

270 Killed In Worst U.S. Air Disaster

CHICAGO (UPI)—A DC-10 jumbo jet, filled to capacity for a holiday weekend flight to Los Angeles, lost an engine on takeoff and disintegrated in a flaming holocaust just north of the world's busiest airport Friday. None of the 270 people aboard had a chance of survival.

It was the nation's worst aviation disaster — almost double the toll of last fall's collision above San Diego, in which 144 people died.

Scores of investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration, the National Transportation Safety Board, the FBI and various state and local agencies picked through the tiny bits and pieces of rubble and body parts left today in an empty field 1.5 miles north of O'Hare International Airport.

FAA Administrator Langhorne Bond took charge of the investigation. Officials said they recovered "relatively intact" the "black box" that records cockpit conversations in flight.

The engine that fell from the plane, apparently causing the disaster, rested near runway 32-Right at O'Hare. Officials said it appeared the engine did not explode, but fell off the plane in one or two large pieces.

The bellish disaster developed under a sparkling blue sky after a round of bon voyages for passengers boarding American Airlines flight 191 at mid-afternoon. The ground crew said most of the passengers in the terminal were in a happy mood. Many of them, including the managing editor of Playboy magazine, were members of the publishing profession, bound for a booksellers' convention in Los Angeles.

The tower controller who handled the flight reported that everything went normal prior to takeoff at 2:45 p.m. CDT. The silver-blue-and-red, three-engine jet was cleared, lumbered down the runway, lifted slightly off the ground — and then radioed that something was going wrong.

The tower responded — "Do you want to come back?" There was no answer.

"Just as the plane's gear was coming up off the ground, and the nose started to point skyward, engine number one (left side) fell off and landed on runway 32-R," said a tower controller.

The wings of the plane started to wobble as the crew tried to compensate for the loss of power on the port side. FAA spokesman Neal Callahan said the DC-10 is capable of flying with only two engines, so he suspected something additional went wrong. But a veteran pilot said the sudden loss of power, plus a drastically unbalanced aircraft, probably contributed to the crash.

Hundreds of motorists, area residents, airport sightseers and at least one photographer saw the huge jet — pilot Walter Lax at the controls — fight to stay airborne, then disappear from sight.

Moments later, a massive cloud of flame and pitch-black smoke mushroomed hundreds of feet into the air. "It was turned completely upside down. When it hit the ground it just totally disintegrated," said one witness.

"The heat was so intense it singed my face. There can't be a survivor in that plane."

The careening plane narrowly missed a row of oil storage tanks. As it came apart, parts of the plane smashed into several trailers in three mobile home parks, injuring three persons.

Rescue workers, alerted instantaneously by the O'Hare control tower, arrived at the scene in minutes. Soon, however, they cancelled the emergency alert at area hospitals. There were no injured aboard flight 191 — only dead.

"We don't know where the bodies are," said acting

The force of the impact — the jumbo jet gouged a 50-foot wide swath in the dirt — and the heat of the explosion and fire — the plane was fully loaded with 79,500 pounds of high-octane fuel — left little that could be identified.

With the exception of the remaining wing engine, lying in the midst of the rubble, the remnants of the plane rarely exceeded knee height.

Red Cross and other disaster workers soon began searching for human remains, packing them into body bags and marking the spots where the fragments were found with brightly colored pennants. The bags were piled 10 to 12 per ambulance and taken to an American Airlines hangar set up as a makeshift morgue.

The worst single-plane disaster in aviation history involved a Turkish Airlines DC-10 that crashed near Paris on March 3, 1976, killing 246 persons. It was blamed on a faulty cargo hold hatch.

Friday's death toll was nearly double that of the previous worst U.S. air disaster on Sept. 25, 1978 when 144 died in the collision of a Pacific Southwest Airlines Boeing 727 and a small Cessna 172 over San Diego.

The Spenkelnik Execution: The 'Fors' And 'Againsts'

By United Press International
 One high federal official compared the Florida execution of John Spenkelnik Friday to justice under Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini while another said the electrocution was delayed unnecessarily by last-minute legal tactics.

Often-outspoken U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, in Atlanta for a charity fund-raising event, told reporters he saw little difference "between the so-called due process of Florida and the so-called due process of Khomeini."

But Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist, regarded as a "law and order" advocate, said the high court's delay before finally allowing the execution to proceed "implicitly sanctions the use of such tactics to frustrate the attempts of the state to effectuate the will of its citizens."

The wide variance was typical of the opinions voiced around the nation Friday following Spenkelnik's death in the small Florida prison town of Raiford.

The 30-year-old Spenkelnik was strapped into Florida's oak electric chair at 10:11 a.m. EDT Friday and, one minute later, the first 2,500-volt surge of electricity poured through his body. Three jolts and six minutes later, Spenkelnik was pronounced dead, the first unwilling individual to be executed in a dozen years in the United States.

Gary Gilmore faced a Utah firing squad in 1977, but Gilmore refused to battle the court verdict ordering his death.

Outside the Florida prison, demonstrators shrieked, wept and taunted police, screaming "killers" and "killer pigs."

One of the demonstrators, a woman whose husband is also among the 133 inmates remaining on Florida's death row, said: "You wouldn't kill a dog like that."

Thirteen protesters were arrested at the Supreme Court building in Washington after the court held a last-minute meeting and voted 5-2 to let the black-hooded executioner carry out the sentence.

"Thou shalt not kill, thou shalt not kill," the limp protesters chanted as they were physically dragged into the small police station on the court's ground floor for violating a law that prohibits demonstrations on court property.

In New York, Henry Schwarzschild, director of the American Civil Liberties Union's capital punishment project decried the execution.

