Expert to examine Rolling's competency

GAINESVILLE - A mental health expert has been appointed to determine whether murder suspect Danny Harold Rolling is competent to stand trial for the August 1990 slayings of five Gainesville college students.

Circuit Judge Stan R. Morris, on a motion from Rolling's public defender, Rick Parker, approved the appointment of Dr. Elizabeth McMahon, an expert in neuropsychology. The order was filed Thursday and made available Monday.

The judge's order asks McMahon to evaluate Rolling, 38, as a confidential expert to assist the defense in determining whether the Louisiana drifter is competent to stand trial and if he was sane when the killings occurred.

Rolling has pleaded innocent to five counts of first-degree murder, three counts of sexual battery and three counts of burglary in the crime spree that terrorized Gainesville. Rolling, who is serving five life sentences for a string of MIAMI - A Paraguayan man was arrested here for attempting to defraud $5.4 million from an oil business owned by his native government, an FBI spokesman said.

Edgardo Grena Urdinies, 51, was taken into custody by FBI agents without incident at a North Miami residence, said spokesman Paul Miller.

Urdinies was brought before a U.S. magistrate Monday for a preliminary hearing and then turned over to federal marshals. Miller said. Another hearing was scheduled for today.

The Paraguayan government has accused Urdinies of attempting to defraud Petropar, the Paraguayan oil company, of $5.4 million by forging a transfer of funds slip, Miller said.

Urdinies' arrest stemmed from a Feb. 17 warrant issued by the criminal court of Asuncion, Paraguay. Under the extradition treaty between Paraguay and the United States, a U.S. magistrate then issued a warrant for the arrest.

Montrell Brown was in a car outside Blockbuster Video in North Jacksonville when two men approached. One man fired through the window, striking the child, said Howard Curry, a spokesman for the Jacksonville sherill's office.

Police said the boy was sitting in the car alone waiting for his mother. But the woman told the Florida Times-Union for a story Tuesday the was in the car with her son at the time of the

"I didn't have time to start the car," said the woman, who was not identified by the newspaper, because no arrests have been made. "I was screaming, 'Please, please don't do that."

The boy was taken to University Medical Center, where he was listed in serious condition Monday night, said hospital spokeswoman Kathy Wasiewicz.

Children's work age lowered to 13

TALLAHASSEE - Legislation lowering the age at which children can go to work to 13 and enabling for-profit companies to hire children to sell things door-to-door narrowly cleared a Senate committee.

Current law sets the minimum working age for a minor at 14 and prohibits those under 15 from becoming door-to-door salespersons for profit, an occupation deemed by social workers to be too dangerous for children.

Minors are now allowed to sell door-to-door for groups such as the Girl Scouts and high school bands, but only with strict adult supervision.

The bill (SB 284), sponsored by Sen. Mark Foley, R-West Palm Beach, would allow younger children to sell door-to-door and lower the working age to 13. Sponsors said the bill is intended to provide more minors with jobs, which would get

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Child's advocate Legislative budgets lack $423 million

By CURT ANDERSON Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's proposed state budgets need $423 million more to boost education spending and eliminate waiting lists for such programs as im-munizations, a children's advocate said

Jack Levine, director of the Florida Center for Children & Youth, used the home towns of Republican Senate President Ander Crenshaw, Democratic House Speaker Bolley "Bo" Johnson and other legislative leaders to make his point.

"Is there a freezer somewhere in Jacksonville, Milton, Largo or Miami where we can store children on waiting lists and thaw them out when our legislative leaders muster the courage to meet their needs?" Levine said. "Of course not. Like oranges left to rot, children on waiting lists go bad."

The House and Senate are both scheduled Tuesday to vote on their versions of the 1993-94 state budget. The $1 billion difference in spending will be worked out by a House-Senate conference committee in the coming weeks.

The Republican-led Senate's budget contains no new taxes, while the House would raise $280 million by closing tax loopholes to boost education spending. Computer services and so-called "subchapter S" corporations would foot the bill.

Neither plan, Levine said, does anything to remove 345,600 children from waiting lists for a wide range of social services. including preventative health care, vaccinations, drug and alcohol treatment and runaway youth homes.

"If we keep today's children on waiting lists, they are not getting school-ready," he said. "They are not going to be successful. We think it's irresponsible.

In addition, Levine advocated an additional $100 in per-student spending for an estimated 1.9 million public school students, which would cost $190 million.

The House budget would increase perpupil funding by $177 over last year, bringing public schools spending back to the 1989-90 level. The Senate budget, meanwhile, raises the level by just $52 over last vear. Without preventative programs and improved education. Levine said taxpayers eventually would pay more when children fail and turn to crime, drugs or the welfare rolls. "Which is worse? New taxes or untreated child abuse?" he said. "States which fail to invest in their children pay a heavy debt of failure.'

Crenshaw, the anti-tax Jacksonville Republican who may run for governor in 1994, said in a statement on the budget that millions of dollars are being spent on programs proven to work, such as the Healthy Start prenatal care initiative for poor women and infants.

"This budget will not make everyone happy," Crenshaw said.

Lawman's legacy leads to pot bust

By Associated Press

PONCE DE LEON - State agent J.B. Dobson, a surveillance pilot, died in a helicopter crash more than a year ago, but he left a legacy that led authorities to a major marijuana growing site.

Another Florida Department of Law Enforcement helicopter pilot used Dobson's notes to find the pot patch in a wooded area near this Florida Panhandle town. Authorities confiscated 5,146 marijuana seedlings on Feb. 19.

"This was one of his favorite spots for flying." said Holmes County Sheriff John Braxton. "He'd document all the locations that information. If you've got a hot spot, you keep an eye on it."

