GENERAL JOHN J. PERSHING TELLS OF TRAINING GIVEN TO CIVILIANS

WASHINGTON, July 14—The following is the second of a series of six articles describing the activities of the Army of the United States during the summer months of 1925, given to THE ASSOCIATED PRESS by General John J. Pershing, author of the series. By General John J. Pershing. The Regular Army has no more important mission than the training of the civilian soldiers of our new citizen army. The summer camps would be almost as futile without Regular Army officers and enlisted men as our schools would be without teachers and administrators. The National Defense Act of 1920 divided the Army of the United States, which it created, into three components—the Regular Army, National Guard and Organized Reserves. Under our new defense plan at least nine Infantry divisions for the purpose of checking the enemy with the least possible delay re-enforcing the Regular Army and making certain that the enemy is held at his starting point. The Organized Reserves are to expand during hostilities from a mere skeleton into twenty-seven Infantry divisions, and more if need be, for the purpose of bringing our defense forces to such strength that the enemy will seek again the peace he disturbed. However, the Regular Army must not confine its efforts during peace to perfecting itself alone. Our whole defense system would collapse in that event. Regular Army officers and men must work both the National Guard and the Organized Reserves will also be able to fulfill their defense missions in an emergency. Civilians of the high standard demanded by our plans, are too busy to spare much time from their private business. In most instances they do not acquire sufficient technical military knowledge from their daily occupations to undertake the formation and perfection of their own military organizations and training without assistance and guidance. The peace-time responsibility of the Regular Army under the National Defense Act of 1920 is greater than it ever has been in our history. No similar standing army has peace-time responsibility that is even comparable with that of our Regular Army at present. Approximately 4,800 officers and 65,000 enlisted men of the Regular Army will actually be engaged this summer in the training of the National Guard, the Organized Reserves, the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and the Citizens' Military Training Camps. Every summer camp will have its quota. This means that the Regular Army will be spread out in a thin layer over the United States from the first of June until the first of October, as there will be camps in every state, except Mississippi, Tennessee and Nevada. Many organizations have marched great distances to reach the organizations they are to train. For example, a battalion of Infantry marched more than 200 miles from Fort Snelling, Minnesota to Des Moines, Iowa. Engineer companies have been sent from Fort Humphries, in Virginia on the Potomac to Camp Knox in Kentucky and to Camp Custer in Michigan. Anti-aircraft detachments have been sent from the Presidio of San Francisco, on the Pacific Coast and from Fort Monroe on the Atlantic Coast to Fort Sill in Oklahoma, which is situated almost in the center of our country. These instances are cited merely to illustrate both the magnitude of the Regular Army's summer training job, and the Regular Army's attempt to perform its civilian training mission satisfactorily to all concerned. Much more of the Regular Army's time is devoted to the National Guard Organized Reserves, Reserve Officers' Training Corps and the Citizens' Military Training Camps than even this would indicate. Training programs and schedules for courses of instruction have to be prepared during other than the summer months of the year. More nearly one-half than one-third of the War Department's time is devoted to other activities and interests than those pertaining to the Regular Army alone. As a matter of fact so much effort has been put forth by some or-

DISPLAY OF FORD TRUCKS IS MADE BY LOCAL DEALER

Week Is Designated as National Ford Truck Display Period Throughout Entire Nation; Exhibitions Given

This week has been designated as National Ford truck week and Edward Higgins local authorized dealer, has arranged for a complete showing of Ford built truck bodies. Entrance of the Ford Motor Company into the manufacture of commercial bodies it is stated indicates a new and important advancement in this division of motor transportation since it shows that Ford is bringing into delivery and hauling services the same low cost and high value that has made the Ford passenger car the most popular in the world. The Ford truck chassis has long held the lead among light commercial vehicles and at present approximately 75 per cent of the one-ton trucks in use are Fords. The business man or farmer who is interested in reducing hauling costs will have the opportunity this week of becoming fully acquainted with these Ford built truck bodies which, because of the economies of Ford quantity production are offered at low price. Arrangements have been made by Mr. Higgins to keep show rooms open every evening during the week so that all may have an opportunity of inspecting the trucks. More important, however, he will be prepared to give demonstrations of any of these units and those interested are invited to enter their requests for a demonstration as early as possible. The Ford-built body combinations for the Ford one-ton truck chassis include the open express type, the express type with either screen sides and canopy top or with top alone, and the stake and platform body. This latter body also is of particular interest to

MOM'N POP

Every effort is being made by the War Department to remedy our existing situation. Under a new training schedule, regiments will alternate in training civilians. This will give each organization one year out of two to devote to its own training. Regular Army posts are being substituted for our war-time contingents for civilian training, which will mean less disturbance and less moving for the Regular Army. The immediate result will be increased efficiency and better instruction for the civilian soldiers. Pupils are being much better than their teachers. On the other hand, the training of the civilian components is proving helpful and beneficial to the Regular Army. Every officer and man has to work hard. They also have an opportunity during the summer at least to function with full commands. This means that they have some training in the actual handling of "war organizations." In an emergency the Regular Army will have a much better conception of its job. There will be fewer mistakes in the future. The Regular Army personnel will know how to handle the large mobilization, training and supply problems that an emergency would immediately bring. No work that the Regular Army has been called upon to do for our country is more important than the summer training that it is now giving to our civilian soldiers. From this will come many beneficial results to our country that are not even guessed at present. This work is as important, in my opinion,

As a matter of fact so much effort has been put forth by some or-

NEVER HAS PROGRESS SEEMED SO SWIFT--

GRANDMOTHER'S girlhood would seem pathetically poor in comforts to us today. She never knew the convenience of electrically done housework; of time saved in cooking; of swift trips through the country by motor; of the world's best music in her home, out of the air.

A generation has changed the lives, comforts and habits of the world.

Tomorrow—new conveniences, new comforts will swiftly find their way into our lives.

The advertisements will herald their coming. Today a manufacturer will announce a new and better product. Tomorrow a million men and women will use it as an old friend.

An advertisement breaks down the barrier of distance and tells to all the world—in a day's time—the best and newest things the world has devised.

People who keep abreast with progress read the advertisements.

Advertising is a herald of better things.
