More Than 100 Expected To Try For Administrator's Post

By MICHAEL BEHA
Herald Staff Writer

Plans for interviewing and selecting a successor to County Administrator Roger Neiswender from among more than 100 applicants were made Monday. County commissioners approved tentative plans submitted by Neiswender for the first two rounds of the review process.

Neiswender said more than 100 people are expected to apply for the post, which has a salary range of $42,000 to $52,000.

But that number can rapidly be brought down to a manageable number by a review committee made up of department heads to examine the applications and sort that number down to about 30, he said.

The committee will put the applications into three categories, qualified, unqualified and possibly qualified. Each application would be examined by at least three people, he said.

From that reduced pool of applicants, a semifinal group, of about 10 or 12, will be selected for interviews. A second group of department heads will choose the semifinalists.

A screening committee, which will include Neiswender, will reduce the semifinalists down to a final group, who will be interviewed by commissioners.

The decision about who will be on the screening committee and who will participate in the final interviews was not decided Monday. Commissioner Robert Sturm said an official from the state association of county commissioners could help interview but Bill Kirchhoff said the interviews should be in-house since the department heads will have to work with the winner.

They decided to devise a formula for making the selection within several weeks.

Neiswender said the formula he has recommended will ensure that no one is in on more than one round of the process so they can't shepherd someone through into the job.

