Woman was beaten to death

SANFORD — Seminole County sheriff's officials reported this morning that the woman whose body was found in a box near Altamonte Springs this weekend was beaten to death.

According to Ed McDonough, public information officer with the sheriff's office, the woman died of trauma caused by a blunt object.

On Saturday morning, a boy walking along a water filled ditch near the Winwood area at Anchor Road and Oak Street between Altamonte Springs and Casselberry, discovered the body inside a partially-submerged cardboard box that was sealed with tape.

The body has been identified as that of Elizabeth Doren, 26, of Orlando. She was reported missing four days ago.

According to McDonough, autopsy results revealed that she died late last week.

Perry released on $9,000 bond

SANFORD — A Seminole County woman whose husband was murdered last week in their home near Winter Park bonded out of jail Saturday night where she was being held on several forgery and theft charges.

Sherry Lee Perry, 37, left the John E. Polk Correctional Facility after a Action Bonding posted the $9,000 bond.

Originally the bond on all the charges faced by Perry totalled $4,500 but Circuit Court Judge Robert McGregor doubled the amount to $9,000 at a Saturday morning hearing. He noted the criminal activity alleged in the charges increased the likelihood the defendant would be tempted to flee if she was released on bond.

Perry asked the judge to reduce the bond because her husband, David, had died Thursday and she needed to make the necessary funeral arrangements. The investigation into the murder is continuing.

Perry wore a surgical mask during the brief hearing. She told a bondsman jail authorities mistakenly thought she had hepatitis. The two jail guards escorting her wore latex gloves and masks.

She is scheduled to appear in court Feb. 3 and 24.

Two tickets split $10 million

TALLAHASSEE — A Florida Lotto jackpot guaranteed at $10 million will be split by the owners of two lucky tickets sold in the Miami area.

The tickets, one sold in Miami Beach and the other in Coral Gables, are the only ones matching the six numbers from the latest Lotto game.

Drawn late Saturday were the numbers 2-11-18-19-24-32.

The drawing also produced 313 five-of-six winners worth $1,135 each, 16,606 four-of-six tickets worth $51.50 each, and 290,683 three-of-six tickets worth $4 each.

Weekly Lotto jackpots have been set at a guaranteed minimum of $10 million since early December, more than doubling in rollover weeks.

Cities' finances OK

Lake Mary status in 'good shape'; Sanford presentation due today

By NICK PFEIPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — In the past few days, finance directors from Sanford as well as Lake Mary, have issued status reports. Both say their respective cities are doing as well as expected.

"We are basically in good shape," Randy Knight told the Lake Mary City Commission during last Thursday's meeting. "The water and sewer revenue is looking very strong for this time of year. The ad valorem taxes began to come in during late November and the revenue is right on track for this time of year."

Sanford Finance Director Carolyn Small issued a memorandum regarding the first quarter Fiscal 1994 revenue expenses on Friday. The information is to be presented to the Sanford City Commission at the work session meeting this afternoon.

"There appears to be no significant shortfalls in revenues nor overages in expenses anticipated for the General Fund, Stormwater and Utility Funds," she said.

Principal feels school is stronger than ever

By VICKI DeBORNIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Bill Moore, principal of Sanford Middle School, believes his school is stronger and serves more people than ever before.

After just more than a year in the top job at the school, Moore recently prepared a state of the school report for Willie Holt, executive director of Middle School education for the school district.

Moore said it has been a priority of his to make sure the school took a more active role in serving more of the social and extra-curricular needs of the students.

The previous practice of closing down the campus no later than 4 p.m. "isolated the school from the community" and deprived the students of the opportunity to participate in the same kinds of recreational activities in which students at other district schools were able to take part.

He said the school's after-school program allows students an hour after the conclusion of classes to participate in "self-improvement activities" such as extra academic help from teacher volunteers, arts and crafts, karate, cheerleading/dance, weightlifting and computer programming.

"I think we've just started looking at the big picture," Moore said. "We had been kind of focused on the day-to-day operations and had overlooked the big picture."

He said the School Advisory Board's school improvement plan helped the school administration concentrate on the needs of the students.

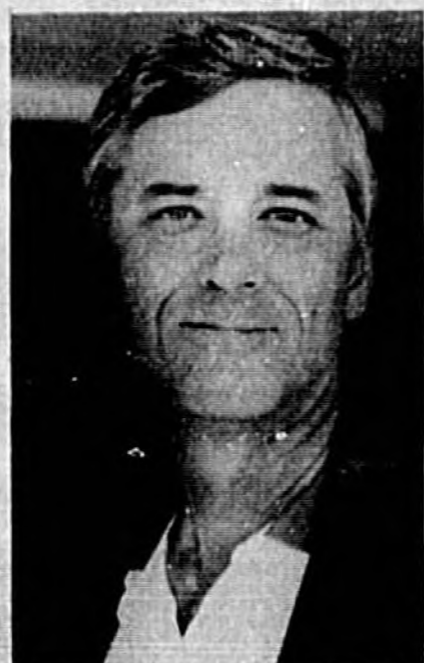

The school also opens its doors to the Police Athletic League (PAL) and the Sanford Recreation Department for various recreational and sporting activities.

Seminole Community College now has an outreach program for its GED study program.

"It is very important that we make this school an integral part of the community," Moore said.

He said the school tries to encourage school spirit by making school an enjoyable place to be.

AIDS activist vows to keep speaking

PALM BEACH GARDENS — Former high school teacher Barbara Webb says full-blown AIDS will slow her down but not stop her efforts to educate the public about the dread disease.

Webb, 67, is one of six people the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention says were infected with the HIV virus by Stuart dentist David Acer while having dental work done.

"It didn't exactly thrill me, but I was expecting it," she said Sunday about her reaction to her diagnosis only days ago of having the disease itself.

She will continue her speaking circuit, she said from her bed at Palm Beach Gardens Medical Center.

"I'll still be talking about AIDS," she said. "But I'll be playing that by ear from now on."

"I've been talking to schools and to as many groups as possible," she added. "It is very energizing, but I don't want to overdo it. I'll just try to be sensible, and if I'm not, then my husband and my family say they will be sensible for me."

Boy killed during illegal drag race

JACKSONVILLE — A 33-year-old man was charged with vehicular homicide after an 8-year-old boy was killed and five other spectators injured during an illegal drag race, authorities said.

Brent Dean Hutchinson was also charged with reckless driving in the Sunday afternoon chain-reaction crash. He had been racing a Thunderbird on a makeshift dragstrip at an abandoned airport where some 200 people had gathered to watch, police said.

Among the injured was the boy's 12-year-old sister and two 11-year-old girls, all in serious condition. The mother of one of the 11 year olds was also in serious condition, while the dead boy's father refused medical treatment.

A reporter for The Florida Times-Union, which was doing a story on illegal drag racing on the old runway, had interviewed Hutchinson minutes before the fatal crash. Hutchinson told the reporter he worried about spectators standing too close.

"It's the only place I know to come to do it and not be out on the streets," Hutchinson said. "I win, pretty much...."

"The only thing I don't like is people down there get out on the runway."

Hutchinson's green Camaro swerved and struck two parked cars, with either his car or one of the parked cars slamming into the crowd, said Jacksonville Sheriff's Sgt. Malcolm Adams.

