Jail inmate dies

James Morel, 52, 569 Whittingham Place, Lake Mary, being held in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility, died yesterday afternoon. The apparent cause was a heart attack, according to jailers.

Morel had been sentenced to nine months in the county jail on June 9 by Judge Alan Dickey. According to Sheriff's department spokesman George Proechel, "Morel had been convicted of unlawful compensation/reward, and prostitution."

"At approximately 1 p.m. yesterday," Proechel explained, "He told the jail nurse that he was not feeling well. By 2 p.m., he was complaining of chest pains."

Proechel said Morel was a known diabetic, and was on medication for a previous heart condition.

At about 2:30 p.m., Proechel said, "The doctor on duty, Dr. Benjamin Newman, called for an ambulance and Morel was taken to the Central Florida Regional Hospital yesterday afternoon where he died at approximately 6 p.m."

Shuttle launch looks grim

CAPE CANAVERAL — NASA today replaced a bad sensor in space shuttle Columbia that had threatened to delay Thursday's launch. But another equipment glitch developed, and the weather forecast turned unfavorable.

Technicians late Tuesday reopened the engine compartment on the launch pad to check the fuel-temperature sensor, which had been giving erratic readings.

Workers overnight also replaced two navigation units that failed at the last minute. But one of the units was still acting erratically. NASA proceeded with the countdown toward a 12:17 p.m. EDT liftoff while trying to solve the problem.

Meanwhile, the space agency said the forecast had deteriorated because of thunderstorms, and the chances of good weather at liftoff had dropped to 40 percent.

The 13-day research mission will be the longest shuttle flight yet. The longest mission to date, in 1990, was just under 11 days.

Fun World expands

By VICKI BUCHHEIM
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Fun World, the amusement park that is a part of the Plea World complex on U.S. Highway 17-92 in Sanford, is undergoing a $1 million expansion.

Syd Levy, owner of the complex, said Tuesday that the park has been very successful since first opening its doors two years ago.

"People have really taken to Fun World," Levy said. "It's a fun, family place."

Ground has been broken on the new portion of the facility and Levy hopes that it will open to the public on Aug. 1, Fun World's second anniversary.

Levy said there will be additions to the selection of games, activities and midway attractions.

The park already includes two miniature golf courses, a bumper boat ride, nine batting cages, a go-cart track, a pair of bumper car courses, a midway with nine rides, a game room with 300 arcade games, a restaurant and party facility.

In what has been a parking facility behind the park, there will be two new go-cart courses.

First, there will be a slick, fast track for dare-devils who want to go fast. In addition, there will be a longer, more leisurely family track, which will feature the latest Formula K two-seater go-karts.

Freight, passenger trains idled

All's quiet on rail lines serving Sanford this morning.

From Staff and Wire Reports

SANFORD — Freight as well as passenger train service to the Sanford area was suspended today as part of a strike that virtually has crippled rail service in the United States.

Although labor groups agreed to delay a walkout against Amtrak for at least 48 hours, a dispute continues between machinists and CSX, which owns the tracks that freight and passenger lines share.

In Sanford, there were no picket lines this morning. The only indication of a union dispute is a sign placed near the entrance to the Autotrain, on Perissimon Avenue.

The sign is a notice posted by the National Railroad Passenger Corporation. It explains the interruption of service.

The Machinists union however, did set up picket lines at CSX Transportation locations elsewhere around the nation and stopped the railroad's operations early this morning, a railroad spokesman said.

Locally, Autotrain Manager John Lombardi reported, "All of our people came to work as usual this morning and there hasn't been any problem." He added, "While the Autotrain is still being held here in Sanford, we'll be working on taking care of people who will be arriving this morning with their cars, thinking the Autotrain will still run as scheduled."

He said, "There will probably be a couple of hundred people driving in today alone, because we haven't been able to contact them. Meanwhile, we'll also operate as a refund and information center during the strike."

Lombardi commented, "Many people don't realize the Autotrain is part of the Amtrak system, and that we use CSX rail lines, so they think the strike doesn't affect us."

Regarding the lack of pickets locally, Lombardi explained, "The dispute now is between CSX, which controls the rail lines we use, and their unions, not against Amtrak."

"Money and conditions" were the main sources of dissatisfaction, Thomas Crawford, president of IAMAW local 257, said this morning in Jacksonville. "We want our fair share of the enormous profits that CSX is making."

Union members also resent the company's practice of contracting with outsiders for some jobs rather than giving the work to its own employees and say its wages aren't comparable to other industries, according to the railroad mechanic.

In Jacksonville, CSX spokesman Jay Westbrook said this morning, "We have IAM members that are

Chiles eyes layoffs in budget deadlock

By BRENLY KALLESTAD
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Lawton Chiles continued to seek public support for a billion-dollar tax plan as he prepared to lay off nearly 12,000 state workers by July 1.

"This is not an exercise about what I would like to continue or not, because I would like to continue state government," Chiles said

Tuesday. "It's about what the constitution allows me to do under the emergency powers of the governor."

"I think it's very clear ... we're not supposed to spend money we don't have," Chiles said earlier Tuesday in a televised hookup with chambers of commerce across the state.

In addition to scores of services unrelated to public safety, Florida could go into the Fourth of July holiday weekend with the lottery and state parks closed.

"I do not think any one of those services can be classified as necessary for life or limb, so I do not think I've got the power to keep them open if we do not have a budget," Chiles added.

The state has about 140,000 employees.

While Chiles is unlikely to receive anything near the $1.35 billion in new taxes he has recommended, the governor and two agency heads Tuesday tied into several chamber meetings across the state via satellite to continue their quest for more taxes.

Secretary of Commerce Greg Farmer and Labor Secretary Frank Scruggs joined the governor in the hourlong program.

Bus service expanded, but not in Sanford

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioners gave their go-ahead to expand Tri-County Transit service to Oviedo and increase service along State Road 436 but delayed a decision on whether to expand services in Sanford.

Seminole County commissioner Jennifer Kelley said she will continue to pursue a route to the Seminole County Public Health Unit and Seminole Community College.

"I think they can do it," said Kelley. "It shouldn't cost that much."

The Sanford expansion proposal considered by Tri-County planners would have cost $160,631 per year, but would recover only $23,839 in fares, according to their report presented Tuesday to commissioners.

Sanford is currently served by a route that begins at Winter Park Mall, continues north on U.S. Highway 17-92 to 25th Street before taking a loop through downtown, past Central Florida Regional Hospital, through west Sanford and back to U.S. 17-92.

The proposed route would have begun at

The Tri-County Transit route southbound from Sanford on 17-92 near Lake Mary Boulevard will not be expanded at this time. Expansion has been approved in Oviedo and Altamonte Springs.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Publix blasted for hiring practices

TALLAHASSEE — Publix Supermarkets Inc. doesn't employ enough women and minorities as top managers and avoids locating stores in minority neighborhoods, a consumer organization contends.

"Publix store management is a bastion of the good old boys club," said Susan Wilson, speaking Tuesday for the non-profit Florida Consumers Federation. "They may as well post a sign in front of their store managers' offices saying, 'white males only need apply.'"

The West Palm Beach-based group visited 380 Publix stores across the state and found that women make up only 2 percent of 750 managers and assistant managers, while blacks comprise 3 percent. Hispanics make up about 4 percent.

Publix made it easy to perform the survey because the company displays photos of their managers prominently in the stores, Ms. Wilson said.

The FCF also found that Publix had "very few" stores in minority areas, although they did not release precise figures. But Anita Davis of the Leon County NAACP chapter said it's common knowledge among blacks.

"You just don't have them there," she said.

Navy instructor sentenced

PENSACOLA — A military court has sentenced a Navy photography school instructor to a bad conduct discharge and other penalties for sexual harassment and fraternization, officials announced in a news release.

Details of his case have not been released Tuesday, but two others charged in an unrelated case allegedly danced with women students or put ice inside the pants of one female student.

Petty Officer 2nd Class Christopher J. Marquis was the first of the four military men from the Pensacola Naval Air Station to be tried on sexual harassment charges. His court-martial was last Thursday.

Chief Petty Officer Nelson Castro, also a photo school instructor, is scheduled for trial Aug. 10.

No trial dates have yet been set for two Marines who were drill instructors at the Naval Aviation Officer Candidate School.

Rabies quarantine ordered

WESLEY CHAPEL, Fla. — A rabies quarantine has been ordered for central Pasco County after a rabid red fox bit a golfer last week and the discovery this year of two raccoons in the area with the deadly virus.

The quarantine requires residents to keep their pets from roaming free. Pets found on the loose will be impounded, officials said.

At the Saddlebrook resort, site of the fox attack, the management issued a rabies alert memo to guests, warning them to stay away from wild animals and saying what to do if bitten.

Ronnie Rogers of Cary, N.C., was golfing in a corporate tournament at Saddlebrook June 15 when a red fox came out of the woods and bit him on the finger.

The other players beat the animal to death with golf clubs. Later, the fox tested positive for rabies.

Man honored for moral courage

MIAMI — A Miami man who lost his job after speaking out about the Wackenhut Corp.'s investigation of an environmental activist has been awarded the 1992 Cavallo Prize for Moral Courage.

Rafael Castillo will be one of the three "whistle-blowers" presented with a $10,000 check by the Cavallo Foundation at a ceremony Thursday in Washington, D.C. The foundation, based in Cambridge, Mass., is a small nonprofit organization that recognizes people who speak out about issues of public interest at their own personal cost.

"He had to resign his job," said Christy Law, a spokeswoman for the foundation. "He is a wonderful example of someone who displayed moral courage."

While working for Wackenhut, Castillo discovered the international security firm was conducting a massive covert "sting" operation against environmental activist Charles Hamel and others.

No verdict yet in fraud case

PENSACOLA — Jurors completed their seventh day of deliberations without a verdict in the $102 million Topsoil Hill savings and loan fraud trial.

The jury, which has given no indication of its progress, will continue deliberating today.

Eleven defendants from Texas and Florida are accused of inflating loans for the 1986 purchase of 20,800 acres of pristine beaches and forest land at Topsoil Hill in the Florida Panhandle.

The loans never were repaid and contributed to the failures of Hill Financial Savings Association of Red Hill, Pa., and Vision Banc of Kingville, Texas.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Redistricting: Federal suit filed

By GARY ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The U.S. Justice Department has thrown the redistricting battle into more turmoil by filing a federal lawsuit claiming parts of the House and Senate plans violate the Voting Rights Act.

The complaint filed late Tuesday asks a panel of three federal judges to improve black and Hispanic representation in two areas in the House plan — Dade and Escambia counties — and in Dade County in the Senate map.

It goes even further by saying the judges shouldn't allow the fall elections to take place under the current proposed lines.

The challenge comes as the state Supreme Court and the three-judge panel are considering a previous Justice Department objection to the Senate plan over failure to draw minority districts in the Tampa Bay area.

"I know it buttresses the allegations we've made all along that the plans don't conform to the Voting Rights Act," said George Meros, an attorney for Republicans who also have challenged the maps.

