Lake Mary Okayed For Crime Lab Wifes Tyles Meet A Wife Of

Herald Staff Writer

Lake Mary and Sanford Regional Crime Laboratory officials were pleased today about the probability that the new $3.2 million Central Florida Crime Laboratory will be built in Lake Mary.

All that is necessary for the probability to become a certainty is for the Florida Senate to grant its approval. The Florida House of Representatives last week, at the behest of State Rep. Robert Hattaway, D-Altamonte Springs, included the funding for the new facility and designated the Lake Mary location in its appropriations bill.

Claude Truby, bureau chief of the Sanford crime lab at Sanford Airport, said his preferred location from the beginning has been a site off Rinehart Road in Lake Mary.

And Lake Mary Mayor Walter Sorenson said he is "extremely pleased and grateful to Hattaway, who has done an excellent job of representation this session in general."

Truby said he would like the city to lease to the state 212 to 3 acres for the new lab, slated to be the largest and most complete of the crime labs in the state, "We will be offering services that the other four laboratories do not have," Truby said.

Sorenson said he is sure the details can be worked out between the city and the state. He said some things, such as parking facilities, can be shared by the crime lab and the Screnson said "very tentative" plans are to locate a new police complex at the 10-acre city-owned tract.

"We have to see what can be done to make the property work out for all of us," he said, assuming that state architects will be contacting the city as soon as Senate approval is given

Truby said a tentative date for completion of construction on the new lab is Dec. 15, 1983. The new facility is to be one story with 31,000 square feet. The Sanford Airport facilities used now have about 12,000 square feet.

Truby said that while the current laboratory has 43 employees, the new one will have about 50.

He said the state has narrowed prospective architects to five firms and will be selecting one of the five after Senate approval is received. The selection process is taking place

Truby noted that the cost estimates for the proposed facility were put together a year ago, and that if costs have gone up, space requirements might have to be reduced.

Planners and architects will prepare new figures and firm plans as soon as they get the contract.

Meanwhile, the likelihood that the rental for the Lake Mary Police Department offices on Wilbur Avenue will be increased may speed up plans for construction of a new police complex at the Rinehart Road property.

"We have a tentative layout approach for the police complex," Sorenson said, adding that he doesn't know how it will relate to the entire property.

"We will have to find a way to move forward with planning for the complex relatively soon," he said.

Meet A Wife Of 61 Years And A Newlywed...

Second In A Series

By NANCY M. NOLT

Herald Correspondent

Somehow, when little girls dream, their dreams usually include a special faceless "someone" and a very special day: their wedding day. At age 10 or 12, the girl is certain of only one thing. This will be a marriage of love, meant to last and last, and no matter what woes befall them, the couple will live happily ever after.

For many, like Mary Alice Goodspeed of Sanford, it happens. Mary Alice and Harlow Goodspeed will celebrate 61 years of wedded bliss in June, and Mary Alice says she's never regretted a day of her marriage. To paraphrase a country song, if she had it to do all over again, she's do it with him.

Marriages of give-and-take and mutual respect such as the Goodspeeds are what keep the dream alive for younger women, even in an era of "me first" and star-crossed divorce statistics.

When Deborah Fairfield was a little girl, she knew she wanted a big wedding when she grew up, and a "Cinderella" dress." Last Dec. 5, Deborah's dream came true when she married Jim Rhodes in a ceremony in Sanford's First Baptist Church - a ceremony complete with a Cinderella gown, a handsome prince, five attendants, and a honeymoon cruise to the Bahamas.

Now, says Deborah, she is looking forward to the day they will celebrate their 60th anniversary, because she is sure they

"There's some kind of bond, or certain happiness, you find after getting married," she says, blue eyes squinting as she gropes for just the right words. "I don't know how to explain it," but I feel differently than I did before we were married. It's a happiness I never dreamed of.

"You wonder sometimes just what is in store for you," she muses. "You see divorces, and I never thought I would be divorced — or that I will."

Deborah is fortunate to have a working model for her own marriage. "I see my marriage as a lot like my parents", which I'm happy about." Deborah is one of three daughters of Tracy and Pat Fairfield of Sanford. Jim's parents are Marlin (Dusty) and Carole Rhodes of Longwood.

Her parents, she says, also serve as her models for the 'right kind" of parent, and that's important, because Deborah wants two, or three, or four children of her own.

"As a parent I want to be like my mother," she says. "She's fantastic. Loving, very caring. There's love and there's discipline. You can tell with her and Dad that we always come

Children. That's one of the things Deborah and Jun talked about during their three-year couriship. But while they did a lot of talking, she says they didn't do much actual planning. See STORYBOOK, Page 3A

Policeman's, Fireman's Wives Under Stress

Herald Staff Writer

Seventeen law-enforcement officers out of every 100 in the United States will be assaulted this year, and 8 or 7 of the 17 will be seriously injured in the line of duty And if 1982 is like other years in the last decade, 164 local, county, state and federal law-enforcement officers will be killed while protecting their communities. The statistics aren't any better for firefighters. In fact, they are worse. In 1980, according to the state fire marshal's office in Tallahassee, 98,070 firefighters were injured in the nation in the line of duty, and while 134 were killed.

Despite the statistics, men and women who serve in these vital agencies learn to live with the possibility of death and injury, and their wives and families cope with the reality on a daily basis.

But how can families cope with the real possibility of death every minute of their lives? And is it all worthwhile?

The death nearly three years ago of a Sanford firefighter in the line of duty brought home forcefully to Sue Ellenburg just how dangerous her husband's lob is. Sentor Fireman Ernie Ellenburg has been a member of the Sanford Fire Department frene Taylor, wife of Sheriff's Lt. Harold "Bo" Taylor, a veteran of 13 years in law enforcement, knows the statistics of death and injuries to law officers on the job.

For the first five or six years of his law-enforcement career. Irene fought with him to quit. But she has given up that struggle, and today keeps busy as a beautician and as the mother of two sons, prays a lot and "keep my trust in God" and tries not to think about it.

Mrs. Ellenburg also tries not to think of the dangers involved in her husband's career.

"But I realize every time he leaves for work that the danger is there. It's been more up front in the last few years since Lt. (William) Price was killed ir. a downtown fire three years ago this coming August," she says.

"That brought it closer to home. It has been 30-plus years since a Sanford fireman was killed in the line of duty," she

"When I hear a siren now, it crosses my mind, especially after the last three major Sanford fires. There were two big ones in the downtown area and then one at an apartment complex. "I have a scanner, and manage to arrive at the scene almost as soon as the firemen do, I know my hasband is going to be tied up, and I go to get drinks, coffee and sandwiches for the men," she says. "I had the scanner on the day a fireman was injured. I waited as long as I could to hear who it was. A policeman's wife was with me and she watched the children. I went to the hospital. My husband was on duty.