About an hour before the wreck, police officers had chased away the racers and spectators. Spectators have said the races are a weekly ritual.

"We run them all off and they turn around and come right back. 'We ain't hurtin' nothing, officer.' That's what they say," sheriff's Sgt. J. F. Schnippert said.

Reynolds-Anderson divorce settled

LOS ANGELES — Burt Reynolds and Loni Anderson have agreed to a settlement in their publicly bitter divorce: She gets $2 million and a vacation house; he gets the rest.

"She's been very easy on him," Anderson's attorney, Martin Simone, said Saturday.

The agreement was reached over the weekend, beating a Wednesday divorce court date in Stuart.

Custody arrangements for their 5-year-old adopted son, Quinton, must still be ironed out in Los Angeles County Superior Court. But Anderson expects the boy to live with her, while Reynolds gets visitation rights, Simone said. They would share joint legal custody. Reynolds already is paying $42,000 per month in child support under a temporary order.

Reynolds, 57, and Anderson met on a talk show in 1981. She moved into his home in 1984. They were married four years later and soon after adopted Quinton.

It was described as a storybook marriage. Friends were shocked when Reynolds filed for divorce papers in June — and so, apparently, was Anderson. Reynolds acknowledged a relationship with another woman.

Ospreys visit Brevard in record numbers

MERRITT ISLAND — Ospreys are flocking to Brevard County in record numbers, according to the annual Christmas bird count.

At least 829 ospreys were spotted on Merritt Island during the one-day count, a national record for a specific area. The previous record of 425, set in 1992, also was on Merritt Island.

"That's a high count for ospreys," said Geoff LeBaron, an official with the National Audubon Society in New York, which conducted 1,700 bird counts nationwide last month.

Ospreys, also called fish hawks because of their diet, have made dramatic increases in Brevard during the past two decades. In 1975, only 52 were spotted on Merritt Island during a December count.

Like most birds of prey, ospreys had to recover from exposure to pesticides that devastated their ability to reproduce. The chemicals, such as DDT, were finally banned in the mid-1970s.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Boat ordinance approval delayed

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Residents along Lake Mary lakes may soon have rules governing docks and boat houses. Specific restrictions however, are yet to be approved by the Lake Mary City Commission.

The proposal was brought before the City Commission earlier this month, but was tabled pending further clarification of several points.

Thursday night, the measure was presented in ordinance form for first reading. It too, however, was tabled until the next meeting, still awaiting further information.

During the meeting however, more questions arose regarding several points. One dealt with part of the ordinance which specified that, "50 percent of a lake width or channel width must remain unblocked."

Commissioner George Duryea said he knows of instances where even that amount could be dangerous.

Planner Matt West responded that the distance could be changed. "It could be left up to interpretation," he commented. "I would suggest we may reinstate what we struck from the original proposal."

The lines West referred to said, "No docking facility may be located in such a manner as to impede normal navigation."

Mayor Lowry Rockett suggested, "We could have our primary emphasis on the 50 percent, as long as it didn't impede navigation."

West reported that the wording of the ordinance had been changed since first presented, to eliminate the use of the word "vessel" and replace it with "watercraft." He also called attention to several additions and deletions from the original proposal.

City Attorney Ned Julian commented on a matter he had been asked to look into and explained that existing docks would be grandfathered in, but they would not be allowed any rebuilding or construction unless they were brought into conformity.

Commissioner Gary Brender said he had only one problem with the way the ordinance was worded. "You have a prohibition against allowing sleeping, living, cooking or restroom facilities in a boat house," he said. "But isn't that overly restrictive?"

"Maybe we should allow someone to have a barbecue pit out there. I don't think that would be improper, and we could allow that as long as the unit is temporary."

West said the addition of the word "permanent" could be added to cooking equipment which would be prohibited.

Rockett suggested the matter be tabled until the Feb. 3 meeting, to allow residents who may be affected to examine the situation and be on hand for public discussion during the reading of the resolution.

The commissioners gave a unanimous vote supporting the delay.

Towey faces grilling over dollars-shifting plan

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Lawton Chiles' pick to head the state's social services agency has miffed some lawmakers with his plan to shift millions of dollars from their districts into those with higher poverty.

Although it is doubtful Jim Towey's appointment as secretary of the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services is in any real danger, he can expect a grilling at his Senate confirmation hearings in February.

"I've still got to be convinced to vote for him," said state Sen. Curt Kiser, R-Palm Harbor.

"There are still programs and positions in HRS that are not working. What he should be doing is cutting those positions and using the savings for other programs that need it."

While Towey said he welcomes the chance to explain his plan, he won't back down.

"To barter this for my confirmation vote, I can't do it," he said. "I hope to God to be confirmed."

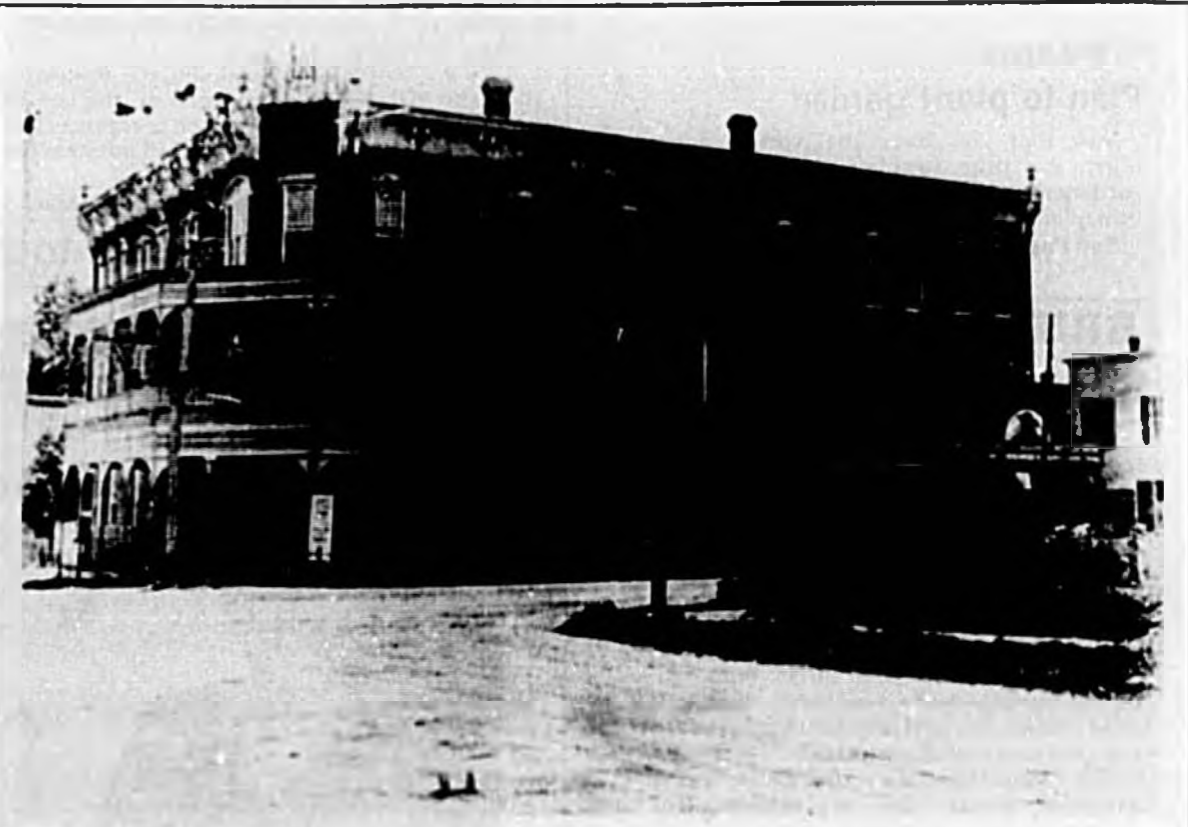

Towey was nominated HRS secretary in July by Chiles and has been running the agency since then while awaiting confirmation.