The Justice Department has Voting Rights Act approval authority over redistricting maps in only five Florida counties — Hillsborough, Hendry, Monroe, Collier and Hardee. It rejected the Senate map over problems in Hillsborough.

But the only avenue open for the department to challenge other parts of the state was a lawsuit, which is what it filed on Tuesday.

The lawsuit was forehadowed in the previous rejection letter, in which Justice Department attorneys pointed out that black and Hispanic districts could have been drawn in Escambia and Dade counties.

"Allegations have been raised regarding dilution of minority voting strength in an effort to protect Anglo incumbents" the department's letter read.

An aide to Democratic House Speaker T.K. Wetherell, D-Daytona Beach, questioned whether the lawsuit was actually a product of the GOP.

"We have very grave concerns as to whether this complaint was prepared by the Republican National Committee or the U.S. Department of Justice," said Wetherell spokesman Randy Lewis.

Teens teach peers about AIDS risks

Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Youngsters armed with brochures and condoms will visit swimming pools, parks and street corners to talk with other youths about preventing the spread of AIDS.

"We've been trying to get AIDS education to teenagers for a long time. If the kids won't go to us, we're going to the kids," said David Andress, district AIDS program manager with the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

The youths, ages 14 to 20, were recruited and trained by River Region Human Services of Jacksonville.

Ten workers will canvass areas of Jacksonville and one will cover St. Johns County. The cost of the program is $20,000.

The idea, Andress said, is to get the information to teen-agers that acquired immune deficiency syndrome is a preventable disease.

"If someone asks, they'll give a condom to them," he said.

The youths also will be talking to youngsters at summer camps, although they won't be distributing condoms there.

Young people talking to other youths is the best way to get the message out, said Derya Williams, assistant director of River Region.

For instance, she said, inhibitions about handing out condoms is an adult perspective.

"It's a common exchange (among teen-agers) that goes on, anyway," she said.

Latrell Bronson, whose 16-year-old daughter Angel will be part of the effort, approves.

"This is the best thing that ever happened, as far as a summer program for the kids. The kids are really sexually active. I believe with the proper teaching on the use of condoms, it would be best if they are given them," she said.

The young workers also will be giving out free test cards, which encourage their peers to be tested for the virus that causes AIDS.

"If people know, they will change their behavior, either to not get infected or to not infect others," Andress said.

French land in Sanford

The French invaded the Central Florida Regional Airport last Friday. Thirty aviation cadet students were instructed on how U.S. flight students learn safety and flying by F.A.A. designated pilot examiner Tom Savage. Left, Bob Mattingly, assistant director of aviation at the airport. Second from left, Savage said, "Sanford was their only stop here in America, and we were pleased that they selected us as a good training facility."

New tragic problem: Sex abuse afflicting the victims with AIDS

Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — The case of a 9-year-old Jacksonville girl afflicted with AIDS as a result of sexual abuse may be an early instance of a tragic new problem, officials said.

"This is the tip of the iceberg for us," said Ronni Sano, Jacksonville AIDS surveillance program manager for Florida's Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

Jay Whitworth, executive medical director of the Children's Medical Center, agrees.

"I think the realization of child sexual abuse and AIDS has only been there 18 months. I don't think anybody thought about it until now," he said.

When AIDS cases are compiled, there is no category in state or local statistics for "sexual abuse" as a means of transmission. Neither local, state, nor federal agencies have estimates of the number of pediatric AIDS cases from sexual abuse, or when the first such case was reported.

Michael Durfee, a Los Angeles child psychiatrist who helped compile a national tally of sexual abuse AIDS cases for an academic study, said he had found 28 cases in the United States, two of them in Florida, by the end of 1989.

Laura Gutman, associate professor of pediatrics and pharmacology at Duke University, was dealing with 98 pediatric AIDS cases in 1989 when she realized several children did not have the usual medical histories of blood transfusions or mothers with AIDS.

Eventually, Dr. Gutman determined four children were definitely infected through sexual abuse. Another six cases most likely were infected through sexual abuse, but a parent also tested positive for the AIDS-causing virus.

Such is the case with the 9-year-old girl, whose name hasn't been made public because she is the victim of sexual abuse. The girl's mother recently tested positive for the AIDS virus, medical records show.

The Jacksonville girl was not diagnosed until she was 8. She also had a history of venereal diseases and the possibility of several abusers, police and medical records show.

The State Attorney's Office is investigating the Florida HRS for its handling of the case.

Reports show the youngster hadn't been removed from her home even though social workers were aware of a history of sexual abuse and of the youngster's earlier infection with sexually transmitted diseases.

This case and others show the importance of AIDS testing those convicted of sex offenses, said James Valley, who specializes in child sexual abuse cases.

"Their deviant behavior has jeopardized people, and if HIV is involved, it's a life-threatening jeopardy," Valley told The Florida Times-Union in a story published in Tuesday editions.

School board hopefuls to run

Valle sees issues as student would

CASSELBERRY — Rafael Valle may be the youngest person ever to run for the Seminole County school board, but he thinks he has some good ideas and is ready to take up the challenge.

Valle, 19, of Casselberry, has just completed his associates degree at Seminole Community College and intends to begin work on his bachelors degree at the University of Central Florida in August. He is planning to major in political science and pre-law.

"I believe I can make a difference on the school board," Valle said. "I've been through the Seminole County school system and I know what's important to the schools."

He attended school at English Estates, Sterling Park elementary schools, Tuskawilla Middle School and Lake Howell High School.

Valle said that while the trend is toward bringing a business perspective to the school board, his emphasis will be on making sure that students get a good education and that they realize their academic potential.

"Students just aren't aware of what they can do sometimes," Valle said. "That's part of the school board's job to help them realize their potential."

However, Valle said that he has studied the proposed budget draft and feels there is a need to make cuts in the administration of the school district.

"That's what everyone is saying," he said. "But it's true that we can not make any more cuts at the classroom level. The cuts will have to be made at the administrative level."

Valle said he did not get a good education in the Seminole County schools.

"It was very poor in some ways," he said. "I just wasn't allowed to explore my potential."

Valle said that he was not politically active until he enrolled at SCC and became president of the Student Government Association and a Student Orientation Officer.

"It was after that experience that I decided that I had a responsibility to education," he said.

Valle is seeking a seat in District 4, where incumbent Joe Williams is not seeking reelection. He will be running against Bob Goff, Donald McCuish and Dr. Robert Kilcou.

Clarke views job with critical eye

APOPKA — Carol Clarke says that schools don't need more money, they need better management.

Clarke, 44, of Apopka has announced her candidacy for the school board in District 3, where she will oppose incumbent Nancy Warren and Barrie Masters.

Clarke, a cost accountant with the Martin-Marietta Corporation, said she was able to save that company $12 million by helping them institute strict inventory controls. She said she wants to bring that kind of a critical eye to the school district.

"The school district spends more than twice as much educating its students as the private schools," she said, noting that she does not believe that the $5.051 that is spent educating the average student each year is spent in the most effective way possible.

"I want to be able to get into it," she said. "I want to get in there and ask questions and get rid of the dead wood and the fat."

Clarke has lived in Central Florida since she was 10 years old and in Seminole County for 17 years. Her son Jeffrey attended school at Bear Lake Elementary, Teague Middle and Lake Brantley High schools.

While he was growing up, Clarke said she was very involved in his schooling.

"I just completed my degree the same year as he graduated from high school (1986) because I was going through one or two classes at a time," she explained.

Clarke is a widow. Her husband, Dale, died in 1989 after a long illness during which time she ran his construction business and her own accounting business.

She said that she believes that serving on the school board is her responsibility as a Seminole County citizen.

The salary, she said, is not important to her. There has been some talk that the salary for school board members, paid by the state, might be reduced from $22,000 to $8,700 per year.

"That doesn't bother me personally," she said. "For me, this is a community service."

Clarke said she will not serve longer than eight years on the school board if elected.

One of the things in which she believes will help the school district would be the redistricting of Seminole High School in Sanford.

"There's no way around it," she said. "The numbers can't be ignored. There are too many students at some schools and then too few at Seminole."

Summit echos height of irony

Assessing the value of what happened during the 12 days of the so-called Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro is more difficult than deciding whether a glass is half-empty or half-full. It's not a matter of perception or attitude; it's a question of what happens next.

It would be easy, for example, to be cynical and downbeat, as many environmentalists are, about a meeting that led to few binding agreements and wound up pledging twice as much money in foreign aid to the host country as it did to all the rest of the world. But at the same time, there's no denying the conference's success in setting the global environmental agenda for years to come, in delineating more clearly than ever before where the major disagreements lie and in focusing the world's attention on the need to resolve these issues.

Inevitably, the United States occupied center stage — as the world's top consumer of natural resources, the longtime leader in progressive environmental regulations, the deep pocket that much of the Third World hoped to tap for its own economic development and as the whipping post for most everyone's frustrations.

In retrospect, it is ironic that this country was condemned for opposing pledges of funding and emissions reductions at the same time that many of the other industrialized nations that claimed to support these commitments were admitting they had no intention of actually living up to them. And yet, it was the United States that was blamed for hypocrisy.

This country does have a responsibility to exercise leadership in meeting the world's environmental needs — and to do so more vigorously than President Bush's currently confused and divided policies allow. Bush, however, was not wrong to refuse to make open-ended financial commitments to non-industrialized nations in treaties that offer no assurance that the funds will be used to enhance the environment. Nor was he unwise to avoid pledges on global warming that might deepen the recession at home in order to combat a problem that scientists aren't sure even exists.

What is more disturbing is the way that Bush and some other world leaders used their legitimate differences on these issues to widen the gap between themselves, rather than trying to bridge it. Certainly the efforts by some of the president's political advisers to use anti-environmental rhetoric as a domestic campaign tactic aren't helpful.

But Pakistan, speaking for the so-called Group of 77 developing nations, deserves criticism as well for threatening, in effect, to hold the environment hostage, insisting that Third World countries have no responsibility to protect their own natural resources unless the industrialized nations pay them to do so.

Ultimately, the challenge of the Earth Summit applies as much to the environmentalists who organized the event as it does to the nations in attendance. Their work must become more international than ever focusing less on such places as the United States and Western Europe, where the need to address environmental problems is already well recognized, and devoting more attention to the rest of the world, where the real grass roots of the environmental movement are most endangered.

Sen. Lieberman for vice president

The Republicans will run against Gov. Bill Clinton by painting him as "Southern Fried Dukakis."

They will say that Clinton is a standard issue liberal Democrat, like Michael Dukakis, Walter Mondale or George McGovern, or like another Southerner, Jimmy Carter, who was painted as "Southern Fried McGovern."

Is Clinton a liberal? The cards are out. At times, he acts like a tough middle-of-the-road Democrat who recognizes the failures of recent liberalism. On other occasions, he dances to the tune of leftist Democratic special-interest groups.

If the Lefty image prevails, Clinton is a loser, even in a three-way election. The most recent poll (CBS/New York Times) shows only 19 percent of voters identifying as "liberal" — compared to 44 percent "moderate" or 31 percent for "conservative."

What can Clinton do? The most important decision a presidential nominee makes, symbolically and substantively, is his choice of a running mate.

