

CHOCOLATE WINS CLOSE DECISION OVER AL SINGER

Cuban Fighter Given Disputed Verdict After 10 Close Rounds

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—(INS)—Al Singer and Kid Chocolate started something more than a two-minute fight when they bowed and paired each other for 12 rounds last night at the Polo Grounds.

They ignored an argument that will increase in momentum and bitterness until the skinny black boy from Havana and the solemn faced little Hebrew from the Bronx meet again over a longer route to settle a question of supremacy that was not answered by any means last night although the official decision went to Chocolate and preserved his winning streak.

Even the official's disagree Louie Monzella, the referee, an Charles F. Mathison, one of the judges, and their henchmen for the Cuban; George Kell, the other judge, thought Singer won.

The difference of opinion spread through the crowd of 45,000 from the 10th row at the ribcage right back to the distant bleachers with partisan challenges ringing all over the premises.

No verdict that could have been rendered would have plunged that crowd. The decision, which probably will be stayed at the garden next fall over the 16-round route.

That will be no hardship on Singer and Chocolate who enjoy the realm of big business, last night by drawing down something like $49,000 each.

They fought with the respect to each other's presence and mixture in it. Singer's vaunting fight hand never did crack down Chocolate's chin with full force after the white kid had miserably spent the T. N. T. last glove. There were no knock downs and neither was in distress any time.

SUMMER HEAT IS BLAMED FOR FAD OF THIN CLOTHING

pajama And Bathing Suit Epidemic Said Due To Hot Weather

By Pierre John Hoas
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—Summer heat has given more men to the point where he is ready to kick off all traces of vest, coat and pants and climb into pajamas or bathing suit until some smart man will get up and make in an assertion of strength by producing a bathing suit more serviceable than present articles in the matter of skin refrigeration.

In Chicago this rebellion against uncomfortable clothing became especially noticeable during the recent study. No sooner had an editor in another section of the country demonstrated that one did not have to be a somnambulist or Hollywood comedian to wear pajamas in public than clothing retailers here paraded the loop and such fronts clad in spotted and striped orange and pink hues.

Down with the tyranny of "dressed" because the sartorial variety of increasing numbers of men in Old Man did put on an outdoor suit coated with protracted heat.

Physicians, health experts and similar wise men banded together and issued a statement worthy of the best of labor produced on any sweltering occasion. It said:

"There are serious aspects to this matter of excess clothing in addition to the discomfort. One is the decrease in men's efficiency. Men could do 25 per cent more work in hot weather than they do now if they had suitable clothing. The other is the development of the interior diseases. Men wear too much clothing, but for fear of being chilled, don't care.

"In the interests of health, simplified clothing is vitally necessary. Not only would we feel better but they would be saved. We can get some good ideas from the tropics. For instance, we might adopt the attractive oriental pith helmet, closely woven of light straw and covered with white linen. It keeps away the sun's heat and

COLLEGE MEN ACT

College Men Act

Among the first to step into college town were 500 college men who were in town for one reason or another. They gathered at a local hotel and asserted they would launch a national campaign among the fraternities with the intention of forcing style arbiters "to break the chains of slavery of male garb and secure sensible dress reform."

"We insist on action this summer and not ten years hence," said one spokesman. "Our resolutions call for the disregard of conventionalities in the interest of comfort."

"Why should men go on wearing more clothes in the heat of summer than women do in the dead of winter? There hasn't been an improvement in men's attire so far as tropical weather is concerned, except the introduction of athletic underwear, since the time of Thomas Jefferson. We are the laughing stock of women and the subject of our own secret contempt. Like a lot of us we go on wearing clothes that torture us. The only difference is that the ladies have some sense about them in summer time, and we haven't."

TIE DAYTIME MODE

Fashion forecasts sophisticated, trend or semi-trend lines in daytime frocks for fall, either in silk or in lightweight woadens as supple as silk. Skirts have flared sections and the blouses are smooth. The frock shown on the left is an excellent example of this modern trend.

In the newest frocks, scarf collars are ingeniously adapted into the structure of the frock, as illustrated on the right. Further models embodying the advance fashions are shown in the "Fashion Quarterly" for Fall, on sale at pattern counters and newsstands.

Has Romance Faded?