In October, he invited a political firestorm by unveiling a new formula for how the agency distributes $914 million among the state's 15 HRS districts.

Towey contends the current formula is based on old data and old politics and recommends making poverty the key factor in how the cash is distributed.

Districts in the Panhandle, Pinellas, Pasco and Palm Beach counties would lose millions of dollars, while Orange, Hillsborough and other higher-poverty regions in South Florida and North Central Florida would gain money.

For example, the Pinellas-Pasco district would lose $2 million and the Hillsborough-Manatee district would pick up $886,218.

Way Back When

This photo, courtesy of the DeLand House Museum and its curator, Bill Dreggors is of the building known as the Welborne Block in old downtown Sanford. The building was located on the southeast corner of North Park Avenue and Commercial Street. The location of this structure was in question until local retired plumber and somewhat of an historian, Archie Harriett, conspired with the Herald's "Way Back When" editor, Julian Stenstrom. A photo of the Welborne building was found on the lower left hand corner of page 26 of a pictorial review of Sanford published by the local Chamber of Commerce in 1977. Sanford's centennial year. Immediately east of the Welborne building was Harry Kent's two-story garage and east of that was the northern verandas of the Sanford House which actually fronted on First Street. The Welborn building was demolished and on the site was built the Valdez Hotel, also a three-story structure. Not only did the Valdez serve as a hotel but the third floor became the first offices of the various departments of the Seminole County Courthouse. The name "Valdez" given the hotel came from one of the earliest names of Lake Monroe. Before the lake was known as Monroe it was called Lake Valdez by Spaniards. It was eventually named "Monroe" in honor of U.S. President James Monroe, author of the now famous "Monroe Doctrine."

Quayle speaks to group set to 'Reclaim America for Christ'

By Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE — Former Vice President Dan Quayle spoke of family values to about 3,000 members of the religious right, whose goals include helping Christians win elections and stopping abortion.

About 1,000 protestors, calling for tolerance and an end to bigotry, protested outside the conference where Quayle spoke late Saturday.

Addressing delegates to a three-day "Reclaim America for Christ" meeting at Coral Ridge Presbyterian Church, Quayle told his enthusiastic listeners they must "start at the local level of the schools, zoning boards, town and county counels, local courtroom and state advisory committees."

"Most of the time, what goes on in those institutions matters more to the American family than what happens in Congress," Quayle said.

Quayle sharply criticized rap music "that degrades women or advocates killing cops" and repeated his highly publicized objection that the television show Murphy Brown glorified single mothers.

"I have the upmost respect for single mothers; my grandmother was a single mother. But when everything is said, it is in the best interest of the children to have both a mother and a father in the home."

Aggravated battery charged

Sanford resident Tony Ray Havilano, 26, 11822 Groveview Way was arrested on a charge of aggravated battery early Saturday morning after an argument with his live-in girlfriend. When Sanford police arrived at the couple's residence at 12:41 a.m., the woman told them she had been punched several times. Her face was bloody and swollen.

Havilano was taken to Central Florida Regional Hospital for treatment of a broken nose then booked into jail.

Alfray results in jail

Two women and a man were arrested on a charge of assault and battery on a law enforcement officer early Saturday morning after the deputy went to an Altamonte Springs nightclub to investigate a disturbance in the parking lot.

Nancy Corry, 40, 3711 Wimbledon Drive, Lake Mary, Stacy Michelle Rinard, 32, Willow Lane, Apopka and Timothy Presley, 26, 2715 Oak Tree Lane, Oakland Park were all charged with assault and battery on a LEO. Corry was also held on a charge of resisting arrest with violence. Rinard faces three counts of assault and battery on a LEO and resisting with violence. Presley was also held on charges of disorderly intoxication and possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana.

After Seminole County Sheriff's deputy David Hadley arrived the West State Road 436 club, he broke up a fight between Presley and another male. Club patrons took the second man away while Hadley controlled Presley. Rinard took the deputy's flashlight and held it like she was going to strike the officer, according to his report. He released his hold on Presley who made a threat. The deputy told Presley to leave but when the man used profanity the officer placed him under arrest, the report states.

When Presley jumped into the back seat of a car, the officer attempted to remove him to continue the arrest. Corry began hitting the deputy from the front seat.

Assistance was called and all three subjects were arrested.

DUI arrests

Timothy M. Huck, 33, 3663 Derbyshire Road, Casselberry was arrested at 1:30 a.m. Saturday by Lake Mary Police. A Lake Mary policeman saw Huck's car traveling west in the eastbound lane of Lake Mary Boulevard near Driftwood Village Plaza. Another eastbound car moved to avoid a collision.

After calling for assistance, the policeman stopped Huck's car at a store at Rhinehart and Lake Mary Boulevard. The arrest was video taped and Huck's vehicle towed. He refused a breath test and was taken to jail.

Teresa Prevatt, 39, 556 Remington Oak Drive, Lake Mary was arrested for DUI by a Florida Highway Patrol trooper at about 2 a.m. Saturday after seeing her vehicle drifting across the yellow line several times on State Road 434. She told the policeman she was trying to get away from a man who was following her. After Prevatt refused to let him drive her home, the man said he offered to follow her to make sure she arrived safely.

Loitering charged

Samuel Raines Sr., 33, 2316 Airport Blvd., Sanford was arrested on a charge of loitering and prowling shortly after midnight Saturday by police investigating a reported truck burglary. A man told police he found Raines hiding in the bushes in the 2000 block of Chase Avenue before trying the door handles to his truck. Raines was held by the truck owner until police arrived. Raines was arrested on a charge of loitering and prowling.

Absentee ballots

Election supervisors want greater control

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Lawmakers need to put restrictions on who can get absentee ballots to curb abuses, some election supervisors say.

"The reason for concern is pure and simple," said Dot Joyce, director of the state Division of Elections. "When there is fraud connected with voting, it occurs with absentee ballots."

In the last two years, prosecutors throughout the state have had to investigate increasing reports of fraud involving absentee ballots. Absentee voting reforms have been proposed for years but have died.

"The legislators consider themselves experts in elections because they've all been in one," Joyce said.

Like most states, Florida let voters use absentee ballots if they will be out of town on Election Day or are physically unable to make it to the polls. The ballots must be signed in the presence of a notary public or two witnesses and are sealed until election night.

Election supervisors in the state's 67 counties set guidelines on how absentee ballots are handed out and verified.

A proposed law written this month by the House Ethics and Elections Committee would restrict distribution of absentee ballots.

