A Big Undertaking

Those who are inclined to minimize the seriousness of the current tire shortage on the grounds that rubber will soon be coming in enormous quantities from Brazil had better revise their original estimates. While it is true that Brazil does have sufficient rubber trees to supply the entire world, there seems to be little possibility of securing much relief from this source within six or eight years.

The extensive headwaters of the mighty Amazon River are estimated to contain some 500,000,000 rubber trees of sufficient size and quality for immediate exploitation. More than one million of the finest rubber plants of Africa and Asia have already been transplanted to the Amazon valley for mixture with the native Brazilian plants. Three stations and five substations have already been established for the development of Brazilian rubber.

But not within three years will the first fruits of the huge $300,000,000 project be realized. The difficulties lie in the great distances of the almost impenetrable Amazon valley. In the almost utter lack of any means of communication and transportation, in the absence of any sufficient body of trained workers to operate the plantations and in the necessities of time for cultivation under any circumstances.

According to the New York Herald-Tribune, the bulk of Brazil's rubber trees grow in the upper Amazon valley about two thousand miles from the nearest habitable coastal regions. Before these trees can be exploited to their full capacity between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 persons would have to be transplanted from Brazil's cities, towns and farms and colonized thousands of miles from their former homes in an area which hitherto has been an almost inaccessible wilderness.

This entails the construction of highways and railroads, the better development of water communication, the construction of whole towns and cities from the ground up, arrangements for the procurement and transportation of supplies and the erection of plants for the processing of the crude rubber. It is an enormous undertaking and one which cannot be accomplished in semi-tropical jungles almost overnight.

Respect For The Flag

We happened to be present at a public gathering the other day when the Star-Spangled Banner was played. Several bars had been rendered before anybody stood up at all. Then one man away down front hesitatingly got to his feet. Three or four others scattered throughout the audience followed suit. And by the time the anthem had been finished everyone, so far as we could see, had risen.

Why shouldn't everyone stand up immediately with the first notes of the Star-Spangled Banner? Why does one have to wait until the song is half over before getting up? Why wait for someone else to start it? It should be a privilege and a pleasure to pay this small token of respect to the song of your country. Why not stand up as if you meant it?

As much of course could be said with respect to courtesy toward the American Flag. Stand up as it passes in review. If you are wearing a uniform, then salute. If you are a civilian with a hat on, uncover. In this connection the following rules for displaying the American Flag and how to show proper respect for it may be of value:

1.—When flags of states or cities or pennants of societies are flown on the same halyard with the Flag of the United States of America, the latter should always be at the peak. When flown from adjacent staffs the flag of the United States should be hoisted first and lowered last.

2.—When displayed with another flag against a wall from crossed staffs, the Flag of the United States should be on the right (the flag's own right), and its staff should be in front of the staff of the other flag.

3.—When used on a speaker's platform, whether indoors or out, the Flag should never be reduced to the role of a mere decoration by being tied into knots or draped over the stand. For this purpose bunting should be used. The Flag, if displayed, should be either on a staff or secured to the wall or back curtain behind the speaker with the union to the flag's right.

4.—When flags of two or more nations are displayed together they should be flown from separate staffs of the same height and the flags should be of approximately equal size.

5.—When the Flag is displayed in a manner other than by being flown from a staff, it should be displayed flat, whether indoors or out. When displayed either horizontally or vertically against a wall, the union should be uppermost and to the flag's own right, that is, to the observer's left.

6.—Whenever a number of flags of states or cities or pennants of societies are to be arranged in a group and displayed from staffs with the Flag of the United States the latter should be placed at the center of that group and on a staff slightly higher than any of the others.

7.—When the Flag is displayed in the body of the church, it should be from a staff placed in the position of honor at the congregation's right as they face the clergyman. The service flag, the state flag or other flag should be at the left of the congregation. If in the chancel or on the platform, the Flag of the United States should be placed on the clergyman's right as he faces the congregation and the other flags at his left.

8.—When the Flag is displayed from a staff projecting horizontally or at an angle from the window sill, balcony or front of a building, the union of the Flag should go to the peak of the staff (unless the flag is to be displayed at half-staff).

9.—Whenever the Flag of the United States is carried in a procession in company with other flags, it should occupy a position in front of the center of the line of flags or on the right of the marching line.

Lecturer Speaks On "Christian Science, the Promised Comforter"

Stating that "Christian Science is breaking upon the darkness of the world with penetrating power, even as the brilliant sunshine pierces the clouds," Miss Florence Midgush, member of the Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., lectured on the subject, "Christian Science, the Promised Comforter," at the South Side School last night.

The address, in part, is as follows:

"Christian Science is breaking upon the darkness of the world with penetrating power, even as the brilliant sunshine pierces the clouds. It clears away the miasmic mists of materiality with the light of Truth, and enables men to correctly view the circumstances and conditions surrounding them. Never, since the beginning of the Christian era, has there descended upon the world such a revealing and enlightening hope as that which is given in Christian Science. When understood and applied, this Science dispels the erroneous beliefs which set men and nations at variance, and end in war and discord.

"Christian Science is teaching men to know and understand God by resting thought upon a spiritual foundation, and teaching them how to solve every problem of whatever nature that may confront them by spiritualization of thinking and living. Everyday problems are solved by turning upon them the dominating searchlight of the Promised Comforter, taught by Jesus and again presented to this age in Christian Science.