Bill Price had just taken the hose away from my husband when the wall fell on him. It was a scary, scary feeling. It is such a hopeless feeling when a fireman is hurt. You don't know what to do, but you don't want to wait there for someone to notify you," Mrs. Ellenburg says.

The Ellenburgs have been married 18 years.

The Taylors married young. He was 19 and she was 17, 11 was a few years after their marriage that Bo decided he wanted to be in law enforcement. And then, Mrs. Taylor says, she had to realize she was taking a "back seat in his life to something he really loved. "When I'm busy I don't think of the dangers as much," she relations duty. "Now he's back on the road and involved in more danger than before," she says.

The working hours of a law-enforcement officer can be erratic. "Some nights he doesn't come home at all. We don't cook big meals a lot. Nine times out of 10 he is home by 5:30 and then goes back out at night. Sometimes he eats somewhere. If everyone is home, we throw sumething together," Mrs. Taylor. says.

SHA Puts Off Naming Director; 2 Commissioners Miss Meeting

"We will now begin working on a budget for the new flacal year" beginning July 1, Mrs. Williams said.

Mrs. Williams, an SHA employee for the last 10 years, has been serving in a dual role of director of management and interim executive director for seven months while the commission has searched for a permanent director. She is a randidate for the permanent position. -DONNA ESTES

Sanford Woman Killed; Man Held Without Bond

Herald Staff Writer

A Sanford man, released from prison about two months ago, is being held without bond today in the Orange County jail in connection with the shooting death of a Sanford woman outside a Seminole County bar.

Bobby Lee Jackson, 29, of Alexander Avenue, was arrested and jailed after Gladys Hill, 32, of 44 Lake Monroe Terrace, was shot in the head with a small-caliber handgun and killed about 1:30 a.m. Sunday outside the Deluxe Bur on Southwest Road near Sanford, deputies said.

Witnesses told deputies they heard a gunshot and saw Ms. Hill laying on the sidewalk in front of the bar. A man was seen by witnesses fleeing the area in a white-over-red

Monte Carlo, deputies said. Florida Highway Patrol officers later saw a car matching the description given by witnesses as it stood broken down on Florida's Turnpike near the Turkey Lake toll plaza and arrested Jackson, deputies said.

Witnesses told our investigators that the two (Ms. Hill and Jackson) were in the bar and that they didn't come together," said Sheriff's spokesman John Spolski. "Apparently, from what witnesses told us, Jackson wanted her to leave with him and she didn't want to. They argued, and that's when the shouling occurred."

Spolski added that Jackson was released from the state penitentiary "about two months ago, after being arrested and convicted in Seminole County on April 7, 1973, on to commit rape. We have no other records on him since that

Dr. G.V. Garay, Seminole County medical examiner, who responded to the shooting scene, pronounced Ms. Hill dead and ordered her body to be delivered to Seminole Memorial Hospital for an autopsy.

"Ms. Hill died as a result of a brain hemorrhage caused by the gunshot wound in her right temple," Garay said

However, Garay said he was unable to determine Ma. Hill's blood-alcohol levels because the body had been embalmed by a Sanford funeral home before he could perform the autopay, 'The Inneral home, Brown's (Paradise Memorial Chapel), picked up the body, and before they brought it for the autopsy they embalmed the body," Garay said. "They are supposed to get permission to embalm the body when it is a case like this. This is not normal procedure. I couldn't perform the blood tests." "We are investigating the matter," Spolski said (concerning the embalming.) Chris Ray, chief assistant state attorney, could not be reached to determine whether a state violation has occurred or whether the pre-autopsy embalming will adversely affect prosecution of the case.

Robert Brown, of Brown's Paradise Memorial Chapel, could not be reached for comment.

9 Teens Dead, One Injured

In Train-Van Collision

MINEOLA, N.Y. (UPI) - Ten teenagers, friends since childhood, piled into a van after a party and tried to beat a speeding passenger train by dodging a closed gate at a rail intersection dubbed "Death Crossing." Only one survived.

The impact of the crash scattered the victims' bodies over an area of 100 yards and twisted their van's frame and axles, police said.

Reagan Takes To The Road

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan is on the road again - pushing his New Federalism program, defending his proposed budget and facing a threatened walkout by black state legislators.

The president, who took his message to America's heartland last month, today was to begin a two-day trip to Alabama, Tennessee and Oklahoma.

...The Job Can Take An Awful Toll On Marriage

"He doesn't tell me a lot. I don't know whether he is being protective or is involved in something hush-hush. If I knew he were on a stakeout, I'd worry," she says, "If he told me everything I'd probably be a nervous wreck."

The Ellenburg family arranges its schedule around Ellenburg's schedule. "We work around his hours. It's hard being a mother and father 24 hours when Daddy can't be there to help deal with the children. It takes adjustments to deal with situations," Mrs. Ellenburg says. The Ellenburgs have a son, Ernie Jr., 16, and a daughter, Lisa, 12.

Ellenburg, like all other Sanford firefighters, works 24 hours on duty and 48 off. "He's off days that I'm not," his wife says.

Mrs. Ellenburg is a supervisor at the drive-in teller windows at the Atlantic Bank in Sanford. She says the wives of most policemen and firemen must work outside the home. "Sometimes it's his day off and I must work. The he has to find something to do. He's good at helping around the house on his days off," Mrs. Ellenburg says. The Taylors used to have a lot of friends in law enforcement.

"A number have divorced and we don't get a chance to know the new wives when we stay as busy as we do," Mrs. Taylor

She says she has been fearful that someone might try to take resentments against police out on her or the children. She says most law-enforcement officers moonlight, and normally the wife works too, "if you like the extras." And a police officer usually expects more from his children than other parents.

The Taylors have two sons, Cliff, 9, and Chris, 7, "One day my husband heard our son brag to another that his dad is a policeman, so he can do what he wants," she says. "His father straightened him out fast."

Sue Ellenburg and her husband have talked about what she would do if something should happen to him. "We've discussed what I would do, I'm a strong person, so he's not worried about me coping. He keeps me up to date on our finances, and we have made plans about the children. The possibility is always there. It's not something we want to leave hanging," she says.