The legislation would let people pick up ballots for themselves and one member of their immediate families. Now, many counties allow people to pick up an unlimited number of ballots if they bring written requests from voters.

But the legislation would also let any voter cast an absentee ballot by removing conditions, such as problems caused by travel or work, that must now be met. Supervisors say there's no way now to verify what voters say.

The bill would also validate an absentee ballot by a signed oath from the voter rather than the signatures of a notary public or two witnesses. Again, supervisors say there's no way to properly check whether witnesses are real.

Orange County Elections Supervisor Betty Carter supports the measure, which she said "would make people more honest."

But some supervisors, like

Dade County Elections Supervisor David Leahy, say it doesn't go far enough. Leahy said problems he's experienced involved ballots requested over the phone.

Under state law, voters can request ballots by mail or phone. With a mail request, supervisors can double-check whether a voter's signature matches the ballot. That can't be done with phone requests.

Up to 70 percent of the absentee ballots requested in two Dade County elections under question were sent after phone requests, Leahy said.

Orlando wins bid for top convention in 2005

ORLANDO — Orlando beat out Las Vegas and Dallas to attract the biggest and most profitable convention ever to come to the Central Florida city: the trade show of the National Association of Home Builders.

The builders should generate $62 million of business annually when their giant convention moves to Orlando in 2005 for a three-year run, said Bill Peeper, executive director of the Orlando/Orange County Convention & Visitors Bureau Inc.

The home builders are an especially lucrative group to lure to town, according to Phil Wright, president of the Central Florida Hotel and Motel Association. "These people are big spenders who are oriented toward entertainment," he said. "They are gregarious and outgoing. That will benefit our dining establishments and attractions around town."

Andy Pughe, president of the Home Builders Association of Mid-Florida, launched an intense lobbying effort for the convention last year after national directors agreed to open the 2005-2007 convention slots. The announcement was made Saturday in Las Vegas.

Orlando's biggest convention to date was the American Dental Association annual meeting two years ago, which attracted 44,000. More than 60,000 people are expected to attend the builders' convention.

The home builders will use 1.1 million square feet of exhibit space at the Orange County Convention Center. That will rank among the biggest users of exhibit space.

This year's show in Las Vegas drew more than 1,000 exhibitors of home building related products ranging from refrigerators to roof truss systems. Many exhibitors spend thousands of dollars on their displays.

More than 20,000 hotel rooms will be needed to house the builders' convention participants.

The national builders' group meets in Houston next year through 1997. The convention shifts to Dallas from 1998 to 2000, then locates in Atlanta from 2001 to 2004 before heading to Orlando.

Take advantage of free help

Many spouse and child abuse situations occur because of problems suffered by an adult. Overuse of alcohol, stress at work, financial difficulties, a death in the family or divorce can often force a person to go over the edge.

Professional counseling may be the way to overcome these problems and save further grief or injury.

This presents several difficulties however. Obtaining professional counseling can be too costly for some people. Others may not realize they need help. And some apparently don't want to admit they need outside assistance to overcome these difficulties.

Yet help is being offered, and in most cases, it is free of charge.

In just the local area, we have a plethora of offerings: Alcoholics Anonymous meetings are designed to overcome alcohol abuse; the Association for Children for Enforcement of Support, ACES, meets monthly.

There is help for weight problems through Overeaters Anonymous, Weight Watchers, and Take Off Pounds Sensibly (TOPS). Each of these groups meets weekly.

West Lake Hospital in Longwood offers Nar-Anon, a program aimed at people with narcotics addiction problems.

Other programs include a Panic Attack Support Group, and Exercise for Seniors, sponsored by the Lake Mary Seniors.

Clubs, hospitals, special groups, are all offering help for persons with problems. They must be commended for undertaking such projects.

Unfortunately, there are some people who may be so proud they don't believe they need help. They claim they can resolve their own difficulties without sharing them with others.

If this is true, why do we have so many people who still suffer from serious problems?

Find out about these programs. Phone your hospital, senior organization, or read the calendar on the People page of the Sanford Herald each day.

Help is available. Most of it is free. Let's start taking advantage of it.

Helmet saved life

I would like to share the story of how my child was spared serious injury by wearing a bicycle helmet:

R.J. Meyers, the active eight-year-old son of Carol and Raymond Meyers of Lake Mary escaped coma and possible death by wearing his bike helmet prior to a terrible crash on his bike according to his family doctor. According to Dr. Scott VanLue, R.J. is alive today due entirely to the fact that the helmet absorbed most of the impact.

The challenge was always great for the parents not to allow R.J. to ride his bike without the helmet. Some children had taunted R.J. and the other kids who wear helmets as sissies and babies. R.J. did receive a head injury even though he was wearing the helmet. His face was scraped, bruised and teeth knocked out, but R.J. was alive.

A very kind family living near the accident scene reacted quickly to see that R.J. was attended to immediately. Ian, the neighbors fourteen-year-old son, found R.J.'s tooth on the street near the accident. The tooth was placed in milk. Then R.J. and the tooth were rushed to the hospital. This proved to be the best thing to do as R.J. has recovered to the point that he is now attending school as well as playing basketball.

R.J. and his parents support the use of all safety equipment while operating a bicycle and deeply appreciate the help of our good neighbors.

There's life outside categorization

Duke Ellington would say of certain musicians that they were "beyond category." Ellington disdained categories. For instance, he avoided using the term "jazz" to describe his music. His music, he felt, described itself.

Categories, however, are appealing because they make thinking easier. But people who do not stay in their categories can be troublesome. Ellington was harshly criticized early on for writing long compositions. Jazz musicians were not supposed to compose long, complex pieces, and he was a jazz musician, his critics said, whether he admitted it or not.

"Listen," Ellington once told me, "to individualists, not schools."

Trying to live outside categories creates some problems. People in the American Civil Liberties Union whom I've known for a long time cannot understand how a civil libertarian can believe, as I do, that a fetus should have some constitutional rights. A pro-choice litigator for the ACLU finally figured it out. She told her colleagues that I must have become a born-again Christian. That neatly put me into an understandable category, even though it wasn't true.

Law professor Catharine MacKinnon and I have totally opposite views on the importance and scope of the First Amendment. There should have been no confusion of categories there. Yet, when I was discussing my disagreement with her ideas during a call-in show on National Public Radio, I realized I had again stepped out of order.

I said I like MacKinnon personally, having been with her at some conferences. A very angry caller accused me of abandoning my principles. How is it possible, he said, to like someone who would destroy the First Amendment?

I told him that I often enjoyed the social company of certain people with ideas greatly different from mine.

Once more, it is because of Catharine

MacKinnon that I have been charged with forgetting my place. Recently, she asked me to respond to a review of her new book, "Only Words." The review, which greatly angered and hurt her, was written by Carlin Romano, literary critic of the Philadelphia Inquirer, and appeared in The Nation.

Romano was trying to demonstrate vividly the illogic, to say the least, of a central MacKinnon thesis. She had written: "Pornography is used as sex. It therefore is sex... to say it is to do it, and to do it is to say it."

Accordingly, Romano hypothesized raping MacKinnon to show her "the difference between being raped and being exposed to pornography." Romano described his own fantasy rape of MacKinnon, and then imagined that a composite of two First Amendment zealots - whom he calls Dworkin Hentoff - actually did rape her. (Law professor Ronald Dworkin opposes MacKinnon's views.)

