Much Cooperation Can Mean Of Any Community To Success

Cooperation can mean a lot of things. Its | dustry, more homes, bigger stores, use of ultimate gain can be counted in thousands of ways. Its creativeness can be seen in the complete revamping of a way of living.

Its most important meaning at the present tottering position in Sanford and Seminole County can mean and spell either success or failure.

We take the position that everyone, regardless of his or her position in our community, has come to know the meaning of cooperation. We are quite aware of the general knowledge that folks pull away from their community, not in a sense of leaving bodily, but in thinking more of others outeide the community than they do of those who are attempting to bring together the thoughts, desires, efforts, and dreams for one positive goal-the success of Sanford and the Seminole County community.

Here at The Sanford Herald, we realize that the philosophy of the famed writer Francis M. A. Voltaire is imperative. And in our search for news that will interest the Sanford and Seminole County reader, we follow a statement made by Voltaire in a letter to d'Alemberte on June 23, 1760, that has remained true and necessary through the changing times of nearly two centuries. He said, "in the case of news, we should always wait for the sacrament of confirmation."

And in another of his letters he said, "I disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it."

The Sanford Herald, and its complete staff, is interested in the welfare and progress of Sanford and Seminole County. Its growth and prosperity mean to us, just as it means to the businessman, professional, banker, growers, worker or housewife, a sense of security and well being that we may fall back on for increased business, bigger salaries, better facilities, and healthy attitudes.

We are constantly harping on more in-our natural resources and the expansion of private enterprise. When such dreams are realized, payrolls are bigger, spending is more widespread, and all of us enjoy more of the better things of life.

They will never be realized though if we are pulling together, but in different directions. As one pulls one way, carrying with him business and progress, another pulls in his own direction, carrying additional trade into channels that do not profit our immediate community. The eventuality then must be realized when local merchants are left with the "piddling" trade of those who remain loyal to hometown businessmen.

Cooperation can go on and on in its explanation and what we might do to accomplish its abundance of designs and objectives.

Sanford's merchants, businescmen, bankers, professionals, and workers depend on their trade and business.

And The Sanford Herald is one of those businesses depending upon the cooperation of our neighbors in every walk of life.

We have supported the proposed highway expansion because of our belief that Editor, such a project will mean an influx of trade Sanford Herald, in our community made possible by easier Dear Sir: travel and a desire to shop leisurely in stores
