SANFORD — William L. Colbert, city attorney for Sanford, was recently elected to the position of President in the Florida Municipal Attorneys Association. The organization is composed of city attorneys from throughout the state.

Colbert, who formerly served as president-elect to the association, was elected during the group's annual seminar, in late July, in Key West. He is the managing partner in the law firm of Stenstrom, McIntosh, Julian, Colbert, Whigham & Simmons, P.A. Colbert has served as Sanford's City Attorney since 1981.

Kiwanis honors county officers

MAITLAND — The Central Florida Kiwanis honored law enforcement officers this morning, presenting plaques for the officer chosen for George Pfeil Memorial Award and officer of the year for each agency.

Sanford Lt. Edward F. Hayden was named by Sanford Chief Steven Harriett as Sanford Officer of the Year. Seminole County Sgt. Mark Smock was named Officer of the Year. Seminole County Deputy Jeff Hankins was honored with the George Pfeil award. Lake Mary and Longwood did not participate this year.

The Law Enforcement Appreciation breakfast is held each year to honor police, deputies and Florida Highway Patrol troopers, said event chairman Jeff Goggin. Each police chief and sheriff in central Florida selects their officer of the year who is honored by the Kiwanis with a plaque bearing the officer's badge.

The recipient of the Pfeil award, named for an off-duty Seminole County deputy shot and killed in 1977, is selected by the Seminole County sheriff and is awarded only to county deputies, Goggin said.

Hayden, who will retire in January, was named for his 35 years of exemplary service, said Harriett. Smock was named for his assistance in apprehending four jail escapees in January, said Maj. John Erwin. Hankins was honored for talking a potential suicide victim out of the act, Erwin said.

$12 million bond issue

Sanford approves final sale Aug. 20

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The City Commission approved a bond issue Tuesday, but it was not a new issue. The City has been working on the project for several months.

The resolution proposing what was originally a $12 million bond issue was presented to the City Commission during a meeting held May 13. Since that time, public hearings were held, the total amount was reduced to $11,970,000, and the validation was approved on June 24. During the special commission meeting Tuesday, the only action taken was to approve the actual sale of the bonds to the underwriting firm of William R. Hough & Company. The final closing on the bond purchase will be done on August 20, with a preliminary closing on the 19th.

During Tuesday's discussion on how the bond will be financed, it was determined the money could come from the already enacted increase in water and sewer rates. The increase, adopted July 22, becomes effective with bills issued after September 1, 1991.

Because of an engineering study on the city's water and sewer situation, the rate increase was deemed necessary. Overall, the increase in water and sewer rates is 20 percent.

For the average residence is estimated to use 10,000 gallons of city water per month. The cost for that amount will increase $7.45 per month. Commercial users, requiring as much as 50,000 gallons per month, will find an increase of $38 a month.

City Commissioner Whitey Eckstein said, "For many city residents, their water bill will actually go down." He explained, "Part of the money will be used in helping expand the reclaimed water, for irrigation. Reclaimed water costs approximately one-sixth the amount of drinkable water, so when people sign up to irrigate with reclaimed water, they use less of the city's drinking water, and their bills end up being lower."

Eckstein urged Sanford residents to sign up for the reclaimed water program.

Groundbreaking dedicates $6 million CFRH expansion

By NICK PFEIFAU

SANFORD — The $6.1 million construction project at HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital received its official groundbreaking Thursday. Prior to the event, state and local officials were given an overview of the total project.

Hospital Administrator Roy Vinson explained the various phases of the total construction, which eventually will involve a total of almost $12 million. Most of the construction work, which is already in progress, will take place on the east and northeast side of the present hospital building.

Some of the changes explained by Vinson included the construction of a new entrance in the southeastern area to allow easier access by short-stay surgery patients. "The short stay surgery unit has been crowded," he said, "and this new wing, with a new covered entrance, will allow us to give much better service to those patients."

He also reported on the obstetrics unit, where the building addition will allow for all private rooms, and a new 23-bed nursery. "We will also be moving the records department and medical lounge," he said. Vinson explained he expected the obstetrics and records areas finished first, "probably sometime early in the first quarter of next year. Then we hope to immediately start on the second part, which will consist of a large

Taxpayer's arrest may lead to safety alarms

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The arrest of an angry Seminole County taxpayer Wednesday may lead Seminole County officials to install emergency buzzers for commissioners' aides.

"I'm considering it," said county manager Ron Rabun. "I don't want to overreact. I'm not normally concerned about the public. I don't normally worry about these things but sometimes you think."

Rabun said he began considering the safety measure after county aides and officials were visited by a man Monday county public works officials said attacked them in their truck last Friday. Rabun said the man walked the hall leading to the five commissioners' offices Monday seeking information from them. But Rabun said there was nothing unusual about the man's behavior.

The same man, John Lawrence Luzzi Jr., also appeared before Seminole County commissioners July 30 protesting what he said was poor county maintenance of the dirt road he lives on, Franklin Street. The road is located in an unincorporated pocket between Longwood and Altamonte Springs.

Then his comments and protests brought laughter and applause by the 75 or so people gathered to oppose the county's proposed utility tax.

Speaking to commissioner Larry Furlong, Luzzi said that night "Larry, your office called me back, said someone's going to come down. The truck came down this hub

Peterson, 66, dies in Carolina

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The people of Sanford have lost a friend, a prominent business leader, and a very devout historian. A.B. Peterson Jr., died Thursday morning, at his summer residence in Flat Rock, N.C. He was 66 years old.