Clinton should select on three criteria. First is competence. Vice President Dan Quayle is doing well, but the perception lingers of a boy sent to do a man's job. Clinton's choice should be of sufficient quality to make Quayle an issue.

Second, the candidate must be seen as "non-liberal." That does not mean "conservative," which would be unrealistic for the current Democratic Party.

Third, the candidate should not hail from the South or the Southwest, and not only because Clinton is from that area. To win, Democrats must show that non-liberalism is a national force in their party, not just a regional oddity.

So who is not Southern, not Southwestern and not liberal? For example, there is Sen. John Glenn of Ohio. But Glenn — my, how time flies! — is now 71 years old. Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey, might qualify, but he has taken himself out of the competition.

Consider Sen. Joseph Lieberman, the only non-liberal on Clinton's reported "short list." He's from Connecticut, a mid-size state (27th largest), one of the most suburbanized in America. This year more than half of the vote will be suburban, and N.Y. Clinton's weakest area.

Lieberman, 50, is quality goods. I remember him when he was little more than a teen-ager, in his hometown of Stamford, giving rousing Democratic speeches in public parks, while the adults said: "Someday, Joe Lieberman is going to be president."

He served as attorney general of Connecticut and majority leader of the state Senate. In 1988, he beat Republican liberal Sen. Lowell Weicker, running to Weicker's right, and capturing the votes of many Republicans and "Reagan Democrats."

Lieberman's record in the Senate has been eclectic. He isn't a knee-jerk anything.

He supported the Gulf War, the death penalty, the Mexican trade treaty, tax incentives for business, product liability reform and reduction of the capital gains tax — not an un-Clintonesque stance. He is strong on defense and tough on crime. He is a vice chairman of the Democratic Leadership Council, the non-liberal voice of the Democratic Party. (So was Clinton.)

On the liberal side, he voted against Clarence Thomas (after originally supporting him), favors labor on strike-breaking, and voted for the 1990 Civil Rights bill, which President Bush described as "a quota bill."

BATTLE OF THE BANDS...

Television and impatience

BOSTON — In the daily scheme of things, I'm pretty good at avoiding commercials. Commercials are the reason I own a remote control. Commercials are the reason I support public television. If God had wanted us to watch commercials, He wouldn't have created the VCR.

So as a devout news junkie, I usually tape the news for the express purpose of zapping the ads. I take a perverse pride in evading the Admeisters.

But frankly, I think this is a mistake. Lately, I have put my Fast-Forward into neutral and found what I was missing: the other side of the story. The real "other" point of view.

When you actually, unhappily, pay attention, it's clear that commercials aren't a break in the news, they're counter-news, an alternative media of their own. Commercials these days, especially the ones targeted for the network news, carry on a running debate with the anchors and with the stories.

In the anchor news this week, Sarajevo is under siege, one ethnic group is bombing and starving another in the heart of Europe. In the ad news, the only worry in postcard pretty Olde World is that someone gave away the secret recipe for MeusliX.

In the anchor news Dan Quayle is preaching about the loss of traditional values. In the ad news, a traditional grandpa drops into the 1990s for a breakfast and discovers that nothing much has changed: "What was great back then is Great Grains now."

In the anchor news, 2,500 unemployed Americans are lining up for one of 350 minimum-wage jobs at a remodeled hotel. In the ad news, five well-dressed Americans with credit cards are getting drenched by interest charges. "It pays to Discover."

Of course, the most blatant of these news-ad debates takes place over the environment. One minute we get information from Rio that the United States is labeled the bad boy and the president called a captive of corporations. The next minute or 15 seconds, we get something close to disinformation from the corporations.

Porpoises, penguins and assorted friends from the deep blue sea are applauding Dupont. A young idealistic man has decided to work for Dow because it "lets you do great things" for the environment. The automobile, arch-enemy of the air, turns "green" before our very eyes as the makers place their JEEP in the pristine countryside. Flash cards around the JEEP read: Running Water Solar Heating.

Even those who regularly stay glued to the tube rarely notice this bizarre contrast. We have become immune to the message of the ad medium and too sophisticated to admit the impact of commercials. I don't think we recognize that there is a debate going on. Nor do we acknowledge the power of the subliminal message.

At its deepest level, the conflict between anchor news and ad news is not just about issues, but about attitudes. It's a face-off between complexity and simplicity. What the journalists increasingly say in stories is that our problems are complicated, their origins are murky, the solutions elusive.

They tell us that the latest truce in Sarajevo probably won't last. The Greenhouse Effect is part of an interlocking directorate of woes. And when a PLO member is assassinated, even Peter Jennings throw up his hands: "Many people are blaming many other people for his death."

The ad world, on the other hand, says that for every problem you see there is a fix and it's quick. Its woes are, by and large, freezer burn, static cling, hemorrhoids, diarrhea, slipping dentures, and morning breath. All thoroughly curable by the end of the spot.

Putting aside hemorrhoids, and the possibility that you might get stuck on a Carnival Cruise ship with the hyperactive hostess, it's much easier to live in the ad world than the anchor world. The ad news offers the seductive possibility that there is a Fixodent right around the corner for every loose denture. It emphasizes the gap between personal woes which we can control and world worries so immense that it's easier to focus on foot fungus.

I won't blame advertising alone for our passion for simple, immediate solutions. It comes naturally. Only on the news shows does this point-counterpoint between simplicity and complexity stand out in such a stark, often ludicrous form.

But when you consider our current impatience, our longing for any answer and our discomfort with the ambiguous and the uncertain, pause for a word or two from our sponsors. We are being trained and reinforced in impatience. Day by day. One 15-second lesson at a time.

Commercials aren't a break in the news, they're counter-news.

Women give notice to male Congress

WASHINGTON — A sequel to the smash comedy film "Tootsie" — the story of a down on his luck actor who masquerades as a woman to win a big job — could be in the making with a Washington twist: An incumbent congressman — in deep political trouble with voters and fighting desperately to keep his job — takes to dressing in drag. Far-fetched?

Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., told us that the sentiment, if not the script, is very real in an election year in which women are wooing large numbers of voters bent on busting the male bastion that is the U.S. Congress.

"I literally had one male colleague in the House say to me that this was the first time in his life he wished he were a woman," Schroeder recalls. "It was very funny and it was said very sincerely."

Schroeder is one of many politicians predicting that what has been hailed as the Year of the Woman will usher in a bumper crop of new faces, new attitudes and new agendas. If more women are elected, she says, there could be a veritable coup that changes everything — from bathrooms to the smoke-filled backrooms. Currently, the one bathroom near the House floor is a male bathroom, but the females have a long trek to reach one. The same applies on the Senate side.

"They (male House members) should enjoy it now because we're going to take it next year. (Those) guys get to walk," Schroeder says.

Most of the changes Schroeder foresees are of a more substantive nature, such as a heavy focus on quality of life, health and family issues. No more "jockocracy," says Schroeder, who adds, "you have to read the sports pages or you can't talk to them (male colleagues)."

Some 28 states have no women in Congress, including Texas and Pennsylvania. Now there are only two women senators (one Democrat and one Republican) and 28 congresswomen (19 Democrats and nine Republicans).

But times are changing rapidly. In the recent California primary, 19 women won their races for the House this fall. There are 17 female Senate candidates running nationwide, and 141 women running for House seats.

Theories abound that attempt to explain the female insurgency that is taking place across the country. But the Clarence Thomas hearings last fall, which showcased the all-male Senate appearing to bully Anita Hill, was a spectacle many women found inciting.

Already, at least one incumbent senator, Alan Dixon, D-Ill., was defeated by the underfunded Carol Moseley Braun because of his vote confirming Thomas as a Supreme Court justice.

Nothing illustrates the uphill climb for women better than the behind-the-scenes story of Life magazine's June cover story titled, "If Women Ran America." Life asked 98 women and two men to assemble on the Capitol steps to show what the Senate would look like if its male/female proportions were reversed. By imposing a rigorous appearance test upon the women who posed, Life seemed to make a point inadvertently about stereotyping. Several women were pulled, according to participants we interviewed, because they looked too young or because of their hair style or dress. One woman had to hide behind others in the photo because she was wearing pants.

A spokeswoman for the magazine told our associate Ed Henry that "we were looking for women that looked the part of a senator."

The Year of the Woman will usher in a bumper crop of new faces.

Both the existing and the new kart courses will include shaded observation decks.

Levy said that a "Kart Control" system which helps keep the go-karts on course will be installed in the new courses to give added safety to the ride.

An air cannon shooting gallery is being constructed in the new portion of the park as well.

The midway is being expanded to include a "Goblet Toss" and more midway games. There will be awnings installed in the midway area to offer sun and weather protection.

For those who want to make a day-long adventure of their visit to Fun World, there will be a 2,500 square-foot covered patio with a barbecue pit for outside dining. The facility will be available to be rented for large group parties as well.

Levy added that the whole park will be getting brighter with more bright paint and neon.

There are no plans to change the hours of operation during the construction of the new phase of the park. They will remain open on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays from 10 a.m. to midnight. The adjoining Plea World market is open those days from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

walking with picket signs at over 20 yard facilities on our system and those pickets are being honored by other organizations." He added, "They have effectively shut CSX Transportation operations down."

Tri-Rail, the Fort Lauderdale-based commuter line serving South Florida from West Palm Beach to Miami, shut down today because its trains are dispatched by CSX.

In place of trains, the 67-mile line ran four express buses linking its major cities for commuters who had no alternative to mass transit. But the bulk of the system's 9,000 riders were left to fend for themselves.

CSX offered dispatch service through 8 a.m., but "rather than start our service and leave people stranded in different places, we were best off to cancel our service today," said Tri-Rail spokeswoman Gloria Jacaruso.

There were no pickets outside CSX headquarters in downtown Jacksonville this morning, unlike during the most recent rail strike.

The railroad, which employs 1500 IAM members, is one of the nation's largest with routes in 20 states, Washington D.C., and Ontario, Canada, Westbrook said.

"Our company is the nation's largest hauler of coal," the spokesman said, adding that the railroad also transports automotive parts and finished cars, chemicals, minerals, food and consumer goods, agricultural and forest products, metals, phosphates and fertilizers.

Senators squabble over budget, debate on new taxes called off

By BILL BURGESS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — After a three-hour squabble, state senators called off debate on $244 million in new taxes a committee approved.

"I don't believe that the votes are there on the floor of the Florida Senate to pass that tax package, and we will be very lucky if they're on the floor tomorrow morning," Sen. George Kirkpatrick, D-Gainesville, said Tuesday night.

The lawmakers were debating spending and tax packages sent them by the Senate Appropriations Committee, in addition to $244 million in new taxes, more money from trust funds, university tuition increases and matching federal dollars would bring added spending to $433.8 million.

Even Minority Leader Ander Crenshaw, R-Jacksonville, who voted no in the committee, called the increase "a modest amount of money. I think it's a reasonable compromise in terms of trying to find a solution."

After an hour's debate, Republicans called for a recess, seething over Democrats' moves to force separate recorded votes on adding more money for things like immunizing children and services for the elderly.

