Sanford Honda Dealer Says No Problem With Guam Imports

If you've bought a Honda or are planning to buy one from Prestige Imports in Sanford that was imported from Guam, you needn't worry about the warranty being honored, according to the dealership's owner and his general manager.

Both men insist customers are secure in that regard, despite a class-action lawsuit filed in Miami against two Miami Honda dealers seeking $60 million damages claiming factory warranties on the imports are not being honored because they allegedly were brought into the United States improperly.

Additionally, the Sanford Honda dealership was in no way connected with the Miami lawsuit, nor was it named a defendant in that action, according to Norman Braman, owner of Prestige Imports on Orlando Drive in Sanford.

Named in the Miami lawsuit are Braman Honda and South Motor Co., both of Miami. Braman also owns Braman Honda in Miami.

The lawsuit was filed by a Miami lawyer, Jeffrey Tew, who said he represents Honda owners who claim the warranties on their Guam imports are not being honored by other Honda dealerships. Braman and his Sanford dealership's general manager, Michael Steele, said, however, that need not be a problem to Honda owners.

Steele confirmed that some Hondas imported from Guam are sold at the Sanford dealership, and emphasized his company takes every precaution to protect customers who buy them.

He said customers are told immediately that the Honda they are buying is imported from Guam — if it happens to be — and are asked to sign a document indicating they've been so told. Additionally, Steele said, the customer is told that there is a one-year, 12,000-mile warranty honored by the Sanford dealership or any other dealership owned by Braman. He also pointed out all Hondas imported from Guam and sold through the Sanford dealership have a red sticker placed behind the mirror to alert area dealers that if a customer wants to have his or her Honda repaired or maintained at that area dealer for normal warranty-covered items, Prestige Imports will reimburse that dealer for the work, or reimburse the customer.

Steele also noted that built-in to the price of such cars is an additional two-year, 24,000-mile warranty which the customer may choose to waive, and that if the customer does, the price of the car is proportionately reduced.

Tew said when Braman couldn't get enough Hondas through the official Honda distributor to meet the heavy demands from customers, he arranged to import additional Hondas from Guam. Tew claims that's improper because there is an agreement

Marines Death Toll Reaches 183

More Bodies Pulled From Rubble As Troop Replacements On Way

United Press International

Rescuers search rubble for victims of the terrorist bombing that destroyed the Marine's Battalion Landing Team building in Beirut, Lebanon, Sunday. At noon today the death toll stood at 183 in the blast that brought down the building when a truck packed with explosives was driven in on a suicide-murder mission.

By Scott MacLeod
BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — U.S. Marines recovered the bodies of more of their comrades today from the ruins of a Marine headquarters leveled in a suicide bombing that killed at least 183 U.S. servicemen and wounded at least 85 more.

President Reagan dispatched Marine Commandant Paul X. Kelley to Beirut to review security arrangements for the Marines following the bloodiest attack against U.S. servicemen since the Vietnam War. Forty-one French paratroopers were killed in a similar suicide attack just after the Marines were hit Sunday.

In Washington, outraged congressional leaders debated whether U.S. peace-keeping troops should remain in Lebanon despite Reagan's vow not to yield to international terrorism.

"If our choice is to leave the Middle East and abandon all hope of some resolution of a long and historic problem and throw it to the four winds, sorry," said White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

"We're going to be there and we're going to seek a solution to it and we're not going to be deterred in our pursuit of a peaceful resolution of the Middle East problems," he said.

Meanwhile, hundreds of grim-faced Marines headed toward Lebanon today to replace fellow troops killed and wounded in what a general called "a barbaric act of terrorism," but none said they would seek revenge.

"We'll go with a level head to do the job we're assigned to do," said Lt. Col. Edwin Kelley, commander of the 2nd Battalion of the 6th Marine Regiment of the 2nd Marine Division.

"We're ready."
The convoys of Marines rolled out of Camp Lejeune, N.C., in the rain Sunday, heading toward aircraft waiting to take them to the city they had left just four months before. They left behind friends and loved ones who hailed them with a mixture of pride, fear and frustration.

All of the somber Marines questioned said they weren't thinking of revenge despite the deaths of scores of their fellow Marines in an explosion in Beirut Sunday.

But Lt. John Berry, a veteran in the service who is not part of the peace-keeping force, said he believes the deaths will linger in the minds of the incoming Marines.

"They want to get some kind of — I wouldn't say revenge — but they'd like to get some kind of satisfaction that these deaths weren't in vain," Berry said.

French President Francois Mitterrand made a surprise visit to Beirut and toured the scene of the bombings after meeting with President Amin Gemayel.