Although he was born in Jamestown, N.Y., he considered Sanford as his hometown. He lived on Hidden Lake, off Lake Mary Boulevard, just outside the city limits of Sanford. He was president of St. Johns Realty Company in Sanford.

Dave Farr, executive director of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce described Peterson as "So much a part of everything that has gone on in Sanford during the past many years." Farr said he was deeply involved in the historical restoration of the city, or anything else of a historical nature.

"I remember how excited Tommy was, several years ago, when they found an old Indian dugout canoe on Hidden Lake by his property." Farr said. The dugout is on display at the State of Florida museum at the University of Florida.

Lake Mary resident John "Jack" Horner, a long time friend and associate of Peterson also spoke of his love for the history of the area. "Tommy was the kind of person who really made a difference in Sanford. He was involved in so many things, and always willing to help."

A vote for life

The House vote to overturn the Bush administration's ban on federally sponsored research that uses fetal tissue obtained in abortions is a victory for knowledge over ideology and for free inquiry over the strictures of political correctness.

Medical scientists have long made use of fetal tissue in research, including in the development of the polio vaccine. But in 1988, just as researchers were discovering the potential value of transplanting fetal tissue to cure or ameliorate disease, Ronald Reagan's administration, at the behest of anti-abortion groups, slapped a ban on federal funding for those inquiries.

Although a Reagan-appointed scientific panel subsequently found no reason to believe, as opponents argued, that such research, conducted with proper ethical safeguards, would result in a higher number of abortions, the Bush administration has continued the ban. The result has been to block or retard promising research on Parkinson's disease, diabetes, epilepsy, infertility and, ironically, a wide variety of genetic birth defects that now end in abortions and the early death of children.

In voting to overturn the ban, 274 House members decided they could no longer, as Rep. Henry A. Waxman put it, "look people in the eye who are suffering from these diseases and tell them it is better to take the fetal tissue that is dead and bury it, rather than let any of that tissue be used for a transplant that would save somebody's life."

Among their ranks were a number of prominent lawmakers who oppose abortion but nevertheless voted to lift the restriction with safeguards to prevent the sale of fetal tissue or solicitation of abortion for transplantation. They recognize, as should the Senate, that this is not an abortion issue. It is a question of freeing research from artificial political restraints to help the living.

It's about time

Recent media publicity has focused attention on a photo of three Vietnam MIAs allegedly taken in 1990. In September a day of special recognition will again refresh our memories on the POW-MIAs.

It's about time! — Time to remember those "other" veterans who served in Southeast Asia. They did not dodge or run, or scream tirades against the government. They served with loyalty and courage at a time when patriotism was unpopular, when draft-dodging and flag-burning were often the order of the day.

For too long we have ignored them, scorned them, even betrayed them. We have tried to escape the reality of the Vietnam experience by dodging our responsibilities, our obligations, even our awareness of their existence. When hostilities finally ceased in Southeast Asia, many servicemen disappeared into the jungles and the prison camps never to be heard of again. The POW-MIAs of Vietnam continued to live only in the memories of those who loved and cared. For much of the rest of America, it was like an unwanted page torn from the history of our land, and tossed on the scrap-heap of forgetfulness and regret.

They did not have time to debate the issues. They served — and many died — in the sincere and compassionate belief that they were serving the cause of "freedom." For their loyalty we honor their memory. For their courage and sacrifice they deserve a place with all those other veterans of the past two hundred years who have given their time, service and even life, because their country needed them. It has taken a "Desert Storm" experience to rekindle our patriotism, and remind ourselves that they, too, were "patriots" bearing arms for our nation.

There are still many unanswered questions about the POW-MIAs. Recently there have been many "programs" on the television, as various agencies seek to explain what they have been doing and what results. Their families and friends deserve more than that. As a nation, we need to keep at the task until all the red tape has been cut, until all the answers are in, until there is a full accounting, alive or dead, of every missing one.

In the meantime, let us give them their rightful heritage as loyal and courageous Americans. For we need their spirit, fused into the lifeblood of America, that we might retain her leadership and respect among the troubled peoples of the world as an advocate of peace, freedom and human rights.

Bush's Iraq decisions defy scrutiny

President Bush's critics know very well that this country's swift and decisive victory in the Gulf War will be scored to his eternal credit by the American people. But they also know that the situation in Iraq today is a mess, and they are trying hard to use that fact to dilute his triumph.

Even some of the president's most loyal supporters, for that matter, openly wish he had ordered General Schwarzkopf to drive north to Baghdad and "finish the job" by capturing or killing Saddam Hussein. But they have simply not thought the matter through.

In the first place, bear in mind that the military objective for which Mr. Bush obtained the backing of the U.N. Security Council was carefully limited to the liberation of Kuwait, and most definitely did not include an invasion of Iraq or the overthrow of Saddam Hussein. And the same is true of the cautious resolution that the Republicans and a minority of Democrats narrowly managed to push through Congress.

Mr. Bush's critics dismiss this point by arguing that, if he had in fact ordered Schwarzkopf into Iraq and successfully ousted Saddam Hussein, neither Congress nor the Security Council would have uttered a word of protest at his technical transgression.

Maybe so. But who says the conquest of Iraq and the ouster of Saddam Hussein would necessarily have been quick, or easy, or cost-free?

And just how easy would it have been for us to capture or kill Saddam Hussein? Do we think we could have surprised him working at his desk? No; he would have left Baghdad long before we got there, and hidden himself like a needle in a haystack.

So, as both the temperature and the casualty lists soared, Mr. Bush's critics would have begun savaging him for exceeding his U.N. mandate, not to mention his constitutional authorization from Congress, and plunging America recklessly into an open-ended war — a war costing thousands of precious lives, waged for obscure and inadequate reasons.