The rest of Romano's article, as I wrote in the Village Voice, accurately criticized MacKinnon's theories. I also said, however, that Romano had set out to humiliate MacKinnon personally, as well as combat her ideas. Polemics, after all, need not dehumanize either antagonist.

But people who do not stay in their categories can be troublesome.

HODDING CARTER

Give us fundamentals, not spin

At the root of a growing sickness in public life, most notably in Washington, is the belief that reality is irrelevant and perception is everything. An army of media manipulators, public relations specialists and masters of "spin" march behind that banner, their activities mirrored and magnified by the media. Politicians from the president on down have embraced the doctrine and the practice. The result is corrosive cynicism throughout the body politic. Both the practice and the state of mind threaten the Clinton presidency.

On the basis of facts alone, it is an unfair threat. It is impossible at this point to know whether the allegations and innuendoes encapsulated by the word Whitewater add up to anything at all. Until they do, the presumption of innocence applies. There is no proof of criminal activity by Clinton while he was governor of Arkansas, and indeed no public charges. What we have are hints of undue influence on behalf of a business partner's failed savings and loan and suggestions of knowing complicity in various unethical or illegal activities surrounding a real estate venture.

But public attention, which is to say media attention, has managed once more to shift from facts to froth. What seems to be endlessly fascinating to virtually everyone in Washington's incestuous hothouse is the effort to shape and control the handling of the story. There are more headlines and evening news items about the White House damage control operation than about the allegations themselves.

The main reason for this is understandable if disheartening. The details of Clinton's long-ago business deals are hard to follow. Vital records of campaign contributions seem to have disappeared. Eyewitnesses and participants tell diametrically opposed versions of events. Failed savings and loans and governmental complicity (or stupidity) became a dime a dozen phenomenon of the 1980s, so it's hard to work up much enthusiasm for a relatively minor-league variant of a nationwide scandal.

Add to all this the central point that the Clintons decided to draw a line in the dust and offer none of their most important records without a fight and the media's obsession with the maneuvering becomes easier to understand. It was the path of least resistance through a complex maze.

But it was also a familiar, habitual path in this day and time. When the name of the game is spin rather than fact, the story line concerns the story-tellers and their machinations rather than what lies behind the curtain. Media scorekeeping consists of measuring the daily success of the contending parties in influencing the way the scorekeepers evaluate their efforts. Soon there are long feature stories on the White House war room rather than on the complicated details of distant events. Political junkies may love it, but the public's collective gaze rapidly glazes over.

If you were a suspicious type, you might conclude this is the point of the damage control exercise. Even if you are not, you are bound to realize that the Whitewater story is only the latest in a long line of Washington scandals du jour which were submerged in details about the insiders' strategy while starving for lack of substance.

But that leads to another point. The legions of image-makers who populate today's political world seem to have a vested interest in casting every story in terms of their work rather than in terms of reality. The first instinct for an innocent man or woman when hit by false charges is to overwhelm them with the truth. The first instinct of the manipulators is to try to outslit the opposition.

Here is what the president told a television network reporter last week: "The most important thing to me and the most important thing to the American people is I'm completely relaxed about this thing because I didn't do anything wrong."

But that is not the way he and his handlers have dealt with "this thing." Instead, there has been a slow, grudging retreat from a Nixonian stance of hanging tough and treating all information about "this thing" as private. There has been the creation of a high-profile operation in the White House whose objective is to gain control of the story without revealing anything. Rather than candor, there has been a disingenuous public relations campaign whose chief objective seems to have been to smother rather than reveal.

Not for the first time, the result has been a snowballing disaster. What was once no larger than a shadow the size of a hand is now a cloud that covers the presidency.

Unless you believe that behind the cover-up stands a corrupt president who broke the law while governor of Arkansas - and there is nothing on the record to support such a conclusion - you have to believe that a return to fundamentals could still retrieve the game for Bill Clinton.

The result is corrosive cynicism throughout the body politic.

Red tape foils World War II vets

WASHINGTON - This summer, the U.S. government will pull out all the stops to commemorate the soldiers who fought at the D-Day invasion in Normandy. No fewer than 34 official events are scheduled in the United States and Europe, and President Clinton is scheduled to attend ceremonies in France.

Meanwhile, the men of the 38th Combat Engineering Regiment are only asking for a plane ride, not a parade. So far, their request has met with stone walls and red tape.

More than half a century ago, the men of the 38th Regiment pulled off one of the most astounding engineering feats of World War II. In a span of three months in 1942, this group constructed an airstrip on Ascension Island, a barren piece of rock owned by Britain in the South Atlantic. These days it would probably take the Army three times that long just to publish a contractor bid.

The airstrip proved pivotal, as it was the only place for U.S. planes to refuel on their way to North Africa. By the end of the war, this airstrip had served more than 20,000 landings, and it is still in use today by the British and American military planes.

Most of the 1,200 men of the 38th stayed in the Army until the end of the war. Some of them even landed at Normandy two years later. Since the war ended, these soldiers have reunited each autumn. At every reunion they talk about the same thing: The airstrip they built together on Ascension Island.

As the 40th anniversary of their feat approached in 1982, the group sought and were granted permission to revisit the island to see their airstrip. But the Falklands Islands War erupted just before the scheduled trip, forcing the British to use the island for their planes, and the journey was shelved.

Eight years later the 50th anniversary approached, and the veterans decided to give another try at returning to Ascension. More than three years and miles of red tape later, they are still waiting.

All hope might be lost by now were it not for the persistence of Julie Cramer, a government employee from Chicago whose father served in the 38th. She first became interested in Ascension in 1989, when she drove her father to a reunion. Having some first-hand experience with government bureaucracy, she took over the task of securing military permission for the voyage.

The group was forced to rely on the military since no commercial or charter traffic will travel to this remote spot. The only way to go is to fide along on one of the twice-weekly flights that leave from Patrick Air Force Base in Florida with supplies for Ascension. Cramer never suspected her efforts would turn into nearly a full-time job, which would take her from Florida to Denver, and finally to the Pentagon.

"I guess what frustrated us is we tried to do it right," Cramer told our associate Jan Moller. "We'd go to the Air Force and say, 'what do we need to do? We'd do that, and then someone else would come along and say, 'That's not what you needed to do.'"

At one stop, Cramer was told that the Pentagon could not honor her request unless she had congressional support behind her. So she and her husband took a week vacation in the spring of 1992 to walk the halls of Congress drumming up help. Nearly every office she approached offered support, and many wrote letters on her behalf. Her own congressman, Rep. Harris Fawell, R-Ill., even went as far as calling then-Secretary of the Air Force Donald Rice. It was to no avail.

"All they're asking for is a chance to visit that island, where they lived for so long and did so much," Fawell says.

The men of the 38th Combat Engineering Regiment are only asking for a plane ride, not a parade.

Housing

The proposal, in a 15 page report came up for first consideration during the Jan. 10th work session.

City Director of Planning and Development Jay Marder told the commissioners the strategy draft was compiled from various sections of city codes and other requirements. "Basically," he said, "the overall need is to help provide households for those of lower income, people who can't afford to buy homes at today's prices."