The Comforter
"Jesus prepared his disciples to carry on the work of establishing Christianity, but apparently they were unable to make the demonstrations he had taught them to make unless he was personally with them, and that the good they had received from his teaching would be taken away from them. They did not fully understand his teachings until they saw him after his resurrection. His disciples were assured that 'I will not leave you comfortless,' he said, 'I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever,' and he referred to this Comforter as 'the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father.' He said that he would remain in Jerusalem until they had received the Holy Ghost.

"Twenty centuries later Mary Baker Eddy declared to a world steeped in materiality (Science and Health, p. 55), 'This Comforter I understand to be Divine Principle, and the also defined 'Holy Ghost' as 'Comforter' (Science and Health, p. 322). The disciples and followers of Jesus practiced his teachings successfully for some time after his resurrection, but gradually the seeds of truth that had been sown among the people, and the healing power of the Father, were being possible to such a state of thinking. Gradually men began to believe that spiritual healing was a gift which bestowed upon a man, and intended only for his time. Jesus indeed left the Comforter as he promised, but when men began to look for it in material things, they were disappointed. Mrs. Eddy found it again in Spirit, where it had always been, hidden to the world but known to God. She was the first to see it, and she had found it was that comforted her in a most effectual way at the time of her greatest trial, when she was in a bed of pain, attended the pronounced of fatal effects from a serious accident, and refused the long-standing claims of materialism. But she was not satisfied with having gained the healing and comfort she had so long sought. Mrs. Eddy had a true understanding of the way in which the Comforter was to be received, and she knew it would mean self-sacrifice, a renunciation of material pleasures, and that she must turn her thought to this purpose. In her own words she describes what this undertaking entailed (Science and Health, p. 229): 'I never before me the awful conflict, the Red Sea and the wilderness, but I pressed on through faith in God, trusting Truth, the strong deliverer, to guide me into the land of the promised Comforter. The full and the rights of man are fully known and acknowledged." "Mrs. Eddy's spiritual insight enabled her to discern the support of Jesus' teachings and to realize that she had not been willing and ready to work out the positive rule for its proof and elevation. Christian Science would not have been given to the world in this age. She realized that mankind might not be ready to accept her healing as a sufficient proof that this was a revelation as well as a discovery, but that it must be presented as coincident with reason and logic. Eddy, therefore, put it to the broadest practical tests. After years of sacrifice and labor, turning unreservedly to God for guidance, she gave her discovery to mankind in such a form that all can understand who will win.

The Christian Science Textbook
"She wrote a textbook—'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures'—containing the full statement of Christian Science, and the rules for its application. Through the reading and study of this textbook the student is liberated from all kinds of ignorant conditions. This book sets forth a doctrine that may seem unobvious but it is the selfsame Christianity that Jesus taught and lived, and enables all who are willing to devote themselves to its study and application to overcome not only all physical ailments and all mortal disorders, by the same spiritual means. Christian Science requires an intelligent application of its rules, not mere belief, supposition, or imagination. It is benefiting mankind because its basic rules declare that God is good, and the only good, and enables thought to rest in the realm of this goodness.

"She proved her greatness and nobility when, after discovering this Science which is the basis of Christianity, she refused to accept her own healing selfishly, and she refused to claim personal achievement. She knew that her discovery was the Comforter promised by Jesus, and that it should be clearly understood that God is the one and only creator, and that He has created our good, and therefore will create our health, our peace, our happiness, our success, our freedom, our life, our joy, our love, our power, our authority, our intelligence, our wisdom, our right reasoning. Truth admits of no error, no reversal, no denial; it is unchangeable and everlasting. This gives you a new idea of what is possible through the study of these scriptures for God which are given to us and explained through the Emergency Service Corps. TROOP 34
By Billy Rhoadmaker
At Scout meeting last Monday night we discussed our waste paper project, patrol camping and our Emergency Service Corps equipment campaign. Francis Meriwether of the District committee on Organization and Extension visited us and discussed the Emergency Service Corps' possible role in Civilian Defense. We were very glad to have Mr. Meriwether as we always welcome members of the District Board. We also had several suggestions of first aid bandaging.

Our campaign for triangular bandages is coming along nicely. So far we have had "store bought" ones, old sheets and feed sacks with the printing still on.

The scouts who are working on the Signaling merit badge are making progress. They are learning to use the Morse Code on buzzer and blinker as well as with flags.

Our troop was very proud to learn that they had won first place in the Court of Honor scoring two weeks ago. We are expecting stiffer competition next time but are still hoping to repeat.

The Emergency Service Patrol met Thursday night and put in some very good work on signaling. The boys are planning to construct two long distance night signal sets and put on a demonstration of signaling across Lake Monroe from the hand shell to Enterprise some time in the future.

We are planning to do a good bit of marching and drilling soon. We have a new drill manual and are learning patrol "east and west" and the other maneuvers.

We regret that Harry Beasley, assistant patrol leader of the Bob Whites has been ill for some time. We hope that he will soon be well and out with us again soon.

The Lion Patrol won the month contest for the past two month period and will set a weekend camp at Camp Wewa at troop expense as their reward.

The Alligator Patrol had a camp last weekend and encountered "difficulties."

LOW LIVING STANDARD

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Price Administrator Leon Henderson predicted last night that the "level of living" in the United States would quickly fall below the lowest point of the great depression because so much of the nation's productive capacity would be devoted to war.