No arrests have yet been made, but the case remains under investigation, sheriff's communications officer Ronnie Gant said Monday.

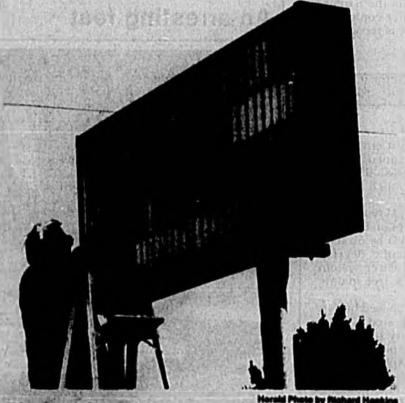

Braxton said he has a suspect in the case but investigators are awaiting results from FDLE's Tallahassee crime laboratory of a fingerprint analysis on a sheet of plastic found at the site.

Dobson had noticed the site before he died in the Aug. 1991 crash while returning from a marijuana-hunting mission.

After the other pilot spotted a 30-foot mound, deputies on foot confirmed marijuana was growing under a camouflage netting and the plastic sheet. They staked out the area, hoping the owner would return. When he did not after four days the deputies uprooted the sprouts. none much more than three inches tall.

Capital suffers retrial unrest

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE - After Florida's capital was selected to host the racially charged manulaughter retrial of a suspended Miami police officer, it purchased machine guns, riot helmets. pepper gas and bullet-proof

Mobilization plans were readied for the National Guard. Officers began gathering "intelligence information" and discussed asking the judge to delay announcing the verdict up to three hours to prepare for civil unrest.

"We have to prepare for the worst and hope for the best," Tallahassee police Maj. Walter McNeil said Monday as he testified about the unprecedented readiness. "We just want to be prepared."

But William Lozano's defense sees it as fear, and they are seeking in hearings this week to move the March 8 trial from Tallahassee on the grounds that residents are afraid of the racial violence it could bring.

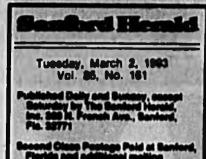

Lozano's killing of two black motorcyclists in 1989 sparked three days of burning and looting in Miami and the defense contends the tension is only heightened with the retrial going on at the same time as the Los Angeles federal trial of police officers in the Rodney King beating.

Defense attorney Roy Black argued that if police are this skittish about unrest, "what about the poor jurors who have to sit on the case?"

Added defense co-counsel Mark Selden: "They're not preparing for a trial - they're preparing for a riot."

In a lawsuit filed Monday on behalf of 10 people, including two cancer patients and seven health professionals, the American Civil Liberties Union claimed the law violates constitutional rights to privacy and due process.

Access 93: City leaders, people gather tonight

Access 93 starts this evening. It's the first in a planned series of meetings designed to take city leaders out into the neighborhoods. If the meeting produces expected results, more will be scheduled elsewhere in other areas of the city. If it turns into a gripe session and neither the people nor the city will listen to the other. it will have been a uscless evening.

Tonight's meeting is primarily for district 1 citizens. It will be held at Trinity United Methodist Church, 526 Sanford Ave., beginning at 6 p.m. When these town meetings were lirst discussed, commission and staff members agreed that the purpose would be to establish an improvement in communications between the people and the city.

Representatives of various city departments will be on hand to comment on such issues as streets, drainage, sewers and crime.

Success tonight will depend on both sides. Citizens must refrain from using the meeting to demand immediate solutions. Rather, they should feel free to explain problems that affect their district. Discussion should be a sharing of ideas, problems and possible

The City Commission is not allowed to make a formal decision during the meeting and the people should not try to force an immediate response regarding problem-

Demandsofer better idrainage or orime crackdowns cannot be resolved overnight.

On the other hand/city officials should be willing to faten to the people. On problems that could be resolved, they should move forward and bring the matters up for official city action.

Tonight's meeting is to be led by Mayor Bettye Smith and district 1 Commissioner Lon Howell. Neither of them should make promises that may pacify the people for a short time, but be difficult to fulfill.

The real success of tonight's meeting will be judged by what effect it will have on future commission decisions.

The city says it wants to hear from the people and is willing to go into the neighborhoods to listen. The people say they deserve the right to speak out on problems that affect their area.

We urge everyone attending tonight's meeting to be willing to speak, listen, and share ideas. Work together in a civilized manner. Help turn Access 93 into a project that will be of benefit to everyone.

Special thanks

To our friends:

On Feb. 24th we experienced a parent's nightmare. Our daughter took the trash out and did not return. We began to search the neighborhood hoping that she had simply decided to stay outside and play with the other children.

After several minutes of searching panic began to overtake us, so we decided to call the police and family members to assist in the search. It was a warm feeling to see that some very special neighbors who we really did not know but had seen before were assiting us in the search. These neighbors were armed with prayers. flashlights and even baseball bats in an effort to find our daughter safe and unharmed.

It is this caring and loving act that our family. friends and neighbors showed that we write this letter to say thank you.

It is times of challenge and controversy that ultimately measures a man and in this case, a community. And you, our friends, came to the forefront for 31/2 hours, coming out of your warm homes into the cold night to help us look for a scared, confused 9-year-old little girl.

It is community support like what you gave to us that makes us proud to live where we live and in the city in which we live. We will always appreciate you and your families, and will pray that God will always bless and keep you, She was found safe and

The future of black conservatives

The caller gloated. "What's to become of black conservatives," he asked. "now that Reagan and Bush are history?" Not to worry. I replied. Black conservatism was around long before Reagan and Bush were even born. And I assured him that this minority within a minority would survive the Clinton years.