"The official homicide of John Spenkelnik this morning is a constitutional, legal, social and human outrage," Schwarzschild said. "The state of Florida has prevented no crime, it has made no citizen safer, it has brought no victim back to life — it has merely added one more killing to the long roster of killings in our troubled country."

"A society which teaches that killing is a proper solution to a problem is deeply uncivilized," he said. "A country that presumes to teach the world the meaning of human rights but ceremoniously kills its own citizens is profoundly hypocritical," he said.

In Salt Lake City, Deputy Utah Attorney General Michael Deamer said he hoped Spenkelnik's execution would open a "floodgate" of executions of people who have been lawfully sentenced to die.

"I'm very pleased that the sentence was carried out," said Deamer, who was one of the prosecutors who succeeded in having Gilmore executed.

"I hope it will lawfully open the floodgates to execute all those on death row who lawfully and legally have had the death sentence imposed on them," he said.

Opponents of capital punishment feared Deamer's hope would be realized.

"There is no doubt that we have begun now to resume involuntary executions in this country," Schwarzschild said.

Pair Fleece Elderly Lady Of $3,500

A 73-year-old Sanford woman, told her savings were being stolen by a dishonest bank teller, Friday turned over $3,500 in cash to a con artist claiming to be a deputy with the Seminole County Sheriff's Department.

"I thought I should trust the police so I took a taxi to the bank and got the money. It was foolhardy," said Alice McKim of 212 W. 18th St., "now my money is gone."

Police said two men were involved in the deception. One man called Miss McKim and identified himself as an Atlantic Bank official. Police said the man told Miss McKim that one of the female tellers was stealing money from depositors' accounts and that the bank needed some help in trapping the woman.

"He asked me to take out $3,500 in large bills and the bills would be marked," Miss McKim said.

She said she was told a deputy sheriff would come by her home and collect the money and redempt it. When the teller tried to steal part of the deposit, she would be arrested and the marked bills would prove her guilt, Miss McKim said she was told.

Police said a second man Friday afternoon came by the victim's house and collected the money she had withdrawn.

"He called himself Mr. Webster and he showed me his badge," Miss McKim said. "I thought if you can't trust the police, who can you trust?"

She said the badge identified Webster as a "Seminole County Deputy."

Miss McKim said she did not recall the name used by the man on the phone who identified himself as a bank officer.

After failing to hear from either the bank official or the deputy, Miss McKim said she called police.

"I haven't slept a wink, I know I'll never see the money again," said Miss McKim. "I'll just have to live without it."

FIRE ANT...An Increasing Problem In Seminole County

By DONNA ESTES
 Herald Staff Writer

If you have noticed some white sand mounds in your yard recently, don't go kicking them. The imported fire ants that live in them carry a wallop in their sting that hurts and has on a few occasions been lethal.

Problems with the imported fire ant in Seminole County have been multiplying steadily since large scale aerial spraying of insecticide to control the creature were halted by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) three years ago, according to county agricultural agent Frank Jasa.

"The major problem has always been in pastures and hayfields, generally the range-type areas near bodies of water. Insecticides are not normally used in those areas. Vegetable fields and citrus fields are not as bad because insecticides are used there. More and more this has become an urban problem," Jasa said, explaining imported fire ants are now infesting school grounds, parklands, roadways, roadside and individual homes.

EPA has taken a number of steps recently to provide new insecticides for the battle to control ants in the south. The agency recently broadened the use of a veteran insecticide, "Diazinon" to allow homeowners to pour it on the ants in their earth mounds. In addition, EPA has approved controlled field trials with two experimental insecticides to determine if they can eventually be registered as safe, effective tools for controlling the ants.

"The little Florida fire ant has been around for ages. Its sting is rather uncomfortable, but the imported fire ant is more aggressive and its sting, which has more toxic properties, carries more of a wallop. On most people the fire ant sting leaves a well which develops into blisters and if not careful the blisters will get infected," Jasa said.

The blisters can take as long as 10 days to heal and infection may develop. According to a publication by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, some people have been hospitalized from the stings and a few have died, primarily from allergic reactions to the stings. Jasa said two of the insecticides that are effective against the imported fire ant are Diazinon and durban and both may be acquired from hardware stores and similar outlets. He said the materials can be mixed in a spray can following the directions. The solution should be sprinkled over the mounds slowly so the ants will think it is rain. "If the solution is poured too fast, the ants will move over," he said.

"If you are looking for control in a larger area, there is no insecticide available and nothing in the wings as effective on a large scale. The only thing that is effective is bait that can be scattered as much as 30-40 feet away. The ants will pick it up and take it into the nest which will kill off the whole nest," Jasa said.

The insect looks like an ordinary house and garden ant, Jasa said. "It is one-eighth to one-quarter inch long and reddish-brown or dark brown to black in color. A single mature mound contains a queen ant, several thousand winged males and females (future queens) and up to 100,000 workers.

Each colony of imported fire ants builds a hard-crustled nest or mound, sometimes three feet high and nearly three feet across. In some areas there may be as many as 50 mounds per acre, making it difficult to operate mowers, and other machinery in lawns, park grounds, cemeteries, pastures and farmers' fields.

The imported fire ants are foreign pests, accidentally imported from a South American cargo ship into this country at Mobile, Ala., in 1918. The ants now, according to EPA, infest about 190 million acres.

FIRE ANTS PACK A WALLOP

And For The Next Crisis...

Not to sound like Chicken Little, but the Skylab is falling. This word from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration comes in time to take our minds off the gasoline shortage. Who can think about gas when an 85-ton space station is about to crash into the Earth and no one knows where? The Skylab, which was vacated by the last team of astronauts in 1974, was supposed to stay in orbit until the space shuttle now being developed could go up and give it enough of a push to keep it aloft. But NASA discovered last year that sunspot activity affecting the Earth's upper atmosphere was causing the Skylab's orbit to decay much faster than expected.

