First Office May Move June 1

County Sets Dates To Move To Old Hospital

By MICHAEL BEHA
Herald Staff Writer

A tentative timetable for design and renovation of the Seminole County Courthouse and the old Seminole Memorial Hospital has been established by county officials.

In a meeting with consultant Walter H. Sobel of Chicago, representatives of Helman Hurley Charvat Peacock Architects, County Commission Chairman Sandra Glenn, the county's constitutional officers and the attorney representing circuit and county judges the timetables for moving each office was established.

Design work will begin immediately on the hospital with a June 1 completion date for renovations necessary for occupancy by county commissioners and their staff.

Work on the old hospital will continue after that move to ready the first floor of the hospital for use by the tax collector and property appraiser. Those offices are supposed to move into the former hospital building between Jan. 1 and March 1, 1984.

In the meantime, work also will begin on renovations in the courthouse. The architect has been authorized to begin design work immediately on renovations to office space currently occupied by commissioners and staff agencies. When those offices are vacated, work will begin to renovate them for court use.

But a potential stumbling block to the renovation plans could be funding. The county commission has about $1.5 million designated for the renovations this year.

Charles Braun, vice president of Helman Hurley Charvat Peacock, said the renovations to the hospital will cost between $500,000 and $1 million. A sprinkler system alone could cost $200,000 to $300,000.

He estimated the renovations will cost between $10 and $25 per square foot, depending upon how extensive the changes are. The county plans to use two floors of the three-story, 117,000-square-foot former hospital.

But Sobel said there is no doubt the drawings of the old hospital are inaccurate. The costs could vary depending upon what the Winter Park architects learn in an engineering study of the building. He said there are no drawings that show the building as it was built originally, plus all the alterations subsequently made.

Cost estimates on the courthouse renovations will be available when the schematic drawings are submitted to the county at the end of February, Braun said.

Attorney Emory H. Rosenbluth, representing the judges, tried to pin down Braun and Sobel on the earliest date possible for courthouse renovation.

Braun gave a four-month timetable for design work and preparation of bid documents. Construction in the courthouse could begin as early as June 1, he told Rosenbluth, after pointed questioning.

But Mrs. Glenn said extensive renovations at the hospital may not be necessary. Some area of the second floor, which is where the commission offices will be, could be prepared with minimal renovation.

"I'm certainly not an engineer but the big problems for the BCC are the phone system and the electrical system for the word processors," she said.

However, Tax Collector G. Troy Ray urged a slower, more cautious approach.

"I'm all in favor of moving as fast as we can but I want to solve problems, not create them," Ray said.

He said by making a hasty move, county officials could inhibit the services their offices are supposed to provide.

Chief Circuit Judge S. Joseph Davis also supported a cautious approach. He said the courts should not move into the vacated offices until renovations are completed. There will be a temptation for judges who haven't had chambers to take over an office as soon as possible, said Davis, who has used the grand jury meeting room as chambers for three years.

"When the county commission moves out they forget you," he said. "There's a danger in making a move before you know whether it's interim or permanent."

In the county's space scheme, the courts would occupy the entire south wing of the courthouse. After renovations, the clerk of courts will occupy two floors of the four-story north wing, one floor will be occupied by the property appraiser and tax collector's offices and the remaining floor will be used by the courts.

Other moves also will take place. When the public services and development, purchasing and central services departments move into the hospital from the Roumillat Building, the state attorney's office will take over that building.

The public defender will ultimately fill space in the courthouse annex now occupied by the state attorney's office. The public defender is now located in Sanford City Hall along with the county's Manpower office.

Commissioners also plan to build an office tower south of the courthouse. That building will be used for court-related offices but no timetable has been set for construction of that project. Ultimately, an administrative center is planned for the county's Five Points complex. That center would house the commission and staff offices.

Tax Shift

Suber Details Homestead Ruling Impact

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

A recent Florida Supreme Court decision could wind up causing Seminole County and the seven cities in Seminole County to increase tax rates. Property Appraiser Bill Suber has told the Council of Local Governments in Seminole County.

At a meeting Wednesday night in Lake Mary of the representatives of the cities and the county, Suber displayed a chart showing the decline in the taxable property value in each of the jurisdictions which will be seen this year as a result of the high court decision. The state justices declared unconstitutional the five-year residency requirement for $25,000 homestead exemption.

Suber said that countywide the decision means that the cities and the county will lose a taxable value of $16 million and will either have to raise property tax rates or find some other form of gathering additional revenues.

"In most cases new construction will make up the lost revenues," Suber predicted, adding he does not have a handle on those figures as yet.

The Supreme Court decision has been interpreted to mean that those homeowners who previously were eligible for only a $5,000 homestead exemption will pay less in property taxes this year because the taxable value of their property will be reduced.

Those who were able to claim the full $25,000 exemption before the court decision will likely be paying a higher tax rate to make up the difference in revenues to the governmental units. Thus the tax burden will be shifted.

Calling the picture he was presenting "bleak," Suber pointed to a detailed chart he had prepared, illustrating the loss in property value from the tax rolls in each of the cities and the loss in revenue if the cities were to levy the same property tax rate in 1983 as in 1982.

The property appraiser said Attorney General Jim Smith is appealing the decision by asking the Supreme Court to reconsider its action. "The Supreme Court could reverse itself, but that seems unlikely," Suber said. "Unless the Supreme Court agrees to rule in a different way, reversing its decision, these are realistic figures."

Seminole County Property Appraiser Bill Suber explains from a prepared chart the tax impact from a recent Florida Supreme Court decision.

Suber also said he hopes the high court recognizes the fiscal impact of its decision and handles the state appeal in a speedy fashion. The property appraiser said his employees are currently working to program the full $25,000 exemptions for all homeowners who file for the exemption for the 1983 tax roll.

He added that if the Supreme Court doesn't act in a speedy fashion, the work in his office could reach an impossible level.

Suber's chart showed the following number of new properties where exemptions would be increased and tax money lost if the same rate of property taxes were levied in 1983 in each instance:

— Altamonte Springs, 1,143 properties with an additional $20,000 homestead exemption (where $5,000 is already being claimed) and with a tax rate of $2.85 per $1,000 assessed property value. Loss $65,196.72.

— Longwood — 546 properties at a tax rate of $2.21 for a loss of $24,092.82.

— Lake Mary — 128 properties at a tax rate of $4.15 for a loss of $10,624.

— Sanford — 466 properties at a tax rate of $4.37 for loss of $40,719.

— Oviedo — 71 properties at a tax rate of $2.24 for a loss of $3,180.80.

— Winter Springs — 1,446 at a tax rate of $1.20 for a loss of $34,559.40.

— Casselberry — 827 at a tax rate of $1.08 for a loss of $17,863.20.

In addition, Suber said the county commission and the School Board will see an increase in the homestead exemption for 4,444 homes with a combined tax rate of $13.94 per $1,000 for a loss of $1.4 million.

County Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff, the county's representative to the council, said the Supreme Court in essence has said that it's unconstitutional to require newcomers to the state to pay more taxes than residents who have been in Florida for years.

He noted that some states grant industries tax relief for a period of time to entice them to the state. If the Supreme Court decision stands, he noted that this type law would also appear to be unconstitutional.