Some years ago when knighthood was in flower and when gallantry was a fad, horses and horsemanship were such a part of the king's life that recreational activities involving these passenger-carrying quadrupeds was known as the sport of kings. On down through the years, the love of horses and things equine have prevailed among the rulers of the world. King George has his racing stables, he rides in Rotten Row and his sons cavort about the polo fields or follow the hounds. Alfonso of Spain wields the mallet from the hurricane deck of his ponies and Mussolini, while not a king in fact, nevertheless spends a portion each day upon his horse.

The former Kaiser and the late Czar were rarely seen in public when they were not upon the back of a prancing steed. Their sons too were no less fond of riding. Thus royalty of today as of yore is afflicted with a passion for horses which has lent such a romance to that noble beast, that even where the horse is little seen, the jangle of a bridle or the squeak of a saddle sends a thrill through most of us such as we never get when a modern knight on a motorcycle dashes by. What alluring names are associated with horses and horsemanship: Dragons, Cossacks, Hussars, Uhlans. Is it any wonder that when a statue is made of a king he is usually upon a horse?

Perhaps because they have been so closely associated with monarchs, horses have found little place in the life of the heads of democracies. The President's stables at the White House were never very significant. A few of our chief executives would occasionally venture out on the bridle paths for a little recreation but it could never be said that any of our presidents were real horsemen, unless it was Coolidge. He had one in his attic—the kind that uses electricity instead of oats.

For some unknown reason the thing that makes royalty turn to the horse has made presidents quit to the mountain stream and fishing. But even if fishing isn't quite as romantic as digging a spur into a horse's rib, it is an honorable sport and one in which our presidents excel. The prowess of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover with the rod and reel are just as much a part of our national life as the Prince of Wales's equine activities are of England's. And so when we raise our statues to our presidents in the future would it not be rational to envisage them in the posture of a fisherman with their tackle held aloft?

Setting An Eminent Example

Setting an example for ambitious young men to emulate, four justices of the United States Supreme Court are now pursuing their arduous and exacting duties despite the advanced age of 70 and past. Although by virtue of a federal law they are entitled to retire on a pension of $20,000 a year, Justices Holmes, Van Devanter and Brandeis prefer to stay on the job. Though not entitled to a pension because of another law which requires ten years' service preceding the seventieth birthday Chief Justice Taft labors tirelessly at the age of seventy-two, happy and contented in a duty faithfully performed.

It is rather significant that the quartet, preferring work to the rest and retirement to which they are so justly entitled, are only followed in the footsteps of many illustrious predecessors, who, gripped by a peculiar fascination for their labors, have preferred to die in harness. It is interesting to note too, that every chief justice since John Marshall to Mr. Taft has died in office and only one failed to attain the retirement age.

Longevity, it seems, has become traditional within the portals of the highest court of the land, and from the great tribunal has emanated many a story of love of duty and devotion to public trust. While young men, who aspire to quick wealth and early retirement, may obtain a helpful lesson from the example of the four eminent justices, there is in their conduct a matter of even greater significance. It is a sacrifice of remuneration for the attainment of honor, a course followed too infrequently in this day of zeal for riches.

SATURDAY EVENING SERMON

BY W. E. PUGH

(A discussion of the International Sunday School Lesson by the Rev. W. E. Pugh, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, Jacksonville, Fla.)

Lesson Text: Ezra 7:1-6:36. "The Man of the Hour."

With great ceremony and joyous festivities the second temple was built and dedicated under Zerubbabel. Cyrus, king of Babylon, had returned and encouraged the return of the Jews to Jerusalem, and with the command that their temple should be restored. One would suppose that following this successful event would be many years of happiness and contentment. The contrary, however, was the case. Their foes would about had discouraged them. The walls of the city were not yet rebuilt because of lack of means. Comparatively few of the captives in Babylon returned to Jerusalem. The morale of the returned Jews was at a low ebb.

But man's extremity is God's opportunity. God does not leave Himself without witness, for there is in every human crisis a man seemingly raised up just for that hour of need. Such an one was Ezra, still in Babylon, but whose heart was stirred by the needs of his brethren in Jerusalem. King Artaxerxes of Babylon was kindly disposed towards Ezra, who in the year B. C. 458, with the king's consent, and together with about 7,000 other exiles, set out for Jerusalem. He was a man of deep piety, a believer in God, and a teacher of the law as well as a leader of the people.