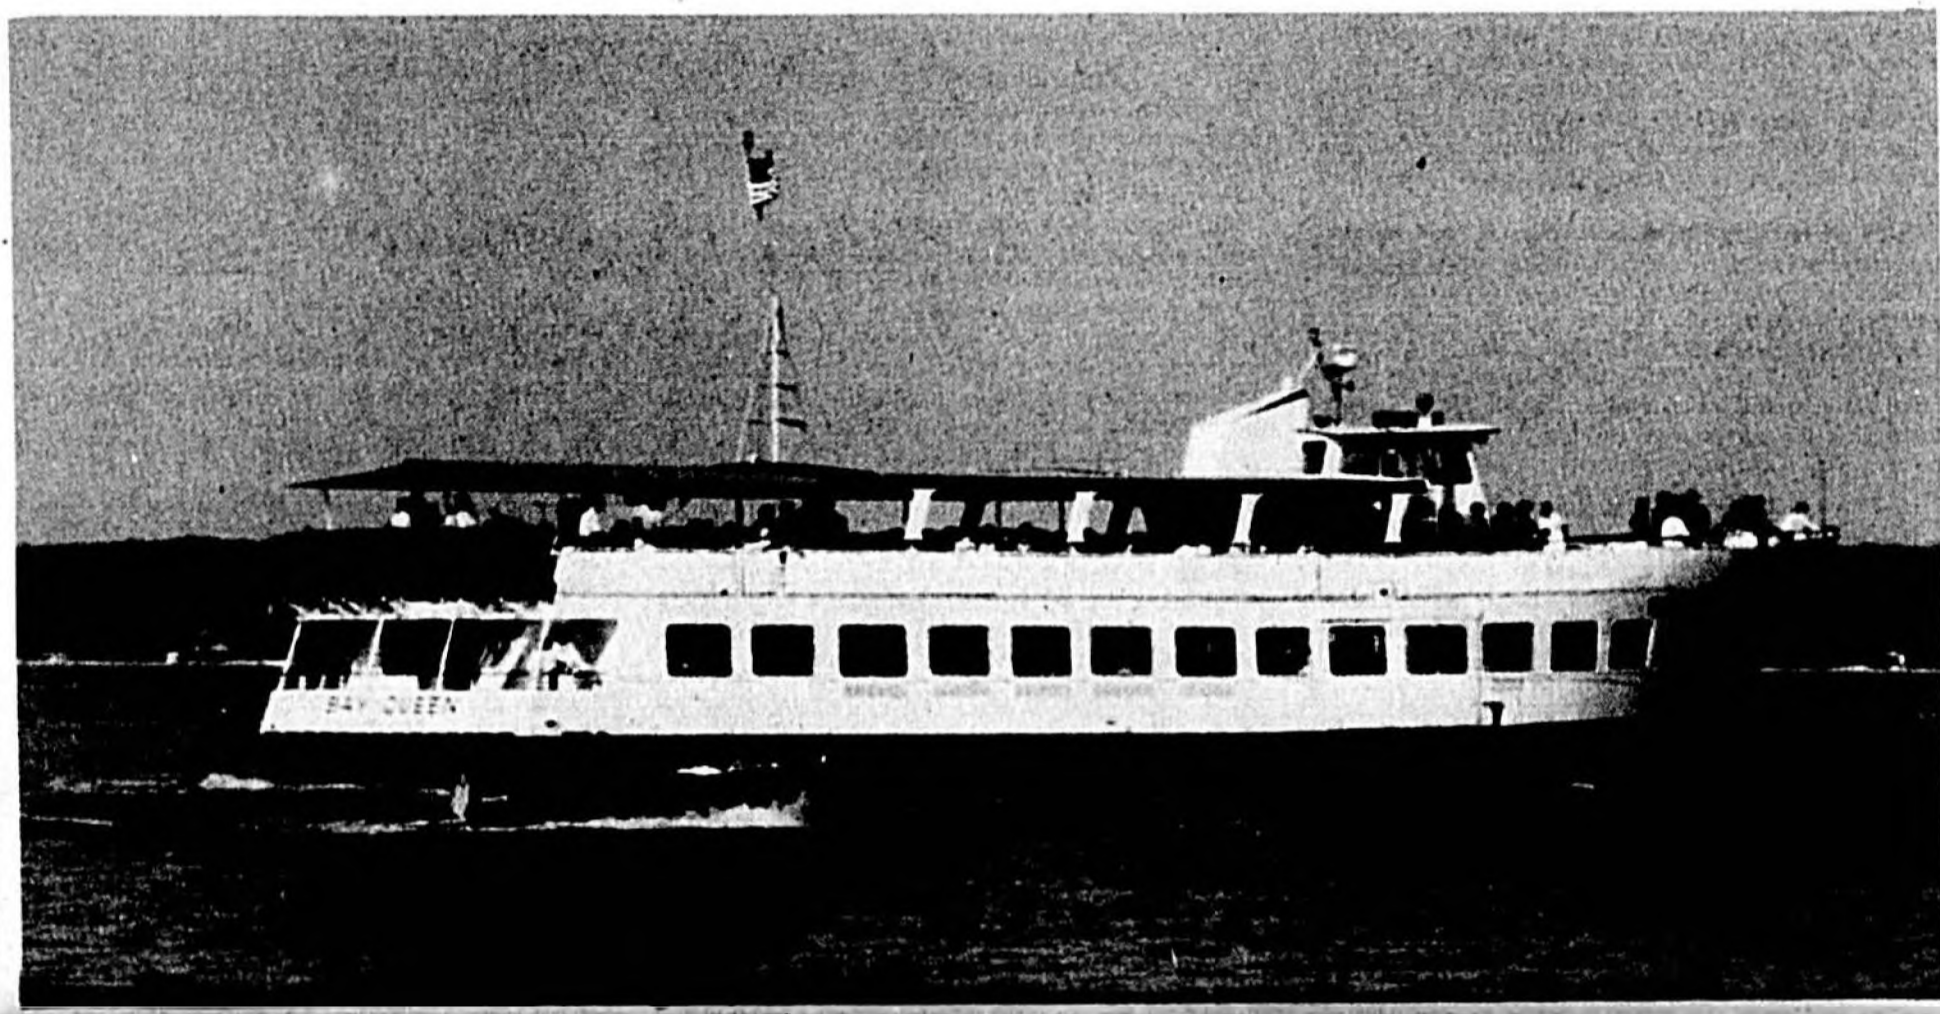

"Through the screening process we should be able to get you the best of the military, the best of the in-house people, the best of the up and coming," Neiswender said.

Several county employees are expected to apply.

Neiswender said previously that he expects several county employees to apply for the position. Commissioner Robert Sturm has already come out in support of Assistant County Administrator Jim Easton for the position. Another name mentioned as a candidate is Jeff Elchberger, Altamonte Springs City Manager and former assistant county administrator.

The deadline for applications on the job is Oct. 29.

The Bay Queen Started Its Trip South Today To Begin Cruises In Lake Monroe And St. Johns River

Monroe Marina To Be Expanded

Excursion Ship To Make Port Of Call At Sanford's Marina

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

The 99-ton, 113-foot cruise ship Bay Queen was to sail from the Charlevoix, Mich., harbor shortly after noon today on the 3,000 mile voyage to Sanford where it is to go into business at the Monroe Harbour Marina.