NASA now predicts that the 118-foot vehicle will make a fiery descent through the Earth's atmosphere between June 26 and July 9. While much of it will burn up, 400 to 500 pieces are expected to hit the Earth, scattered over an area 4,000 miles long and 100 miles wide.

So much for the problem, and we hesitate to say where it belongs on a scale of 1 to 10. NASA insists that the chances of someone being hit by a piece of Skylab are no greater than the chances of being hit by a meteorite or pieces of "space junk" that fall out of orbit every day.

But the odds were remote that something would go haywire at Three Mile Island. This has been a bad year for statistical probabilities. Besides, the Skylab debris will not be mere scraps of litter. One piece expected to survive re-entry is a metal ring weighing 5,000 pounds. Another is a vault used to store film about the size of an office safe and weighing 4,000 pounds.

There is no radioactive material on board, which was the case when a Soviet spy satellite carrying a small nuclear reactor crashed in northern Canada in January, 1978. Canada recently handed the Russians a bill for $6.1 million to cover the cost of cleaning up the radioactive debris.

Under a 1972 treaty, the U.S. government would be liable for any damage caused by Skylab wherever it falls. Pieces may land in the hands of individuals.

But NASA has a piece in the hole — or at least a face card. As matters now stand, Skylab could fall anywhere in an area 50 degrees north to 50 degrees south of the equator. As the end draws near computers may be able to project whether a populated land area will lie in the path of its debris. By activating controls which determine whether the cylindrical craft meets the atmosphere head-on or broadside, its final orbit could be speeded up or slowed down so the impact occurs over an ocean, with no harm done.

NASA engineers admit this is a long-shot chance, but they are the people who got the Apollo astronauts to the moon and back and handled some ticklish emergencies in the process. If an ocean splashdown for Skylab isn't in the cards, we'll have to cross our fingers and hope for the best.

Scientists estimate that 200 million meteors enter the Earth's atmosphere every day, and although most of them burn up, some hit the ground regularly as hefty pieces of metal or rock. Yet in modern times there have been no authenticated accounts of anyone being killed by a meteorite, and there are only a couple of dozen recorded cases where they have ever hit a building. So the odds are on our side.

Diamonds and denim... It doesn't seem like it has been too long that I attended high school in Palm Springs, Calif. But then again, it has been a long time. Maybe women have come a long way, Baby, but many things have remained traditional — although perhaps different.

Before leaving the Bible Belt of Alabama for the western plains, certain Southern customs were observed in our household. One of these customs was the pants suit — both long and short — worn strictly for sports and off limits in the dining room.

I attended a high school in Montgomery with a Reserved Officers Training Corps (ROTC), and nearly all the fellows were in the ROTC. The poor cotton picking boys (and that is literal) were just as handsome in the snappy uniforms as the rich fellows — and their manners were generally nicer.

Back in those days, denim was a symbol of poverty. Faded bit overalls was the uniform of the poor. And I don't believe I ever saw a woman in a pair of overalls. But...

Things were different in the California territory. Instead of driving convertibles with sharp contrasting leather upholstery to school in city slicker clothes, Palm Springs kids rode their own thoroughbred horses upholstered with expensive hand-tooled leather saddles and wore levis, leather boots and plaid shirts.

To keep abreast of the styles and "When in Rome..." our Southern tradition went "Gone With the Wind" except that it was Southern California, style, you all.

The casual life of the exciting desert was short-lived and it was in Alabama for the family — and back to some of the formal stiffness enforced by my loving grandmother.

When the no iron synthetic fabrics hit the market many years ago, natural fibers yielded to these convenient materials, and for the family ironer, it was HALLELUJAH!

And now cotton, silk, wool and linen lead the fashion fabrics to the tune of an arm and leg to purchase. "Natural" is the word. So the very fabric that the rich once scoffed at and turned up their snobbish noses at, is now high fashion — and high price.

At one time auctions bred the socially prominent attired in fashionable threads, furs and diamonds — the real McCoy and not synthetics. I recently went to an auction in another city. I had been warned what to wear in style — and it wasn't a Halston creation either.

All of the women and men sported the finest of fashion denim — and dazzling diamonds. Many of them looked like Alabama cotton pickers from another era.

I looked down at the slim, slinky, starched Gloria Vanderbilt jeans that took a lot of wriggling to get into, and a lot of breath-holding to remain into. I mopped at a spilled drink on the imported silk blouse and wondered if it were stained beyond removal by the dry cleaners. And the super-high-heeled clogs were made for sitting — that is, kicked off — not walking or standing.

The question is — is this an instant replay of the good ole days that "they" talk about? It couldn't be. People in denim weren't wearing diamonds back in those good ole' poverty days.

JULIAN BOND Taking A Look At Education

On the 17th of May 25 years ago, a unanimous Supreme Court found that racial segregation in the public schools deprived black children of equal educational opportunities.

A year later, that same court ordered the nation to make haste slowly in achieving the desegregation. The affected school systems were in a masterpiece of ambiguity, "to admit to public schools on a racially nondiscriminatory basis with all deliberate speed the parties to these cases."

By the end of 1964, fewer than 3 percent of the region's black children attended integrated schools. From 1964, the passage of the Civil Rights Act until 1969, the federal government, under a Southern president, began to take an active role in enforcing the court's decision.

In 1969, the federal government, under a Southern president, began to take an active role in enforcing the court's decision. In the Green decision, the court declared "all deliberate speed" dead and required school districts to produce a plan "which promises realistically to work and promises to work now."

By the end of this period, the number of Black children in school with white ones had risen from 3 percent to nearly 14 percent.