"Right now, we are looking for direction on planning this strategy," said director of community development Charles Rowe. He recommended that a study be made of Sanford's median income level. "We are quite sure," he said, "that it is below that of Orlando or Seminole County."

Marder recommended the areas of initial concentration be the Goldsboro and Georgetown sections.

In the written presentation to the commission, Marder explains. "This report is intended to outline the City of Sanford's existing programs related to affordable housing as well as point out the need to further refine and augment such programs including several alternative and recommended strategies."

The matter is scheduled for discussion during the work session this afternoon beginning at 5 p.m., in the City Manager's conference room, second floor, of the Sanford City Hall.

The regular commission meeting will follow, beginning at 7 p.m., in the first floor commission chambers.

Although county officials convinced FPS officials the facility would be available to anyone on a first-come, first-serve basis, the NPS disagreed and ordered the state to see that the county replaced the land.

County Manager Ron Rabun said the county has proposed to replace the Sylvan Lake Park land with property in a Red Bug park expansion project begun four years ago. In 1990, commissioners approved spending $49,000 each year from the general fund to "buy" the land from the water and sewer fund and expand Red Bug park. The total cost of the transfer was $202,400.

The property, bought with utility customers' payments, was once intended for a water or sewer plant, but later declared surplus, said Rabun.

Once the land was transferred to the Parks and Recreation Division, another $405,000 will go to build a soccer field, two basketball courts, a parking lot and restrooms.

Gerteisen said the state wrote NPS officials last week seeking tentative approval of the plan. Gerteisen said it's not unusual for a county or city to ask for said. "As of December 31, 1993, 30 percent of the estimated water and 58 percent of sewer impact fees have been received."

Solid Waste money is the only problem Small foresees. "The Solid Waste Fund has operated on a very narrow margin for several years," she said, "with the General Fund occasionally providing cash flow."

She explained that the Solid Waste Fund had an operating loss of $33,627 in 1991, and $116,162 in 1992. She commented that this is not a new situation, and the trend previously does not appear to be improving.

Knight's lone problem was with Stormwater Utility Funds. "The revenue from the new fee is below projections," he said. "I am projecting that we will collect approximately $130,000 for the year instead of the $150,000 originally planned."

Knight said the capital projects budgeted will have to be modified accordingly in the near future.

The report from Knight was a monthly financial report given to the city commission.

Small's report was a first quarter analysis.

"I believe that this increased involvement of students in fun, as well as educational activities, will help students view the school as a good place to be, thereby generating more school pride," he wrote in his letter to Holt. "Research indicates that increased school pride will evolve into better behavior and improved academic performance."

Moore is concerned with the academic performance of the students, he said.

He noted that the CTBS scores increased significantly this year, with a 12 percent increase in reading comprehension and an 11 percent increase on the reading total score.

"While these scores are still below what we would like," he said, "this improvement is hopefully evidence that the corner has been turned away from the downward slide of past years."

He cited the fact that fewer students are making D's and F's on their report cards than ever before as evidence that academic performance is improving at Sanford Middle.

For example, 37 percent of the sixth graders in the first quarter of 1992-93 earned D's and F's, while only 30 percent did in 1993-94. In the first quarter of last year, 27 percent of the seventh graders got D's and F's while 20.5 percent of the seventh graders this year earned grades at the lower end of the scale. In the first quarter of last year 38 percent of the eighth graders got D's and F's while only 30 percent did.

"I believe teachers' willingness to actively participate in staff development activities, both at the school and at workshops and conferences, and their receptiveness to taking risks by trying new strategies and approaches are responsible for this improvement," Moore said.

He said the school's stated mission is to respect students and to meet each student's needs. He said teachers, faculty and staff work hard to uphold that mission.

"And we believe that every student can learn," he said.

Though the classes are grouped heterogeneously with students of varying skill levels learning together in the same environment, Moore said he encourages the teachers to design their lesson plans to meet the needs of each student.

"We see a real sense of teamwork with teachers working together for the benefit of the students," he said.

Despite the successes, Moore said the school needs to have a full-time social worker/counselor.

"I still strongly believe that the school must have a full-time social worker/counselor if we are going to approach the level of success that I know you want and I want and the Sanford community deserves," Moore wrote to Holt.

Overall, he said, he is pleased. "I feel like we are making some real progress," he said. "We just have to keep moving forward."

Hopkins began purchasing clothes at area thrift shops and consignment stores.

She brought them to the school and set up a quaint boutique in the parent resource room. Dresses, skirts and pants were hung carefully from hangers. Shoes, socks, undergarments and sweaters were folded carefully and displayed on the shelves.

Not only are the children invited to shop in the store where the currency is counted in denominations of love, but their families are also asked to join them.

Earlier this year, principal Barbara Nixon, nominated Hopkins for recognition by the Foundation for Seminole County Public Schools (formerly FACTS).

"She has developed a very special project," Nixon told the foundation. "With love and her own money she has operated this store that has helped so many."

The Foundation believes the work she does is very special as well.

"She gives something very special to these kids," Liaa Neway, a spokesman for the Foundation said. "She gives them a lot of love. She gives them clothing they need without making anyone feel needy. It's wonderful."

Neway said the Foundation tries, as often as possible to recognize support personnel who help with drop out prevention.

In her own way, Neway said,

Hopkins is making the children and their families see that school is not a place to dread, but a place where there is warmth and loving.

This week the Foundation presented Hopkins with a check for $50.

"We told her to spend it on something special for herself," Neway said, "but she there was a little boy who needed a new pair of shoes and off she went to get them for him."

Neway said Hopkins has never asked for donations for her store or for assistance with the shopping or operations of the facility.

"She does everything and never complains," Neway said. "She loves what she does."

Nixon told the Foundation that the program has been very successful and that there have been repeat customers when needed.

"There should be more people like this," Neway said.

Los Angeles quake aftermath

Businesses return to regular hours, even bigger commuter troubles from broken freeways

By ANN BUI
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Drivers used to back-to-work traffic jams braced today for a commuter nightmare that could drag on for months: four broken freeways in a city that has made them a way of life.

"I'm sure it is going to be hell," said Ed Russell, who has to maneuver around some of the worst earthquake damage to get to work. "I'm not looking forward to it."

The remaining roads into Los Angeles from the north and west have been clogged for a week. But with much of the city shut down, the worst is yet to come.

Many businesses were to return to regular hours and teachers were due back at most of the city's schools today, with all but about 9,000 of the 640,000 students expected in class Tuesday.

For others, commuting is the last thing on their minds.

Thousands of people still live in shelters or outdoors, where the temperature drops into the 40s overnight.

Nearly 11,000 houses and apartments have been declared unlivable so far — "the equivalent of a small town," said U.S. Housing Secretary

Henry Cisneros.

The death toll rose again, to 57, and aftershocks as strong as 4.5 on the Richter scale kept the city on edge.

Since the Jan. 17 quake splintered portions of the Santa Monica Freeway, Interstate 5 and Highway 14, stymied commuters have spread through a maze of side streets and boulevards, where one-hour trips now take up to four times that.

"I keep zigzagging around to find better routes," said Laura Friedmann of suburban Granada Hills, whose 20-minute commute is now a two-hour journey.

On highway repairs expected to take a year, workers Sunday dynamited an elevated section of Interstate 5 left standing alone when the shifting earth cracked it free from the roadway to the north and south.