The caller seemed intrigued. Why hadn't he heard of any black conservatives before the last decade? He was sure that they were born of the Reagan eralike Athena springing fully grown from the head of Zeus. He wanted proof that black conservatism predated the 1980s. In the spirit of Black History Month, I decided to indulge this pesky caller. I asked him if he were familiar with the writings of W.E.B. Du Bois, the famed black historian, educator and civil rights leader. He was. So I read him a passage from "The Souls of Black Folk." which was written 90 years ago (or about eight years before Ronald Reagan was born).

"The Negro (should) bend his energy to the solving of his own social problems. For the accomplishment of this, the Negro has the right to demand freedom for self development, but no more aid from without than is really helpful for furthering that development. The bulk of the

Doesn't that sound like a prescription for self-help? I asked the caller. He agreed. He also grudgingly conceded that black conservatives have been the foremost advocates of self-help as the best means to deal with the enduring problems of black America .. high school dropouts. teen age pregnancy. substance abuse, crime, etc.

But, said the caller, Just because Du Bols embraced self-help does not mean that he was a black conservative. I granted him that. But my point was that black conservative thinking has work raising the Negro must be done by the Negro himself." been around for a long time. And that black conservatives of today can trace their views back conservatives of today can trace their views back to Du Bois and others in black history.

"Who else?," the caller asked. Like Malcolm X, I replied. Why do you think he was a big hero of young Clarence Thomas? It wasn't Malcolm's racial invective that had lasting appeal. It was his conservative message: "Do for self."

The black Muslim challenged his followers to take control of their destinies. Get off the welfare rolls. Start their own businesses. That's precisely what today's black conservatives have in mind when they talk about economic empowerment.

Such thinking stands in marked contrast with the liberal orthodoxy of the civil rights establishment. Such traditional black organizations as the NAACP, the National Urban League and the Congressional Black Caucus continue to look to the government to improve the lives of black Americans. They ask for more welfare, which already enslaves a fifth of the black population. They seek preferential set-aside contracts for black businesses, making them dependent on government for survival. And they want racial quotas in education and employment, dooming blacks to perceptions of inferiority.

What's ahead for ancient forests

Scything the Pacific Northwest's ancient forests down to the remaining centuries-old stands has taken decades, but the cut has been unrelenting. "Saw-timber volume of the Douglas-fir region is being depleted about four times as fast as it is being replaced by growth." the government reported 60 years ago in its first area survey.

With that harvest now risen to crisis, President Clinton has promised to convene a forest summit to map a future for the region's old growth timber. The summit can come none too soon. The Northwest is gripped in controversy over logging jobs, clearcuts and the threatened Northern spotted owl. The courts are running the public forests. Federal agencies that manage the forests are at each others' throats. Congress has already tried and failed to find a solution.

Resolving this acrimony is the president's demanding forest summit goal.

The basics have been clarified during years of simmering conflict. Gone is 85 percent of the low- and high-elevation ancient forest that once covered 30 million acres of Oregon, Washington and Northern California west of the Cascade Mountains. Felled to clearcuts, much of the land was belatedly converted to tree farms that won't yield a crop until well into the next century. Some of that land is so steep and eroded that foresters can't get much more than scrub to grow there. Either way, the ancient forests, once gone, won't be seen

Of what's left, 1.7 million ancient forest acres are public land where the decision to conserve or to cut must now be made.

Throughout the 1980s, timber industry giants reduced employment through automation and moved operations to private stands in the South even as 70,000 acres of Northwest ancient forest were clearcut each year. Their timber is selling today at an all-time premium. But thousands of individual loggers, small mill owners, their families and communities stand to bear the brunt of a decision to stop the cut.

In January the administration contacted 2,000 individuals and organizations secking advice on how the summit should proceed. The environmental community responded with a set of principles and a proposed process, says Jim Owens, executive director of the Western Ancient Forest Campaign.

Citing wildlife and salmon stocks being pushed toward extinction as "representative of what's happening to many species," Owens says, "the forests have lost their integrity in much of the Northwest. We have natural systems throughout the area that are unraveling." To keep the threads from coming completely apart, environmentalists are urging above all that the summit base its decisions on scientific evidence. Once such an assessment identifies those forests that should best be spared from logging, including those on the east side of the Cascades, they should be placed in permanent ancient forest reserves. To make these assessments, a blue-ribbon commission, chaired by a former president or U.S. Supreme Court Justice, should gather evidence for recommendations to a Cabinetlevel committee named by Mr. Clinton. This group, in turn. should offer legislative and administration changes to implement the summit's findings. This process is designed to minimize the political pressures that have polarized previous attempts to resolve the issue. Owens believes the work could be complete by year's

The timber industry favors a more-of-the-same approach. Mark Rey. National Forest Products Association

The courts are running the public forests. vice president for forest resources, says the summit should consist of members of the administration and of the Northwest congressional delegation, who should gather information and submit a plan to Congress which would make the final decisions. This approach would not only maximize political pressures, but is almost exactly the one that resulted in abject failure to produce a solution only a few months ago.

Both sides do agree that job retraining and other assistance should be provided to those who lose work in any transition that curtails logging in Northwest ancient forests.

The issues facing the summit, however President Clinton formulates it, are contentious. Chances for consensus are vanishingly small. The timber industry, for example, may try to use the process to wedge open an assault on the Endangered Species Act, a tactic environmentalists will oppose. Environmentalists will urge a ban on raw log exports to keep timber-related jobs at home, a move the industry will fight.

Mr. Clinton's challenge is to face all this squarely, structure a summit that will get the job done, and convert years of confrontation into answers that will serve the Northwest, the ancient forests and the nation as a whole.

