

Commissioners also approved 5-2 setting up an historical exhibit in the County Center lobby to display all flags that have flown over the county. including the Confederate

Conflict over widening roads

The proposed widening of Rangeline Road north of S.R. 434 in Longwood is causing conflict. Citizens say they don't want it widened.

Rangeline is one of an increasing number of roadways in Central Florida which have become problem areas. The problems are in direct proportion to a person's relationship with the roads. People who must drive on narrow but jam-packed roadways want them wider. Narrow lanes mean traffic tie-ups and delays. They also become extremely unsafe during rush hours. We can see their point.

People who live in subdivisions or homes along the busy made naturally don't want.

along the busy roads naturally don't want them enlarged. We can also see their point, it will mean more traffic, and probably faster speeds. Turning out of a subdivision onto such a major roadway becomes a serious problem, maybe at times, impossible.

In the case of Rangeline, it was residents along the road who turned out en masse at the commission meeting to object to the

It would be nice if we could start all over.
Go back to the time when there was absolutely nothing built in Central Florida.
Then build roads to be used as major thoroughfares, every mile apart, running north and south, and east and west. Between them, build residential areas with benefit streets for people to go to and from their borness.

That would be ideal, but it is impossible. Even if it were, there may be objections from the wildlife which wants to travel on heavily used pathways, versus the gopher tortoises which just want to be left alone in their surroundings.

Who would have thought, five, 10, 15 years ago, that such roads as Rangeline, Rinehart, Rantoul, and Red Bug, (do they all start with R)? would be faced with high traffic problems? These were rural roads and ideal for regularitial communities.

Times have changed. Our rapid growth has created a monster which we must now control. Not by ignoring it, as it is right on top of us. Not by railying against the monster because it won't go away.

There is no easy solution to the crowded road problems. We believe however, that it's time our citisens started working together on this as a community. Give consideration to what the majority of people need. Our county and cities aren't here to serve any single person, regardless of what some may believe.

Clinton gets a front man on Haiti

A line from Charles Dickens' "Dombey and Son" exquisitely sums up both O.J. Simpson as a national hero and President Clinton as a formulator of Haltian policy: "He's tough, ma'am, tough... and devillah aly."

If one quality epitomizes Bill Clinton's first 18 months in office, it's toughness. Standing tall with almost regal grittiness, he has survived trial by media fire, weathered persecution by rightwing zealots, and kept one step shead of his foreign policy cretins. That's toughness.

It's also imitative. Most successful politicians have perfected the art of being siy. Bill Chinton takes that art one step further to "devilish sty." How else to describe the appointment of Bill Gray as his Haitian special adviser, a political survivor who matches Clinton in toughness, but surpasses him in devillah slyness?

surpasses him in devilish slyness?

Clinton appointed Gray for only two reasons: 1) Gray is black (as are Haitians) and 2) to take the heat off of his failed, policy that Randall Robinson's fast had exposed.

At a White House press conference last week, Gray announced a fourth policy shift on Haiti. The shifty nature of the policy was still intact, but now a black face was the interlocutor.

No military invasion was discussed, but a military action was "on the table."

In further pursuit of Bush's Haitian policy.
Gray declared that Haitian refugees (unlike Cuban refugees) would be turned back and sent to "safe havens." As George Bush, Bill Clinton and Clinton's Haitian policy puppet prove, "devilish slyness" is both bipartisan and biracial.

But stand by for more. The very next day "the Clinton administration" (not Gray) retreated from its "safe havens" policy based on proof by announcing that Haitians need only declare they fear persecution to be eligible for the havens.

By the time you read this, we may already have invaded Haiti and be gearing up to take on North Korsa. In the meantime, Gray could end up being another black fall guy for Clinton in the ma'am, tough... and devilish sly.

But Gray's case is different. He is greedy. One of American history's most successful and countying black elected officials, Gray, as the majority whip, was on the fast track to becoming the first black speaker of the House. Unexpectedly, he announced on June 20, 1991, his intention to resign from Congress in September.