Ernle's death was not something the couple really considered before the Price tragedy. "I guess everyone tends to think it is going to happen to someone else and not them," she

"The boys at the Fire Department are well trained and tend to put danger in the back of their minds. They know what they're doing. It's scary to see them inside a burning building. A ceiling could fall at any time. I'd rather be there with Ernie If anything were to happen," Mrs. Ellenburg says.

She recalls a recent fire when the men from both the city and county were at the scene from early evening until 5 or 6 a.m. "I went after 150 hamburgers that night," Sue recalls. "It is my little way. But at the same time I stay out of the way."

Bo and Irene Taylor talk about the really interesting things that are happening in the community, in the homeowners' groups and the schools. And she has taken trips with him when he was working on the deputy in the school outfitted for a baseball game.

"I'm the typically nosy woman," she says.

Mrs. Taylor has some advice for any wormin who plans to marry a man in law enforcement. She suggests they see a series of films on law enforcement available at the Seminole County Sheriff's Department. "It shows the story, inside and out, of a policeman, his family, friends and children.

"The policeman's wife must accept the fact that she will take a back seat to law enforcement, almost like another wife, and his department is like another family. She needs to be prepared for her husband to have to work a couple of jobs, and probably she will have to work too.

"She should expect that her husband will change. He will tend to go into a shell. There are so many things he can't tell her, and he won't trust a lot of people. He'll become cynical, to a degree. When they go into a restaurant, he'll always want to sit where he can watch the door, and he'll wear a pager everywhere," Mrs. Taylor says.

"She'll see her husband become harder. He sees so much of what goes on in real life," she adds.

With all the hardships, however, Mrs. Taylor wouldn't try to discourage her sons if they decided to go into a lawenforcement career. And it wouldn't surprise her if they did make that choice. "If my sons went into law enforcement, I'd certainly have a talk with the women they marry," she says. "Most mothers want their sons to be doctors or even president. I wouldn't encourage my sons to go into law enforcement, but I wouldn't try to talk them out of it either," Irene says.

"Some men are not cut out for law enforcement. They have to make it 90 percent of their lives. They have to be mature enough to take the whole ball of wax," she adds. Neither the Sanford firemen nor the Seminole deputies have a formal organization for socializing, Mrs. Ellenburg and Mrs.

Taylor point out. "But among ourselves we have get-togethers and try to keep it a family-type situation," Mrs. Ellenburg says. "The firemen are together 24 hours at a time, and on off-time we have cookouts and different things. We try to give each other moral

"If a family is going through any crisis, we try to be there for each other. The men have to have a close fraternity and be there for backup at a fire. They have to know what the right hand is doing with the left," she says.

The Ellenburgs have a lot of friends, mostly in the firefighting and law-enforcement fields. "Our house is like Grand Central Station. The men work as a team and we tend to stay within our realm," she says.

"The hours he works are a strain on the family. Learning to cope with his ups and downs, especially when he's had a bad rescue run, and learning to handle his stress can be difficult," Despite the disadvantages, the job of a firefighter provides security, "It's a secure job. The hours are good. He enjoys what he does and seeing his pride in his work makes a lot worthwhile," she says.

Ernie Jr. wants to be a firefighter like his father, and his mother is encouraging him. "It's a good job," Mrs. Ellenburg says. "It has its rewards."

When Ernie Jr. said he wanted to be a firefighter, the Ellenburgs checked at Seminole Community College about the training available there.

Ernie Jr. often goes to the Sanford fire station and visits his father. "He feels it is what he wants to do. The job is going to be there no matter what. It doesn't rise and fall with the economy," she points out.

And when the Ellenburgs go out for an evening, they stay mostly within Sanford. "We're more comfortable here where we know everyone," she says.

The Sheriff's Department has get-togethers regularly, and "it would be good to socialize with each other more," Irene Taylor says.

The Taylors worked with other couples in the department with the youth deputy program, and it was a fulfilling ex-

"We went on camping trips with the youth deputies when they were 13 or 14 years old. Three or four of them have grown up to become full time deputies," she says. "Today several are married and have families of their own."

When the Taylors, who are active in their church, go out for an evening, they stay in the Seminole County area -- "our own little cubbyhole," Mrs. Taylor says.

Von Bulow Mistrial Orlando, the Deltona All Leesburg, Wilmer, Oak Hill, Saturday at Winter Park Request Rejected

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) - The Claus von Bulow jurors are "progressing, they are discussing the evidence," and there is no reason even to consider a mistrial move because of lengthy deliberations, the trial judge says.

Superior Court Justice Thomas H. Needham made that ruling Sunday after the seven men and five women had said they wanted to stop at midafternoon after 61/2 hours. The judge had offered them the day off but, as he noted, "they elected to

The jury returns for a fifth deliberation day today after being in its deliberation room for about 27 hours during four days. They got the attempted murder case at noon Thursday.

The jurors have sent only two messages to the judge. Normaily several might have been sent in a case of the length the von Bulow trial has run, requesting repeat readings of testimony or elaboration of the law.

The jury requested and got a repeat reading of the testimony of a star state witness. Maria Schrallhammer. The second request was to go home a little early Sunday.

The Reason Why

Having feelings is one of the things that makes us human . . . and our feelings need to be expressed. One of the reasons for funeral service is to enable family and friends to express their sorrow at a time of loss.

Home Energy Aid From HRS

The Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services (HRS) will be accepting applications for the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program today through April 23.

The purpose of the program is to help low-income households with their home energy costs. The limits for a household's monthly income is $359 for one person, $474 for two, $589 for three, plus $115 for each additional person; however, a household whose income is more than the limit may still be eligible because some incomes are not counted.

Application forms will be available at HRS Economic Services offices (AFDC and Food Stamp offices), and some city and county welfare offices, Community Action Agencies, utility company offices, and offices of other community-based organizations.

For more information, contact the HRS Economic Services office at 420 Live Oak Blvd., Casselberry, phone 339-8200.

...Storybook Marriage: Everyone Wants One

There has been very little adjustment for me to make," she says with a grin of relief. "Everybody says, 'Oh, the first year is the hardest,' but I think we went together so long that there have been only little adjustments to make - like folding the towels differently."

The couple met while dancing at the former Nichols Alley. It wasn't long before they were dating, and not much longer before Jim was asking her to "be his girl." While their engagement came about as a mutual meeting of hearts and minds, rather than an on-bended-knee proposal, the young man thoroughly endeared himself to his future wife and in-laws when "he asked my parents for my hand in marriage one day while I was at work."

Sitting on the couch in their one-bedroom apartment in Winter Park, Deborah delights in talking over her day, and his, with Jim each afternoon. "You know, we laugh a lot, and he teases me. He's always teasing me."