And when it was over, Iraq would have been a even worse mess than it is today, with the difference that our troops would still be occupying it and our taxpayers would be financing its reconstruction.

Bad as that scenario is, it isn't as bad as the one the enthusiasts for continued economic sanctions (i.e., most congressional Democrats) tried to talk us into. They, you will recall, could see no reason why we had to go to war at all. Let economic sanctions do the job, or at least give them a chance. Over a period of 18 months, or even longer if necessary, sanctions would bring Iraq to its knees and force it to disgorge Kuwait.

Never mind the sheer implausibility of that scenario. We have recently discovered that Saddam Hussein was far closer to building atom bombs than our intelligence people estimated before the war. If we had fooled around for 18 months, trying to enforce a global blockade, we would in all likelihood have found ourselves, at the end of that period, facing the first Arab nuclear power. What suggestion would George Mitchell, the Senate's Democratic leader, have had then?

These second-guessers are second-raters. If Bush had taken their advice and things had gone badly, they would have been first with their pious condemnations.

Iraq would have been in an even worse mess than it is today.

Can we foil rogue asteroids?

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Just when you thought it was safe to go back outside, when news of the disintegrating ozone layer has faded from the front pages, when the specter of pollution has given way to idyllic vacations at the beach, scientists have quite predictably thought of yet something else over which to fuss and worry.

Asteroids. Rogue asteroids. Astronomers have grown increasingly concerned in recent years that one or more of the lumbering rocks hurtling around in the heavens may be on a catastrophic collision course with Earth. The odds of a big hit are not cosmic, less than one in 10,000 in the next half century, but the specialists believe even that is unnerving.

A 5-mile-wide asteroid could smash into the planet at something like 150,000 mph, for example. That would presumably produce the same kind of impact as a simultaneous explosion of multiple atomic bombs. The blast might then shadow the sun with disrupted gunk and destroy crops, animals and certainly people.

Dr. Brian Marsden is one of those who think it's coming. Sooner or later, he says, "the Earth is going to be struck by a fairly large asteroid — I mean half a kilometer (about 1,600 feet) or more. I don't know if it will be large enough to actually ruin the Earth, but that possibility isn't out of the question."

Marsden is director of the Minor Planet Center at the Smithsonian Institution's astronomical observatory in Cambridge, Mass. He says asteroids are sometimes called minor planets, because they resemble the major planets in most things except size. They are non-luminous bodies that revolve in fixed orbits around the sun.

The asteroids are thought to be bits and pieces left over from the formation of the solar system. Most of them are apparently head-quartered in what is called the Asteroid Belt, between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. The largest one known is called Ceres; it's as vast as the distance across the middle of Texas.

Then there are the comets. They are like asteroids, only they are luminous, and they normally have tails. Comets are not very big, a few kilometers or thereabouts, but since many of them are hidden by the blinding sun, and can approach the Earth without detection, they constitute a latent menace to human well-being.

The menace is nothing new, certainly. Comets have been engendering fear, and asteroids have been pelting terra firma, throughout recorded history. Most meteorites are thought to be the remnants of asteroids; the last one of size to reach Earth did not land, it exploded in the atmosphere over Siberia in 1908.

Some of the asteroids have caused severe damage. One or more may have been responsible for the demise of the dinosaurs during the Cretaceous Period. Scientists speculate that a 5-mile hunkula dropped into an ocean 65 million years ago (perhaps near Mexico) and created the conditions that killed off the giant reptiles.

There have also been some scary near-misses. Brian Marsden talks of a comet that, in 1983, whizzed only 3 million miles over Kansas City, Whew! And two years back, an 800-foot-wide asteroid was not detected until it had flashed by the planet at the astronomical equivalent of a very close shave: 500,000 miles.

What's more, Dr. Marsden says there is at least one other near-miss about to happen. Astronomers are keeping track of an asteroid that is heading almost directly at the Earth. The chunk is expected to pass within 2 million miles in 1992, and will thus be the closest encounter of the kind ever predicted in advance.

Marsden says the Minor Planet Center as well as other groups and individuals keep track of 4,900 asteroids and comets. He says it sounds like a lot, yet it represents less than 1 percent of the potential. "And this is what everybody has become concerned about," he goes on, "the 99 percent of asteroids we don't see."

The concerned include a majority in Congress. The lawmakers have instructed the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to look into the matter. NASA has been told to find ways to increase the rate of asteroid discoveries (currently 30 to 40 a month), so the world will know if any of them are threats.

NASA is also obliged to consider defenses to the threat. The globe can't simply keep spinning helplessly, as it has in the past. Scientists might be able to predict a collision site precisely, in which case people would be warned and evacuated. But Congress, ever thorough, wants the collision itself to be avoided.

That probably means a big bang of some sort. Dr. Marsden and others believe it would take an enormous explosion to deter an asteroid. "And we couldn't just blow it up," he notes. "That could be worse than letting it hit."

The asteroids are thought to be bits and pieces left over from the formation of the solar system.

IRS not picky who pays piper

WASHINGTON — Sharon Arnaberger quit her job with an Austin, Texas, landscaping company back in 1987 when she found out her bosses were dodging their federal payroll taxes. Then she did what any conscientious person would do — she reported the fraud to the Internal Revenue Service.

Now the IRS is doing what it could be expected to do — going after Arnaberger for $119,785 in payroll taxes that her employers failed to pay. Apparently Arnaberger was easier pickings for the IRS than her bosses were. She has learned too late that bookkeepers, clerks and managers who have no ownership interest in a business can still be held responsible for taxes the business owes.