Phase three of this tortuous process remains current today. It began in 1968 with the election to the presidency of a candidate who appealed to America's darker side. In Richard Nixon's rhetoric, the traditional yellow school bus became a menacing machine, mutilating a newly-discovered American shrine, the neighborhood school.

But in spite of it all, every credible bit of research done shows that black children in integrated schools record an academic plus. While children show no loss.

More To Light Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is more to a utility bill, usually, than a mere statement of how much the customer owes. Accompanying the main bill of bed news will be one or more pieces of ancillary literature, most commonly a pamphlet setting forth the company's rationale for the latest rate increase.

Despite increased use of utility bills for educational or propaganda purposes, their potential as a communication medium has never been fully exploited. One direction future billing information might take was pointed to last week at a House hearing on civil defense aspects of nuclear power plant accidents.

Chairman Joseph Hendrie of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission was asked how the public could be made aware of possible radiation dangers without causing undue alarm. "We may want to wind up using the little flyers in utility bills," Hendrie replied.

Bergland Eyes Chemical-Free Farming

WASHINGTON — For the past two years we have reported on the efforts of some independent-minded farmers to break loose from the chemical industry's ever-lightening stranglehold on American agriculture.

By improving the age-old methods of crop rotation, natural pest control and organic fertilizer, these latter-day pioneers hope to avoid the skyrocketing expense of chemical farming, but to save their land from the destructive effects of heavy chemical use. Every time we have detailed these farmers' modest successes, we have drawn the wrath of the chemical industry and the agricultural community with which it is so closely linked.

Now the big boys may really have something to scream about. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has been taken to take an interest in chemical-free farming.

Bergland was approached on his 3,000 acre Minnesota farm during the Christmas holiday by Paul Billberg, seven-year practitioner of natural farming who has become a true believer. Billberg told our associate Hal Berton that Bergland "really understands the problems with the misuse of chemicals" and asked the right questions.

RONALD REAGAN Knowing Russian Fears

Most Americans probably think of the Soviet Union as "Russia," a country populated by "Russians." The Russians wish it were so, but today they make up less than 50 percent of the population of the vast U.S.S.R. and the birthrate doesn't favor them.

There are 50 national groups in the U.S.S.R. with populations of 100,000 or more and 22 of them have more than a million each. Andrei Amalrik, who left the Soviet Union to take up a new life at Harvard's Russian Research center, wrote recently, "This variety of nationalities, part of which were independent states or belonged to other states during the past century, contrasts the unitarian Soviet system."

The conflict is somewhat mitigated by the existence of national republics, but their autonomy exists largely on paper; the central authorities always try — sometimes cruelly — to replace the national languages and traditions with common Soviet traditions and the Russian language.

When those two Russian diplomats who had been caught spying in the U.S. were exchanged recently for five men freed from the Gulag, one of those men, a Ukrainian, brought home to the free world just how crushing this "Russification" program can be to a proud nationality.

Valentyn Moroz had spent 14 of his 43 years in Soviet jails. A scholar and historian, Moroz had defied "Russification" of his native Ukraine by presenting the facts about how the Russians were trying to smother its nationality. Amalrik says, "Russification is due less to the strength of the Russian central authorities than to their weakness. Their weakness is caused first by a fear of the decreasing percentage of Russians in the national demographic balance and second by a crisis of ideology."

Valentyn Moroz — one brave voice — clearly rubs the Russian authorities the wrong way, for he demanded cultural freedom for the Ukraine. Indirectly he was speaking for such other distinct nationalities within the Soviet Empire as the Georgians, Byelorussians, Estonians, Latvians, Lithuanians and Armenians — not to mention the satellite communist states of central and eastern Europe.

Soviet policies designed to wipe out national consciousness from among their subjects range from mass deportations from ancestral homelands all the way to murder, according to Moroz. And nothing is sacred, he says. A few years ago he told us that Ukrainians were "borrowed" for use by the Soviet government. Even though their return had been guaranteed in writing, the people of the Ukraine have not seen them since 1963.

By BARBARA McDOWELL Special to The Herald NEW YORK (NEA) — Lyndon Johnson once responded with startling vehemence when asked what had changed most in politics during his 30-year career.

"You guys," the former president told the television producer who posed the question. "All you guys in the media. All of politics has changed because of you."

"That view of the heightened impact of media on politics is shared by David Halberstam, who spent five years tracing the rise of the nation's communications empires for his new book, 'The Powers That Be' (Alfred A. Knopf).

"Who knows who the head of the Democratic National Committee is?" asked Halberstam rhetorically during a recent interview. "Who knows who a ward healer is? They have virtually no role in our society anymore."

Growing Older Advice On Living To 100

Everybody wants to live a long life. That is, if it's an active and fulfilling one. To find out how, it's worth reading the book "How to Live to 100 Years Young" by Frederick Fell, $2.95, by Dr. George B. Tietken, a 71-year-old retired general practitioner.

The book tells how to avoid health-packed years to our lives, to avoid the diseases associated with aging, to beat daily tensions and to eliminate fatigue. He also explains how to play, eat and sleep better, which will also make us look younger, younger and more attractive.

Basically, Tietken says a person is as old as his/her arteries. We can keep them young by exercising and emphasizing the prevention of disease rather than only the cure.

Legislation that would have brought about radical changes in the operations of blood banks throughout the state — including the Seminole County and Central Florida blood banks, is virtually dead.

The bill would have abolished the non-replacement deposit fee charged by blood banks to patients whose family or friends do not replace the blood used. It also would have forbidden payments to blood donors.

The House companion bill passed its ARHS committee last week. But, said John Gash, legislative aide to State Sen. John Vogt, D-Cocoa Beach, "As a practical matter, when a bill dies in a committee of one house, it is dead."

Edward O. Carr, executive secretary and managing director of the blood banks, said however, a compromise is being worked out by officials of the Florida Association of Blood Banks and legislators on more acceptable legislation providing controls on blood banks.