Even Congressional Quarterly reported that it was "rare for a member to leave at midterm."

But like Clinton, Gray had so many financial problems, goesin about his personal conduct and problems, gossip about his personal conduct and Justice Department investigations swirling around his staff that he opted to cut his potential losses by quitting.

When Gray resigned, he left his $125,000 congressional salary for a whopping $175,000 as president of the United Negro College Fund. "I'm giving up political power," he declared with a straight lace, "to have a very big impact on the education of black people throughout this

Three years later, Gray is devoting all of his time to Haiti's problems. So much for this avaricious politician's "very big impact on the education of black people throughout this

The city has provided fire and police protection during these displays (Thank you).

As one of the approximately 60 percent of the Sanford residents who pays property taxes, I don't want these tax dollars used for fireworks.

For those who tried calling their city commissioner (remember them?) or the mayor, these positions are part-time positions in Sanford's government. Neither of these persons has an office at City Hall. We subscribe to a city manager form of government.

I would be more than willing to contribute my dollar to a volunteer fund for next year's fireworks. If all those who want to see these did this, we could easily pay for a fantastic Fourth of July ... remember, this celebrates our independence from government ... not our dependence on it.

Congressional pension is a sweet deal

WASHINGTON - The splendor of the members-only Senate dining room — with its large chandelier, stained-glass window depicting George Washington and mosaic of Abraham Lincoln — is a strange setting for igniting a revolt against the congressional

Yet that's the scene that played out when Sen, Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., recently handed Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., a document most politicians would guard as a state secret. "Take a look at this," Simpson said. "Here's our conundrum."

Kerrey scanned the document, which contributed to the congressional pension plan and collect in retirement.

Congressional pensions are such a conunsa that if Simpson retired in 1996 he would begin collecting 800,940 a year, even though he's contributed only $170,000 to the plan.

Karray came to a conclusion in the Senate dining room that most of their colleagues will find quite unappetizing.

Simpson and

In three retirement years Simpson would enjoy more benefits than he paid into the system for 18 years. If Simpson reached his life expectancy, he would collect at least $1.7. The "conundrum" for Simpson is the fact

The "conundrum" for Simpson is the fact that as members of the Bipartian Commission on Entitlement and Tax Reform, he and Kerrey are preaching sacrifics for seniors while senators' own pensions are souring out of control. "If this is the moment of truth for the American people, it's the moment of truth for all of us," Simpson told us.

Simpson and Kerrey came to a conclusion in the Senate dining room that most of their colleagues will find quite unappetizing: Congressional entitlements must also be on the cutting block.

colleagues will find quite unappetizing: Congressional entitlements must also be on the cutting block.

"You're not going to get people to follow unless we lead," Kerrey, the commission's chairman, told our associate Ed Henry. "And it's not leadership if we ask everybody else to pony up and we don't." Kerrey remembers, however, that when he introduced a spending cuts amendment earlier this year, he tried and failed to convince his colleagues to bite the bullet. "We had a pay cut and a pension cut in the amendment and we got a lot of resistance to it," said Kerrey.

Simpson's interest in the issue was sparked back home. "I knew when I began talking about pensions and entitlements that you have to start talking about your own," he said. "Some guy jumped up at a town hall meeting and said, "What the hell do you get?""

Simpson promptly telephoned the Secre-tary of the Senate's office and asked for a projection of his pension. He was "bemused" when the results arrived: |'I mean here we are talking about these other (entitlements) and I said. What really is curious is to see what each of us will sective under civil service and then realise that everyone else on civil service receives this same kind of heavy, heavy receives this same kind of heavy, heavy contribution after retirement."

Last year, the taxpayers shelled out $65 billion in benefits for 2.2 million federal retirese. "Then you add military (pensions) and you're into heavy stuff," says Simpson.

Bhortly after the Simpson-Kerrey pow-wow, however, both blinked when confronted with a vote on that "heavy stuff." By an $8 to 12 wote, the "Senate voted to accelerate $376 million worth of cost-of-living increases for military retires despite budget provisions that require Congress to finance such an increase through tax hikes or spending cuts."