They haven't had that First Big Quarrel yet, and Deborah has trouble imagining what they would quarrel about. They enjoy each other's company, whether it's just chatting after work, playing tennis or grocery shopping. Household chores are shared without any problems, except that Deborah does like to do the cooking by herself. "Sure, we get picky sometimes. There are days when you come home and you're both tired and have worked all day, and we get picky with each other. But I haven't wanted to go home to Mother yet!"

Probably the most exciting part of her marriage so far was the day they bought the hutch. "We don't own a lot of nice, new furnishings" Deborah explained, "so when we bought this butch that I could put our wedding china in, I was so excited. I found it and took him to look at it. It's first big thing we have bought together."

Deborah is a corporate secretary at Celeste Industries in Altamonte Springs, and Jim is in administrative engineering at Martin-Marietta When the children come along - and Deborah hopes it won't be long - she plans to become a fulltime homemaker, at least until they start to school, maybe until they're grown. "I want my husband to be the breadwinner, and I want my own career, too, but I don't want us both gone 80 hours a week, because that's not enough time to give to the kids,"

Time - quality time - is important, says Deborah, both after marriage and before. "I think it's important to know the person you're marrying. It's important to think you'll be married forever. We got married with that thought in mind - there's no doubt we'll be married forever.'

Forever is a long time, and it takes some planning. Jim and Deborah already have started to save for their biggest purchase: their first home. It's one of their goals for the first five years of their marriage, and at least one child to run and laugh throughout the house is another.

They were engaged over a year, Deborah says, because they so wanted to be sure of themselves. Mostly, "I think Jim was ready before I was, I needed more time to be sure, and I even went away to college in North Caroline for six months." Jim, she says, was understanding and supportive during everyone needs a little bit of time on their own to

Now, with a new glow of exitement that she wears since the wedding, Deborah finds herself imagining her life through the coming years. "I think about what we'll be like, what our kids will be like, what, we'll look like..." Her voice drifts off. Marriage can change so many thoughts, dreams... "I never really thought about growing old before."

Mary Alice Goodspeed is 77 and starting on her seventh decade of married life. And when she gets those cataracts "fixed," she will once again be satisfied with her life.

Matter of fact, those darn cataracts are about the only complaint she has, anyway. Her 60 years of wedded life with Harlow Goodspeed, she says, have been spent on a "pretty even keel."

Sure, the two have seen some rough times and some downright bad times, just like everybody does. But Mary Alice Goodspeed isn't one to dwell on these, or to worry about what might have been.

When she takes time to float through memories, Mrs. Goodspeed realizes there's really nothing that "I wish I'd done that I didn't do."

Always a homebody, she helped care for her five younger sisters and brothers during her growing-up years in Milton. At 16 she hadn't started making plans for her future until a handsome young man from Ohio arrived in Milton one day for a visit with relatives. It happened that right next door to his sister lived a pretty girl and - well, until then Harlow hadn't "thought much about marriage one way or the other."

It's been so long, Mrs. Goodspeed says, that she can't even remember how Harlow proposed - or even whether he did.

She had just turned 17 and he was 21 when, after six months of courting, "We just decided we wanted to get married and we ran away to Pensocola (20) miles from Milton) and did it!"

It was June 11, 1921, and the world was a happy place for young lovers. About a month after the edding the couple moved to Sanford, where Harlow went to work with the Coast Line Railroad (now Seaboard Coast Line). He went "on the road" as a conductor for the railroad just before their first Christmas together, and stayed on 44 years.

Tragedy and sadness struck in 1924 with the death of the couple's 14-month-old son. Immediately, the young wife began to clear out the child's room. She has never forgotten the little boy, as she knew she wouldn't, but "saving anything just makes it worse.

"The boy's dying was the hardest thing I've had to face. Of course, there were other people who died through the years, but you learn to live with

Along with the sorrows came the joys that Mrs. Goodspeed prefers to remember, and in 1929 she bore a daughter, Joyce, who is now a grandmother of three. Watching her daughter grow up, she says, was the most satisfying part of her life.

Good times. Bad times. Following Joyce into the Goodspeeds' life was the great Depression. With a brand-new haby, it was no time to lose their meager savings, but lose them they did, like just about everyone else in the county in those harrowing years. The Goodspeeds were better off than some, though, because Harlow was able to work on the railroad about six months of the year, and in the summer they would stay with Mrs. Goodspeed's that time. "I knew I loved him, but I guess maybe mother in Gainesville, where Harlow would work at

The Depression ended, and World War II began. Again, the Goodspeeds were luckier than some, for while Harlow's three brothers all marched off to war (and back again), he stayed home, working on the railroad.

Railroading provided them with a good life, although it kept Harlow away much of the time, leaving Mary Alice to shoulder most of the responsibilities of their child and the house - a burden she did not especially like. Nevertheless, whenever duty called for Harlow, there would be Mary Alice, scurrying to fix his breakfast or a nice lunch before he would depart.

When Harlow retired in 1966, Mary Alice decided it was time to get out of the house herself. She had been offered a job planning functions and keeping records for the Democratic Party, and decided to give it a try. Next, she moved into women's fashions as a salesperson, and found that work agreeable. "I think working that nine years really helped me: my way of thinking and my health and everything," she

Until she began working for a paycheck, Mrs. Goodspeed had not considered a job other than the one she had at home. "I didn't want to leave my daughter at home when she was growing up, and in fact I didn't know of anything I could do. But once I started I thoroughly enjoyed it," she says.

The job cut into some activities, but Mrs. Goodspeed adapted easily to the change "just kind of getting into the groove," and turnabout's fair play, Now Harlow fixed her lunch, demonstrating his support of her belief that marriage is a 50-50 proposition.

"You have to meet halfway, and everything's going to be all right," and that's just how this direct grandmother of four, great-grandmother of three, sees life. "Both sides have got to give, and then both sides have got to take some, too.

Tuesday: A minister's wife reflects on a 38-year marriage, and two working women tell how they balance marriage and a career.

"I'd tell any young man like I told my grandson he can't treat his wife like he does his sisters. He's got to treat her with respect, whether they're married a year or 50 years."

A young wife today, Mrs. Goodspeed says, might have a harder time adjusting to marriage "because she's used to working and she'd get married and go right on working but not know as much about cooking and keeping house." She thinks it's probably hard to be a young working wife-and mother, but admits that "I never cooked a meal in my life until I got married, but I knew how Mother did, and patterned after her."

Working while the children are young may be all right, she concedes, because "they seem to learn a lot in the day-care centers, but when they get older I think they need parents at home in the afternoon, I think no supervision is the problem with teenagers."

