SANFORD — The full moon was still dodging the whispy clouds that remained from last night's heavy rainstorms when the first students arrived at Seminole High School this morning.

The first day of school brought out a variety of emotions among the students.

While some slumped in the corners of benches waiting to hear the dreaded first bes, others danced happily around the courtyard, greeting fellow students and exchanging summer stories.

The 180-foot Spar will join another Maine-based cutter, the 110-foot Wrangell, which was deployed a few days ago, said David Moynihan, spokesman for the Coast Guard in Boston.

There were no signs that the policy stemmed the tide of refugees. The Coast Guard said it rescued 1,189 refugees from boats and rafts on Saturday. Cutters picked up 1,293 Cubans on Sunday — a record one-day total since the 1980 Mariel boatlift which brought 125,000 Cubans to this country's shores in five months.

The 48-member crew of the Spar was given only 48 hours to

The Spar will make stops in Boston and New London, Conn., to pick up provisions for the mission, Moynihan said. It's unclear how long the Spar and Wrangell will be gone.

MONTICELLO — Margaret Jagger is frustrated, perplexed and emotionally drained over the legal intrigue taking place almost half a world away.

Nearly a year ago, the British woman and her longtime companion, Gary Colley, were vacationing in Florida when he was killed during a botched robbery at an Interstate 10 rest stop near Monticello. Jagger was wounded.

Four teens were charged with murdering the 34-year-old mechanical engineer from West Yorkshire in an attack that Today, Jagger, 36, doesn't understand the lack of swift justice in the U.S. judicial system but believes her ordeal is slowly coming to an end. As long the murder case drags on, however, she stays on an emotional roller coaster.

A low point came Friday when she learned a judge postponed the first trial because defendant John "Billy Joe" Crumitie, 17. wasn't ready to begin Monday.

Volusia sheriff investigated for rights violations

By The Associated Press

DELAND - A former Watergate prosecutor is helping represent the Volusia County sheriff's office as federal agencies probe scizures of more than $8 million from Interstate 95 motorists.

The U.S. Department of Justice is investigating the Sheriff's Department for possible civil rights violations in connection with a cash-scizure program touted as an anti-drug effort.

Sheriff Bob Vogel has hired attorney Jon Sale, a prominent South Florida attorney specializing in white-collar crime and well connected in Washington, D.C.

Sale was special assistant to the U.S. attorney general and a prosecutor and instructor at the Justice Department. He served as special assistant to lead pro-secutor Leon Jaworski in the Watergate Sale declined to say how much he's charging.

"We've agreed to work at significantly below our normal rates," he told The Orlando Sentinel for a story Sunday.

County officials said the sheriff's office took out a purchase order for $7,500 to pay Sale's firm when he was hired.

The Volusia County investigations involve money confiscated from targeted motorists mostly blacks and Hispanics — driving on

Community activists, residents want more help

By IKE PLONES Associated Press Writer

MELBOURNE - Lisa Hull and Juanita Baker have a message for politicians who deliver stirring campaign speeches about declining family values: get off the stump and on the scene.

Forget the rhetoric, they say. Make sure there is the needed financial and material support for modest community programs already helping the victims of broken families.

"The phrase 'family values' has taken on a life of its own" in has taken on a life of its own" in political campaigns, says Ms. Baker, a teacher-psychologist who runs a community program for sexually abused children. "Politicians need to get people together, not to tear down the opposite party and cause people to lose faith in what's happening in their community," she says. Many Florida cities recognize the problems caused by the erosion of traditional moral values, personal responsibility and family unity. And some — like Melbourne - are trying to cope.

with or without help from state and federal agencies.
In a little over two weeks. voters throughout Florida head to the polls for the Sept. 8 primary election to choose the Republican and Democratic nominees for governor. The Republican field includes Secretary of State Jim Smith, Miami businessman Jeb Bush, former Senate President Ander Crenshaw of Jacksonville, In-surance Commissioner Tom Gallagher and Tallahassee trial lawyer Ken Connor. TORONTO — Obese adoles-cents are at risk of developing sleep disturbances that can cause learning disorders and a significant drop in 1Q. a study found.

The study was done on severely obese adolescents, but it's possible the same thing is happening in some moderately obese adolescents, researchers

"There's a decrease in oxygen to the brain and it leads to a type of brain damage." said the study's principal author. Susan K. Rhodes, a psychologist at the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston. Because adolescents' brains are still developing, putting obese adolescents on diets could reverse the damage, she said.

"It's just possible that losing weight can make them smarter." she reported Sunday at the Seventh International Congress on Obesity.

Dr. Douglas Bradley, a sleep researcher at Ouest Flirabeth Hospital in Toronto, noted that adolescents with enlarged tonsils have also been shown to have the same sleep disturbilices, along with declines in school performance and intellectual ability.

The finding that this is happening in obese adolescents is potentially very important, he Rhodes described her work as a preliminary study. She and her colleagues studied 14 adolescents, five of whom had what's called aleep apnea. That's a technical term for temporary ceasation of breathing during sleep. The episodes last 10 seconds or more, until the sleeper awakes and resumes breathing, she said.

"In adults it's pretty well established that there's a decrease in oxygen to the brain. and it leads to a type of brain damage," she said.

in addition to brain damage, people with aleep apnea wake up so often that they're tired and unable to concentrate. Rhodes

"We found diminished performance across the board" in the obese adolescents with sleep apnea, she said. "They had deficits in both visual and verbal learning" and a drop in IQ, as measured by standard tests.

The children in the study weighed at least twice as much as their ideal weight, Rhodes said. They ranged in age from 1014 to 15.

Rhodes had no precise statistics on how many adolescents are severely obese, but the condition is not uncommon, she

"There are a lot of them out there," she said. And there are many more moderately obese adolescents, some of whom may also suffer from sleep apnea and associated learning problems, she said.

Sleep apnea has been known to be associated with obesity, but the link with the learning deficits in adolescents is new.

