

Good Samaritan Home Founded By Woman Of Faith Who Had The Help Of The Lord In Her Work

By BOBO DEAN

Through many long nights in 1931 a young woman, called by the Lord, sat in a drafty dilapidated deserted old church on Mulberry Street by the Goldsboro dump waiting for a congregation. She was Pastor Ruby Wilson, born in Sanford in 1908 and raised on a farm. For many evenings no one came to hear her message by the light of the one flickering lamp which burned in the deserted church.

Ruby Wilson, or Mother Wilson, as her congregation and her many friends, while and colored, call her today, learned missionary work early, as a small child in the Methodist Church. Married five years to her husband, Timothy Wilson of Sanford, she moved in 1931 to come down the dark dirt road on the borders of Goldsboro to a little disintegrating church in the woods.

The flock which gathered to the church and finally the Bishop went, too, going into town to stronger, more populous parishes, a less rugged religious life. Mother Wilson had been left alone with the gaping windows, the weeds and wild shrubbery about the building and the Goldsboro garbage dump down the street.

She tapped a towel across her head, she says, and waited for the Lord to provide her with a congregation. Of course, He did. She waited for Him to provide many things since, and the frequency with which He has delivered is ample indication of the soundness of her faith.

Much has happened to Ruby Wilson since 1931 and much she has accomplished. Today her congregation of twelve worshippers in a new church on the site of the old Goldsboro dump, it conducts a singing class of children from many other churches, and, most monumental of all, it has established and Mother Wilson manages the Good Samaritan Home where 22 elderly men and women, blind or bedridden or without relatives to support them, find care and comfort in their last years.

The story of the home is typical of the way Mother Wilson has gone about the Lord's work. In 1931 her congregation had increased from her solitary figure in the old church on the border of the woods to a little group of faithful souls who held services, in addition to those in their own Church, also at the County Home and in the kitchen at the Semholo County Jail. The congregation had scraped together the money to pay what was still owed for the lot and the church building, and J. James Out, Sanford insurance man, convinced of the pastor's realty and brought in additional lots and sold them to the church on small monthly installments.

But all had not been easy for the little church. A hurriedly built as Mother Wilson hurried to the side, and prayer meetings were being held in the members' homes. Hardly had a new church been built, constructed out of lumber from the lumber yard, when material from Mr. William Toll at the United Lumber Company who, says Mother Wilson, "let us pay came to the pastor."

She felt the need to do something for the older people when they went down, and she felt that no person couldn't do very much, if we put all our little money together we could build a home for our old people when they went down.

At the time, with the expense of the new church building, there was little that Mother Wilson could do about her latest project. Already the church members were they called the "storehouse" a big red rust-colored cabinet in the Church, and from this storehouse they distributed food to needy people as far away as Oviedo and DeLand.

This was not enough for Mother Wilson, however, and she went to work figuring out how the Church Home. She found out about a concern which distributed food to needy people in the Ten Commandments. And the young children of the Church and, in their spare time, the members took to selling so many pencils that the pastor says somebody told her they didn't think they would ever see the end of Mother Wilson's 7 cent pencils.

The little fund for the home was being built in other ways. The first donation had come from a lady visiting from New York, who did not know Mother Wilson, but had heard about the plan for the home from her mother.

By 1936 the fund had grown to $500. The pastor went to W. D. Powell who drew up a plan for the frame of the home to cost $944.00. She went to Henry McAllister and he agreed to sell her the material for the frame for $500 down and the rest to be paid when the entire home was completed. W. D. Powell and the Reverend James did the carpentry work.

So the frame, at least, was built. For a while, nothing happened. It stood in the woods, and, as Mother Wilson admits, "It just began to get warped a little." But people began to notice it and wonder what it was all about and ask questions.