"The compromise bill would make it illegal to pay donors and we certainly are not opposed to that," he said. "If blood were used from paid donors, a patient's physician would have to justify its use, under the compromise."

struggles we had in this society — Watergate and Vietnam — came down to president vs. the media, not president vs. Congress or president vs. political party."

According to Halberstam, the presidency and the media gained power together, each needing the other to increase its influence upon Americans.

It began with Franklin Roosevelt, he explains. FDR saw that the new issues facing the nation required presidential action; they were too broad and complex to be handled in the same old way by Congress and the political parties. He was helped by the revolution in communication — and especially by radio.

"The moment radio appeared, Roosevelt didn't need the party system anymore," says Halberstam. "He needed the Congress less. He went directly to the American people."

patient care, patient costs and patient services are the main points to be considered in determining whether the hospital should stay where it is or be relocated.

If any doctor wants to be on the staff of Seminole Memorial Hospital, let him apply for such status and show his credentials there. If he has chosen to locate his residence in South Seminole, knowing full well when he did so where Seminole Hospital was located, then let him commute. It is inevitable that increased medical care will result from professional offices that will have to be constructed at high costs.

With our nation facing monumental tasks and possessing fewer and fewer resources, it would be nothing short of criminal to abandon the present reasonably good hospital facility that we already have. Admittedly such a plant, as does any business facility or even a private home, has to be updated and renovated from time to time. Even a newly constructed hospital at a Lake Mary site, in just a few months, face "renovation," such a life.

Brock Asked To Gather Data On Court Facility

By DUNNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County Bar Association President Newman Brock is willing to do the research and public relations work necessary to show the need for court facilities in South Seminole County.

"That will be cumbersome for me. I work for a living and I am a taxpayer," he said.

The majority of the county commissioners decided to workshop early this week to ask documentation from Brock on the need for such a facility before considering the bar's request for court space in the south end of the county.

formation as best I can since they have asked that I do. If the commissioners are interested in the residents of the south end of the county they will take an interest in serving their needs," Brock said.

"The commissioners are treating this like a political football. Two-thirds of the county's population is in the south end. We are not talking about big tax dollars," he said.

downtown Orlando, and another in Winter Garden, 12 miles from downtown. South Seminole is about 12 miles from Sanford.

"We are not asking for a gigantic expenditure," he said. "I don't mind preparing the data, but the commissioners were elected to serve the people and I would think they would want to compile their own data," Brock said.

Brock said he had discussed the matter with several commissioners and they were apparently very receptive. "I wasn't armed with volumes of statistical data. I was not just representing the bar, but was speaking for the people in the south end who complain about having to go to Sanford and spending gas money. Every day of the week, I hear the question: 'Why can't we have a facility in the south end?' It's not a large branch courthouse, just expanded facilities we want, with a clerk's office to file documents, a judge's chamber, hearing rooms where motions can be heard," he said.

Board Approves Zoning Change For Elementary School

By SHARON CARRASCO
Herald Staff Writer

The Seminole County School Board approved a request from mothers of the Sweetwater Oaks Subdivision to let their children attend Sabal Point Elementary School rather than Wewaka Elementary School.

The school board took action Wednesday to rezone the school zone line to include an additional 96 students at Sabal Point next fall.

The mothers made their request so their children could attend a less crowded elementary school.

Supt. William Layer said Wewaka Elementary School is projected to have an enrollment of 916 students next fall in comparison with Sabal Point's projected 690 students.

In other action — Lyman High School will get 140 student desks to replace furniture that will be moved from the present school buildings to the new Vocational Building. The cost of the desks is approximately $14,000.

Renovations are scheduled to begin on the north wing of the high school as soon as school is out. Two new science classrooms and one new art classroom will be developed.

The school board tentatively approved Wednesday the final floor plans for the Lake Mary High School. The final plans will now be forwarded to the State Department of Education (DOE) for its approval.

The Lake Mary High School, which is slated for completion in December, 1980, will have a student population capacity of 2,402. Until its completion, students who will attend the high school will be attending Lake Brantley High School. Beginning this fall, Lake Brantley High will implement double session school days, to compensate for the additional students.

The board approved the architectural plans of a community center to be built on the South Side of its Midway campus. The plans will be forwarded to Tallahassee for approval by the state Department of Education (DOE).

Funds for the Midway Community center construction would come from a CETA grant under direction of the Seminole County Commission.

Career Woman Has Shared Equal Rights From First Check

By JOAN MADISON
Herald Correspondent

Long before the Equal Pay Act of 1963, the Civil Rights Act (which prohibits discrimination based on race, religion or sex), or the Equal Rights Amendment, Mrs. Kirby (Claire) Fite Jr. of Sanford, had invaded the so-called man's world of drafting, and not only built herself a successful career, but received equal pay—from the time she drew her first pay check in 1951.

"Because I made sure I did," emphasized Mrs. Fite, now a service specialist at Stromberg-Carlson, a division of General Dynamics, manufacturer of communications equipment. "A woman has to fight for her rights," she says, "and not expect somebody to do it for her."

It wasn't always easy. "Sometimes," she admits, "it was rough." But the intelligent, hard-working draftsman knew her capabilities. She knew she was doing work equal to her male co-workers, and she knew she was worth a senior electronics draftsman, and for three years as a supervisor.

For 22 years of her career, Mrs. Fite has been happily married. She has two children, Devron, 17, and Tucker, 20. To successfully combine a career and marriage, a woman does need a supportive husband, she has found; and she says, "I certainly have one. He has been very patient with me, especially when I had my own company. He's never been threatened, like some are threatened by your advancement up the ladder."

A lot of opportunities exist for women who are interested in drafting or in pursuing a business career, according to Mrs. Fite, and drafting is something women can "easily slip into."

