Tyson drugged before TV show

NEW YORK — Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson says his estranged wife, actress Robin Givens, and her mother encouraged him to take prescription drugs before a network television interview, making him appear dazed and pathetic, reports said today.

Givens, who filed for divorce to end their rocky eight-month marriage in California Friday, said she wants Tyson back but the champion said absolutely not.

Tyson told the New York Post he took the tranquilizer Thorazine and lithium, prescribed for manic depression, before the Sept. 30 ABC-TV broadcast of 20/20 with Barbara Walters. He said Givens and her mother, Ruth Roper, gave it to him through a friend, Rory Holloway.

Winner weighs 633 pounds

SAN FRANCISCO — A Canadian spokesman says the world's biggest 1988 pumpkin, a 633-pound behemoth grown in Nova Scotia, was not the product of steroids.

The gargantuan gourd was grown by Keith Chappel, 56, Bridgewater, a former school teacher whose pumpkin was declared this year's world champ on Monday, finishing 30 pounds ahead of Larry Harbour of Granville Ferry, Nova Scotia.

The bizarre in-bred question of steroid use arose because muscular Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson was stripped of his Olympic gold medal after testing positive for the banned growth-inducing drug.

Charlie Collier (right), field supervisor for the city of Sanford, shows plans with Jan Henry Tuesday morning at Fort Meillon Park near construction work at the baseball field concession stand.

SANFORD — The $10-million Fort Meillon Park should be completed by Thanksgiving, following acceptance of the city commission Monday night's funds for playground equipment, paving and an irrigation system.

The commission also approved the concept of the so-called "over-season" activation program, with specifics of the program to be brought back to the city manager, Frank Fusco, for commission approval.

The park project, estimated to cost about $10 million, includes playground equipment, paving and an irrigation system. The project will be completed by Thanksgiving.

Henry said that although state monies are available for establishing new parks, there is no money for park upkeep or improvement, and the trust fund was the only money available for this project.

Henry said a playground to consist of equipment designed for use as well as adult children will be completed by Thanksgiving.

Questions raised concerning readjusting school zone lines

LAKE MARY — Plans to adjust 111 miles of school zone lines in Lake Mary and Seminole County, Fla., have raised questions about the safety of the changes.

The Florida Department of Transportation (FDOT) is the lead agency for the project.

FDOT is working with the Florida Department of Education (FDOE) to adjust school zone lines in Lake Mary, Seminole County, and other areas. The project is part of a larger effort to adjust school zone lines throughout the state.

Parents are concerned that children who are currently in school zones will be affected by the changes. Some parents are worried that the changes will result in longer commutes for their children.

Parents are also concerned that the changes will result in more traffic accidents. They are worried that the changes will result in more children being injured or killed.

Stanley Frazer, president of the Seminole County Board of Education, said that parents are concerned about the disruption of their children's education if the changes result in longer commutes.

Frazer said that the changes will result in more traffic accidents. He is worried that the changes will result in more children being injured or killed.

Fire inspection issue settled

SANFORD — Seminole County legal attorneys have received the authorization to proceed to prevent the city of Lake Mary from filing for fire inspection.

State Department of Insurance (DOI) attorney and declarator signed by the city. The city has the right under state statutes to proceed with the inspection.

The issue originated in 1982 when the city council voted 4-2 that there was no reason to believe fire safety conditions existed at a Fern Park lawyer's office. The city then filed for fire inspection.

Lake Mary officials to review postal center plans

By SANDRA BOUCHAHINE
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The Lake Mary Planning and Zoning Commission will review postal center plans for the proposed $100-million development on Rindler Road this evening.

Although the commission will review the plans, it does not have to go through the zoning process. Mayor Dick Fess said that the postal officials have agreed to give as a courtesy a review of their plans and recommendations.

Lake Mary City Planner Matt West said that the officials have presented copies of the plans for the 400,000 square foot building which they have put out to bid for construction. According to Gary Bennett, postal operations analyst in Orlando, the facility is expected to be completed by December and will take between 18 and 24 months to complete.

The facility comes on the heels of a Rindler Road development, planned to be built by the city. The development will include a two-story office building, a two-story retail building, and a two-story residential building. The total cost of the development is $100 million.

West said a major issue to be discussed at the planning and zoning meeting is whether cuts for the widened Rindler Road. They could create a problem for the increased truck traffic coming into the proposed postal center from Lake Mary, Rindler and West said.

Asset freeze may aid recovery of money

MIAMI — Investigators on the trail of $20 million allegedly stolen by financier Henry Gherman said they froze two foreign bank accounts with millions of dollars he controlled and may be able to recover much of the missing cash.

Gherman, 52, a fugitive since August, was arrested Saturday in Japan after a stay in Taiwan, where he apparently did not try to hide his identity and spent lavishly at one hotel.

James Feltman, a Miami accountant and court-appointed receiver for Gherman's businesses, said the two accounts, plus a third recently uncovered, was "in the millions."

The money was deposited in international banks doing business in countries well known for their strict banking secrecy, he said.

Feltman said when Gherman tried to withdraw cash from an account, he found the money was frozen, and knew that someone was following his money trail.

Fly experiments show promise

GAINESVILLE — A red-eyed Brazilian fly has succeeded in killing the mole cricket blamed for $46 million damage to the turf and golf industries and could become a key weapon in fighting the pest, researchers said Monday.

Scientists at the University of Florida released the fly in April, hoping the insect would be attracted to the mole cricket's mating call and kill its larvae.

The mole cricket causes at least $46 million damage a year to Florida golf courses, commercial turf operations, pastures and vegetable fields.

Howard Frank, project coordinator at the Institute of Food and Agriculture Sciences, said the goal is similar to most biological control efforts: cutting the mole cricket population to a point where it is no longer damaging.

Though the project is still being evaluated, researchers believe the red-eyed Brazilian fly will help control mole crickets. "We've reached step one, and so far the project has progressed just as we'd hoped," Frank said.

Foreign jobs scam in south Florida

MIAMI — Several south Florida firms claiming to help place people in overseas jobs have closed after collecting thousands of dollars in fees and hundreds of complaints, it was reported Monday.

Although many companies advertise overseas jobs — promising high salaries and low taxes — they fail to deliver, The Miami Herald reported.

"I was out of work for a long time. It sounded good to me," said Clydell McPeak, an unemployed engineer from Sartillo, Texas, who sent $375 to a Hollywood, Fla., firm looking for a job overseas.

He told the newspaper the pre-paid ticket he was promised to Miami from Dallas was never delivered and he never heard from anyone on his placement.

Among the firms was Discovery Job Search, which closed two months ago after collecting $200,000 in fees but doing little to find jobs, a former manager said.

Missing link clues may come from ocean

TALLAHASSEE — Two Florida State University scientists say studying the ocean floor may provide clues to help investigate the controversial "missing link" theory of evolution.

"That has always been an argument against evolution — there is no firm evidence of transitions," Dr. William C. Parker says of research he and Dr. Anthony J. Arnold of the FSU geology department are pursuing.

Parker says the key to demonstrating that species evolve is to track an organism's changes over a period of a million years, but it often is difficult to find enough fossilized evidence to chart the changes in a species.

The "missing link" theory holds that a yet-to-be discovered ancestor of modern man holds the key to the evolutionary changes that separated humans from their ape cousins.

Parker and Arnold say the key to finding the missing link may be in their work with tiny, single-cell marine fossils less than a millimeter in diameter found in sediment thousands of feet below the surface of equatorial oceans.

Judge delays diver's trial

TAMPA — A judge has delayed the drunken-driving manslaughter trial of former Olympic diver Bruce Kimball and will hold a test to determine if widespread publicity about the case would preclude a fair trial.

Kimball allegedly was intoxicated and slammed his car into a crowd of youths Aug. 1 in nearby Brandon, killea about the chances of keeping the trial in Tampa.

Potential jurors are not disqualified merely because they have heard or read about a criminal case. What matters is whether they have formed opinions about the case based on the news reports and whether they could put those opinions aside.

NASA: O-ring joints did 'OK'

Engineers boast about Discovery's boosters

By WILLIAM HARWOOD
United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL — Engineers worked Monday to finish taking apart the shuttle Discovery's burned-out boosters and with the job almost done, NASA officials said the giant rockets appear to have performed as advertised.

By early Monday, six of eight redesigned O-ring joints had been inspected and John Thomas, the NASA engineer in charge of the booster redesign project, said "they did their job OK."

"It looks super," he said of Discovery's right-side rocket. "We got a look at the left side (Sunday) and the right side this morning. No gases reached the O-rings on any joint."

Thomas was referring to the rockets' six

"field" joints. It was a field joint failure that triggered the Challenger accident, he said.

A complete assessment would not be available until Tuesday, after engineers removed the nozzles at the base of each booster to gain access to a different type O-ring seal called a case-to-nozzle joint. Thomas said, As of late Monday afternoon, that work had not yet started.

The 14-story rockets burned about 1.1 million pounds of fuel each during the two minutes they fired Sept. 29 to lift Discovery off the launch pad on the first American manned space flight since Challenger exploded during takeoff Jan. 28, 1986.

Discovery's five-man crew wrapped up the historic mission with a flawless landing Oct. 3 at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., and the orbiter was flown back to the Kennedy Space Center Saturday atop a 747 jumbo jet.

The space shuttle was towed to its hangar early Sunday and a NASA spokeswoman said Monday engineers were busy with inspections to get an idea of what work will be needed to get the ship ready for its next flight in February.

But with the shuttle Atlantis scheduled to blast off about Nov. 19 on the second post-Challenger flight, engineers were especially anxious to find out how Discovery's redesigned boosters withstood their trial by fire.

Shuttle boosters are made up of four fuel segments bolted together at three O-ring "field joints," so named because the rockets are put together at the Kennedy Space Center — in the field — and it was the rupture of a field joint that doomed Challenger.

In the wake of the Challenger disaster, the giant boosters were redesigned to prevent a repeat of the worst disaster in the history of space flight and officials said they had to work perfectly during Discovery's launching to avoid additional delays.

Optometrists win prescription appeal

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Florida optometrists won another victory Monday in their battle to retain a 1986 state law that allows them to dispense certain prescription drugs, a procedure opposed by ophthalmologists.

In 22-page opinion, the First Appeals Court upheld a ruling that said the state Department of Professional Regulation had the authority to implement the law and invalidated arguments advanced by opponents of the statute.

The law allows optometrists who obtain special certification from DPR to dispense certain prescription drugs — mostly ointments and eyedrops — in the course of treating a patient.

Optometrists could not, for example, prescribe a pain-killer taken by mouth or other drugs not related to treatment of an eye disorder.

Mark Landreth, the executive director of the Florida Optometric Association, called the court ruling "one more step" in the already lengthy process of validating the state law.

Until the law was challenged by the Florida Society of Ophthalmologists and the Florida Medical Association, about 850 optometrists had applied with DPR for a special certificate that would allow them to dispense certain prescription drugs, Landreth said.

No applications have been accepted while the law is being contested.

The appeal challenged a decision by the Florida Board of Optometry that dismissed efforts to halt implementation of the law.

Doctors and ophthalmologists alleged in their protest that they would sustain economic hardship if the law were implemented and that the quality of eye care in Florida would decrease.

But the appeals court said the ophthalmologists' probable drop in income was not grounds for overturning the statute and said opponents of the law had failed to produce any evidence to show eye care quality would diminish.

The opinion also said the alleged economic injury "does not fall into the zone protected by applicable statutes."

Teachers list top books

United Press International

KEY BISCAYNE — "Huckleberry Finn," "Charlotte's Web," Dr. Seuss and Mother Goose top a list of 27 books cited by teachers and principals Monday as works to be read by students before they graduate high school.

A survey of teachers and principals named "Charlotte's Web" for primary and elementary students, "Huckleberry Finn" for junior and senior high school students and "Where the Wild Things Are" for pre-school and primary grades.

The best book list was compiled during a weekend conference on education excellence sponsored by Burger King Corp. and attended by teachers and principals representing each state.

The list includes works by classic writers such as William Shakespeare and Mark Twain and contemporary authors Judy Blume and J.D. Salinger. Two books won Pulitzer Prizes.

Preliminary titles for the 1989 were reviewed by educators at the symposium, from which the final list was assembled.

Several participants said the process of selecting a few books for five grade levels, from pre-school through high school, resulted in some well-known authors, such as Ernest Hemingway and F. Scott Fitzgerald, being excluded.

"These are the books that represent what a child should be expected to read by the time they reach high school," said Donald Weeks, principal of the Columbia City, Ind., high school. "That doesn't mean there aren't a lot more."

Robert Kane, principal of Bonton High School in New Jersey, said the list should help parents and students prepare by making them aware of what reading material is expected for promotion to the next grade.