The sleep disorder may be caused by actual fat in the throat

Prepare for hurricanes

When one of your friends up north calls to say he or she will be coming to visit you, most people will start cleaning their house in preparation. For some homemakers, it was once said, thank goodness we have visitors or we'd never get our houses completely

For some people, the house is even prepared when the relative coming for a visit isn't necessarily wanted. The welcome mat will probably be out nonetheless.

This advance preparation must be kept in mind now. We may have a guest coming, one who's visit we don't appreciate. His name is Chris, and Chris starting as a tropical storm, could become a hurricane.

Regardless of the fact that hurricane season is from June through November, all of us who have been through these seasons know the most severe time is from mid-August through the end of September.

If Chris doesn't visit Central Florida, he may send some of his relatives before the season has ended.

It's time to make ready. Get the house in order for that visitor.

Waiting until there is a definite threat is going to produce problems. Try purchasing some protective plywood a few days prior to the arrival of a hurricane. It will be almost impossible.

By the time everyone knows of the impending disaster, flashlight batteries, lamps, portable cooking units, canned food, and the many other items people seed in forder to survive, will be gobbled up by those who started their planning.

Don't just buy four by eight foot sheets of the plywood either. Continue preparations by cutting them out to fit over your home windows and doorways.

Label them so you know where they must be put up when the need arises.

There are pamphlets being put out on hurricane preparedness. Anyone who is new to this area should obtain one and follow it's instructions as soon as possible.

For persons who have been here through other hurricanes, don't think you know it all. Get the pamphlets and be certain you are prepared.

If a hurricane hits our area, there WILL be damage and destruction. How much of it will happen to your home or business can be in direct relationship to how much you prepare

School board elections

This fall, Seminole County voters will decide whether school board elections shall be changed from non-partisan to partisan. This proposal is the least desirable of several proposed by the county's charter review commission.

charter review commission.

The League of Women Voters of Seminole County strongly opposes the amendment. County school board elections have been non-partian since 1975 by virtue of a special act of the Legislature. In 1992, the court upheld non-partian elections against challenge. There is no reason to seek an alternative to that decision.

Party politics have no place in children's education. Capable individuals interested in educational policy should not have to declare party affiliation for candidacy. National and state party philosophies are not relevant to school board

We believe there is little evidence to support the argument that non-partises election of school board members gives inordinate power to special interest groups such as school unions. Instead, candidates are often parents of children in the system or business owners employing the graduates of crunty schools.

Finally, the League is concerned with the echool board's efficial position that the charter commission overstepped its bounds. The charge could lead to litigation with taxpayers financing both sides — county commission as defendant and school board as challenger.

There is no valid reason to change school board elections from non-partisan to partisan.

Orange juice war against 'bad' ideas

The National Organization for Women has been taking celebratory credit for the Florida Citrus Commission's refusal to renew its 1 million advertising campaign on Rush Limbaugh's radio program. The commission denies that NOW's boycott of Florida orange juice had anything to do with its decision. NOW doesn't believe the commission. Neither do I.

NOW, however, should share some of the credit - for punishing Limbaugh's ideas - with the National Education Association, the NAACP and the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs. All called for a boycott of Florida orange juice so long as the bolsterous Limbaugh was one of its spokesmen.

Boycotts are a classic American form of protest. For a long time, I would check Cesar Chavea's list of proscribed grape growers before I would buy any grapes. So did many others in my neighborhood, and in time, most of those scorned grapes disappeared from the supermarkets.

But there are two basic kinds of boycotts. This became clear in the late 1970s when a number of outraged groups around the country also boycotted Florida orange juice because its individual happens often enough, there has to be spokeswoman then. Anita Bryant, had — on hen a dangerous inhibiting effect on a lot of other own time — denigrated homosexuals.

I asked First Amendment authority Floyd

Abrams what he thought of the Jihad against Florida orange juice that eventually got Bryant fired. "The boycotts of California grape growers." Abrams said, "are against actions by those employers in their business when they resist workers' attempts to get a fair wage or violate collective bargaining rights. But Anita Bryant is being boycotted because she has engaged in speech. political speech, that has nothing to do with her work Limbaugh boycott — is "using the kind of tactics often favored" by such fundamentalist groups as the Rev. Donald Wildmon's American Family Association. Wildmon — a grand master of economic wars against "bad" ideas and "bad" expression — has deployed his troops against "The Last Temptation of Christ." "N.Y.P.D. Blue" and many more bearers of his version of unchristian values. NOW, the National Education Association and Wildmon have, of course, the First Amendment right to go into combat against First Amendment values. So have countless other enemies of free expression, but the damage they do can go far beyond their immediate target — in this case. Rush Limbaugh.

Paul McMasters of the First Amendment Center at the Freedom Forum in Nashville tells me it's ironic that the NEA, the nation's largest teachers' union, "should utilize this particular form of First Amendment action — the boycott — to protest another pure form of First Amendment action. Rush Limbaugh giving his opinions. I would expect teachers especially to fight ideas with ideas — not with economic weapons."

The lesson plan of the NEA for students around the country is: replace the marketplace of ideas with the marketplace of economic forces.

Capitalism seizes global power

There is a specier haunting the working men and women of the world and their governments. It is international capitalism, pursuing efficiency and profit with a singleminded, unregulated zeal unmatched since the industrial revolution.

As most will recognize, that opening line is a rough paraphrase of Karl Marx. His "specter" was communism, which he had invented and which he sincerely hoped was haunting the crowned heads of Europe.

Today, the inescapable truth is that the most blindly powerful global force is not "world communism" or nation-state imperialism, but free enterprise capitalism. It has dissolved national borders into figments of the cartographer's imagination and as frequently transformed presidents into impotent figure-

The torrential flow of capital around the globe is part of the story. Incessantly seeking the highest return, a trillion dollars are estimated to move abroad from New York City each day. By contrast, about $200 billion is reported to be the most that the big central bankers can call upon to protect the international financial system.

Cumulative foreign investment totals some 85 trillion worldwide, about a trillion dollars less than the total amount of foreign trade each year. American companies that once moved their plants southward to take advantage of lower wages and tax breaks now routinely abandon the United States altogether. They are not alone. And the United States is not simply a supplier of capital. British, Dutch. German, Hong Kong, French and Japanese companies have opened or sequired thousands of American-based operations.