To ease gridlock, authorities repeated advice that Angelenos have ignored for decades: carpool, take a bus, ride the commuter train.

"Driving alone in your car is going to result in major gridlock and probably a four- or five-hour drive to downtown," U.S. Transportation Secretary Federico Pena said, viewing the concrete spiderweb of roads from a helicopter Sunday.

The chopper hovered over a 2-mile backup on Highway 14.

Clinton prepares for State of Union

By RON FOURNIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — After a weekend respite of pinball and cross-country skiing, President Clinton gets back to business today, preparing for a State of the Union address and searching for a new defense secretary.

Aides kept Clinton's public schedule light so he could work on Tuesday night's speech to Congress. The president is expected to promote his anti-crime program with the address, embracing a plan to send three-time violent felons to jail for life.

Clinton also could complete his search to replace Bobby Inman as Defense secretary-designate.

The White House took the unusual step Sunday night of saying that William J. Perry was still in the running for the post after reports circulated that Perry, now No. 2 at the Pentagon, had expressed misgivings about the top job.

The New York Times cited Pentagon officials in today's editions as saying Perry told Clinton's chief of staff Saturday he did not want the Cabinet post.

An administration official, who asked not to be identified, said Perry had expressed some reservations but subsequently voiced "affirmative interest" in the high-profile post.

White House communications director Mark Gearan said Sunday night Perry "continues to be a candidate. The president has not made up his mind at this point."

Gearan also told the Times that Perry was "very much in the running."

In another personnel matter, the appointment of a civil rights chief at the Justice Department could come at any time. Boston attorney Deval Patrick is Clinton's choice to take the job he first offered to Lani Guinier, an administration official said Sunday, speaking on condition of anonymity. Clinton withdrew Guinier's name under pressure.

White House aides were busy Sunday putting the finishing touches on the State of the Union speech, which was expected to be short on specifics. Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said Clinton will review his first year in office, set goals for 1994 and reiterate his key messages on a number of issues: Health care, welfare, crime, economic reform, education and foreign policy.

"The president wants to talk to the American people about what he has accomplished, to tell them how he is doing the objectives he laid out — not only in the campaign but in the start of his presidency," Myers said.

With polls showing crime as voters' No. 1 concern, White House speech writers were making sure Clinton's tough-on-thugs plans don't get lost in the speech.

"Crime started out as a small component and got larger," said an aide who is helping draft the speech. "It's going to be a significant portion of the speech."

Clinton has supported a crime bill that includes 100,000 new police on city streets, boot camps for young, nonviolent offenders and a ban on some semiautomatic weapons. Expanding his gun control stance, the president recently asked the Justice Department to study whether gun owners should undergo the same type of licensing requirements as drivers.

Two administration officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Clinton is expected to endorse a proposal that would require lifetime jail sentences for people convicted of three violent felonies.

Heat finally end losing streak

MIAMI — Glen Rice scored 17 of his 21 points in the first quarter and Steve Smith had a career-high 15 assists Sunday as the Miami Heat ended a seven-game losing streak with a 113-80 victory over the Washington Bullets.

Heat coach Kevin Loughery won his 600th game, and it came against the team he played for and coached.

AROUND THE NATION

Bills going back to Super Bowl

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Sorry, America, the Bills are back and Joe's not.

The Buffalo Bills advanced to an unprecedented fourth straight Super Bowl on Sunday, beating Joe Montana and the Kansas City Chiefs 30-13.

What much of the nation outside of western New York feared — the only team to lose three consecutive Super Bowls, heading to Atlanta to try again — came true because Thurman Thomas was unstoppable.

The Bills knocked Montana from the game early in the third quarter, while Kansas City's defense kept groping at Thomas, who rushed for 186 yards — 131 by halftime — and three touchdowns.

Cowboys dispose of 49ers

IRVING, Texas — Jimmy Johnson is a prophet and a healer.

True to his word, the Dallas Cowboys beat San Francisco on Sunday and headed to their second straight Super Bowl against the Buffalo Bills.

And Emmitt Smith, whose separated shoulder was pronounced "healed" by Johnson last Tuesday, dominated the 38-21 victory with 144 net yards in the first half when the Cowboys took a 28-7 lead.

Raider women hold off first-year Timberwolves

SANFORD — That was too close. Looking at times like a swimmer desperately gasping for air in storm-tossed waters, the home-standing Seminole Community College Lady Raiders barely defeated overmatched Lake City Community College 74-70 Saturday night in a physical and sloppy Mid-Florida Athletic Conference contest.

"That was a rough game," said Seminole assistant coach Ken Patrick. "But, we're 2-1 in the conference, and that's what counts. We know Florida Community College (the top conference team) is the No. 1 team in the state, so our aim is to finish second."

SCC (14-10) could have been expected to dominate Lake City (6-13, 0-4), which is struggling through its first year of competition.

But the Timberwolves kept the game close with their scrappy play. They were led by their star Call Wiley (who Patrick called "one of the best in the state") with 30 points, six rebounds, and four assists. Becky Silva added 16 points.

Leading 57-44 midway through the second half, the Raiders saw Lake City come back and tie the

Locals fall victim to Barracuda attack

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — In an event that replaced the Seminole Athletic Conference wrestling tournament, Seminole County schools had to take a rear seat to the New Smyrna Beach Barracudas.

Placing seven wrestlers in Saturday night's championship round and coming away with three individual crowns, the Barracudas claimed the team title in the Tournament of Champions hosted this past weekend by Lake Mary High School.

New Smyrna Beach outscored the second-place Lake Mary Rams 197-141. Lyman (130½ points) finished third ahead of Lake Brantley (101). Oviedo (75) took sixth, Seminole (24) was 11th and Lake Howell (19½) came in 12th.

Individual champions Kevin Dunn (112 pounds) and Pat Paroline (160) led Lake Mary to its runner-up showing. Finishing second in their respective weight classes for the Rams were Nate Mitchell (125), Jamie Orras (135), and Ronel Jumpp (220).

Mike Laurent (130) and Brad Harris (140) each came in fourth for Lake Mary.

Lyman also came away with a pair of individual champions, Joey Flores copping the hardware at 103

Butler opts for N.C. State

Jeff Butler, who led Florida in rushing while helping Lake Brantley to a district title and a pair of playoff wins, announced last week that he has made an oral commitment to attend North Carolina State University. Butler, who plans to play baseball and football for the Wolfpack, also considered Florida, Auburn, and Tulane before making his decision.

Ideal of sportsmanship to be tested this week

Those of you who espouse the "win at all costs" philosophy and believe that there's no such thing as running up the score will have a chance to see, up close and personal, exactly how ugly that approach really is.

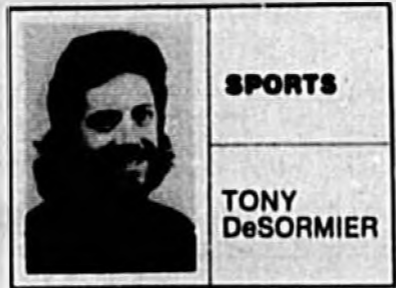

The St. Cloud High School girls' basketball team, ranked No. 1 in the Florida Sports Writers' Association's Class 4A state poll, is coming to town this week, not once, but twice.

