Jim Reed Ready To Fight To Last Ditch For The Nomination

"We haven't lost this fight by a long ways."

This was the message received here today by close friends of Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, candidate for the Democratic nomination for president, on the eve of his departure from Kansas City for Houston, where the convention opens next Tuesday.

Local supporters of the Missourian interpreted the wire to mean that a determined fight is to be waged to defeat Al Smith, whose managers claim a strength that is little short of the total necessary for nomination. Despite this prospect, Senator Reed has indicated a willingness to battle to the last ditch in his own behalf.

Senator Reed leaves Kansas City today in order to be in Houston on Saturday for a conference with his lieutenants. A strong bid for uninstructed delegations and those pledged to favorite sons will be made by Reed, it was indicated by dispatches from his headquarters.

No One Seems To Know Where Custom Came From Which Decees Certain Period In Which To Be Unusually Nice

By Alice Langelier
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Paris June 20.—Paris has been celebrating "la Semaine de Bonte," a week of good deeds, or a week of kindness, a week set aside every year during which everyone is supposed to be kinder than usual and really put it practice the Golden Rule.

No one seems to know exactly who started the idea. Some people blame it on America but certain chroniclers have discovered that in parts of lower Burgundy (as far back as the fifteenth century, there were such weeks, even months, usually in the spring, in which husbands were forbidden to beat their wives. Those who disobeyed the rule, were obliged to ride about the village all day on a donkey turned the wrong way, and to be the butt of the jokes of the townspeople.

It is doubtful however, about the real amount of good that is reaped during this week. Parisians are not easily put into the straight and narrow path of the benevolence. A few good ladies certainly continued to take their baskets of provisions to the poor, perhaps adding a few extra delicacies. Others made visits to the prisons, a really difficult task in France. Others even gathered together the stray cats and dogs and gave them a good feast before trying to find owners for them. But the large majority of people remained as skeptical and hard-hearted as ever, the commerce remained as slow as ever to open the door at night and the chauffeurs complained of the low tips they received. The Week of Kindness will never be a huge success in France.

One of the largest French newspapers has instituted "English Week" and "Spanish Week." One Saturday there will be a section devoted to English readers and of special interest to tourists, giving them all kinds of information to enable them to spend their time in Paris in the most agreeable and profitable manner.

Every other week Spanish visitors and readers will be taken care of and the paper will print one section in the language of Cervantes.

Porters and station attendants at the big Gare du Nord will soon be able to "parley-vous anglais" with the large number of incoming travellers who speak nothing but English. They are now taking a course of lessons which will help them within a short time to answer all the ordinary questions such as directions, hotel accommodations, railroad connections, etc.

Claiming to be a special envoy of the Messiah, a Frenchwoman strode up and down the boulevards recently scattering vegetable seeds with which she had filled her apron. When a good-natured gentleman asked for an explanation, she said she had been sent on a Messianic mission to transform the city streets and sidewalks into vegetable gardens to save the Parisians from starvation.

School children in the Oise department will soon be able to boast "the most beautiful teeth in France." Dr. Magnier has arranged with the City Councils in each village and town to see that the teachers oblige the scholars to brush their teeth before them once every day. Free tooth-brushes and paste have been provided.

Although a stroke of good luck made him a millionaire in France over night, a little tailor of Roubaix says he will keep right on with his shears and needle.

"The million will help us to live a more comfortably," said the tailor when he was told of his good luck, "but I shan't retire yet."

U. S. and Austria Will Sign Friendly Treaty

WASHINGTON, June 18.—(INS)—A most favored nation treaty between the United States and Austria, will be signed tomorrow in Vienna by the American minister and the Austrian Minister for Foreign Affairs, according to an announcement at the State Department.

The treaty of "friendship, commerce and consular rights" places the commercial relations of the two countries on an unconditional most favored nation basis. Similar treaties have been negotiated with Germany and other countries.

EFFECT POLITICS WILL HAVE UPON MARKET AWAITED

Little Change Is Expected To Be Noticed In Operation Of Stock Markets Which Have Become To Be Independent

NEW YORK, June 20.—With the Republican National Convention over and the Democratic pow-wow to follow within a week or so the question naturally arises, what effect will political maneuvers of the next month or two have on the stock market?

The question might almost be put the other way, for in its present mood the stock market as likely to be governed by outside factors as the tail is to wag the dog. The stock market has been a power unto itself, not only in its break-neck course since the introduction of four-million-share days, but in the full period since the big smash of February-March of 1920, when the price pendulum swung entirely too low.

Under skillful direction, the market has brushed aside high call rates and the enforced curtailment of speculative credit; ignored the decline in important departments of business and industrial activity, and substituted fancy and imagination for fundamental facts and figures in its treatment of important matters affecting security prices. It might therefore be as easily and as safely ignored as the strongest political forces and personalities that might be brought into play over the next few months.