Rather than "following the flag." trade and investment have virtually nothing to do with it. More and more American corporations' annual reports include phrases such as the one I encountered in Michigan a few years ago. "Company X is an international corporation headquartered in the United States." Management loyalty is offered to the stockholders or to itself; the national interest and American workers are of secondary importance.

What is evolving is textbook efficient. Open markets and thriving international finance are. in the conventional economic wisdom, "good things." So is plant location in economically depressed regions and nations. They may even eventually prove more beneficial to the great majority of mankind than they are harmful to the minority.

In the meantime, however, they are the proximate cause of immense pain for millions of people. The immediate consequence of international competition for investment dollars and trade is the devaluation of labor --$12-an-hour employees in developed countries must compete with 50-cent-an-hour workers in less developed nations. Given the vast pool of the unemployed or underemployed around the globe, what depresses the wages of the better-paid does not automatically raise the wages of the poorer. There is always a cheaper place to do business, which makes it easier to resist pressure for higher wages.

There are always less regulated places to do business as well. No more offshore dumping in the United States? OK, let's go to more hospitable climes where industrial pollution looks and smells like money to venal politicians.

The triumph of international capitalism was not the only reason, but it was not purely coincidental that real wages in America fell 18 per-cent between 1972 and 1990. Nor has the recent recovery done much to make up for lost ground.

As Secretary of Labor Robert Reich recently conceded in a talk at the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies, the 2 million new jobs created in the 1993 to 1994 period were "mainly for low-akilled or entry-level jobs... (many of which) do not pay an adequate

As most will recognize, that opening line is a rough paraphrase of Karl Marx.

Nothing is going to change so long as money and enterprise think and move globally while governments largely confine their attention to purely national concerns. Playing beggar your neighbor — and beggar your worker — by offering open access and lax regulations, too many countries buy progress at a fearful price. It was a game that the American South once knew only too well, and it is now a worldwide

Unfortunately, the countervalling temptation is to throw the baby out with the bathwater. Raise tariff barriers and block foreign owner-ship. Penalize American companies which invest above a certain percentage abroad. Rather than helping, the net result of such approaches would inevitably include the erosion of the American economy at home and of American competitiveness abroad.

What is needed and must eventually evolve is more complicated: international labor and environmental standards as one instance: tighter supervision of capital flows for another. All will require international law and transnational cooperation.

Goldwater passes test of time

I have made it a practice in recent years to pause periodically and applaud a class of people who do more than any other to keep the world sane.

I speak of curmudgeons, of course, those congenital sourballs who hate pretense, can spot hypocrites at a hundred paces and do not hesitate to point them out, usually with a touch of caustic humor, creativity and gusto.

For all my grumbling about curmudgeons rarely getting recognition. I have committed the egregious trespass of overlooking the one person who could win a National Crank contest going away.

"VI speak of Barry"

Gold water, of course, the crusty, 85-yearold former U.S. senator and Republican presidential candidate who is commonly regarded as the founding father of modern American conservatism. They beat a path to his Phoenix home these days -- authors, writers, old pals, up-and-coming pols -- conservatives and liberals alike, seeking insight and perhaps a catchy quote.

It wasn't like that 30 years ago, when he ran for the presidency against Lyndon Johnson. To many, he was a scary pariah then, a major-party candidate who talked openly of ending the Vietnam War with a few strategically placed nuclear bombs. He defended the John Birch Society, a group so abourdly radical that it believed the United States was under the control of the KGB.

He scared me, too, but somehow, beneath the bluster, I perceived a person of courage. integrity and common sense, and I became one of 27,175,770 people to cast my vote for

That was the first presidential election in which I ever voted and perhaps the only one about which I have never entertained second thoughts. I would vote for him today, regardless of his advanced years, if he could gear up his strength to overcome 15 knee, shoulder, hip and heart operations and compete against the Clintons, Doles, Quayles and Kemps he would surely humiliate.

How can one curmudgeon not appreciate another curmudgeon who brims with controversial beliefs and finds it impossible to contain himself? I fancy myself a candid critic, but I stand in awe of Barry Goldwater. Consider just a few of the observations he has been moved to make in recent months:

-- "I've got no use at all for the religious Right," he recently told a reporter for Men's Journal magazine. "Anybody who tries to make politics out of God ought to go to hell." A year ago, he told the Arizona Republic that the conservative movement seemed to be doing well despite the "crackpots and nuts" on the religious Right. "I know them all," he continued. "I've said Jerry Falwell should be kicked in the asa, and I meant it. He has a big one. You can't miss it."

- "I don't like what the Republicans are trying to do with (Clinton's) background," he told Men's Journal. "In my opinion, what a man did 20 years before he became president doesn't make a... bit of difference. I wish they'd get off his back on this so-called Whitewater.... Not going to prove anything."

- "Should there be gays in the military?" he rhetorically asked a Washington Post reporter last month. "Having spent 37 years of my life in the military as a reservist, and never having met a gay in all of that time, and never having even talked about it in all those years, I just thought, why the hell shouldn't they serve? They're American citizens. As long as they're not doing things that are harmful to anyone else.... So I came

But Clarence Klinedinst, a small-time robber with big dreams of freedom, watted until daylight to break out of the Eastern State Penitentiary, a hulking stone fortress founded by people who believed that man will be good if left alone.

Eleven other inmates followed him down the 100-foot-long hole right after breakfast on April 3, 1945. Ice truck driver Daniel Flowers, parked on busy Fairmount Avenue, was amazed to see 12 prisoners wriggling out of the ground covered with mud.

"They popped out like so many brown rate," he said. "I couldn't count them, they came so fast."

in broad daylight, Klinedinst and his friends had no chance. Most were recaptured that day: freedom.

one knocked on the prison door a week later and asked to be let in, saying he was hungry. Two others lasted eight weeks.

But the story of this not-so-great escape has lived on.

Today the 165-year-old prison stands alone on 11/2 city blocks. its 30-foot-high stone walls keeping the brightly lit restaurants and garbage-littered parking lots of the present outside.