"Women can become draftsmen without a college degree. Two years at a technical college will qualify you as a draftsman," stresses Mrs. Fite, who was introduced to commercial art while in high school, and went on to complete two years at Orange County Vocational School

Women In Non-Traditional Roles

every bit as much as they. "I didn't play the 'woman's role,'" she declares. "If there was a tough assignment, I would jump at the chance to do the more challenging work."

In 1951 when there were only 220 women draftsmen in the United States, Mrs. Fite was the first woman draftsman hired by Southern Bell, where she worked for six and one-half years. She was also the first woman draftsman at General Dynamics where she worked for years as and a year of commercial art at the University of Florida. It does take a certain type of personality to go into drafting, however, she feels. "For someone who is an extrovert or likes being around people, it might not be the best field to go into," she said.

Drafting can be grueling, but challenging. It requires intense concentration and can be demanding as far as scheduling. But it's rewarding for the person who likes precision and orderliness, according to the long time

Cooperative Education Offers Employment Opportunities

Survey Shows To Learn Is To Earn

Although women are swelling the work force at a rate of almost two million every year, their 1977 median earning was just $8,618, or 58.9 percent of the $14,626 median earned by men, according to U.S. News and World Report.

"There are more and more women working," says Judy Binns of the Cooperative Education Job

Development Office of Seminole Community College, "but they are working in the traditional 'pink-collar' jobs—nursing, teaching, secretarial. There are a low percentage of women in the executive-management jobs."

"I think that this is a good time for women who are interested in some of the nontraditional jobs

"It's (electronics) a wide open field for women because there are so few women in it," she notes. "I think companies are smiling upon you when they hire women."

She's excited about the position with the Weather Service as it provides variety and opportunities for travel. "I like to do something different every day," says the 1975 graduate of Seminole High School. She had several jobs before deciding to enroll in SCC. "I saw where a high school diploma isn't enough to get ahead in life. I want to make something of myself," she says, with determination. Miss Sanders found her co-workers at the National Weather Service very supportive and encouraging. "I really like the job. My supervisor, William Horde, is super intelligent and encouraging. I think I can learn a whole lot from him."

Now in her second year at Seminole Community College where she takes an evening course two nights a week as she works to complete the requirements for her associate of science degree, Miss Sanders can earn up to nine credit hours for her on-the-job training. She hopes to be permanently assigned to the National Weather Service when she completes her schooling at SCC in June 1980. — JOAN MADISON

Homeowners Roast Pigs, List Leaders

"Do you want to come to a luau?"

"Sure."

"Good, bring your own pig."

The homeowners of Shadow Hill might disagree with this funny. They held their annual picnic and consumed 200 pounds of roasted pigs.

"The men started cooking the two pigs at 10 p.m., Friday night and we ate around 2 p.m. on Saturday," said Teresa Brown, a resident.

Adding that everyone attending thought this was the best pig roast yet.

Thanks to Chris, Jerry Brown, Jim Swingley, Jeff Etzberger and Larry Wilder.

Announced at the picnic were this year's homeowners association officers. They are: Lydia Kane, president; Donna Ballinger, vice president; Marcia Luetthaus, secretary; and Donna Swingley, treasurer.

Following the picnic, some of the residents attended a private party at the Jerry Brown home, where they "partied" until 4 a.m. Teresa said everyone had a good time.

30s" said mother Teresa, laughing.

Michael's guests included: Lisa and Denny Wilson; Casey Doss; Sean and Keith Wilder; Shawn and Ritchie Alkey and brother, Robert.

Congratulations to my friend Chris Dupore. Chris won the "Local Winner" 11 Hit and Run Competition" sponsored by Burger King. He participated in the Allamonte Springs division. Other local participants in the division were Casselberry and Sanford.

"Over 500 boys, ages 9, 10, 11 and 12, participated in this event. Needless to say, Dick and I are very proud of Chris," said Mother Margie.

The winners were announced at an awards banquet held at the Allamonte Springs Civic Center.

Chris now goes on to compete at Lake Fairview District competition. Then, depending on the outcome, on to Division competition in Atlanta. The "icing on the cake" comes when the finals will be held at the "1979 All-Star Game", to be played at the King Dome in Seattle.

The ladies of Shadow Hill are forming a garden club. If any residents are interested in joining, please call either Lydia Kane at 834-6597 or Teresa Brown at 834-5172.

This is the time for birthdays and this week have celebrations.

Diane's guests included: Joette Schuckman; Krista and Trish Johnson; Tanya Paul; Jaylene and Laurie Anderson; Michelle Mason; Susan McCallan; Suzanne Miller; Jennifer Riano; and Laurie Mayes.

Birthday greeting to Michael Brown who celebrated his sixth birthday on May 21, with a yard party. Following party games, treats and cake and ice cream, was a skating party.

Should Girl Marry Or 'Ditch' Irishman?

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with this 29-year-old man from Ireland. I'm 23. I love him dearly, and he loves me and wants to marry me, but, Abby, you would not believe how cheap he is!

He takes me out and spends money on me, and has even bought me some nice gifts, but he will not spend a penny on himself. He lives with the barest necessities. I had to beg him to buy a kitchen table and chairs for his apartment because he had a coffee table and a couch he didn't need anything else. (He will drag the two chairs and coffee table from the living room into the kitchen!) He doesn't have a bedroom set either. He sleeps on a bare mattress on the floor.

It's not that he can't afford a few pieces of furniture — he can; he just doesn't want to spend any money. I've had my dad and brothers and friends talk to him, but he's stubborn as never said "I love you." Yet I know he does. How do I know? Let me count the ways: He appreciates my efforts as a wife, mother and homemaker. Although he's never told me so in so many words, he brags about me to others.