Finally, friends of the project went to the Florida State Bank, and Mother Wilson was told she could have the money to finish the building, if she could find four people to stand security for the loan. If the Church failed to pay up, she found Ernest Harrell, one of the first members of the Church, Frank Robinson, Mr. McAllister, and "Pastor" Wilson's husband. "But the Lord blessed us," she says, "and we didn't have to bother any of those people."

The bank lent $1000. The home was completed by radio in 1939, some believing it was 1939 and others 1900.

Note From Korea Tells Army Life Of Corporal Lord

Cpl. Joseph H. "Bud" Lord, formerly of Sanford, and now of Spring Lake, N. C., wrote his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Lord of South Sanford Avenue, his impressions of Korea and the East since his arrival in that Far Eastern Theater recently.

Cpl. Lord, who is married and father of three children, is a cook in a Korean mess hall that handles meals for 3,500 servicemen. He works one day and is off two.

According to his letter, Pusan is processing center for men returning to the United States on the rotation plan. It is being built up on men en route direct from there to America instead of making a stop-over in Japan.

Cpl. Lord points out the extreme hardships and privations the average Korean endures trying to make a mere existence. These are just some of his impressions after a few days over at Pusan:

"The people are miserably poor except for a few who are in the black market activities. I took a ride yesterday with a truck to where they get the cinders for the road here in camp and you should have seen them (Koreans) picking up little pieces of coal no larger than nuts out of the cinders.

"These were old women with babies tied on their backs and little kids the size of Diddle and Nanny" (His own two children in North Carolina). "They were this way for cooking. I saw an old man sitting there for a week with a load of siffers."

"Their farms here would be a joke in the U.S.A. I haven't seen a plot that was 100 feet square. The main crop here is rice. They eat it about three times a day."

"When you go outside the gate you immediately meet a flock of Koreans who want to buy PX supplies (Post Exchange) or else sell you something. Anything from lighters, pen and pencils to camera or a date with a Korean girl. 'Howie Mac' they call them."

"It is hard to understand them sometimes as they speak a couple of English words and millions of Korean words in self-defense."

These were listed as follows: "Chop chop," "eat," "Shoon," "Hullo," "Hullo," "Hullo."

Cpl. Lord described the homes and houses of the Koreans as small, huddled up huts with wooden sides and tin or straw roofs. The floors are either covered with mats or are bare.

"I went into a couple out of curiosity," he writes. "You have to take off your shoes outside and carry them with you."

This is how Mr. Lord describes the transportation and roads in Korea:

"There are very few paved roads, and they are right down the middle. A 1932 Ford is a very modern taxi. The way they bond their dogs you would think they must have had the idea. Nearly every dog has a half dozen kids latching onto the spine. They walk, crawl, and run. They are very fat and usually black haired."

The truck driver paid Cpl. Lord that he ran over a Korean child. The driver filled out an accident report and didn't hear anything from him since. Cpl. Lord writes that he has seen a civilian policeman and M.P.'s. In writing about the Korean traditions, it brings to mind

THE SANFORD HERALD Thurs., Apr. 9, 1953 Page 7 Dade County Sheriff Cleared Of Charges

MIAMI (AP)—Dade County Sheriff Thomas J. Kelly has been cleared of election campaign charges in a ruling by Circuit Judge George E. Holt.

A grand jury Tuesday reported to Circuit Judge George E. Holt that the investigation of the grand jury thoroughly exonerates Sheriff Kelly of charges which were made against him.

The charges were circulated during final days of the heated campaign for the Democratic nomination for sheriff last May. Kelly won by a wide margin.

The grand jury said it made its interim report for the reason that it believes the interest of good law enforcement can be best served by clearing the public mind of these facts to the public.

It said another person and not Kelly was arrested by Miami police on or about February, 1948, in the neighborhood of N. E. 40th St. and the old Irving estate.

The county commission, following a meeting with the grand jury, recommended that the budget board allocate an additional $100,000 to aid the sheriff's office in law enforcement.

Oviedo Woman's Club To Have Birthday

OVIEDO (Special)—One of the major affairs of the year will take place on Friday, April 10, when the members of the Oviedo Woman's Club will gather at the City Hall Memorial building to celebrate their annual birthday party.

