Took 4 Officers To Wrestle It Down

Sanford Police Grab Wild Hog That Gored Poodle

By DIANE PETRYK
Herald Staff Writer

It wasn't a greased-pig contest, but at times it looked like one. Only the "contestants" were uniformed Sanford police officers.

It all started when Myra Schanel, N. Virginia Ave. in the Mayfair section of Sanford, heard a strange noise outside her home about 2:30 p.m. Saturday. It was a sound like a dog's ears flapping, she said, and she went outside to see if there was a dog bothering her trustful poodle Missy.

But all she saw, Mrs. Schanel said, was Missy running into the garage.

When she looked into the garage, she saw "a big black animal."

Suddenly the animal took a swipe at the poodle with its snout, gored the dog with a tusk and flipped it into the air. The dog did a complete somersault.

Without taking time out to be scared, Mrs. Schanel ran into the garage, scooped up Missy and ran.

Sometime in the chain of events she screamed, she said, and her husband came running. They called the Sanford police.

Two squad cars and two unmarked police cars responded in minutes, Mrs. Schanel said. That was when the incident got a little funny.

"Four policemen actually had to wrestle the hog," and it was squirming," she said. "And you never heard such squealing in your life."

"It was the wild hog that was squealing, not the police," she added. The officers grabbed it by the hind legs and at one point one of the officers "had to get onto the hog almost like he was riding it," she said, "to hold it down."

The officers then bound the hog's back legs, front legs and snout and carried it to the trunk of an unmarked car.

"The snout had to be bound very tight," Mrs. Schanel said.

"The officers said these wild hogs have very powerful jaws."

Sanford police officers were tight-lipped about their hog-wrestling episode, but police spokesman Herb Shea said Lt. Ralph Russell, Det. Ray Bronson and Patrolman Ron Nance were on the scene.

'You never heard such squealing in your life. It was the wild hog that was squealing, not the police.'

Further information is sketchy, since the department does not seem to know the current status of the hog Shea called a "Piney Woods Rooter."

Mrs. Schanel said police promised her the hog would be penned and watched for rabies, since it had gored her poodle.

"And it was a 300-pounder," she said. "That's for sure. It took four men to carry it."

"I had asked them to have the hog watched," she said. "After all, it did slit my poodle's throat. Not too deep, but still she could have gotten rabies."

When called back this morning for confirmation that the hog had been released, Shea was unavailable for comment. A police officer who was on the scene reported through the officer who answered the phone that the hog was penned, but refused to say where.

Sanford Police Chief Ben Butler said his men have the hog penned up but would not disclose the location, saying the department fears someone may try to get it before it can be determined if it has rabies or not. Then, Butler said, if it is rabid and someone took it, there would be more problems.

Missy went to a veterinarian today.

Legislators Keep Out Of Appeal Fight

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

In 1959, when the Florida Legislature adopted a law permitting sheriffs to appeal budget decisions of county commissioners to the governor and the Cabinet, a different political climate existed than today.

Individual county commissioners might have differences with a sheriff that could wind up with the chief law-enforcement officer of the county being refused adequate funding for his department.

But that time has passed, said Florida Secretary of State George Firestone, in Sanford last week to discuss the Haitian immigrant problems the state is facing.

Firestone, a member of the Cabinet that will be hearing Seminole County Sheriff John Polk's budget appeal Nov. 3, said he would support repeal of the 1959 law.

While Seminole County's two resident legislators have opposing views on whether Polk should have the right to appeal his budget to Tallahassee, neither wishes to become directly involved.

State Rep. Bobby Brantley, R-Longwood, agrees that home rule should prevail. He said that while he does not plan to introduce the legislation Firestone is proposing, he would not oppose it.

"I'm adamantly opposed to that method (appeal to the governor and Cabinet on a budgetary matter). It flies in the face of everything the Legislature has been saying for the past few years," Brantley said. "The County Commission is going to take the heat if it has to raise taxes. The people will remember that the County Commission did it."

"That's what really bothers me about bringing the issue to Tallahassee," he added. "The governor and Cabinet are totally removed from the situation. The Cabinet won't take any heat for a spending increase."

"I'm not sure Tallahassee is the place to take care of the problem. If Seminole County residents feel more dollars are needed for the Sheriff's Department and the county commissioners do not provide the dollars, the voters can take care of the problem at the next election," Brantley said.

State Rep. Robert Hattaway, D-Altamonte Springs, said that basically the sheriff has to have some way to fund his budget if he doesn't agree with the commission. "I'm not sure I agree with the secretary of state," Hattaway said. "There could be a problem with personalities on the local level. A personality problem could be devastating to law enforcement."

"The sheriff should have the right to go to another area and try to get the funding he believes he needs," Hattaway said.

Brantley, from his Tallahassee office, pointed out the sheriff has certain things he must provide that are mandated by state and federal law, such as the degree of staffing at the jail.

"In a lot of situations, sheriffs are trying to cover themselves by exhausting all remedies to provide what is required by law. If the budget process is halted at the county commission level and there are violations of the staffing requirement, the sheriff will have removed himself from the problem and the commission will have taken on the

Winter Springs Mayor Troy Piland (right) tells County Commissioner Sandra Glenn and Lake Mary Mayor Walter Sorenson how he engineered the floor fight at the Florida

League of Cities convention Saturday that won him the office of second vice president of the statewide organization. Sorenson, a delegate from Lake Mary, assisted Piland in garnering votes.

Seminole Back In Limelight

Piland Wins League Of Cities Post

Winter Springs Mayor Troy Piland was elected second vice president of the Florida League of Cities Saturday, the final day of the organization's statewide convention in Orlando.

And for the first time in at least 25 years, Seminole County is represented among the officers of the league, which has as members most of the cities in Florida.

Piland, 41, won the office in a floor fight after losing the recommendation of the organization's nominating committee. The panel had voted 12-3 to recommend Daytona Beach Mayor Larry Kelly for the office.

Piland was not told his margin of victory after he took the issue of his candidacy to the convention floor and garnered support not only from Seminole County delegates cities, but also from delegates in much of Central Florida, including Orange, Osceola, and Lake, and from Duval, St. Johns, Broward, Brevard, Palm Beach, Pinellas, Hillsborough and Polk counties.

Piland's election marked only the second time in recent years an officer of the league has been elected from the floor contrary to the wishes of the nominating committee.

Only a year ago, at the league convention, Piland was elected to the board of directors. In becoming a candidate for the second vice presidency, he gave up his safe director's post. However, as second vice president he is automatically a member at large of the board of directors.

Piland said he will be meeting with Dania Mayor Billy Howell, new president of the league, in the next few weeks to learn what the duties of his office will be. Piland said that generally the second vice president assists the president in whatever chores and with whatever committees the president wishes.