He never corrects me in public or try to make me jealous by flirting with other women in my presence. When he's wrong, he says, "I'm sorry." When I'm wrong, he doesn't get reminding me of it. He never says "my house" or "my children" — it's always "ours." I could go on and on. So what if he finds it difficult to put into words what he feels? There are many men to whom words come easily, but talk is cheap. Performance is what really counts.

In few years ago, she "was going to retire," she says, smiling. But adds, "that lasted a week."

Her prior experience includes setting up the microfilm for International Laser Systems, and she was also a district representative selling aerial maps.

"That a woman doesn't need to give up her femininity to compete and to succeed in a male-dominated field is evidenced through the attractive Mrs. File, who teaches a Sunday School class at the First Presbyterian Church, and who has worked diligently in the 22-years she has lived in Sanford to help make it a better community in which to live.

The Pinecrest home of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd (Nellie) Coleman was the setting for a bridal coffee-shower honoring Miss Angela (Angie) June Jones, June 23 bride-elect of Charles Wesley Turner III.

Assisting as hostesses were Ruby King and Stephanie Murton.

The refreshment table, covered with an imported Army-Navy cloth, was centered with an arrangement of fern and gardenias accented by crystal candle holders.

Mrs. W. W. (Frieda) Tyre poured the coffee from silver service and Ruby poured the punch.

The honoree received an appropriate gift from the hostesses.

Joining the hostesses and Angie were her mother, Mrs. Glyn (Juna) Jones, her grandmother, Mrs. Ernest Moody and Mrs. Ted Jones, and the mother of the future bridegroom, Mrs. C.W. (Betty) Turner Jr.

to inform employers about the cooperative education program and Seminole Community College, from February to December 1978. Miss Binns and Wade Griggs visited approximately 1,000 different businesses, which employ approximately 25 per cent of the labor force in Seminole County.

Some of the areas for which they found a strong demand are: secretarial, accounting and modern data processing; child care workers, dental assistants and banking.

They also discovered a few areas where the need for employees has decreased. "There seems to be a need for people trained in electronics, but not television repair," says Miss Binns. "They are almost going out of business." Television rarely need repairing," she adds.

The report also indicated that convenience stores are making service stations go out of business because of their less expensive gas (that may be changing) and some service stations are being converted into auto repair shops.

Repeatedly during the survey, Binns and Griggs heard of need for qualified secretaries. "They'll say, 'I want a secretary who can

hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
I have a kitchen with very limited wall space, but I have discovered there's a lot of unused "bulletin board" space on the inside doors of my kitchen cabinets. It's especially handy if you happen to have a phone in your kitchen.

On the inside of my cabinet doors, I taped our monthly church event calendar and also hung a regular calendar.

Under each month are listed various birthdays, anniversaries of our children, relatives and friends I want to remember with a card or gift.

I have also marked on the calendar under the appropriate month those things which I might slip up on, such as license renewal, taxes, etc.

A large envelope, which is cut lower on one side, is taped to the door. This is a handy catchall for all sorts of odd clippings and perhaps a recipe which I intend to try later.

I've used this door space to tape your hints and various bits of information. These take no extra room and are always at my fingertips.

Mrs. K.R.S.

If you've ever had a tiny kitchen you'll appreciate this hint. Sure saves lots of things from getting buried -- or forgotten. You're a pal -- Hugs, Heloise

HAIR'S HOW!

DEAR HELOISE:
When blow dryers first came out, the sides of my hair always looked good but the back always looked a mess.

I never could hold the dryer and manage the brush at the same time.

Finally, I put a coffee-cup hook on the bathroom cabinet. I open the door, hang my dryer on the hook, turn it on and I have both hands free for styling my hair.

I might add I put up hooks at two different levels: One for drying my hair sans shoes and the other 3 inches higher for when I am drying my hair while wearing platform shoes.

Just make sure the air vent on the dryer isn't covered up.

S. Foster

DEAR READER:
This is your column. If you'd like to share a hint, ask a question or make a suggestion, write me care of this newspaper.

Just for Kids

GOODY GUMDROPS!

DEAR HELOISE:
Tell the kids if they would like to do something different for their next birthday cake, to do this:
Ask your mom to use gumdrops for candleholders. Make a hole in each gumdrop the size of the candles so they will stand up straight.

You can then eat the candleholders, too, if you blow the candles out fast enough so they are not covered with wax.

I like 'or my mom to use lots of colors, but you could use just one color if you want to.

Wesley, Age 7

NO HIGH JUMPS!

DEAR HELOISE:
Has anyone ever thought of this use for nylon net? We caught some baby frogs in the creek and put them in an aquarium with water and big rocks.

Then we put some nylon net over the top and taped it to the sides so they can't jump out.

The net can also be used over the fish aquarium. The fish can be fed right through the net.

Florida Holiday Traffic Toll: 15

Sanford Man Killed In Car-Train Wreck

One Sanford man was included in the 15 traffic fatalities reported across Florida during the Memorial Day weekend.

The Florida Highway Patrol said Noah McFadden, 48, of Seminole Garden Apartments, Sanford, died instantly when the car he was riding in was struck broadside by a Seaboard Coast Line railroad engine near the Deluxe Bar off Southwest Road shortly after noon Sunday.

The driver of the car, Ernestine Williams, 30, also of Seminole Garden Apartments, received severe head injuries in the accident, the Highway Patrol said. She was taken to Florida Hospital in Orlando, where hospital spokesmen today reported her condition as "serious but stable."

Troopers investigating and waterways were jammed by record throngs. The weather cooperated with warm temperatures and clear skies throughout the state and more of the same was forecast today.

At Key Biscayne, off Miami, the Cape Florida State Park was filled and closed to further visitors at 11:05 a.m. Sunday, the earliest this year.