Most of the authors on the list are American, perhaps reflecting the lack of foreign literature courses in some American schools, Kane said.

"I think the list spells probably Americanism," Weeks said. "We're about being part of the United States."

Education leads government job gains

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — The local public education sector is responsible for the lion's share of the increase in the number of government workers in Florida this year, a state economist said Monday.

"If [local education] is by far the fastest-growing segment," said Rebecca Rust, an economic analyst for the state Department of Labor, adding there was "no comparison" between the local government growth rate and federal and state increases.

Figures show the total number of government workers in Florida in August was about 771,000, compared with 733,500 for the same month in 1987, an increase of slightly more than 5 percent.

Overall, October figures show people who work for federal, state or local governments make up the third largest sector in Florida's workforce, which has a total of about 5.1 million workers.

Trade and service sectors are the leading two job categories in the state, each with a workforce of about 1.4 million people. The manufacturing sector places fourth with about 542,000 employees.

Rust said employment in the local government sector is broken down into three areas — hospital, education and other.

She said August 1988 figures show local education employment increased 8.3 percent from the same month in the previous year, while the hospital and "other" categories increased 3.8 percent and 2.6 percent.

Rust also said she thought Florida's rapidly increasing population is the key factor in the increase in the local public education employment rate.

She said until a couple of years ago, the services and trades sector and the financial sector — which includes real estate — were the top employment areas in the state.

But the financial sector has fallen behind government and Rust says there is no reason to expect the education sector will not continue to increase.

She said there has been little rise in the state or federal employment area this year.

The state now has an estimated population of 13 million and that number is expected to continue to rise rapidly in the next decade.

Figures from state Department of Education officials show the number of teachers in Florida jumped from 88,973 in the fall of 1985 to 95,857 in the fall of 1987.

The total number of teachers employed this fall from kindergarten through the 12th grade will not be available until next month, officials said.

POLICE BRIEFS

Bicyclist arrested

LAKE MARY — A 21-year-old Sanford man is charged with child abuse by contributing to the delinquency of a minor in addition to possession of stolen credit cards.

Eugene E. Allgood, 488 Orange Blvd., was stopped as he rode a bicycle on Lake Mary Boulevard, Lake Mary, at about 12:50 a.m. Police determined that a 14-year-old boy who was riding on the same bicycle had been reported missing from Tampa.

In a search of Allgood, police reported five credit cards that were stolen from a Seminole County man earlier this month. Allgood told police he was taking the boy to his (Allgood's) mother's house in Sanford when they were stopped. Police took custody of the boy.

Man charged with possession of drugs

SANFORD — A man who said he lives in the streets was arrested on narcotics charges after a Seminole County sheriff's deputy saw him try to discard two matchboxes.

The deputy said one box held cocaine and two razor blades. The second box held marijuana.

Ernest Smith, 22, was confronted by the deputies outside 2043 Sipes Avenue, Sanford, at about 2 a.m. today. When first spotted Smith, the deputy said, was taking two bicycles from a yard at that location. He ran and was captured about 150 yards from the discarded bicycles, a sheriff's report said.

Smith is charged with possession of cocaine and marijuana. Bond is $2,000.

Man jailed for theft of toy cars

LONGWOOD — A Longwood police investigation into the theft of two radio controlled cars and two controllers from Let's Putt America has brought the arrest of a 19-year-old man.

Police also report that Stanley Joseph Moan, of Coconut Creek, had a 17-year-old accomplice in the burglary.

Moan was arrested at the police station at 10:30 a.m. Monday. He is charged with burglary and theft. The cars and controllers are valued at $500. The burglarized business is located at 1030 W. State Road 434, Longwood.

Police track down stolen cars

By SUSAN LODEN

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Altamonte Springs police have recovered six stolen cars in that city.

Police who tracked down a woman suspected of firing a shot outside Autumn Run Apartments, Altamonte Springs, also charged her and her boyfriend in connection with theft of three of the cars recovered by police Sunday.

The shooting occurred at 9 p.m. Sunday when the woman, police said, fired a single shot from a car. The shot was aimed at a group of people at the apartment complex. The suspect was said to be angry because girls in the group had talked to her boyfriend, police said. When questioning the boyfriend, police determined that he and the woman had possession of three stolen cars, police spokesman Jeff Hawkins said.

The cars were recovered near the apartment complex, as was a gun believed used in the shooting. Both suspects, who are from Altamonte Springs, were captured in the same area. Both are charged with grand theft auto. The woman, Stacey Marie Haase, of 503-C Fenton Place, 18, is also charged with aggravated assault with a firearm. The man Damon M. Bates, 18, of the same address, is also charged as an accessory to the aggravated assault. Both arrests were made at about midnight Sunday. Bond for each is $2,000.

In an apparently unrelated incident, Altamonte Springs also recovered three more stolen cars Sunday night.

The stripped cars were found in an orange grove off State Road 434, Hawkins said.

The two Mazdas and one Toyota have a combined value of $30,000. The location where they were found is the same location where other vehicles have recently been found under similar circumstances, Hawkins said. The investigation continues.

Suggs funeral services Friday

SANFORD — Funeral services for Chuck Suggs are scheduled Friday at Holy Cross Lutheran Church, 760 Sun Drive, Lake Mary. Visitation with the 15-year-old's family is set for Thursday at Gramkow Funeral Home, 130 W. Airport Boulevard, Sanford.

The time of both events is not set, and hinges on the arrival time from London of Suggs' body, accompanied by his family. That arrival time has not been established, but it is expected to be sometime

Thursday. Suggs died Monday morning in London, two months after the Lake Mary teenager received a heart-lung transplant, after waiting there for the surgery for about one year. The transplanted heart and lungs rejected Suggs' body and the lungs developed an infection.

A Gramkow spokesman said the church will seat 200. Chairs will be placed outside and a public address system will be utilized to accommodate an overflow crowd.

Striking paperworkers decide to end their 16-month walkout

United Press International

JAY, Maine — Striking paperworkers, facing a loss of union support and strike pay, have decided to end their bitter 16-month walkout against International Paper Co., but hard feelings appeared likely to remain.

"I don't like this at all," said John Chouinard, an instrument technician and one of the 3,500 workers involved in the strike that affected International Paper plants in four states. "In fact, if I can find something else decent in the area I'm not going back."

The company welcomed the end of the walkout Monday, but said it would only have back union members as openings became available in its force of replacement workers hired during the strike.

Union officials said the decision to end the strike was made after meetings with local union executives from around the nation Sunday.

"The meeting did not yield the support we felt we needed to continue," said Felix Jacques, executive vice president of Local 14 of the United Paperworkers International union in Jay.

"We also found that the $55 (weekly strike benefits) would go on for six more weeks, but would then pause until January because of some debts," he said.

"I think we could have won this. I really believe it," said Chouinard.

City Commission agrees to provide water

By BRAD CHURCH
Herald City Editor

SANFORD — The City Commission agreed Monday night to provide water service to two properties outside the city limits, although it will require one owner to install a bigger water line than his development will need.

Miller Brothers Partnership plans to build a Handy Way convenience store at the intersection of state roads 46 and 415 east of Sanford and needs city water because the county does not have water service in that area.

The city recently agreed to furnish water to the auto auction on S.R. 46 (East 25th Street) in the area and Miller Brothers offered to install an eight-inch water main from the auction to its property, a distance of approximately 1,600 feet.

However, commissioners Whitey Eckstein and A.A. McClanahan argued that the line to the auction is a 10-inch line and should be continued at that size. The other commissioners agreed.

Don Davis, representing Miller Brothers, said the convenience store would be a prototype for the company. It will be 3,000 square feet instead of the usual 2,500, will include substantial window areas, and will have double islands for gasoline pumps.

In another action, the commission also approved furnishing water to property at 3620 Sanford Ave., owned by Charles and Shirley Whittle.

The Whittles requested annexation and were approved earlier, but the annexation was overturned by Seminole District Court after the county challenged it.

Grindle steps up to the blackboard

By CAROL RUMSEY

SANFORD — Eighth graders at Lakeview Middle School heard on Monday how an idea becomes law from someone who should know.

State Rep. Art Grindle took students of Jane Courlas' American history class through the legislative process step by step. Although students are currently immersed in studies of the Colonial period, Courlas saw the coming elections as an opportunity to mix classroom studies with current issues.

Students' first reaction to Grindle — it's the "I want to sell you a car" guy Central Florida families apparently have passed down stories of Grindle's previous days as a television pitchman. Grindle displayed some of that old enthusiasm to students as he paced, raised his arms, deepened his voice, and challenged them to become involved.

How youngsters first knew of Grindle matters little to Courlas. What does concern her is that they know what the issues are and who is representing them. Grindle, a Republican who has represented portions of Seminole County since 1982, was re-elected in September.

"I'm concerned because people don't vote," said Courlas. "I want to impress upon kids the importance of participating in the democratic process." A whole week will be devoted to the subject in November. Class elections, discussions and viewings of the presidential debate are planned. One goal is to charge students up for participation in student council and other school and community activities.

State Rep. Art Grindle came to talk to Jan Courlas' American History class at Lakeview Middle School Monday. Grindle imparted knowledge of the legislative process to Jennifer Stump, an eighth grader at Lakeview.

AIDS protest set at FDA headquarters

United Press International

ROCKVILLE, Md. — Protesters demanding faster access to AIDS treatments braced for mass arrests at the Food and Drug Administration today in a staged attempt to take over the regulatory agency's headquarters.

Richard Wood, a legal aide for the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, warned in advance of the demonstration that as many as 2,000 activists from across the country would approach the large FDA building "in waves."

"Our conservative estimate is that 300 to 400 people will be arrested," Wood said Monday, stressing the protest would be "non-violent, civil disobedience."

The activists, accusing the FDA under President Reagan of dragging its feet in response to the deadly AIDS epidemic, are calling on the agency to loosen its regulatory process for the approval of new drugs.

"I would not say the FDA has acted in spite or with malice, but by working by the letter of the law rather than by seeing the big picture, it has resulted in many patients not getting the treatment they need," said Wood, noting that only one drug, AZT, has received federal approval to fight AIDS.

FDA officials and police in Montgomery County, Md., in whose jurisdiction the headquarters lies outside the nation's capital, were not available for comment on advance plans to handle the massive demonstration.

In Washington Monday, there were no reported arrests as hundreds of activists gathered in front of the Health and Human Services Department — empty for the Columbus Day holiday — to sing protest songs and to listen to public criticism of administration AIDS policies.

Wood said, "We hope this will make the FDA more aware of the greater need of AIDS patients, of the great outcry not being heard. They need to do as much as is humanly possible as quickly as possible to provide drugs to people who need them."

In the current election year, Reagan's administration has responded to the crisis with a preliminary proposal to cut the extent of testing required to bring a new drug to market. Vice President George Bush, who leads a Task Force on Regulatory Relief, is expected to announce some action on the plan during these final weeks of his Republican presidential campaign, FDA officials said.

Donald McLearn, an FDA spokesman, said in a recent interview the proposal could include a post-approval phase to obtain additional data, which would let the agency "straddle a very difficult line" in getting drugs to market.

"These people are very hysterical. I guess is the term, about having a disease for which there is no known cure," McLearn said. "We have to balance (such concerns) with the legal requirement that the drugs we license are safe and effective."

The FDA gave final approval March 20, 1987, for prescription sale of AZT, which was developed in 1964 as an anti-cancer drug. In 1985 scientists found it prevents reproduction of the AIDS virus in cells, and it now is sold under the name Retrovir by Burroughs Wellcome Co. of Research Triangle Park, N.C.

The drug, however, is very expensive and has unknown long-term effects with side effects that can include anemia and suppression of bone marrow.

As of Oct. 3, the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta said 74,809 people nationwide had been diagnosed with acquired immune deficiency syndrome since 1981; 42,142 had died. An estimated 1.5 million Americans are infected by the AIDS virus and about 400 new cases of the disease are reported weekly.

The National Gay and Lesbian Task Force and other groups want to fight the epidemic with a nationalized health care system for all Americans regardless of ability to pay.

Dr. Zooforus came to talk to Hamilton Elementary kindergartners about otters Monday. Zooforus appears for the Central Florida Zoo to impart information about exhibits and provide goodwill for all. He spoke Monday about the new otter exhibit at the zoo.

U.S. icebreaker to sail disputed Northwest Passage

United Press International

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — The Coast Guard icebreaker Polar Star, stranded after rescuing two icebound Canadian ships, has received permission to sail through the disputed Northwest Passage, avoiding a repeat of an incident that chilled North American relations three years ago.

"The Canadian government received the request for passage late (Monday)," said Marcel Belec, duty officer in the Department of External Affairs in Ottawa. "Because of ice conditions, the Canadian government has granted permission to the Polar Star to pass through the Northwest Passage."