Piland, completing 10 years in elected office, first as a councilman and then as mayor of Winter Springs, has been elected unopposed to another two-year term in the mayor's office. He is also the chairman of the Seminole County Democratic Executive Committee. Elected offices in Winter Springs are non-partisan. Piland also is past chairman of the Tri-County League of Cities, encompassing Seminole, Orange and Osceola counties.

Lake Mary Mayor Walter Sorenson, who assisted Piland in his bid for election at the convention, said Piland had a great deal of support statewide, and campaign pins Piland had printed in advance of the convention dotted the auditorium of the Sheraton Twin Towers, the convention site, Saturday. — DONNA ESTES

Energy Audit

Here's What Will Happen When The Auditor Visits You

By DIANE M. JEFFERSON
Herald Staff Writer
Second of Three Parts

One of the first things an energy auditor checks in your home is insulation in your attic. He checks both the type of insulation material used and the degree of resistance to heat flow, also called the R-value.

Tim Dell, the Florida Power & Light Co. (FPL) energy auditor who had come to check Anne Lucas' home on Palmetto Avenue in Sanford, says the way a material looks can sometimes be deceiving.

People often think that because their homes have sturdy wooden walls they are adequately insulated. This is not the case, says Dell. Figures published by FPL indicate a board of maple, oak, or a similar hardwood one inch thick has an R-value of only 0.91. Two concrete blocks placed together in an eight-inch thickness have an R-value of only 1.04. Glass fiber has the most heat resistance, with an R-value of R-19 for a batt, or pre-cut blanket, measuring between five and six inches thick.

Dell brought a ladder into the house from his car and prepared to climb into the crawl space in Mrs. Lucas' attic.

He found a previous owner had placed insulation with the silver vapor barrier intact on top of older insulation. Instead of increasing the amount of insulation, this only served to keep humidity inside the attic. Whenever new insulation is added, the vapor barrier must be ripped to let air flow to the older insulation. The vapor barrier is always laid on the attic floor, facing down. This prevents heat from the attic from flowing down into the house.

Dell checked Mrs. Lucas' duct work in the attic. A loose or hanging duct will channel cool air (or heat) into the attic instead of down into the living area. Many homes have hanging ducts, says Dell. It is an item many people do not often check.

Mrs. Lucas' home was insulated to an R-value of only R-5. Dell recommended she increase the value to R-19, which is the value FPL research has found to be most effective for Florida homes. Insulating properly can reduce your electric bill by as much as one-third.

After checking the attic, Dell removed the plate on a wall outlet to check the insulation in the walls. Walls should be insulated to a value of at least R-5. He placed his hand over the outlet to see if he felt air movement. You, too, should check your outlets, especially on the northern walls of your home. During the winter, cold air can seep into a home through electrical outlets, causing drafts.

There is a way to prevent this. Dell showed Mrs. Lucas insert pads, insulating material cut to the size and shape of a standard wall outlet. The plate is unscrewed and the insert placed against the outlet. Then the plate is screwed back in place again. Dell said these can be purchased at home-improvement stores.

Some older homes, especially those built on raised foundations off the ground, could use more insulation underneath to prevent cold air from infiltrating through the floor during the winter. Some older homes also have water pipes running the entire length of the flooring. These lose heat energy during the winter, and the water often cools. The pipes can be insulated by buying sections of a rubber-type hose. It is slit and placed as a collar around the pipes. This reduces heating costs, because the water heater does not have to keep coming on to heat up water which has cooled through heat transfer and loss in the pipes.

If you have a water heater outside your home in a utility room, insulate it with a thermal blanket. Mrs. Lucas' water heater was next to her stove, so Dell told her a thermal blanket would not be necessary. Heat from the stove would do the job, in her case. However, he turned the unit off and removed the front panel to check the thermostat setting. He lowered it to 120 degrees. This is sufficient for a family without a dishwasher. If your unit has dual thermostats, set the top one at 120 and the lower one 10 degrees lower. Dell says the top thermostat needs to be at a higher setting, since water flow is off the top of your tank. This prevents both elements from coming on when only the top one is necessary.

NEXT: Cut down on water usage.

Woman Kidnapped, Raped At Gunpoint

By DIANE PETRYK Herald Staff Writer
A 27-year-old Orlando woman was kidnapped in the parking lot of the New York Times Club, U.S. Highway 17-92, Maitland, Saturday and raped at gunpoint, according to Seminole County Sheriff's deputies.

The victim told deputies she was walking through the parking lot at about 10 p.m. when a man stuck a pistol in her back and said "Don't scream."

He then pushed her into the back of an older sedan, possibly an Oldsmobile 98, deputies said. She was driven to an unknown alley between two buildings where the driver sexually assaulted her while a second subject pointed the gun at her.

Deputies said the victim would not pinpoint the location of the assault but said the drive from the club to the alley took approximately 20 minutes. The subjects took the woman's purse, hat, and wallet containing $50 cash, deputies said, before letting her out near Florida Hospital-Orlando.

At 8:20 a.m. she and her husband went out to the store to investigate and found Goodall in the act of removing merchandise. Other merchandise was already in Goodall's vehicle, deputies said.

Goodall was attempted to flee in his vehicle, but ran into a fence and an oak tree, totaling his car, deputies said. Found in the neighborhood was a 1974 Ford coupe, which was towed to the Sanford Police Department.

Cabinet A Mafia By Any Other Name...

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — In the months after freshman Gov. Bob Graham hired Tampa consultant Garry Smith to be his chief of staff in January, 1979, so many of Smith's neighbors joined the team, the media started referring to the "Tampa Mafia."

A month ago, Smith resigned to run Graham's reelection campaign. Graham chose former Jacksonville City Councilman Richard Burroughs to replace him. Then, last week, Graham's first two major appointments were trial attorney Raymond Ehrlich for the Supreme Court and accountant Samuel Sorstein as secretary of the embattled Department of Professional Regulation.

Will the Tampa Mafia be replaced by the Jacksonville Mafia? "No," declared Press Secretary Steve Hill who never admitted there was a Tampa Mafia. "That first two appointments after Burroughs happened to be from Jacksonville was coincidental," Hill said in an interview.

"The governor thought the trial experience of Ehrlich would be an asset to the court. There were no regional considerations," he said. Sorstein, an old University of Florida classmate of Graham, had told the governor during the campaign he'd like to work for government if the opportunity came. Burroughs, who he recommended Ehrlich, but "I was surprised when he appointed him. His choice just happened to be my choice."</

Farm Bill Is National Scandal

The perennial bill to assure a high level of prices for farm products was passed last month by the Senate and now is making its way in the House. The farm bill is state-of-the-art pork-barreling, the classic example of how relatively small but powerful special interests continue to get programs enacted that deepen the federal deficit, heighten consumer prices, and defraud a vast majority of the American people.