Suber noted that Florida does have a law providing this type relief. He said the law permits a county to place the issue of tax relief to an industry on the ballot if

Sentenced To Life In Prison

Davis Found Guilty Of Killing Lover

By VICTOR ANSERSOHN
Herald Staff Writer

A 23-year-old mother of three, Susie Mae Davis, was sentenced to life imprisonment Wednesday for the first degree murder of her boyfriend at a Sanford building site in August 1982.

Davis, of 1410 William Street in Sanford, was found guilty after the 12-member jury had been out just over an hour. She will serve a minimum of 25 years.

The death penalty for the first degree murder of Byron L. Brooks, of 850 W. First St., in Sanford, was not asked for by the state because the "aggravated circumstances" required to be present under Florida law did not apply in this case, Assistant State Attorney Don Marblestone explained.

During the three-day trial before Circuit Judge Kenneth M. Leffler, the jury heard how Davis had gone to the Sanford Landings apartment construction site on Aug. 24, 1982, and shot Brooks at least four times using a .22-caliber Saturday night special pistol which Brooks had given her.

She had started going out with Brooks in July 1982 and had become lovers, but Brooks had beaten her on two or three occasions and had raped her, she testified on Wednesday.

She had driven to the building site to talk with Brooks and to "straighten things out in an adult way," she told the jury.

She and Brooks had stood by her car and, she told the jury in a slow deliberate voice, "I saw him reach for the gun. I took out mine and shot him."

She became upset when, under cross examination, Assistant State Attorney Don Marblestone asked if she remembered saying that she was glad that she had shot Brooks.

"Do you remember saying 'I'm glad I killed him. He lied?'" asked Marblestone.

Fighting back tears, she angrily replied: "No, I don't. No, I don't."

"I don't remember him being at my feet saying 'Don't shoot. Don't shoot.'"

She told the jury that after the first shot, she could not remember chasing Brooks and told Marblestone that she had not reported the rape to the police or other authorities.

But witnesses at the site who were among the 10 witnesses who testified told the jury that Brooks had been shot at three or four times. One of the bullets pierced Brooks' heart and he would have fainted with "massive bleeding," Seminole County Medical Examiner Dr. G.V. Garay testified.

Davis told the jury that she believed Brooks was reaching into her car for a loaded gun kept under the seat and she had shot him.

The last witness to be called by the state, Floyd B. Waters, a construction worker, testified he was standing next to Davis on the day of the shooting. When Brooks drove up in her car to the construction site, she seemed calm, Waters testified.

Brooks had gone to talk with Davis and about five or ten minutes later he heard gunshots, Waters told the jury.

Davis had shouted that she was glad she had shot Brooks and hoped she had killed him, Waters testified.

Another construction worker, John P. McCulough, testified Tuesday that Brooks had leaned into Davis' car and it was then she had shot him.

County Had Busy Year

Seminole County commissioners elected their first woman chairman, made plans for future expansion and bade farewell to the county's first administrator in 1982.

Sandra Glenn was elected chairman following her unopposed re-election in the November election. She was the first woman elected to the board in 1978 and succeeded Robert Sturm, who served two years, as chairman.

Sturm received some good political news himself in November, receiving more than 60 percent of the vote in the Nov. 2 election.

Sturm defeated former commissioner Robert French, who also lost in 1980, by almost 9,000 votes in the election which had grown as a central issue.

French claimed Sturm was allowing undisciplined growth in the county and pointed to the $10,000 in campaign contributions received from developers for Sturm's campaign.

But Sturm countered that he helped institute controls on development during his first four years on the board. Commissioners said goodbye in November to Roger Neiswender, the county's first administrator and the man given credit for a reorganization of county government.

Neiswender was chosen to the post in 1975 and left the $32,000-a-year job after seven years to take over the Orlando office of the consulting firm Post, Buckley, Schuh and Jernigan.

He will be succeeded by T. Duncan Rose, 38, a former assistant Alachua County administrator. Rose will take over the Seminole County position on Jan. 17.

County commissioners took steps toward solving the growing office space problem in the county courthouse. They approved a plan to renovate the old Seminole Memorial Hospital for short-term use by commissioners, staff agencies and constitutional officers.

Cyanide Death Traced To Anacin-3 Capsules

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)—Tests show the "probable presence" of cyanide in a bottle of Anacin-3 capsules found in the home of a woman who died after taking two poisoned capsules. Officials warned consumers to examine closely all over-the-counter capsules.

Medical Examiner William Brady said several pain relievers were found in the home of Patricia F. Bennett, 31, who died Tuesday at a hospital after taking a poisoned pain reliever, and "in the airspace of one of those bottles we found cyanide."

Scott Upham, a Washington County deputy district attorney, said Wednesday none of the capsules in the Anacin-3 bottle had been tested to determine whether there was cyanide in them.

But he said, Dr. Brady told him tests "indicated the probable presence of cyanide in an Anacin-3 bottle" found in her Hillsboro, Ore., home.

The deputy district attorney urged anyone considering use of over-the-counter medication in capsule form to examine it closely.

Sheriff's Capt. Harold Kleve said the death was being treated as a homicide.

Judge Blocks Foreclosures

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—A judge says his order halting owner-occupied home foreclosures will protect jobless homeowners for several months against their "excruciatingly painful" plight during a time of unemployment unmatched since the Depression.

The order followed a move Monday by sympathetic county Sheriff Eugene Coon to remove 42 foreclosed properties from the January sheriff's sale list.

Allegheny County Common Pleas Judge Nicholas Papadakos, who expects the moratorium to last "at least several months," said he took the action because of the "excruciatingly painful" plight of the recession-plagued area's jobless homeowners.

New Gas Tax April 1

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Reagan, who joked in September it would take "a palace coup" for him to raise taxes, today signed a gasoline tax increase that would generate $5.5 billion a year for bridge and road repairs.

The White House staged the ceremony in the State Dining Room for Reagan to sign the bill which will boost the fuel tax by a nickel a gallon April 1.

The administration estimates the highway program financed by the tax increase, which Reagan said would cost the average motorist $30 a year, will create upward of 320,000 jobs.

WEATHER

NATIONAL REPORT: Winds of 88 mph whistled across the Northern Rockies. Ice and snow glazed Northwestern roads but the Midwest and Northeast held onto their mildest winter in years. Northern Idaho turned into a sea of slush Wednesday before a storm that made roads dangerous across Washington and Oregon blew east and into Canada. However, the National Weather Service said the cold, stormy weather could swing back to the northern states today. At least 11 deaths since Sunday have been blamed on the weather. Texas, New Mexico and Idaho each reported three deaths and Washington and Mississippi had one. Heavy rains doused both coasts. More than 2 inches of rain fell along the northern Pacific Coast in the last 24 hours. Over 2 1/2 inches. Cape Hatteras, N.C. and Greenville, S.C. each reported a half-inch. In the Midwest, residents of northern Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa and Michigan were holding out surprisingly mild temperatures. Chicago highs hovered near 40 and the Milwaukee and Detroit areas reported highs in the mid-30s. Little to no snow was on the ground. The same was true for the Northeast, where temperatures were in the high 30s and 40s. In Idaho, freezing rain combined with a weeklong build-up of 2 feet of snow to knock out power to 1,200 people around Sandpoint, and close county roads and schools. Utility spokesmen said power was restored by mid-afternoon. The brunt of the storm, which hit Tuesday night, turned the blanket of snow into slush in Bonner County, where some spots had 21 inches. Sandpoint had 18 inches of snow on the ground. In food-damaged northern Louisiana, authorities said up to a third of the state's winter wheat crop—170,000 acres—was destroyed by high water. But farmers said they were encouraged because the water spelled an end to a drought that has plagued the area for the last two years and could mean a bountiful soybean crop in the fall.