In Broward County, Lloyd Beach State Park in Dania and Hugh Taylor Birch Park at Fort Lauderdale fill up by mid morning. "I had to drive on the wrong side of the road to get in here this morning," Birch Park ranger Willie Hill reported unbelievably.

Boaters obviously had stocked up with fuel before the weekend began and their craft crowded waterways throughout the state Sunday.

Thomas Castelli, Coast Guard Auxiliary operations officer at Miami, reported a lot of boaters launching Sunday afternoon. "Because they want to save gas, they'll sleep on board overnight and come back in on Monday."

Whereas only a few hard to find gasoline service stations were open Sunday, a Triple-A motor clubs survey indicated that 50 percent of Florida's service stations would be pumping gas today at least for a few hours.

Among the traffic deaths reported, at least four persons were pedestrian victims of hit-and-run accidents.

Florida celebrants of Memorial Day were expected to turn out in record numbers again today and also to send the holiday death toll climbing.

Sanford's Noah McFadden, 48, died instantly in this train-car collision.

The 'Boys' From The 129th: They'll Meet For Last Time

CHICAGO (UPI) — The boys from Ambulance Co. 129, 33rd Division of the American Expeditionary Forces of World War I have gotten together every year for decades to play poker, drink, swap stories and visit the graves of their dead comrades.

Years ago, the grave-visiting had to be stopped because there were just too many graves, sighed Jesse Anderson, 80.

Now there's hardly anybody left at all, he said. So on Wednesday, the surviving "boys" from the 129th will have their last reunion.

"These were a great bunch of guys," the retired schoolteacher said of his buddies. "In the whole bunch there wasn't one louse."

The crusty veteran said the Army unit worked the bloody, trench-gouged battlefields around Verdun and the Marne, ferrying the wounded to field hospitals.

'In the whole bunch there wasn't one louse.'

"I was a stretcher-bearer," he said proudly. "Sometimes we had to ferry the wounded two miles. We set up relays. We divided the tragedy-struck into the walking wounded and the wounded for stretchers."

Anderson said he was encouraged to join up by his young friend — Ernest Hemingway, who later became a world-famous author.

"We made a pledge to go together, but the next day he said he failed a hearing test," Anderson said. "I think it really was that his father wouldn't let him. But he did work for the Red Cross as an ambulance driver on the Italian front during the war and got wounded."

After the war, the men from the 129th set up a veterans group and decided to hold annual get-togethers, Anderson said.

"We had almost everyone from the unit — about 120 guys," he said. "We'd meet in Chicago the weekend before Memorial Day. Guys would come from all over the country. On Saturday we'd play poker, talk and have drinks. But during the Prohibition, of course, we had no liquor. Sometimes we'd manage to get the company chaplain out and have floor-shows with stripteases. We had wild parties."

"Then on Sundays we'd go out to visit graves of our buddies in the area who had died. Three died of illness overseas, but when we got back, soon we already had a few deaths."

Anderson said that as the years went on, the number of dead mounted.

"We finally had so many dead we had to divide into two groups to visit all the graves," he said. "Twenty years ago we gave up visiting the graves — it was just too much for us. Finally we began to just meet for one day."

Now, Anderson said, there are only 10 men, ranging in age from the late 70s to 88, left in the depleted ranks of the 129th.

"We haven't had a cigarette smoker with us for 20 years," he said. "The whiskey drinkers do much better."

Anderson and five others — including three from out of state — will be at the last reunion Wednesday at a Chicago hotel, he said.

"The rest can't make it," he said. "Three are too sick and one is busy."

Back when the group was formed, the men got together and bought a silver-plated "Last Man's Cup." The dead of the 129th were inscribed on the cup and the last man alive was to present the cup to the Chicago Historical Society. He also was to have a large bottle of champagne.

"We decided to give the cup now," Anderson said. "This will be the last reunion. There's not many of us left and the fellows are getting so old they may not be able to make it anymore. We'll read each name on the cup and think about those men. We'll share the champagne at our banquet. I guess if only one of us had to drink it, it would take so long the bubbles would go flat."

They Have The Store Safe, But Don't Have The Money

A thief may have bitten off more than he can chew at Bathania Joe's Restaurant this weekend.

Sanford police said a 24-inch wall safe was stolen from the eating place at 2508 S. French Ave. sometime after closing Saturday. The safe is believed to contain about $2,500 in cash, police said.

But there is a catch — the steel-reinforced metal safe was locked at the time of the theft and the thief may not be able to open it.

"I don't know how they're going to get it open," said Jeff Martin, restaurant manager.

Police said the thief entered the restaurant by forcing open a door at the south side of the building. Once inside, he pulled the safe from the wall and dragged it out.

Police said the combination lock on the safe is the tumble drum type and probably could not be picked by anyone less than a professional. The safe weighs about 100 pounds, police said.

Scratch marks down the corridor through which the safe was dragged indicated only one man may have entered the restaurant, removed faster if two men had been involved, police said. The safe could have been carried and said.

TAKE PICK OF TRICKS

Hand someone a dozen toothpicks and challenge him or her to form them into a figure containing five squares. It's easy. Simply form a large square with two toothpicks per side, and use the remaining four to form four smaller squares inside.

Now, using the same 12 toothpicks, challenge someone to form a figure containing six triangles.

A DAY FOR REMEMBERING

Memorial Day touched the hearts of veterans and their families across the map today. Above are the five emblems that represent each of the U. S. armed forces. Below, Commander George O. Clinton (left) and Frank Malane of the American Legion Post 53 prepare to raise the same flag that flew over the nation's capital. The Memorial Day ceremony held at the Oaklawn Memorial Park also officially dedicated the Veterans Garden of Honor which has 1,100 grave sites reserved for veterans.