What began as a federal effort almost half century ago to stabilize the nation's shattered farm economy has degenerated into outright subsidies, accompanied by outrageous waste and a disastrous suspension of marketplace disciplines. As a result, a bumper food crop, which ordinarily would mean lower prices is bad news for consumers and taxpayers alike because the government steps in and buys up the surplus to ensure a targeted price. Besides keeping food prices unrealistically high at a cost of billions of dollars, the food surpluses must be stored at tremendous additional costs. And because farmers are assured price supports, no matter what, they produce as much as possible without regard to oversupply and demand.

The consequence is an embarrassment of riches. Our butter stockpile now totals some 200,000 tons and is growing at a rate of about 10 million pounds every week. Nearly $2 billion was spent for 13 billion pounds of dairy product supports last year alone.

The administration has been considering selling 100,000 tons of butter on the world market at $1.05, which would mean a $50 million tax subsidy to the purchasers, most likely the Soviets. Never mind that millions of Americans can't afford to buy butter in the supermarkets because it is priced at more than $2 a pound.

Senate-passed price support for sugar growers at 18 cents a pound would ensure that U.S. housewives pay dearly for a product that our Latin American and Caribbean neighbors are eager to supply at much cheaper costs and at considerable benefits to their limping economies. And tobacco, with government scientists proclaiming to be a health hazard, continues to enjoy price supports. Altogether, the four-year farm bill is scheduled to cost the taxpayers about $14 billion, and no one can calculate the additional costs in higher food prices.

The farm bill is a political marvel of delicate vote trading. Congressmen representing peanut, grain, cotton, and rice work the floor for their dairy colleagues and vice versa. Congressmen from urban districts, in turn, go along with the farm bloc, despite the costs to their constituents, in order to keep their votes for bounteous food stamps they wish to distribute.

Fortunately, last week some sanity crept into the House's farm deliberations. An amendment by Rep. Peter Peyser, D-N.Y., was approved that knocks out a price support of 18 cents a pound for raw sugar, approved earlier by the Senate. If sustained, this amendment would save U.S. consumers almost $3 billion a year.

Moreover, the House enacted another amendment by Rep. Stanley Lundine, D-N.Y., that would place peanuts in the same category as grain, soybeans and cotton — that would permit all farmers to grow peanuts and not just 60,000 who now control the entire commercial peanut production.

Even so, the House farm bill is still beyond the administration's budgetary limits, which the Senate version remained close to because of the threat of a presidential veto of the entire farm program.

A final House vote on the farm bill is scheduled this week after which House-Senate differences must be settled in conference. Despite administration pressures to hold down farm price supports, whatever emerges will still represent an awful victory of narrow, special interests over public interests. This is particularly galling for the American people in a time of fiscal restraints and painful budget cuts.

U.S. Rep. Bill Chappell, D-Orla., has announced that a bill he sponsored creating a National Tourist Policy, has been signed into law. Chappell's 4th Congressional District includes part of Sanford.

He called the new law a "milestone in the journey toward proper recognition of travel, tourism and recreation."

For the first time, the United States has a comprehensive tourism policy and to the State of Florida where tourism is the number one industry, this means a lot, he said.

"It is only through this new tourism policy that we can create the appropriate atmosphere which will lead to continued growth in the tourism market. This, in turn, will reduce further our balance of payments deficit and generate more jobs in the private sector," Chappell said.

Chappell said the new law calls for an Under Secretary of Commerce for Tourism. In addition, a special advisory board will be created to draw on the expertise of the travel and tourism community. And, more than 50 agencies administering programs which impact the industry will be coordinated through an interagency council.

Persons wishing to appear before the Seminole County Legislative Delegation at either of its two public hearings in November should call Charlotte Gibb, administrative assistant to State Rep. Robert Hattaway, D-Altamonte Springs, at 834-9355 by Friday to have their names placed on either meeting's agenda.

The two scheduled meetings before the 1982 session of the Florida Legislature convenes on Jan. 18 are scheduled for Nov. 4 at 3 p.m. at the Altamonte Springs City Commission Chambers at city hall on Newburyport Avenue and on Nov. 17 at 3 p.m. at the Sanford City Commission Chambers at city hall on Park Avenue.

The Legislature is meeting three months earlier than usual because of the work necessary to complete reapportionment of state House and Senate districts and of congressional districts. Hattaway is chairman of the local legislative delegation. Other members of the delegation are State Rep. Bobby Brantley, R-Longwood and State Sens. John Vogt, D-Cocoa Beach, and Clark Maxwell, R-Melbourne.

Uses Of Ex-Presidents

We now have a rare situation and one of great potential usefulness: three living former presidents, all of them vigorous and in good health, and all of them intensely involved intellectually in political matters, especially foreign policy.

Richard Nixon is in constant touch with political figures here and abroad. His advice is sought, and he willingly gives it. What liberal columnists think of Richard Nixon does not matter to serious men of affairs.

Gerald Ford travels a great deal, and, though he keeps a low profile, he also keeps in touch.

All indications are that the same is true of Jimmy Carter.

The unhappy event of Anwar Sadat's funeral focused public attention on these three men, and we now have that remarkable transcript of a conversation between Ford and Carter aboard their Air Force jet over the Atlantic.

Under mounting political pressure, Reagan continues to be a lucky politician, and he got some unexpected political dividends from the Sadat assassination.

All three former presidents support the administration's AWACS sale to the Saudi Arabians, and that should be enough to get the deal through the U.S. Senate.

Such a consensus lifts the issue above partisan politics and defuses some of the passions surrounding it.

Wavering senators now feel that they can tell their constituents that, after all, three former presidents — two Republicans and one Democrat — support the sale.

It has been a long time since we have had a bi-partisan stand in foreign policy, but on this issue the three former presidents have provided one.

In the dark days of 1951, with Europe prostrate and NATO merely a blueprint and with isolationist forces in Congress under the leadership of Robert Taft growing in strength, President Truman called upon Dwight Eisenhower for political support on the issue of Europe.

Eisenhower provided it. He took the command in Europe. He addressed a joint session of Congress.

Truman lacked the political prestige to accomplish what Eisenhower accomplished for him, the Atlantic Alliance became a reality.

Today, our crisis area is the Middle East. The three former presidents have the prestige to support a strong Reagan policy in the area.

Out of office, they can speak from the perspective of the national interest. Unlike Reagan, unlike the senators and congressmen, they are not running for reelection.

Thus, in their recorded conversation, both Ford and Carter favored negotiating with the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

Mr. Ford favored an earlier return of the rest of the Sinai to Egypt, as a gesture of good will. He proposed a visible movement toward political autonomy for the Arabs of the West Bank.