Canada claims the Northwest Passage — a legendary 1,000-mile stretch of water between Canada's mainland and its northern islands — as its own. The United States considers it an international waterway.

State Department officials in Washington refused comment Monday on the Polar Star.

A Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker, the John A. Macdonald, will accompany the Polar Star and its 157 officers and crew across the arctic to the Atlantic, said Christian Sarrazin, Department of External Affairs spokesman in Ottawa.

The 399-foot Polar Star, which the Coast Guard says is the world's most powerful conventionally powered icebreaker, was at Alaska's giant oil field at Prudhoe Bay on Monday, preparing to sail east today to meet the Canadian icebreaker at Demarcation Point in the Beaufort Sea, where Alaska and the Yukon Territory meet.

Sarrazin said the United States, through its Embassy in Ottawa, requested permission to sail through Canadian waters. He said the prime minister was consulted in the decision made by Secretary of State for External Affairs Joe Clark.

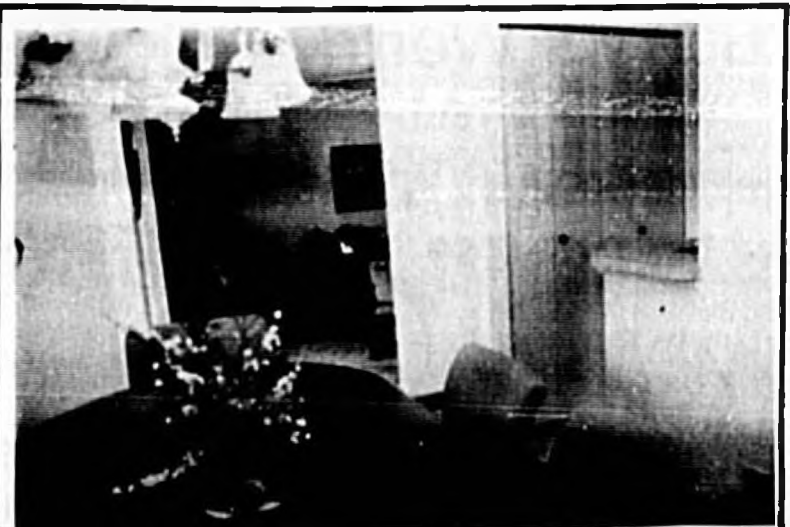

It was a particularly sensitive issue because the Polar Star's sister ship, Polar Sea, caused a furor in Canada when it sailed the Northwest Passage in 1985 without permission.

U.S. officials said they were concerned that a request for permission to sail the passage would be a tacit admission that it is, in fact, under Canadian control.

But the Polar Star had gotten in trouble with the ice this year only after sailing to the aid of two trapped Canadian icebreakers, and permission for the U.S. ship to traverse the passage was granted partly because of its assistance to the icebound Canadian ships. Sarrazin said.

"The Polar Star came to assist the Canadian ships in distress, so Canada was anxious to give a response as soon as possible," he said.

The alternative to sailing through the passage, with or without Canadian permission, was to abandon the Polar Star in arctic waters for the winter with a skeleton crew, a move the Coast Guard said Sunday was a last resort.

Something in air for new president

If the new president pauses to cough while taking the oath of office next January, please excuse him. It could be the air he has to breathe.

Washington, D.C., along with many other American cities, has been smoggy in 1988 than in recent years. The presidential cough will be a reminder that serious environmental issues not only hang in the air. They'll be sitting atop the oval Office desk awaiting decisive action.

The heavier-than-usual smog in the nation's capital this year was the result of a hotter-than-usual summer. The heat, some scientists suspect, was a symptom of the global warming of the atmosphere caused by the "greenhouse effect."

While other scientists are skeptical about the connection between summer's high temperatures and the greenhouse effect, few question the greenhouse concept itself. Man-made gases are indeed trapping solar heat — as in a greenhouse — and raising the earth's temperature. The consequences are profound. If we don't do something, they'll be disastrous.

The challenge for the next president, as well as for Congress, lies in the fact that the gases causing the greenhouse effect are gases never before considered pollutants, gases such as carbon dioxide and methane. To control them, we may need measures more drastic than more efficient smokestacks or more sophisticated catalytic converter systems.

Dealing with the greenhouse effect will cost money — for emission controls, for conversion to cleaner fuels, for efforts to profoundly change our energy-consuming habits.

The next president may have to begin leading the nation away from its dependence on fossil fuels. He may have to serve as a catalyst for other nations, because the greenhouse effect, along with most environmental problems, doesn't observe national boundaries.

Acid rain is yet another example of a critical international problem. Acid rain produced in this country affects not only the regions near coal-burning electric power plants, primarily in the Midwest and Ohio Valley. Trees and lakes in Canada also are affected by rain laced with pollutants produced in this country. Forests and fish are dying, water supplies are affected. Floridians were astounded this summer to read that even the Sunshine State was affected by acid rain.

As with the greenhouse effect, it will cost billions to deal with the problem.

Canada and the United States have the resources to deal with acid rain, but it also will cost billions for less-developed nations to relinquish their dependence on dirty fossil fuels. Environmentalism is a luxury that places like Bangladesh and Haiti can scarcely afford. They will need our help.

Pesticide contamination of ground water, radon and other indoor air pollution, toxic pollutants in ground water, the loss of Amazon rain forests, ocean pollution: The list of environmental danger signs is long and growing longer. Fortunately, both Michael Dukakis and George Bush proclaim themselves environmentalists. Unfortunately for the man elected on Nov. 8, the next occupant of the Oval Office cannot rely on pious pronouncements and yet another study.

The next president will have to act. That means hard choices and lots of money.

Top court reviews discrimination law

WASHINGTON (DPA) — Are private acts of racial discrimination unconstitutional? The U.S. Supreme Court will face that question in an important case it has decided to review early in its new term, a case which may provide the first indication of how solid the court's conservative majority really is.

Last year the court heard arguments by Brenda Patterson, a black employee of the McClean Credit Union in Winston-Salem, N.C., that she had been the victim of racial harassment on the job and had been laid off when she complained.

Patterson did not bring her suit under the Civil Rights Act because that law, while prohibiting racial discrimination, does not allow for a jury trial or the collection of punitive damages and damages based on emotional suffering. Rather, she brought the suit under the broad terms of Section 1981 of the U.S. Code, which bars racial discrimination in private contracts.

A trial court dismissed Patterson's suit, saying that Section 1981 does not specify racial harassment as grounds for action. An appeals court upheld that decision.

Last April, lawyers gathered before the Supreme Court to argue that an implied contract of employment — such as Patterson had with the credit union — was covered by Section 1981, and that the legislative history of Section 1981 made it clear that Congress intended racial harassment to be covered by the statute.

But the court stumped the lawyers, and civil rights groups, when it postponed a decision, saying it wanted to hear arguments on the broader question of whether a landmark 1976 decision barring all forms of private discrimination should be overturned.

Voting 5-4, the court said it wanted to hear arguments about whether or not it should reverse the 1976 ruling in Ryndon vs. McGary, which declared "whites only" private schools and — more broadly, all forms of private discrimination — to be illegal by virtue of a post-Civil War civil rights law.

The court has inflicted a serious and unwelcome wound upon itself today.

In the 5-3 Ryndon decision, the late Justice Potter Stewart examined the legislative history of Section 1981 and decided Congress had clearly intended that all forms of racial discrimination by private persons in contracts should be illegal.

Conservatives have argued that this is too broad an extension of civil rights, that there is nothing constitutionally improper about a private individual discriminating in a private contract.

The unusual order to broaden the arguments in Patterson vs. McClean Credit Union caught everyone by surprise, partly because neither side had raised the issue, but also because most scholars considered the question of whether the Constitution bars private discrimination to be closed.

The decision to broaden the review apparently provoked a bitter dispute within the court. Five justices — Chief Justice William Rehnquist, Byron White, Sandra Day O'Connor, Antonin Scalia and Anthony Kennedy — voted in favor of reversing the 1976 decision. Only Rehnquist and White were on the court in 1976, and both had dissented in the Ryndon decision.

Police harass Taiwan activists

WASHINGTON — In the early afternoon of Aug. 29, police in Taipei, Taiwan, dragged Dr. Hong Chi-chang from his home after smashing his windows and furniture and using tear gas on his family.

The police were there to arrest Hong for allegedly inciting violence at a political rally. But Hong, an admirer of the peaceful protest tactics of Mahatma Gandhi and Martin Luther King Jr., looks less like an agitator than a victim of violence.

That is the story that U.S. lawmakers and human rights activists tell as they raise renewed questions about the state of human rights in Taiwan.

Hong, a psychiatrist and leader of Taiwan's opposition party, recently visited the United States to tell federal officials of continuing political repression in his country despite his government's promises of reforms and an end to martial law.

Hong is being blamed for inciting the violence that broke out at two demonstrations in the past 16 months in Taiwan, but his supporters say he encouraged non-violence at the events. They are angered at the brutality of his arrest and want the charges against him dropped.

Hong and two other members of the Democratic Progressive Party organized a rally on June 12, 1987, to protest Taiwan's new National Security Law. That law replaced martial law, which had been in effect since 1949. Opposition party members say the new law is merely martial law in disguise. Counter demonstrators were said to have attacked participants in the rally, but Hong and the other organizers were held responsible for the violence because they had called the rally.

Asia Watch, a Washington-based human rights group, says there is no evidence that Hong and his two colleagues stirred up violence. The three appear to be targeted because they are critics of the government, according to Asia Watch. Some U.S. lawmakers agree.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has received several reports critical of Taiwan's record on human rights. Pell wrote to Taiwan's President Lee Teng-hui protesting the case against Hong and the alleged brutality of the arrest. The co-chairmen of the Congressional Human Rights Caucus, Reps. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., and John Porter, R-Ill., have also sent messages of concern to Taiwan. So has Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J.

Hong's arrest in August came after he refused to appear for two hearings on the charges against him. Taiwanese officials say the arrest turned ugly because a crowd of Hong's supporters blocked the entrance to his home. Hong's hand was badly cut by broken glass during the melee. Authorities say police were injured, too, and they deny they used tear gas.

Hong also was indicted recently for allegedly instigating violence at a farmers' protest in Taipei on May 20. Asia Watch says Hong tried to quell the tension between police and protesters.

Hong faces several years in prison if he is convicted in connection with both rallies. Human rights activists told our associate Scott See that they question whether the judicial system in Taiwan is free of influence from the ruling Kuomintang.

Albert Lin, a spokesman for Taiwan's Coordinating Council for North American Affairs, denies the charge that the judicial

Baby switch case unique

BOSTON — If this were Gilbert and Sullivan, we could be sure of a happy ending. Two babies switched at birth would be returned to their rightful place amidst a chorus of approval before the final curtain. We would leave the theater smiling.

But this tale of two babies is so unique, so layered in complex family histories that it's hard to write a way out of its tragic outlines.

On Dec. 2, 1976, a woman named Regina Twigg gave birth to a healthy baby girl in a Florida hospital. Somehow, someone, in the first days of its life, switched that baby with another who had serious heart disease. The Twiggs loved and raised Ariens as if she were their own. Indeed she was their own by every test except the genetic one.

Only last summer, in preparation for a heart operation, did Ariens's parents learn from blood tests that she wasn't their biological child. When the girl died, the mourning family faced torturous questions about the fate of the other girl as well. Where was she? Who had her? What was her life like? These were questions made even more painful to Regina Twigg, who was herself adopted.

Now the Twiggs believe they have found that girl. The only other white baby born in the same hospital at the same time as Ariens lives in Florida with her father. But they want to know for sure.

So the Twiggs went to court this week to force another parent to test another nine-year-old. The petition they filed, not surprisingly, had the earmarks of a future custody suit. They claimed that the legal father "wrongfully retains custody." Moreover, they said, he has failed to provide an "ongoing stable home environment with the presence of a mother to love and care for her."

Indeed from the details the life of this second child whatever her genes, hasn't been easy. Her mother died when the child was 3½. The father, who had been estranged, remarried soon after and then divorced the girl's stepmother. But the father also claims that the child is his. Though willing earlier to go through the testing, he now says the Twiggs have no right to intervene.

In some ways, this story is so unique as to make it a legal and journalistic freak show. But in another way, it resonates with us because it raises a series of moral, as well as legal questions about parents and children.

Do the Twiggs, however, horribly wronged, have the right to pursue a child into another family's private world in search of bloodlines? What gives them that right? Their wounds? Their genes? Do they need proof that the child's home they would enter is not a happy one, not "ongoing, stable?"

On the other hand, does the legal father have the right to bar the Twiggs, who have suffered so much injustice, from knowing whether this child is theirs? What gives him that right? Possession of the girl? Protection of his family?