Reagan Hints At Possible Defense Cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Reagan, displaying a new bit of flexibility on the budget, indicates he is willing to cut military spending to force down what he acknowledged to be "unacceptably large deficits."

Holding his first nationally broadcast news conference of 1983 Wednesday night, Reagan restated his belief tax increases will inhibit economic recovery, but he did not rule them out.

Appearing with Reagan was Elizabeth Dole, White House assistant for public liaison, the president said he had chosen to replace Drew Lewis as secretary of transportation. If confirmed by the Senate, as is likely, she will be the first woman to serve in the Reagan Cabinet.

In an opening statement, Reagan tried to shut off questions on the 1984 budget, saying he is "in the midst of making final decisions." But reporters persisted and asked about the looming $200 billion deficit.

"Clearly we're facing very big deficits unless we take action — and we will take action because the deficits" will become "unacceptably large" in the future, Reagan said. "The federal budget must not become a road block on the path to long-term economic recovery."

Reagan said he was aware there is a "constant drumbeat ... that we're overboard on this particular subject" of increasing the defense budget. He said he expects to receive a Defense Department task force report shortly and "if it can be cut it will be cut."

"But the priority must be not if it means reducing our ability below the level at which we can declare ourselves safe," he said.

As for proposals to boost taxes to offset the exploding deficits, Reagan said: "I think it is an accepted fact and a common rule that to boost taxes are not the way out of a recession."

The president took a firm stand against giving any guidance to his commission studying ways to make the Social Security system solvent, saying he would "not impose myself on the commission" no matter "how much they ask for it."

Commission Chairman Alan Greenspan has been seeking intervention by both Reagan and House Speaker Thomas O'Neill to break the deadlock between Republican and Democrats on the panel.

Reagan said if the commission cannot reach a consensus, members should submit their proposals for reform and indicate where they differ. "Then it will be up to us," he said. The panel is due to report to him by Jan. 15, two weeks later than the original deadline.

Reagan refused to be drawn into specifics on his 1984 budget, due to be sent to Congress Jan. 31, insisting the whole panoply of government spending is still under review.

On other subjects, the president: — Said he would consider a summit meeting with Yuri Andropov, the new Soviet leader, if it is adequately prepared. For such a session to take place, he said, "You have to believe you can accomplish something."

He also indicated he would discuss with NATO allies the Warsaw Pact call for an East-West non-aggression pact.

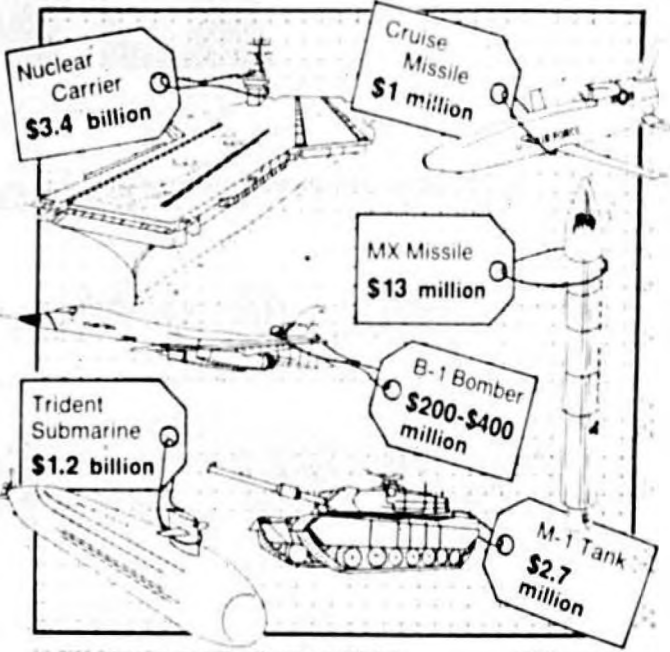

— Refused to comment on allegations Bulgarian secret police, directed by the Soviet KGB, plotted to kill Pope John Paul II, but said evidence of such a plot "certainly would have an effect ... a worldwide effect" on relations with Moscow.

— Said he does not believe the recent riots in Miami were a byproduct of high unemployment and the continuing recession.

— Declined to reveal whether he will seek a second term, saying only, he will make a decision about 1984 "sometime this year."

— Described Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas, a "Boll Weevil" Democrat who resigned his seat Wednesday to seek election as a Republican, as a "man who put country before party."

— Denied the Strategic Arms Reductions Talks in Geneva

One reason defense budgets are climbing steeply is the steep climb in the costs of the newest weapons. Illustrated are some of the additions to the U.S. arsenal already in production — such as the M-1 tank — or requested in the administration's budget proposal — such as two new nuclear carriers and the B-1 bomber.

with the Soviets are stalemated, and repeated the view of START negotiator Edward Rowny, agreement is possible this year.

Drainage Problem Sparks Zoning Debate

Seminole County commissioners were to approve a zoning change on a 2.6-acre tract near Longwood but still didn't give the owners everything they wanted.

Commissioners voted 4-1 Tuesday to grant a zoning change from agricultural to commercial use for the portion of the property above the flood plain.

But Harry Reed, an attorney representing the owners, George and Rosalyn Warren, told commissioners the action would severely limit development of the land. Reed explained that 70 percent of the property is flood prone and if only the 30 percent is zoned commercial, selling the remaining property would be difficult for the owners.

Commissioner Robert Sturm, the only commissioner to vote against the rezoning, agreed, saying the partial rezoning is unfair to the landowners and forces them to come up with their own solution to area drainage problems rather than work with a neighboring owner to create a neighborhood solution.

Commissioners recently rezoned, with the same stipulations, an adjacent parcel for use by a convenience store. The two properties could have each provided some land for a retention pond for the area. Now, they must each solve their own problems, Reed said.

But Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff said the zoning stipulations should provide an incentive for the owners to correct the drainage problems. If they engineer the drainage correctly, more of the land may become usable.

Kirchhoff stood by the decision to rezone only a portion of the property, pointing out that if you lose control (of drainage) you're going to have problems all over.

In other action, commissioners approved the abandonment of a right-of-way in the Goldenrod area along the Seminole-Orange county line.

The abandonment was approved after the sheriff's department, which earlier had opposed the move because it would limit access to adjacent property, dropped its opposition.

The right-of-way, a portion of Seminole Avenue south of Jessup Street, is scheduled to be incorporated into a mobile home park by Palm Ventures Inc.

Games May Seek National Sanction

Should Sanford's Golden Age Games strive to have some events sanctioned by the National Organization of Masters, part of the American Athletic Union, in order to attract more top senior athletes at the cost of surrendering some local control?

This question will be voted on at the next meeting of the Golden Age Games Executive Committee to be held at 8 a.m. Feb. 2 at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce.