And the Sanford City Commission Monday night gave its blessing to the plans to locate the diesel ship here to provide dining cruises 15 miles up the St. Johns River and back several times weekly.

Charles Volk, owner-manager of the marina, told the commissioners he plans to dredge in Lake Monroe to provide a special channel for the vessel. Until the dredging is done, the Bay Queen ship will tie off at the fuel dock. Cruises are expected to begin in early November.

The commission also gave its approval to Volk to build 82 new berths for boats in the east harbor, joining the 120 berths already built at the marina.

The improvements Volk plans will cost about $365,000, he said today.

And the City Commission agreed to spend $2,728.16 to provide additional water and sewer service at the facilities for the $1 million cruise ship and the new berths.

The marina, built by the city in 1968-67, is leased under a long-term arrangement to Volk.

The Bay Queen on its voyage to Sanford will go through the St. Lawrence Seaway, around Nova Scotia and down the East Coast, tucking in at Norfolk before proceeding south along the inter-coastal waterway to Sanford.

The ship will have a five-man crew for most of the way, dropping one crewman off along the East Coast before arriving in Sanford.

The voyage during very good weather would take about 17 days, but with poor weather could take as long as 30 days to get to Sanford, said Eric Kammermann, dock manager for Beaver Island Navigation Co., owners of the vessel.

The four-year-old ship was built for these type cruises in Warren, R.I., by the Blount Marine Corp. The ship has been leased by Beaver Island Navigation Co. to Freedom Cruise Ships, Inc.

The ship has been operating as a cruise, dining vessel out of Charlevoix.

Now that the season has ended there, the Bay Queen will operate out of Sanford for the Winter and return to Michigan in the spring, Volk said.

If the cruise operation does well here this Winter, another ship will return here next Fall, he said.

The 113-foot-long vessel has a beam of 29 feet and weighs 99.33 tons. It is licensed to carry 434 passengers. But Kammermann, who is also a ship captain, said it has been found that lunch or dinner can comfortably be served to 250 to 300 persons.

The two-decked ship has an enclosed main dining area. Its upper deck is canopied, and has removable side panels for eating with a band. It also has a wet bar.

Feather Sees No Problems To Keep Date For Project

By DONNA ESTES

The Sanford City Commission Monday night asked Acting City Attorney Frank Whigham to determine the city's position on the 8½-acre parcel near the Evening Herald building, formerly owned by the city and sold under a conditional contract to County Commissioner Robert G. "Bud" Feather.

The action came after Feather told the commission, that he has a $150,000 mortgage at 18 percent interest on the tract and is continuing to search for a joint venture partner, so far without success.

But, Feather added, with interest rates on the way down he foresees no problem with the city-imposed March 1, 1983, deadline for breaking ground on his proposed $20 million life-care facility.

He also said he foresees no problems with building models and marketing the units to be designed for senior citizen apartments with nursing home facilities for the senior residents.

Commissioners Review Jobs

County May Eliminate Positions

Eleven of 14 new jobs included in Seminole County's 1982-83 budget were tentatively re-approved by county commissioners in a work session Monday.

Commissioner Barbara Christensen had asked to review the jobs after a $1.9 million shortfall in carryover funds for the budget was uncovered.

A total of 42 new positions were included in the 1982-83 budget for 19 positions for the sheriff's department and several jobs in the judiciary department were not included in the review.

Three jobs, a fire investigator, a maintenance worker to police the grounds around the county's Five Points complex and a librarian for the Sanford library, were eliminated in the unofficial review Monday. But only one of the 11 jobs which received tentative approval got unanimous support.

A new programmer-analyst position at a salary of $18,387 was approved unanimously after County Administrator Roger Neiswender said many other county agencies are dependent upon continued expansion of the computer services department.

Neiswender said additional jobs in the public service department have been withheld because of computerizing the fire division's dispatch system. Other agencies also plan to increase the amount of information maintained by computer.

"I would recommend that very highly even if you have to cut something else. We're being stymied by how fast we can put things on computer," Neiswender said.

A contracts coordinator, with a salary of $17,077, also was approved unanimously but only Commissioners Robert Sturm, Sandra Glenn and Robert G. "Bud" Feather were present when the vote was taken.

The position drew praise from those commissioners and Neiswender who said the job will be important during the next few years because of construction plans now being developed.

"The next three to five years will be the biggest construction program every in this county. This is a position that can save more than the salary just by reviewing and coordinating contracts," Sturm said.