In simultaneous pre-dawn bombings Sunday, terrorist drove two trucks packed with explosives into the Marine Battalion Landing Team headquarters at the Beirut airport and a French barracks 3 miles away in west Beirut.

See MARINES', page 8A

The Department of Defense Public Affairs officer said today the next of kin of Marines killed or injured in Beirut are being notified. He said there is no office relatives of Marines stationed in Beirut can call for information. He said they will just have to wait until they are contacted. He would not say if any of the Marines killed or wounded in the incident have relatives in Seminole County, but said the list of casualties would not be released until all of the next of kin are notified.

$600 In Deductions Improper

Ex-SCA Officer Wins Case, But She May Wait To Collect

Louise Crawford, former equal opportunities officer with Seminole Community Action, may have won her grievance case against the agency over $600 in deductions from her salary prior to her job layoff in February.

The SCA board agreed she should have been paid the money and will be pending verification from an insurance company that part of workers compensation she received late last year and early this year represented payments for permanent partial disability.

But repayment probably won't be in one lump sum, said Rev. Amos Jones, SCA's executive director, today.

"We have the money, but don't have that much to pay her all at one time," Jones said, adding the repayment will probably be made in installments.

"We didn't deduct it from her salary all at one time. We will be paying the money if the insurance company verifies her claim. I have no problems with that," Jones said.

Mrs. Crawford said today that she filed a grievance with SCA several months ago over deductions from her salary, after she was laid off from the job she had held for 14½ years.

She explained that she was injured on the job when she fell on the stairway at the Community Action headquarters on Pine Street last year. She said as a result of the injury she had to have operations on her right knee and was awarded workers' compensation and 20 percent permanent partial disability.

Louise Crawford

Mrs. Crawford said for a time, she signed those checks over to SCA which continued to pay her full salary before she realized that a portion of the money was for the permanent partial disability.

Then at a point, she said SCA deducted from her salary portions for money she was receiving for the disability.

Mrs. Crawford said that the SCA board of directors last week agreed that she should have received the portion of the compensation payments for her permanent partial disability. She said this amounted to about $600.

"I would like to have my money as quickly as possible," Mrs. Crawford said, adding she hasn't been told anything except that she won at her grievance hearing. She also said she has been assured that if Community Action gets new funding from the state, she will be given a job.

Jones said he has no problem with the board's action after the grievance proceeding. "We are just trying to verify with our insurer what portion of the payments for Mrs. Crawford was for workers' compensation and which portion was for permanent partial disability. He said that SCA wasn't notified that Mrs. Crawford was awarded a claim for permanent partial disability.

Mrs. Crawford said today she could have filed a complaint with the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission on the matter, but she didn't, preferring to channel her complaint through the SCA board of directors in the grievance process.

Meanwhile, the agency is awaiting word from the state's Department of Community Affairs on its appeal concerning the $100,000 in state funding which was cut off to Community Action on June 30.

Jones said there is another appeals process SCA can go through if the current one fails to grant relief and return the funding to the anti-poverty agency.

Crawford said it would be wholly unacceptable to her to have to wait for her money until the state re-funds SCA, if that funding is ever approved.

"I need my money as quickly as possible," she said. — Donna Estes

Chief Williams Dead At 84

Former Sanford Police Chief Roy G. Williams, 84, of 424 Elliott Ave., Sanford, died Sunday night at Central Florida Regional Hospital. Born July 22, 1899, in Mt. Vernon, Ill., he moved to Sanford in 1921.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday at the First United Methodist Church with the Rev. Archie Buie, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Oaklawn Memorial Park.

When he took office on Jan. 6, 1923, Mr. Williams was the youngest police chief in the state. A former special officer, he remained chief for 42 years.

In the early days, his department employed eight police officers and one motor car. The policemen were receiving $80 per month and worked 12-hour shifts. By 1963, the size of the department had grown to 18 men, four patrol cars and one motorcycle and officers worked an 8-hour, six days a week shift.

In the 1950's the Sanford Police Benevolent Association was organized under his leadership to protect the individual police officer with hospitalization, security, and a pension.

The Sanford Police Benevolent building and a gun range were built on the lakefront on Lake Monroe.

In early 1965, Chief Williams became ill and decided to retire on Oct. 1, 1965.

Hazard

Kids' Safety Demands Sidewalk, Residents Say

Lake Mary city officials have admitted there is a real hazard for young children who must walk busy Country Club Road to Lake Mary Elementary School each morning.

But the city doesn't have the $8,000 to $14,000 needed to build a sidewalk nearly half a mile from the Countryside subdivision to Broadmoor Road where a sidewalk exists.