The question of obtaining the blessing of a national organization came up at a meeting of the committee Wednesday when Dan Dittmer, owner of the Sharidan Aquatic Club in Longwood, which hosts the Golden Age Games swimming and diving events, recommended holding sanctioned events to get more and better competitors. To do so would mean meeting criteria such as abiding by their rules and regulations and probably some sort of fee.

Games Chairman Jim Jernigan said to become sanctioned would mean the national organization would be exercising a certain amount of control at the expense of local officials.

"I don't think we should do this," Jernigan said. "I'm not quite sure we ought to cater to those who stay on the circuit competing in various sanctioned events all year round. It is a natural evolution after eight years for some people to want to make it a 'pure' event, but we want something unique where senior citizens are encouraged to stay active and compete, but also to have fun."

"We don't want to shut out the average person because he or she thinks the event is only for master athletes," Jernigan said.

Also at Wednesday's meeting, committee members were shown a video tape made by Orange-Seminole Cablevision of the 1982 Golden Age Games held Nov. 8-13. The tape will be available to help promote the 1983 Games.

The committee went over the schedule for the various events, making a few changes in times and days. None of last year's events will be dropped and discussions are still being held with Cypress Gardens officials on whether or not they will sponsor a water skiing competition in this year's Games. An appropriate location is one of the considerations, Jernigan said.

Proof of purchase seals from Post Cereals and Sanka Coffee may be dropped off at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce office, Sanford Avenue and First Street, and they will be used to obtain free sports equipment for the Golden Age Games. — JANE CASSELBERRY

... County Commissioners Took Steps To Solve Many 1982 Problems

The Orlando architectural firm Helman, Hurley, Charvat, Peacock-Architects was hired to design the necessary space in the hospital building and the ensuing renovation of the courthouse to serve as courtrooms and offices for the circuit and county courts.

A plan to build an additional office building adjacent to the courthouse, an administrative center at the county's Five Points complex and a new health center in Sanford also was approved.

The plan is designed to meet the county's space needs through the year 2000.

County voters in October approved a $7 million bond issue to construct four new branch libraries and improve existing libraries.

The $7 million bond issue will be spent on building new libraries in Lake Mary, Oviedo, the Wekiva-Forest City area and the Lake Howell-Tuskawilla area plus doubling the size of the Sanford branch and refurbishing the Casselberry branch. The county also weathered a scandal in its parks and recreation division.

Butch Alexander, the county's manager of facilities, parks and recreation, resigned. Facility and Parks Coordinator John Varney was fired and several other division employees resigned in the wake of a probe into the division's activities.

Varney was arrested on July 19 on charges that he illegally used county manpower and equipment. He was subsequently fired from his county post and later was placed on probation after pleading guilty in Seminole Circuit Court.

Varney's secretary, Johnnie Butler of Geneva, resigned on Sept. 8 and later was placed on six months probation and ordered to pay $350 in restitution for services she illegally received from county workers.

Bill Solitro, an air conditioning technician who was involved in the initial complaint which led to the criminal investigation of the parks division, was fired on Sept. 7 after he failed to appear at a personnel hearing.

Solitro allegedly falsified a job application, prompting the personnel hearing.

Alexander and Henderson Ferguson, a supervisor in the division, resigned Nov. 12.

A reorganization of the division is underway now and eight new workers were approved for the division by county commissioners.

Commissioners also got involved in a dispute between Florida Power & Light Co. and Geneva homeowners over placement of two 500,000-volt power lines in their community.

The homeowners, People Against Power Intrusion, won a delay in construction of the line when they appeared before a Cabinet meeting in October.

The Cabinet ordered the group to look for a route west of Geneva but that plan drew opposition from a group of residents in that area.

The subsequent debate over the location of the line drew commissioners into the fray as referees.

Eventually, the Cabinet gave FP&L approval to place the line through Geneva as originally proposed.

The county reached a tentative agreement with seven municipalities on double taxation.

After months of negotiations between county officials and representatives from Sanford, Lake Mary, Allamonte Springs, Casselberry, Longwood, Winter Springs and Oviedo, it was determined that city taxpayers are paying for about $2 million in services for unincorporated areas through the sheriff's road patrols.

County commissioners have agreed to develop a solution to the double taxation and have until Jan. 15 to respond to the cities.

Something Nice

For His Mother

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (UPI) — A 12-year-old boy who wanted to buy "something nice" for his mother telephoned a bomb threat to a hospital and threatened to detonate the device unless his demand for $5,000 was met, police say.

Police Detective Kay Lewis said Monday the boy was arrested at a pay telephone outside a convenience store in the midst of negotiations with a nurse at Chesapeake General Hospital.

The child, who later admitted that he had no bomb, was not identified because of his age.

"I asked him what he was going to do with the money," she said. "He said he wanted to buy something nice for his mom, a necklace or something."

The would-be bomber, charged with attempted extortion, later told police he was upset about treatment a relative had received at the hospital.

The boy was being held in the Tidewater Detention Home until a court appearance, Ms. Lewis said.

Federal Pensioners: One In 1.4 Million

James Walker, a retired government economist, has written to federal budget chief David A. Stockman, asking that a temporary freeze be placed on further cost-of-living increases in federal retirement pensions, including his own.

He retired from the Department of Labor in 1967, when he was earning $17,000 a year. Now, thanks to cost-of-living increases, he receives $29,000 a year in retirement pay. He says it is more than he deserves and more than he needs.

About 1.4 million government retirees receive such cost-of-living increases, which are far more generous than increases given most retired workers by private industry. Only 3 percent of workers in private industry are covered by pension plans indexed to the Consumer Price Index. And most of these few have cost-of-living increases capped at 3 percent a year. There is no cap on federal pensions.

The result is that federal pensioners have seen their pensions increase far faster in recent years than the incomes of other retired people or of people in the working population, whether employed by the federal government or by private industry. Inflation has reduced the real earning power of the average American, but federal pensioners have been fully protected from its painful impact.

Until 1976, the government made cost-of-living adjustments in federal pensions twice a year and sometimes almost every three months. Now such adjustments are made only once a year, saving billions of tax dollars.

Congress in August made another move to reduce federal pension costs. The annual cost-of-living adjustment for retirees under the age of 62 will be delayed one month in each of the next three years. Cost-of-living pension increases to "double dipper" military retirees who hold federal civil service jobs were eliminated. Changes added up to a three-year savings of more than $4 billion.

At a time when the federal budget deficit is approaching a record $200 billion, every little billion counts. There have been complaints about the pension cuts from federal retirees, of course. But we do not believe James Walker is alone among federal retirees in believing that federal pension policies have been overly generous in the past.

Machine Of The Year

Time magazine is naming no "Man of the Year" for 1982 and instead is extending the honor to an anonymous computer. This is the first time the editors have deemed that a machine rather than a human being had the most impact on the course of events in the preceding year.

Admirers of certain world leaders will be disappointed that their favorites were passed over, but it was not a year when powerful personalities made their influence felt. Indeed, we would prefer a computer to some of the choices in the past, such as the scowling Ayatollah Khomeini, who appeared on the Time cover at the end of 1979.

We have never seen a computer scowl, or threaten his neighbor. The computers we know are very even-tempered and reasonable, without a mean chip in their circuits. There are fears that a computer might some day start a war, but if that ever happens, we're sure it will be an accident and not an act of aggression.