Middle class is hot and bothered

The middle-class tax cut was almost born on the campaign trail, in a large diesel bus, to a man who kept shouting its name - yet never said, "read my lips." That's what made that other guy so untrustworthy, the man on the bus explained: He'd said "read my lips" when he talked about another idea that was almost born, "No new taxes...."

The middle-class tax cut died in a speech on Feb. 17 when the man, now out of the bus and standing in front of the U.S. Congress. was calling for "shared personal sacrifice." Suddenly in the midst of all the wonderful things the government could be dolwgiwith that money instead of giving anyone a tax A lot of middle cut, the idea of a middle-class tax cut began to sound pretty greedy.

When that money would be going to put displaced young poor people to work.

complaining. to give a permanent investment tax credit to small businesses, to fix the infrastructure, to protect the environment, to provide health care for everyone and to reduce the federal deficit enough that our children and grandchildren wouldn't be stuck with our bills. how could a person be so petty as to want the tax cut the man had yelled about when he was on the bus? The man's wife, who'd clapped so hard in the bus whenever the man had yelled about it, scolded that anyone upset over the dead tax cut was playing the "blame game" that had kept Washington in gridlock and prevented all these wonderful things from happening. The folks who had so liked the idea of a middle-class tax cut back when the man was yelling for it, blinked and tried to figure out when they had become the bad guys: "Let's see. In October, the man said it was something we deserved because during the '80s, while our salaries were going down and we were losing our benefits. Congress increased our taxes, decreased those on the rich and used our tax money to offset what they lost by letting corporations run amok. And all the good he says we're gonna do with that money - wasn't that supposed to go along WITH the tax cut, not instead of it? What are we missing here?"

Judging by the man-on-the-street interviews local news crews conducted after President Clinton's speech, a lot of middleclass Americans are doing what they always do: gutting it out and not complaining.

They sincerely wish the president well, as do I. But it was particularly galling to hear Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell toss off the proposed energy tax increase - $17 a month for a family making $40,000 - as if it were nothing. "It's less than $200 a year," he said. Actually, it's $204. For a couple trying to raise a kid or two on $40,000, the last few years have brought a growing sense of desperation; perhaps with one of the parents even taking a second job, or putting things like medical care and car repairs on a high-interest credit card. A tax cut seemed like a rest stop, a small place to catch one's breath before plunging back onto the interstate and trying to keep one car-length ahead of creditors. Does Mitchell have any idea what $200 will buy a family like that?

In his new book, "Bolling Point," economist Kevin Phillips chronicles the decline of middle-class prosperity and how it defeated the president who ignored it and swept in Bill Clinton, who promised, "I am a product of the middle class. And when I am your president you will be forgotten no more.'

But just as playing on middle-class frustration got Clinton elected, if he does not keep his promises to the middle class." or if budget pressures make it impossible for him to do so," Phillips warns, "his failure could unleash

Legislature by Dec. 1. An earlier proposal of the bill would have prohibited borrow construction activity in the area. but Couch eliminated the wording at the request of Seminole County officials and state environmental protection agencies. The original proposal had been drafted by Mike Rich, a biologist who has assisted Geneva residents in opposing borrow pits.

A suggestion for a moratorium against new borrow pits until the task force is done with its work was also opposed by county commissioners, so Couch said he did not include it.

But Couch offered this warning to the county: "If they try to push a couple more through before this is done, I'll scream bloody murder. I've been trying to keep this above-board. If they do that, I'll respond to it.'

Hispanics rarely present in exec ranks, study finds

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Hispanics make up less than 1 percent of top officials of Fortune 500 industrial companies, and only 62 of the firms employ any as executive officers or board members, says a group trying to improve those numbers.

The Hispanic Association on Corporate Responsibility said Monday that it found only 81 of 11.881 executive positions in the 500 industrial corporations are held by Hispanics. In some cases, it said, one person counts several times. such as Robert E. Golzueta, chief executive officer of the Coca-Cola Co. and member of four corporate boards.

To match their share of the population, there would have to be 1,070 Hispanies in such jobs. said association President Richard Jose Bela. author of the study. His Washington-based group monitors corporate treatment of Hispanics in hiring, promotion, contracts and philanthropy.

Among the Fortune 500 service companies, the figures are even smaller, with Hispanics holding just 72 of 12,600 executive posts in only 58 of the corporations. Their proportion of the population would call for 1,134 positions, the study said.

Hispanics are best represented in beverage. soup and cosmetics, building materials and motor. vehicles and parts industries, the study said. They are least represented in transportation, life insurance, diversified financial and utility in-

There are no Hispanics among top executives in the rubber and plastic, oil production and acrospace industries, it said.

"It's as if we're not on their radar screen," said Frank Cota-Robles Newton, executive director of the National Hispanic Leadership Agenda. "It's about time corporate America paid attention to

"Hopefully, we'll start to see some parity in hiring and promotion." Newton said. "There are some CEOs who don't know anything about

The leadership agenda, an umbrella group of 27 Latino rights organizations, recently created an advisory committee for corporations to consult on Hispanic issues.

That panel is drafting a summary of statistics about Hispanic people and issues of concern to them for companies to use as they make decisions about philanthropy and marketing.

"Maybe by getting that into their hands they'll pay attention." Newton said. "This will help us overcome some of that invisibility."

Rita Elizondo, executive director of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute, said Latino groups are focusing on getting more contracts for Hispanic-owned businesses and raising sensitivily in marketing.

For example, she said, many companies often advertise only on Spanish television stations. "caught in the trap that if it's Hispanic, it must be on Spanish TV."