And is this a matter of parents' rights at all?

The Twiggs petition says that the genetic testing (and presumably the custody claim) is in the "best interests of the child." If they are sure of that, the lawyers are far wiser than most of us. A child has many interests. An interest in knowing her biological parents? Yes, we have said that in adoption cases. An interest in a happy home? Yes, if you can define it. An interest in continuity? Maybe even an interest in being left alone? Sometimes these interests conflict.

It is morally outrageous to imagine that the Twiggs, victims of a terrible theft, could not win retribution. Surely they have rights. But just as surely there are times when you cannot right one wrong without the risk of creating others.

So there can be no truly happy ending for two families that have had such troubles. But is it too much to hope that these two families could get out of court and come to some private resolution?

If I were the father, I would agree to genetic testing if only because this daughter's name and face is unlikely to remain secret for long. Identity is not a thing to read about in the supermarket press. I would do it as well to squelch any unfounded suspicion that he was party to the swap.

If the girl proves to be the genetic offspring of the Twiggs, I would hope these good people, Regina and Ernest Twigg, would have the wisdom and control not to sue for custody but to become their daughter's extended family. I would hope both families could in some cautious way be available to her and she in turn could be linked to both.

They learned that you don't need the same bloodlines to love a child, to make it yours. Surely people who share that understanding could learn to share a child.

Market active, prices dip

United Press International

NEW YORK — Prices opened lower today in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 8.71 Monday, was down 8.53 to 2150.43 shortly after the market opened.

Declines led advances 537,209 among the 1,197 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 8,240,000 shares.

Stock prices closed mixed Monday in quiet trading but strength in the blue-chip sector enabled the Dow industrial average to close at its highest level since last October's market collapse.

The Dow closed at 2158.96, just above the previous post-collapse closing high of 2158.61, set July 5.

Analysts cited the Columbus Day holiday for the relatively quiet session.

"The market gave a very good account of itself, even though one would like to have seen a little better breadth," said Tom Gallagher, a managing director in charge of capital commitment at Oppenheimer & Co.

Dollar opens lower; gold, silver higher

United Press International

The dollar was lower today in active trading on major foreign currency markets after falling to a 3 month low in Tokyo. The price of gold was mostly higher.

In earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar fell below the 132-yen level to hit a three-month low against the Japanese yen in heavy trading, closing 2.35 yen lower at 131.15 yen.

The market was closed Monday for a national holiday.

Tuesday's close was the dollar's lowest level against the yen since July 25, when the dollar closed at 131.80 yen.

Currency dealers said the dollar's decline on European markets Monday prompted market players to sell their dollar holdings.

Japanese Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa said he wasn't surprised by the yen's sharp rise, saying "generally speaking, it (the dollar/yen exchange rate) remains stable."

The dollar's slide overseas was triggered by a remark by British Chancellor of the Exchequer Nigel Lawson that Britain would keep interest rates as high as necessary to combat inflation.

The yen's appreciation, coupled with an overnight advance on Wall Street, encouraged investors on the Tokyo Stock Exchange, where the key Nikkei indicator of selected issues jumped 211.33 points to close at 27,469.60.

In Europe, the dollar began the day in Frankfurt at 1.8515 West German marks, down from Monday's close of 1.855.

Tropicana drops employee suit

United Press International

BRADENTON — Tropicana Products Inc., a leading orange juice producer, said Monday it had dropped a lawsuit against a former employee who went to work for rival Minute Maid.

The company said it withdrew the action when it learned former employee Richard Hamilton had been dismissed from a job with the Minute Maid Division of Coca Cola Co.

By coincidence, Hamilton's last day came on the first day of tougher penalties for those who divulge or receive trade secrets

Tropicana filed the lawsuit seeking Hamilton's agreement to maintain the confidentiality of trade secrets he obtained while working as an engineer for five years, from 1982 through March 4 of this year.

Candidates prep for debate

United Press International

Michael Dukakis and George Bush, flying to the West Coast today, are getting ready for their second and final presidential debate — a crucial meeting that could be the Democrat's last chance to turn his campaign around.

Dukakis decided to travel directly to Los Angeles from Boston this afternoon while Bush scheduled a brief address at the University of Seattle en route to the California city playing host to the debate.

Some political analysts expect the televised forum Thursday night to be a rough-and-tumble affair as Dukakis, the Democratic Massachusetts governor, tries once more to impress a national audience enough to reverse the polls showing him behind the Republican vice president.

The latest survey in the debate state itself gives Dukakis a slight lead among Californians, 44 percent to 40 percent among 1,200 voters questioned Wednesday through Saturday. The poll, proportional to voter registration in every county across the key electoral state, was released Monday by KRON-TV and the San Francisco Examiner with an error margin of 2.8 percentage points.

Dukakis has been trailing Bush, however, in most polls since the Republican National Convention in August and recent surveys indicate Bush is increasing his lead in Southern and Western states.

With only 28 days to the Nov. 8 election, the remainder of the presidential campaign is likely to come down to a series of political advertisements and a full-force attempt by each man to get on the nightly network television news.

The 90-minute debate, scheduled for 9 p.m. EDT on the UCLA campus, will be the last time both candidates are able to address millions of voters directly on prime-time television.

The first presidential face-off Sept. 25 in Winston-Salem, N.C., generally was considered a wash. Neither politician scored any "knockout" punch and the event produced little change in the polls.

More sparks flew in Wednesday's vice presidential debate in Omaha, Neb., between Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and Dan Quayle, R-Calif. But although Bentsen widely was seen as the winner, it has not been clear what effect the outcome had on voters' views of the top of the presidential tickets.

An ABC News-Washington Post poll released Monday showed Dukakis's support inching upward again after the battle of the running mates. The nationwide survey of 600 likely voters Wednesday through Sunday found the Bush ticket with 50 percent approval and the Democrats with 47 percent, within the 4.5 point error margin and closer than in a pre-debate ABC-Post poll.

According to the Post, Quayle's unfavorable rating among voters increased after the debate and the numbers suggest the overall impact of his debate performance was to shift about 2 percent of the electorate to Dukakis.

The Los Angeles Times published a poll today showing four of every 10 voters believe Quayle is not qualified to lead the nation and is hurting Bush in the race. The survey of 1,150 voters Saturday and Sunday, with an error margin of 4 points, found Bush favored 48 percent to 39 percent when paired solo against Dukakis but 44 percent to 41 percent when presented with their ticket mates.

In Detroit Monday, Quayle tried to revise his debate answer to the question of what he would do if he suddenly had to assume the presidency. The senator told a business audience sternly that the question had been "inappropriate" but declared, "Certainly I know what to do and when I am vice president — and I will be — there will be contingency plans under different situations."

Quayle said an illness to Bush would be one of those "different type of situations" but "if it is an assassination, the first thing to do is you get on the phone and call the head of the CIA and see what he thinks it was."

Dukakis, saying he is "looking forward very, very much" to his own debate Thursday, joined Bush in using the Columbus Day holiday Monday to stump for ethnic votes and to promote targeted issues.

Dukakis, before marching in New York City's holiday parade, went to the Long Island suburb of Levittown, N.Y., to propose a program that would cost the government nothing to allow first-time home buyers to use their Individual Retirement Account savings or tax-deferred pension plans for down payments.

Saying Bush has no answers for working Americans who cannot afford a home, the Democrat noted, "Under current law, young families can speculate on stocks or gold or soybean futures with these funds. Home Start will let them make the best investment they can, in a home for their families."

Bush, touring an Italian neighborhood in Trenton, N.J., attacked Dukakis again for the now-restricted Massachusetts prison furlough program in which murderers could take weekend leave. Bush frequently cites the case of inmate Willie Horton, who terrorized a Maryland couple while on furlough.

There are six high schools, nine middle schools and about 24 elementary schools in the Seminole County School District.

Last year, there was rezoning of some of the elementary schools and a new school, Stenstrom Elementary, was opened in Oviedo last year.

Fern Park lawyer John Baldwin, on several occasions in 1987, refused county firemen and fire inspectors permission to enter his office at 7100 S. U.S. Highway 17-92 for routine fire safety inspections. He did allow them to enter twice Feb. 5, 1987 and Nov. 11, 1987. Each time, county inspectors reported they found violations.

Although some violations discovered earlier were corrected by the second inspection, new violations were also found, according to officials. Baldwin refused to allow follow-up inspections to determine if all violations had been corrected.

The county asked the code board to rule in June that Baldwin was in violation of state laws allowing the inspections.

installed between the Little League ballfield and the basketball court. The playground will be separated from the two sports areas by grass berms.

The old rest rooms at the ballfield have already been razed and concrete has been laid for the new ones. A red asphalt pad will be laid around the corner of the ballfield where the old rest room building was, and a new concession stand and bleachers will sit on the pad.

The renovation program also will include a new automated irrigator, system and the planting of about 50 oak trees, Jernigan said.

The commission accepted low bids of $16,879.90 from Miracle Recreation Equipment, and $1,122.77 from Hunter Knipschild for playground equipment. Jernigan said the equipment will be placed in about 12 inches of peat material which will be contained in a timber border.

A-Team Construction was awarded a $5,760 bid for asphalt paving. Hughes Supply was awarded a $763.23 bid for irrigation pipe and fittings, and Atlantic Irrigation a $842.91 bid for irrigation sprinklers.

The city's new annexation plan provides for waiving the $150 annexation-request fee for three months. The purpose is to encourage property owners to request annexation in order to bring unincorporated enclaves into the city and to make the city's borders more regular.

Commissioner Whitey Eckstein objected to a proposal to allow land owners to pay utility impact fees over a five- or 10-year period. "I don't think the city can afford to finance impact fees and I think we would be setting a dangerous precedent to approve it," he said.

However, Commissioner John Y. Mercer said an incentive is

Algerian army again shoots into crowd

United Press International

ALGERS, Algeria — Soldiers again fired into a crowd of demonstrators in the northern Algerian capital today, ending a brief lull in six days of clashes that have left at least 50 people dead.

The number of casualties in today's violence was not immediately known.

Soon after the army opened fire today in the center of Algiers, gunshots were heard in the Casbah, the capital's old quarter, and the streets quickly emptied as smoke rose from the north African metropolis, witness said.

The shootings ended a brief overnight lull in the rioting that broke out Oct. 4, climaxing several weeks of protests over food shortages, economic austerity programs and soaring inflation.

Many of the streets remained littered today with the debris of looted and destroyed shops and offices and with overturned cars that were torched by the angry demonstrators.

President Chadli Bendjedid, who declared a state of siege and called in the military Thursday, was scheduled to address the nation today in a television address.

In the capital's mosques, filled to capacity as security forces stood outside, Muslim religious teachers known as mullahs in Arabic asked the people to remain calm until after Bendjedid's speech.

Soviet-made 1.55 tanks remained stationed at the airport and entrance to the capital, while smaller tanks and armored personnel carriers patrolled downtown streets.

Prior to today's shooting, doctors and witnesses said at least 50 people had been killed, many by army gunfire, since violence erupted. Some reported by Western diplomats estimated the death toll to have been as high as 200.

Without specifying figures, the government acknowledged Friday that demonstrators and soldiers had been killed in the violence that followed government austerity measures. The rioting has been the worst in the North African nation since Algeria gained independence from France in 1962.

Authorities arrested two cameramen working for Independent Television News of London Sunday as they filmed tanks in Algiers on the fifth day of rioting.

Nuns prepare to remain locked up

United Press International

MORRIS, N.J. — Five cloistered nuns who locked themselves in their monastery to protest the modernization of their austere lifestyle say they will stay put if necessary until their appeal is heard by the Sacred Congregation for Religious, an arm of the Vatican.

"We'll stay here until we hear definite word from a higher authority in Rome," Sister John of the Cross, a spokeswoman for the group, said Monday in a telephone interview from the monastery.

Sister John said she hopes a decision will be reached shortly after Nobel Peace laureate Mother Teresa meets with the pope.

Mother Teresa said in an interview published Monday that she will ask Pope John Paul II to arbitrate in the nuns' dispute with their liberal process during an already scheduled visit to Rome this month.

"It's a positive sign for us that the pope's decision will be in our favor," said Sister John.

We know it's very much behind the move to preserve the traditional Carmelite order throughout the world. He has been a supporter of keeping it conservative.

On Oct. 4 Sister John and three others from the Order of the Discalced Carmelites, ranging in age from 28 to 45, locked themselves in the rotatory wing of the secluded Monastery of the Most Blessed Virgin Mary of Mount Carmel in Morris Township.

A fifth nun joined the group Wednesday after she feared she would be transferred to a nursing home by the current process because she was recovering from a pacemaker operation, the nuns said.