Plans for construction of at least one new office building adjacent to the courthouse, four new libraries in Seminole County, a new health clinic in Sanford and expansion of the library in Sanford are currently being considered by commissioners.

The fire investigator's job was defeated on a 2-2 vote with Sturm and Feather supporting it and Mrs. Glenn and Mrs. Christensen opposing. Kirchhoff was not present when the vote was taken.

Public Service Director Gary Kaiser said the fire division's one investigator is overworked. He takes no vacations, Kaiser said.

By law the division must investigate all fires of questionable origin and much of the investigator's time is spent in court, Kaiser said.

But Mrs. Glenn and Mrs. Christensen asked Kaiser to develop a program which would seek compensation from companies using investigators as expert witnesses in civil suits. That would compensate the county for the time spent in court, the woman said.

One library position, a full-time librarian at the Casselberry branch, was approved but not without haggling between commissioners supporting it.

Sturm voted in favor of that position and another one at the Sanford branch. Mrs. Glenn supported the Casselberry job but only a part-time position at Sanford. Mrs. Christensen voted in favor of only the Casselberry position. When she refused to budget from that position and Kirchhoff and Feather voted against the jobs, Sturm and Mrs. Glenn compromised on

College Chief Fighting Sexual Harassment Charge

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Lawyers for Hillsborough Community College President Ambrose Garner say sexual advances he allegedly made, even if true, would not be sexual harassment because they were not job-related.

But an assistant attorney general said Garner "corruptly" used his office by seeking sexual favors from "at least six" female employees and should be dismissed from his job.

The opposing views were presented in written arguments submitted Monday to the state Ethics Commission, which held five days of hearings on the allegations against Garner last month in Tampa.

The commission will consider the written arguments at its next meeting in Tallahassee on Oct. 28.

Gay Lawyer Wants Back In

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — A New York attorney figures the Florida Supreme Court owes him a favor because of his disbarment in this state in 1967 for homosexual activities.

The Florida Bar has agreed that someone no longer can be kept from practicing law because of sexual preferences, but it wants former Orlando attorney Harris Kimball required to pass the "Bar exam" to prove that he still has the necessary legal abilities.

Kimball, who has practiced in New York for the last nine years, asked the Supreme Court last week to order him re-admitted to the bar without having to pass the tough examination.

He never would be disbarred today for homosexual activities, he says, so the court owes him special consideration because of his treatment 25 years ago.

Former Enemies Arafat, Hussein 'Blood Brothers'

United Press International
Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat declared he and Jordan's King Hussein — once mortal enemies — are "brothers in blood" with coinciding ideas on bringing peace to the Middle East with a Palestinian-Jordanian federation, it was reported today.

The talks are the first substantive discussions in 12 years between Arafat and Hussein — key brokers in President Reagan's plan for Palestinian self-rule in association with Jordan in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza strip.

Quoting Arab sources, an independent Beirut newspaper today reported Arafat had softened his position on a crucial negotiating point by agreeing a Palestinian entity be under the overall authority of Jordan.

Polish Workers On Strike

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Some 8,000 striking Polish workers hung a "Solidarity" banner at the gates of the Gdansk shipyards, vowing to stay off their jobs until military rulers reinstate their union and free its chief, Lech Walesa.

Telephone and telex links with Gdansk were cut today for the second consecutive day, making it impossible to confirm whether workers carried out their pledge to continue the strike they began Monday.

Workers on the first shift at three Baltic port shipyards refused to work in a spontaneous protest of parliament's decision last week to outlaw the Eastern bloc's first independent trade union.

Eviction Sparks Riots

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (UPI) — As many as 2,000 rioters went on a multimillion-dollar burning and looting rampage to protest the eviction of illegal squatters from a luxury home, injuring dozens of people, including 23 police officers.

Riot police, working in two shifts of 800 each, used tear gas, dogs, sticks and water cannon in an attempt to halt the violence, making 88 arrests as pitched battles raged Monday in the prestigious Rijkswijk museum quarter of Amsterdam.

The 12 hours of rioting, triggered by the eviction of five squatters from a $130,000 villa near the consulate, was the worst violence in the city since protests marking the investiture of Queen Beatrix in April 1980.