Tourism .

Seminole County Tourist Development officials were not available for immediate comment on the situation.

in Orlando however, the tourism drop is said to be largely due to Europeans staying home because of economic woes in their own countries and fear of crime in Florida.

Tourism is down despite the World Cup soccer tournament games at Orlando.

Attendance at theme parks and other attractions is not has high as had been projected, and the outlook is not good for the rest of the summer.

Someone needs to wake up and see that the No. 1 industry that generates significant tax dollars for this state is hurting." said Bill Sims, chairman of the Fiorida Commission on Tourism. Business is extremely soft."

Europeans have economic problems at home and they are still cautious about traveling here because of crime against tourists in Florida, former Florida Commerce Secretary Greg Farmer told a Senate subcommittee on Wednesday.

Other reasons for tourist declines are the strong dollar and better marketing by other tourist destinations, Farmer said.

Oate receipts are soft at the state's top tourist lures such as Walt Disney World, Sea World and Universal Studios Florida, Farmer, Sims and company officials said. This despite the fact Orlando was host site for five World Cup games for three weeks in June and July.

"In Miami, the (international) numbers of arrivals are up," Farmer said. "The only reason Miami's numbers are up is that they have so many Latin Americans who are coming in that it's compensating for the loss of Europeana.

"Central Florida hasn't had that compensation. It is absolutely European driven."

Disney officials would not comment on attendance Thursday, but the state's largest tourist complex announced earlier this month that it would lay off up to 2 percent of its work force, or about 700 employees, by summer's end because international tourism was down.

Up to one-fourth of Disney visitors are foreigners.

Sims, who is president of Florida Leisure Acquisition Corp., said the company's Silver Springs park near Ocala had a 10 percent drop in attendance over the holiday compared to last year.

At Universal Studios Florida, spokesman Jim Canfield said park attendance was higher both year-to-date and over the Fourth of July from a year ago. However, attendance has not met projections, he said.

Sea World officials said there had been a "softening" during and since July 4, although overall attendance is higher so far this year than last.

Farmer, undersecretary of commerce for tourism, said the U.S. share of the international tourism market has declined for the past three years.

Guidelines give nature chance to cure the fluid in kids' ears

By PAUL RECER AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON - New guidelines for treatment of inner eas fluid could have made a dramatic difference in the life of a 5-year-old boy in Arlington.

Eileen Putman, mother of Andy, said her son has had two operations because of fluid in his inner ear, and at least one of the procedures was the result of the long-term use of antibiotics.

That's less likely to happen under new guidelines issued Thursday by federal health officials. The new recommended treatment calls for a period of "watchful waiting" instead of the immediate use of antibiotics for otherwise healthy children between the ages of I to 3 who have fluid in the inner ear.

The new approach is for a condition called otitis media with effusion, or OME. Experts who drew up the guidelines found that OME clears itself in 90 percent of the cases, and they recommended that doctors and parents give nature a chance to Putman said that when Andy developed OME at age 2, antibiotics were the first thing out of the doctor's treatment bag.

"He (the doctor) just about always gives antibiotics when there is fluid," said Putman. "He does it to be cautious."

When the condition didn't clear up. Andy underwent surgery. Plastic tubes were implanted in his eardrums to allow the fluid to drain.

The tubes last only about nine months and, at age 3, Andy again developed OME. Again he was put on antibiotics. This time, though, he had side effects and developed allergies to some of the drugs that were tried.

Eventually, Putman said she and her husband approved a second tube operation for Andy "just to get him off the antibiot-

Doctors, said Putman, "make It seem like the surgery is no big deal, but it is a big deal for kids and for parents. It requires a general anesthetic and not many parents enjoy seeing their child go under."

The guidelines also will change the thinking of many pediatricians, says Dr. Fund Beroody, an assistant professor at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine in Baltimore.