Under federal law, workers who have even a slight responsibility for a company's funds, even if they simply write the checks, can be stuck with the tax debts of their bosses. Fairness has nothing to do with it. If the boss disappears or files for protection from creditors, then the IRS will look for an easy win. Innocent people can suddenly find themselves owing six-figure sums to Uncle Sam.

What angers Arnaberger the most is that she was the one who alerted the IRS to the wrongdoing in the first place.

In 1986, Arnaberger, then 24, became comptroller for the landscaping firm. She kept the books and paid the bills, but she never owned a piece of the company. She grew concerned when her bosses opened another company in California and started draining money from the Austin office to pay for it. There wasn't enough money to pay the payroll taxes, and Arnaberger warned her bosses to satisfy the debt to the IRS.

When they didn't heed her warnings, Arnaberger resigned. Then she and another employee went to the IRS and reported the unpaid taxes. They were thanked and sent on their way. The company later folded, and Arnaberger heard nothing more until last April when an IRS agent called her and told her she was being held liable for the taxes. She is appealing, but faces having her and her husband's wages garnished to settle the debt.

"The IRS does not want to hear the circumstances and does not care how innocent I am," Arnaberger told our associate Scott Sleek. "They just want their money and they do not care from whom or how they get it."

An IRS spokeswoman in Austin told us Arnaberger is liable because she signed most of the company's checks and knew about the unpaid taxes long before she quit. Arnaberger told us that she is guilty of being too trusting when her bosses told her they would get around to paying the government. Now the IRS won't tell us whether the owners of the company have been penalized too.

John and Susan Heiland also know what it's like to be on the IRS hit list. For three years, the Iowa couple has been stalked for back taxes owed by a trucking company John managed several years ago. The IRS has seized the Heilands' car and money in their checking account and has been taking part of John's paycheck for two years. Ultimately, the IRS wants to squeeze $400,000 out of him, even though he has an affidavit from the head of the company saying Heiland was not responsible for the payroll taxes.

The Heilands have received some help from Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, but their ordeal continues. "My family is suffering because of the mishandling and collection of the taxes," John Heiland said. "One of our daughters may not be able to finish college because we can't help her financially."

Innocent people can suddenly find themselves owing six-figure sums to Uncle Sam.

Congressmen discuss MIAs with Vietnam foreign minister

Associated Press

BANGKOK, Thailand — Six U.S. congressmen have met with Vietnam's Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach and discussed the issue of America's missing in action, according to a report from Hanoi. The delegation held "cordial" talks with Thach and Dang Nghiem Bai, who heads Vietnam's missing in action agency. The group also was to visit Ho Chi Minh City and Danang, the official Voice of Vietnam said. "Both sides exchanged views related to Vietnam-U.S. relations, including the MIA issue. The meetings proceeded in an atmosphere of openness and mutual understanding," the Thursday broadcast said.

The congressmen, led by Democratic Reps. Thomas R. Carper of Delaware and former Vietnam POW Douglas "Pete" Peterson of Florida, already had traveled to Laos and Cambodia as part of efforts to account for Americans who did not return from the Vietnam War. The congressmen, all Vietnam veterans, discussed relations between the United States and Indochinese nations and the ongoing civil war in Cambodia. The congressmen also include Republican Reps. Jim Kolbe and John J. Rhodes of Arizona and Wayne Gilchrest of Maryland, and Democratic Rep. David Skaggs of Colorado.

The trip was scheduled prior to a recent spate of photographs purporting to show American MIAs being held in Indochina.

Man kills after release from mental hospital

Associated Press

ODESSA, Texas — Richard Law was admitted to a state psychiatric hospital after threatening to kill himself over his separation from his wife. But he was deemed to be no danger to society and sent home.

On Thursday, a day after leaving the hospital, Law bought a .38-caliber revolver. One hour later, he used it to kill his estranged wife, his stepdaughter, his two sons and himself. "We were unable to predict that this individual would act as he did when he returned home," said Ed Moughon, assistant superintendent at Big Spring State Hospital. "It's heartbreaking here at the hospital."

Odeessa police Cpl. Randall Jones said friends of Law's called police Sunday because he was threatening suicide, saying he was depressed over his wife's decision early last week to leave him.

Law had cut himself on the neck with a knife and vowed to buy a gun and kill himself in front of his wife, according to police reports.

He was taken into protective custody and brought to the hospital, Jones said. Law was admitted on an emergency warrant that allowed the institution to keep him 24 hours for observation, said hospital superintendent Bob Von Rosenberg.

On Monday, State District Judge Ben Lockhart allowed the hospital to keep Law pending a probable cause hearing Wednesday.

"The staff couldn't substantiate that the patient was a danger to society during the probable cause hearing," Moughon said. Lockhart then ordered Law released.

After buying the gun, Law returned home and asked a friend there to go out and buy him cigarettes, Jones said. The friend found the bodies when he returned.

Besides Law, the dead were his wife, Theresa Gail Law, 20, a stepchild, Kendra Maxwell, 4, and his two sons, Richard Law Jr., 3, and 2-year-old Robert Law.

Lockhart said Thursday that Law "seemed real normal. It's a sad state of affairs."

Speed, steep grade may have contributed to a derailment

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Speed, a steep grade and a heavy load all may have contributed to a train derailment that spilled toxic herbicide and fouled 45 miles of the Sacramento River, the railroad's preliminary investigation found.

Southern Pacific President Mike Mohan also said Thursday that a possible electrical malfunction may have been involved in the July 14 accident that spilled about 13,000 gallons of metam sodium.