Delays Are Plaguing Probe Of Longwood Girl's Murder

By TENI YARBOROUGH
Herald Staff Writer

More than a month has passed since Seminole County sheriff's deputies found the brutally beaten body of a 14-year-old Longwood girl who later died from those injuries. And, while deputies say an arrest is imminent, the case has been plagued with delays.

Katherine Suzanne Greco of 1685 Glenethel Court died Sept. 9 in Orlando Regional Medical Center where she lay comatose since deputies discovered her badly beaten body on the kitchen floor of her home Sept. 7, deputies said.

A Seminole County medical examiner's autopsy report shows that Miss Greco died as a result of multiple blows to her head from a metal claw hammer.

Deputies discovered the injured girl at about 7 p.m. Sept. 7 after the teen's brother, Richard David, 16, notified their father, Richard J., 37, at work and told him Katherine had been beaten.

Greco called deputies, asking them to check on his daughter's well-being while also calling a neighbor, Michael Young, and asking him to go to the home, deputies said.

When deputies arrived at the home, they discovered the brother lying on the front porch, apparently in shock, saying only, "My sister, my sister," deputies said. Deputies entered the home and were met by Young who led them to the girl. Deputies said a hammer, which is owned by the Greco family and is believed to be the murder weapon, was found on the floor near the girl.

Miss Greco was taken to Florida Hospital-Orlando and later transferred to the Orlando Regional Medical Center where doctors operated on her after an Orange County judge issued a court order authorizing the use of blood transfusions in surgery. Surgery was delayed for three hours after family members refused to allow the transfusions because of their religious convictions as Jehovah's Witnesses, deputies said. She died two days later without having regained consciousness, deputies added.

Meanwhile, deputies continue their investigation of the case and although they maintain that an arrest of a person they have suspected for several weeks is imminent, none has been made.

"We anticipated making an arrest last week in the case," said sheriff's spokesman John Spolski. "However, the investigator who is handling the case had a death in the family and had to leave town for a few days and that delayed the possibility of an arrest at that point because we felt it advisable to have him on hand if and when the arrest takes place."

Spolski said the case also had been delayed because Greco family members have been reluctant to discuss the case with investigators and because a suspect in the case has repeatedly failed to show up for questioning.

"We've subpoenaed a suspect in the case and expect to question that person this week," Spolski said. "We served the person with the subpoena to make sure we were doing everything on the up and up and to make sure that person finally reports for questioning under oath. No doubt, the subject will be accompanied by a lawyer but let me assure you we haven't forgotten this case. We've just had delays."

"This is no ordinary case but it is being handled to the letter by the provisions of the legal process," he continued. "We don't want to jump the gun and charge someone with a crime that we may not be quite ready to prosecute. We'd hate to lose the case because we didn't take it to court in time or because we didn't do our homework."

Homestead Exemption Challenged

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — The Supreme Court must resolve practical as well as legal problems in deciding whether to uphold the requirement that a person live in Florida five years to qualify for the $25,000 homestead exemption.

Daytona Beach lawyer Richard Ostendorf has filed one of several lawsuits claiming that the residency requirement is unconstitutional.

Ostendorf's suit got a hearing before the Florida Supreme Court last Thursday, with the justices worried, the St. Petersburg Times reported, about the impact of a decision striking down the residency requirement on local governments.

A couple of constitutional amendments proposed by the Legislature and approved by the voters in the last few years boosted the homestead exemption on city, county and school district taxes from $5,000 — it had been $10,000 for the elderly and disabled — to $25,000.

A homeowner gets only $5,000 exemption on each of the three taxes unless he or she has lived in Florida for the last five years.

Cities, counties and school boards will have been illegally collecting property taxes from newcomers to Florida if the residency requirement was improper and there probably would have to be refunds.

Chief Justice James Alderman said he is concerned with who would pay the bill, since the taxes which were collected have been spent.

"Who would pay the bill if he wins," Alderman asked the assistant attorney general who was arguing that the residency restriction was proper. "What is your opinion as to where the burden would fall?"

"I think it would fall upon the counties and I think a lot of the little counties would practically collapse," said Assistant Attorney General Barbara Harmon.

Governments might have to go back and collect higher taxes on people who got the $25,000 exemption and use the money for refunds for homeowners limited to the $5,000 exemption.

"It would be a monumental task involving an incredible amount of money," she said.

"Is that the basis on which we ought to rule...because of administrative problems an adverse ruling would make!" asked Justice Ben Overton.

"I believe you've ruled on cases on that basis before," Ms. Harmon responded.