This spring, a play produced inside retold the story of Klinedinst's botched breakout.

Klinedinst, a mason before he was a petty thief, was left alone much of the time he spent at Eastern in the 1940s. Instead of using his solitude to repent, he engineered the most daring breakout in the prison's history, digging a tunnel from a hole in the corner of his cell.

He spent more than a year burrowing into the dark, cold earth, using tools from his job as the prison plasterer to tunnel through stone, gravel, rats and groundwater before he dug under the thick outside wall to Klinedinst had nothing to lose by trying — they were lifers. But Klinedinst was up for parole in a year. And all he got for a year of digging was two hours of freedom and another three to six years on a 15-year sentence.

I can't understand why he did it." said William Rayhill, an actor who plays Klinedinst in "Tunnel," the play dramatizing the breakout.

"Tunnel" used the abandoned prison's cellblocks, its cold, stale air and its stone floors as a set.

Minty-green paint (prison of-ficials thought it was a soothing color) peels off like sheets of paper. Water drips through a decaying plaster ceiling onto rusty metal bed frames. Trees grow through cellblocks, weeds and debris are everywhere and a horde of cats has the run of the Bolger is on a task force dedicated to keeping the prison standing and out of developers' hands. In recent years Eastern has survived attempts to turn it into a shopping mail and an apartment complex.

Eastern State was a model for prison reform when it took its first prisoner in 1829, founded by Quakers who believed criminals needed to be anonymous and alone to change for the better.

The penitentiary's architectural style — seven cellblocks radiating from a central rotunda - and its innovative penal philosophy inspired hundreds of replicas from Beijing to Paris.

"Certainly more people have heard of the Bastille, the Tower of London, Alcatraz and proba-bly even Sing Sing." said Norman Johnston, a Beaver College professor who has written a book about Eastern. "But in terms of influencing other places, nothing compares to the Philadelphia prison.

Eastern was a 19th century tourist attraction. John Quincy Adams visited; so did Alexis de Tocqueville. When Charles Dickens visited America, he wanted to see only two sites: Niagara Falls and Eastern State Penitentiary.

Eastern inmates came into jail with sacks over their heads, so they could see no one and no one could see them to judge them later for their mistakes. They were ushered into 12-by-8-foot cells, dark temples of contemplation complete with toilets. central heat and individual exercise yards.

more domestic violence cases. "After Friday night however." he said. "the actual number went back down to normal."

Kuhn said 2,025 cases of domestic violence were reported in a year's time, with over 15 deaths in Seminole County in the last five years, directly related to domestic violence.

In the most serious attack over the weekend. Edvena Mitchell. was reportedly stabbed at her home at 118 W. 10th Street early Sunday. Arthur Lewis Robinson, 35, reportedly awoke the woman at 2:30 a.m. in the bedroom of her home, and began arguing. Police said he then stabbed her twice with a kitchen

Robinson was arrested by Sanford police and has been charged with attempted murder.

Police said Cherelle Jones, was hit twice by bullets fired from a 25 caliber handgun, Friday evening, at her home, 1811 Persimmon Avenue. Her husband, Tony Anthony Jones, 27, of 1405 W. 16th Street, was located through an anonymous phone call, and arrested at his residence by Sanford police. He has been charged with attempted murder, use of a firearm in the commission of a felony, and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon.

Police also found he' was wanted on an outstanding warrant for discharging a firearm in public.

Both women were transported to Orlando Regional Medical Center. As of this morning, a hospital spokesperson said Mitchell's condition was listed as good to the point where she is expected to be released today.

Jones' condition, although originally listed as critical, was stable this morning, and she is to be transerred from ICU to a regular room.

Kuhn said one of the problems which produce domestic violence is the reluctance of one person in a couple, to accept osing the other. "On the na-tional average," she said. "statistics indicate a woman will actually go through seven violence situations before she finally tries to do something to obtain protection."

"The abusing partner in this case is just not willing to give the other up, even though he or she has been told, 'you've had it' by the other," she said. "It's at this point where the serious danger of injury or death usually enters the picture."

Kuhn suggested people who believe they are in danger, or trying to split up with a difficult partner, should call her office for assistance. She may be reached at the State Attorney's office in Sanford, 322-7534, ext. 6110.

The bill cleared the House 235-195 in a rare Sunday session. after key Democrats and moderate Republicans bargained until dawn and S a.m. the two previous nights.
Sen. Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said debate should begin today on the bill designed to: help hire 100,000 new police officers; build new prisons; and, much to the consternation of the powerful National Rifle Association, ban military-style assault weapons.

With the outcome uncertain for hours, a crucial preliminary vote Sunday flashed the results of deals that cut $3.3 billion from the earlier bill, mostly from crime prevention programs.

Forty-two Republicans supported the mo-tion to allow consideration by the full House, compared with 11 when a similar move falled 10 days ago. The Aug. 11 vote sent shocked Democratic leaders and Clinton into a tailspin, forcing them to negotiate with the GOP moderates - and causing a potentially devastating delay in the timetable for health care reform legisla-

"In the past few days, we on our side have had to reach out to moderate Republicans, it was painful," said Rep. Charles E. Schumer, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on crime.

"Many of us had to give in ways we haven't had to give before. But it will produce a bill and it is the way we should go in the future."

Democrats will have to go that way in the Senate. Majority Democrats have 56 senators, some of whom are likely to defect. while 60 are needed to hurdle procedural obstacles that Republicans threaten to erect.

QOP senators, like the Republicans who opposed the House compromise, believe the House-passed bill still spends far too much on prevention instead of punishment.

This fight is far from over" in the Senate, Clinton said after the vote. He lauded the bipartisan House cooperation saying, "This is the way Washington should work, and I hope it works this way in the future."

But Sen. Orrin G. Hatch of Utah, senior Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee, warned, "It still may collapse." Hatch vowed to fight "soft, fluffy language that will not do anything against crime."