The membership has been divided into four groups. Each group has had a meeting and prepared their costumes and skills for the affair. A jolly surprise is in store for all this party, measuring up to the merits of those in previous years, will be well worth the effort of all members to attend.

Mrs. Max Lehnart is chairman of the luncheon committee. She is being assisted by Mrs. H. G. Smith, Mrs. C. R. Clout, Mrs. George C. Means, Mrs. John Coulter Jr., and Mrs. Alex Lehnart. The reputation these ladies have as cooks will warrant a most delicious array of food, too. So, ladies, get out those costumes, whatever they might be and come!

Television on theater screens is achieved by two processes, one of which reflects the scene from a high powered TV tube on the big screen through lenses, and the other which uses film in a rapid developing process where the film is shown off screen after being photographed from the TV tube.

The Amazon River is 100 miles wide near its mouth.

ARE WE NEXT, MR. VIVISECTOR?

"We aren't human of course, we're just dogs, but we do have feelings. We get hurt, sometimes we're sick. We get hungry and thirsty. We can stand those things. But vivisection is too awful even for a dog. Spare us, we beg you."

You've used us for hundreds of years. Millions of us have writhed in agony while you tested this and that. We've been cut, bled, boiled, frozen, crushed and gassed—but you haven't learned much about humans from us. We're dogs.

You know we'd die for you. We always have, when called on, for that's how dogs are. We ask on little of you in return: just to be spared the trip from which no dog ever returns the same—to bark again, to run again, to wag again.

Maybe we'll live when you're through with us. We hope not. Maybe we'll even get an anesthetic while the worst is going on. But we'll be conscious again all too soon. We can't tell you then how much we hurt or where. We can only lie in our cages and suffer, wondering in our puzzled way what we did to deserve such pain.

Is vivisection really necessary? Can't you, the wise and mighty men of science, find some way to help humanity without torturing us? Please! We didn't ask to be born. We can't say how or when we will die. Humans decide that. We aren't masters of our fate. We're just dogs. Listen, won't you, to our prayer:

If you, our god, can't give us a heaven on earth, which is lost and a master to serve, then grant us the very least and the lowliest of us deserve: a quick and painless death.

No matter what you have been told about vivisection, it is an agonizing ordeal for animals. Anesthetics are not possible in certain kinds of work, for scientific figures prove subjects are put to sleep in only 5 of every 100 experiments.

Vivisection as an aid to medicine and surgery is questioned by a large number of physicians and surgeons, some of whom are helping to pay for this advertisement. There are those who say it does more harm than good.

If you believe medical students must use living animals for practice, you have been misinformed. Such vivisection has been forbidden by law in England since 1876, yet who would question the skill of British surgeons?

The cruelty of vivisection should be stopped. Unnecessary suffering has no place in our civilization. Just as anti-cruelty societies fight against abuse of work, for scientific figures prove subjects are put to sleep in only 5 of every 100 experiments.

CROSS COUNTRY CHATTER

with Mac White

It was pretty late and I was pulling along near Howard with a cargo of assorted canned goods, bound from Pensacola to Ocala. The town traffic had been thick and I was a bit behind schedule. A few miles out of Perry, I began seeing shadows where there weren't any shadows so I sped to inspect. Mac, my driver, pulled out the shoulder and sleep for fifteen minutes or you hit a coffee shop. I dismounted the trailer and looked at Perry.

There were four other customers in this gray steam two other truck drivers and a teamster and his blonde date. The truck drivers were talking.

"So I jammed on my brakes, the other truck driver said, and just in time, brother. By gosh I missed a broom wagon which had dumped a hip."

The blonde looked at her eyes and her date looked at me.