The basic question remains whether government can divide citizens into categories based on the length of time they have been a resident.

Ostendorf says the U.S. Supreme Court has decided this question in the negative in its ruling last June striking down Alaska's share-the-wealth program.

The Washington court found unconstitutional the Alaska law giving Alaska residents a share of government's oil and natural gas revenues, and basing the share on the length of residency.

There was "no rational basis" for giving long-time Alaska residents more money than newcomers, the court said, so the program violates the U.S. Constitution's "equal protection" requirement.

There are differences between the Florida and Alaska laws. In Florida, a person gets the same homestead exemption as anyone else after five years.

In Alaska, a person got so much for every year of Alaskan residency, so a newcomer never would reach the same level as old-timers. This seemed to especially trouble members of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Another Deer Hunt Considered

WEST PALM BEACH (UPI) — Florida wildlife advocates and hunting enthusiasts face off tonight over whether a federal plan to allow yet another south Florida deer hunt is sound wildlife management.

The last time the deer hunting issue stirred the groups' passions, state officials proposed to thin out a deer herd in Broward County that was starving because unusually heavy rains reduced the food supply.

Wildlife advocacy groups fought in court against the July hunt in Conservation Area III west of Fort Lauderdale, but it eventually was authorized by a federal judge.

Tonight the Florida Audubon Society and the Florida Wildlife Federation square off in a public hearing on a plan by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to allow controlled hunting in the federal Loxahatchee wildlife refuge, located north of Conservation Area III in Palm Beach County.

Fish and Wildlife Service Director Robert Jansen toured the Loxahatchee refuge with Palm Beach hunting enthusiasts during the summer. The refuge has not been open to hunters since it came under federal control 31 years ago. But it is one of 22 federal wildlife preserves proposed for broader use in the Sept. 22 Federal Register as part of the Department of the Interior's efforts to allow more activities on federal land.

...subject of controversial
Everglades 'mercy' hunt

The Audubon Society and three affiliated groups oppose the newly proposed hunt, saying airboats would be allowed in a nesting area for the endangered sandhill crane.

But the Florida Wildlife Federation backs the plan because "so many people in south Florida want to go hunting and there's not enough places," Federation President Johnny Jones said.

Jones said Loxahatchee, a federal refuge on land leased from the state, contains about 1,000 deer. Of those, about 10 percent are surplus and could be "harvested," Jones said.

But the Fish and Wildlife Service estimated in August there were 450 to 800 deer — not enough for hunting, Audubon Society president Peter Mott said.

Jones conceded the Loxahatchee hunt has been proposed at a "sensitive" time because of the July hunt in Conservation Area III. Wildlife advocates challenged that action in court but lost.

But hunters have been trying to get into Loxahatchee for years, Jones said, and the Loxahatchee hunt has nothing to do with the Conservation Area II hunt.

Jones said the Palm Beach Airboat Club filed suit five years ago seeking access to the Loxahatchee refuge, and that suit still is pending.

Band's Hunger Strikes Sour Note

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I hired a six-piece band for our daughter's wedding reception. Naturally we expected to offer refreshments to the band, but we didn't plan on feeding their wives, girlfriends and teen-aged children. (I counted 15 extra!)

We had a very expensive catered affair for which we were charged by the head. When we saw all these extra people heading for the buffet table, we asked them to please leave as we had ordered only enough food and liquor for the invited guests. One of the band members got upset and left!

A spokesman for the band informed me later that the musicians always take their wives, girlfriends and kids along, and we should have ordered extra refreshments for them! Was he kidding? Or is an apology in order on our part?

DEAR TORQUED: According to a spokesperson for Musicians Union Local 47 in Los Angeles, unless the contract specified that their families should be fed as part of the agreement, the band members had no right to bring their wives, girlfriends and children. In fact, the host and hostess were under no obligation to feed the band members unless it was agreed in the contract.

DEAR ABBY: I've been dating a very attractive fellow for a couple of months, but something is wrong. I feel a certain "distance" between us. When we kiss, nothing happens. (For him.) He seems to be going through the motions, but he doesn't react like he's feeling anything.

I have a genuine interest in him, but this lack of reaction on his part bothers me. When I asked him about it, he said he was getting over a broken heart and couldn't really get "close" now.

OK, I accepted that and didn't get my hopes up. But I have another theory. I think he is a "closet gay" who is trying to go straight but is having difficulty. I don't want to date him anymore but don't know how to break it off without lying to him.