All aboard for latest vacation home: caboose

By MIKE RECHT Associated Press Writer

NORTHFIELD, N.H. - A beach house or a cabin in the mountains is nice. But how about bringing up the rear with a caboose as your vacation retreat?

Ted Larter is offering railroad buffs the chance to own a caboose for $2.750 to $5,000 and take occasional excursions in the refurbished cars. Frank and Carole Judge of Bedford stay in their vacation caboose almost every weekend. "I love the Orient Express experience. I love the old-time movies — all of that era. I love the adventure of it." said Mrs. Judge, who hired an interior decorator to coordinate curtains.

furniture and wallpaper in the caboose.

Judge described himself as a lifelong railroad buff. "I dislike static displays," he said. "I don't like seeing a piece of railroad equipment with grass growing on the tracks."

Larter, who operates two hydroelectric plants for a living, has resold most of the dozen cabooses he has bought since 1986.

Customers pay an additional $100 a month for maintenance and rail space at an old railroad station overlooking the Winnipesaukee River that Larter bought in 1989 with his 25-year-old son. Alan, and business partner John Clement.

For trips, Larter leases an engine and crew. Seven caboose owners and their families climbed aboard just before Christmas a few years ago, traveled 50 miles north to Lincoln on a lightly traveled freight track, slept in their cabooses overnight and returned. They have also traveled to Laconia on the Fourth of July for the fireworks display, and to Weirs Beach for for a few hours of sun and water.

Most of the cabooses had been abandoned in railyards. They were used in earlier days to carry tools and crew members who watched for smoking wheels caused by burning wheel bearings. Automatic detectors now alert engineers.

The cabooses often come with broken windows and doors, or with graffiti on the side. One was burned out.

Some owners panel or paint the metal walls. They add windows, sand the wood floors, put down rugs and install sofa beds or bunk beds. tables, sinks, showers - and a totlet to replace the hole in the floor with the plastic scat.

Larter said there's no profit. He resells the cars for what he pays to buy and transport them: $2,750 for the 25-footers, up to $5,000 for a 50-footer. He has customers from Maine and Massachusetts, as well as New Hampshire.

Larter would like to take longer trips, but the cost of leasing engine and crew — about $1 a mile — makes that difficult. Right now, he divides the cost among those who make the trips, so all he and his son get is a free ride.

'We don't need much excuse to go for a ride," said Larter, who plans one or two trips a month

Trade Center blast: Tape may hold clue

By RICK HAMPSON Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK - A newly discovered videotape of cars coming and going at the World Trade Center parking garage could yield clues to who planted the bomb that rocked the twin towers.

"It's being reviewed and copied," James Fox, head of the FBI's New York office, said Monday. 'We'll know soon.'

Investigators said theories for the bombing range from a terrorist attack to revenge by a disgruntled employee, and they're still unsure what kind of explosive killed at least five people and injured more than 1,000.

But investigators got a break Monday when they found a security videotape of vehicles entering and exiting one of three entrances to the underground garage before the blast.

Fox did not explain why the existence of the tape emerged only Monday, after days of authorities saying the garage had no security

But he said it could be important because experts believe the bomb was so large it would "test the springs of any car or any van." making it conspicuous on the tape. Investigators have pegged the bomb at up to 1,500 pounds, depending on what type of explosive was used.

The Port Authority of New York and New Jersey said police were also able to collect parking stubs from the garage with the plates of each car written on them, and Fox said the stubs have yielded leads. The Port Authority operates the trade center.

Also, Fox said, witnesses described a pattern of suspicious movements of vehicles near the center before the blast, "activity ... that we find very interesting and that we're following up on." He did not elaborate.

CBS quoted an anonymous source as saying witnesses spotted a truck racing out of the parking lot shortly before the blast. The truck was riding so high on its springs that it hit the garage's celling, suggesting it might have been rigged to carry a heavy load. CBS said. The FBI would not confirm the report. The New York Times today quoted anonymous law-enforcement and intelligence officials as saying they had information suggesting a possible Serbian connection to the bombing, although no suspects have emerged. Fox said investigators haven't decided whether bomb was the work of terrorists. He said investigators were asking the Port Authority about disgruntled employees.

Meanwhile, the center's commodities markets reopened on an abbreviated schedule despite the damage inflicted Friday.

But hundreds of companies that will be shut out of the 110-story towers for at least a week struggled through their first work day since the disaster, scrambling to set up offices elsewhere, The shutdown at the nation's second-tallest buildings affects some 50,000 workers.

About 200 people lined up in the cold to be escorted into their offices to retrieve computer disks, files and the like.

In the bowels of the trade center, the blast area was too unstable to allow bomb experts full access. But they worked the edge of the blast, searching for fuses, wiring, bits of paper or carbon traces. A robot collected some evidence.

In addition, the search continued for two center workers reported missing.

All Kamber, executive vice president for a metals and minerals trading company with four employees, said his company lacked insurance for business interruptions and faces losses of $100,000 - "a lot of money for a company our President Clinton declared the city an economic injury disaster area, opening the way for low-interest loans from the Small Business Administration.

The bombing has been a boon for corporate relocators, suppliers of office equipment and computer vendors.

"I'm burned out," said Randie Greenberg of Arenson Office Furnishings. "We're getting orders for everything from folding chairs and folding tables, to coat racks and refrigerators." At the Empire State building - the target of bomb threats within hours of Friday's attack some entrances were closed. Bags were searched. Similar procedures were in effect at the United Nations, Rockefeller Center and the Statue of Copycat callers continued to plague police with bomb threats: 95 came in on Monday - 10 times the normal number.

WASHINGTON - The generally upbeat tenor of economte reports since the election shouldn't fool people into believing the economy isn't in for some ups and downs this year, economists say.