"Worker error is improbable, but we wouldn't totally exclude it," Mohan said.

He said Southern Pacific will build a bridge over the river near Dunsmuir where the train derailed.

Mohan said the $2 million bridge would protect the river if another spill were to occur and could be in place by next summer.

Meanwhile, state and federal agencies also are investigating the accident but have yet to release any findings.

The accident occurred when a locomotive and the first seven cars of the 6,069-foot-long Southern Pacific freight train derailed, plunging 30 feet into the river. The chemical killed aquatic life the prized fishing stream. Fumes temporarily sickened scores of people along the way.

Investigations so far indicate that wheels on the third or fourth car slipped as the train climbed a steep grade and entered a turn.

Doctor: Tumors consistent with national statistics

By DEBORAH BAKER
Associated Press Writer

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. — A Los Alamos doctor says he has confirmed 21 cases of primary brain tumors in the community since 1985, and the number appears consistent with the incidence of such tumors nationally.

Many Los Alamos residents have grown alarmed over an artist's contention that the town, a leader center of nuclear energy research, appears to have a high rate of brain tumors.

"My advice would be (that) people in Los Alamos not panic about these numbers," Dr. Jon Johnson told about 100 people at a community meeting Wednesday.

Johnson said he confirmed the 21 cases from an informal list of 59 names of possible brain tumor patients that artist Tyler

Mercier has collected. Mercier has said most of the victims have died.

No medical information was available on 19 names, Johnson said. Most of the others on the list had other types of cancer, or cancer that spread to the brain from other parts of the body, he said.

Primary brain tumors are those that begin in the brain.

Most of the 21 cases confirmed by Johnson are or were Los Alamos residents, but a few lived outside the county and worked at Los Alamos National Laboratory.

Johnson is a member of the Working Group to Address Los Alamos Health Concerns, a citizens committee organized by the laboratory. The committee plans to conduct a series of soil, water and other tests in Los Alamos.

In addition, the U.S. Department of Energy — the lab's parent agency — has agreed to fund an epidemiological study to be conducted by the state Health Department in conjunction with federal agencies.

Suicide how-to book makes top of Times best-seller list

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A new book that gives detailed instructions on a variety of ways to commit suicide — which some say could be misused by depressed people or even killers — has reached No. 1 on a New York Times best-seller list.

The book, "Final Exit," was written by Derek Humphry, executive director of the Eugene, Ore.-based Hemlock Society, which gives advice for committing suicide.

"There's tremendous desire for personal control and choice over one's dying," Humphry told the newspaper.

The Times reported today that "Final Exit" reached No. 1 in the hard-cover advice category for its list compiled Thursday for publication Aug. 18. It's the book's first appearance on the best-seller list since it came out several months ago.

"That is an indication of how large the issue of euthanasia looms in our society now," said Dr. Arthur Caplan, a bioethicist at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis.

"It's the loudest statement of protest of how medicine is dealing with terminal illness and dying," Caplan said.

Many doctors say the book's message is unethical. They argue that such information shouldn't be offered without professional counseling.

The Times best-seller lists are based on sales figures from 3,000 bookstores and representative wholesalers with more than 28,000 other retail outlets. The figures are statistically adjusted to represent sales in all such outlets nationwide.

Kirk Douglas' son allegedly kicked cop

Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — A son of actor Kirk Douglas was charged with battery for allegedly kicking a police officer, police said.

Eric Douglas, 33, was charged Thursday, two days after his arrest and subsequent release on $5,000 bail, said Lt. Frank Saleido, a police spokesman. Arraignment was set for Sept. 6 in Beverly Hills Municipal Court.

If convicted, he could be sentenced to one year in jail.

Saleido said police were called to a Beverly Hills office Tuesday to break up an altercation between Eric Douglas and his lawyer, who wasn't identified.

Police took information for a report but made no arrests or charges, Saleido said.

Later, as Douglas was leaving the building, he encountered Officer Michael Carra, a family acquaintance.

Eric Douglas complained to Carra about how police had handled the incident. "Douglas kicked Officer Carra three times, a struggle ensued and Douglas was subsequently restrained," Saleido said.

A receptionist at Kirk Douglas' Beverly Hills office said she was unable to comment. The woman, who did not give her name, said she didn't know how to reach Eric Douglas.

Carra suffered minor injuries to his legs, but didn't require medical attention, Saleido said.

Douglas, who refused treatment, had a cut forehead and a scraped elbow. He also complained of a throat injury, Saleido said.

IN BRIEF

PRO FOOTBALL

WLAFL may fold

TAMPA — The World League of American Football is in danger of folding because an increasing number of NFL teams don't want to continue putting money into the year-old spring league, a newspaper reported Thursday.

The Ledger in Lakeland said the Tampa Bay Buccaneers are among the clubs that have decided to stop funding the NFL-sponsored league, which has teams in 10 cities, including Barcelona, Frankfurt and London.

All NFL teams are financially involved in the WLAFL except Chicago and Phoenix, which have refused to participate from the beginning. Apparently, there are other NFL clubs that have decided to withdraw their support in the future.

The Ledger said a source in Seattle told the newspaper that the Seahawks had not made their final payment to the WLAFL last year and no decision has been made as far as contributing in 1992.

PRO BASKETBALL

Lucas buys Tropics

HOUSTON — John Lucas bought the Miami Tropics on Thursday and vowed to use the United States Basketball League franchise as a tool in helping players overcome drug problems.