Should I tell him about my suspicions and give him a chance to tell me the truth? Of course, I could be wrong, but I strongly suspect I'm right.

JANE (NOT MY REAL NAME)

DEAR JANE: If you don't want to see him anymore, tell him so, but don't tell him of your "theory." To suggest that he is gay — even if you are correct — would be presumptuous and prying.

DEAR ABBY: I don't know where to turn. My daughter just turned 11, and she tells the most outlandish lies for no reason at all. She told her teacher at school that I hit her on the head with a lead pipe, which is absolutely untrue! (I don't even have a lead pipe!) She tells the neighbors that she is hungry because there is never enough food in the house. Not true! There is always plenty of food here, and she eats well. These are only a few of the lies this child has told that I have heard about. Lord only knows what other lies she's told!

Please tell me what to do. Punishing her doesn't seem to help. She is not a stupid child, and she knows wrong from right. END OF MY ROPE

DEAR END: Your child's lying is a bid for attention. It could also be symptomatic of a deeper emotional problem. She needs to see a specialist who counsels children. If there is such counseling at her school, please take advantage of it. If not, talk to your pediatrician. The child needs help.

Salesmen Don't Sell Logic

NEW YORK (UPI) — Millions of Americans who are out of work or struggling along in dead-end jobs could become successful salesmen if they would learn the art, says master salesman Tom Hopkins.

Hopkins has been through the mill. He was a college dropout and failed in his first selling job, then picked himself up and became a champion. Now he travels about the country conducting sales training seminars. He has a book out called "How to Master the Art of Selling" (Warner Books, New York) and his agent says he commands a lecture price of $10,000.

Hopkins' prescription for becoming a good salesman is very detailed and precise but he told United Press International the heart of the matter is that you sell by appealing to people's emotions. "You don't sell logic because people seldom buy logically."

But it isn't quite that simple. The salesman must master the logic too; he or she must be able to answer all questions about the product or service being sold.

More importantly, the salesman must go beyond arousing the prospect's emotions and creating a want. "The want must be converted to an actual need by the prospect," Hopkins said. "If the need isn't created, the sale probably will be lost."

That's a new wrinkle on the preaching of professional marketers that modern business depends on appealing to people's wants, not their needs.

There's still more to it, Hopkins said. The salesman probably can't actually create the emotional need in the prospect. The salesman can only lead in that direction. The actual creation of the emotional need must be done by the customer and if the salesman doesn't realize that and presses too hard, the sale will be lost.

"The emotional process in the prospect that leads to a purchase begins with a new development of the buyer's self-image," Hopkins said. "The buyer will not be sufficiently aroused to feel a need for what's being sold until this change in his or her self-image occurs."

Hopkins said the champion salesman learns to spot this change in the prospect quickly and to capitalize on it without overplaying his hand and spoiling it by being insincere or careless.

"The keys to success at this moment are being genuinely interested in doing your best for the customer and using your expertise to guide the customer to the best solution for him that your inventory provides."

But before the salesperson can hope to make a profession of helping customers build their self-images, he or she must acquire the requisite confidence and good personal self-image.

"If you want to sell, the first thing to realize is that practically everything we do in life is selling in one way or another and the most important thing we sell is ourselves," Hopkins told UPI.

About the first step in raising your confidence, he said, is to understand that it isn't failure that hurts in life or business but the fear of failure. "Failure is always in the past but the fear of failure can ruin your future."

Following these simple ideas is not easy until one is well advanced on the path, Hopkins conceded. It takes persistence, it takes hard work and, above all, it requires constant association with people — lots of people — and constant study of people.

"You have to live for today to be a good salesman," he said.

But Can You Open It?

DALLAS (UPI) — Allied Automation Inc. makes packaging equipment so it seemed a good idea to fix up something to handle company mailings.

One thing led to another, and now Allied is merchandising its Sergeant Postal Packer, an office mailing system made in its office-factory in north Dallas and sold through distributors all over the country.

Since production began in May, Allied has turned out 300 of the mailing systems and projects sales of 1,000 or more a year at about $1,500 each, said marketing director Bob Quat.

Instead of using bulky paper envelopes, Allied's Postal Packer tightly wraps the material to be mailed in tough, lightweight polyethylene film.

"It's seven times stronger than an ordinary manila envelope," Quat claimed.