Unlike some others who have made the cover of Time, computers are not known to lie or to make promises they can't keep. When asked a question, they get right to the point. No tiresome speech-making.

Next thing you know someone will be nominating a computer for president. Let's not rush into this. Computers may remember everything they're told, but we've yet to hear one come up with an original idea — or a promise. And the computers we know have a tendency to panic in the crunch, like going into a dead faint every time there's a power failure. A Man of the Year or a president ought to have more stamina than that.

BERRY'S WORLD

"GOOD NEWS! GOOD NEWS! GOOD NEWS!
I'm getting FED UP with the media!"

By VICTOR ASSER SOHN

Sanford police are giving enthusiastic support to a number of safety pressure groups who are campaigning for the legal drinking age in Florida to be raised to 21.

Nearly all of the members of the Florida Federation of Safety Organizations, a statewide association of safety experts, recently indicated their support for raising the drinking age.

One bill already has been introduced in each chamber of the Florida Legislature on the subject and State Rep. Fran Carlton of Orlando has support for her bill which she hopes will be passed in the next session of the Legislature.

"Over 10,000 people between 15 and 24 are killed nationally in motor vehicle accidents with 52 percent of the 15-19 age group fatalities reported as alcohol related. It is time to protect the motoring public from the inexperienced driver who also may be under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs," said an association spokesman.

The present legal drinking age in Florida is 19. About 18 months ago the drinking age was reduced from 21 years to 18 and then raised to 19.

Teenage tipplers could perhaps be forgiven not quite knowing what the lawmakers will do next but any suggestion that they are likely to become confused by the law was rejected by Sgt. Herb Shea of the Sanford Police Department.

"I think the police in general support the campaign to raise the drinking age to 21. Some people say that if they are old enough to fight for their country then they are old enough to drink. But that bears no correlation," Shea said.

Raising the age limit back to 21 would prevent high school students from taking booze onto the campus.

"We have found an increase in drinking on the campus. I have seen more alcohol at functions. You have the 14 or 15-year-old in high school and the 18- or 19-year-old in high school and it is not difficult for them to buy booze for the whole school," Shea said.

It is the under age drinking by the younger boys associating with the 18 or 19-year-old in high school which is worrying police officers, who say that it would be more difficult to enforce a 21-year age limit than the existing 19-year limit.

"It is not going to stop it. It will certainly slow it down," Shea said.

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Is The Party Over?

For years, the concept of an industrial policy has been the property of economic liberals. They have conceived of it in terms of subsidies and bailouts. At long last, however, strong supporters of private enterprise solutions have begun to propose an industrial policy for the United States.

The concept of an industrial policy is a concept whose time has come. Fiscal and monetary adjustments won't solve the grave economic problems which afflict the United States today.

The most compelling argument for an industrial policy has been set forth by E.G. Jefferson, chairman of the Du Pont Company. His call for such a policy, voiced this fall in a speech to the Economic Club of Detroit, should be required reading for members of Congress. Among other things, Mr. Jefferson said:

"For more than 20 years we have heard much of the idea of the so-called 'post industrial society.' The term post industrial has not served us well because it has been misinterpreted as teaching that the industrial underpinnings of our economy could be taken for granted. Public policies have stressed consumption at the expense of investment. As a result, we have invested inadequately in the modernization and growth of our industry.

"A strong worldwide competitive position for all our industry should be a common objective, not just of industry and labor, but also of government and our educational institutions. This industrial objective is essential to our commonwealth, to our national defense, to achievement of social goals, and to the adequate support of education and research. Let's embrace this objective as we have embraced wartime objectives or the objective to put a man on the moon.

"We must come to view our industrial success as a national success, and look at our industry and its plants and laboratories as both national and private assets.

"Can we realistically hope to establish a disciplined long-range industrial policy in the present political environment? We simply cannot afford to do otherwise. The national interest must come first. You may ask whether this is not easier to do in times of challenge to our national security. I say to you that is just what we face."

In his speech, Mr. Jefferson set forth many of the details of a business-oriented industrial policy. These involve taxation, investment, research, regulation and many other factors. Each of these elements in an industrial policy should be discussed in the Congress and discussed now — all in the framework of an industrial policy designed to restore and expand America's industrial might.

This restoration and expansion should be a priority objective for the nation's leaders.

Wilson's CIA Ties Are Misleading

WASHINGTON — A mysterious episode in the murky career of convicted gun-runner Edwin Wilson was what the staff director of the House Intelligence Committee chose to call "The Stanfield Turner Affair."

The label is unfair. The former CIA director committed no impropriety; indeed, he didn't even know he was being linked to Wilson, who was a fugitive ex-CIA agent at the time. Here's what happened:

In early 1978, Adm. Turner was having a house built in suburban Washington. As head of the CIA, he required a security system for his new home.

"The builder gave me the choice of several security systems," Turner told my associate Dale Van Atta. He said he chose Honeywell because an old friend was a top executive of the company.

Unbeknownst to Turner, a onetime associate of Wilson's also worked at Honeywell, as sales manager for its protective services division. One day this man got a call from Wilson. He later told the Intelligence Committee he "was instructed by Ed to have someone from Honeywell contact Stanfield Turner" about an alarm system for the CIA chief's home.

The sales manager assumed Wilson was acting at Turner's behest. Like many people, he thought Wilson was still working for the CIA — an impression Wilson cultivates to this day.

So the former associate asked Gar Woodward, a retired colonel who still works at Honeywell, "to contact someone at Turner's office, one of his liaison people, and arrange to look at the house... and see what it needs." Woodward, like Turner, knew nothing of the Wilson connection.

Wilson's associate told the House committee behind closed doors that Turner got at least a 50 percent discount on the security system, and that it was also "paid for out of petty cash from CIA funds." Both Woodward and Turner say they were unaware of any discount; both vehemently deny the CIA paid for the job.

In fact, Turner produced the building contract for his home, which shows an estimate of $1,800 for a security system as part of the construction cost. Turner recalled that when the actual cost turned out to be $1,950, he paid the additional $150 through an adjustment in the closing costs. The CIA's only involvement was to see that the system was connected to CIA headquarters in Langley, Va.

What remains a mystery is how Wilson knew Turner was looking for a home-security

SCIENCE WORLD

Climate Change Predicted

By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The buildup of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere over the next few decades is expected to produce a gradual global warming and two researchers say the United States may be a big loser.

Just what will happen remains in the realm of speculation, but two atmospheric scientists say they believe there is no way to avoid a significant man-made change in the climate over the next half century or so.

"We consider it unlikely that concerted world action can be taken that is sufficient to prevent the carbon dioxide buildup — or even to delay it by any large number of years," said Walter Orr Roberts and Edward J. Friedman in a report published by the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies.

They said "the vast majority" of climate researchers believe a continuing buildup of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere from the burning of coal, wood, oil and gas will produce a "greenhouse effect" in which the atmosphere keeps more of the sun's heat from radiating back into space, like glass in a greenhouse.

Roberts, founding director of the National Center for Atmospheric Research, and Friedman, a past visiting scientist at the center, said carbon dioxide levels probably will double by the year 2040 to produce an average global warming of perhaps 5 degrees Fahrenheit.