Must State Policies

This is most unlikely, however, since, contrary to general belief, economic problems of the largest moment will be closely involved in the policies and platforms of the major political platforms. It will be necessary for the two major parties to state quite fully and clearly their attitude toward these problems and to outline the measures they propose to employ in order to solve them. Already the so-called farm problem has loomed up on horizon, and while very little importance is attached to the farmers' "revolt" staged at Kansas City week, enough has been said to make the G. O. P. stop, and listen for the voice of an accredited spokesman for the great agricultural districts.

Then there are the economic factors of the tariff, gold exportation, income taxes, merchant shipping, coal mining, etc., none of immediate legislation, since Congress can be directly influenced by pressure which has rested from the attitude of party leaders must be plain before an intelligent appeal to the voters can be made.

It must not be understood from what is here said that the two big parties take the opposite sides on these important questions. On the contrary, the leaders on both sides are striving to let be known that they will go farther than anybody else in providing the best measures for the benefits of all classes of our citizenry.

Down To Cases

Have the Republicans revised their attitude toward these issues, and make a better job of it? Have the Democrats reduced the income tax? Yes, but not nearly as much as the Democrats would have done had they held the reins of power at Washington. Would the Republicans please the farmers with beneficial and cooperative measures? So would the Democrats. And thus the story goes.

When we "come down to cases" however, we find a vast difference in the economic thinking of prominent men in both parties, and so wide is the difference that Republicans and Democrats align or split on party measures, along the lines of responsibility to their constituents. Congressmen from the agricultural states are naturally interested in any and every measure designed to benefit the farmer and will support such measures whether they originate in Republican or Democratic quarters.

It goes without saying that neither party would care to carry the blame for a sharp and distressing break in the stock market just prior to a presidential election, and it is obvious that the "powers that be" will endeavor to hold stock prices as steady as possible during the big political campaign.

Bankers' Efforts

This does not, of course, insure protection to those who have bought stocks at the peak, but it is only fair to say that the banking heads of the country have done their utmost to prevent just such a speculative orgy as has taken place in the last two months, fearing the inevitable collapse that

Senator Reed Has Confidence He Will Win At Convention

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 19.—(INS)—When and if the Democratic National Convention gets in to a deadlock at Houston next week, Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri confidently expects he will win the fight for the presidential nomination. The Senator's political backers said as much here today in announcing Reed's plans before the Missouri delegation leaves for the Texas city Thursday night.

"Senator Reed is not going to Houston just for the ride," said Charles M. Howell, Kansas City attorney and intimate friend of Reed. "The salient fact is that Jim Reed is going to Houston to get the Democratic presidential nomination for Jim Reed."

Howell recalled that Senator Reed was reared in and around Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Herbert Hoover was born at West Branch, 28 miles from Cedar Rapids. They were neighbors but not aware of it. Any opinions each may have formed of the other was in later public life. Nothing is in the way to prevent a battle that would make a new record in presidential campaigning.

The Reed leaders are counting on the Solid South to stop Governor Smith, according to the Senator's here, and around Senator Furnifold Simmons of North Carolina and Governor Moody of Texas are built high hopes that the latter two will work to break the Smith lead early in the balloting.

CHILDREN BURNED

most stately observed by the pilgrims and their friends by a pilgrimage to the Nation's Capital at Washington, D. C., where an audience with the representative of President Coolidge has been arranged. The party will also visit Arlington Cemetery and other points of interest in Washington.

The outstanding feature of the 1927 Golden Jubilee Year convention was the granting of a dividend equal to eight and one-third per cent of the annual assessment of each member, and with the report of the actuaries in the Royal Arcanum Valuation Exhibit for the year ending December 31, 1927, which places the solvency of the Order at 110.56 per cent, and with a Reserve Fund of $11,235,344, the approving and granting of an annual dividend by the Supreme Council at this session is practically assured.

Many councils are in favor of a Royal Arcanum Home for Aged Members. This question will be brought before the Supreme Council.

Harold C. Knoepfel, Supreme Regent of the Royal Arcanum, is a well known lawyer of New York City. His election in 1927 at Little Falls, Washington, for a second term of two years established a precedent, no other Supreme Regent having been so honored since the Order was founded in 1877. Mr. Knoepfel has brought to the office of Supreme Regent a business acumen of great value to the organization, as evidenced by the progress made under his administration.

With a total of $24,227,192 paid to beneficiaries on death claims, $453,112 disbursed for old age benefits and $209,569 paid on total disability claims, the Royal Arcanum has a splendid record for its 21st one year of service.

In observing the fifty-first anniversary the 110,000 members of the Royal Arcanum can look back upon a glorious past and forward to a still more glorious future.

June 23, celebrated throughout the United States and in Canada as Royal Arcanum Day, will be