Gold, Dollar Slump

LONDON (UPI) - The price of gold slumped towards the $300 mark on Europe's bullion markets today and the dollar

Gold opened at $311.50 in London and Zurich, That was $11.25 below the London closing price Friday and $11 below the Zurich close.

Persisting rumors about Soviet gold sales to pay off the debts of its Eastern bloc satellites and the higher U.S. money supply figures brought gold under pressure in New York and the trend carried over to Europe, a Zurich bullion analyst said.

The slump also has hit gold-mining shares - many of which are worth less than half their value of a year ago.

At the peak of a crazy price spiral in January 1980, gold was selling at $875 an ounce.

The dollar opened lower on all the foreign exchange mar-

In Frankfurt, it opened at 2.3672 marks down from 2.3778 marks and in Zurich it eased to 1,8685 Swiss francs from 1,8790

The rate in Paris fell to 6,0735 French francs from 6,1050 france and in Brussels it eased to 48,7750 Belgian france from 48.85 francs. In Milan, one dollar bought 1279.35 lire compared with 1,284.05 lire Friday.

In London, the pound was stable, opening at $1.8080 compare with $1.7995 Friday.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 238.90 yen down from 239.05

Inviting Aggression

The late Dean Acheson, secretary of state during the Truman administration, probably helped to precipitate the Korean war by pointedly excluding the divided peninsula from a January 1950 delineation of the U.S. defense perimeter in Asia and the Western Pacific.

Six months later, a Soviet-equipped North Korean army invaded South Korea, triggering a United Nations response that involved the United States in a three-year war.

One must wonder whether Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd is, however inadvertently, proposing a comparable blunder by offering legislation prohibiting President Reagan from sending U.S. combat forces to El Salvador without formal authorization from Congress.

We raise this question notwithstanding the sure knowledge that, as Mr. Reagan himself has said, the administration has no intention of sending combat troops to El Salvador.

Clearly, the political realities in Congress and in the country as a whole are such that, short of a full-scale invasion of El Salvador by Cuban or Nicaraguan forces, there is virtually no chance that the Reagan administration would dispatch American military forces to fight in El Salvador.

But why formally tie Mr. Reagan's hands and thereby notify the Soviets, Cubans, and Nicaraguans that even a temporary dispatch of U.S. troops would be out of the question regardless of the provocation?

Given the current mood in Congress, which keeps the administration on the defensive for even modest amounts of military aid to the beleagured Salvadoran government, passage of the Byrd amendment would be read in Moscow, Havana, and Managua as carte blanche to increase the flow of arms to El Salvador's Marxist insurgents.

The War Powers Resolution of 1973 already prohibits any president from committing U.S. combat forces abroad for a period of more than 60 days in the absence of a formal declaration of war, specific statutory authorization, or a national emergency created by an attack upon the United States or its armed forces.

Thus, the Byrd amendment would serve mainly to deny Mr. Reagan the diplomatic and political leverage inherent in retaining the authority to send troops for up to 60 days. And by specifically limiting the amendment to El Salvador, Sen. Byrd proposes to send Fidel Castro and company an Acheson-like exclusionary statement that could have grave consequences for El Salvador, its threatened neighbors, and U.S. security interests throughout Central America and the Caribbean

This sort of hobble is the last thing the administration needs in seeking to counter a Soviet-Cuban offensive in Central America without allowing the situation to deteriorate to the point where an American military response might become unavoidable.

Ironically, Sen. Byrd and those who support his amendment may be helping to create conditions requiring that which they fear most: A direct U.S. military role in the unfolding crisis in Central

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

No, On Elite Staff

By JOE DeSANTIS

Gen. David C. Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was Jimmy Carter's favorite general. He supported Mr. Carter's successful drive to surrender the Panama Canal to the unstable Panamanian government.

Now, Gen. Jones, whose term as chairman will end in June, is campaigning for a change in the military command system that would give the chairman authority to by-pass the service chiefs

Though he denies it, this is the same old general staff system that has been proposed time and again by those who want to unify all the services and obliterate their differences. This proposal runs counter to the traditional organizational character of America's armed forces. The general staff idea is derived from the old Prussian general staff structure that imposed rigid uniformity on the German war

The established American system recognizes the value of diversity of defense organizations. The traditions of the services derive from their different missions and needs. The rotation system for the chairmanship of the Joint Chiefs of Staff has brought different perspectives to the higher military office. The diversity within the Joint Chiefs has prevented America's defense establishment from being locked into a single

Gen. Jones wants a corps of strategic thinkers who could be above the senior service personnel. The problem here, as always, is that there would be an elite cadre of "thinkers" divorced from the commanders with responsibility for military operations,

It would ill-serve the United States to have a single corps of strategic thinkers who would establish a unifled doctrine for the entire military establishment. In other countries and in other times, such elite cadres have frozen military thinking and prevented nations involved from responding to changed conditions.

America's military men already have wide experience in Joint Commands, Senior officers are products of military institutions, such as the National Defense University; whose faculty and students are drawn from all the services. Beyond that there is no need for the nation to go. The service commanders are thoroughly versed in the capabilities and problems of the weapons and forces in the respective services. No elite group of strategists could have the practical understanding of the service representatives in the Joint Chiefs of Staff organization.

One of the phrases used by the anti-defense lobby is "the military mind." Fortunately, the military mind is a myth in America. The separate service organizations encourage different approaches to national defense problems. Different raditions are encouraged, while unified action in combat zones is carried out effectively.

'If proposals such as Gen. Jones' had been translated into law after World War II, as advocates of a general staff system urged, one can be sure that the Marine Corps would have been merged into the Army and the Navy would have been denied atrategic weapons. The public has every reason to hope that Congress will turn thumbs down on a new general staff system.

Bishops On El Salvador

The American Catholic bishops, gathered in Washington, seemed in some of their statements to be advocating unilateral disarmament.

There were dissenting volces, including that of Cardinal Cooke of New York, the chaplain of the armed forces. And there was a major dissenting voice of some weight, Pope John Paul II, who pointedly issued a statement calling for mutual - not unilateral - cutbacks on atomic weapons, with the important provision that the reductions be

But now the American Catholic bishops are at it again concerning El Salvador.

According to current reports, the bishops are lending their authority to the American political coalition that opposes any further military aid to the beleaguered government of that country. Further, the bishops are calling for a "negotiated" settlement of the conflict there.

Now, what would these recommendations mean in the real world?