Carter spoke movingly of the "hundreds of thousands of Palestinians deprived of a home, deprived of a right to own property...and living now for approaching a generation under military rule."

The three former presidents said some things that needed to be said, and in doing so they gave President Reagan greater room for maneuver.

I have long favored a constitutional amendment that would give former presidents a seat in the U.S. Senate.

Big Business Supports Saudi Interests

WASHINGTON — Whichever way the Senate votes on the AWACS sale — and barring any startling last-minute development it should be a squeaker — the Republic will survive. But you wouldn't know it from the near-hysterical tone adopted by some of the people who are lobbying on both sides of the issue.

Everything from ponderous national security arguments to emotional "win-one-for-the-Gipper" appeals have been used to bring pressure on wavering senators. But the increasing shrillness only accentuates the plain fact that neither supporters nor opponents of the controversial deal have concerned the market on truth and logic.

In this atmosphere, it's almost refreshing to observe the undisciplined self-interest reflected in the lobbying activities of the business community in favor of selling the radar planes to Saudi Arabia. For Big Business, money makes the world go 'round, and it's the Saudis who have the money. Maybe it's because there's an unabashed friend of business in the White House; maybe it's because the other arguments in favor of the sale are less persuasive. Whatever the reason, the corporate flacks are not shy about stressing the profit motive in their approach to a political issue.

With all the subtlety of a tank truck barreling along the Jersey Turnpike, one large Mobil Oil advertisement included a list of American companies selling goods or services to the Saudis under the heading, "38 Billion in Business for U.S. Firms."

Mobil's p.r. men didn't even feel it necessary to mention the AWACS deal at all. The ad explained that the list of American corporations on the Saudi list was "presented in the interest of constructive debate on a critical national issue."

Two industrial giants that have taken a leading part in the pro-AWACS campaign are United Technologies and the Bechtel Corp. Interestingly, the administration's most outspoken defenders of the AWACS sale were executives of the same firms before joining the Reagan Cabinet. Secretary of State Alexander Haig was UT president; Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger was vice president and chief counsel of Bechtel.

Bechtel, a construction and engineering conglomerate, has extensive interests in Saudi Arabia, and thus could be among the perceived targets of Saudi wrath if the AWACS deal falls through. But United Technologies' stake in the sale is more direct: It makes the engines for AWACS planes.

Bechtel, in a letter to members of Congress, pointedly warned that the AWACS deal "directly affects not only U.S. economic concerns, but those of our NATO and Far Eastern allies" — which also happen to be customers of Bechtel.

My associate Lucette Lagnado has seen a long telegram sent by UT's chairman, Harry Gray, to the firm's suppliers, urging them to lobby on behalf of the sale. He asked the suppliers to wire their senators and added, "Would you also send me a copy of your communication to the senators?"

WHAT NEXT? At this writing, the Senate vote is too close to call with confidence. But I predict that the direct warnings of both sides won't materialize. If the Senate kills the sale, President Reagan will not be stripped of his control over foreign policy, and the Saudis won't cut off trade with the United States. If the sale goes through, Israel will not be destroyed, nor will vital U.S. technology fall into the Kremlin's clutches. Everything included in the sale can already be purchased on the open market, and by the time the first AWACS plane is delivered in 1985, the Soviets will probably have radar planes of their own, superior to the AWACS' 26-year-old technology.

How Not To Get Conned

The old con games are alive and well, and costing the nation's consumers "at least $21 billion a year," according to a new, 22-page Justice Department pamphlet titled "How Not to Be Conned."

Con is still slang, my dictionary says, short for the word confidence. It's been transformed into a transitive verb meaning: "To swindle a victim by first gaining his confidence." A second, broader definition is "to trick or fool by glib persuasion."

The point of the Justice Department's compendium of fraud is to alert you to the various con games still thriving. The booklet was prepared as part of a campaign run by the Crime Prevention Coalition, 42 national organizations ranging from the AFL-CIO to the U.S. Jaycees. The pamphlet says: "Free enterprise. The open market. It's the American way. And most of the time it works. Unfortunately, it works for dishonest businesses as well as honest ones."

So the old phrase, let the buyer beware, still applies — everywhere.

For example: Crooked repair people don't fix your problem but charge you anyway. Some use inferior parts, others charge you for work you didn't expect and some even "insure" further work by making sure something else soon will go wrong.

Fraudulent home improvement firms offer "free" inspections or unusually low prices for expensive jobs.

Land developers can take you for a ride, especially in the Sunbelt. Many are required by law to file a statement with the U.S. Housing and Urban Development Department. If you have doubts, write HUD's Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration, 451 Seventh St., SW, Washington, D.C. 20410 for a copy of the developer's property report. Cost: $2.50.

Those work-at-home cons are ubiquitous. The catch is that after you buy the parts and provide the labor you expect to sell finished products back to the parts seller — but the company won't buy back the finished products.

Watch out for chance-of-a-lifetime investments in new companies. The pamphlet notes: "The swindler takes the investor's money and quietly goes out of business." Another type of fraud is the "pyramid franchise," in which there are hundreds of distributors but no one to sell the merchandise.

Door-to-door salespeople use the "small monthly payments" line, but often you wind up paying outrageous interest rates. Vital information for you: A new Federal Trade Commission rule provides that any salesperson who sells you $25 or more worth of goods at your home must give you a written contract and two notice-of-cancellation forms. You have three days to change your mind.

Charity fraud is widespread. If you have doubts about a solicitor's legitimacy, consult the National Information Bureau, 212-532-8595, or the Philanthropic Advisory Service, 202-862-1230.

There's a wild spectrum of self-improvement, medical and health frauds. The pamphlet reports a Texas lab sold more than 15,000 "fail-safe urine tests for cancer" at $10 a test before being put out of business. Watch out for "miracle" diets and cures and such marvels as learning to speak Spanish in your sleep.

Bait-and switch is classic. An unscrupulous business lures you into a store for the $100 stereo system it advertises, then a salesman badmouths the $100 system and steers you to the $300 system. In some cases he's "just run out" of the well-advertised bait bargain.

Mail fraud is rife. You've "won" something or you get a "gift" you didn't order. You can return the gift to "sender" free. If you haven't opened the package, you can throw it away; you can keep it, free; whatever you do, don't pay for unsolicited merchandise. "By law," the pamphlet says, "the gift is yours to keep."

The pamphlet gives you solid tips on how to avoid being conned. My only gripe with it is that it costs $2. It ought to be free because this is the kind of information Americans need.

But it's worth two bucks. You can get it by writing the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 213J, Pueblo, CO 81009. Don't forget to enclose $2 in a money order or check.