Beroody said he will not abandon antibiotics, but will probably wait at least two months to see if his patients become free of OME.

Research leading to the guidelines found that OME is the reason for 6 million to 8 million doctors' visits annually. About 650,000 children annually undergo the drainage tube insertion, making it the most common surgery on young children.

OME involves a buildup of fluid behind the ear drum in a child who has no other health problem. It is different from acute otitis media, an inner car infection that can cause severe pain and is generally treated agreemively.
If allowed to continue for many months, OME can reduce the hearing of children at an age when they are learning to speak. For this reason, the condition has been treated aggressively. But Dr. Alfred Berg, a co-chairman of a federal panel of experts and a professor at the University of Washington, said that in most cases, the condition disappears within three to six months without medical treat-

"This fact ... gives weight to the use of observation or watchful waiting as an acceptable way to manage (the disorder) within the first three months,' he said.

Antibiotics are of uncertain value in treating OME, Berg said. The best studies found the drugs help only about 14 percent of children with the condition, he said, and this modest benefit comes at the risk of side effects. such as the allergies suffered by Andv.

"Antibiotics are a valid option for treating OME, but they are not ... the preferred option in early stages of the condition." Berg said.

If OME persists after three months of "watchful waiting." the new guidelines say children should be given hearing tests. If the tests show normal hearing, then observation or antibiotics are appropriate.

In cases of hearing loss after three months, the guidelines call for a choice between antibiotics or surgery.

Should the condition continue for four to six months, with hearing loss, the preferred treatment then is surgery, Berg

After FCC goofs, survey still finds lower cable rates

By JEANNINE AVERSA Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Hours after federal regulator released a survey on cable television rates. they had to fix it. But the new figures are better for consumers.

Cable TV rates in the nation's 25 largest cities have actually declined an average 8.49 percent since last August, instead of the 6.63 percent the Federal Com-missipations Commission first related Thursday.

the FCC said its survey found remainded from an average of $25.66 a month to $23.50. The figure to for all regulated cable systems in the 25 cities and systems in the 20 cause airca affects 3.7 million cable sub-scribers, or about 84 percent of the subscribers covered in the

The decrease covers equipment - converters and remote controls - and cable program services other than premium services; like HBO, which are not regulated.

But the decrease may actually underestimate consumer savings because the category includes some regulated systems that have yet to adjust their rates, FCC officials said.

If the industry had continued to raise rates at an annual pre-regulation rate of nearly 6 percent, subscribers' average monthly bills would have been $26.59, rather than $23.50, the PCC said. The FCC said it had to revise the calculations after finding that one unidentified cable system had provided the wrong information. The cable industry and the FCC said the survey shows rate regulation is working as in-

But some consumer groups contend the system is not working and that cable customers are not seeing significant drops in their bills.

"I doubt the average cable customer could buy a Happy Meal at McDonald's with the savings they get from rate regu-lations," said Richard Kessel, executive director of the New York State Consumer Protection

Board. makes it difficult to seees what has been happening to rates.

The FCC does not regulate all systems the same way. Small systems and those with low prices don't have to move their rates all the way down to the new regulated levels. And some can seek to justify higher rates if they show they are produced by legitimate business costs.

Further complicating the process is the fact that systems may be adjusting rates based on one or both FCC-ordered rate cuts. The first cut, of 10 percent, took effect last September and the second, 7 percent, took effect in mid May.

The survey looked at 43 systems in 25 cities, covering 8 percent or 4.5 million of the nation's 58 million cable subacribers.

Hogan was called by the prosecution and testified under immunity in the steroid conspiracy case against WWF head Vince McMahon, his former boss and the man who transformed the Hulkster into a multimilliondollar marketing phenomenon. The trial began a week ago.

After taking the oath under his real name of Terry Bolica, Hogan admitted that for 13 years ending in 1989, he injected and swallowed steroids.