I know of no one who disagrees with the proposition that without increased aid in the form of training and materiel the Salvadoran government will lose the guerrilla war in which it is now engaged. That government does not want American troops, as it has specifically and repeatedly said. But it does need helicopters, small arms, and communications equipment, and it does need economic aid to help stabilize an economy under continuous attack by the guerrillas.

What the Salvadoran government thus proposes is nothing other than the Nixon Doctrine, according to which the United States will aid governments under communist attack if those governments can put the men in the field to do the fighting.

The Catholic bishops, on the other hand, are asking us to pull the plug on the present government. The only other organized power in the country is represented by the guerrilla movement. Under the circumstances proposed by the bishops, the only possible outcome of negotiations would be a takeover by the guerrillas. What we would then see emerging in the Caribbean area is a Marxist configuration allied with Havana - and, through Havana, with Moscow.

It is certainly something of a curiosity that the bishops, while vociferous in their con-demnation of human rights violations by the beleagured Salvadoran government, have had nothing to say about continued and institutionalized violations by the Castro regime. Nor have they spoken up, despite their clear self-interest in doing so, about the persecution of the Church in Cuba and other communist countries.

What is going on among the Catholic bishops?

My own inquiries Indicate that the Catholic hierarchy in America is the victim of a kind of time lag. The middle echelons of the Church are filled with people in their 40s and 50s who were conditioned by the 1960s, by the Vietnam War, the racial struggles and so forth. These are the people who prepare the reports and write the memos on which the bishops base their policy statements. These '60s types are simply entrenched; no one can vote them out, as we did with George McGovern, Frank Church, and Birch Bayh.

Significantly enough, young men entering the Catholic seminaries during the last few years have been markedly more conservative than their elders. A lot of tension has resulted. Pope John Paul II has been moving sternly to get the Jesuits to clean up their act and put their blue jeans back in the closet. But the process takes time.

Meanwhile, we shall simply have to put up with, and largely ignore, policy statements by the Catholic hierarchy which make little sense when subjected to analysis. And the Catholic bishops of the next generation will have their work cut out for them in trying to recover the moral authority which their predecessors are so frivously dissipating.

Hopes Dimming

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Only once since the early years of this century has the president's party gained even a single seat in the mid-term elections. (The exception was

Nevertheless, Republicans spoke confidently of major House gains as they basked last summer in the Reagan landslide and subsequent congressional victories. They talked about winning the 26 seats needed to take direct control of the lower chamber - or at least enough for de facto control.

The Republicans thought they had almost everything going for them.

High on the list of favorable omens was the reapportionment required after the 1980 census. No fewer than 17 House seats were shifted from traditionally Democratic strongholds in the Northeast and Midwest to the new bastions of Republicanism in the South and West.

The Republicans also reasoned that their control of many state legislatures would insure the favorable redrawing of congressional districts even in states that were not gaining or losing seats.

Now, as Campuign '82 heats up, the Republicans realize that their hopes of House gains have probably been dashed and that they will be lucky to avoid substantial losses.

Reapportionment has been a disaster for the Republicans - especially in light of their expectations.

Republican prospects have been severely damaged by the redistricting plans adopted by Democratic-controlled legislatures in a number of key states, such as California. And in some important states with Republican-dominated legislatures, the courts have taken over redistricting in ways not to the GOP's liking. Here are a few recent examples

- In Florida, the Republicans hoped to pick up as many as three of the state's four new e seats. But the plan emerging from the state legislature appears to put two or even three of the new seats firmly in the Democratic column.

- In Colorado, a special panel of three federal judges has drawn up a redistricting plan that is likely to give each party three of the state's six House seats. Republicans had once talked about gaining five of those seats.

- In Missouri, another three-judge panel has approved a plan placing two GOP freshmen - Wendell Bailey and Bill Emerson - in districts with entrenched Democrats.

A number of states still must complete their redistricting. But the experts predict that both parties ultimately will come out about even. That is a far cry from the 15 to 17 seats that the GOP talked about gaining strictly from the redrawing of district lines.

Then there are the substantive issues on which Campaign '82 will be fought. When the Republicans were making their optimistic predictions, the president was riding the crest of his popularity.

With his standing in the opinion polls having nose-dived and with unemployment and other economic ills foremost on the public's mind, the Republicans are no longer sure that the issues will be on their side come November.

U.N. Probe Stacked In Soviets' Favor

WASHINGTON- The effects of mustard gas were so horrible that chemical warfare was outlawed 60 years ago by solemn international agreement. Since then no major power has used polson gas against another major power-not, unfortunately, because of humanitarian consideration, but from fear of retaliation in kind.

There is no such restraint when one side has no chemical weapons. Even the fear of world condemnation can be avoided if the victims are primitive tribesmen in areas that are inaccessible to neutral observers. Proof is difficult if not impossible to obtain.

The result is that chemical warfare has become a political propaganda weapon. The Soviets accused the United States of dropping germs on North Korea 30 years ago; the State Department has accused the Soviets and their antrapa of using nerve gas against rebellious tribeamen in Lass, Cambodia and Afghanistan.

The Soviets were never able to prove their gurm-warfare charges because no evidence existed. Now the State Department is genuinely convinced that the Russians have unleased chemical-biological weapons in remote areas, but so far the available evidence has not permaded the American public, let alone the rest of the world.

Last September, Secretary of State Alexander Halg announced dramatically that "we now have physical evidence from Southeast Asia which has been analyzed and found to contain abnormally high levels of three potent mycotoxins," which are deadly poisons. But the evidence-a single leaf and item from a tree exposed to "yellow rain"- drew meers of disbelief, not cries of outrage. Two months later, Richard Burt, director of politico-military affairs in Foggy Bottom, told Congress, "We now have the smoking gun." But again, the evidence was seen as meager and unpersuasive.

That's why the State Department assigned its supposedly unbiased Bureau of Intelligence and Research to oversee a thorough study of all the evidence, new and authority of the political charges against the Soviets. Meanwhile, the Kremlin hasn't limited itself to mere denials of the U.S. charges. The United Nations has appointed a panel to investigate the charges, and the Soviets have done their best to stack the penel in their

Believe it or not, the investigative team is overseen by a Soviet diplomat, U.N. Undersecretary General Viacheslav Ustinov. And the man directly in charge of the team is Gen. Esmat Ezz of Egypt. According to U.S. intelligence sources, Ezz is viewed with distrust and is suspected of being the driving force behind Egypt's own chemical weapons program by the 1960s, when the Egyptians were heavily influenced by their Soviet military advisers.