Fiscal Integrity Is Lacking

WASHINGTON (NEA) — If Jamie L. Whitten and Mark O. Hatfield were the financial officers of a responsible organization, they would have been fired weeks ago for failure to prepare an annual budget in time for the new fiscal year.

But the two men are in no danger of losing their jobs because they're employed by an organization that takes perverse pride in its lack of fiscal integrity. They're both members of Congress.

Whitten, a Mississippi Democrat, is chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. Hatfield, an Oregon Republican, is chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

In theory, when the 1981-82 fiscal year began on Oct. 1, both houses of Congress should have completed work on the 13 appropriations bills that traditionally delineate the amount of public funds to be spent by each federal department and agency in the ensuing 12 months.

In fact, when the new fiscal year arrived, the House had approved only nine appropriations bills and the Senate had completed action on exactly one measure.

As a result, the entire federal government today is being financed under a parliamentary device known as a "continuing resolution," which allows spending to continue at the rate established for the 1980-81 fiscal year.

The habitual delinquency of Congress in approving appropriations bills is only one manifestation of a haphazard fiscal operation that surely would qualify as the subject of a highly publicized congressional investigation if it was conducted in any location except Capitol Hill.

Billions of dollars are appropriated on the basis of political proclivities rather than rational judgment. Amendments to appropriations bills — known as "riders" — are routinely used to distort or destroy entire federal programs.

Inadequate planning produces ex post facto rescissions (withdrawal of money appropriated earlier) or supplemental appropriations to provide funds not appropriated earlier.

In the mid-70s, Congress finally became embarrassed by its chronic failure to approve all appropriations measures before the beginning of the fiscal year, then set at July 1.

Rather than improve its procedures, however, Congress decided in 1976 to resolve the problem by moving the opening of the fiscal year back to Oct. 1, thus giving itself three additional months for debate and deliberation.

But in the ensuing five years, Congress has met its new deadline only once, in 1977.

The Budget Act of 1974, which was supposed to reform the process, established Sept. 15 as the deadline for fixing an overall ceiling on the federal budget — but Congress still hasn't satisfied that legal requirement this year.

Like everything else in this city, the budget process is heavily influenced by the vicissitudes of politics and the mandates of archaic laws.

Thus, President Carter formally presented to Congress an elaborate proposed budget for the 1981-82 fiscal year last Jan. 15 — even though he and everybody else knew it wasn't worth the paper it was printed on because he was scheduled to leave office only five days later.

BERRY'S WORLD

"I like a woman who has so much confidence, she can act like a dingaling!"

Sinister Seminars At 'Spy U'

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (NEA) — The Virginia Chamber of Commerce likes to say that all roads in this part of the state lead to public curiosities: to Jamestown, the first English settlement in America; to Yorktown, the Revolutionary battle site; and to Williamsburg itself.

Those who have been through Camp Peary say it's like a cloak and dagger college, except that all of the homework is prudently shredded.

But there is one road here that leads to a curiosity of a different sort. That's Route 142 to Camp Peary. Motorists who take it are stopped at a formidable gatehouse, in the yellow glare of flashing lights, and are brusquely told by armed guards to turn around and hightail it out of the area.

Camp Peary is the principal training base for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency. And it's hushhush, which is to say under the mat. CIA operatives call it "the Farm," local residents know it as "Spy U."

It very definitely is not on Southeastern Virginia's tour bus itinerary. It is however, on the itinerary of those whom the government recruits for intelligence work. For this is where men and women are taught to become clandestine agents.

Those who've been through Camp Peary say it's like a cloak and dagger college, except that all of the homework is prudently shredded.

For sure, it is in something of a collegiate setting. There are forests and streams about, deer and wild ivy. Early in the century there was a small community here, but the civilians were displaced long ago; during World War II the war department turned the town into a prisoner-of-war camp.

became an intelligence critic, says Camp Peary is the CIA's West Point; classes are held the year around for both foreign and domestic students.

The classes are held in buildings that range across at least 500 acres of land. The camp itself stretches for almost five miles along an interstate highway. Students are housed in guest quarters for a few days, or perhaps a few weeks, and the instruction is presented in converted barracks.

Some of the instruction is what it might be expected to be. Graduates of Spy U say students learn how to pick locks, to tap phones and to open envelopes without detection. Then there is a course or two on spying itself; that is, on the fine art of observing others without their knowing.

But there are more sinister classes too. And the primary example is the paramilitary training. Graduates say some students learn to shoot people at Camp Peary, or to blow them up; besides this, there is instruction on knives, poisons, garrotes and on the lethal use of the hands.

One former agent has written that he learned how to make dum dum bullets on the Farm, and he was introduced to a bomb made of common ingredients including baking flour; he claims that when the components are mixed in appropriate amounts, they will explode by spontaneous combustion.

The former agent says he also became familiar with "a diabolical invention that might be called a mini-cannon." He describes it as a No. 10 fruit can filled with a plastic explosive. If the can is detonated, the steel top turns into a white-hot projectile that can incinerate a moving vehicle.

The former agent says he tested the mini-cannon on an abandoned school bus, and it worked so terribly well that he decided to quit the CIA then and there; he says he didn't think the intelligence agency had any legitimate reason to teach some people how to set other people on fire.

But the CIA disagrees. And so the students at Camp Peary are said to be trained as soldiers as well as spies. They hold parachute jumps, and read codes, they fire weapons and study microdots. Former students say that anything and everything has been taught at one time or another.

And it's all been taught in strict secrecy. For security is the major part of the Farm's curriculum. Many of the classes must be conducted from memory, personal notes must be burned, all trash is inspected before it is discarded, and even second-hand typewriter ribbons are destroyed.

The graduates say the place is tight as a tank. Nothing gets in or out unless it's authorized. The students are confined to specific areas, and the public is kept away by the armed guards. There are watchtowers, searchlights, and the fences are continuously patrolled by military police. Even the booby traps are cleared here at good old Spy U.

When the students get off for a weekend, maybe to visit one of those nearby tourist attractions, they are cautioned to stay close, stay sober and stay together; that way they can keep their well-trained eyes on each other.

They Remember The Holocaust

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It was the spring of 1945, shortly after the German surrender in World War II, and representatives of allied nations swept through Nazi concentration camps. Llewellyn Zullinger of Chambersburg, Pa., was among the liberators. He can remember all too well the sights and smells of dehumanizing horror and human incineration.

are part of a three-day international conference by camp survivors and some of the soldiers, doctors and correspondents who freed them.

The first International Liberators Conference, which begins today, is sponsored by the United States Holocaust Memorial Council.

One of its purposes is to publicize the mass murder of European Jews and other Nazi victims so the world will not forget or doubt the stories about Adolf Hitler's henchmen, officials said.