The vote was 20-13 against adding $1 million for community care and meals for the elderly, 22-11 against adding $14 million for health services including immunizing children, 21-11 against adding $6 million for cardiac care and medical services for abused and neglected children, and 19-12 against adding $2.7 million for services including homeless programs.

Sen. Fred Dudley, R-Port Myer, objected that Republicans and others voted no because they didn't know where the money would come from, not because they opposed the worthy goals.

"If they're going to jerk us around like this, we ought to walk on the floor and go home," Sen. Robert Johnson, R-Sarasota, said in a GOP huddle in one of Margolis' conference rooms.

The Senate reconvened, set aside the budget bill, briefly debated a tax bill intended to pay for the added spending (CS 88 325H), and recessed.

"One thing I can do is count," Kirkpatrick said. "If there's anybody left in the state of Florida that thinks that there's the votes in here to do some of these things that people are suggesting that we ought to do, then they need to give me a sheet and show me where they are."

He referred to Gov. Lawton Chiles' promised veto of a $30.65 billion no-new-tax budget. Chiles wants lawmakers to adopt a $1.35 billion tax package to put more money into schools, social services, corrections and the environment.

Some senators said Chiles' choice is likely to be the $433.8 million or a smaller amount, maybe even the no-new-tax plan.

The Senate won't go along if the House adds more spending. And $433.8 million is too high to get a two-thirds Senate majority for an override if Chiles vetoes that bill, members said.

"This is a one-time issue. It's like lightning, it strikes once and then it's gone," Johnson said. "If this goes up any higher you're going to find all of us basically off the train."

"I would just hope that people would understand that this is not the beginning, that this is the end," Crenshaw said.

The Appropriations panel voted 20-5 for the supplemental budget (SB 268H), with five Republicans — Crenshaw, Dudley, William Bankhead of Jacksonville, Vincent Bruner of Fort Walton Beach and Lincoln Diaz-Balart of Miami — voting no.

The major tax increases would be $134 million from a one-half mill boost in the intangibles tax, $67.9 million from a one-cent tax on commercial telephone and electric bills, and $44 million from a boost in corporate filing fees.

In addition, the bill would raise about $28 million through stepped-up tax collection, and pull in $68 million to $70 million in federal matching funds by putting more state dollars into things like social services, Johnson said.

He said the measure would bring per-pupil spending on education within $20 of last year's levels.

University system Chancellor Charles Reed said undergraduate tuitions would go up 15 percent and graduate tuitions 25 percent. That would make Florida 38th in the nation in tuition levels instead of 44th, he said.

The university system would get $92 million more under the proposal, Reed said.

Chiles

dilemma before next Wednesday, Chiles could declare an emergency in the absence of a budget and continue whatever state services he considers essential. He plans to sort through recommendations from various state agencies later this week before announcing specific cutbacks.

According to the agency plans, non-essentials include drivers' license renewals, utility rate hearings and supermarket meat inspections, in addition to the lottery and state parks.

Of 17 agencies that spend tax dollars, only two said that for the good of the state they are expendable and could suspend all operations. Three others said they could not spare any workers.

The Florida Department of Law Enforcement, Parole

Commission and Department of Education said they needed everybody; the Department of Professional Regulation and Public Service Commission said they could shut down.

Several agencies said they would pare back to just picking up the mail and guarding their offices against vandalism. A few said they would run at almost normal levels.

Commercial TV in school ruled violation of the law

Associated Press

TRENTON, N.J. — The contract for putting commercials in classrooms through the controversial television service Channel One violates state law, an administrative law judge has reportedly ruled.

Channel One, which carries commercials along with its news programming, "is inappropriate fare in home room or any other school day period," wrote Judge Bruce R. Campbell in Tuesday's decision, a New Jersey Education Association statement said.

Campbell found the contract with Whittle Communications and Trenton schools violates New Jersey's compulsory attendance law and the state's constitutional mandate for a "thorough and efficient system of free public schools," the teachers union said.

"An arrangement that takes more than a school day of instructional time from children for commercial purposes is not efficient," Campbell wrote.

The state education department could not immediately confirm the union's statement this morning, saying the administrative judge released the decision only to the parties involved.

The Commissioner of Education has 45 days to adopt, modify or reject an administrative law judge's recommendation, or it becomes final. The NJEA says if the recommendation does become final, the Trenton Board of Education would have to terminate its contract with Whittle Communications.

Petitioners included the NJEA and Abdul-Malik Ali, who has children in the Trenton public school system. The hearing was conducted for the state's Department of Education.

Channel One has been criticized by some educators and parents who say commercial advertisements which form part of the brief daily cable newscast are inappropriate for a classroom. Whittle Communications provides television equipment to participating schools in exchange for their agreeing to have pupils watch the show.

A similar legal dispute is under way in California. Earlier this month, a Superior Court judge in San Jose, Calif., set a trial date for Sept. 2 for the school district there to prove that it can't provide comparable current events any other way than through use of Channel One.

John McDermott, Whittle's attorney, said at that time that the program would go out of existence without the lucrative advertising for such things as candy bars and cars.

U.S. high court upholds ban on prayer in schools

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court today reaffirmed its 30-year ban on officially sponsored worship in public schools by prohibiting prayers at graduation ceremonies.

The court refused to use a school-prayer dispute from Rhode Island to fashion a new interpretation of the Constitution's ban on "an establishment of religion."

"No holding by this court suggests that a school can persuade or compel a student to participate in a religious exercise," Justice Anthony M. Kennedy wrote for the court. "This is being done here, and it is forbidden by the (Constitution)."

Kennedy was joined by Justices Harry A. Blackmun, John Paul Stevens, Sandra Day

O'Connor and David H. Souter. Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Byron R. White, Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas dissented.

The high court since 1962 has banned organized prayer sessions in public schools. And since 1971, when it decided a case called Lemon vs. Kurtzman, it has required courts to use a three-part test in judging church-state cases.

The test says a law or a government practice is invalid if it does not have a secular purpose, if it primarily promotes religion or fosters excessive entanglement with religion.

The Bush administration had urged the court to scrap the so-called Lemon test and replace it with a "coercion" test.

The court's slim 5-4 majority rejected the administration's attempt.

Labor Party in Israel stuns Conservatives in historic vote

By KAREN LAMB
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM — After scoring a stunning election victory over conservative Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, Yitzhak Rabin pledged today that his Labor party will push for peace with the Arabs.

"The first stage has begun, the first stage of a new hope," a flustered Rabin, 70, said as hundreds of frenzied supporters at Labor headquarters in Tel Aviv chanted "Rabin, king of Israel."

Shamir, 76, did not outright concede defeat but suggested his political career is nearing its end. Rabin, who led Israel's capture of the West Bank and Gaza Strip 25 years ago, has promised the Palestinians in the occupied lands autonomy within nine months.

He has also vowed to halt settlements and use the funds to find jobs for a wave of unemployed ex-Soviet immigrants.

The freeze may prompt the Bush administration, which had no immediate reaction to the election results but had grown frustrated with Shamir's lack of flexibility, to drop its objection to $10 billion in loan guarantees to Israel.

The moves would likely speed up U.S.-brokered Middle East peace talks. Rabin has, however, pledged to make no concessions on Jerusalem or permit Palestinian statehood — a position consistent with that of Shamir.

With all but soldiers' ballots counted, TV and radio stations projected 48 seats for Labor — a gain of six, 12 for its liberal allies in the left-wing Meretz bloc, and 32 for Shamir's Likud in the 120-member Parliament.

With Arab parties expected to take five seats, there seemed no way Shamir, whose party lost eight seats, could stay in power.

Rabin will have to negotiate a coalition pact with Meretz and at least one other party to secure the premiership. Labor has said it would not include the Arab lawmakers in a coalition, meaning it would likely court a religious party.

Far-right parties won nine seats and religious parties 16. Labor took 34.9 percent of the vote, Likud 24.9 percent and Meretz 9.3 percent, results showed with 100 percent of precincts reporting but soldiers' votes still being tabulated. Rabin was to meet with Labor colleagues today to map strategy for coalition negotiations. Formally, he has to wait for a nod from President Chaim Herzog.

Tuesday night's drama began with Israel TV's exit poll projecting an upset. The nation watched live broadcasts of Labor headquarters erupting in cheers and song, and a grim-faced Shamir getting the bad news.

Shamir did not formally concede. But hours after the polls closed, his voice a hoarse whisper, he hinted he would soon step down a leader of Likud.

"I've said this many times — that I'm at the end of my road," Shamir said. "Even if we had won, you wouldn't have seen me for a long time."

The result portrayed an Israel still deeply divided on the future of the occupied territories, but more ready for Labor's pragmatic approach than Shamir's ideological attachment to the occupied land.

Labor got a big boost from among the nearly 300,000 immigrants from the former Soviet Union, half of whom backed Rabin. Some 40 percent of the immigrants are unemployed and the stagnant state of Israel's economy, compounded by the uncertain security situation, was a help.

About 77.5 percent of Israel's 3.4 million eligible voters, or 2.65 million, participated in the balloting, down from 79 percent in 1988.

Labor and Meretz leaders said the vote was a clear "yes" to the peace process. "It means we are entering a new era of relations with our neighbors ... with the United States and Europe," said Meretz leader Shulamit Aloni.

Some hard-liners said Labor could not carry out major concessions without Likud's backing. "It won't work. There would be a tremendous outcry. Without Likud, he couldn't do it," said Israel Harel, a pioneer of settlements in the West Bank.

Samuel Lewis, a former U.S. ambassador to Israel, said he believed the Americans had hoped for a Rabin victory, based on their previous experience with him as Israeli ambassador to Washington and defense minister.

U.S. may have known POWs alive

By JOHN BOLANDER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A former Pentagon intelligence chief says the United States had "irrefutable" evidence that American prisoners were being held in Vietnam long after the war ended in 1975.

Despite the information, the government declared all missing servicemen dead in the late 1970s because "it was the humane way of bringing the issue to a close," retired Air Force Gen. Eugene Tighe said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"I think they just disregarded the evidence because they knew there was no way they were going to be able to prove it and we weren't about to undertake hostile activities against Vietnam," Tighe said.

The Pentagon says it has no conclusive evidence of POWs being alive after 1975.

Tighe headed the Defense Intelligence Agency from 1976 to 1981 and in 1986 conducted a classified Pentagon study that concluded the U.S. government had reliable evidence of Americans being held in Southeast Asia long after the government declared they had all returned in 1975.

"We concluded while there was no coverup evident in government on the issue, that there was still a strong possibility that there were live Americans held against their will," Tighe said. He would not be any more specific.

Capt. Susan Strednansky, a Pentagon spokeswoman, said Tuesday that Tighe was "entitled to his own opinions" but insisted that his 1986 report "does not contain conclusive proof that American POWs were held in captivity beyond 1975."

Tighe, who retired more than a decade ago, is scheduled to tell his story today to the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIAA. The committee released classified documents Tuesday indicating some 185 POWs from the Korean War, previously presumed dead, had been interrogated by the Soviets and possibly taken to China.

Tighe, in an interview last month, said the most convincing evidence concerning live, Vietnam-era POWs that the DIA collected during his tenure came from witnesses, including a flood of reports from Laotian refugees who fled to the United States.