"I see the Tropics providing a valuable vehicle both for players in the after-care program and for the vast number of talented collegiate players that are overlooked in the current NBA draft," Lucas said.

Lucas, whose 14-year NBA career was interrupted by drug troubles, is the director of chemical dependency treatment and after-care programs for professional athletes.

Miami coach Kevin Mackey recently completed Lucas' chemical dependency program, and guard Lloyd Daniels, who has experienced drug and alcohol problems, also was with the Tropics this season.

The purchase price for the team, which plays a 20-game summer schedule, was not disclosed.

SOUTHERN LEAGUE

SunRays sweep

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Mike Trombley threw a 3-0 no-hitter in the opener and Pete Delkus pitched a one-hitter in a 2-0 nightcap victory Thursday as the Orlando SunRays swept a Southern League doubleheader.

In the opener, Knoxville's Juan De La Rosa hit a high chopper off the plate in the sixth, and the ball fell out of the first baseman's glove as Trombley's throw and De La Rosa arrived at the same time. Official scorer Jeff Burke originally scored the play a hit.

After the game, Burke consulted with the first-base umpire, Knoxville manager John Sterns and Orlando manager Scott Ullger. The consensus was to change the scoring on the play to a throwing error on Trombley (11-7).

Delkus (5-3) shut out the Blue Jays for five innings in the nightcap before it was called because of rain.

Homers lead Suns

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — Jeff Weatherby hit a three-run homer and scored a run as the Jacksonville Suns downed the Chattanooga Lookouts 7-2 Thursday in Southern League baseball.

Weatherby scored the Suns' first run in the second inning on a fielding error by Benny Colvard. He then gave Jacksonville a 5-1 lead with his three-run home run, his sixth, in the fifth inning.

Bret Boone hit his 16th homer in the fourth, and Frank Bowie added his 10th in the seventh inning. Bowie capped the scoring when he scored on first baseman Tim Costo's throwing error in the ninth.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Schedule changed

SAN DIEGO — San Diego State has agreed to cancel football games against Miami in 1993 and '94, but is insisting that the remaining 12 games under contract with the Hurricanes be played.

The Aztecs and Hurricanes will play this season and next, and the series will resume in 1995, SDSU athletic director Fred Miller said Thursday. The original 16-game series began in 1989.

Miami has been forced to cancel games against non-conference opponents in order to schedule Big East Conference opponents.

By playing late in the season, the schools hoped to attract television. ESPN televised last year's game, which Miami won 30-28.

The 1995 game will be played Oct. 21, rather than in late November or early December.

State Market cops crown, best record

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — State Market Restaurant swept a doubleheader Thursday night to win its second straight league title and in the process wrapped up the best record in Sanford softball.

The champions, who also won the Fall League, squeaked by Kinco 11-9 and whipped the Kokomo Recyclers 11-2 to finish the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Tuesday Night Spring/Summer Slowpitch Softball League at Chase Park with a 14-1 record.

In the other game Beer:30 edged the Regulators 4-2 to stop the Regulators six game winning streak at six games. Beer:30 finishes the season 12-3 with all three losses coming at the hands of State Market.

Following the two leaders in the standings were the Regulators (9-5), the Kokomo Recyclers (3-11) and Kinco and Monroe Harbor Marina (both 3-12).

Beer:30 won the opening game of the evening by scoring a run in the fourth inning to break a 2-2 tie. The winners added an insurance run in the fifth.

Dave Milliron contributed a single in one game and three runs and a run scored in the other as Seminole Mobile Radio split its season-ending doubleheader, beating Lee's Cabinets but losing to AAA Tree Service.

Split good enough for Seminole Mobile Radio

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — One win was enough.

Going into Thursday night's final games, Seminole Mobile Radio thought they needed to sweep a doubleheader to clinch the title of the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Thursday Night Slowpitch Softball League at Pinehurst Park.

Gator's Dockside only trailed the leaders by a half-game and could have forced a Seminole sweep with a win. But when Gator's failed to show for its game with AAA Tree Service, all Seminole needed was a split.

And a split they got, knocking off Lee's Cabinets 6-1 to claim the championship. Seminole dropped a 15-12 decision to AAA Tree Service in the last game that only made stood to make the final standings closer.

Seminole Mobile Radio only won three of its last five games, but it was good enough to overcome Gator's Dockside, which won only one of its last four games.

The champions finish the season with an 11-4 record, followed by Gator's Dockside (10-5), First Baptist Church and Lee's Cabinets (both 8-7), The Olive Garden Restaurant (5-10) and AAA Tree Service (3-12).

Seminole used a pair of two-run innings and a defense that limited Lee's Cabinets to only five hits to end the suspense.

Seminole Mobile Radio	120	120	8	-	4	14
Lee's Cabinets	600	100	8	-	1	5
Seminole Mobile Radio	722	190	8	-	12	21
AAA Tree Service	315	230	8	-	15	18

Providing the offense for Seminole Mobile Radio were Greg Wells (three singles, two runs scored, RBI), Jeff Wilson (two singles, RBI), Jim Speake (double, run scored, RBI) and John Hewitt (double, RBI).

Also hitting were Ted Freycenet and Paul Braeken (one single and one RBI each), Billy Slevin, Ted Texeria and Gary Littrell (one single and one run scored each) and Dave Milliron and Keith Wallace (one single each).

Pacing the Lee's Cabinets offense were Russell Holloman (double, single), Shannon Split (home run) and Bubba and Craig Split (one single each).

Seminole scored seven runs in the top of the first inning of its game with AAA Tree Service, but AAA came back to tie the game at 12-12 before Brantley Brumley completed the comeback by ripping a two run double with one out in the bottom of the fifth inning to put AAA ahead for good.

