The President first met Syming-ton when Mr. Truman was around looking over war plants as part of his job as head of the Senate War Investigating Committee. He liked the Symington plant's record. He remembered Symington when he had a hard job.

Possibly because Congress is presty well sold on air power. Symington has had better than average luck getting what he wants out of the lawmakers. And who is to say that some Democratic congressmen in 1950 won't be pointing with pride to "our glorious Air Force" and taking a little credit on their own shoulders?