Many of the live sightings, along with some technical evidence gathered by satellite photography and other means, were deemed "irrefutable" under the rules of evidence used by the American intelligence community, he said.

"By that I mean we could not break the stories of individuals who claimed to have seen Americans of a significant number having been given lie detector tests and quite a number of other measures," Tighe explained.

"Although there were always doubters ... what we had for the most part was human intelligence sifted out of thousands of reports, which was considered very, very good human intelligence," he said.

Asked whether he believed there could still be live POWs, Tighe said he had not been privy to intelligence reports for some time.

Tighe's comments are part of a growing body of evidence that U.S. prisoners may have been left alive after the war despite the Nixon administration's insistence all were returned in 1975 and the Carter administration's decision to declare all 2,200 unaccounted servicemen as dead in the late 1970s.

Last week, Russian President Boris Yeltsin said he believed POWs from the Vietnam War had been brought to the Soviet Union and that some could be alive. No evidence has emerged from Russia since his comments.

The Senate committee has been collecting evidence from dozens of witnesses, including intelligence officers who suggest that some of the American POWs listed as being alive during the war were inexplicably not included on the lists when prisoners were returned in the 1975 exchange with Vietnam.

Mayors call for more federal aid

HOUSTON — The nation's mayors are concluding their annual meeting with calls for urban enterprise zones and as much new federal aid to American cities as the government sends overseas.

After an election-year session dominated by presidential politics, the U.S. Conference of Mayors today was considering dozens of policy resolutions including a bipartisan call for record levels of federal urban aid.

All were approved earlier by a key committee of Republican and Democratic mayors. But the panel was unable to agree on competing policy statements for and against a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution, and mayors said they would likely leave that policy unresolved.

Angered that urban issues may be forced to take a back seat in Congress even after the fresh attention cast by the Los Angeles riots, the mayors targeted President Bush's proposal for $12 billion in aid to the former Soviet republics.

Gotti gets life, says fight isn't over

NEW YORK — Prosecutors got John Gotti off the streets for what a judge says is the rest of his life, but the Dapper Don assured his co-defendant, "We have just begun to fight."

Neither Gotti, 51, nor lawyers for either side spoke at Tuesday's hearing before U.S. District Judge I. Leo Glasser sentenced the boss of the Gambino crime family to life in prison without parole and fined him $250,000.

Outside, a mob of Gotti supporters tried to storm the Brooklyn courthouse, overturned a car and smashed windows of a half-dozen other vehicles. Nearly 1,000 supporters brought in on chartered buses shouted, "Free John!"

Eight police officers and several protesters were injured. Seven people were arrested.

Before the sentencing, the judge rejected a request for a new trial.

Gotti's lawyer, Albert J. Krieger, said that after the sentencing, Gotti told co-defendant Frank "Frankie Locs" Locascio, who received the same sentence, "We have just begun to fight."

Hospitals stuck with unwanted babies

WASHINGTON — Public hospitals are boarding thousands of unwanted babies each year at a cost of tens of millions of dollars to the nation's health care system, a children's advocacy group says.

A survey of 72 hospitals in 12 urban areas this spring found more than 800 babies are left in hospitals monthly. Although many have disabilities or health problems, the infants don't need the constant medical attention of a hospital.

The survey was conducted by the Child Welfare League of America in conjunction with the National Association of Public Hospitals because no national statistics were available on the growing problem of boarder babies.

The study, released Tuesday, found that 85 percent of the babies were prenatally exposed to alcohol, cocaine or other dangerous drugs and a few were infected with the AIDS virus. Some had been in the hospitals more than three months.

Weinberger plea bargain confirmed

WASHINGTON — The chief Iran-Contra prosecutor says former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger would not have been required to implicate higher officials in order to obtain a plea bargain before he was indicted on five felony counts.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole and others have said that former President Reagan was the true target of independent counsel Lawrence Walsh's

Walsh, confirming on ABC-TV's "Nightline" program that he had offered to let Weinberger plead guilty to a single misdemeanor charge, said he simply sought "truthful cooperation" from Weinberger in exchange for the deal, "same as we've had from other people who pleaded guilty."

Judge: No chest hair protection

Associated Press

MONTEGOMERY, Ala. — A federal judge has ruled against a hiremate former firefighter who objected when he was ordered to trim chest hair that protruded from his collar.

U.S. District Judge Robert Varner said the Fire Department did not violate Matthew Stalter's constitutional rights by ordering him to cut his chest hair at the neckline or wear a T-shirt.

Varner ruled Monday that Stalter failed to prove the issue was a matter of public concern, which would merit First Amendment protection.

Stalter had filed a lawsuit claiming the Fire Department violated his First Amendment right of freedom of expression by assigning him to 25 consecutive night watches after he filed a grievance over the chest hair order.

When he refused to accept the night watches, he was suspended for 29 days without pay, the lawsuit said.

Force considered to aid Bosnians

By BARRY DEWITT
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — The language was strong. The diplomatic nuances almost unambiguous. James A. Baker III, the cautious U.S. secretary of state, left little doubt that force was being considered to get food and medicine to the shelling victims in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Baker's appearance Tuesday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee ostensibly was to kick off the Bush administration's campaign for ratification of the START missile-reduction treaty. But it turned into an exposition of U.S. policy on Yugoslavia, with senators even more determined than Baker to resort to force if all other options fail.

"I need not tell you Mr. Secretary ... the ability to provide humanitarian assistance seems almost directly conditioned upon the ability to have the force sufficient to insist that it be able to be delivered," said Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del.

He found Baker in instant agreement. "I don't disagree with that," the secretary said, "and more and more, that's looking like it is absolutely true."

Baker never quite came out and said the United States would join with other members of the U.N. Security Council in using force, or the threat of force, to break the blockade at Sarajevo airport in Bosnia and get the supplies through. And he said President Bush had not made a decision.

But his answer to Biden and others indicated there was an active behind-the-scenes diplomatic campaign under way at the United Nations to do just that.

Baker made sure the senators understood, though, that if force was used it only would be to get the aid to the people. He pointed out the potential pitfalls of deeper involvement.

"The Germans, as you know, had large forces in Yugoslavia for a long time during World War II and leading up to it," Baker said. "And it's very rugged country and it's very difficult, and when people talk about quagmires they have very good reason, in my view, to look at this as a possibility."

While announcing stepped-up diplomatic and political pressure on the Serbian-dominated government in Belgrade, Baker said American military planners were holding "intensive consultations" with other governments on the Security Council on ways to alleviate the suffering.

"We have not ruled out — we haven't ruled it in but we have not ruled out — participating in some multilateral operation, if that should become necessary," Baker told the committee.

He stressed that in contrast to the bombing and invasion of Iraq in Operation Desert Storm to liberate Kuwait, any force in what was once Yugoslavia would be confined to opening Sarajevo airport and other measures to deliver food and supplies to trapped civilians.

Even so, Baker's statement represented a tougher administration line on what he again referred to as "a humanitarian nightmare." Asked by Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., if collective force might be necessary to ease the suffering, he replied:

"I think as this nightmare drags on, the willingness of countries around the world to see it happen or stand by as it does happen is going to diminish and diminish and diminish...."

"And I think it is an absolute outrage and it is barbarism at its worst extreme," Baker said of attacks by Serbian militia on Sarajevo.

Baker said the United States no longer would accept diplomats from Belgrade as representing a legal government, would close the consulate in Chicago and require the rump federation of Serbia and Montenegro, which is all that remains of Yugoslavia, to reapply as new nations to the United Nations and other world groups.

At the Pentagon, spokesman Pete Williams said the Defense Department was making preparations in the event the United Nations sought U.S. help in Yugoslavia.

Scientists look for super steel, cross swords with past

By MICHELLE LOCKE
Associated Press Writer

LIVERMORE, Calif. — Scientists looking for a better metal believe they have may have unearthed something much more romantic: Damascus steel, the stuff of which the Saracens' long, curved blades of death were made.

"How lucky can you be?" inventor Oleg Sherby said of the double-edged discovery.

The steel formulated by Sherby and colleague Jeffrey Wadsworth can be stretched 11 times its length. Regular steel stretches only about twice its length without breaking, Sherby said.

The industrial applications of Sherby's steel are being researched at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory by a consortium that includes North Star Steel Co., Caterpillar Inc. and the U.S. Energy Department.

But the possible link to the blades that once flashed beneath the Syrian sun during the Crusades is being debated in entirely different circles — the small community of Damascus steel enthusiasts.

Sherby and Wadsworth, material-science engineers at Stanford University, believe they have discovered the legendary metal said to be sharp enough to slice a feather in midair.

But another team, Florida blacksmith Al Pendray and Iowa

State University metallurgist John Verhooven, believe they have the true secret. They have worked for several years on their formula, favoring more traditional smithy methods.

"We've got a little bit of a disagreement," Pendray said. "The lure of Damascus steel is the challenge of trying to unravel the myth and mystery that have baffled metallurgists for centuries.

Slezak wins Day Emmy; Lucci steals the scene

By BAMA KENNEDY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Susan Lucci wept tears of gratitude and got a standing ovation at the Daytime Emmys. The only thing missing was the award.

Erika Slezak, who plays the good-hearted heroine Victoria Buchanan on ABC's "One Life to Live," won for best actress for a third time.

Lucci, who plays cunning, tough-as-nails Erica Kane on ABC's "All My Children," lost again, and has never won despite 13 nominations.

Had this been a soap opera, there might have been a real cat fight Tuesday night during the NBC broadcast of the 19th Annual Daytime Emmy Awards.

But Lucci, serving as a host of the awards show, merely wept — and stole the scene anyway.

"Thank you, thank you," she told the crowd of 1,500 who had opened rosy for her. "I couldn't begin to tell you how much that meant to me."

Lucci's series, "All My Children," won its first best-drama Emmy.

"I think Erika is a wonderful actress," Lucci gushed backstage. "I vote for her every year. I really do."

Slezak said she was proud to have been with "One Life to Live" for more than two decades. "I don't really know of another actress who's had that kind of opportunity ... to act, as I have, for 21 years, almost every day," she said.

Peter Bergman, who plays Jack Abbott on CBS' "The Young and the Restless," received his second consecutive Emmy for best actor.

Oprah Winfrey won her third Emmy as talk show host. Her syndicated program also was honored as best talk show. Winfrey said backstage that she and her boyfriend, Stedman Graham, were celebrating their sixth anniversary that evening.

Asked how they planned to celebrate, Winfrey whooped, "Party!" and twirled around with her Emmy.

The award for best supporting actress went to Maevie Kinkead, who plays Vanessa Chamberlain on CBS' "Guiding Light." Thom Christopher, who plays Carlo Hesser on "One Life to Live," won the Emmy for supporting actor.

"I've kind of squelched any critics who say that daytime is about people with hair only," said Christopher, chuckling and patting his bald pate.

Airlines settle ticket-price suit

By BAMA KENNEDY
AP Business Writer

ATLANTA — The settlement by four major airlines of a price-fixing suit may be just the beginning of a long wait for ticket buyers eligible for discounts.