"The warming will be unevenly distributed geographically and will be accompanied by substantial alterations in the distribution of rainfall," they said.

Roberts and Friedman said science is not far enough advanced to tell with any certainty the detailed regional consequences of such a warming, but they said whatever is normal now won't be in a half century, particularly in the middle latitudes.

There could be major variations in the distribution of rain, snow, wind, hurricanes, monsoon intensity and other weather elements.

In order to help assess policy impacts, Roberts and Friedman developed a scenario for 2040 based on what is believed to have occurred during a similar warm period on Earth about 6,000 years ago.

There will be melting of polar ice caps, but — unless the West Antarctic Ice Sheet breaks up and slides into the sea — Roberts and Friedman said a resulting sea level rise will be slow and they did not consider it in their scenario.

Here's what might happen: The wheat belts of the United States and Canada experience half of the average precipitation recorded in the 1960-80 period. The midwestern corn belt would be 35 percent drier. This might reduce grain production as much as 35 percent.

Canadian agricultural regions have a month-longer growing season, but drought in the Western grain belt is more frequent and sustained.

The Soviet Union, except for the far west, is considerably drier but the Ukraine grain region has a month-longer growing season. All latitudes above 55 degrees North average 11 degrees F. warmer.

East Africa and the Sahara have twice as much rain but the area is still semi-arid to arid.

In India, more reliable monsoons occur with about 50 percent more precipitation.

Western Europe has a wetter climate with longer growing seasons and considerably milder winters.

South America and Australia have little changes.

The most likely conclusion is that someone in the CIA's "old boy network" found out about it from the CIA's office of security, and mentioned it to Wilson.

It would be typical of Wilson to use this information to nurture the idea that he was still a CIA man. He made his fortune through good connections, and seized every opportunity to "legitimize" himself by real or perceived intimacy with the great and the near-great. Acting as a go-between on Turner's home-alarm system would fit the pattern.

One thing is clear: Turner had no idea Wilson had any involvement with Honeywell. The two were "like oil and water," according to a knowledgeable source. Indeed, Turner's major housecleaning at the CIA began when he fired two agents who were moonlighting for Wilson.

FLORIDA

IN BRIEF Gas Tax, License Fee Hikes Recommended To Legislators

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — A high-level advisory group called for a $533 million band-aid for Florida's transportation system Wednesday that includes a $350 million gas tax increase and increased license fees.

The recommendations were presented to the House Taxation and Finance Committee by the Citizens' Task Force on Transportation, a 16-member group appointed by Gov. Bob Graham, House Speaker Lee Moffitt and Senate President Curtis Peterson.

Jake Varn, chairman of the group and a former Transportation Department secretary, said that at current gasoline prices the tax hike would cost consumers about 6 cents per gallon more.

He also recommended a 50 percent increase in license fees for non-trucks, a 100 percent increase for small trucks and a 200 percent increase for heavy trucks.

Prisoners Being Freed

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — The Parole and Probation Commission is releasing 1,000 inmates early to keep the prison system in compliance with a federal court order prohibiting inmate overcrowding.

Department of Corrections Secretary Louie Wainwright told the Senate Judiciary-Criminal Committee Wednesday he expects to remain in compliance with U.S. District Judge Charles Scott's mandate for the next several months because of the parole commission's cooperation.

But, Wainwright said, the prison system, which houses nearly 27,000 inmates now, will violate Scott's order at some point soon unless the state constructs additional permanent housing.

Wainwright said he will be asking the Legislature for $154 million for prison construction during the 1983-84 fiscal year and $60 million for the following fiscal year.

WORLD

IN BRIEF New Cardinals Could Give 3rd World More Influence

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II's choice of 18 new cardinals, part of a drive to boost the Roman Catholic Church's prestige in developing nations, could add to Third World impact on choosing a future pontiff.

Of 18 prelates named by the pope Wednesday, six are from developing nations. The 17 Roman Catholic prelates and one Maronite patriarch will be elevated to the rank of cardinal at a special Feb. 2 consistory.

The appointments push to 49 the total number of cardinals from Africa, Latin America and Asia—areas where the church is troubled by poverty and political unrest but where it is growing at a faster rate than in developed nations.

Middle East Talks Resume

United Press International

President Reagan ordered chief U.S. Envoy Philip Habib to return to the Middle East and help speed up negotiations that resumed today in northern Israel on the withdrawal of foreign forces from Lebanon.

Israel entered the talks after Prime Minister Menachem Begin Wednesday spurned an American compromise proposal to break the deadlock over the talks' agenda on the issue of normalization of relations with Lebanon.

Police Use Mace On Knife-Wielding Man

Seminole County sheriff's deputies had to use mace on a man holding a knife at another person's throat.

Walter Simmon Jr., of 1309 West 7th Street, was arrested at 11 p.m. Wednesday after deputies received a call of a disturbance at Simmon's house. The arrest report states that Simmon was holding a knife on another person saying "he was going to cut him."

Deputies told Simmon several times to put the knife down but he refused "and he was maced and the knife had to be taken from him," the report said.

Simmon was charged with aggravated assault, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct. He was being held in Seminole County jail today under $5,000 bond.

Deputies said they did not know what prompted the assault.

MICE ON THE ROAD

Sharp-eyed deputy Anthony Diaz was driving south along Wekiva Springs Road and Smokerise Boulevard just before midnight Wednesday when his headlights fell on two very small animals on the roadway. Diaz stopped his patrol car and approached the objects to discover they were two stuffed mice. He gingerly lifted the critters up and gave them a ride back to the sheriff's department where they were turned in as lost property.

ROBBERY

Jay Thomas Sprey, 20, of Airport Boulevard, Sanford, was robbed of $65 after he was hit over the head by a man using an instrument in the parking lot of the Five Points bar, U.S. Highway 17-92 in Sanford at about 3:30 p.m. Tuesday. He was treated at Central Florida Regional Hospital.

ARMED ROBBERY

Timothy Burke, 28, of 1316 Lake Avenue, Sanford, was robbed of $27 when a woman known to him as "Annette" held him up with a pistol and then hit him over the head with the butt end of a pool cue after he had handed over the cash. The robbery took place in a Sanford rooming house at about midnight on Tuesday, according to a police report.

an industry so petitions.

If the county voters approved the plan for tax relief to industries, the county would be authorized to guarantee those industries reduced taxes.

Asked whether any state laws are in the hopper to get new homes on tax rolls more quickly, Suber said some years ago it was suggested that law be passed calling the preparation of two separate tax rolls each year.

He said the cost of preparing two tax rolls each year would be exorbitant and would require that he hire many more employees.

As the law reads now, Suber said, a new residence which is not completed until after the first day of the new year cannot be taxed at its real value for more than two years at times.

He said, as an example, a $75,000 home which was not completed until Jan. 3 of this year, will not be considered complete to go on the tax rolls until January 1984. Taxes would not be levied on the full value of that house until November 1984 and the owner could pay the taxes in March 1985.

Meanwhile, Lake Mary Mayor Walter Sorenson urged his colleagues to refrain from asking the Florida Legislature to pass additional laws to "help us with this problem or we may lose our hats."

Animal Shelter Site Plan Up For Review

Nine public hearings on zoning changes, conditional use requests, and site plans for two proposed new buildings are on tap for the 7:30 p.m. meeting today of the Sanford Planning and Zoning Commission.