Hatch said the House bill falls short of the money needed to build more prisons, reach the goal of hiring 100,000 new police officers and combat gang violence. He also wants faster deportation procedures for illegal altens who commit crimes and harsher mandatory minimum sentences when firearms are used in criminal acts. The anti-crime legislation would be paid for with savings from reduction of the federal workforce. Biden said Senate Republicans are "going to do everything they can to stop it, but it's going to be awfully hard to stop. Folks aren't crazy about gridlock."

Biden acknowledged, nevertheless, that he does not expect all Democrats to support the bill and added, "My dilemma is to get virtually all the Democrate and between five and eight Republicans,"

The House compromise was backed by 188 Democrats, 48 Republicans and one independent. Voting against it were 131 Republicans and 64 Democrats.

The assault weapons ban, which originally passed the Senate by a 56-43 vote, also could be troublesome as Biden searches the Senate for 80 votes. The National Rifle Association, which failed to eliminate the language in the House bill, is ready to work even harder in the

The NRA's chief lobbyist, Tanya Metaksa, called the House bill "a defeat for the American people."

Rep. John Dingell's decision to support the bill, even with the weapons ban that he termed "obnoxious" and "offensive," prompted him to resign from the NRA board. The bill as a whole, the Michigan Democrat said, was "a smart and a tough

The Coast Ottard crew that scooped up Florentino Odnsales, 34, Jose Gonzales, 40, and Abel Vidal, 22, from their precarious raft Sunday took them not to Piorida, but to a cutter loaded Hoping to stem the swelling tide of loat people, President Citaton on Friday reversed the United States' longstanding open-arms palety beward Cuban refully, who is the past were virtually assured of asylum. Now, those who reach U.S. shores are being detained indefinitely, and those picked up at sea are taken to Guantanamo Florida. The rafta keep coming."

But the exodus across the 90-mile straits hasn't slowed yet. The Coast Guard picked up 1,293 Cubans on Sunday - the highest daily total since the 1980 Mariel boatlift that brought 125,000 Cuban to U.S. shores in five months. Sunday's total broke Saturday's record of 1.189. The numbers have surged since Aug. 5, when Cuban leader Fidel Castro threatened to open his coast, raising fears of a new Mariel. Dozens more Cubans left their country in rafts and boats on Sunday, apparently un-deterred by, or unaware of, the new policy.

Most of the refugees are leaving Cuba in tiny homemade raits. The Coast Guard is plucking hundreds from the sea. Coast Guard helicopters, planes, cutters and crews have been called in from as far away as Maine to help handle the influx.

But volunteer pilots helping search for the rafters say it's not Besulto urged the Coast Guard to expand its search, and he pleaded with Cubans not to leave their country. "It is suicidal," he said.

Many of those picked up at sea, like the three men on the raft, had left Cuba before Clinton's announcement and were unaware of their changed prospects in the United States.

The Gonzalezes and Vidal left Playa Altura, Cuba, a week ago, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Gene Maestas, who was on the boat that picked them up. They had spent two days building the 10-foot raft, an V-shaped open framework of branches atop three innertubes. A tail stick and a purple sheet served as mast and sail; a piece of white sacking as flag.

The raft was spoting at midday Sunday about 12 miles south of Key West - more than 80 miles from Cuba.

"They almost made it."

Macetas said. "They were holding up their hands, waving and shouting. In their minds, they were coming to the United States."

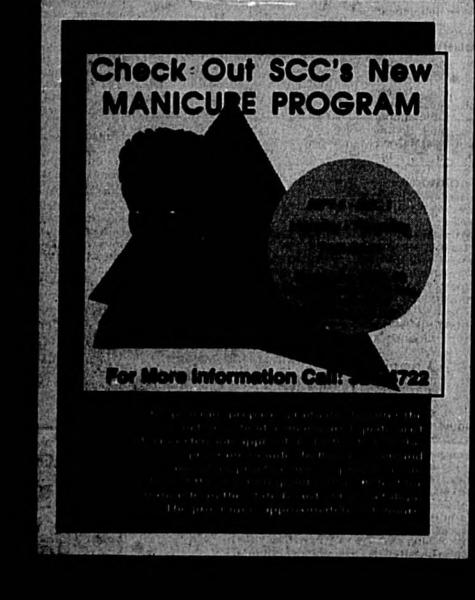

The men said they'd been paddling for six days and had run out of food and water. Sharks bigger than their raft had circled them. With every wave, they got soaked. Vidal, the lightest-skinned of the three. was badly sunburned.

All they had eaten that day was a bag of potato chips from some passing boaters.

After the Coast Guard picked them up, the men broke down. Hugging each other, they wept with relief and happiness. Vidal showed the officers a worn black and white photograph of his daughter. He planned to join his mother in Miami, he said.

The three men pulled out combe, deodorant and a mirror. and tried to clean themselves up. Maestas said he could harely bring himself to (all them they wouldn't be taken to the United States. Nor could the other

Fortay sult dismissed

MIAMI — A federal judge has thrown out former quarterback Bryan Fortay's $10 million lawsuit against the University of Miami.

Fortay sued the university, Coach Dennis Erickson and eight other UM employees for negligence and breach of contract.

The suit alleged negligence caused Fortay to become unwittingly involved in a Pell Orant fraud scheme and that Erickson breached an oral contract by breaking a promise to make him the starting quarterback for 1991.

U.S. District Judge Federico Moreno dismissed all 29 counts of the lawsuit, but Fortay can pursue his claims that the university's negligence got him involved in the fraud.

He has until Sept. 15 to refile up to six counts against the university and one against former academic adviser Tony Russell, who was convicted of faisifying the Pell Grant applications of 91 students between 1989 and 1991.

O'Cubs spilt

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. - Chris Stynes hit a two-run home run in the bottom of the fifth inning of the nightcap Sunday as the Knoxville Smokies topped Orlando 4-3 and split a Southern League double-header with the Cubs. Orlando, won the first game when Mike Hubbard. Fedro Valder, and Scott Tedder illi drew bases loaded walks in the seventh inning.

Suns miss sweep

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Chris Widger drove in the winning run as Jacksonville edged Nashville 3-2 in the first game, but the Sounds came back the second game to earn a split in the Southern League doubleheader, 4-2.