"If there's no appeal, we expect we'll have it wrapped up by mid-'93," said attorney Pitts Carr, who represented the plaintiffs in the class-action case.

Still ahead before any discount coupons are handed out are a review by U.S. District Judge Marvin Shoob in Atlanta, the laborious process of identifying who is eligible, and a lot of paperwork.

Delta, American, United and USAir agreed to pay a combined $44 million in cash and issue $388.5 million in coupons to consumers allegedly hurt by price-fixing over the past 4½ years. The airlines denied any wrongdoing.

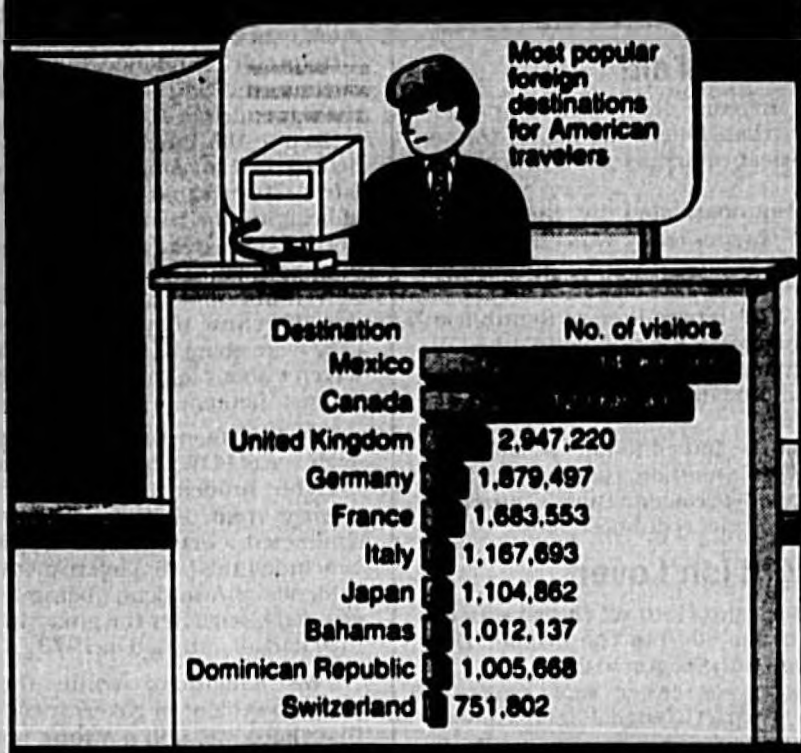

Earlier, Trans World Airlines and Northwest separately settled charges that they used an industry computer network to fix ticket prices.

Under the settlement, ticket purchasers would receive coupons for 10 percent discounts on future travel if they bought tickets between Jan. 1, 1988 and June 30, 1992. Travelers also must have passed through one of 34 specific airports.

Some analysts said that the discounts in the settlement are no better than those routinely offered by airlines and that the paperwork involved may make it not worth the trouble for many travelers.

Carr said a committee representing the airlines and the plaintiffs will be formed to review applications for the dis-

Going abroad

When Americans traveled abroad in 1991 they picked the nations closest to home, Mexico and Canada, as their first choices. Nearly 28 million Americans visited these countries last year. England was the third most popular choice.

Many of the ticket buyers involved are business travelers, who are likely to have records and receipts. Individuals also will be eligible, and they should be prepared to say when and where they flew if they don't have receipts, Carr said.

Eligible travelers will be able to use the coupons to get 10 percent off on the price of most domestic round-trip tickets, or 20 percent off on round trips that cost less than $100. But few tickets will get the 20 percent discount because few, if any, tickets are that cheap.

The discount coupons will apply to any published fare offered by the airlines, though the certificates may not be used in conjunction with other bonuses, such as frequent flier awards.

The case against the airlines grew from a series of lawsuits filed by business travelers across the country. Shoob combined the lawsuits last year into a class-action involving more than 12.5 million people.

Female officer goes public on assault at convention

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A female naval officer, frustrated that the Navy has been unable to bring her assailants to justice.

The helicopter pilot now assigned to a squadron in Norfolk, Va., said she also hoped the publicity will help change the attitude of Navy men toward their female colleagues.

"It was the most frightened I've ever been in my life," Lt. Paula Coughlin, 30, was quoted as saying in today's editions of The Washington Post. "I thought, I have no control over these guys. I'm going to be gang-raped."

The incident occurred last September at the annual convention of the Tailhook Association, a support group for Navy and marine aviators. Details of the molestation of Coughlin and of dozens of other women had been reported previously, but the Navy had withheld their identities.

Coughlin said she decided to speak Tuesday to the Post and ABC-TV — which planned to air an interview Wednesday — out of frustration that the Navy has been unable to bring her assailants to justice.

The helicopter pilot now assigned to a squadron in Norfolk, Va., said she also hoped the publicity will help change the attitude of Navy men toward their female colleagues.

"I'm coming forward, and I'm putting a name and face to this,"

she told the Post.

In the newspaper, she told of being grabbed from behind, propelled down a hotel hallway and repeatedly pawed and molested to jeers.

She said one man grabbed her breasts and another tried to remove her panties. She bit one man on the forearm and then bolted for an open door, but her way was barred by two officers, she said.

"I've been in the Navy almost eight years and I've worked ... to be one of the guys, to be the best naval officer I can and prove that women can do whatever the job calls for," said Coughlin. "And what I got, I was treated like trash. I wasn't one of them."

NBA Draft Party tonight

ORLANDO — The Orlando Magic are celebrating the 1992 NBA Draft by holding their 4th Annual Draft Party tonight at the Orlando Arena. The festivities begin at 7 p.m. and will include two basketball shooting stations, performances by The Dannon Magic Girl Dancers, a ball handling demonstration by Curly Neal and many other fun and entertaining activities. This year's draft promises to be one of the most exciting ever, with Orlando having the No. 1 pick.

Magic set to take O'Neal

ORLANDO — The first round of the NBA draft offers the Orlando Magic a reprieve for past mistakes.

Criticized for building with experienced but average players with limited potential for improvement, the third-year club will launch a new era tonight with the selection of Shaquille O'Neal.

O'Neal, who averaged 24.1 points and 14 rebounds per game at LSU last season, reportedly will seek a contract worth at least $5 million per season.

Orlando won 21 games, 10 fewer than the year before, and has drawn criticism for putting together a team that relied too heavily on average players like Scott Skiles, Greg Kite, Jeff Turner and Terry Catledge.

The focus will change with the addition of O'Neal, who along with first-round draft picks Nick Anderson (1989), Dennis Scott (1990) and Brian Williams (1991) will form the nucleus of a young team that will be expected to challenge for a playoff berth soon.

McCarty lifts SunRays

ORLANDO — David McCarty hit a double in the first inning to score two runs, leading Orlando to a 2-1 Southern League victory over Memphis Tuesday.

McCarty's double scored Rex De La Nuez and Ray Ortiz.

Phil Hiatt's solo home run in the fifth scored the Chicks' only run of the game.

Jon Henry (3-4) earned the win for the SunRays by pitching six innings of four-hit ball.

Steve Curry (2-7) recorded the loss after six innings. He gave up four hits and two runs.

JU inks first Floridian

JACKSONVILLE — Artemus McClary, a 6-4 swingman from Rutherford High School in Panama City, has signed a grant-in-aid with Jacksonville University, the school said Tuesday.

McClary averaged 25 points and 12 rebounds last season and was his school's all-time leading scorer.

The Dolphins have signed six prospects since November, but McClary is the lone Florida prep player in the group.

Suns nip Huntsville

JACKSONVILLE — Brian Turang hit a homer in the sixth to give Jacksonville the lead for good in its 4-2 Southern League victory over Huntsville Tuesday.

A leadoff homer by Mike McDonald in the fifth inning tied the game at 1-1 and the Suns scored again that inning on singles by Anthony Manahan and Tow Maynard, plus a fielder's choice.

Dean Borrelli led the eighth off reliever Brad Holman with a double and scored the Stars' second run.

With the tying run on base, reliever Troy Kent retired the side and pitched a shutout in the ninth for his 13th save.

Jeff Boraski got his first win against two losses. The loss went to Stars starter Steve Phoenix (4-3).

Sanford Babe Ruth Prep All-Stars open play Thursday

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — How good is Sanford's newest baseball all-star team? We'll find out in a hurry.

On Thursday afternoon at 1 p.m., the Sanford Babe Ruth Prep All-Stars will take to the field at Conrad Park against the host team from DeLand in the Florida Babe Ruth District Two Tournament in hopes of securing a spot in the Babe Ruth State Tournament in Tallahassee next month.

The Prep division is for 13-year-olds only and was created to give the younger players a chance to get some all-star experience and also to reward them for a good first season in the Babe Ruth League.

Generally, most Babe Ruth All-star teams are made up of 14 and 15 year olds from their leagues, leaving the 13-year-olds out in the cold.

The Sanford-DeLand matchup will follow the opening game of the tournament that will pit Longwood against Fingler (from Palm Coast). That game is set for 10 a.m., also at Conrad Park.

The losers of Thursday's games will play at 10 a.m. Friday with the winners meeting at 3 p.m. Both games will be held at the DeLand High School baseball field.

Saturday, at 3 p.m. at DeLand High School, the two teams left with only one loss will meet, with the winner advancing to the finals, which are set for 4 p.m. Sunday at Conrad Park. If the loser of Sunday's game is that team's first loss the two teams will meet again Monday at either 5 or 8 p.m. at a field to be announced for the right to represent District II in the state tournament.

On paper the Sanford team would appear to be strong with four members off the Babe Ruth City Champions Knights of Columbus Cardinals team and several players who did well for the Sanford Little Major All-Stars last year.

But head coach Robert Smith is a little concerned with the unknowns.

"These kids have never played a game together and you never know how they will react to game pressure until you get them on the field," said Smith, who was an assistant for the Cardinals this year. "We've had several good practices and the team is working hard, but you never know what to expect from the other teams in the tournament."

After John Viggiani (pitching) was ejected in the seventh inning, other members of the Ameribuilt Construction team walked off the field, forfeiting the game (and the Tuesday night league title) to Crossroads Paint and Body.

Late forfeit hands title to Crossroads

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Crossroads Paint and Body wrapped up the Sanford Recreation Department's Tuesday Night Men's Class C Slowpitch Softball League at Chase Park in unusual fashion last night.

Leading second-place Ameribuilt Construction 11-3 through six innings, Crossroads Paint and Body had loaded the bases with two out when Ameribuilt Construction pitcher John Viggiani was ejected. When the rest of the team walked off the field, Crossroads Paint and Body was awarded a forfeit win.

In other games Tuesday night, Myers Tree Service claimed a 7-0 forfeit win over Willa Springs Merchants and Riptide toppled Wheelchel and Howard 12-8.

With one week left in the season, Crossroads Paint and Body's record stands at 9-0 while Ameribuilt Construction drops to 6-3. They are followed by Wheelchel and Howard (5-4), Riptide (4-5), Myers Tree Service (3-6) and Willa Springs Merchants (0-9).