On Tuesday, the Bulldogs play at Seminole. On Friday night, Lake Mary has the dubious honor of hosting St. Cloud.

Great. Just great. A team that has mastered the art of embarrassing opponents is bringing its "shoot first and forget 'em" show to Seminole County.

Victories by margins of 50 or more points are common for the Bulldogs. On Dec. 11, St. Cloud defeated Seminole 114-21, praising the Tribe almost every second from the opening tip to the final buzzer. On Dec. 13, the Bulldogs thrashed Lake Mary 80-32.

According to a story in Sunday's edition of the other local newspaper,

SPORTS

TONY DeSORMIER

St. Cloud averages over 84 points a game and is winning games by an average of 45.6 points a game.

Rationalize those numbers if you can, but I'm not buying it. There's no legitimate reason for it, none whatsoever, not in a sport where there's no shot clock, not at the high school level.

It doesn't matter that running up the score — and I defy you to describe pressing for 32 minutes on the way to a 90-point win as anything but running up the score — isn't against the rules, it violates the spirit of sportsmanship that is supposed to guide the efforts of high school athletics.

Once again, it's an adult that's behind the perversion of a fine basketball team — and there's no denying that the St. Cloud Bulldogs are an outstanding team and well-deserving of state recognition.

That a team is able to execute to the high level that the Bulldogs do speaks well of the coach. That the team executes opponents mercilessly and repeatedly says something else about that coach.

There's a saying that a coach gets more credit than he or she deserves when a team wins and invariably gets more blame than he or she deserves when a team loses. But when a group of high school athletes stampedes over other teams, you have to wonder about the person holding the reins.

We shake our heads and wonder about what would motivate whoever was responsible for the attack on skater Nancy Kerrigan. I say that we have to look no further than this type of "win at all costs" attitude that has trickled down to and is infecting high school athletics.

It doesn't matter how much better you may be than your opponent. And you can save the "tomorrow's another day" and "on any given day, etc." tripe for motivational seminars. Competition may be the ultimate name of the game, but in high school sports, winning isn't (or shouldn't be) the ultimate bottom line.

Like any other high school teacher, a high school coach has the same responsibility to strive to protect the welfare and further the educational experience of all the students with whom he/she comes in contact. That means your kids and their kids.

So what do we do this week? At the risk of sounding meek or naive, I strongly suggest the athletic equivalent of turning the other cheek. In the face of potentially blatant unsportsmanlike behavior, it falls to us to be the personification of sportsmanship.

Don't jeer. Don't boo. Don't insult or threaten. It's going to be a real challenge, but don't do it. Don't let yourself be dragged down to that level. Barring an upset, it's going to be tough for the players. Venting your spleen will do nothing to take the sting out of the defeat.

There's a real chance that it could get ugly on the court this week. Don't add to it.

Excess calcium leads to numerous disorders

DEAR DR. GOTT: Last fall my doctor discovered by a blood test that I have a high calcium level. A surgeon says it's time for surgery. I know the problem is caused by a tumor on my parathyroid gland, and I understand that calcium is being leached out of my bones which can cause kidney stones and weak bones. Is there any research on the cause of these tumors and do I have an alternative treatment other than surgery?

Tapazole. Consequently, your family doctor may wish to enlist the aid of an endocrinologist to sort out what's going on. If, in the view of the specialist, a parathyroid tumor is at the root of your problem, you should have surgery. No one knows the cause of these hyperactive areas and there is no satisfactory non-surgical treatment for them.

MEDICINE

DEAR READER: Excess calcium in the blood can lead to kidney stones, constipation, nausea, vomiting, abdominal pain, weakness, confusion, stupor, and coma. The condition has many causes, including excess vitamin D, malignancies, vitamin A intoxication, chronic infection, hypothyroidism, Addison's disease (underactive adrenal glands), excess calcium in the diet (milk-alkali syndrome), hyperthyroidism, treatment with diuretic drugs, kidney failure, and overproduction of parathyroid hormone. It's this latter cause that your surgeon is counting on because it is the most common in adult Americans.

The parathyroid glands in the neck control calcium metabolism. When the glands produce too much hormone, calcium in the bloodstream rises. This is often associated with overactive areas (benign tumors) in the parathyroid glands. Most experts recommend that these overactive areas be surgically removed.

Before consenting to an operation, however, you must be certain that the parathyroid glands are to blame. This can be diagnosed by a special blood test. I think it would be a shame to undergo unnecessary surgery if, for example, your elevated calcium were due to a thyroid disorder that could be corrected with medication, such as

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

In olden times, kings would fight on the battlefield. Nowadays, leaders sit in safety, sending their subjects to the slaughter. In bridge, though, this modernist policy can be suicidal.

South's sequence, a strong and artificial two clubs followed by two no-trump, showed a balanced 23 or 24 points. South correctly upgraded his hand to 23 points because of his good intermediates (the 10s) and controls (the aces and kings).

Against three no-trump, West led the club five: four, ace, nine. Back came the club six. How should South continue from there?

The answer is through the trapdoor and along the secret tunnel to safety and seclusion! South has six top tricks: one spade, one heart, three diamonds and one club. A successful spade finesse can, therefore, bring the trick total to nine. However, being stuck in his hand, South has little chance to make the contract. He can try to get into the dummy by leading a heart toward the queen, but here West will win with the king and cash three club tricks for one down.

Let's go back to the opening salvo — trick one — and unblock the club king under the ace. South is never getting more than one club trick, and he badly needs that dummy entry in order to take the spade finesse. If the defenders clear the clubs (or duck the second round to dummy's 10), South can take the spade finesse, being careful to lead dummy's nine first.

If the defenders switch from clubs, South has time to lead a heart toward the queen. Either way, eventually he wins nine tricks.

(C)1994. NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
 Jan. 25, 1994

An exciting year ahead could be in the offing for you. The primary indicators in your chart point towards travel, adventure and romance. Two new friends may also play important roles.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In order to succeed today you must have a good game plan and clearly defined objectives. If these elements are present in your efforts, I'm betting on you. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A gesture of good will from a friend could turn out to be of enormous importance to you today. It will deal with something intangible rather than tangible.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A display of generosity today from one with whom you share strong emotional ties could make your day. However, what transpires might be visible only to you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Lady Luck might be waiting for an opening today if you're prepared to share your present ideas with others. Something you'll say and do will set the circumstances in motion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This could be one of those very unique days where opportunity tends to seek you out instead of you looking for it. Make the most of everything, large or small, that comes your way.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't do anything foolish today, but, by the same token, don't be overly fainthearted about taking a chance to improve your lot in life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Intuitive perceptions you get today could be more accurate than usual and help guide you towards fortuitous developments. Give them credence instead of indifference.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You might have an opportunity through friends today to gratify an aspiration for which you've been hoping. It's something that's been a long time coming.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Conditions in general look rather promising for you today, especially situations that pertain to commerce or finance. Put your greatest emphasis in these areas.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Being able to look at things on a grand scale and than focusing in on the whole picture gives you an asset today that puts you a step ahead of others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You could do quite well on your own today, but it's not likely to measure up to your effectiveness in joint endeavors. Be a team player, instead of an independent operator.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your relationships with others could be especially beneficial today, particularly in areas that demand fairness and complete cooperation. Copyright 1994 NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.