"I chuckled and spoke to them over my left shoulder. 'It's all right,' I said. 'We've got a few more minutes of life left. Drivers have a little of our own. What he just said was 'I jammed on my brakes' and just in time, brother. I missed a broom wagon which had dumped a hip." The blonde's eyes sparkled. "It must be exciting," she said. "Having a trucker's job is exciting."

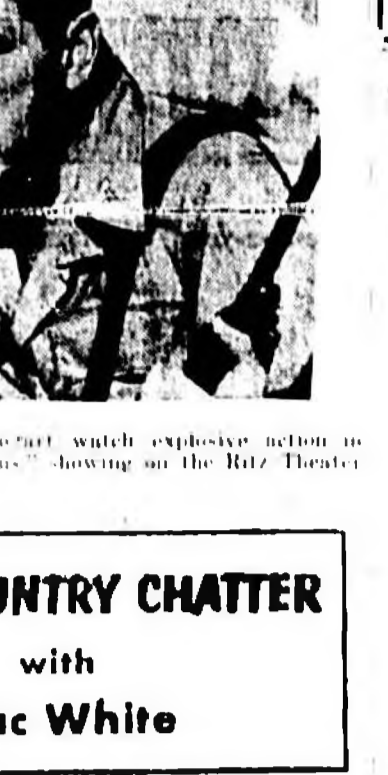

"Well, I said, 'The glamor was off. But we feel we're doing a pretty big job for millions of people. Including you and your boy friend. About everything you see in here came by truck.'"

The blonde looked at her eyes, her coffee, her bread and then at the stainless steel refrigerator and stove.

"Who's your boy friend, Jim?" she said to her boy friend. "I never thought of that."

I finished my coffee, nudged to her and then said to her boy friend, "When you hit the road, don't be a starter, just a driver."

"But," he said, "starliner." I said, "Trucker's job for guys who don't do their lights for oncoming traffic."

Industrial Board Is Reorganized By City Commission

Advisory Committee Report Is Approved

Upon recommendation of a four man committee appointed earlier this week, the City Commission last night voted to dissolve and reorganize the Sanford Industrial Board and in so doing boost its membership from 11 to 23 men.

Commissioners were meeting in a recessed session of Monday's special meeting.

Forrest Breckenridge, chairman of the special advisory committee, which also included as members Ralph Cowan, Bralley Ouhain and Wallace Dietrich, presented the following report to the Commission which seemed to be the basis for later action:

"This committee, having been appointed by Mayor Randall Chase, met immediately after a meeting of the City Commission on Monday night, and its findings and recommendations are reported as follows:

1. Members comprising the Board:
 - a. The following individuals represented by the offices designated, be appointed ex officio members of the Board: Seminole County Chamber of Commerce—president, manager, and industrial committee chairman; Sanford Industries Inc.—executive committee of three; Seminole County Jaycees—president or his designee; Sanford Merchants Association—president or his designee.

Option Agreement On Crown Paper Building Reached

Agreement for a 90 day option on the Crown Paper Co. building was given to Sanford Industries, Inc. by Louis Wellhouse, Jr., Crown Paper Company partner, last night.

Mr. Wellhouse and Mr. Cowan and a member by telephone last night after which the necessary papers were immediately placed in the mails for signatures.

The Crown Paper Company building, a brick building 200 feet long and 100 feet wide is located at Elm Avenue and Commercial Street. There is a mezzanine floor containing approximately 1,200 square feet. The building contains two offices and is very well constructed and has a built-in sprinkler system. A portion of the building is now being rented by Freeway Corporation. Mr. Cowan and other directors of Sanford Industries, Inc. expressed themselves as believing that the agreement reached with Crown Paper Company is a very favorable agreement and that the building is an excellent location for some manufacturing.

TOPS IN THE NATION ... was Florida Power & Light Co's 1952 safety record. Winning plaque from the National Safety Council was presented by (left to right), Nat H. Rankin, Director of the Southern Safety Conference and Maxwell W. Wells, president of the Florida Citizens Safety Council, to FPL. Accident prevention counselor L. P. Hoffman, in Orlando. FPL competed with combination gas and electric utilities serving many of the nation's largest metropolitan areas.