Most analysts are expecting a solid, if unspectacular, growth rate in the economy this year of between 3 percent and 3.5 percent. That would be a marked improvement over last year's 2.1 percent increase in the gross domestic product, the sum of all goods and services produced in the United States.

However, it would fall short of the 4.8 percent surge, at an annual rate, reached during the October-December quarter.

"The overall picture does suggest that the growth pace is slower in the first quarter. The economy is pushing ahead, but at a more temperate pace than in the fourth quarter," said economist Robert Dederick of Northern Trust Co. of Chicago.

Analysts get more economic tea leaves to sift today when the Commerce Department releases its Index of Leading Indicators for January. In December, the index surged 1.9 percent, the biggest jump in nearly 10 years. Economists are expecting a modest 0.2 percent decline in January but described it as a partial correction of December's sharp rise rather than the forerunner of a new economic decline.

'This will signal a moderation in growth rather than a fall back into a new recession," said economist Lynn Reaser of First Interstate Bancorp in Los Angeles. Many analysts cite the reluctance of employers to expand their payrolls aggressively as the biggest obstacle to economic growth. The Clinton administration has proposed a $30 billion stimulus program to create 500,000 jobs.

Labor Secretary Robert B. Reich said Monday the administration was prepared to increase the package if the first dose of stimulus doesn't

"There's been two false starts," Reich told the National Association of Counties. "The only way out of this jobs gridlock is a little bit of pump-priming. If it takes more than $30 billion, it'll be more than $30 billion.'

The leading index, although far from perfect, is designed to predict movement in the economy six to nine months in advance: In particular, three consecutive declines are taken as a warning of a recession.

Plan hits two-earner couples

By JIM LUTHER AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON - President Clinton's tax plan has an unadvertised extra bite on highincome Americans — a greater tax penalty for marriage.

The income tax traditionally has extracted a higher tax from couples at some earning levels. compared with what two single people with comparable incomes would pay. This "marriage penalty" would be worsened by Clinton's deficit-reduction plan. which includes a new 36 percent top rate and a 10 percent surtax on those with taxable incomes over $250,000.

Bill Dunn, an accountant with the Washington office of Coopers & Lybrand, offers the example of a single man and woman carning $100,000 each. Their exemptions and typical itemized deductions leave them with taxable income of $78,782 each. Under current law they would owe a total tax of $39,888. If they married and filed joint returns, their combined taxable income would be $161.721, resulting in a tax of $42,662. That is a marriage penalty of $2,773 under current law.

Their separate taxable incomes are below the $115,000 level at which the Clinton's proposed 36 percent rate would take effect for singles, so their income tax liabilities would not

However, the 36 percent rate would take effect at the $140,000 level for couples filing jointly, meaning that if they able income would be taxed at that higher rate. That would boost their liability to $43,748 or $3,859 above what they would pay as two single people. Thus, the marriage penalty would be $1,086 higher than under present law.

"The surtax would cause an additional penalty on married couples, because it would take effect at the same $250,000 (taxable income) level whether you are married or single," Dunn noted.

You take two people with $150,000 salaries, put them together, and boom! You're in the surtax bracket," Dunn explained.

The tax system generally is blased in favor of married couples. A larger share of a couple's income is taxed at a lower rate, compared with the brackets used by singles.

However, that blas is not great enough to offset the effect of combining two people's incomes onto one return. Also, for nonitemizers, the standard deduction for couples (on 1992 earnings) is $6,000, compared with $7,200 allowed two single people.

here have been instances in which two-earner couples divorce at the end of the year to beat the penalty, and remarry on New Year's Day. And, of course, there probably are many people who live together without marriage for the same reason.

In 1981 Congress declared the ated a special two-earner deduction of up to $3,000. That deduction was repealed in 1986 under the assumption that the simplified three-rate system adopted in a major tax overhaul that year would reduce the penalty in most cases.

The penalty drops as the gap between two spouses' earnings widens. The penalty is $1,284 when two spouses carn $50,000 each. But if one spouse carns $50,000 and the other $20,000, the penalty falls to $466.

As the carnings gap widens further, the penalty turns into a couple compared with what they would pay as singles. If one spouse earned $50,000 and the other $10,000, a couple would pay $1.548 less tax than if they were single.

Clinton's proposal would not affect the income taxes of the great majority of Americans. The exceptions are couples carning more than about $180,000 and singles above about $140,000. In addition, the 20 percent of Social Security recipients with the highest incomes would face a tax on a larger share of their benefit

A deficit primer: Debate echoes America's past

Why?

By ROBERT BURNS Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - The United States was born in hock — the price tag for independence and has spent most of its history in the red.

In the beginning, the debate was whether and how to retire a $77 million debt the colonies incurred fighting the British.

Today, President Clinton and Congress are tussling over how to reduce the mammoth debt, ithe latest chapter in a debate that has resounded throughoutthe nation's history.

What's strikingly different today, of course, is the size of the national debt - now just over $4.1 trillion, or about $4 trillion more than the nation managed to accumulate in the first 153 years of its existence.

That $77 million national debt looked pretty daunting in 1789

— It was 38 times bigger than the government's total revenue that year, whereas today's na-tional debt is less than four times government revenues.

Looking at it another way, however, today's government will borrow more than 10 times the 1789 national debt figure every day of this year to pay its "True fiscal irresponsibility is a fairly recent development." said Rudolph G. Penner, who served as chief economist in

President Ford's budget office. Which raises the question:

It's popular these days to blame government gridlock or President Reagan's tax cuts and big defense buildup of the early 1980s. Both undoubtedly were contributors, but the causes run deeper. One is the financial burden of benefits for the elderly, including Medicare, which was begun in the mid-1960s. The government spent $3.2 billion on Medicare in 1967; last year it spent $129 billion. Social Security in that same period grew more than tenfold. Taxes to pay for those and other programs grew, but not nearly fast as the payouts.