The commission will meet in the City Commission chambers at Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Ave.

The board will consider a site plan for the proposed new Seminole County Humane Society animal shelter to be located on the northeast corner of U.S. Highway 17-92 and County Home Road.

The society is leasing the property from Seminole County on a long-term arrangement.

A site plan is also to be considered for a 9,000-square-foot building for the Sherwin-Williams to be located at 3763 Orlando Drive.

Among the eight public hearings is one in which the board will consider amending the restricted commercial zoning district to permit the "interment of cremains on church property."

The Rev. Leroy Soper, rector of Holy Cross Episcopal Church, has asked for the amendment so that a memorial garden can be placed on a small parcel adjacent to the church. The cremated remains of church members would be buried there in biodegradable containers.

Haley's Comet Showers Ocala With Victories

Editor's note: In just 10 years, Ocala Vanguard basketball coach Jim Haley has built the top 3A program in the state. He has won 216 games and lost just 27. Included are three state championships in the past five years. Along with the victories, Haley finds time to run one of the top holiday tournaments in the South and takes his players on an out-of-state trip each year.

By SAM COOK
Herald Sports Editor

While the majority of us will have to wait until 1986 for another coming of Haley's Comet, a transplanted northerner named Jim Haley began showering Ocala with basketball victories as early as 1973.

Haley, 39, has put together a 3A cage program at Ocala Vanguard High School in just 10 years which could serve as a model for beginning coaches throughout the nation.

The Vanguard program is a mirror of its builder. It was built on opportunity, hard work, long hours and basketball fundamentals. The program grew its roots at the third, fourth and fifth grade levels which is, incidentally, where Haley began his coaching career.

After a less-than-glamorous prep and junior college career at Joliet (Ill.) Catholic High School and Joliet Junior College, Haley went on to graduate from Northern Illinois University (DeKalb, Ill.) in 1967.

"I've been a substitute all my life," recalls Haley about his prep and JC playing days. "I wasn't a starter on an all-star, but I was always around the game. I was one of those gym rats. They had to throw me out of the gym. I guess that's why I ended up being a coach."

But while others subs sit on the bench and daydream, Haley was always into the game — even if it was just mentally. He was watching, learning and thinking. He knew someday he wanted to sit at the right end of the bench and call the shots.

The path, however, wasn't easy. He started just about as low as you can go. "I came up the tough route," he said. "I began as a fifth grade basketball coach and stayed in the grade schools for five years."

Wasted time? "Not in the least," corrected Haley. "I think it makes you a better coach if you start at the lower levels, you have to be patient and teach fundamentals. That's where the learning of basketball begins."

"If you look at most of the coaches on the college level now, you'll see that most of them started on the high school or grade school level and moved up to (college) assistants, then became head coaches."

Prep Basketball

Haley started to make his move in 1972. He took the junior varsity job at East Aurora (Ill.) High School under the legendary Ernie Kivisto. A championship junior varsity season was all Haley needed — plus a good selling job — to land him the Vanguard position.

South Alabama coach Cliff Ellis gave a coaching clinic in Joliet which Haley attended. It would be a meeting which would change the course of his life.

Ellis took a job with Cumberland, Tenn. Junior College and called Haley to advise him of the vacancy at Vanguard High where he had previously coached. Ellis told him he could hire an interview, but the rest was up to him.

"I liked the Central Florida area," Haley remembers. "And I wanted to get a coaching job near Orlando. Fortunately for me the principal (now Marion County Superintendent of Schools H. Leon Rogers) was raised in Kentucky and was a big basketball fan."

"I did a good job of selling myself in the interview and Mr. Rogers took a big gamble by hiring me, but I guess it paid off," Haley added. That could be the understatement of the year. Haley's first year team went 11-16 (four losses by one point, three losses by two points and three losses by three points).

"With the success we've had, everybody's forgotten that first year," said Haley. "But I haven't. We weren't very good, but we did lose 10 games by a total of 19 points."

The following year, however, Vanguard put Haley's first 20-victory season on the board. It wouldn't be the last. After winning 17 the next year, the Knights reeled off 20-win seasons in 1975-76 and 1976-77.

Despite the success, though, something was missing — a state championship.

"We were winning 20 games every year, but we weren't getting to the state tournament," said Haley. "In order to put this program on the map, we had to get to the state tournament."

He didn't have to wait much longer. The following year, the Knights had a powerhouse team. Led by seniors Ingram Purvis and Victor Wingo along with juniors Zebedee Howell and Kenny Vaughns, Vanguard captured its first state championship in 1977-78.

The sniff of Lakeland was contagious.

Four of the past five years, Ocala Vanguard has been to the Final Four at the Civic Center. Two of the years — 1978-79 and 1981-82 — the Knights have brought home the biggest trophy in the state.

Can Haley continue the championship formula?

"The key is the grade school program (The Roadrunners)," Haley said. "If we can keep developing the players on the grade school level, we can keep the tradition going."

There is no grade school basketball program in Marion County, so all the organization has been orchestrated by Haley and his four assistants — Tim Markham, Jeff Piersall, Ron McMillin and Wayne Allen.

After three state titles in five years, what else can a coach ask?

"It has been a little unreal," said Haley. "Of course when I came here, I didn't expect to have an Ingram Purvis, a Kenny Vaughns and a Zebedee Howell in the fifth and sixth grades."

"But we're real happy with the program, we just hope we can keep that stature going," he added.

(Friday: Haley explains how the Kingdom of the Sun Holiday Classic began and what its future holds.)

Jim Haley, Ocala Vanguard basketball coach, relaxes between games at the Kingdom of the Sun Holiday Classic.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

McCoy's Thrashes Federal; Joe's Variety Trips Atlantic

Von Eric Small poured in 24 points as McCoy's Cleaners unleashed a potent offensive attack en route to a 59-4 trouncing of First Federal in Sanford Recreation Department Junior League basketball action.

Mike Burke added 17 points and Melvin Brinson netted 16 for McCoy's, who built a 30-2 halftime lead.

In other action, Joe's Variety rallied to a 26-18 lead after three quarters and held on to win 33-30 despite a gallant comeback attempt by Atlantic Bank.

Willie McCloud led Joe's Variety with 18 points and Mike Merthie added nine. Carl Easterday and Mike Newsome had 10 points apiece for Atlantic Bank.

No Momentum For Falcons

The Atlanta Falcons were outscored in their final two games of the regular season, failing to build the momentum Coach Leeman Bennett would have liked entering the playoffs.

"We were embarrassed in our last two games (a 38-7 loss to Green Bay and a 35-6 defeat at the hands of New Orleans) and it remains to see how we will respond," Bennett said of Sunday's NFC matchup against the Minnesota Vikings.

Both teams finished at 5-4, but the Vikings have won three of their last four games.

In other games, Detroit will be at Washington and St. Louis at Green Bay in NFC competition Saturday and Cleveland at the Los Angeles Raiders and New England at Miami in AFC play the same day.

In addition to Sunday's game in Minneapolis, the schedule has the New York Jets at Cincinnati and San Diego at Pittsburgh in the AFC and Tampa Bay at Dallas in the NFC.