The sisters say they are trying to avoid eviction from the convent, where they have been in conflict with a new process over a liberalization of their contemplative life-style.

Mother Teresa told The Record of Hackensack in a published report Monday that she was praying for the nuns, but had not spoken to them. "How can I? They are there and I am here," she said.

The initial pool included 500 potential jurors, who will be given a 15-page questionnaire aimed at screening out victims of child and spouse abuse.

Prosecutors estimate it will take a month to choose 12 jurors and six alternates in the trial, which is expected to last until midwinter.

30-month timetable set for removal of Cubans from Angola

United Press International

UNITED NATIONS — Declaring they have shown maximum flexibility, Angola and Cuba say they will insist on a 30-month timetable for the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola while supporting a U.S.-backed plan for Namibian independence beginning Nov. 1.

"A 30-month timetable is the limit of our concession," Angola's ambassador to the United Nations, Manuel Pedro Pacavira, said Monday.

Pacavira said earlier that Assistant Secretary of State Chester Crocker proposed that the Cuban withdrawal be carried out within 24 months, a schedule accepted by South Africa in meetings among officials from the United States, Angola, South Africa and Cuba in New York over the weekend.

The New York Times reported Monday that the four parties agreed that Cuban troops should be withdrawn within 24 to 30 months.

But echoing his Angolan ally, Cuban Deputy Foreign Minister Ricardo Alarcon said, "We insist on 30 months. We have shown maximum flexibility. It's up to the other side now."

Angola and Cuba previously demanded a four-year timetable for the withdrawal of the estimated 50,000 Cuban troops in Angola.

The South African Broadcasting Corp. in its evening broadcast Monday quoted Foreign Ministry Director General Neil Van Heerden as saying there was slow progress at the three days of talks in New York that ended Sunday, but that the target date of Nov. 1 for a final deal remained unchanged.

Alarcon said Cuba wants an orderly withdrawal and future U.S.-mediated negotiations should work out an "acceptable formula that will assure the security of the Angola government."

Crocker has been mediating the four-way talks for implementation of U.N. Security Council Resolution 435, which calls for South Africa to end its 73-year occupation of neighboring Namibia and allow its independence.

The United States and South Africa have linked Namibian independence to the removal of Cuban troops from Angola, where the government has fought a 12-year civil war against guerrillas supported by South Africa and the United States.

Pacavira denied there was an agreement on an exact timetable for the Cuban withdrawal. He called the weekend meeting "merely consultative" to prepare for the talks in Brazzaville, Congo later this month.

"I am not in the position to say whether we are far or near an agreement," Pacavira said.

"For us the withdrawal is a gesture from the sovereign governments of Angola and Cuba to facilitate a solution to a problem that is the responsibility of the international community."

The 24-month timetable was put forward by Crocker to "reconcile the positions of Angola and South Africa," (and) was accepted only as a basis for (further) discussions," Pacavira said.

Carlos Aldana, another Cuban special envoy to the four-party talks, told United Press International the weekend meeting produced no agreement on a timetable for the troop withdrawal.

"I am surprised to see in the U.S. press an information that is so totally untrue," Aldana said.

WORLD BRIEFS

Massive security for party convention

LONDON — Protected by what may be Britain's biggest peacetime security operation, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party opened its annual convention in the coastal city of Brighton, scene of a deadly IRA bomb attack four years ago.

Security forces sealed off the beachfront at the convention center and at Brighton's Grand Hotel, where a sophisticated Irish Republican Army time bomb in 1984 killed five Conservative conventioners and narrowly missed killing Thatcher.

The outlawed IRA has said it will try again to kill Thatcher if the chance arises, but police said the Irish guerrillas also may choose a "soft" target.

Chilean opposition warns of provocation

SANTIAGO, Chile — An opposition coalition that led the fight against Gen. Augusto Pinochet's failed bid last week to extend his 15-year rule said the government is now trying to provoke and divide the opposition in order to stay in power.

Opposition leaders have said they feared violence would lead to the military again imposing a state of emergency that was in effect for most of the 15 years since the Sept. 11, 1973, coup that put Pinochet, 72, in power.

Czech leader resigns; no change in ideology

United Press International

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — A two-day meeting of the Czechoslovak Communist Party aimed at purging leaders deemed responsible for the nation's economic problems showed few signs of any major changes in government policy.

Prime Minister Lubomir Strougal, a leading advocate of Gorbachev-style reforms, resigned Monday along with the head of the Slovak government, Peter Colotka, on the first day of a Central Committee plenary session devoted to ideology and personnel changes.

But speeches published in the official media today indicated there has been no change in the ideological stand that has brought two decades of authoritarian leadership accompanied by economic stagnation.

The 59-year-old Strougal, who has been premier since 1970, and Colotka, 63, also resigned as members of the 17-member Communist Party Presidium (Politburo), the official news agency CTK said.

Sources close to the government said the Czech premier, Ladislav Adamec, is resigning his post to take over from Strougal. The news agency did not mention Adamec, but more resignations were scheduled today at the conclusion of the two-day meeting.

Czechoslovakia is composed of the Czech and Slovak republics. Both Colotka and Adamec also hold the title of deputy prime minister in the federal government under Strougal.

Council releases Waldheim papers

Documents state Waldheim perpetrated criminal acts

United Press International

MEXICO CITY — The president of the World Jewish Council has released newly discovered documents that he said prove Austrian President Kurt Waldheim covered up Nazi war crimes in Greece in 1943.

Edgar Bronfman, in Mexico for the first governing board meeting of his organization ever held in Latin America, said Monday the documents linking Waldheim to a Nazi cover-up were discovered by researchers two months ago at the U.S. National Archives.

The documents were found among a pile of material brought from Germany by American servicemen after World War II.

"These documents are new and important because they show that Kurt Waldheim was not only involved in facilitating the perpetration of criminal acts — as proven in earlier documents — but (that) he engaged in their cover-up as well," Bronfman said at a news conference.

Waldheim, the former U.N. secretary-general and president of Austria since 1986, has been the subject of several international investigations, including a probe by an international commission of historians convened by the Austrian government.

There was no immediate comment from Waldheim or his office on the documents made public by the council.

The documents, part of three reports filed up the Nazi chain of command, describe the killing of 10 civilians on Aug. 12, 1943, in the village of Kuklest in Nazi-occupied Greece.

Bronfman said the documents show that Waldheim altered the wording of the final report — which he signed and marked "secret" before sending it to the German Army's Balkan Command in Belgrade, Yugoslavia — so that the 10 civilians were described as "suspicious bandits."

Montenegrin leader resigns before crowd

United Press International

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — A leader of the republic of Montenegro, saying he was ashamed of spreading unrest that has plunged Yugoslavia into its gravest crisis since World War II, resigned before 15,000 demonstrators.

In the Montenegrin capital of Titograd, police went on alert Monday and introduced "urgent measures" to prevent violence after mass rallies over the weekend left 13 people injured.

The measures were introduced to avoid the declaration of a state of emergency, said a member of the Communist Party leadership of Montenegro.

But demonstrators ignored the upsurge in police activity and at least 15,000 workers staged a peaceful protest and 900 university students boycotted meals in a canteen in the mountainous southern Yugoslav republic, one of six in the ethnically diverse state. There were no reports of violence or arrests.

The strife, which exploded against a backdrop of severe economic problems that include an inflation rate running at 200 percent annually, is the worst crisis to grip Yugoslavia since its formation after World War II.

The East European country, which is not part of the Soviet bloc, has been run by a committee-style central government since the death in 1980 of Josip Broz Tito, whose charisma helped unite the various ethnic nationalities into one country. Each republic has its own party leadership.

The Montenegro state and Communist Party presidiums met in joint session and publicly declared their support of workers' demands, saying they were "justified and were an expression of the economic crisis in the country, an expression of a big drop in the standard of living and the Kosovo issue."

Serbs and Montenegrins accuse ethnic Albanians in Kosovo of persecuting them.

Unrest in Montenegro Friday erupted a day after a demonstration by 100,000 Serbs toppled the Communist Party leadership of Serbia's Vojvodina province, one of two such autonomous provinces on Serbian territory. Montenegrins and Serbs are closely knit.

The mass protest in Vojvodina was supported by Serbia's Communist Party chief, Slobodan Milosevic, who has been waging a campaign for an end to the autonomy of Vojvodina and Kosovo, which is dominated by 1.5 million ethnic Albanians.

As if to underscore the affinity between Montenegro and Serbia, the Montenegrin leadership expressed its support Monday for Milosevic's attempts to amend the Serbian constitution, saying they will "ensure the control of Serbia on the whole territory of its state."

In the latest disturbances, about 15,000 workers and students rallied at the Boris Kidric steel works in Niksic, 37 miles north of Titograd, to protest the use of force by police in handling demonstrations in Titograd over the weekend and demanded the resignations of those responsible.

Police used tear gas for the first time in memory to break up a demonstration Saturday.

Rade Brajovic, one of the eight members of Montenegro's state presidency, announced his "irrevocable resignation" in an emotional speech before the crowd.

"I am ashamed of the situation in which our country exists and I resign here before the workers," he said.

He appealed to the workers to "remain sober and do not let emotions overcome your wisdom, do not undertake anything which could jeopardize the unity of the country which is in danger."

Montenegrin officials said the rally ended without incident and steel workers decided to return to work after three days of a protest strike.

The leader of Montenegro's Communist Party, Miljan Radovic, told a rally in Titograd that the party presidium will ask its ruling Central Committee for a vote of confidence. If the presidium loses the vote, he said, it will resign.

Atlanta player dies of overdose

ATLANTA — Defensive back David Croudlip of the Atlanta Falcons died Monday from an apparent overdose of cocaine.

Croudlip, 29 and an off-season resident of San Diego, was rushed to Joan Clancy Hospital in Duluth, Ga., a northeast Atlanta suburb, about 2:30 a.m. EDT and was pronounced dead at 3:31 a.m.

"The preliminary indication is that his death was drug related," said Dr. Joseph Burton, the area medical examiner. "We still need more lab reports to be definite, but early tests do include cocaine and probably some other drug."

Burton said he could not be specific because police were unable to interview Croudlip's wife Holly, "because she was so upset she couldn't talk. But it appears he may have ingested more than a gram of cocaine."

Elliott leads Wallace by 109

DAYTONA BEACH — Bill Elliott has a 109-point lead on Rusty Wallace with four races remaining on the NASCAR schedule, but the Dawsonville, Ga., native is concerned only about this week's race.

Elliott, bidding to win his first Winston Cup driving championship and the first for a Ford driver since 1969, cannot shake Wallace, who also is looking for his first driving championship. Wallace won the Oakwood Homes 500 Sunday at Charlotte (N.C.) Motor Speedway to pick up 15 points on Elliott, who finished fourth.

Elliott now has 3,868 points to 3,759 for Wallace. If Elliott finishes fourth or better in each of the remaining races, he will win the title regardless of what Wallace does.

This week was scheduled as an off week for the Winston Cup drivers, but the rain out Oct. 2 and 3 of the Holly Farms 400 at North Wilkesboro (N.C.) Speedway forced the race to be rescheduled for Sunday.

Warriors sign Richmond

OAKLAND — The Golden State Warriors Monday reached a five-year agreement with Mitch Richmond, the 6-5 Kansas State guard who they picked fifth overall in the 1988 NBA draft.

Terms of the contract were not announced, but it was reportedly worth $500,000 per year.

Richmond, 23, a member of the U.S. Olympic basketball team, was expected to join the Warriors in Honolulu as they prepared for preseason games Thursday and Friday against the Los Angeles Lakers.

Warriors Coach and General Manager Don Nelson said that Richmond still had time to fit into the team's offensive and defensive schemes.

"If he were to miss another week, it would be hard. This way, it's not going to be terrible," Nelson said.

Burke paves way for Devils

Sean Burke proved he could play in the National Hockey League last season. Monday night the New Jersey goalie proved he could play in Madison Square Garden.

Burke stopped 41 shots and New Jersey scored five goals in the third period, leading the Devils to a 5-0 victory over New York in the Rangers home opener.

Burke, in his first full season, recorded his second NHL shutout and was particularly effective during a four-minute minor penalty served by Kirk Muller early in the third period.

In other NHL games Monday night, Calgary downed Detroit 5-2 and the New York Islanders nipped Vancouver 3-2.

LA takes 3-2 lead
Gibson, Belcher big guns in 7-4 triumph

United Press International

NEW YORK — The Los Angeles Dodgers, hit by one problem after another since the National League playoffs began, stand one victory away from the World Series.

Kirk Gibson crushed a three-run homer and rookie Tim Belcher won his second game of the playoffs Monday, giving the Dodgers a 7-4 victory over the New York Mets and a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series.