Billionaire Ross Perot, during his failed run for president, likened the debt to "a crazy aunt we keep down in the basement." But he is far from the first American to decry deficits as shameful.

'Retiring the debt was a national obsession" during the late 1800s, James D. Savage wrote in his book "Balanced Budgets and American Politics." He quoted a writer as stating in 1869 that most Americans would "endure any amount of sacrifice rather than bequeath a portion of their debt to future generations."

President James Polk in 1844 called federal deficits a "blighting influence."

Arrow Force, Lions looking for respect

By DEAN SMITH Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD - Rodney Dangerfield gets more respect than this.

Despite winning district titles against very tough competition, the Seminole and Oviedo high school boys' basketball teams still went virtually unnoticed when the final top-10 state polls were announced

Monday night. The Lions, the defending Class 4A State Champions, knocked off the first, second and fifth seeded district IX teams, the top two seeds at Mainland High School, to win their 11th game in their last 12 starts and Improved to 19-11 overall. Despite the hot streak Oviedo still only collected two votes from the 14 sports writers who vote in the poll.

Arrow Force One's 14-17 record made their ranking in the top 10 unlikely, but the only Class 3A team in the county plays a mostly 4A schedule and had to go on the road to beat the first, second and fourth seeded teams in its district. Two of those teams had won over 20 games and had gotten votes at different times this season.

But the pollsters couldn't even find it in their hearts to give Seminole even one vote.

Both teams will get a chance to further prove their worth tonight as they host the regional title games at home.

Arrow Force One will take on District VI champion Satellite High School from Satellite Beach in the 3A-Region III game starting at 7:30 p.m. at Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnasium.

The Scorpions (16-12) knocked off highly regarded Cocoa in the district semifinals. The Tigers lost in last year's state championship game and had Torrin Hawkins, last years State Tournament MVP, returning.

Satellite, under head coach Tony Longa, may be familiar to local fans as the team had played in the Central Florida Classic, the Oviedo Christmas Tournament, three years in a row before going elsewhere this coach Bob Traina, will be looking for the same enthusiasm and team play that carried it to its first district title in several seasons. Leading the Arrow Force One attack are junior forward Deon Daniels, sophomore guard Eric Roberts and senior guard/forward Matt Parker.

Also playing important roles for Seminole are guards Travis Perkins, Ray Perkins, Neville Fuller and Brad Traina, forward Terry Howard and centers Andre Hall and Reggle Holloway.

Oviedo will host fifth-ranked Orlando-William R. Boone High School at Oviedo starting at 7:30 p.m. The Braves advanced to the Region V championship game by hammering Apopka. 48-33, to win the District X title. Boone held the Blue Darters scorless in the first quarter and led 28-7 at halftime.

The Braves (27-4), under veteran head coach Wayne Rickman, have won three state championships since 1978 and are consistantly in the top three in the tough Metro Conference. They are led by super junior forward Willie Anderson, UCF football signee Stacey Mack and leaper Mack Boykin.

today to take on Lake Howell High School in a non-conference contest starting at 3:30 p.m.

The Buccaneers took a 1-0 lead in the top of the first inning on back-to-back doubles by Brown and Green, but the Lions countered with four runs in the bottom of the first inning.

The score remained 4-1 until Oviedo came up with a pair of runs in the bottom of the fifth inning and five in the sixth to end the game. Dugan. meanwhile, was holding Mainland to only two singles the rest of the way.

"The girls played well," said Oviedo head coach Greg Register. "Our gloves have been good and the bats are starting to come around, which is nice." Sparrow's home run was the first of the year for the Lions. She ended the day going three-for-four with two runs scored and an RBI. Michelle Field (two-for-three) and Mindy Kracht (two-for-four) added a pair of hits each for the winners. Also hitting for Oviedo were Tanya Bellamy, Lucinda Godwin, Jenny Jakubein, Beth Janson, Felicia Wilson and Shannon Krillke.

Register, in his first season at the Lions' helm had praise for the fans and his coaching staff. "The fane have supported us well in our home games and have helped us a lot," said Register. "And I can't say enough about the help I'm getting from Nancy Van Wormer. She's doing a great job as my assistant. She has been here for a few years and her experience and knowledge of the girls has been very important."

Boone and Oviedo met at Boone way back in December on the second weekend of the season, with the Braves edging the Lions. 53-51. Anderson had 20 and Mack 10 for Boone, while Green had a game-high 27 and Wright eight for Oviedo.

The winner's of tonight's games will advance to the Sectional Championship games on Saturday night.

Miami will have NHL hockey this year

By STEVEN WIN

MIAMI — Bobby Clarke pledges that the hockey team he must put together in just a few months will be no pushover.

"We'll be worthy opponents every night," the new general manager of Miami's expansion franchise said. "We won't be fodder."

Owner Wayne Huisenga announced Clarke's hiring Monday and said the un-named team will play its first game in October. "That's the time we have left to do it, so we'll get it done," Clarke said in a news conference at Miami Arena, where the team will play home games for at least the first

NHL newcomers San Jose (8-55-2) and Ottawa (9-53-4) are faring poorly, but for the next expansion draft, established teams will be allowed to protect fewer players than before.

"The rules of this draft will provide us with better players than have been provided to other expansion teams." Clarke said. "We're not going to be getting star players, but we should get players who are big and strong and mature enough to compete in the NHL. We'll get one good goalie for sure, and possibly two."