Jose Barreto, president of the Countryside Homeowners Association, asked for the sidewalk at the Lake Mary City Commission meeting Thursday. He pointed to the heavy traffic coming to Seminole Community College on both Country Club Road and Broadmoor in the early morning hours as the children walk to school. He said five children from the development walk the route daily.

Commissioner Collin Keogh urged Barreto to ask the School Board to conduct a survey of the route through its established safety review process. And Mayor Walter Sorenson offered to accompany the association members to the school board meeting.

Keogh said if the route is found to be hazardous the school system will provide courtesy

Answer to Previous Puzzle

Emphysema: You Can Only Slow It

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm writing about emphysema. The doctor says I have it. I'm short of breath and sometimes I can hardly breathe, especially in foggy weather.

They had me take a breathing test. They clamped my nose so I couldn't breathe through it and put a hose in my mouth to breathe in and out. My breathing level was way below what it was supposed to be.

My doctor gave me Dimetapp Extentabs but he said it didn't help me. Now he has me on another medicine called Theo-Dur. Is that for emphysema? Isn't there any cure for emphysema?

DEAR READER — Unfortunately there is no cure for emphysema. But you can do a lot to prevent its progression and to relieve the symptoms such as shortness of breath in many people. For the best results you need to start early and before the disease has progressed to the point that little can be done.

Chronic bronchitis and emphysema are common problems. Some people inherit factors that make them develop obstructions to air flow in the lungs, but most people develop these conditions from air pollutants. That usually means smoking cigarettes. Almost everyone who has smoked several years already has chronic bronchitis. Obviously the most important treatment is to avoid the pollutants, specifically tobacco smoke.

Theo-Dur is a bronchial dilator. It helps to open up the air passages in your lungs.

In addition to not smoking there are other things that help. That includes developing good posture and good breathing exercises. It is very important to avoid respiratory infections. And that reminds me to tell everyone with such problems that they really need flu shots to help protect them. Flu in people who have such lung problems can be quite serious.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Can you tell me anything about the parathyroid gland? I know there are four parathyroid glands in the neck area. I had one removed three years ago and now blood tests show that I have another.

DEAR READER — They are small glands located along the side of the thyroid gland or parallel to the thyroid gland, hence the name parathyroid. Their chief role is to form parathyroid hormones. They are endocrine glands. The parathyroid hormone regulates the level of calcium in the blood and body fluids to some extent independent of dietary calcium intake.

Too much hormone may cause mobilization of calcium from your bones. This may lead to a high blood calcium level and deposits of calcium in soft tissues as well as calcium kidney stones. Digestive complaints may occur also, giving rise to the old medical aphorism to identify hyperparathyroidism of "bones, stones and groans."

The usual treatment of an overactive parathyroid gland is to remove the overactive portion.

The parathyroid glands may also be damaged or even removed when the thyroid gland is operated upon since the small glands are embedded in the thyroid. That causes low blood calcium levels which leads to other important medical problems. Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

Oswald: "The Official Encyclopedia of Bridge" shows the correct play to gain a certain number of tricks in a suit. Experts are supposed to know all these combinations, but few do."

Jim: "I rec watched a young player in an important IMP match lose a no-trump slam because he ignored the possibility of a very bad break in the club suit."

Oswald: "The Encyclopedia gives the chance to make seven tricks in the suit as 73 percent. West had followed to the first club. South had a sure play for six club tricks and his slam. He should have finessed his 10. Of course, had he bid seven, the correct play would have been to play his top clubs and give himself the 73 percent cut but he was in six no-trump."

Jim: "In explanation of his bidding, it seems that their partnership showed a solid minor suit by opening three of that suit, and South's six no-trump was based on three aces, two kings and his partner's selected seven club tricks."

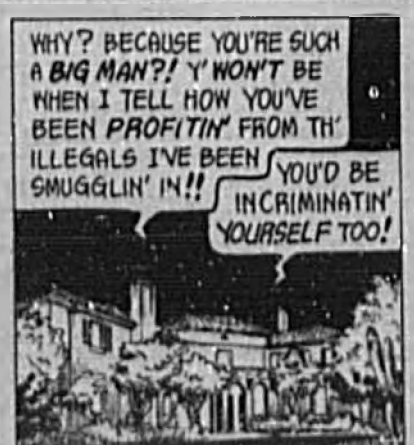

Oswald: "Was South punished for his failure to make the safety play?" Jim: "No. At the other table North played in seven clubs and banded down the A-K. Then he developed a trump coup and West to just one club trick. The board was a tie."