The federal government banned steroids in 1991 for all but therapeutic uses. They can damage the liver, kidneys, testicles, heart and bones. Hulk maintained that McMahon never ordered him to take steroids, but he testified that he sometimes ordered them through McMahon's personal secretary at the WWF's Stamford, Conn., headquarters.

"I would go by the office and pick up the steroids along with my paycheck and fan mail," said Hogan, who now appears on the syndicated television show "Thunder in Paradise."

McMahon faces up to 11 years in prison if convicted.

First U.S. World Cup capped with dream finale

PASADENA. Calif. - The United States' first World Cup will climax with a truly grand finale, a match of storied soccer superpowers.

By the time afternoon shadows begin to drift over the Rose Bowl on Sunday, either Brazilians or Italians can brag that theirs is the only nation to win the World Cup four Italian star Roberto Baggio, who seems determined to play despite a slight hamstring pull, said, "To play in the final is a dream. To play Brazil for the World Cup is the appropriate ending."

"This is the best of all possible finals," said Pele, who led Brazil to all three of its world titles, the last in 1970. "These are two great soccer powers seeking to be the first four-time World Cup champion."

The upstarts of the 1994 tournament - the Romanians, Saudi Arabiana, Americana — are

A Sweden-Bulgaria final, which would have been applauded by Swedes and Bulgarians and met by yawns by most others, was averted when Brazil beat Sweden 1-0 and Italy downed Bulgaria 2-1 in Wednesday's semifinals.

Sweden and Bulgaria will meet. but in the third-place game on Saturday at the Rose Bowl.

That leaves Sunday to Brazil. which flaunts its flamboyant, relentlessly attacking style, and Italy, which favors the more defined, disciplined technique common to Europe.

"This is a battle of big dogs," Brazilian midfielder Mazinho said of the match of teams that account for six of the previous 14 World Cup

The game could be relatively high-scoring, since both teams are expected to press the attack, rather than lay back on defense as so many of their outmanned opponents have done during this World

"We want to play the game to win, and have the other team play to win," Brazilian midfielder Jorginho said. "Italy feels as good as Brazil, and will play for victory," Italian coach Arrigo Sacchi said. "We think we can control their impressive offense. But there is a major difference between strategy and its accomplishment on the field. Certainly it will be another exhausting game for us."

Baggio's injury could spoil what shapes up as a match of two of the world's finest players and top scorers in the tournament; he and Brazil's Romario each have five goals, one behind Hristo Stotchkov of Bulgaria and Oleg Salenko of Russia.

Baggio, who scored five of Italy's eight goals in the competition, is a questionable starter, doctors said.
"At the moment his chances to play are 50 percent. He will be rested for 48 hours. We hope for a positive solution," Dr. Andrea Ferretti said Thursday.

Secchi said, "We risk to lose Roberto in the moment we had just recovered him, in the moment he had reached his peak condition."

Gianfranco Zola, who has served a two-game suspension, likely would start if Baggo can't.

The Italians will be without top defender Alessandro Costacurta, who was suspended after getting his second yellow card against Bulgaria, and Mauro Tassotti is also incligible.

Brazil will be missing defender Leonardo, who drew a four-game suspension for elbowing Tab Ramos in the game against the United States.

Unlike Brazil, which has lived up to its favorite's role throughout the tournament, Italy struggled early and barely survived the earlier rounds. Dino Baggio carried the team in the first round, and Roberto, who is no relation, came to life in the three latest games. "A week ago, or two weeks ago, it did not look good for Italy," captain Paolo Maldini said. "But we have had perseverance and we have had dedication, and now we are through to the final."

Save resources, $$$, enviroment

Energy means more than electricity for our homes and businesses or gasoline for our cars. While energy fuels our economy, it also shapes our environment. Smog, global climate change, acid rain, oil spills, mine spoil, nuclear waste, and respiratory health problems are externalities associated with energy use that are not paid for in the price of energy purchased.

The USA with just five percent of the world's population, uses nearly 25 percent of the world's energy. On average, each person uses 8.4 gallons of motor fuel every week. Heating, cooling and lighting our homes cost us $170 billion in 1992. Sixteen percent of a household's energy use is for refrigeration.