The Dodgers have not received a win from their best pitcher in two playoff starts, lost their ace reliever for Games 4 and 5, and are facing a team that had beaten them 10 of 11 during the regular season.

But a victory at Los Angeles in Game 6 Tuesday night or Game 7 Wednesday night would move the Dodgers into the World Series.

"I think we realize we're not the best team in baseball," Los Angeles catcher Rick Dempsey said. "But we keep playing as hard as we can."

The World Series is scheduled to start in the NL city Saturday against the American League champion Oakland Athletics.

The Dodgers are scheduled to send Tim Leary against 20-game winner David Cone, the Game 2 loser for the Mets.

Game 7, if necessary, would probably match Los Angeles' Orel Hershiser against Ron Darling, Hershiser, the leading candidate for the NL Cy Young award, started Games 1 and 3, and received no decision in either as the Dodgers blew late leads and lost.

"It's obviously a tremendous advantage, but you can never count the Mets out," Belcher said. "Going home with Tim Leary and Orel Hershiser as starters gives us an edge."

The Dodgers could face a Game 6 without Gibson, their star and emotional force. Gibson, who en-

"I wish I had a crystal ball," Gibson said of his Game 6 status. "I called time because I knew I couldn't continue. I guess I have to be optimistic."

A Shea Stadium crowd of 52,069 saw Game 5 follow the pattern of the entire series, with the Dodgers taking an early lead and then trying to cope with a New York rally.

"They've been aggressive and it's work for them," Mets second baseman Wally Backman said. "They've gotten early leads and took a big part of our game away. Our power overcomes a lot, but you can't overlook our team speed and you can't use that if you fall behind."

Eagles outgun Giants

United Press International

PHILADELPHIA — Like he has been all season, Randall Cunningham was the fuel that fed the Philadelphia Eagles offense.

Cunningham passed for a career-high 369 yards and three touchdowns Monday night to lead Philadelphia to a 24-13 victory over New York, the Eagles' first victory over the Giants in almost four years.

"I don't remember when I have thrown so much," said Cunningham, who completed a career-high 31 of 41 passes. "I think it is my best game. I don't remember when I had a 300-yard, three touchdown game. But the biggest achievement for myself is the win before this we hadn't beaten the Giants since I've been here."

Cunningham, who accounted for 76 percent of the Eagles' offensive yardage in Philadelphia's first five games, completed a career-high 31 of 41 passes, with the other TD passes going to Jimmy Giles for 4 yards and Keith Byers for 5. The Eagles also scored on a 37-yard field goal by Luis Zendejas.

"He did a good job," Philadelphia Coach Buddy Ryan said. "He makes everything happen. He makes the standard things and then improves things. He's a great athlete."

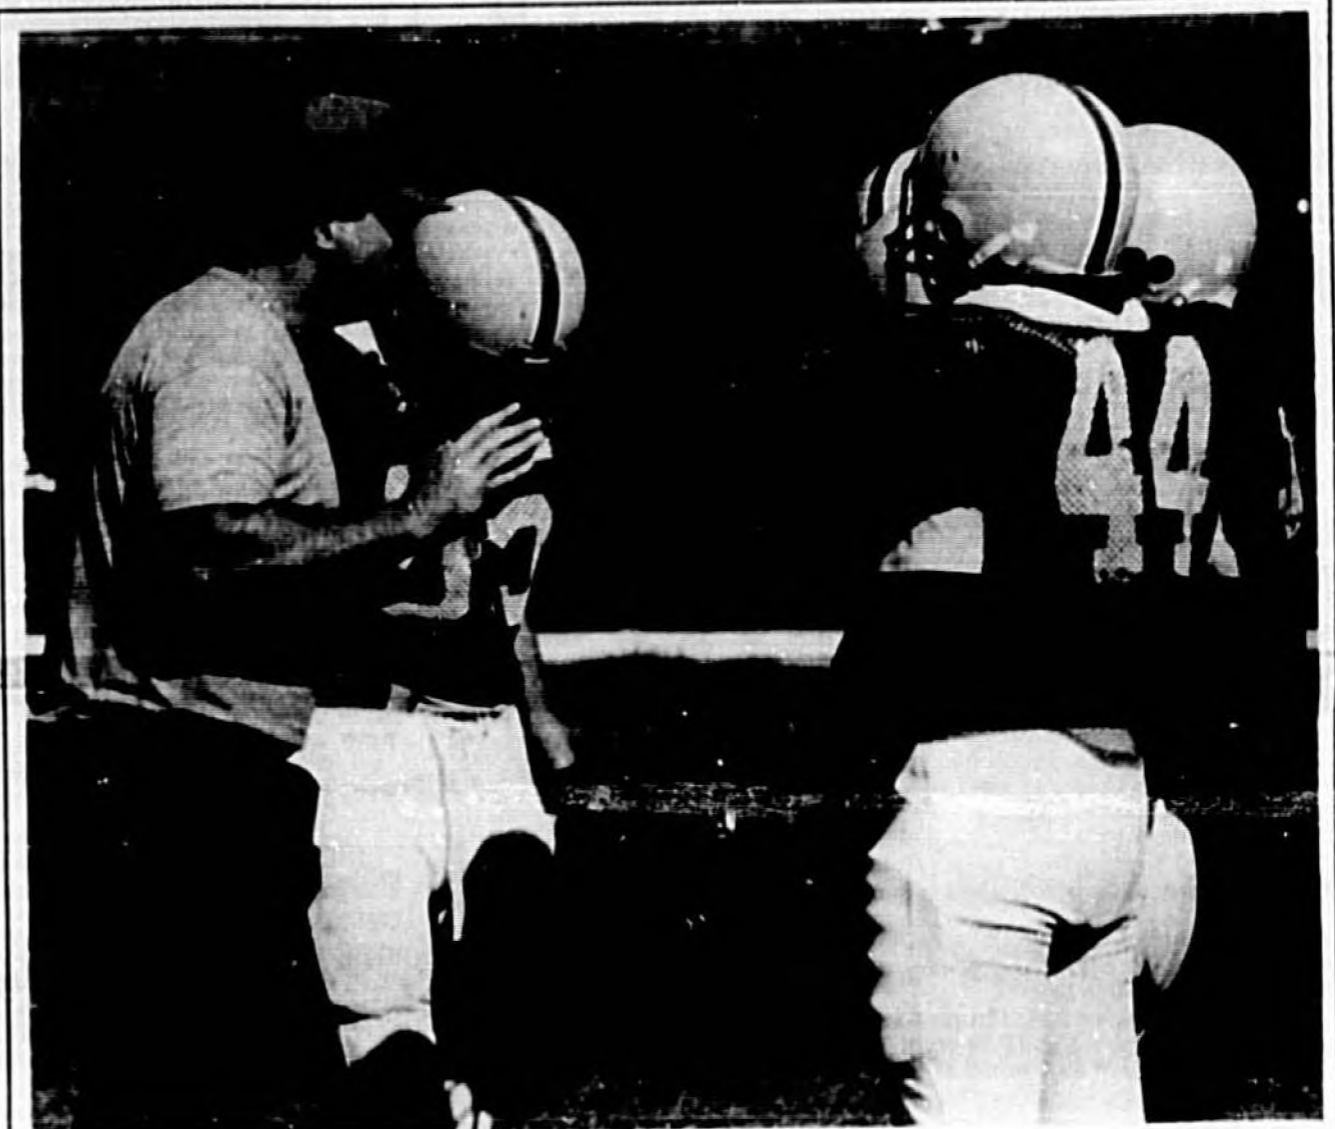

New York was driving toward a go-ahead touchdown when Mark Bavaro dropped a Phil Simms pass at the Philadelphia 5-yard line on fourth-and-10 from the 18.

"It was the right play, the right throw, the right coverage," said New York Coach Bill Parcells. "We threw it right through the coverage. It just didn't work out. Then we just gave up the big play at the end of the game."

That came three plays after Bavaro's drop. Three plays later, Cunningham connected on an 80-yard TD pass to Cris Carter to seal the victory.

Both teams are 3-3, one game behind Phoenix in the NFC East. Philadelphia last beat New York on Oct. 21, 1984, a span of six losses. Buddy Ryan had lost all four of his previous games against New York since taking over as Eagles coach in 1987.

New York scored on a 38-yard pass from Simms to Zeke Mowatt and received fields goals of 47 and 22 yards from Raul Allegre.

Building for the future
Deltona High hopes to prosper after rough start

By TONY DeBORMIER
Herald sports writer

DELTONA — Bob Wallace's situation at Deltona High School is, at best, a tradeoff.

Faced with building the football program at the first-year school, Wallace and his staff have had to deal with several indignities this year in exchange for the promise the future may hold.

"We're dealing with 50 football players who have never taken a varsity snap," said Wallace on Monday. "The things that you would take for granted that an experienced player would do, you can't expect here."

"It's been frustrating. But there is a lot of enthusiasm which helps overcome that."

To help ease the fledgling

Wolves into the Florida prep football mainstream, Wallace has scheduled nine games this year, five against junior varsity opponents and four against varsity teams.

While the junior varsity games will put some wins on Deltona's record and help keep up his players' enthusiasm, Wallace knows that those results can be misleading.

"From the standpoint of getting wins, it (playing junior varsity teams) is good," Wallace conceded. "But from the standpoint of marking our progress, I don't know."

"We practice like a varsity team, spending a couple, three hours a day on the field. When we play opponents' junior varsity teams, they usually aren't as well-schooled as we are. Against those teams, we don't know if everything we're doing is right."

After an open date last week, Deltona will play another JV game this Thursday against New Smyrna Beach at Deland's Spee Martin Stadium (game time is 7 p.m.), then travel to Daytona Beach the following Thursday to play the Seabreeze junior varsity squad.

But then things get interesting. Three of Deltona's last four games will be against varsity squads: West Nassau on Oct. 27, Rockledge on Nov. 11 and Pierson Taylor on Nov. 18. On Nov. 3, Deltona will play its last junior varsity game, but it will be against Deland. The game will also serve as Deltona's

Judge delays trial of diver Bruce Kimball

United Press International

TAMPA — A judge has delayed the drunken-driving manslaughter trial of former Olympic diving medalist Bruce Kimball and will hold a test to determine if widespread publicity about the case would preclude a fair trial.

Kimball allegedly was intoxicated and slammed his car into a crowd of youths Aug. 1 in nearby Brandon, killing two teens and injuring six others.

Despite the controversy, the silver medalist in the 1984 Olympics competed in the U.S. diving trials but failed to make the team that competed at the Summer Games in South Korea.

Kimball is charged with two counts of DUI manslaughter and three counts of drunken driving causing serious bodily injury. The Tampa Tribune has reported his blood alcohol level at the time of the accident was 0.20, twice the legal limit.

Hillsborough County Circuit Judge Harry Lee Coe III told lawyers Monday he is concerned he might not be able to seat a local jury because of extensive publicity about Kimball, 25, and he doesn't want to wait until the opening day of trial to have his suspicion confirmed.

So, the judge said, he will convene lawyers on Nov. 14, the original trial date, and talk to a group of residents called for jury duty that week. Coe said quizzing a representative group of potential jurors could give him a better idea about the chances of keeping the trial in Tampa.

Potential jurors are not disqualified merely because they have heard or read about a criminal case. What matters is whether they have formed opinions about the case based on the news reports and whether they could put those opinions aside.

If it appears that an impartial jury will be too difficult to find in Hillsborough County, Coe could begin looking for another site a month before the trial date.

UCF: Time to get serious

That wasn't a heat wave passing through the University of Central Florida this past weekend. It was the steam rising from the boiling blood of the UCF Knights. "Saturday Knight Fever" took on a whole new meaning last week.

Both irate and embarrassed, the Knights dropped from No. 2 to No. 14 in the NCAA Division II poll after losing to New Haven (Conn.) on Saturday night. They vowed never to expect victory again and to get serious for every one of their remaining opponents.

UCF, which still has a good shot at a second consecutive trip to the playoffs, will start on the road to recovery this Saturday in its homecoming against South Connecticut State.

A good showing against S. Connecticut is a must since the Knights close the season with three extremely tough opponents and three road games. Next week, UCF goes to Valdosta State and they then host a Georgia Southern team that nearly upset Florida State this past weekend.

Gene McDowell has a class act going at UCF, so look for the Knights to rebound with a vengeance this week and look forward to an exciting conclusion to the 1988 season with the playoffs a good possibility.

The Fearless Fister Forecast may have to get serious itself after a 5-5 week of picking which ran the season slate to 28-14. Here's a look at this week.

Seminole at Leesburg
Despite losing big for three weeks in a row and being damaged by key injuries, Seminole High still has a shot at repeating as District 4A-7 champions. The 'Noles showed signs of breaking out of the slump last week and should come out fired up for this game. This is the point where Seminole came alive last season as it won its last five games after going 2-3. Look for coach Emory Blake's squad to have its best outing of the season Friday night as it stays in the hunt.