But its chief selling point is that the wrap, which Allied calls "envelopwrap," is one-third the weight of the paper in a manila envelope. In most cases, the weight difference is enough to save 17 cents in postage at current rates.

Who is going to buy these things, Quat was asked.

"Anyone who wants an inexpensive way of mailing something," he replied.

"Take a big insurance company," the enthusiastic Quat said. "They might do 2,000 mailings a day. We figure they would pay for the machine in three days."

Allied, which moved to Dallas from Chicago seven years ago, makes about 150 different types of packaging machines in its 65,000-square-foot plant. The industrial machines, sold under the Sergeant trade name, are used by manufacturers to tightly wrap all shapes and sizes of products in plastic.

The company, owned by Gale A. Sherman of Dallas, makes everything at the plant. It even winds its own electric transformers and lays out its own circuit boards.

As the product line grows, so does Allied's work force. About 60 people work now for Allied, which last year had sales of $3.5 million. Quat and others at the plant feel both figures will jump as Postal Packer sales increase.

The company moved into its present plant three years ago. At the time, it was so roomy there was talk about leasing out a portion of the floor space.

Now Allied executives are looking at plans to double-deck some portions of the factory to make more room.

The items wrapped by other Allied machines make up a large and assorted list, including such things as padlocks, frozen pizzas, records, games and all sorts of meats.

The Postal Packer stands about as high as a standard office copying machine. It has two sizes, one to handle mailings up to 13 inches wide and 13 inches long and the other for packages which may be as large as 18 inches wide and 20 inches long. An employee can make and seal as many as 15 mailings a minute on the fastest machine.

Does the Postal Packer have any other advantages over ordinary envelopes?

"You bet," said hard-selling Quat. "It takes less space to store our plastic mailers than all those boxes of envelopes."

When it comes to the curl that you want, and the right amount, never too much or too little, let us guide and help you to reach the exact form you want, whether it be short or long, we'll be sure to give it to you if at all possible. In the world of beauty, promises are made and, just as quickly broken, but Headliners believes that you should get just what is offered, never settling for less.

As for fashion, let us help you keep in touch with the ever changing and fast paced facets of fashion apparel and wear. You'll also find the most important part in the beauty industry—people. Find out when you talk to each cosmetologist, and come to a confident, comfortable conclusion.

So, now you can understand why when it comes to serving you better, we thoroughly believe that at Headliners you'll be able to see and judge quality for yourself. Now, it's up to you for your right decision and remember...at Headliners, you can.

Getting In Shape? Stretch Muscles

DEAR DR. LAMB—I am 42 years old, male and a little overweight. My neighbor and I plan on a fitness program. We both need it. We read your column and know that we should start slowly and gradually build up. We are going to follow your plan and start with a walking program and increase our walking until we are walking about four miles a day.

muscles particularly but a general stretching program for the whole body will be helpful. Use the slow stretch, holding your stretch for at least 30 seconds. The methods and details are in The Health Letter number 19-10, Stretching and Flexibility, which I am sending you.

I have read that you need to do stretching exercises too. Should we do these before or after walk or jog or afterward? What do we need to stretch? And how? Why do we need to stretch if we do? DEAR READER—Congratulations on your good intentions and your sensible plan. Exercising with someone else often helps to motivate you and keep you going.

DEAR DR. LAMB—Please explain the functional difference between a man who has had a vasectomy and one who has been castrated. Can a man who has been castrated attain an erection and experience an orgasm? Does it make any difference if castration occurs before or after sexual maturity is reached?

Yes, you need to stretch. You need stretching exercises to maintain normal posture and normal flexibility. If your neck muscles and tendons and connective tissue are tight you might have trouble turning your neck to see properly when you go on an expressway.

DEAR READER—There are two basic parts of the testicles. The tubules generate sperm cells. If you tie off the main tube, the bas deferens, you block the exit of sperm cells and there may even be some deterioration of the tubes' ability to form sperm cells.

Jogging and running can cause injury to muscles if they are not stretched. Some people even tear their hamstring muscles at the back of the thigh.

The second function is to produce sex hormones, both estrogen and testosterone, but more of the latter. The hormones are formed by different cells interspersed between the tubules.

For most sports you should stretch both before and after exercise. For ordinary walking you don't stretch or strain your muscles that much and you can take advantage of warming up your body with the walk, then stretch at the end of the walk.