Geoff Bodine dominates at MIS

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Geoff Bodine, reflecting the thoughts of the entire Winston Cup community, called it a bittersweet day.

The 45-year-old Bodine drove a fautless race on the 2-mile, high-banked oval; as he led 159 of the 200 laps, including the final 50.

The victory was the 15th for Bodine, who averaged 130.914 mph as he bent Mark Martin by .91 seconds — about seven car-lengths.

Rick Mast, the pole-winner at Indianapolis, came on late to finish third, followed by Rusty Wallace, Bobby Labonte and Kyle Petty. Dale Earnhardt, who came into the race with a 27-point lead over Irvan in the Winston Cup standings, added to his lead, but Martin and Wallace gained valuable ground as Earnhardt crashed hard on Lap 55 and finished 37th.

lost a fuel gamble on the final lam.

The victory was Unser's seventh this season, and increased his ladyCar series lead.

Special to the Herald

WINTER SPRINGS - Can the Lyman Greyhounds repeat as the Class 6A girls' cross country state champions?

According to the Florida Athletic Coaches Association's preseason state poll, which has Lyman ranked No. 1 in the state, the Greyhounds are favored to do just that.

Led by junior Katherine Hudson, four of the seven girls who ran for Lyman's state champion-ship team last year are back. Hudson, who finished 14th at last year's state meet, is ranked seventh in the preseason honor roll.

Other returners from last year's team are sophomore Maeve Alford (who finished 23rd in the state championship race), junior Somer Forgy (36th), and sophomore Joy Kaminski

The Lake Howell Silver Hawks, who have all seven runners back from last year's team that finished fifth at the state meet, begin the season ranked fourth behind Lyman. Niceville, and Tallahassee-Lincoln.

By comparison, Seminole County is represented by one athlete and one team in the Class 6A preseason honor roll and state poll.

Going into the season, Lyman Junior Rob Evans is ranked No. 4 in the state behind Oak Ridge senior Dominic Adamson, senior Louis Snelling of Seminole (Pinellas County), and Fort Lauderdale-Dillard senior Quacy Cox.

Irvan's condition improved, still critical

BROOKLYN, Mich. - Ernie Irvan's condition improving although he is still listed as critical remains on life support, one day after the stock car driver crashed during practice. Irvan, one of the top NASCAR drivers, hit the wall at about 176 mph in Turn 2 during a practice session Saturday at Michigan International Speedway after the right front tire on his Ford Thunderbird appeared to be cut. He crashed into the wall in Turn 2 and sustained severe head and chest injuries. "His vital signs over the past 24 hours have been stable and his blood pressure, pulse and vital functions remain on life support, which includes a ventilator for his breathing," said Dr. Errol Erlandson, trauma surgeon on the medical team treating irvan.

"The area of the injury to his lungs remains severe but improved. His oxygenation has improved." Erlandson said Sunday via a telephone hookup from St. Joseph Mercy Hospital at Ypsilanti."We see some increase in improvement on his chest X-ray examination today, certainly no womening.

"In the area of neurologic or brain injury, our assessment today, which included a follow-up CAT scan of the brain, showed no womening. Specifically, there were no areas of hemorrhage of the brain. There was no sign of increasing pressure in the brain. And we see no areas of the brain which have suffered irreversible injury. However, I would point out that the injury is still severe." Erlandson also said there are no additional injuries. other than abrasions and contusions about the face.

Asked if there is a specific period of time critical for the 35-year-old Irvan's chances of recovery. Erlandson said. "I wish I could give you a time frame for improvement, but when we're dealing with severe neurologic injury, certainly stabilization is very, very Important. But, in terms of return of specific functions, It would be fruitless for me to predict."

NEW YORK - Before baseball players and owners talk, they have to talk about talking.

In the weird world of baseball labor relations, nothing is simple these days. So as the strike enters its 11th day, union head Donald. Fehr and management negotiator: Richard Ravitch are set to get together to discuss the rules of engagement for their next negotiating session, now scheduled for Wednesday.

Fehr compares the pre-discussion discussion to the Paris peace talks on the Vietnam Wall peace talks on the Vietnam Wall peace talks "I assume this means we'll be arguing about the lable," he said Sunday. "We intend to tell them they can sit where they Delegations from each side will meet separately Tuesday with federal mediators. Bargaining, which broke off when the strike began Aug. 12, then will resume Wednesday with owners at the table for the first time since talks began on Jan. 13, 1993.

Fehr said he has no great expectations for the week, insisting that acting commissioner Bud Selig has a "calendar" for management's actions during the talks.

"It doesn't make any sense to try and figure it out. They'll tell us." Fehr said. "The notion that anything we say or do matters is simply wrong. They set out to have a strike and they'll negotiate to end it when they want to end it."

The strike canceled 14 games Sunday, increasing the total to 131, nearly 6 percent of the entire season.

There have been no signs that owners will alter their demand for a salary cap, although Colorado Rockies owner Jerry McMorris repeated during the weekend that he doesn't think a cap must be part of the solution.

Choices for teen athletes are many yet fleeting

There have been a lot of high school coaches walking around and shaking their heads this summer. frustrated by wasted chances, opportunities that come along literally, once in a lifetime and are squan-What else can you expect of point allows me to witness some stupid, stupid mistakes made by some young men and women whose only sin is that they're too young to know any better. For example . .

in preparing for the publication of this year's high school football preview section - due out next week - I've compiled a list of young men who've been awarded scholarships to play footbail in college. I then had the high school check the lists to make sure no-one had been

There were a couple that were missed, but they were few in comparison to the names that had to be crossed off the list, athletes who no longer were playing football for one reason or another.

For some, the reason was physical: an injury had ended their career. Others opted to follow an alternative path, like going into the military. There were those who couldn't make it academically. A couple were victims of the athletic version of the Peter Principle: they Just weren't good enough.