The U.N. team has included staff from Poland and Bulgaria, as well as acientists from Peru, Kenya and the Philippines. But Gen. Ezz dominates the group-and U.S.

The political tug-of-war that has racked the U.N. team during its investigation is illustrated by the aquabble over evidentiary samples collected last fall. According to U.S. intelligence sources, Ustinov tried to pressure the team into having the samples analyzed by a laboratory of his choosing. The group resisted this pressure, but the samples have yet to be tested.

"It's a bit of a scandal," one U.N. source told my associate Lucette Lagnado. "They collected these samples back in October and November, and this is March."

"The U.N. group has not been the most vigorous of investigatory groups," said Amhassador Kenneth Adelman, the No. 2 official in the U.S. mission to the United Nations, "The group is not a go-getter," he

Thus, U.S. intelligence analysts hold out little hope that the U.N. team's ultimate report will be the "smoking gun" the State Department so clearly wants.

Monday, March 15, 1982-5A

Evening Herald, Sanford, Fl.

LAUDERHILL (UPI) - Hale Irwin doesn't claim to be a golfing wizard even if he does appear to have acquired a magic touch with his new putter.

But he does credit a little sorcery with setting up his winning birdie putt in the $400,000 Invertary Classic.

Irwin, then locked in a three-way tie for the lead with Torn Kite and George Burns, had placed his tee shot at the final hole in a thicket of woods and admitted things looked a bit

"Oh, I did have a shot at the flag - if you used your imagination," said Irwin, "Anyway, it was the only shot I had. I'm surrounded by trees, 145 yards from the hole, and I had to hit very low and had to play a draw."

The ball came out of the woods as though it had eyes, winding up less than five feet from the cup from where Irwin made the birdle that gave him a record-tying 19under-par 269 that was good enough for a one-shot victory his 14th of his pro career - and $72,000 that made him the fifth golfer in history to soar past the $2 million career mark

Open champion said with a wide grin. "I can't recall having hit that good a shot under similar conditions in any tournament I have won.

"Certainly not pulling it out of my hip pocket to make a birdie. It was a miracle."

Irwin, four shots behind the then-leading and defending champion Kite before the rain-delayed Inverrary went into its gruelling 36-hole finale Sunday, appeared to be losing ground during the first nine holes of the morning round which he played in 1 over.

But his putter heated up after that and he played the closing 27 holes in 12-under - going six-under on the back nine in the morning and five-under on the back nine in the afternoon when he caught Kite and third-round leader Burns by running off a string of four straight birdies.

"It took another good round by someone and a wild driver by me for me to lose," said Burns, who held a seemingly commanding three-stroke lead with seven holes to play. "But, I came here without much and I'm pleased. I had my best 54-hole score as a pro (a tournament record 16-underpar 200) and my best 72-hole score as a pro (18-under 270). I hope that means things are on the upswing for me.

"I think Hale played great and I'm proud to finish second to him," said Burns, "But, I didn't know much about Hale until the 14th hole (where Irwin caught up), I thought I was fighting Tom most of the day,"

Burns and Kite, who won in a sudden-death playoff last Monday at Bay Hill, both needed birdies at the final hole to force a playoff with Irwin, who waited for them at the scorer's tent, biting his nails as he watched them finish in the threesome behind his.

Kite, who took over the lead in the money race he won last year as his $35,200 co-runnerup check raised his earnings this year past $150,000, was on the green in two but couldn't make a 25-foot birdie putt. Burns, complaining about having to play faster in the morning round than he would have liked, never had a chance after putting his approach shot in a sand trap.

"I really thought I would win," said Kite, who sought to become the first successful defending champion on the tour since Tom Watson won again last year at New Orleans and the first back-to-back four winner in a year. "I thought I was playing well enough.

"Even after the morning round (when he had a 71 - four shots higher than any of his other rounds), I thought if I kept plugging along, I'd have a chance. Irwin didn't really become a factor in my thinking until the final nine holes," said Kite. "Prior to that, it was basically George I was

Bobby Clampett, only 21, also was a factor Sunday when his closing rounds of 67-66 had him in at 17-under 271 with the leaders only a shot ahead and plenty of time to drop

Calvin Peete was 67-69-272 Sunday for fifth place and Ray Floyd — the only golfer in the field to shoot in the 60s every round - took sixth place money with his 68-69-69-68-

Castino Yearns To Earn His Big Bucks

(UPI) - How would you like to sit back, do nothing but maybe watch television or listen to your beard grow and be guaranteed of getting nearly a quarter of a million bucks a year?

Maybe that would appeal to you, but John Castino, the Minnesota Twins' 27-year-old most recent candidate for Cooperstown doesn't go for the idea. He'll get something like $235,000 from the Twins this year even if he doesn't play an inning for them., But that wouldn't make him happy.

"If I were getting only $30,000 a year or whatever, I'd still feel I'd wanna earn what I was being paid," says Castino, doing some stretching exercises all by himself in back of the batting cage. "I have one prevailing thought - I wanna play, I wanna play and have fun."

Castino isn't doing either right now because of spinal surgery he underwent only a couple of days before the season ended last October.

He has a condition you need a dictionary to spell. It's called spendylolisticats and in layman's language it could be described as as separation of the vertebrae in the back. Roy Smalley, the Twins' shortstop, has it, too, only not as severe as Castino came down with it in the final week of last season.

The pain was so severe, Castino could hardly stand up when he went to Dr. Harvey O'Phelan, one of the Twins' physicians.

"You need an operation," O'Phelan said. "Are you sure?" Castino wanted to know.

"Positive."

"Okay, then, let's do it now."

Castino wanted to get it over with. He played his last game for the Twins against the Royals on Wednesday, Thursday was an off day and he had the surgery done on Friday.

"I can't begin to thank Dr. O'Phelan for the great piece of surgery he performed," Castino says, "It was a perfect fusion of the vertebrae. And I'll never get over being grateful to Dr. David Bradford for seeing me on such short notice. You don't forget things like that '

Castino, who came up to the Twins from Orlando three years ago was hailed as another Pie Traynor or at very least, another Brooks Robinson.

And he didn't disappoint, either, winding up as the American Leauge's co-Rookie-of-the-Year along with Alfredo Griffin of

The winter was a little rough for Castino. He was going to go to arbitration with his contract because he was asking for $275,000 and the Twins were offering only $210,000. They compromised at $235,000 for this year and Castino could make more with the incentives he has.