This year's entry draft is loaded with top amateur prospects, which is one reason Huizenga and Disney's Michael Eisner decided to put teams on the ice this year. When the franchises were awarded Dec. 10 to South Florida and Anaheim. Calif., the league gave them the option of starting this year or next.

Clarke, 43, brings a winning background to Florida's second NHL team. He was general manager with the Philadelphia Fiyers for six years and the Minnesota North Stars for two. Under his leadership, the Flyers reached the Stanley Cup finals twice and the North Stars once.

"With the competitive spirit he has, the fans will love him," Huizenga said. To join Miami, Clarke gave up his job as senior vice president of the Flyers.

"My family and I love Philadelphia and the Flyers," said Clarke, who spent his entire Hall of Fame playing career there. "But I have to work, and I wanted to manage, and that job wasn't in Philadelphia"

As Huisenga's first employee, Clarke also likes the idea of building from scratch.

"Starting without even a secretary is very challenging." he said.

His first priority is to hire scouts. Choosing a coach will wait until after the expansion and entry drafts, he said. Contrary to speculation, the team will not be called the Mismi Ice. The first name of the franchise will be either Florida or South Florida, Huisenga said. Huisenga's plans include building a hockey arena for his team. In the meantime, he hopes to sell 10,000 season tickets in 15,000-seat Miami Arena. "I think South Florida can fill these scats," he said. The NHL agrees

"This is a very important market for the National Hockey League," league president Gil Stein said. "It's a major step forward in bringing the NHL to a point in the United States where it will be one of the preeminent sports, if not the preeminent sport, on network television."

Huisenga, chairman of Biockbuster En-tertainment Corp., will pull off the feat of bringing both major-league baseball and professional hockey to Minmi in the same year. His Florida Martins play their first game April 5.

Oversight on invitation cannot be overlooked

DEAR ABBY: I am the parent of a learning-disabled young adult who lives at home. Many attempts to train him for employment so he can live independently have failed. He is well-mannered, never disruptive and only mildly impaired.

There is to be a family wedding in May. A wedding invitation arrived in the mati for "Mr." and Mrs." - our disabled son's name was not included. Our other adult children received invitations.

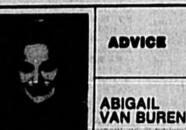

My spouse became very angry when I mentioned this. The sitution is hurtful and embarrassing. My heart tells me to pray that this young couple will be blessed with healthy, normal children.

The time I would have spent at the wedding and reception, I shall devote to my not-sofortunate son. The money I would have spent on a wedding gift will be used to buy something for this young man who struggles on a very limited budget.

Abby, this is causing me a lot of pain. Do you think I'm being overly sensitive? My heart aches for this dear young man. Do other parents of children with special needs experience these social rejections? And if so, how do they handle them?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a black, 60-year-old female and have been taking the hormones Premarin and Provera for a little over 12 years. I've become concerned about the increase in hair on my face and the dark spots (maybe age spots), which have joined my freckles. The combination leaves me with a two-toned complexion. Could my problems be the result of hormones?

DEAR, READER: The hormones you are taking may cause blotchy, over-pigmented areas on the skin. In cases where this harmless side effect causes a cosmetic problem, a simple reduction in dose may be all that is necessary. Ask your gynecologist about this. The drugs are probably not causing the increase in facial hair; unfortunately, this phenomenon commonly affects women as they age.

If the Premarin/Provera combination is not the source of your skin changes, you should see a dermatologist. There are preparations, such as hydroquinone cream, that can be used to decrease pigmentation.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've had an umbilical hernia for years, and have been advised not to have surgical repair. Now, at the age of 76, the protrusion is very 15 obvious, and I feel I should have surgery. What's your opinion?

DEAR READER: Go for It -providing you have no serious medical conditions, such as heart disease, that could affect the outcome. The operation is safe and will solve your problem. Umbilical hernias are a nuisance because portions of bowel can protrude through the defect in the abdominal wall around the umbilicus, causing unsightly bulges and .. on occasion -digestive disturbances, such as gas and bloating. Repair of the hernia is straightforward and can be performed under local anesthesia, which significantly reduces the risk of general anesthesia in any age group.

The fact that you are 76 is no reason to avoid this surgery. I suggest you make an appointment with a surgeon, who can explain the procedure in detail and inform you of any risks that might be important to you,

In many deals, either the declarer does the right thing and makes his contract, or he doesn't and he doesn't. But there are some deals that give both sides a chance for good - and bad play. Today's is one of these. It was played at three tables in a small pair event.

Every West led the spade queen. Every East made the textbook play of overtaking with the king. After every South ducked, back came East's second spade.

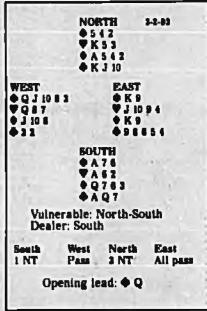

At the first table, South ducked again. West overtook with the spade 10 and returned the eight, his middle spade. Oblivious, East discarded a low club. Needing East to hold the diamond king, declarer played a club to dummy's 10 and then led a low diamond. East went in with the king, and a moment later declarer claimed his con-

At the second table, South also ducked his spade ace at trick two. However, when West overtook and returned the spade eight, East got the suitpreference message. He made a speciacular play, discarding the diamond king. Now South could do no better than take his eight top tricks.

At the third table, South correctly won trick two with the spade ace. He crossed to dummy with a club and led a low dlamond, but East smoothly played the nine. Declarer won with his queen and led a low diamond. If West had played the 10. declarer would have known to duck in the dummy. But West did well, putting up the jack. third round. West cashed out for Now South had a guess. Playing East for three diamonds, he won with dummy's ace and led a