John Maitland of Whittier, Calif., was also a camp liberator and his recollections are vivid. "At Ebensee, how heaven and hell could be so close," he says. "The country around is beautiful, but the camp left a deeper impression on me than anything I have ever seen or felt."

Representatives of 13 nations, including the Soviet Union, and of the Jewish Brigade that fought alongside allied troops are taking part in the conference, being held at the State Department.

Council Chairman Elie Wiesel, the novelist, Mellon professor of humanities at Boston University and an authority on the Holocaust, calls the meeting "an extraordinary diplomatic event."

Heafner, Holland Grab Team Disney Championship

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (UPI) — Vance Heafner and Mike Holland shot a 9-under-par 53 Sunday to win the National Team Championship golf tournament by five strokes with a record-setting four-round score of 246 — 42 shots under par.

Heafner and Holland led the event from the start when they shot a 12-under-par 60 and predicted a score of 40-under or better would win the tournament at Walt Disney World.

Heafner's hot putter kept them alive in the second round when they shot 62 and Holland rolled for six birdies and an eagle to pace the team in the third round when they shot 61.

"There can't be any feeling better than right now," an elated Holland said. "I couldn't have done it with anybody else."

The team started the final round on the 7,187-yard Magnolia course with three pars before Heafner warmed up and sank birdies from four feet, 12-foot and seven feet on the fourth, fifth and sixth holes.

Sanford's Mike Wooten (right) finished 19th in the Boone Invitational. Tyler Johnson is behind him.

Averill Tops JV Girls

'Hounds Grab Invitational

By SAM COOK Herald Sports Editor

David Huggins' Lyman High School boys cross country team have been dominating the Seminole County competition most of the season.

Saturday, however, the Greyhound varsity and junior varsity stepped out of the county into the Boone Invitational and proceeded to run away from the Metro schools as well as the Five Star competition.

Huggins is quick to point out, though, that Edgewood didn't have two of its top runners, which would have made quite a difference.

"They'll win the state meet if all five run well," said Huggins. "But we ran fairly well, especially after I yelled a few words of encouragement."

The 'Hounds whipped Oak Ridge, 47-42, to take the varsity event and then stopped Rockledge, 38-43, for the JV title.

In the girls' competition, Lake Brantley coach Jim Marshall gave his five runners, the day off and ran his junior varsity team in the varsity meet.

Cross Country

will run varsity for the rest of the year," said Marshall, whose girls are one of the favorites for Saturday's Five Star Conference meet at Seminole Community College.

McBroom was suffering from a pulled muscle in his right hip and hadn't run since Monday. Senior Adam DeMino bolstered McBroom's effort with a seventh place finish in 18:22.

Bret Stockdale (10th, 18:28), Brian Hunter (13th, 18:42), Carl Schmalmaack (14th, 18:43) and Greg Stapleton (18th, 17:30) completed the Greyhound herd.

Seminole Junior Mike Wooten ran 19th in 17:08. "He's coming along real well. He was right up there with the leaders for a while," said Huggins about Sanford's first-year runner.

Lake Brantley's Tom Palmer had the Patriots best time with a fifth place finish in 16:18.

Shari Killian (13:25) was 15th and Kim Labowen (13:28) was 16th. "Those two gain after strong safety Neal Colzie fell down. Franklin accounted for the tiebreaking points four plays later."

White Outduels Woodley, 28-27

IRVING, Texas (UPI) — Danny White threw two touchdown passes in a 21-second stretch of the fourth quarter Sunday to rally the Dallas Cowboys from a 13-point deficit to a 28-27 victory over the stunned Miami Dolphins.

Miami quarterback David Woodley had brought the Dolphins back from eight points behind at the half to a 27-14 lead in the game with three TD passes and he threw for more than 400 yards in a valiant losing effort.

The Dolphins entered the game with an AFC-best 31-3 record against NFC foes, including 13 straight victories.

But the Cowboys, who have a history of sensational comebacks, marched quickly to a touchdown that came on a 5-yard throw from White to Doug Cozbie with 3:48 to play in the contest.

Then, two plays after the kickoff, Woodley threw an ill-advised pass that the Cowboys' Dennis Thurman picked off and returned to the Miami 22. From there, White immediately found running back Ron Sprague running free in the Miami secondary and connected with him for a 23-yard score that put the Cowboys in front with 3:17 left.

Until that brief spurge, the Cowboys had been held to two first-half scores that came on a 5-yard run by Springs and on a 21-yard throw from White to Butch Johnson.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia Eagles' defense went from the jaws of Tommy Craven to the halyarders of Doug Williams Sunday and came out of the game on its feet, though a little wobbly.

The Eagles weathered Williams' aerial bombardment in a steady drizzle and broke a 10-10 tie in the final 4:18 on Tony Franklin's 22-yard field goal and a 3-yard run by Wilbert Montgomery for a hard-fought 16-10 victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

The Eagles, 7-1, retained a one-game lead in the NFC East going into next week's division showdown against the Dallas Cowboys at Veterans Stadium.

The Philadelphia defense, stung by Kramer's short passing last week in a 20-23 loss to the Minnesota Vikings, came back Sunday with three interceptions of Williams plus a fumble recovery. Three turnovers came in the final period with the outcome still in doubt.

The ultimate confidence builder, however, came in the first quarter. The Buc, 4-4, had scored on their first possession when Williams plunged into the end zone from a half-yard out and was in "business" again on the Philadelphia 24 following an interception by Mike Washington.

They moved into position when Ron Jaworski hit Charlie Smith on a short pass and Smith turned it into a 45-yard gain after strong safety Neal Colzie fell down. Franklin accounted for the tiebreaking points four plays later.

Guerrero, Yeager Jolts Send Yankees Reeling

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — If the Los Angeles Dodgers win the World Series and they're only one victory away — two swings by Pedro Guerrero and Steve Yeager may be remembered as the turning point.

World Series

"I hit a high slider," said Guerrero, who teamed with Yeager to become the ninth tandem in series history to hit back-to-back homers. "It was the same pitch he had been throwing all day — 90-95 miles per hour. Except this time he got the ball up. As soon as I hit it I knew it was gone."

Cey Beamed By Gossage; Lives To Tell About It

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ron Cey can be thankful this is a month of miracles. Cey, despite getting beamed by fireballer Rich Gossage, plans to be at Yankee Stadium Tuesday night for what could turn out to be one whole of a World Series victory party for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

RON CEY ... slight concussion

"I'm OK," Cey managed to say Sunday before being taken to Centinela Hospital in Inglewood, Calif., and chances are that with the Dodgers leading the New York Yankees three games to two all his teammates feel the same way.