In Florida, energy consumption doubled between 1970 and 1990. Our 28 percent of

BARBARA HUGHES/ GREGG

this energy was used in residences, 43 percent for transportation, 19.6 percent in commercial enterprises, and 8.3 percent for industry. This increase in energy use reflects a population growth of over 6 million people and an increase in tourism. Presently, Florida hosts more than 40 million visitors annually. During this same time period, the annual per capita monetary outlay for energy in constant dollars (1982) increased from $876 to $1187.

Fortunately, energy efficient technology and life choices are available that can cut energy use by one-third and improve environmental quality without sacrificing lifestyle. These involve informed energy resource choices, the use of alternative fuels, clean burning fuels, improved building materials and technologies, energy efficient lighting fixtures, and the purchase of high efficiency and environmentally friendly equipment such as computers and refrigeration devices. Informed choices that allow you to save energy, means you save resources and dollars and improve the environment. That's why we say "Saving Energy Saves Everything."

Confront problem, make appointment

DEAR MARY: I'm still reeling and I don't know whether I need advice or just to get this "off my chest." My daughter (age 15) has been under terrible stress this year. Her grades started falling in ninth grade so I decided she'd be better off in private school. It was probably a mistake to make her go to private school because she's obviously been miserable and started taking tranquilizers just to cope. I know she was taking Valium because I found a bottle under her mattress.

But that's not the worst part. I did the "unpardonable" and opened her diary this morning, hoping to find out what's been bugging her. Here's what she wrote about her date last Saturday: "He always wants us to make it after we snort coke, I'm afraid I'll get pregnant at this rate."

My daughter looks so young and innocent it's hard to believe she's ever done anything wrong in her life. I can't confess that I read her diary. I'm frantic — what should I do?

PRANTIC MOM

DEAR PRANTIC: We can't boil everything down to, "If she wasn't using drugs she'd have no problems, her grades would be great, and she'd stop having sex with her boyfriend," but drugs do help create these other problems.

The fact that your daughter uses Valum doesn't necessarily mean she's under stress — she may use it just to get high. Now you've got to decide what you are going to do about it. With no justification, explanations, or excuses, simply tell her what you've learned and outline what you're going to do about it. Right now, the only thing you can insist on is that she get drug treatment. Be sure you have your game plan intact before you open the conversation. Call the doctor and make an appointment or get the treatment center on line. When you tell her what is going to happen she will probably react in one of two ways. She may become passive and submit with no resistance, or she may explode with rage. Either way, just keep firm about the appointment and deflect any fireworks as calmly as possible. The important points here are to remain calm and have the conversation so she if have no way of "preparing" for it. Your daughter's physical and well as her emotional life are at stake. You must act now!

pear ABBY: My children (ages 5, 3 and 2) cannot read chemical formulas or lengthy warning labels — but they all know that a skull and correspondent means "poleon."

crossbones means "poison."
I collect old patent medicine bottles, and I recently brought one home that had the skull and crossbones. My 3-year-old took one look and said, "Oh ... poison?"

Now, I know we all do our best to keep such nasties out of the reach of children, but I think a return to a nice, old-fashioned picture of the skull and crossbones would be a great idea. Marketers should take note!

PRAGMATIC PARENT,
MICELETON, N.J.
DEAR PRAGMATIC
PARENT: The best insurance against small children ingesting anything that could be hazardpus to their health is placing sturdy locks on medicine cabinets and cupboards where dangerous products are stored.
The Poison Control Center of ca Angeles and Orange County

The Poison Control Center of Los Angeles and Orange County (California) advises that even if a regulation were passed stating that the trusty old skull and crossbones be dragged out of retirement, there is no regulatory agency to decide which products should carry the label, nor is there one to enforce it. Any number of products can be assardous if ingested or used for a purpose other than their intended one.

pear ARBY: I have been intending to write this thank-you etter since 1985 — the year my siblings and I had a reception to honor our parents on their 50th wedding anniversary.