Toney's Shot Topples Lakers

The Los Angeles Lakers and Philadelphia 76ers seem ready to set a date in late spring with the winner to emerge wearing the ring.

"There's no doubt there was a lot of intensity," said Los Angeles' Coach Pat Riley after the 76ers, using Andrew Toney's 28 points and driving layup with five seconds to play in overtime, defeated the Lakers, 121-120, Wednesday night.

The Lakers, whose seven-game winning streak was snapped and fell to Philadelphia for the second time this season, played without Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who was suffering from migraine headaches.

Toney, who scored Philadelphia's first two baskets of the overtime, held the ball on the 76ers' last possession before driving to the basket and arching a soft layup high off the glass over James Worthy. Los Angeles' Jamaal Wilkes, who had 36 points, missed a 3-point shot from the corner as time expired.

Los Angeles had a chance to win the game in regulation, but Magic Johnson, who finished with 23 points, 20 assists and 12 rebounds, missed a layup at the buzzer after Wilkes mistimed on a 20-footer from the baseline. The score was tied, 112-112.

A basket by Maurice Cheeks and a thundering dunk by Erving gave Philadelphia a 120-116 lead with 87 seconds left in overtime but Michael Cooper and Johnson hit field goals to enable the Lakers to draw even once again.

In other games, Detroit downed Cleveland, 130-116, Dallas outgunned San Antonio, 136-131, Kansas City defeated Denver, 138-116, San Diego stopped Utah, 122-115, in overtime, and Indiana surprised Seattle, 108-104.

Bruins Blitz Black Hawks

It took only 18 seconds before Chicago Coach Orval Tessier knew his team was in trouble.

"When a team like Boston scores in the first 18 seconds of the game, you've got a problem," said Tessier of the first of Rick Middleton's three goals that propelled the Bruins to a 4-1 triumph Wednesday night over the Black Hawks.

ICBA Tips Off Season

The Intra-County Basketball Association (ICBA) tips off its inaugural season this weekend with games at Lake Howell High, Oviedo High and Seminole Community College.

Four games are scheduled at Lake Howell Saturday with the opening game beginning at 9 a.m. There will be five games at Oviedo starting at 1:30 p.m. on Sunday. A preliminary game will be played Saturday night at 5:15 at SCC which will precede SCC's game with St. John's River CC.

The league has three divisions, varsity (8th graders), junior varsity (6th and 7th graders) and girls (6th through 8th grades).

Gravity One Cause Of Swelling Legs

DEAR DR. LAMB — Could you tell me what causes swelling of the legs, starting above the knees down to the ankles? They are very heavy in the knees and calf of the legs.

I take Lasix for blood pressure and water, but I still have swelling. In the morning when I get out of bed they are down a lot but by evening they are quite swollen.

DEAR READER — Part of the reason is because you are an earth creature. Each cell in your body must be nourished by fluid that leaves your tiny blood vessels and bathes the individual cells. The fluid leaves your small arteries where the internal pressure is highest because of the pumping action of your heart. The pressure inside your veins is much lower. That combined with the sucking action of blood proteins pulls back the fluid into your circulation.

When you are lying down this simple mechanism of fluid leaving your arteries and returning to your veins works just fine in healthy people. But when you stand up the earth's gravity effects must be added. Remember that gravity enables water towers to produce pressure in a city water system.

The pressure in your blood vessels (arteries and veins) increases below the heart. When you are standing the greatest internal pressure is at the ankle. That causes more fluid to leave your arteries and makes it more difficult for it to be sucked back into your tiny veins. The fluid accumulates in your ankles and swelling results.

There are many other factors that contribute to this basic mechanism. Too much fluid in the circulation from excess salt retention is one reason. That is why liver disease and even premenstrual tension is associated with swelling. When you lie down at night the gravity influence is eliminated on the pressure and the fluid is sucked up from the tissues, eliminating swelling.

To give you more information on why you have swelling and what to do about it, I am sending you The Health Letter 11-6, Swelling: Causes and Management. Others can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband had an endoscopic examination of his digestive tract and they found he has a phytobezoar.

I have never heard of this before and he is very concerned. What causes this? What is the treatment without surgery if possible? He suffers much from upper digestive pain.

DEAR READER — It is rare. Most bezoars occur in patients who have had gastric surgery or have the vagus nerve severed. They are balls of undigested plant fiber that are retained in the stomach. Some can be crushed with an endoscopic method. Others can be dissolved in the stomach with enzymes. Cellulase, an enzyme, has been successful in some cases. If they cannot be dissolved or broken up they must be removed surgically.

In patients who have not had gastric surgery, phytobezoars are sometimes caused by persimmons. The area under the skin and unripe pulp contains a substance that reacts with the stomach acid to form an insoluble mass or bezoar.

In former times bezoars were thought to have magic medicinal value. Queen Elizabeth I kept several.

YOUR BIRTHDAY

January 7, 1983 Persons you've helped in the past will be instrumental this coming year in giving you a boost up the ladder of success. They'll be there when you need them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There is a possibility you could experience some financial extremes today. Under certain conditions you'll be fortunate, while with others you may not. 1983 predictions for Capricorns are now ready. Send $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet. Reveals romantic combinations and compatibilities for all signs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Strive to fulfill your ambitions today, but don't do so in ways which could make others think less of you. Being a good guy is more important.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You can achieve what you set out to do today, but be prepared to overcome some obstacles and to put forth a second effort.

ARIES (March 21-April 10) Be careful today that you don't let financial dealings with a pal jeopardize your relationship. Both should consider friendship more important than money.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There's a possibility some essential information could be withheld from you today, so don't rush into making decisions on limited facts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your productivity could be lessened a bit early in the day because of a tendency to do things the hard way. Fortunately, you'll find easier routes later on.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Commercial transactions should not be conducted hastily today. Your first moves may be wrong ones. Study everything with care.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Rather than dictate to others today, try to present your ideas in ways which will lead them to believe that your thoughts are theirs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The faults and shortcomings of others will be very apparent to you today, but you'd be wise to pretend you didn't notice them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If your extravagant urges are permitted to take control today, you'll wind up spending more than you should. Instead, look for ways to save money.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Lady Luck tends to favor you today, especially in situations which could lead to personal gain. Be careful not to do things that could stymie her.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Early in the day you could, uncharacteristically, worry about things which might never happen. This is a big mistake. You should be quite lucky.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Bridge hand details including North-South and East-West hands, dealer, and opening lead.

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby South won the diamond lead and led his ace of trumps. The hand had looked like a wrap-up, but the 3-0 trump break caused South to pause and consider.

If he drew trumps and led his queen of hearts, a defender could win with his ace and lead a diamond. South would have to attack clubs eventually and could expect to lose three club tricks and his contract. Could he do anything to stop this defense?

South found a way. He cashed his second high diamond and then led out his queen of hearts. East took his ace and saw that the lead of a spade would establish a trump entry in dummy and a diamond lead would give South a ruff and discard. What was left? A club lead.

East was a careful player. He had seen that South held seven top spades, the ace-king of diamonds and queen of hearts. He couldn't also hold the ace of clubs, so East played his king of clubs, continued with the nine and set declarer with a club ruff. South had thought himself. He could have made the hand by drawing the trumps and leading the club jack and eventually playing the clubs for the way they were divided. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)
