Municipal Court-Police-And Common Sense

even happier in the future than they are now in the present with a practical, realistic and yet compassionate approach to first brushes with the law.

We refer to a program initiated by Municipal Court Judge Roger Berry and Police Chief Ben Butler handle those 17 years old and older who are brought before the court for misdemeanor violations.

Ita basic goal is to avoid giving the offendor a "record" which has always been a severe handicap when those so tagged seek employment in after years.

Now, with the defense industries become more and more a very large employer of manpower, such a blot on one's "resume" is even more of a problem. Briefly, this program permits the judge to en-roll the teenagers, many of them in school or college,

But the co-operation of the parents is essential. Happily this is usually given. Thus there is taking place one of those developments which enlists all of the factors which can stop violations at the source: Although not a major situation in terms of numpers or the gravity of the offenses, yet it is a most welcome example of where a very potent mixture of remedies to cure an ill has been effected without the need of long-term study or research in depth. After all, as the old saying goes: common sense Of course the immediate reaction of those so in-

> Once completed satisfactorily, the judge is able to dismiss the original charges and thus keep the record of the offendor clean from any "convictions."
> Yet it is only logical to assume that the real value of the program lies in its future results rather than the present. Only those who have found out the hard way that a "record" bars the way to a successful use of their capacities forever hanging around his neck can fully appreciate what this program when Judge Berry found that in several cases the families of those before the court were worried about the "record" and wanted to co-operate only two teenagers have flunked. About 1,000 participated.

Not only here in Sasford but all over the nation the fabric of law enforcement, with an accent on the role of the courts, is being studied in depth. For it is in this judicial world that, by the very nature of the issue, it is most difficult to keep in step with the times without stumbling.

Our congratulations, therefore, goes to what has already been accomplished in our municipal court and our hopes for even greater co-operation between all law enforcement agencies and all courts ride high?

Sanford surely is a-glittering! Christmas decorations are starting to appear along our streets and avennues which will soon be necklaces of color and light to grace our lake-

Lake Monroe, at this time of the year, provides a mirror for lights. What with the bandshell's new garb and the very attractive lights and buildings and boats of the Holiday Isle complex a stroll along Seminole Boulevard our "concrete boardwalk" provides a spectacle to delight the eye and spark the imagination.

The new lights along First Street, the graceful Christmas trees at the intersections sparkling and glowing, the store fronts decorated for the season, the Christmas tree's colorful lights nearby, indeed, the whole tone of our Downtown area gains when darkness falls and the holiday decorations take over.

Nor do we need to or want to overlook other areas where foresight and good planning show now as the varied colored lights shine out with their own story.

Among these the Sanford Plaza array is foremost. And to get to that delightful sight, travel along all of our roads becomes an increasing pleasure. Yes, the days between now and Christmas-a short two weeks-will make their own contribution to the glitter as householders do their own decorating

But the sights are here to be seen. The efforts to bring a real brilliance to the Sanford Holiday Season have been made. All now that needs to be done is for all of us, for all San-fordites to enjoy what we have with smiles and

Welch said Florida San is currently conducting a feasibility study in South Seminole to determine need for the facility. But that possibility of its construction for the most part hinges on whether the people in the south end want the facility. The administrator declared that he would like to see some 100,000 raised, plus cost of a 10-to-20-acre site located in the vicinity of 1-4 and Hwy. 17-92 but decision to proceed with the