But a disturbing number just walked away. "He had the scholarship but decided he wanted to stay home."

said one coach with a resigned shrug. "I don't know what he's doing. I know he's not in school." There are a couple of tragic variations on the theme; one scholarship winner was arrested this summer. I don't espouse athletics as an end, but as a means to an end. For a lot of young men and women. athletic scholarships may be the only way they can afford to continue their education. And that's the missed opportunity, the chance to carn a degree and perhaps get started on a career.

Sadly, we haven't even gotten to the first game of the high school season and it appears one of the county's top prospects has already become the subject of a "Whatever happened to ..?" trivia question. Not only hasn't he been to practice, his named showed up in a police report last week.

Much has been made of the notion of immortality that teenagers appear to have and how it prompts them to push the envelope, attempting and mostly surviving outrageous stunts or questionable activities.

That seems to carry over to decisions teenagers make about the direction their lives may take. Mathematically, the idea that "there will always be tomorrow" is true for most, but options available today may be locked doors tomorrow. You may not get another chance.

I'm not motivated by any sense of my own missed opportunities (anyone who's seen me swing a bat knows my athletic career was limited to begin with). If anything, I'm envious of those who have the talent to earn a scholarship and, like coaches, shake my head in frustration when I see opportunities thrown away.

The unfortunate part is that there's nothing any adult can do to help. All any of us can do is listen and offer advice. Some adults, like your parents or your coaches, can try to tell you what to do. Ultimately, it's still your decision. For athletes, the window of opportunity is small. It doesn't take long to go from prospect to has-been. Do what you need to do and, if you're lucky enough, do what you want to do. But don't make a decision - out of haste, arrogance or laziness — that may doom you to having no

Fall's around the corner Time to prepare soil, garden for vegetables

The fall vegetable gardening season is here again. Even though the summer heat is still with us, now is the time to begin to plant and prepare the garden site.

The first consideration in planning your garden is site location. A garden should be convenient to the house so it will be handy to work in. It should also be near a faucet for easy watering. The garden should be located in full sun (at least 6 hours of sunlight a day). In most backyards, you will probably have to choose between morning and afternoon sun. Full sun, especially in Florida, is better in the morning for growing vegetables. If your area does not get much full sun all day, plant crops like tomatoes, corn, potatoes, cucumbers, melon and most root crops in the best area of sun you have. Leafy crops like lettuce can tolerate more Good soil is an important factor too, but most of us have to do the best we can with the sandy soil we have. Getting the soil ready to plant will be the most physical part of the project.

Don't give into the temptation to cut corners with this phase of garden preparation. If you are planning a large garden, you may want to rent a rototiller, but most backyard gardens can be prepared with a spade and shovel.

If your area has a lot of weeds or grass, you may have to wait a few weeks for the material to decompose once you turn it under. You could also remove it and start a compost pile.

To prepare the soil, dig down six to eight inches and turn over completely. After the soil is turned, break all clods up and level the area with a rake. The more you pulverize your soil, the easier it will be to plant and the young roots will be able to grow more easily through the loose soil.

Once your soil is prepared it's a good idea to have your soil tested if it hasn't been done recently. A pH test, done at the Cooperative Extension Service Office for $1.50 per sample will indicate if your soil is acid or alkaline; vegetables prefer a pH between 5.5 and 6.5. To take a soil sample, use a hand trowel to collect several 6-8 inch "cores" or soil in various locations throughout garden site. Mix these samples together in a bucket and bring one pint of the soil mixture to the Exension Office center. We can also do a ferilizing practices. If the garden has been tested over the years with good results, or you have had it on a program of fertilization without problems, chances are you can skip this part of soil preparation. When you receive your results from this test, we will make recommendations for adjusting pH.

For more information on vegetable gardening call 323-2500, ext. 5558 or 5550 or stop by your office across from Flea World at 250 W. County Home Road. A vegetable gardening guide (SP 103) is available from the University of Florida for $1.25 per copy. The guide gives valuable information for both fall and spring vegetable gardening and folds out to a convenient poster.

Select a sunny location one that receives at least 4-6 hours of sun.

•Break up or remove large clumps of soil, grass, etc.

•Solarize the garden with clear plastic to help control nematodes and soil borne diseases at least 4 weeks before planting.

OGet a soil test done at the Extension Office if needed.

• Add fertilizer, lime or sulfur according to soil test recommendations.

• Let the gardening begin.

Teacher attends NASA education workshop

By SUSAN WENNER Herald Correspondent

DELTONA — A melody from an answering machine to the tune of "Star Wars" can be heard after a call to the home of Karen Gundal. The music was important to this fourth grade teacher at Goldsboro Elementary, especially since she recently returned from a vialt to NASA.

Gundal completed a twoweek honors program for teachers at NASA's John C. Stennis Space Center in Mississippi. The program, called NEWEST (NASA Educational Workshop for Elementary School Teachers) was sponsored by NASA, the National Science Teachers Association, the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics and the International Technology Education Association. Gundal was one of 22 teachers chosen from thousands of applicants across the United States and from U.S. State Department Schools in Europe and the Middle and Far East.

Gundal commented about another participant she met. "I met a woman from Puerto Rico," she said. "She was very interesting." The program places teachers in direct con-tact with NASA's science and engineering professionals, and those of other resident federal agencies at Stennis Space Center, for the purpose of exposing them to current state-of-the-art research in space science. technology and the environment, according to a NASA

Highlights of the program included tours of the space shuttle main engine test complex at Stennis and the Michoud Assembly Facility in New Orleans, La. where external tanks are manufactured. Gundal spoke of the engine and their (Stemnis') experience, "Stennis tests the engines for the space shuttles," she said. "We visited different areas of Stennis. We even got to go to the top of Test Stand B. It's about 800 feet high. I love heights! We saw night testing. It was wonderful at night and so bright. At Michoud we saw them making the external tanks for the shuttle. It was fascinating."