Oveta Hobby Becomes Member Of Cabinet

WASHINGTON—The Republican National Committee today unanimously elected former Rep. Leonard W. Hall of New York as its national chairman.

The committee accepted, with exception of regard, the resignation of C. Wesley Roberts of Kansas. It gave voice approval of a resolution expressing deep appreciation for Roberts' work and praising his "courage of integrity which we hold in high esteem."

In other developments in Washington the Senate unanimously approved the nomination of Oveta Culp Hobby to be the first secretary of health, education and welfare.

Mr. Hobby, 47, until now has been a member of President Eisenhower's Cabinet, having been appointed by the President to that position at the same time that he was appointed to be director of the Federal Security Administration.

Mrs. Hobby, a former House member, headed the Women's Army Corps during World War II.

The Senate also approved unanimously the nominations of Joseph P. Kamp, former member of the House from Connecticut, to be a member of the United States Tariff Commission for a term ending June 30 and Amber Nelson, lieutenant governor of Minnesota, to be administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration.

State Racket Squad To Help Curb Crime Requested By Ervin

Merchants Association Directors Vote To Affiliate With C. Of C.

The invitation from the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce for the Sanford Merchants Association to affiliate with the Chamber of Commerce was accepted at a meeting of the merchants' directors at the City Hall yesterday afternoon.

The purpose of the proposed merger was explained by Forrest Breckenridge, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, who pointed out that the plan had already been approved by the executive and finance committees of the Chamber of Commerce and by a meeting of the board of directors.

The Merchants Association directors voted to accept the invitation but to retain its own identity, officers and membership.

Ervin called the law enforcement agencies to create a central bureau of crime detection and identification.

A racket squad of not more than 100 men should be equipped with such crime detection aids as microscopes, cameras and equipment for making comparative tests of blood and clothing.

An advisory committee of two sheriffs, two chiefs of police, two prosecuting attorneys and one citizen representative on policy would be created.

Heading up this project would be the state law enforcement coordinating board made up of the governing secretary of state.

At a special meeting of the Board of Directors of Sanford Industries, Inc. held on Tuesday afternoon, the Board of Directors authorized the execution of the agreement. Wednesday morning, Mr. Wellhouse met with the directors of Sanford Industries, Inc.

R. T. Cowan, Forrest Breckenridge, Herman Jacobson, J. Bralley Ouhain and George W. Wellhouse, Jr. were also members of the Sanford Industrial Board. J. Bralley Ouhain acted as spokesman for the group in negotiating the terms of the option and of the lease.

The group was very much impressed by the fact that Mr. Wellhouse demonstrated a cooperative attitude and seemed to be genuinely interested in the industrial movement in Sanford. Mr. Wellhouse also stated that he had been approached a number of times in the past by prospective buyers of the building but that Sanford Industries, Inc. had presented by far the most business-like and fair approach.

Officials of Sanford Industries, Inc. indicated that they were in the thought of sub-leasing the above building to one of them. It is expected that a manufacturer will be selected to sub-lease the building well before the ninety day option period will have expired.

This is written to confirm the verbal agreement reached with you this morning, as follows:

"I, We are to pay you $300.00 for an option to enter into a lease with you for the Crown Paper Company building located on Elm Avenue by the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, in Sanford. The option period is to be from April 1, 1953 to July 1, 1953.

Mayfair Enjoys Its Best Season On Closing Eve

The best season Mayfair Inn has had under New York Giants management will come to a close following a luncheon on Monday, Charles G. Marlan, general manager, announced today.

Mr. Marlan also declared the hotel is "hooked solid" for next season during the months of January and February and the first half of March. Tentative opening date has been set for the early part of December.

Mayfair Inn guests will get together in New York City on June 13 at the Polo Grounds to watch a National League game between the New York Giants and the St. Louis Cardinals, against Eddie Stanky's Cardinals, general manager, who staged with the New York Giants last year.