Calvin Griffith, the Twins' candid board chairman and president, likes Castino but isn't quite ready to send him to the Hall of Fame yet. He points out the broad-shouldered righthanded hitter from Evanston, Ill., has played only three seasons and it's a little early in the day yet for some people to be calling him the best third baseman the club has ever had. He remembers some other fine third basemen who played for "the club," fellows like Cecil Travis, Buddy Lewis, Eddle

Yost and more recently, Harmon Killebrew. "And don't forget Oi' Ossio Bluege," he says. "Where did you ever see a better third baseman than him? I'm not knocking down Castino, and I hope he turns out to be the best we ever had, but we had some mighty good ones."

The Twins aren't pushing Castino here. They don't know when he'll be ready to play again, but they don't want him rushing and possibly reinjuring himself. Sometimes, in his effort to hasten his recovery, he gets a little over enthusiastic.

"I'm concerned about him," says Smalley, "He's such a highly motivated guy, he can't stand being injured. He just got back from Minnesota a few days ago where they took Xrays and he got such a good report, he was euphoric. The doctors told him he could play pepper, field ground balls and run, do everything but heavy hitting. I had to key him down. He was running around like it was May."

Castino appreciates what Smalley, Manager Billy Gardner

and the other Twins are trying to do for him. "I'm flattered that they're concerned," he says. "I know myself, though. I will push it to play as fast as I can. It's no fun

DePaul, Arkansas Fall In Regionals

United Press International

With Sunday's loss to Boston College in the Midwest Regional, DePaul is now 0-3 in the past three years in NCAA play.

'We knew Boston College could play," said Hay Meyer, wrapping up his 40th season as head coach of DePaul. "We expected them to come out after us and we were prepared. Those first points came so easy, the guys got a little too loose and started shooting from anywhere. The shots weren't good ones, Boston College got the rebounds and they were right back in the game.

"It's a bitter pill to swallow," Meyer said. "But ... we have no excuses, I know one thing.

I don't believe in jinxes." A key to the Eagles' offense was senior guard John Bagley, who scored 26 points. "I think Bagley is one of the better guards we faced," Meyer said. "He controlled the ball

In the first game, Villanova recovered from a tip-in at the buzzer ending the second overtime by Northeastern's Eric Jefferson to beat the Huskies. It equaled the longest game in the history of the NCAA Tournament. The Wildcats will face No. 9 Memphis State in Raleigh Friday night.

In the Mideast, Minnesota stopped Tennessee-Chattanooga, 62-61, and Virginia got by Tennessee, 54-51.

At Indianapolis, Randy Breuer scored 17 points and ignited a second-half comeback to lead sixth-ranked Minnesota. The Big Ten champion advanced to the next round of the regional to face Louisville.

In the opener, Virginia guard Ricky Stokes' two free throws with 15 seconds left — his only points of the game - rallied the Cavaliers to the victory.

In the West, Oregon State beat Pepperdine, 70-51, and Idaho stopped Iowa, 69-67.

At Pullman, Wash., Danny Evans, Lester Conner and Charlie Sitton combined for 48 points to lead fourth-ranked Oregon State to a convincing triumph over outmanned Pepperdine. OSU will play No. 8 Idaho in the West Regional in Provo, Utah, Thursday.

A pair of Seminole County prep baseball squads go off to Volusia County today in search of victories while another remains at home and hopes to pick up right where it left off on Friday.

Bobby Lundquist's Fighting Seminoles and Lake Howell's Berto Benjamin led Silver Hawks across the county line to face Daytona Seabreeze and Spruce Creek respectively. Meanwhile, Lake Brantley, a 3-1 wirmer over Lake Howell on Friday, goes after its sixth win against six losses when the Patriots host DeLand at 3:30 p.m.

Lyman, chasing front-running Apopka, has an open date today and resumes play on Wednesday.

For Lundquist's Seminoles, the Tribe will be looking to avoid the big inning in tonight's 7:00 p.m. outing at Seabreeze. In losses to Apopka and Oviedo last week, Seminole found itself giving up one big inning to both the Blue Darters and Lions that eventually proved to be the deciding factors in both games.

"We've got to start taking advantage of other peoples mistakes and get some hits," points out Tribe skipper Lundquist. Against Apopka on Friday the Seminoles and Blue Dariers were battling through three scoreless Prop Basebali innings before Apopka took advantage of four Tribe errors in the fourth to notch four runs and take an eventual 8-3 decision. Against Oviedo the Tribe committed two errors in the third that allowed the Lions the three runs they needed in taking a 3-2 decision.

Lake Howell will be looking to break back into the win column after Friday's 3-1 loss to Lake Brantley. Tommy Novak posted an 11 strike out performance against the Hawks who will be looking for a little more contact against Spruce Creek this afternoon at 3:30 p.m. The Patriots will be looking to even their record at 6-6 at home today when Delland visits at 3:30 p.m.

Rain Dampens LPGA Tourney

INDUSTRY, Calif. (UPI) - The LPGA event at the Industry Hills golf complex could become known as the Miserable

Sunday, a cold, blustery rain washed out the fourth round of the Olympia Gold-sponsored $150,000 LPGA tournament and officials said the final 18 holes would be played today, weather permitting. Forecasters said there was only a slight chance of scattered showers today.

Last year's tournament was shortened to 36 holes because of torrential rains and rain also marred the second and third rounds of this year's tournament although all the golfers finished their rounds on both days.

LPGA Tournament Director Ed Gowan finally called a halt about 4:30 p.m. EST Sunday, after play had been suspended twice because of downpours. Chilly temperatures in the upper 50s and gusty winds that blew two cameras off the TV tower contributed to the miserable conditions.

Although about half the field had teed off, Gowan said play today would start from scratch. Gowan said the field would tee off on No. 1 and No. 10 on both the Eisenhower and Zaharias courses about 20 miles east of Los Angeles.

Donna Horton White, who wore mittens between shots in Saturday's chilly third round, was the third-round leader with a three-shot advantage. Her even-par 73 Saturday gave her a 5under 54-hole total of 214. Japan's leading money winner, Ayako Okamoto, was in second place at 217. Another shot back was defending champion Sally Little, whose 69 Saturday was the best round of the day.

Also in contention were Amy Alcott and Janet Coles at evenpar 219. Patty Sheehan and Vicky Tabor were at 220 and Beth Daniel led a group of four golfers tied at 221.

RAIDER REVIEW Seminole Community College baseball coach Jack Pantelias, center, eyeballed another win for his Raiders over the weekend. SCC dropped Ohio Valley by an 8-4 score Saturday to improve its season slate to 19-8. The Raiders face Sante Fe Tuesday on the road before returning home for three straight games. Georgetown College, Florida J.C. and Long Island University visit SCC this week.
