Tax Rebellion Here And There

The tax revolt has the nation's predominantly Democratic political establishment on the defensive.

The dominant issues in this year's primary elections, along with tax and spending limitation measures placed on November ballots in 11 states, leave no doubt that the rebellion is for real.

Touches of such a tax limitation rebellion are even being felt right here in Seminole County with the county commissioners adopting an ordinance placing on the Nov. 7 ballot the question of whether -the commission should be limited in its powers to levy taxes.

Whether voter reaction here will follow that in other parts of the nation is still to be determined. But the issue certainly has invaded our environs. But what about the political ramifications nationally from these goings-on?

Very much in doubt is whether Republicans the logical beneficiaries of the revolt - can ride this wave of sentiment to a larger share of political power in the nation's state houses and on Capitol

The primaries saw many erstwhile liberal Democrats trimming their campaign rhetoric to reflect the public's rising resentment of high taxes, inflation and big government.

Public opinion polls continue to show voters drifting to the right. The same polls suggest Republicans will register only marginal gains in the House and Senate this November And, although the GOP may pick up several additional governorships, it faces leng odds in fighting to regain 800 legislative seats lost since the For an off-year election in which the party out of power is supposed to make strong gains, Republican prospects are not encouraging. It's been noted, correctly, that fever to cut taxes and reduce the burden of government

The DFL, at the ripe old age of 34, is going through a classic mid-life crisis. And it is not so much external pressures (e.g., Republicans and a nationwide tax revolt) that threaten its wellbeing as various internal stresses that erapted with emberrassing ferocity in the Sept. 12

It is difficult for outsiders to comprehend the panic that swept through much of the DFL when millionaire businessman Robert Short narrowly defeated liberal Rep. Don Fraser, the party's endorsed candidate for Humphrey's old Senate

That is because outsiders have never understood how fragile the alliance is that Hurnphrey welded a generation ago between the radical, protest-oriented Farmer-Labor party and the urban, organization-minded Democratic BUSINESS WORLD Party of the New Deal. For thirty-some years, Hubert H. Humphrey not only held the uneasy marriage together, but managed to keep the DFL identified with a coherent philosophy of liberalism and social activism. Orville Freeman, Eugene McCarthy, Walter F. Mondale - all were outstanding graduates of the Humphrey school of politics. Yet for those same thirty-odd years, Bob Short, whose roots are essentially in the old Farmer-Labor using of the party, was also a yas industrial giants, says Don Delferine, major factor in the DFL. Short regularly warred against many of the liberals who dominated the party and against the unique endorsement system the DFL establishment used to forestall bloody primary fights.

Running against the "bosses," Short helped deliver Minnesota's 1966 national convention delegates to Estes Kelauver, whipping Humphrey and his Adlai Stevenson supporters. In governor, Short teamed up with Rolvang in the "Petromarket 79." primary and beat the endorsed state - only to

About Not So Fresh-Men

By DON GRAFF Back to school is acquiring new meaning

It is no longer primarily a matter of millions of students in the traditional elementary to college-level ages picking up studies in the fall where they left off in the spring.

Increasing numbers of older citizens are also returning to classrooms. Currently, something like 23 percent of college and university students are on the mature side of 30. In very round numbers, that works out to some two-and-a-half

The trend has been underway for several years. Federal Office of Education figures covering the 1973-77 period show an enrollment increase of 80 percent for the 30-34 age group and 60.7 percent for 35 and older. For the same period, the 18-and 19-year-olds, the traditional new men and women on campus, registered only a 9 percent increase.

The mature students are going back to school for a variety of reasons. Some are improving job skills or making midlife career changes and developing new skills for new jobs. Some are resuming studies interrupted years before, others finally beginning long-postponed educations. Women whose children have left the nest are turning to school for self-improvement or to begin careers. Others are combining education with continuing family