Briefings by NASA officials were covered on topics ranging from astronomy to remote sensing of the earth, NASA aeronautics research and environmental chemistry. Gundal spoke of their day learning about remote sensing. "We learned about remote sensing." she said. "It was used in natellites by using infrared light. They used it to track hurricanes. One man spoke of remote sensing and his ca ence in archaeology. He has had 100 percent success at archaeological digs with the sensing." She also spoke of her attendance in other classes. "We did a lot of discussion of the Hubble and we were told that one of the lenses was off the width of a human hair and the pictures were coming back blurred. We talked about the Challenger incident and what really happened. They explained what went wrong. We talked about the Drake Equation, which is the probability of life out there. One man gave his theory that he believes there is life out in space. I've always felt there was life out there." Gundal spoke about one of her favorite experiences at the astronauts' suits. I had my picture taken in one. On the first day of school I told my students I used to be an astronaut. I did tell them I was kidding and told them briefly about the program. I plan to share a lot of what I learned with my students. I do a big space unit each year. I'm heavily into space stuff. In fact, for my master's degree, I did a science-based curriculum on space."

Participants will also be NASA's guests at a future launch of the space shuttle at Kennedy Space Center. Gundal spoke excitedly about being told she would be a guest at a future launch. "I've always been fassinated with space," she said: "They told us we would be guests of a shuttle launch. They told us we'd go to a briefing after the launch and when the shuttle comes back in. I do more involved with the Cape."

Gundal discussed her future plans and at first thought briefly that being an astronaut wasn't part of the plan. She then hesitated and said, "If they told me I was capable of being an astronaut, I'd probably jump at the chance. I plan to get my doctorate at UCF (University of Central Florida). I'd like to get a pilot's license to fly and I also want to parachute one day. Like I said, I love heights!"

With the experience that Gundal has received she will defiritely be reaching new heights. Maybe one day one of Sanford's own teachers will broadcast a lesson from space. Her only concern was, "I'd really miss my cats!"

examined Husband may need head

DEAR ABBY: My husband has had three serious accidents at work in the past two years. I have quit asking him to do chores around the house because he is always smashing his fingers with a hammer, cutting himself, or falling off the ladder while changing the acreens or storm windows. It's a good year when he hasn't had a couple of automobile accidents.

The doctor at the plant where he works suggested that he see a psychiatrist! He sen't crasy. HIS WIFE have to take plane until I am 18! So will you please tell me, what is the point of taking piano lessons when it is only a waste of time and money?

HATES PIANO DEAR MATES: There are two schools of thought on that. One: Even a child who "hates" music. and must be nagged, bribed and threatened to practice, can't help but learn something about music, which in your parents' view is better than no musical education at all.

The other school: Never force music lessons on a child. He or she will only grow to hate music. My view: Music lessons are like a vaccination. It's temporarily painful, but if it takes, it's worth

DEAR ABBY: I recently rented an apartment I have in my back yard to a 19-year-old boy with the understanding that he would be living there alone.

Since then, I have seen him with his girlfriend at 7:45 nearly every morning.

The girl is 16 and a junior in high school, so I sesume he is taking her to school. The girl's parents are divorced, and the girl is supposed to be living with her father. Several other people have told me they have seen her coming and going from my apartment just like she lives there, and this has me upact.

Should I call her father and tell him what I suspect? Ask the boy I rented the apartment to if that girl is living with him? Ask him for the apartment and give him some other reason for wanting it? Or should I ignore the whole situation completely as none of my business?

LANDLADY IN L.A. DEAR LANDLADY: Talk directly to the boy. After all, you and he did have an understanding that he would be living there alone. And their ages might also be a factor.

is fluid retention a sign of illness?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a real problem retaining excess fluid. A blood test has indicated my kidneys are OK. Your suggestions?

DEAR READER: In most healthy persons, fluid retention is moderated by salt retention: As more salt remains in the body, it holds fluid, leading to puffiness or edema (obvious swelling of tissues).

Whether or not we retain excess salt (and, hence, water) is determined by a complex set of chemical reactions and enzymes that either stimulate the kidneys to release salt or discourage them from doing so.

For example, when we perspire heavily, we're losing salt and water from the skin. To prevent dehydration, the kidneys conserve both substances. For unknown reasons, many patients with hypertension, retain inappropriate amounts of salt and water, leading to high blood pressure. (So have your blood pressure checked on occasion.)

Also, because of normal hormonal fluctuations, women are apt to retain excess salt just before their menstrual bleeding. In addition, many prescription medications cause edema and swelling.

Finally, some people seem to have a genetic tendency to retain salt; the precise reasons for this are obscure.

In the main, most people who retain salt and water can be helped by reducing dietary salt. This is a reasonable, cheap and safe option that you might try, because experts estimate that Americans eat far too much salt anyway.

I suggest that you avoid salty food, don't use the sait shaker at the table, add little or no sait to your cooking, and see your doctor if this simple alteration is ineffective.

DEAR DR. GOTT: For 14 years I've suffered excruciating pain in my right upper leg. After a battery of tests, I was told I have nerve damage that occurred after surgery for a disc problem. Is there anything I can do to ease the pair?

DEAR READER: You seemd send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to ENTERPRISE ASSN.

Every beginner is told to pause before playing from the dummy at trick one. He should form a plan of campaign before continuing the battle.

You might think that experts never fall from grace in this respect, but you would be

Today's deal comes from this year's Camrose Trophy, an annual international series played between England, Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales. It was won by England for the sixth straight year, though not without a fright or two along the

With 30 boards remaining. Wales, playing against England, had a great opportunity to win for the first time. However, they let it alip away. And the final margin would have been greater but for today's deal.

The Welsh had stopped in four hearts, making five. The English were more adventurous. Three diamonds was a transfer bid: and four no-trump was quantitative, not Blackwood. South, despite having minimum count. took a shot at the slam.

The declarer won the first trick with his diamond ace and drew three rounds of trumps. Then he paused to assess the situation -too late.

The right line is to draw only two rounds of trumps, keeping an honor in the South hand. Then declarer plays off his three top spades, discarding one of dummy's clubs. A club to the ace, a club to the king and a club ruff follow. Now South plays a trump to his jack (or king) and cashes the club nine, discarding one of dummy's diamond losers. In 51 Camrose series, England has won 39, Scotland 10 and England and Scotland have tied twice. Copyright1994, NEWSPAPER EN-TERPRISE ASSN.