Last year 654 Mayfair Inn guests attended a clash between the two outfits and all indications point to a much larger turnout this year.

Tomorrow night Barney Huxton's orchestra will provide the music for the final dance of the season at the hotel with local residents invited to be present.

In looking back on the second year of the Mayfair Inn during the six years he has been manager, Mr. Marlan said about $200,000 has been spent on improvements and redecorating. About $50,000 has already been spent at the Mayfair Inn Seminole County Club, and another $100,000 is planned.

City Commission Sees Experts On Sewage Problem

Because of Abel Wolman and other out-of-town visitors unable to attend last night's meeting of the City Commission in view of previous commitments, there was little discussion of the sewage problem.

At noon Commissioner and City officers met during an informal luncheon with Dr. W. H. Allen, engineering consultant from Baltimore, and professor of sanitary engineering at Johns Hopkins University.

Short Order Cook Killed As Result Of Love Triangle

MIAMI—A 40-year-old short order cook was shot and killed Thursday night in what police described as the stormy climax of a love triangle.

Miss Georgia Edwards, a waitress and a barefoot Puerto Rican.

The cook, George Edwards, was found in a pool of blood in the hallway of the Clayton Apartments after neighbors reported hearing four pistol shots and a woman's scream.

Homicide Detective T. J. Madden said that the Puerto Rican Jose Oscar Velaz, 22, returned barefoot in the building shortly after police arrived.

Madden quoted Velaz as saying he tried to prevent Edwards from attacking Miss Garet Wood with an ice pick, but that he did not kill him.

Miss Wood, a 21-year-old waitress who lived in the apartment building in the Clayton, told Madden that the short order cook was in love with her, but that he did not kill her.

Career Day Called Success By Those Attending Session

Seminole High School's "Career Day" yesterday was called a success by faculty, students and visitors after yesterday's final session.

The following words of praise were heard from SIS Principal Herman E. Morris' educational innovation, which is gaining in interest throughout the country according to Morris.

Over 400 student, teachers and visitors attended this session on Tuesday and Thursday at the high school in order to hear speakers outline their professions and vocations.

"From the reports handed in," Mr. Morris said, "this year's Career Day program was a success, and we are still seeking suggestions and improvements to make it an even better and better program in the future."

Both students and faculty members were prepared to make out a large list of questions to ask speakers and the program in general. Typical remarks were those written by one student, "Speakers were well chosen and knew their subjects and spoke with confidence and interest." "They were very interesting in the topics of speakers."

The teachers also suggested that the session be shortened and start earlier in the morning.

In yesterday afternoon's final session, eight new speakers out of 100 requirements of their profession and many other speakers from the morning session continued their courses.

Martin Harmon, WTRB program director, emphasized the large field of opportunities available to students in radio and allied fields. He stressed the importance of a liberal education, with particular emphasis on drama, speech, journalism and citizenship.

Ernest Southard of the Southward Fuel Co. called business the "bread of all fields." He pointed to the fact that a small business man must be able to hire himself.

U.S. Warns Free World Against Relaxing Guard

The U. S. warned the free world today against abandoning the policy of strength and unity because of demagogical promises from the Kremlin.

U. S. Delegate Ernest A. Brown told the U. N. International Political Committee that if the West's very policy of strength and unity which had brought about successes and that eventually could oblige the Soviet government to change its policies completely.

"Most of us feel the time will come when the Soviet government will find it necessary to modify its policy. It will do so because of our policy of strength and unity. We must not let a short-term gain tempt us to relax our guard."

Secretary of State A. J. Acheson declared that an "uncommon faith" in the policy of strength and unity should be maintained in the future.

"No intention to relax our guard," he declared. "We must stand united in the face of any attack which might jeopardize the talks at Pyongyang."