Next week's schedule has Myers Tree Service taking on Crossroads Paint and Body at 6:30 p.m., Riptide playing Willa Springs Merchants in the 7:30 p.m. game and Ameribuilt Construction squaring off with Wheelchel and Howard in the 8:30 p.m. nightcap.

Crossroads Paint and Body took early control of its game with Ameribuilt Construction, using eight of their 19 hits during to score eight runs in the top of the second inning. The score had reached 11-0 before Ameribuilt Construction scored two runs in the bottom of the fifth and one in the sixth.

After the first Crossroads batters were retired in the top of the seventh, Danny Lee singled and Barry Hysell walked before Keith Acree hit a single to load the bases. Somewhere in the process, the controversy was ignited and the game forfeited to Crossroads.

Before the game was called, Acree

Offensive fireworks light up Pinehurst

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Fourth of July came a week early this year.

The Sanford Recreation Department Women's Slowpitch Softball League lit up Pinehurst Park with enough offensive fireworks to satisfy the most ardent pyrotechnic aficionado Tuesday night, combining for 75 runs on 121 hits.

It's tiring just reading about it. The six teams combined for 38 times at bat. Runs were scored in 27 of those 38 at bats. Of the 68 women who played Tuesday night, 62 had at least one hit or scored a run.

Things got started with the only blowout of the evening as Beer: 30 dropped Mid-Florida OB-GYN 16-4. "D" Outcast then outslugged Greenleaf Landscaping 15-14 before Hopkins Meats outlasted Lake Mary Veterinary Clinic 14-12 in the nightcap.

The season is scheduled to wrap up next Tuesday.

Beer: 30 scored in every inning but the third in turning back Mid-Florida OB-GYN, pushing across two runs in both the first and second innings, five runs in both the fourth and fifth innings and solo

Whigham in finals

From Staff Reports

TAMPA — Jack Whigham kept the last Seminole County hope alive in the Florida Tennis Association State Junior Championships with a 6-2, 6-3 victory over Jack Brasington to reach the finals of the Boys 16's at the Hillborough Community College Tennis Complex.

Whigham, from Lake Mary, is the top seed in the Boys 16's and continued his march through the tournament by disposing of the fifth-seeded Brasington, who hails from Miami. Whigham has yet to lose a set in winning four matches.

He will take on the second-seeded player in the 16's, Marcus Flutti of Miami, who also won in straight sets, 6-1, 6-2, over No. 6 seed Chris Lopez of Miami.

Whigham, the son of Seminole County attorney and ex-FSU football star Frank Whigham, will be a junior at Loosing pitcher Brian Marotta doubled and scored a run for the Lake Mary Mudcats but still came out on the short end of a 4-3 score with the Lake Howell Bucks.

Big Inning boosts Bucks by Mudcats

By TONY BOGGERMAN
Herald Sports Editor

LAKE MARY — Some times you have to fail if you're going to learn anything.

The Lake Mary Mudcats, the National Federation of Amateur Baseball summer team of Lake Mary High School, suffered through one of those educational experiences Tuesday night, letting a 3-0 lead slip away in a 4-3 loss to the Lake Howell Bucks.

"We had just one bad inning," said Mudcat coach Kelly Wainecott with a shrug. "That was a problem we had all season. They scored all their runs in one inning and we could have been out of it a couple of times."

Two Mudcat errors helped prolong the Bucks' rally in the fourth inning and brought home the eventual game-winning run.

John Santos led off the inning by drawing a walk from Mudcat pitcher Brian Marotta. After taking second on a wild pitch and going to third on Mike Knorst's infield single, Santos scored on Paul Giambalvo's single. Knorst advanced to third and Giambalvo took second on the play.

Joel Read then tied the game with a two-run double down the left field line, scoring Knorst and Giambalvo. Read later scored the go-ahead run when Jason Proulx

For Mid-Florida OB-GYN, Patsy Harding doubled and scored a run while Trish Ellingworth hit a single and scored a run. Michelle Boas singled twice. Jennie Joiner, Vanessa Jennings, Laney Smith and Janice Kitchie each added one single each. Abby Dealba and Dawn McCall each scored a run.

The second game featured a pair of eight-run innings. Greenleaf scoring eight times in the bottom of the third inning to take a 9-4 lead, only to see "D" Outcast respond with an eight-run inning of its own in the top of the fourth.

Four runs in the bottom of the fourth gave Greenleaf a 13-12 advantage (that was erased when "D" Outcast struck for three runs in the top of the fifth inning).

Providing the offense for "D" Outcast were Shonda Hampton (double, two singles, three runs), Robin Riggins (double, two singles, two runs), Jo Sanders (three singles, two runs), Tammy Bailey (three singles, one run) and Rosa Williams (double, single, one run).

Other contributors were Marie Byrd (two singles, one run) and Cris Goldman, Belinda Anderson, Valerie Wilks, Mary Marable and Brenda Cotton (each with a single and one run).

Mary Beth McCullough had a home run, single and three runs to pace Greenleaf. Sheri Peterson collected a double, two singles and one run. Terri Mann hit three singles and scored a run. Michelle Widener added a double and two singles.

Also chipping in were Mary Jane White and Diana Sowers (two singles and two runs scored apiece), Mary Wilson and Michelle Cook (one single and two runs each), Estell Novell (double, one run) and Cindy Hogan (single).

Hopkins Meats rallied for four runs in the top of the fourth to break a 7-7 tie with Lake Mary Veterinary Clinic and go on to a 14-11 decision.

Doing the hitting for Hopkins were Eileen Thiekath (home run, four singles, four runs), Michelle Allman and Cindy Perry (each with three singles and two runs), Gina Server (three singles, one run), Vickie Miller, Renee Lanza, Kelly Bartholow and Terri Hirt (two singles and one run each), Gena Bukur (two singles) and Robin Brown (single, one run).

"We also have several people playing positions that they haven't played before and now they will be the center of attention and not just another player supporting the 14 or 15 year old star. But I'm confident we will play well this weekend."

Smith brings a lot of experience to the team, having played on seven all-star teams for the Sanford Recreation Department, including six state tournament appearances, before starting at Seminole High School, Seminole Community College and the University of Central Florida.

After college Smith was drafted by the New York Mets and spent a season in the minors before being injured. During his year in the minors he played with future major league stars like Seattle's Kevin Mitchell and Baltimore's Randy Milligan.

He has also surrounded himself with competent assistants having tabbed his brother Dean as the other field coach and using the experience of his father and Otis

Raines to help prepare the team for the tournament.

Raines was the head coach of the Cardinals this year but work obligations made coaching the team all-star team a problem forcing him to serve as a part-time assistant. Raines has coached teams to six City Championships and also has three Little Major Sub-District titles to his credit.

The elder Smith, Dean W., also brings a wealth of coaching experience to the team, having taken five Sanford teams to state tournaments over a six year period and serving as the head coach of the 1973 Senior team that finished as state runners-up.

"We pretty much have a lineup figured out," said Robert Smith. "But it seemed like a different person would step up and have a good practice every day, making the decisions very difficult. All of the players should see action in the tournament."

The coaches are expected to go with Richard Badger on the mound for Thursday's opener. Badger emerged as the best pitcher in the league late in the year and helped lead the Cardinals to their second consecutive city championship. Also expected to see mound action are Bart Dixon (Kiwanis Club Orioles), Tommy Raines (Rotary Club Royals) and Aaron Knight (Security National Bank Expos).

The infield is expected to be Walter Bryant (Hungry Howie Cubs) at first base, Robert Randall (Cardinals) at second base, Brett Counts (Templeton Roofing Expos) at third base and Dixon at shortstop. Brett Counts has been troubled with a sore rib cage which would mean Ivory Peterson (Cardinals) moving from the outfield to third base. Knight could also see some infield action.

The outfield will come from a group that includes Peterson, Tommy Raines, Byron Deese (Cardinals), Alvin Smith (Expos), Albert Harris (Orioles) and Knight.

Handling the catching duties will be Bart Counts (Expos).

Other members of the team include Major Fisher (Orioles), Fabian McKinney (Blue Jays) and Marcus Beasley (Moose Lodge Pirates).

collected four singles, two runs and an RBI to highlight the 19-hit attack of Crossroads Paint and Body. Curtis Tabor added three singles, one run and three RBI while Jay Crutchfield chipped in with three singles, one run and an RBI.

Also contributing were Billy Griffith (two singles, two runs), W.L. Gracey (double, single, one run), Rodney Turner (two singles, one run, two RBI), Robert Stevens (single, one run, one RBI), Lee (single, two RBI), Tom Gracey (single, one run) and Hysell (one run).

For Ameribuilt Construction, Willie Harrison homered. Pete Harrison and David Schultz both hit a single and scored a run. Rod Vermilio had two singles and Glen Yacubeltik drove in a run with a sacrifice fly.

The nightcap was a thriller. Riptide scoring six runs in the bottom of the sixth to come from behind and beat Whelchel and Howard 12-8. Riptide had taken a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the first but lost the advantage when Whelchel and Howard scored three runs in the top of the third frame.

After Riptide tied the score with a run in the bottom of the fourth, Whelchel and Howard went back on top 5-3 with two runs in the fifth. Again Riptide bounced back, scoring three times in the bottom of the fifth to go up 6-5.

Whelchel and Howard reclaimed the lead with two more runs in the top of the sixth, only to see Riptide rally once more, scoring four runs on four hits and three Whelchel and Howard errors.

Leading Riptide was Tom Clark, who collected a double, single, two runs and one RBI, and Donny McCoy, who had three singles, one run and two RBI. Mark Bolton contributed two singles, one run and an RBI. Frank Turner and Dan Gort each hit two singles and scored a run.

Phillip Sutherland doubled, singled and drive in three runs. Wayne Walker scored twice and drove in a third run. Wayne Gager also scored two runs. David Jones singled and scored. Todd Morgan had a run scored and an RBI.

Providing the offense for Whelchel and Howard were Ricky Eckstein (two singles, three runs), Cary Keeler (single, one run, three RBI), Brian Howard, Vince Howard and Craig Tosai (each with a single and one run), Denny Claton and Bobby Rowe (each with a single and an RBI), Duane Lee (single) and Eric Johnson (one run scored).

ground ball was misplayed for an error.

It was fitting that the Bucks benefit from some Mudcat miscues since the Bucks helped Lake Mary build a 3-0 lead with some defensive lapses of their own.

Marotta led off the bottom of the second inning with a double and, an out later, scored when Jason Reynolds singled to left. A poor throw to the plate allowed Reynolds to take second on the play.

Ben Rovito then put down a bunt that went for a base hit, moving Reynolds to third, when the Bucks miscommunicated on who should be doing what on the play. Rich Alexander then singled home Rovito. Rene Perez followed with another single, but Rovito was thrown out at the plate by Santos.

In the bottom of the third inning, Brandon Hanshaw's seeing-eye ground ball eluded the Bucks' second baseman, shortstop and centerfielder, rolling for a double. A ground out and an error on a bunt by Brian Milner plated Hanshaw with the Mudcats' third run.

The Bucks' inability to field the ball frustrated Coach Birto Benjamin.

"We've got to get it down," said Benjamin, shaking his head. "Not many people just out-right beat us last season. We hurt ourselves with mental mistakes."