Lake Brantley at Lake Howell

Lake Brantley is a team with unlimited potential. And the Patriots have yet to fully reach that potential — which is scary considering they already own some impressive wins this year (24-21 over Lake Mary, 35-3 over Mainland, 30-0 over Seminole). Lake Howell is another team with great potential that has not yet put it all together. Therefore, this should be a classic battle between a pair of tough Class 5A teams. It will go down to the wire with Brantley's wishbone breaking through in the end.

Oviedo's Lions are a good example of what a group of young athletes can accomplish when they play together and believe in themselves. Oviedo is 5-0 in 1988 and has its sights set on Seminole Athletic Conference and District 4A-7 titles. Lyman will be another tough test for the Lions as the

The expression on the face of Mack the Knight is about how the UCF Knights felt after losing to New Haven on Saturday. The irate Knights will look to rebound this week when they host S. Connecticut State.

Greyhounds have talent at almost every position. But Oviedo has passed many tough tests already in '88 and they will come through with flying colors again.

ELSEWHERE — In other prep action it will be the Apopka Blue Darters over Oak Ridge by 10 and the Winter

PROS — Hucs over the Colts by 9 and Dolphins over the Chargers by 12.

The Silver Hawks defeated nonconference foe West Orange, 15-12, 15-7, then picked up a Seminole Athletic Conference win over Seminole, 15-8, 15-8. Coach Christy Scott's team is now 6-2 in the SAC.

Tom Martinez provided solid all-around play for the Hawks while Pat Regan led the way on the front row along with Greg Davis.

Lake Howell returns to action Thursday at home against DeLand.

TONIGHT'S MATCHES

In SAC girls matches tonight, Lyman is at Seminole. Lake Mary goes to Oviedo and Lake Brantley hosts DeLand. Brantley leads the league with a 7-0 record while Oviedo is 6-1, Seminole 6-2 and Lake Mary 5-3.

In the boys standings, Lake Mary leads the way at 8-0 with Lake Howell at 6-2 and Lyman at 5-2.

In women's college action tonight, Rollins College's Lady Tars look to rebound from a tough weekend as they host St. Leo (7:30 p.m.). Rollins (17-6) is coming off a 1-4 showing at the Florida Southern Tournament.

Deltona rallies to beat Seabreeze

By MARK BLITMAN
Herald sports writer

DAYTONA — Deltona, which has won the first game only to drop the next two on a number of occasions this season, turned the tables on Monday as it came through with a 13-15, 15-7, 15-10 victory over Daytona Beach Seabreeze in prep volleyball action at Daytona Beach.

Deltona, 3-6, will return to action this Wednesday in a make up game with DeLand at Deltona High School.

"We were playing well in the first game and should have won it," Deltona coach Jan Stevens said. "We just took a nap at the end of the game and they (Seabreeze) capitalized."

The Lady Wolves, though, came back and played tough in the next two games to take the match. Sandy Bradley's serving and Jennifer Dakoski's setting played major roles in the last two games to lead Deltona. Joy Clover added strong front row play to key the win in the final game.

"Our new saying is determination and desire," Stevens said. "They showed they wanted to win today with the way we came back. We came out flat and dug a hole for ourselves but I was proud of the way we came back."

Stevens stayed with the same lineup for most of the match and the Lady Wolves did a nice job of handling the Lady Sanderbabs. Deltona dominated the match with the exception of the first game lapse.

"I think it being Monday hurt us," Stevens said. "We didn't look sharp and weren't ready to play. We got going in the second game, though, and the girls came through when they needed to."

Deltona's junior varsity squad also came away with a victory as it beat Seabreeze, 15-3, 7-15, 15-13, to up its record to 7-2.

Jennifer Schomert and Patty Kelps led the way with strong serving and strong all around play. Schomert played strong all the way through with Kelps coming on strong in the third and deciding game.

HOWELL BOYS WIN 2

Lake Howell High's boys volleyball team upped its record to 8-2 for the year Monday night by defeating West Orange and Seminole High.

Gibson's three-run homer gave the Dodgers a 6-0 lead in the fifth. His blast into the first deck in right field knocked out starter Sid Fernandez, who had won his last six regular-season decisions. Steve Sax and Mickey Hatcher singled before Gibson's homer.

Gibson had homered less than 13 earlier, giving the Dodgers a 5-4 victory in 12 innings in Game 4.

Len Dykstra hit a three-run homer in the bottom of the fifth to pull New York within 6-3. Dykstra's double and rookie Gregg Jefferies' RBI single pulled the Mets to 6-4 and knocked out Belcher in the eighth.

The Los Angeles bullpen, though, started for the second straight game in the absence of stopper Jay Howell.

The Dodgers used six relievers to combine for seven scoreless innings Sunday. Ricky Horton and Brian Holton, who earned a save, closed with two scoreless innings.

Belcher worked seven innings, giving up four runs on seven hits, one walk and six strikeouts. "They've taken it to us," Mets shortstop Howard Johnson said. "They've jumped out and used good pitching. That's something we normally do."

Howell, who led Los Angeles with 21 saves, was suspended three days Sunday by NL President Bart Giamatti after he was found with pine tar on his glove during Saturday's Game 3. Giamatti shortened the suspension to two games Monday, making Howell eligible for Game 6.

"We want him to know him we appreciate him and don't think he's a cheater," Gibson said of Howell. "We have been inspired by it."

The Dodgers took the lead for the fifth straight game, moving ahead 3-0 by working superbly from behind in the count against Fernandez in the fourth.

Mike Marshall singled on an 0-2 pitch with one out and John Shelby worked a walk after being behind 1-2 in the count. Rick Dempsey sent an 0-1 pitch down the left-field line for a two-run double. Jeff Hamilton struck out before Alfredo Griffin, 2 for 15 in the playoffs entering the at-bat, doubled to left-center to drive in Dempsey.

Belcher was perfect through three innings, then escaped trouble in the fourth. Dykstra walked on four pitches and Jefferies singled to place runners at first and second with the Mets' 3-4-5 hitters coming up.

HOWELL TO RETURN

National League President Bart Giamatti announced he will terminate the suspension of Los Angeles Dodgers reliever Jay Howell after today's fifth game of the National League playoffs.

After meeting with Howell today, Giamatti issued a statement reducing the suspension to two days, making the reliever eligible to return Tuesday in Los Angeles.

Deltona

Wallace and Deltona's administration would opt to play an independent schedule, but that would be a two-year decision (two years being the cycle in which the Florida High School Activities Association realigns teams).

"That's a good thought (playing an independent schedule), but I don't know how we would fill the schedule," Wallace said. "There's talk of us getting into the Seminole Athletic Conference. Both ideas have merit."

Regardless of which road the Wolves take, there's going to have to be an improvement in their working conditions, namely their practice and playing facilities, if the Wolves are going to improve.

"We don't have a blade of grass on the field," said Wallace. "We're playing on a grassy area between the parking lot and the classrooms that wasn't designed for a playing field, but just to be a grassy area."

"The kids have to dodge trees. We had to order portable goal posts. We keep them between two buildings and when we want to work on field goals or extra points, we have to wheel them out. We have to have our extra players positioned along the sidewalk to catch kids so they don't fall."

It wouldn't be so bad if it were just the football team that was forced into this temporary situation, but the school's physical education classes also must use that area until its fields are completed. You can imagine the damage being done to the surface.

"The things we have to overcome have really set us back in terms of where I wanted us to be at this point," said Wallace. "When we get on a field, after being between those buildings, it's like we're on an airport runway."

Pain is occurring after mastectomy

DEAR DR. GOTT: Four months ago I had a double mastectomy and had expanders put in which will eventually be replaced by silicone implants. I've completed my radiation, and have three months of chemotherapy left. Recently I've had quite a bit of pain around the right expander. I have to decide whether to keep them, or have them removed and wear prostheses. If I were your patient, what would you advise?

DEAR READER: This is a question I've asked of the surgeon who performed your operation. Sometimes radiation and chemotherapy will produce tissue swelling and inflammation that cause pain. In this instance, you might be more comfortable in the long run by delaying the silicone implants until your treatments have been completed and the tissue reaction has subsided.

However, you are pretty close to the conclusion of your chemotherapy. Hence, the surgeon may believe that this would be an appropriate time for the implant procedure. Because your surgeon is the specialist who is most familiar with your particular case, I think that he or she is the person to advise you.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 25-year-old woman, 5 feet 7 and 105 pounds. I'm an ovo-lacto vegetarian. Recently, I've noticed that I am bruising very easily. My legs look like I've been dropped out of an airplane. What could be causing this?

DEAR READER: You could have a vitamin deficiency, such as a lack of vitamin C and K, both of which are necessary for proper blood clotting and healthy blood vessels. Or you might have developed a coagulation abnormality, such as a low platelet count, that is unrelated to your dietary preference. See a doctor to determine why you bruise so easily. This situation is not normal. In fact, it may be dangerous because the bruising may be significantly affecting your internal organs. You need an examination and blood tests — pronto.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
East's jump raise to four clubs was meant as an obstructive bid, taking away much of the opponents' bidding room. West still liked his hand, so he bid five clubs. The spotlight was now on North. He had already bid two spades but so far had not supported his partner's opening one-diamond bid. Taking his life in his hands, he bid five diamonds. All passed. Now let's be fair. Wouldn't you lead a club on this bidding, just as West did?

South won the queen of clubs and quickly cashed the ace, discarding dummy's singleton heart. Without any further ado, South led a spade from his hand. He did not mind losing two spade tricks if he could draw trumps ending in dummy and then run the remaining spade tricks. West played low and East won the 10. East now played a heart. Declarer ruffed in dummy and led another spade. West won the ace and continued with the heart ace. Declarer ruffed and then played two rounds of diamonds. When the diamonds split, declarer took the rest of dummy's spades to make his contract.

West might have defeated the contract if he had false-carded on the first diamond with his 10. Declarer might well have decided that West had started with the singleton 10 of diamonds. In that event, declarer must play spades from dummy after taking only one high diamond, intending to overruff when East ruffs and then go to dummy, drawing trump. Of course South would be unpleasantly surprised when West ruffed in with the five of diamonds as the setting trick.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Stand fast on a decision you've recently made. The position you have taken appears to be the right one. Time should later attest to this fact.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you feel you are entitled to better compensation for something in which you are presently involved, this is a good day to call it to the attention of people who can do something about it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You should be fortunate today in two arrangements you have with close friends. One is a loyal, old standby, while the other is a more recent acquaintance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're capable of resolving critical matters today if you set your mind to it. Give priority to situations that should be finalized.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) This is a good day to orchestrate something social that will give old friends a chance to meet your new ones.

Kindergarteners' mom at a loss about what to do with her time

DEAR ABBY: During the past 10 years, I have raised four children. The last two are twins. As the school year begins, I see my babies going off to school full time. What happens now?

We can't wait until our children say their first words, take their first steps, are finally out of diapers, and then—boom, they are off to kindergarten!

I actually looked forward to their being in school all day, but now that it has happened, I am lost. I don't know what to do with myself. I ask myself if I should take up a hobby or get a job. Or perhaps have another baby?

Am I crazy for feeling this way? Are there other mothers out there who have felt this way? BRENTWOOD, N.Y., MOM

DEAR MOM: You are not crazy, and yes, there are many moms out there who have felt this way. There's even a name for it—the "empty nest syndrome." And the cure is to fill your time with activities that will give you a feeling of accomplishment.

ADVICE

If you don't need to seek employment, I recommend volunteering to work with disabled children—or adults. Working with the elderly is also very rewarding. How about working for your church, your political party or one of the new groups organized to help the homeless? Take some classes, join a health club...the list is endless.

DEAR ABBY: Maybe it's a little early to be mentioning Christmas shopping, but maybe not. I am a widow in my 70s, and I have enough scarves, sweaters, colognes and dusting powders to last me a lifetime, but let me tell you what most people my age would really appreciate for Christmas, Cash!

Please don't think me greedy, but I enjoy going out for a nice lunch once a week, and it would be nice to be able to treat a friend. Also, if I had a few extra dollars, I would be able to buy something I really need. It would also come in handy when I want to send someone a nice card.

Perhaps your readers will appreciate this suggestion. It would save them racking their brains, wondering what to give an older person for Christmas. And they need not be concerned that a cash gift of $4 or $5 would seem small. It would please me more than a $10 gift for which I had no use.

ARKANSAS GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Thank you for a suggestion that will be appreciated by gift-givers as well as recipients.

P.S. How about a gift certificate to a nice restaurant?