Crossed a speech by Russia, Andrei Y. Gromyko, who said that the U. S. should eventually abandon its policy of strength and unity and that it should be prepared to take up the Soviet government's demand for an immediate Korean armistice. Gromyko repeated the Western stand that there can be no peace in that war until it is based on the favorable terms.

Milwee Speaks On Hobbies At Youth Banquet Thursday

Children can find a great deal of worthwhile recreation right in their homes, if they will develop a worthwhile hobby, declared William T. Milwee, superintendent of public education, during a talk at a youth banquet held last night at the Central Baptist Church.

Mr. Milwee defined a hobby as "anything we like to do to the exclusion of all other things." No reward of any kind or sought except that of pleasure, enjoyment, and gratification, he added.

The school superintendent listed hobbies as being of mental, physical, and combination mental and physical types. As examples of those, he said that checkers, puzzles, reading, and collecting are in the mental category.

Fishing, swimming, walking, and tennis make up the physical, while a combination of the two would include construction of things and experiments in electricity and chemistry.

He pointed out the five conditions for a hobby which should be considered. These consist of strong interest, suitability for age and time, cost, and finally one that can be done successfully.

Mr. Milwee concluded by stating: "The best of all hobbies for mental improvement, for sharing the lives of others, for self-compassion and for protection against loneliness is the reading habit including the enjoyment of every kind of wholesome material."

Last night's program brought to a close youth week at the church with the young people in charge of all programs.

Importance Of City's Water Supply Is Pointed Out By Superintendent

The importance of the Sanford Water Department is pointed out to the life of the people of the community was pointed out today by E. H. Johnson, superintendent of the Water Department, who stated he has had several requests from persons in the area asking for details of the water supply.

Mr. Johnson in a letter to Sally Weider of DeBary, who had written to the City, wrote that the City of Sanford gets its water supply from deep wells along the Orlando Highway, about four miles south of Sanford.

There are at present seven wells, five of which are of eight inch size and two of 12 inch.

Two of them pump 105 gallons a minute, three pump 135 gallons, one can handle 400, and the seventh pumps 800 gallons each minute.

"We also have one new well located at the water plant from which we get 800 gallons per minute and a pumping apparatus that handles 1,000,000 gallons of water per day at the present time. This amount varies at different seasons of the year," he wrote.

Mr. Johnson explained how the water is pumped from the well field to the water plant in Sanford and there sent through the new concrete siphon, which takes out the hydrogen sulfide. Water then passes into the one million gallon reservoir from which it is pumped back through the chlorinator.

There it is treated with chlorine at the rate of five tenths of one part per million gallons as required by state law enforced by the State Board of Health. After chlorination, the water is pumped into an elevated tank that holds 200,000 gallons. The water sent back into this elevated tank is then let back into the water mains with an added gravity pressure.

Not all of the pathogenic bacteria in water are removed by sedimentation and filtration. Also clear water, which may not require sedimentation and filtration, contains such bacteria. For this purpose chlorine is in almost universal use for purifying water. This test is usually run with a comparator and the use of orthotolidine which gives the test tube certain colors which can be read with a comparator.

The operator at the plant must also take tests for the pH of the water. By this test the acidity or alkalinity of the water can be determined. "We use the same equipment, but a different dial and a different agent instead of orthotolidine," he said.

'Improvement Week' For Mail Boxes Set

The Post Office Department has designated the week of April 12-14, 1953 as "Rural Mail Box Improvement Week." It was announced today by Postmaster Joel Field.

Mr. Field pointed out that rural mail boxes which are not properly erected or in good condition retard the delivery of mail and expose it to damage from the weather.

"It is especially desirable that the boxes be maintained in a condition that will assure proper protection to mail placed therein that the names of box owners is inscribed on the side of the boxes visible to the carrier as he approaches them, and that the boxes and their supports be kept painted," Mr. Field explained.

Mr. Field requested all rural patrons to check the condition of their mail boxes with the view of improvement not only for the protection of their mail but to present a more attractive appearance throughout the community.