The Dodgers beat the Yankees 2-1, their third straight victory after losing their first two games. Pedro Guerrero and Steve Yeager hit back-to-back home runs in the seventh inning to pull Jerry Reuss and Team Comeback from a 4-0 deficit to within one victory of the championship.

"It's a bad feeling to have someone come back on you," said Jackson. "It's a different feeling when you've tasted it and then all of a sudden it seems like it's the other guy's turn. I've never lost though."

With the Yankees leading 1-0 and Gossage having struck out Dusty Baker to end the seventh, Guerrero and Yeager became the ninth tandem in Series history to hit back-to-back homers.

LA Fans Attack Steinbrenner

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — New York Yankees George Steinbrenner suffered a possible broken right hand and a cut lip in a fight with two young Los Angeles Dodgers fans who made deprecating remarks about his ballclub in a hotel elevator.

"Yes," continued the Dodger fan, "You're going back home to those animal fans that choke-up team of yours, aren't you?"

"I'm tired of all this stuff about New York, especially smart talk remarks about my team," the two youths continued with their comments when Steinbrenner answered them back, one with a bottle tried to swing it at the Yankee owner, who punched the youth and knocked him to the ground.

World Series games, including four home runs. "I wish I could explain it, but I can't," said the veteran catcher. "I try just as hard in spring training games but it seems that I get more pumped up when the pressure is on."

Silent Room Tells Yankee Story

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The silence in the New York Yankees' clubhouse told the story. Normally, the Yankees do a little singing, a little dancing and a lot of talking in their dressing room. Even after they lost to the Los Angeles Dodgers in Game 3 and 4 of the World Series, there didn't appear to be much concern.

Yankee Killer Yeager May Kiss LA Goodbye

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — As soon as some of the cheering for him died down, which shouldn't be too long following the World Series, Yankee Killer Steve Yeager finally is likely to get what he has been hollering for all along, a deal in which the Los Angeles Dodgers kiss him goodbye after 14 years with them.

Yankee Killer Yeager May Kiss LA Goodbye

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — As soon as some of the cheering for him died down, which shouldn't be too long following the World Series, Yankee Killer Steve Yeager finally is likely to get what he has been hollering for all along, a deal in which the Los Angeles Dodgers kiss him goodbye after 14 years with them.

His big lief is that he wants to play regularly for someone, anyone, and with the Dodgers he's not, nor does he figure to do so next season despite that dramatic seventh-inning homer of his off Ron Guidry into the left-field seats Sunday that came immediately after one by Pedro Guerrero into the same general sector and moved the Dodgers in front in the Series, three games to two, with an exciting 2-1 victory.

Yeager's heroes notwithstanding, 22-year-old Mike Scioscia is the Dodgers' regular catcher now and for the immediate future. Yeager doesn't need anyone to draw him a picture. All he has to do is look at this season's statistics.

Milton Richman

"Yes, it is true," he said, smiling, as if to say why would anyone want to bring that up now? Later, he expanded on that when another question centered around the one subject.

"My agent has been up there several times," he said, meaning the Dodgers' front office. "Al Campanis says I'm signed through 1983, so I'll have to be here through 1983."

At the moment he said that, Yeager didn't see the unhappy over such a prospect. Shortly afterward, however, Campanis had a rather different version about his meetings with Yeager's agent.

"We tried to trade him, but there weren't that many knockouts on our door," he said. "Something like what just happened might change my mind. Look! Campanis went on, 'I'm not gonna get in any controversy just because he hit that home run. Thank God he did it for the Dodgers.'"

White Outduels Woodley, 28-27

IRVING, Texas (UPI) — Danny White threw two touchdown passes in a 21-second stretch of the fourth quarter Sunday to rally the Dallas Cowboys from a 13-point deficit to a 28-27 victory over the stunned Miami Dolphins.

Miami quarterback David Woodley had brought the Dolphins back from eight points behind at the half to a 27-14 lead in the game with three TD passes and he threw for more than 400 yards in a valiant losing effort.

The Dolphins entered the game with an AFC-best 31-3 record against NFC foes, including 13 straight victories.

But the Cowboys, who have a history of sensational comebacks, marched quickly to a touchdown that came on a 5-yard throw from White to Doug Cozbie with 3:48 to play in the contest.

Then, two plays after the kickoff, Woodley threw an ill-advised pass that the Cowboys' Dennis Thurman picked off and returned to the Miami 22. From there, White immediately found running back Ron Sprague running free in the Miami secondary and connected with him for a 23-yard score that put the Cowboys in front with 3:17 left.

Until that brief spurge, the Cowboys had been held to two first-half scores that came on a 5-yard run by Springs and on a 21-yard throw from White to Butch Johnson.

49ers Tip Rams; 2-Game Lead

By United Press International

The NFL is at the halfway point of its season. The San Francisco 49ers are at the exclamation point of theirs.

With the 16-game regular season eight weeks old, San Francisco is the only division winner with a two-game lead. Perhaps even more startling than the collapse of the NFL champion Oakland Raiders is the resurrection of the league's "other" Bay Area team.

"It was tremendous," said San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh of his club's fifth straight triumph, a 20-17 victory over Los Angeles Sunday forged by the heroics of quarterback Joe Montana and defensive end Fred Dean. "It was our defense in the second half that picked us up when our offense was unable to sustain a drive."

Montana completed 18-of-33 passes for 269 yards, with one TD going 14 yards to Freddie Solomon for San Francisco's first score and the other 41 yards to Dwight Clark as the 49ers snapped a nine-game losing streak to the Rams.

Wranching kicked field goals of 43 and 18 yards as San Francisco, 3-14 and 9-10 in Walsh's first two years at the helm, improved to 6-2 and dropped the Rams into a second-place tie with Atlanta, each at 4-4.

Smith-Striby Vows Celebrated At Mass

Gina Marie Smith and Michael Joseph Striby were married Oct. 17, at 1 p.m. at St. Mary Magdalen Church, Altamonte Springs. The Rev. Robert McGuire celebrated Mass at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Odis D. Smith, Seminole County. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Bea Striby, Christmas, and the late Mr. Karl Striby.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows, a gown of white chiffonette, fashioned with an Edwardian neckline, sheer yoke and fitted bodice with long tapered sleeves, enhanced with silk Venice lace, Schifflie embroidery and seed pearls. Her skirt was cathedral length and the train was edged with crystal pleating. A matching headpiece held her tiered illusion veil. She carried a cascade of white silk roses intermingled with real pink tea roses and baby's breath.

Debra Ann Smith, Maitland, and Cynthia Counihan, West Palm Beach, sisters of the bride, attended the bride and matron of honor, respectively. Both wore burgundy Qutana gowns with a knife-pleated skirt and multi-spaghetti straps to achieve an off the shoulder look. The formal length gowns were topped with a matching sheer capelet, held by a cluster of silk flowers. They carried bouquets of pink and white silk roses with baby's breath.