Doing the damage for AAA were Dave Nobles (three singles, three runs scored, two RBI), Brumley (double, single, three runs scored, two RBI), Joel Kean (double, single, run scored), Ron Cardell (two singles, run scored, three RBI).

Colt All-Stars have been five years in the making

By TONY DESORMIER
 Herald Sports Editor

LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Like any good baseball manager, Rod Ferguson has used every avenue available to build his team over the last five years.

And while he never dreamed it would come to this, that five-year project has come to full flower this summer in the form of the Seminole PONY League Colt All-Stars, a team only four games away from a World Series championship.

Seminole was scheduled to meet Hawaii in pool play Thursday evening but was rained out. That game will be played today at 5:30 p.m. CDT. Seminole, which defeated Hoosier North 8-4 on Tuesday, will wrap up pool play Saturday against Michigan at 5:30 p.m.

The top two teams from each of the two four-team pools will meet in Monday's semifinal round. The championship game is scheduled for Tuesday.

Beyond that, the Colt World Series champion has been extended an invitation to participate in the United States Baseball Federation's Junior Olympic Super Series, which will be played Aug. 15-22 in Columbus, Ga.

"Right now, we're only looking at tomorrow's game," said Ferguson by phone Thursday night. "It'll be a tough game. If we win, we're in the semifinals. But it looks like Hawaii (which lost to Michigan 9-5 on Tuesday) has saved a pitcher."

For Ferguson, the idea that this team could have come this far (and could go further yet) is overwhelming yet comes as no great surprise. While it's an accomplishment any time any team advances to this level, this is largely the same team that finished second to eventual World Series champion Tampa

He sings to the whole family

By BEVERLY BEST
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Craig Dierlam is not only a man with a song, he's a singer with a message.

Singing and playing keyboard, he reaches out to the audience to make friends as well as to tell them a story. His style is unique as well as versatile and his aim is to please people.

Dierlam is not only sensitive to the rhythm but also to the needs of the listener. While playing in Sanford, at Gaynelle's Country Kitchen, Day's Inn, he particularly focuses on the family. Playing and singing, as he puts it, "positive family music."

Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., Dierlam was a teenager when he broke into the music world. At 14, he had already had accomplishments as a band leader, piano player, and was considered a top bass player. He was also a composer having 15 different albums to his credit.

He eventually made his way to Florida, performing at the age of 16 in Hollywood with the Ink Spots, thus beginning his professional career.

From then on it was uphill for the energetic 32-year-old performer. Traveling extensively through parts of the Midwest and Florida, he recently moved from Miami to DeLtona.

He has played with such "rock giants" as Chester Thompson, Genesis' drummer; Alan White from "Yes", and Elliot Easton of "The Cars."

Dierlam's upcoming music video "Summertime" is not only intended to entertain, but to educate, especially parents. This is evident by the written introductory message at the beginning of the video.

"Fifty percent of all marriages in the United States end in divorce." "The real victims are the children," Dierlam said.

Being a fatality of divorce himself, Dierlam tries to bring out the reality of divorce through the video.

He relates that he has met over a hundred men who have heard the song "Summertime" and all give him the same reaction.

"You wrote a song about me," he said people tell him.

His son, Craig Joseph, who lives in another part of Florida, was able to spend some time with his dad recently.

After viewing the video and then hearing Dierlam sing in person, it is obvious that he has himself "together" after experiencing the tragedy of divorce.

He even invites a talented youngster on stage to display his or her talents.

His video "Summertime" will be completed and released in January of '92 but he sings his song and relays his message at Gaynelle's, Tuesdays through Saturdays, from 6 to 9 p.m.

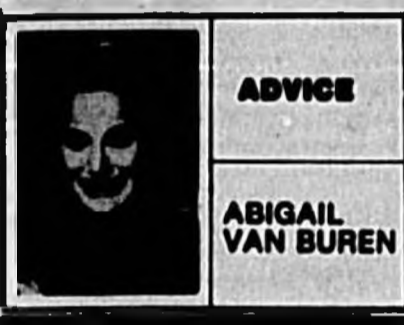

He said he awaits the opportunity to meet Sanford's people.

Homeless people more in need than pets

DEAR ABBY: You told a woman that if reconciliation with her estranged son is not successful, she and her husband can leave their money to their favorite charity or to their local animal shelter.

A few years ago, I might have said the same thing. But my drive to work takes me through the streets of downtown Los Angeles, where hundreds of men, women and children live, scrounge through trash cans for garbage to eat, and warm themselves by bonfires they light in the street at night. I've seen grown men using the streets for a public restroom, with looks of anguish and great embarrassment on their faces as I drive by.

Given the awesome task of helping such people, it grieves me to think of people with money to give away donating it to animals. The number of children without food, people without jobs and families without homes is growing daily, and it appears that the government isn't going to do much about it at the moment.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

FEMALE EXECUTIVE

DEAR EXECUTIVE: Must one make a choice? I would hope the human heart would be big enough to provide ample food and shelter for all God's living creatures. But in a country as wealthy as ours, for people to be scrounging in trash cans for garbage to eat is a national disgrace.

DEAR ABBY: I have decided to end our marriage. The reason for our divorce is my wife's marital indiscretions. We are well known in town, and our family and close friends were utterly shocked when they heard the news.

My problem: I do not want anyone thinking that I have been a less-than-decent, caring husband and father. There was no wrongdoing on my part. My wife, although appearing to be a very decent, moral woman, chose to ignore her vows to "forsake all others," if you get my drift — and I think you do.