"And it's not a physical thing. We can make the plays. It's a mental thing. It's a lack of concentration. But we're going to work hard on it this summer and get it down by next spring."

Sparkling amid the defensive sloppiness like pearls in the mud were the pitchers, Brian Gomes and Marotta.

Gomes (1-0) was nearly untouchable after mishandling Milner's bunt in the third inning. He then picked Milner off first and allowed only two hits the rest of the way, both by Eric Lester. He struck out four and walked two.

Marotta struck out nine — six coming during a seven-batter stretch during the first, second and third innings — and walked four.

Both Gomes and Marotta had a wild pitch and hit one batter.

Read led the Buck offensive effort with his two-run double and one run scored. Knorst had two singles and one run. Proulx added a double; Giambalvo singled and scored a run; and Bernie Velazquez had a single.

Lester was 3-for-4 with three singles to highlight the Mudcats' attack. Marotta and Hanshaw each doubled and scored a run. Reynolds contributed a single, one run and one RBI. Alexander added a single and an RBI. Rovito and Perez had one single each.

Lake Mary, 3-7, plays at Oviedo in a 7 p.m. game Thursday. Lake Howell is now 3-3.

When it smells good, stop!

By Bill Friedman
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — The face may be familiar, but don't expect John LaRosa to break into a chorus of "O, My Papa." The LaRosa family artistry perfected vocally by third cousin, Julius, has taken a culinary twist in John's household.

He doesn't do much measuring or much tasting, John says. "I just cook it until it smells done." And his Italian and Mexican specialties, all from scratch and liberally laced with the magic herb, (garlic), are never the same twice...the latest batch is always just a tad better than the one before.

A self-taught cook who watched his mother and grandmother in the kitchen, John's had lots of conversations with chefs over his approximate 40-year romance with food preparation, and says they all tell him the same thing: "When you're satisfied with what you're doing, you're not a cook."

John "is" a cook. He constantly adds ingredients and experiments with sauces, ever perfecting his talent. At a recent steak cook-out for a Scottish Rite Reunion, he tried something new with chicken for folks who don't particularly like steak, he said. His chicken breasts, sauteed in peanut oil with ginger and garlic, served with both an orange and pineapple glaze sauce, were an instant hit.

The couple enjoy reading, and John plays some golf, but a good deal of their time is spent lending their efforts, and John's culinary expertise, to a variety of charity dinners which raise money for worthy causes. Last year he prepared his spaghetti sauce for the Seminole High School Alumni Association, his wife Amoret's alma mater.

John came to Sanford in 1959 and met Sanford native, Amoret, while she was working as a teller in a bank. He fell in love, he says, with the girl and the area. The grown LaRosa daughters seem to like the area, too, and didn't stray far from home. His wife's namesake, Amoret, lives in Daytona and is a nurse for Pru-Care; while Connie lives in Sanford and works for the school board, and the LaRosas get to see plenty of their three grandsons.

Today, the LaRosas live in a

comfortable home on Palm Way in Sanford, just seven houses away from Amoret's mother and the home in which she was raised.

John, who retired early, says he cooks almost every meal for the couple since Amoret still works as a bookkeeper for Sunshine Building and Development company, in Sanford. They celebrated their 32-year wedding anniversary June 4th, and whenever he cooks that anniversary meal, it's a sure bet it won't be fried chicken. "Amoret can fix the best fried chicken you could ask for," he admits.

"Most of my cooking is experimenting," he says, and he still doesn't measure ingredients, believing every cook should prepare meals to his or her own personal taste. Substitute, add, decrease or increase the ingredients and measurements in his recipes, he advises, but remember: "When it smells good — stop!"

- SPAGHETTI SAUCE
- 1 lb. ground beef, mixed with
- 4 lb. Italian sausage, ground or links
- 2 cloves garlic
- 1 pinch each of sweet basil, oregano and parsley

- 2 bay leaves
- 1 lemon-sized onion, finely chopped
- *If link, remove casing and mix with ground beef.

Combine ingredients and saute in 2-to-3 tablespoons of olive oil, and place all in large sauce pot.

Add 10 medium tomatoes, boiled, peeled, chopped and crushed, and two cups of water. Cover and simmer 1 hour to taste. Add either a carrot or a tablespoon of brown sugar to cut the acidity, removing the carrot before serving. Serves 6.

MEATBALLS

- 8 1/2 to 8 oz. Italian breadcrumbs
- 1 small, chopped onion
- 2 cloves garlic
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 2 Tbsp. Italian cheese (Parmesan or Romano)
- 3 eggs
- 1 lb. ground beef and 1/2 lb. Italian sausage, mixed.

Combine ingredients and form golfball-sized meatballs. Bake in 325° oven and bake until almost done, about 35 minutes. Meatballs should be added to sauce while slightly underdone, so they will absorb the sauce spices.

CHILI (FOR ENCHILADAS)

- 1 lb. ground beef
- 32 oz. can tomato sauce
- 1 Tbsp. chili powder
- 1 Jalapeno pepper, finely chopped
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1 clove garlic
- Mix ingredients and simmer about 1 hour. Buy packaged tortilla shells and fry in cooking oil. Chop 2 large onions, lettuce, and sharp or mild cheddar cheese, to taste. Layer fried tortilla shell in baking pan, and add onion, lettuce and cheese, and cover with sauce. Repeat layering up to three layers and bake 70 minutes in 325° oven. Let sit 15 minutes and serve.

LABAGNA

Boil lasagna noodles about 8 minutes until just pliable. Drain. Grate Mozzarella, Ricotta, Loc-coata and (optional) Provolone cheese. Layer in 6-inch deep pan, starting with noodles laid end to end. Sprinkle on four cheeses and add sauce. Add layer of noodles crosswise and repeat cheese and sauce, for a total of four layers. Bake about 80 minutes in a 325° oven and let sit for 15 minutes to firm before cutting.

Fruit desserts are indulgences for health-conscious

By MARY McQUEEN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — One of the things that makes a healthy diet hard to stick to is the feeling that you're missing out.

Try fruit.

Fruit is, of course, tempting when local fruits are at their peak. Then, they are the "first and foremost of the fast food desserts," say cookbook authors Sheryl and Mel London.

But year-round, dressed up, fruit can be elegant and wipe out any sense of deprivation.

Herbs or flowers mixed with fruit seems a new combination in American cooking, but, in fact, it's an idea that dates back centuries and is now being revived as cooks search for more local, healthful foods to replace the butter and cream and chocolate that have so often signaled dessert.

Sorbets are fat-free, easy to make and can be adapted to just about any fruit.

In warm weather, fruit can be grilled. The natural sugars in fruit caramelize over the coals, so all that's needed is to skewer a selection of fruits and place them on the barbecue. A yogurt-based fruit sauce makes it fancy.

"We are both addicted to a healthful diet: low in fat and relying mostly on fish and chicken for our protein needs," the Londons write in their new book "Fresh Fruit Desserts: Classic and Contemporary" (Prentice Hall Press, $24.95).

While theirs is not a diet book, they kept health in mind: "We have attempted to address our concerns about cholesterol by relying more upon spices, herbs, citrus and liqueurs to provide flavor, while being quite prudent in paring down the amounts of cream, eggs, butter and sour cream."

To that end, they think about fruits as "the featured players." The flavor is brought out, not disguised. For out-of-season or tropical fruits, shipped from far away, that might mean poaching, baking or grating.

In designing recipes, Mrs. London said in a telephone interview, "We sort of did a countdown backward and eliminated."

"We'd look at a recipe and say, 'Six eggs! Let's try it with one and egg whites.' You'd be surprised at how often it works," London said.

A banana souffle, for example, calls for just a half-cup of milk and two egg yolks to serve four. Strawberry witches froth, served in wine glasses, needs just fruit, egg whites and a half-cup of sugar, along with flavorings, to serve eight people.

Among the Londons' desserts without guilt is the following.

POACHED ORANGES

- with Green and Red Grapes and Grenadine Orange Peel
- Serves 6 to 8
- The oranges are peeled and sliced, poached, and then marinated with pale green and red seedless grapes. The orange peel is cut into julienne strips and steeped separately in a grenadine syrup. It's a colorful and light dessert that is assembled just before serving.

- 6 large navel oranges
- 1 cup water
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 cups seedless green grapes
- 1/2 cup seedless red grapes

Use of asthma drugs can control wheezing

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 39-year-old husband has symptoms of asthma with difficulty breathing and wheezing. He's tried numerous medications including inhalers and continues to wake up at about 3 a.m. with coughing attacks. He's had a pulmonary function test with better output than these without asthma.

He's 40 pounds overweight, and I question the stress of them coughing spells on his heart. His father has heart disease, his brother died at 40 of diabetes and cancer runs on his mother's side. Are my concerns real or can I safely put them aside?

DEAR READER: If your husband wheezes and can't breathe, your concerns are not frivolous. He needs help. Fortunately, there are many effective drugs available for asthma: if what he has taken hasn't worked, others should be tried. If he smokes, he must stop.

Asthma is a cyclic disease. In between attacks, patients breathe normally. Therefore, your husband's tests of lung function may have been normal if he were examined when he had no symptoms. He should request a referral to a pulmonologist, a lung specialist, for additional testing and advice.

Although I doubt his coughing spells will inflict any damage, your husband may experience heart weakness from his chronic asthma if his symptoms are not controlled. The asthma should bear no relation to your husband's grim family history. Nonetheless, weight loss would probably reduce his chances of developing diabetes, arteriosclerotic heart disease or hypertension.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 54-year-old daughter suffers from big water blisters on her fingers, toes and the palms of her hands. They are painful, throb and burn. She suffers from severe headaches and generally feels bad all over. What might the problem be?

DEAR READER: Blisters just caused by exposure to heat may reflect an allergy of some sort. For example, is a prescription drug or a primary skin disease, such as pemphigoid, in my opinion, your daughter should be examined by a dermatologist.

100. 1000

By Phillip Alder
Today's cliché is "Waste not, want not." A child is told that if he isn't going to eat something, he shouldn't put it on his plate. It is also a concept that bridge players should bear in mind. Can you see how it could be applied in today's deal? Cover the East-West cards and plan the play in five clubs. West leads the spade two. East wins with the jack and tries to cash the ace. How do you continue?

North hid three spades in the faint hope that his partner could bid three no-trump with a spade stopper. The declarer thought he had four chances: a singleton diamond queen, the diamond finesse, a 3-3 diamond split or the heart finesse. After ruffing high at trick two, declarer drew trumps, cashed the diamond ace and finessed the diamond jack.

East won with the queen and returned a spade. Declarer ruffed and played a diamond to dummy's king, but East discarded. South returned to hand by ruffing a spade and took the heart finesse. However, that lost as well, and the contract was defeated.

"How unlucky can I be?" grumbled South. "My line must be over 80 percent."

North was sympathetic — but he knew there was a slightly better line available. The correct way to maximize the chances of three diamond tricks is to cash the king and ace and, if the queen hasn't appeared, lead low toward the jack. As you can see, this works beautifully on the actual layout. And if East started with queen-fourth of diamonds, the heart finesse still waits in the wings.
