Salute Earned

The Altamonte Springs Library Assn., another group of Seminole County residents rapidly becoming perognized for their "do it" abilities, is to be commended for its all out effort in raising money to purchase the present library building and property. The latest money raising event, of which there have been many in the past few months, is a daily rum-mage sale being held in the old Altamonte Springs Post Office building.

building. Lithough most sale articles are donations, the as-tion also has offered to sell on a commission basis has handled everything imaginable from dogs to a kitchen and household appliances. In the past two weaks more than $500 has been

The Sanford Herald Staff adds fits salute to these volunteer workers and to the contributors who give so freely in order that Altamonte residents and those of surrounding areas may enjoy the benefits of a public library.

Longwood Woman To Build Stores

> Mrs. Bobbie Joe Hunt, Longwood businesswoman, last week told the City Council that she is planning to build three more stores on her E. Lake property.

Plans for the building program asked the council to remove four large oak trees hordering the property, saying that their roots crack the sidewalk and create a safety hazard.

Discussing what the job would entall, councilmen estimated that removal of the trees would run somewhere near $185 per tree excluding costs of replacing a side walk and making repairs to the walk and making repairs to the street. They asked Mrs. Hunt to consider sharing half the expense and advised her that they would give her a final decision after making a more detailed survey and cost estimate.

suggested an editorial asking the shoppers and mer-shants to work together to help each other to "Shop Sanford First." The letter says: "The merchants could do their best price-wise and rahe-wise. We all appreciate that they cannot carry large stocks, nor in many cases cut their profits too much and still stay in business. But where they can low-er prices, I think they should and not try to get all the traffic will bear. Legitimate sales of tired merchandise would help to keep fresh merchandise available to those where are willing to pay for first-class items. In turn — we shoppers could agree to Shop first in fanford. If we cannot find what we want here, then we can kok elsewhere with a clear conscience. I made a couple of very good purchases locally not long ago, and I haped several of my visitors make purchases here. I represented a sale to a local friend who was waiting to go to Oriando or Miami, and she made a $5 purchase in San-ford that pleases her very much—and it saved her a trip as well. On the other hand, I had another visitor who could not find what she wanted here, and I giadly dreve her to Winter Fark because what she wanted was just not available. I am sure this the merchants un-derstand — or should — but they have the right to ex-pert to be given first chance.

pest to be given first chance. It has been my experience that you cannot find more courteous clerks and store managers anywhere then right here in Sanford. They all lean over backwards to perve and to please. Of course, I believe that shoppers should be understanding and courteous as well, and I

We agree with Mrs. Harris and this has been one of the main ideas we have been plugging for many a year.

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago I be-dust when you sweep. P. S. How old are you?

DEAR ABBY: My problem is very serious. My mother reads my diary. No matter where I hide it, she manages to find it.

I am 14 years old and think I should be able to keep my diary personal. It is getting so that I am afraid to write down the true facts, and what good is a diary if it doesn't have the true facts?

What can a girl do about a mother who doesn't trust her? Please print your an-swer in the paper because if a letter came to the house for me my mother would probably open it. NOT TRUSTED

DEAR NO: Many mothers "snoop" out of curisoity rather than mistrust. But reading another's diary and mail is inex-cusable. If you, at age 14, are reluctant to put down the "true facts," you and your mother need to have a heart-to-heart talk. You could both profit.

Circusland To Abandon Sanford Property Site More Developed Area The Sanford Herald

Needed--Officials Say Circusland will close offices in Sanford Aug. 1 and will abandon vol. 55 its 250-acre site on Hwy. 17-92 in favor of a more developed area. Several reasons were listed for the move from the Sanford site, but Circusland officials stressed that the primary one was that pressure from potential leasees of space at the attraction dictated the change.

Maurice Marshall, president of Entertainment Enterprises, said: "We have not been able to hold Sanford's fine location above certain conomic advantages. In short, we cannot sell Sanford to enough national firms to satisfy Circusland's lease requirements. Enough are sold, however, contingent upon a relocation.

"There are three ways in which to create a major attraction for any area," Mar-shall said. "Solicit and sell stock, have the necessary millions in your pocket, or put the project together with con-Untional loans and available private capital. We have traveled the latter route from the beginning and it is an exacting one.

"We leave Sanford with regret, but must consider the move definits progress toward the early construction of Circusland."

Marshall declined to name the ltimate location of the attraction, out said there would be an announcement within 30 days.

Circusland, which has had the usual troubles encountered by big attractions in organization and financing, had gained considerable notice for the Sanford area within the past year.

The current issue of Amusement Business magazine praised the Oundness of its planning, saying "it may be the canniest piece of theme construction to come down the pike in several years."

Many firms interested in conessions and institutional exhibit space on its grounds continued to balk at the location, however, Marshall said, resulting in dictation of a move to another location or ing them altogether.