Bridesmaids were Pan Byrd, Orlando; Inga Ellzey, Winter Park; Karen McGann, Winter Park; Linda Halpin, Eustis, sister of the bride; and Julie Striby, Tampa, sister of the groom.

The groom's brother, Karl Striby of Roseman, Mont., served as best man. Ushers were Mark Striby, Christmas, and Chris Striby, Gainesville, brothers of the groom. Also: Michael Stapp, Orlando, Brian Mekaraki, Orlando, the groom's brother-in-law Malcolm Brooks, Tampa, and the bride's brother-in-law Thomas Counihan, West Palm Beach.

The flower girl was Rebecca Striby, niece of the groom. The ring bearer was Sean Counihan, nephew of the bride. Kathy Striby, sister of the groom, presided over the guest book.

The reception was held at the Woman's Club of Winter Park. Music was provided by the Sophisticated Sounds Orchestra. After a wedding cruise aboard the S.S. Norway to the Virgin Islands, the newlyweds are making their home in Orlando.

All Alice And Ray Teams Can Relax

DEAR ABBY: I have enjoyed many a chuckle from your column over the years. Yesterday I thought one letter was particularly funny, so I read it to my wife. She saw absolutely no humor in it. The letter was from a woman who said her best friend, Alice, suspected that her husband, Ray, was fooling around with the girls at the office. The friend said she knew Ray was fooling around but she didn't know whether to tell Alice.

Well, my wife's name is Alice and my name is Ray, and my wife thought it was too much of a coincidence. I tried to tell her that your column is in over a thousand newspapers, and it could be any Alice and Ray.

My wife is very active in the symphony, Junior League and civic projects, and I am well-known in business circles, Chamber of Commerce, etc. I suppose we will both be in for a lot of good-natured ribbing.

I still think it's funny, but you would be doing me a big favor if you'd drop my wife a few lines and let her know that I'm not the Ray you wrote about.

RHODE ISLAND RAY
DEAR RAY: Will do. "Alice" and "Ray" were

Dear Abby

pseudonyms. Coincidentally, I heard from another Alice-and-Ray team. They live in Dallas. He's 79 and she's 81. They thought it was hilarious. In fact, Ray thanked me!

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are about the same size. For years she raided my closets and took my jeans, shirts, sweaters, etc. When I complained, she'd tell me to buy more. This I did time and time again, but she continued to wear my clothes.

Finally I put on one of her dresses and paraded into the kitchen. She said I looked "cute" and went about her business. I tried this a few more times, but a funny thing happened. I started to like it. She started to help me put outfits together — panty hose, heels, then makeup and a wig, and she'd wear the pants. We've done this only at home, but we're considering going out this way. We enjoy switching roles. (It's done wonders for our sagging sex lives.) Are we crazy? Or just caught up in the times? This isn't a prank letter. It's real. What do you think?

LIKING IT IN HARLEM, GA.

DEAR LIKING: You didn't invent anything. This has been going on for centuries. You are not crazy, but before you go out that way you'd better check with the local laws. It's against the law in some cities to "masquerade" in this manner.

DEAR ABBY: Where is the safest place to be in case of an earthquake?

THINKING AHEAD

DEAR THINKING: In an airplane. Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (35 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 12000 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

'Skin Peeling' Agents Can Help With Acne

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 25 years old and have never had a really serious problem with acne. But now all of a sudden I have a really bad problem with blackheads on my face and chin. I wash my face twice a day and have tried different kinds of acne creams, but nothing seems to help. They really are ruining my complexion. What could I be doing wrong and what can I do to get rid of them?

DEAR READER — Gentle washing with rather warm water two or three times a day is useful. You might want to soak the areas by leaving a hot wet washcloth over the skin until it cools.

Washing will loosen the blackheads and help them come to the surface. Unfortunately the blackheads are really below the surface of the skin and they are not dirt as some people think. They are oily-greasy plugs of sebum produced by your own skin glands. If you had some forms of bacteria inside the pore of your skin they break down the fatty material into irritating chemicals that cause the red blotches that are so distressing to most people.

I prefer the gel to the cream preparations because you should not add anything greasy to your face. That makes matters worse.

You should also know that peeling agents increase your sensitivity to sunlight so be careful about sun exposure. You could get sunburned more readily than usual. That is also true of taking tetracyclines, in case your doctor decides you need some.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 14-year-old boy. I'm 5-feet-9 and weigh 125 pounds. When I went for a physical the doctor told me I am about 25 pounds underweight. Can this be true? If so I would like you to give me a diet to gain weight. I eat more than anybody in my family. I am also on a soccer team and quite active.

DEAR READER — You may live to an older age than the doctor who examined you. We know that people who develop slower and weigh less in early life tend to have a longer life span. You are just at the edge of the age when you may gain a lot of weight. You weigh about what we expect an 11 to 14-year-old boy to weigh, you are just taller. At 15 we might say you are the right height but a little light.

You should expect to start becoming more muscular in the next few years. Until then I would not recommend trying to add a lot of fat to your body. Let your normal maturation process let you develop muscles normally in time. Just stay active and eat a well-balanced diet with adequate calories and protein.

YOUR BIRTHDAY

Take advantage of any opportunities this coming year to meet and mix with new groups. You will make many valuable contacts, develop fresh interests and greatly expand your present horizons.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) Be hopeful regarding important issues today. If your attitude is optimistic, you'll perform so as to transform dreams into realities. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail #1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You have a unique talent today for getting others vitally interested and willing to assist you in things more beneficial to you than they are to them.

CAPRIVORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be a good listener today when with friends who espouse progressive ideas. Something they say may put you on the track to a tidy profit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't be fearful of challenging or competitive situations today. When the chips are down, the smart money will be betting you'll come out on top.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Put more faith in the evaluations you make today rather than in the judgment of others. The way you assess things should be more on target.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't wait for things to happen today. Use your initiative in matters you want changed. Control your destiny rather than letting it control you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In partnership situations today, play the supporting role of your counterpart has better ideas. Give the collective goal priority.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is a good day to attend to the little things which need fixing around your residence. Doing so now may save you from big bills later.

CANCER (June 21-July 21) Seek sociable activities which also afford you pleasurable exercise today. Find an energetic companion for a brisk walk or jog.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You should be rather fortunate in financial situations at this time, provided you don't let them drag on too long. Strike while the iron is hot.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Others may be deceived by outward appearances today, but you're able to pierce facades. You'll see things for what they are and act accordingly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Give vent to your ambitions today if there is something material you want to acquire. Where your motivations are strong, success is likely.