Through prophesy God had always declared that there should be a remnant of the Jews who would build fast to the law of Moses and the word of God as their knowledge. This statement includes the historical truth that while the great world empires rose and fell, the remnant of the Jews remained. A remnant, a faithful few still remain.

This situation finds its expression in the life of every Sunday School and church. Any number may be accounted as members, but the foundation and for that matter the superstructure of these organizations depends upon "a faithful few." These have not lost faith in God and find their greatest happiness in serving Him with-

JUST IN PASSING

BY BOB HOLLY

It is always darkest before dawn. You have heard this all your life and it may seem funny to you especially if the darkness seems impenetrable and no piercing gleams of sunshine come through to cheer you up. But nevertheless it is the truth. If you just hold on long enough you will win out.

Just now some people are wondering how long they will have to hold the bear by the tail before the animal will listen to reason and stop trying to bite us in the pocket book. Clearing up the fog question will help us quite a bit and also help outside capital to decide whether they would like to invest money in our beautiful little city or not.

Traveling about the country gives one a vision of industry and capital that are not granted to folks who stay here in Sanford and have no enlarged horizon. There are industries that would be interested in Sanford but I would hate to bring people here today and let them talk to some of our Clonny Gus agitators. In fact there are such gaps of gloom in certain places that it makes me gloomy myself.

The first thing we should do here is for everybody to get in the proper state of mind about what we intend to do in this vale of tears. Are we minded to remain here and build Sanford up or not? If so the only thing for us is to get right in with our Chamber of Commerce and build it up in a place where it can function properly. We are spending a lot of money on finer clubs that would get more returns in the Chamber of Commerce.

Plenty of civic clubs are all right when you have plenty of money to keep them going. But when the pinch of poverty makes us think of economy there is only one place to spend money for the things that Sanford needs and that place is the Chamber of Commerce.

been so much misunderstanding here in the past and it has created a bad condition.

The minute you suggest something for the good of Sanford the negative complex pops up to kill it. We seem to have a very negative people here with the "can't be done" idea. I admit that doing anything now is a difficult proposition. We lack capital to do big things but having capital need not prevent us from building up a better spirit by doing small things until we build up and build up into greater ones. All we need at present is the spirit of give and take that will get behind any movement for the betterment of Sanford regardless of who suggests it.

Sanford formerly was in the public eye. Sanford was looked upon as a "going town". Sanford was the City Substantial. Sanford was doing things. And the world judged us by our actions. Just now while everybody is laying down on the job the world is judging us by our inactivity. We must sell Sanford to Sanford people before we can sell Sanford to other people. For that reason a Seminole County Chamber of Commerce with a publicity tax from the county and one from the city would place a good secretary in the field and the secretary would keep us in the limelight long enough to interest other people to come here.

But Clonny Gus says: "Who would come here now?" That is the mistaken idea of so many people when things are not going so good. No one will come here after we are in absolutely proven that we are nothing about doing anything for ourselves. We must be up and doing first and prove to outside capital that we still have faith in Sanford before we can convince them we have life and confidence. It may be a difficult task to bring prosperity here today but prosperity will never be brought back by sitting down on the job and looking blue.

The greatest surprise of my life is the attitude of people in high places. We seem to lack the kind of leaders who know how to keep moving under handicaps that keep them in. And if your leading citizens feel that nothing can be done about it how can we expect a handout follows next spring. Our big business men first should start something along the lines of progression and show everyone will fall in line and help push the hand wagon over the hill.

Petty jealousies and petty politics all should be forgotten and every man and woman in Sanford should do their duty. Their duty before face we can realize our idea of making Sanford the over again into a real city. When I give up my right hand in the street I do not want him to feel that I have a job. I want my job. There are plenty of good folks here that have the best interests of Sanford at heart but they feel that if they start anything they will be misunderstood. There is

A PROPER STUDY OF CRIME

DAYTONA BEACH NEWS-JOURNAL

In a spirit essentially modern, and one not unusually associated with government. President Hoover's national law enforcement commission is starting upon the stupendous task of analyzing the causes of crime in this country and determining upon a course of action whereby respect for law may be at least partly restored. With scientific thoroughness the commission purposes to study the subject of crime from fundamental up, even if it takes more than a year to complete the gathering of information. Here is time and money well spent, indeed, for conclusions about so intricate a subject as law enforcement would be, if based upon a superficial survey, as useless as some of the panaceas suggested on the street.