Neither we, nor our parents, wanted the guests to bring gifts. After 50 years of marriage, most couples have just about everything they need — and if they ton't have it, they probably don't want it.

A very good friend told me of a suggestion she had read in the Dear Abby column, that guests ocntribute letters of remembrance to be placed in an album instead of gifts.

I am very happy to report that the response was great! With all the wonderful letters, we were able to compile a terrific album to present to our mom and dad.

Abby, we had the entire evening videotaped. After the dinner, we called on some of the guests to read their letters of remembrance. Since we have it on tape, we have been able to enjoy it repeatedly.

Piease consider this a belated thank-you for making our parents' 50th wedding anniversary spectacular.

HURDLING THE "HAZARDS"

In the game of golf, it isn't enough to aim a small ball toward an only slightly larger hole so far down the fairway it can barely be seen, and expect to sink it with one strike of the club. No, that's not challenging enough for the golfer. Add some "hazards"...san'd traps, lakes, trees...anything to get in the way. Now, that's really challenging.

Life is really challenging. When you begin to think it's almost manageable, something gets in the way. How will you cope? Use the golfer's strategy...

Assuming a positive posture, keep your eyes focused ahead as you visualize your "hole in one". Attempt to avoid the hazards, use the right equipment, and remember the rules. Worship this Sabbath. You will find a positive attitude and the rules for success. Life's path may not be a fairway, but our chances of winning improve if we live it God's way.

Rise Up! Sanford Celebration

By MARYA HAWKINS Herald Columnist

SANFORD - Rise Up! Sanford presented Summer Youth Cele-bration on July 5-9. Over 150 youth were in attendance. It was said that the "Devil was put on the run" during the events of the Youth of all races and from various churches in Sanford shared their Christian experi-ences together in a week long service. Young people who didn't have hope, now do. "Hope is Alive" was the theme for the celebration. Young people ages 12 to 19 were present and gave testimonies, praised the Lord in their own way through the ministry of song or in whatever way they were touched by the Holy Spirit.

The ministers, pastors and others who sponsored this Christian endeavor were pleased to report that the event gave strength to the participants. A great impression was made that helped to change the lives of those who were hungry for the word of God.

The speakers gave the young reassurance. Topics discussed were: "Hope is a Person Who Can Be changed." "Hope is a Word, the Word of God." "Hope is the Future, There is Truly a Hereafter." And "Hope is a Process." Prayers are always answered right away b. prayers are always answered in time and are always answered in time and

God is always right on time. There was fun in giving the message of hope that Jesus will make us different, because we are his chosen children. "When you accept Jesus Christ as your savior, there is change," said Pastor Clark Adams, who taught the message on Friday night.

"Hope" in action was shown by the youth on Saturday as they went into the Christian field of work. The youth carried the message of hope to the city of Sanford. The 16 churches that participated in the summer youth celebration will forever remember this week of praise, fellowship, fun in song and the word of God.

Special thanks goes to Pastor
Jeff Krall, Pastor Elijah June,
Pastor Dave Krasiese, Pastor Clark Adams, and Mrs. Gilis. Appreciation is also extended to the youth counselors and others who helped make this celebra-tion a grand week.

Churches supporting were Westview Baptist Church, New Mt. Calvary Baptist Church, First Presbyterian Church, Sanford, Church of God, Sanford, Family Worship Center, First Baptist Church, Lake Monroe, Upsala Community Church, Faith Bible Ministries, El Bethel House of Refuge Inc., Congregational Christian Church, New Life Word Center, Rescue Church of God, and Wekiva Assembly.

Anyone who would like to become a part of Rise Upl Sanford may call Dona Brockman at 322-0080. The effort to call the body of Christ to stand together for Jesus was indeed a spiritual success.

Holly Basehone, from Family Worship Center received the grand prize of a bicycle from the drawings held each night.

Young people sing and enjoy the program at Westview Baptist Church on Friday evening's Summer Youth Celebration.