Walton lost $1.8 billion; still richest American

United Press International

NEW YORK — Wal-Mart Stores Inc. founder Sam Walton, whose losses in last year's stock market crash could rank as the country's 16th largest individual fortune, still topped the Forbes list of the 400 richest Americans.

Walton, Wal-Mart's principal stockholder, headed the list last year with a net fortune of $8.5 billion. Since then, the value of his holdings in the Bentonville, Ark., retail chain has dropped by $1.8 billion.

If the money Walton lost during the stock market turmoil had been transferred to another individual, it would have made that person the 18th-richest American on the annual list compiled by the business magazine and released Monday.

Despite his losses in the stock market, Walton's current fortune of $6.7 billion made him ranked as the world's fifth-richest man in July by Forbes. His fortune is bettered only by three Japanese and a Canadian.

Walton had twice as much money as the second-richest American on the list, German-born John Werner Kluge.

Kluge, former chairman of Charlottesville, Va.-based Metromedia Co., had a net worth of $3.2 billion as of Aug. 30.

Henry Ross Perot, founder of Electronic Data Systems, followed Kluge with a personal fortune of $3 billion. The Texas founded the Dallas-based data processing company in 1982 with $1,000 from his wife.

The No. 4 and No. 5 spots were held by publishing tycoons Samuel Irving Newhouse Jr. and Donald Edward Newhouse. Each of the brothers, who currently live in New York City, had an estimated worth of $2.6 billion.

The Newhouse brothers supervise some of the nation's best known newspapers and magazines, including the New Yorker, Vanity Fair and Gourmet.

Pittsburgh venture capitalist Henry Lea Hillman was sixth on the list with an estimated fortune of $2.5 billion. Hillman's holdings include real estate and a fledgling biotechnology company.

Lester Crown of Chicago, whose father once owned the Empire State Building, was seventh in the ranking. Crown built his fortune, estimated at $2.3 billion, from extensive real estate holdings and other investments, including a family interest in the New York Yankees baseball team.

The minimum net worth for inclusion in the seventh annual Forbes list was $225 million, the same as last year

Williams, Oslin, Travis win at music awards

Hank Williams says winning again is 'sweeter than sugar'

United Press International

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — For Hank Williams Jr., named the Country Music Association's Entertainer of the Year for the second year in a row after being snubbed for decades, "the longer the wait, the sweeter the sugar."

Williams, son of late country legend Hank Williams, was a double winner, also taking Album of the Year for "Born To Boogie."

Also triumphant were country's newest superstar, Randy Travis, who repeated as Male Vocalist, and K.T. Oslin, the newest country sensation who snapped a four-year reign by former Oklahoma rodeo performer Reba McEntire as Female Vocalist. Oslin also won Song of the Year, given to a songwriter for her "80s Ladies."

The 22nd annual CMA awards, broadcast Monday night by CBS, featured virtually all the top acts in country during the two-hour show.

"Two in a row — whew!"

Williams said when accepting the Entertainer award. "It's just the greatest thing in the world. I just never would have figured that I would get this award twice in a row from you good people. All I can say is it's fantastic!"

Later at a press conference, Williams said. "I'm going to be 40 years old in May. It means a helluva lot. I've done 56 albums over 25 years. I finally got an award for a musical accomplishment. The longer the wait the sweeter the sugar. This sugar is the sweetest."

Williams beat out McEntire, Texas swing crooner George Strait, Travis and the mother-daughter team of The Judds for the top award in country music.

Before the announcement that Travis had repeated as Male Vocalist, hostess Dolly Parton sat on his lap in the audience.

"After all that, I find myself trying to remember what I just won," said the onetime dishwasher who has sold 6 million albums over the past three years.

Oslin, a one-time radio jingle writer whose songs about the problems of modern women vaulted her into both a critical and marketing success over the past two years, seemed more pleased with the songwriting win than Female Vocalist.

"I am thrilled to death to get this writing honor," said Oslin, who led all artists with five nominations. "This means a lot to me. It means I got a brain and people recognize that."

Perhaps the most surprising win of the night came to Highway 101, which won Group of the Year honors. Highway 101 has the country rock group which has had three straight No. 1 singles.

The prestigious Horizon Award went to drawing virtuoso Ricky Van Shelton. The award is given annually to the country act whose career had the most significant development over the past year.

Another surprise winner was West Virginia native Kathy Mattea, who won Single of the Year for "Eighteen Wheels and a Dozen Roses."

"I'm glad I'm wearing water-proof mascara," the tearful Mattea said she accepted her first CMA award. "I'm so touched. Thank you so much. It's been a long road."

The Judds won their fifth CMA award but their first Vocal Duo of the year. Naomi Judd gave the credit to daughter Wynonna whom she described as "a little chunk of heaven."

The CMA's first Vocal Event of the Year award went to Dolly Parton, Emmylou Harris and Linda Ronstadt for last year's "Trio" album.

Chet Atkins was named Instrumentalist of the Year.

The CMA show annually kicks off Country Music Week that climaxes with the Grand Ole Opry's 62nd birthday Saturday night.

Each year, the CMA also inducts performers or industry officials into two categories in the Hall of Fame. Loretta Lynn was inducted in the category open to either performer or industry official. In the Hall of Fame category for performers active more than 30 years ago, Roy Rogers was honored.

Winners were chosen by balloting among the membership of the Country Music Association's 5,500-6,000 voting members.

Bess Myerson trial focuses on Gabel's actions

United Press International

NEW YORK — Testimony by a government witness in the divorce-filing trial of Bess Myerson indicates that the judge accused in the case took an unusual personal interest in a divorce motion by Myerson's lover.

The witness, Howard Leventhal, who worked for state Supreme Court Justice Hortense Gabel for about six years, testified last week that Gabel decided to personally write a ruling lowering support payments that Carl "Andy" Capasso, a millionaire contractor, was required to give his wife, Nancy, in 1983.

Leventhal, who was to return to the witness stand for a fourth day today, testified Friday that Gabel previously had drafted her own rulings only on "two or three" occasions, leaving most such work to her legal assistants.

Myerson on trial with Capasso, her 43-year-old lover, and Gabel, 75, is accused of influencing the alimony payments in Capasso's divorce by giving the judge's daughter a $19,000-a-year job.

The 64-year-old former Miss America who went on to a career in television and politics, most recently as New York City's cultural affairs commissioner, faces up to 30 years in prison and $513 in fines if convicted. Capasso and Gabel each face up to 25 years imprisonment and $263,000 in fines.

In his testimony last week, Leventhal said Gabel temporarily lowered Capasso's alimony payments from $1,500 a week to $500 a week and child support from $350 to $180.

He also testified that Myerson, sometimes using assumed names and calling on Gabel's unlisted office number, often telephoned the judge in the summer of 1983, months before Sukhreet Gabel, 33, landed her city job. Sukhreet Gabel previously had a poor employment history.

Leventhal said a woman using the name Barbara Goodman or Barbara Robinson called on the private line more than a dozen times. When he asked Hortense Gabel about the caller, she replied, "Oh, that's Bess Myerson. She is just being so Byzantine." Leventhal testified.

On Friday, prosecutors submitted as evidence a letter that Myerson wrote to Mayor Edward Koch in 1983 defending her actions in what has become known as the "Bess Mess." Leventhal said the judge told him to file a copy of "Bess's letter to Ed."

Part of the letter, which Leventhal read, said most of the issues in the case had been decided before the daughter was hired by Myerson. "Thus," Leventhal read, "it seemed to me that not only was there in fact nothing improper in this action, but any basis for inferring or attributing the appearance of impropriety was absent."

He also said that while Gabel's ruling on Capasso's support payments was overturned by a higher court, this was not unusual.

Myerson is charged with conspiracy, mail fraud, obstruction of justice and using interstate facilities to break state bribery laws. Capasso and Gabel face the same charges except for obstruction of justice.

Premiere Deng threatens to tighten China's reins

United Press International

BEIJING — Mao Tse-tung's greatest feat, unifying China under communist rule, may be coming apart as provincial leaders use Deng Xiaoping's liberal reform program to create their own local fiefdoms.

So acute are Communist Party fears that the country may be disintegrating gradually into a collection of local spheres of influence that the 84-year-old Deng has threatened to dismiss regional officials who ignore central directives.

"The Central Committee has assigned power, but it can also take back that power," Chinese sources quoted Deng as warning in a major speech to provincial party secretaries at a crucial working conference last month.

And the Central Committee publicly demanded obedience from its 48 million members, reminding them "the party's role as the core of the leadership and party discipline should be stressed, local interests must be subordinated to those of the whole."

The warnings came as the party slammed the brakes on a reform program that has reduced dependence on rigid Soviet-style central planning while granting provinces the right to draw up budgets, control bank lending and obtain foreign investment for local projects.

The results have included a disorganized monetary policy, rampant black marketeering, the worst inflation under communist rule and nationwide corruption by officials who are exploiting an economy trapped between central planning and market freedom.

Deng's unpublicized address marks the second time in less than five years that he has tackled the divisive forces that led to the downfall of so many Chinese dynasties, which existed before communism arrived in 1949.

Since China's first emperor unified the country and won the "mandate of heaven," or the right to rule, in 221 B.C., the crucial task of every ruler has been to hold together his domain. Whether the system works always has been secondary to maintaining cohesion.

During the last 10 years, Deng has used his power to encourage sweeping market-oriented reforms that have granted increasing levels of autonomy to many of China's 29 provinces in a bid to boost economic efficiency and introduce competition.

Southern Guangdong Province, which borders Hong Kong, has been designated as an experimental zone for reform. Local officials there have called openly for yet more independence from Beijing — even suggesting a federation modeled on the United States — if their privileged status is to be effective.

Other coastal provinces also have been given special rights aimed at accelerating the development of export-oriented enterprises, a move that has aroused bitter resentment and inter-provincial rivalries from poorer inland areas.

Decentralization, in many cases, has placed nearly unlimited power in the hands of local party secretaries or provincial governors. Lower level officials have amassed similar influence in smaller dominions.

Many of them are simply ignoring central policy edicts on both political and economic issues, further fueling nationwide economic troubles that include overheated industrial growth and costly capital investment.

With the freeing up of the prices on some goods and materials, provincial leaders have used their power to ensure local factories get the raw materials they need, often at the expense of overall economic efficiency.

Signs of jaundice in Hirohito hinder his health

United Press International

TOKYO — Ailing Emperor Hirohito received another in a nearly daily regimen of blood transfusions today amid reports that his jaundice, a symptom of liver failure, has significantly worsened.

Imperial Palace spokesman Kenji Maeda said the 87-year-old emperor's condition was stable at 2 p.m. and his pulse rate and blood pressure had dropped in normal levels after increasing late Monday.

Although Hirohito has gone for a sixth day without a loss of blood, the palace said a team of five court doctors could not rule out the possibility that his internal hemorrhaging had not stopped.

Sources close to Hirohito's doctors said signs of jaundice have doubled, indicating an increase in the intestinal inflammation that set off Hirohito's health crisis Sept. 19, the Kyodo news service and major newspapers reported.

The sources said bilirubin, an orange substance usually occurring in the bile, has been detected in Hirohito's blood at 30 times the normal level.

Maeda said palace doctors did not tell him about the emperor's jaundice and refused to comment on the reports.

Bilirubin in the blood indicates Hirohito has jaundice caused by a failure of his liver, a destruction of red blood cells or a blockage in the ducts transferring bile from the liver to the intestine.

Hirohito, who is believed to be suffering from abdominal cancer, has been under intensive care in his Imperial Palace bedroom since he began bleeding internally

A palace staff member Monday quoted Hirohito as saying, "I'm fine. Please express my gratitude" to the nation of 121 million people.

The Japanese vigil for Hirohito entered its fourth week Monday, the countrywide holiday called National Athletes' Day.

On Monday, 48,000 people visited the palace grounds in central Tokyo to pay their respects. Since Hirohito fell ill, nearly 1 million visitors have signed registers at the palace grounds to wish for his recovery.

Hirohito has not discharged blood since Thursday, according to Maeda, but the nation remained in a watchful state that dampened the normally festive fall season. Doctors were unable to determine whether internal bleeding had ceased.

Hirohito, Japan's symbolic leader since 1926, discharged blood almost daily for two weeks before doctors began treating him with a new antibiotic.

The monarch's temperature was 98.9 F today, down a degree from Monday's reading. His pulse rate had improved from 103 beats per minute to 94 today.

The emperor received a small blood transfusion today in the afternoon — his 18th during his 23-day illness — and doctors cited continuing signs of jaundice and anemia.

Hirohito's youngest daughter, Takako Shimazu, 49, told reporters her father spoke in a strong voice as he discussed the weather during a morning visit.

Though Hirohito was formerly considered a god — and is blamed by many Japanese for the country's defeat in the war — he still commands nearly universal respect among Japanese.