The commission has divided itself into 11 committees, each thoroughly to study some phase of the general subject, which is infinitely complex. Experts are to help the committees, and the aid of every science dealing with human behavior will be solicited. The study of crime is not, as formerly, merely a question of penology. The idea that crime can be prevented merely by punishment of criminals has been tossed into the scrap heap. Yet a survey of prison methods, of workhouse systems, of the effect of capital punishment for major crimes will and must be part of the commission's research.

The effect of prohibition upon the attitude toward law enforcement must be carefully surveyed. There can be no question that prohibition as interpreted by the Volstead act has had its effect upon respect for law. Chairman Wickertman will have a delicate subject to deal with here; he

News Notes On Agriculture

Alex R. Johnson Department of Vocational Agriculture for Seminole County

Take Out The Layers From Your Layers

Keeping a flock of poultry and not carrying out the definite system of culling the non-producers from the producers is like the negro who bought hogs in September for $2.00 each and sold them in April for $2.00 each. He found out "You can't make money that way." Culling chickens for egg production has become a necessary practice in order to meet the present conditions of high priced feeds and market prices. Culling means selecting out the poor producing hens thru the summer months as they are laying. This work is relatively simple and may easily be learned by most poultrymen.

Culling should be done all the year-round but it is especially important that it be done during late summer in order that the laying birds might be sold off and thus save feeding throughout the fall and winter months, or the period in which only the good producers will lay. Poor producers are at their worst during these months. In good practice only about 5% of a flock is culled from one year to the next. Nonlayers, early slow molters, short season layers and excessively fat hens should be culled from the flock at once and sold. In some flocks this will deplete the flock considerably but it will mean more eggs per bird this winter and that means more profit to the poultryman.

If you wish further information on the actual culling operation the department will be glad to serve you upon request.

The average corn yield in Seminole County is approximately 20 bushels per acre. What is your yield this year? The actual checked yield on one farm in this county showed a yield of over 60 bushels per acre. On a one-acre demonstration plot on the Seminole High School Farm, 1016 pounds of shelled ear corn was obtained. This is over 70 bushels per acre. Let's try and increase the average per acre yield of corn in this county.

According to the State Marketing Bureau, poultry statistics for Florida based on an eight year average show that fyers bring the highest prices during later February, March, April and May. Why not plan on raising a flock of heavy fyers for the high price season? It takes about twelve weeks to produce a good fyer.

The mixed vegetable car lot shipment idea is proving steadily. There seems to be a concerted effort on the part of the local distributors to try and arrange a definite marketing program for these shipments. Market possibilities are being closely checked and it is hoped to have an announcement regarding this work within a few days. Another meeting of the shippers is being planned for next week.

Mrs. Sarah Prichard and niece, Dorothy Fields, after coming to a visit with the former's brother, left Wednesday for their home in New York. Mrs. Prichard has been teaching on Long Island for a number of years, while Mrs. Fields is attending high school at Ogdensburg.

Solons Vision New Aerial Era Coming From Graf's Flight

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—(AP)—A new national defense stands on the horizon, the eye-banking chief of the Graf Zeppelin around the globe, but the world has not seen a new era of aerial transportation.

Dismissing as negligible the military value of the zeppelin, the congressional leaders today declared the flight was of interest only to commercial aviation.

The present generation, they said, has been given a view of the transportation of the future. Commercial aviation in this country, they added, was challenged to keep abreast of aerial developments.

Lindy Gives Advice To Youths Seeking Places In Aviation

(Continued From Page One) A new art, a new industry, needs dreamers, men who can see beyond the present, and every aviation business man should be a dreamer.

"You would not advise a man with an artist's temperament to become a pilot then, would you, Colonel?" the student then asked.

"No," he replied without hesitation. "The artist's place is in the ranks of the designers, the engineers."

"If a sensitive man is flying a plane with a load of passengers he is apt to become over-conscious of the great responsibility that is his. It places him on a nervous edge. Then, if he should have trouble in the air, the strain of his nervous system is so great that he is likely to make a error in judgment or be unable to think rapidly enough to gain control of the situation."

"The flyers who have the most spectacular records in their records are the average men of the nerveless type. They are successful because you control the things they do as direction. They, however, ever dangerous, a fall by them is a matter of seconds, a part of their daily job."