I do not wish publicly to slander her, but mutual friends are treating me somewhat coldly because I initiated the divorce.

At the present time, I am not speaking to my wife, which is perceived as being cruel; however, I feel that this is appropriate in light of her indiscretions.

So, should I remain silent and try to ignore my friends' cold shoulders?

DEAR MR. X: Whether you want to speak to your wife is your own business, but for you to "let people know" that she violated her marriage vows will make you look like a cad. It is almost impossible to throw dirt on someone without getting a little on yourself.

DEAR ABBY: Your "Confidential to G.F. in Dayton, Ohio" astounded me, as it seemed to imply that because the Wright brothers were bachelors, they could not have had any direct descendants. Do you actually believe that bachelors are somehow incapable of having "direct descendants?"

LEBERT DUKE, PITTSBURGH

DEAR LEBERT: I am indeed aware that bachelors are capable of procreating, but I was referring to legitimate progeny. Somehow, I could not conceive (pun intended) of the Wright brothers being such high fliers.

Antibiotics control this lung infection

DEAR DR. GOTT: Would a heart condition have anything to do with my weakened chest, lungs and throat? I've been diagnosed with bronchiectasis, sinusitis and pneumonia nine times over the years and wonder if there is a connection.

WD40 is an oil-based product useful for lubricating objects, not people. Although I was not aware of any toxic potential, I appreciate learning that WD40, when misused, may cause physical harm.

PETER GOTT, M.D.

(C)1991 NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

DEAR READER: Bronchiectasis (chronic, localized infections in the lungs), sinusitis and pneumonia are not directly related to heart disease. Nevertheless, infection of any kind can aggravate a weak heart because inflammation and fever place added burdens on the cardiovascular system.

In my experience, the infections you mention can usually be helped by antibiotics. I say "helped" (not cured) because bronchiectasis, in particular, is virtually impossible to eradicate without surgery to remove infected portions of lung.

However, long-term use of antibiotics should keep your pulmonary problems under control. This, in turn, should have a salutary effect on your heart. Of course, you should also follow your doctor's advice about avoiding exposure to infections, taking good care of your health, using appropriate medicine for your heart disease and taking more antibiotics at the earliest sign of upper respiratory infection.

DEAR DR. GOTT: We'd like to share information regarding the use of WD40 as appeared in a previous column. An older gentleman in a nearby community found the product gave him a great deal of relief - initially. He ultimately became ill, was hospitalized, and blood tests revealed he had WD40 residue in his system. He came close to death, and the experience convinced us this was not a suitable agent to be used for medicinal purposes.

DEAR READER: Thank you for sharing your experiences. As I stated in a previous column,

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Sam Stayman is best known for the convention that bears his name. But he is an excellent declarer and defender too. He won the Bermuda Bowl (the world team title) in 1950, 1951 and 1953, and he has won numerous national titles. Today's deal was played by Stayman in New York's famous Cavendish Club in 1949. If you would like to test yourself, carefully fold your paper to hide the East-West cards, and plan your play in seven no-trump. It looks very easy; therefore you must be especially careful. Also it is rubber bridge - your money is at stake. North used Gerber, thinking he could see 13 tricks: two spades, three hearts, three diamonds and five clubs. That would have been the case if the clubs were dividing nicely. But Stayman wasn't willing to assume that this was the case. He won the spade lead with dummy's ace and cashed the club ace to see if the clubs were 5-0. When both opponents followed, he abandoned clubs to try to learn more about the distribution. He cashed his top spades (discarding a club from dummy), his top hearts, the diamond king and the diamond ace. At this point, he stopped to count. Stayman had learned that West began the hand with six spades, four hearts, two diamonds and one club. That meant East must have four clubs. Stayman led the club 10 from the dummy and ran it when East played low. A club back to the king, a diamond to dummy's queen, and the club queen completed the 13 tricks. HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Ouel
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Aug. 10, 1991
You may form a new alliance in the year ahead with an individual whose objectives are identical to yours. This association will produce social advantages, as well as fulfill a material goal.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you are too rigid or unyielding today, you may create an incident that won't make you look good in the eyes of others. Try to make molehills out of mountains instead of mountains out of molehills. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Even though it may make tantalizing conversation today, don't pass on detrimental information about another that you haven't personally verified.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Keep out of the picture rather than gamble in competitive social involvements with friends today. Even though you could win a few bucks, you could lose a pal in the process.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If things go right today, you may feel you're entitled to praise and acknowledgment. If things go wrong, you may immediately look around for a scapegoat on whom to place the blame.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Lately, you may have had the feeling that you're being tested by a higher power, but, in reality, it's your doings that have created complications. Don't blame it on your beliefs.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll have enough to do today trying to keep your own affairs in order, so don't attempt to sort out another's muddled milieu without being invited to do so.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Do not underestimate your competition today. Incorrectly evaluating an opponent could draw you into something in which you'll be overmatched.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This is not a good day for you to rely upon others to tend to things you should be taking care of yourself. There's a good chance they'll do a worse job than you would have done.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Enjoy yourself at social functions today, but be very careful that you don't wear out your welcome. If you're the last to leave the party, you're not apt to be first on the guest list next time.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you get off on the wrong foot with others today, you could make enemies instead of allies. Strive to be tolerant, especially with those whose opinions differ from yours.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you knowingly delegate an assignment to an individual who has a poor performance record, don't get angry later when the job was not done well. The selector is the villain.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be very careful about involving yourself in a commercial enterprise that is not in your field of expertise today. What you don't know could hurt you - right in the purse.
