Adolph's vacation ends

THORNTOWN, Ind. — Adolph the ailigator enjoyed a 49-day vacation from captivity but saw his freedom end when he was netted, taped and dragged from a lake outside Old Indiana Fun Park.

Adolph had been at large in the lake since June, when a prankater let him out of his fenced enclosure at the amusement park near Thorntown.

Park operators drained the lake this week in hopes that the 4-foot reptile would be forced into the open for capture. Adolph finally cooperated Thursday about 4 a.m. Park maintenance workers Gary Hoffman and Gene Wethington threw a net over the gator and used electrical tape to secure his powerful jaws.

Adolph proved to be an elusive escapee during his time in the lake. His hundler, Larry Battson. used boats, snares, nets, a balled pen and sonar to track the wily gator, all to no avail.

"I don't care that I didn't catch him," said Battson, who spent Wednesday evening chasing Adolph around the lake. "At least it was nice it was two guys from the park."

'Good Samaritan' nabe jewels

FORT WALTON BEACH - A man who stopped to help a woman involved in a car wreck turned out to be anything but a Good Samaritan when he swiped her expensive earrings and fled.

Mariane Federkins of Mount Prospect, Ill., tified man approached her after a July 29 accident in Fort Walton Beach and offered to give her medical assistance.

Federkins said the man told her to remove her watch so he could feel her pulse, and she did. He then asked her to remove her rings to help her blood circulation, but she declined.

She said the man then asked her if he could remove her $1,200 earrings to keep her head steady, and the accident victim agreed.

Bourbon christens submarine

GROTON, Conn. — Sponsors put aside the traditional bottle of champagne and instead used a special blend of Kentucky Bourbon when they christend the nation's newest Trident submarine.

The sponsors said it is only natural that a Kentucky tradition such as Bourbon whiskey be used to launch the USS Kentucky.

Carolyn Hopkins, wife of Rep. Larry J. Hopkins, R-Ky., was to break the bottle of native brew Saturday on the bow of the nation's 12th Trident submarine. The ceremony was to be held at the shipyards of the Electric Boat Divison of General Dynamics Corp., which built the Navy submarines.

A group of Kentucky sailors attached to the submarine were to bottle a special mixture of eight Kentucky Bourbons during a ceremony on Thursday.

Commenting on what probably will be the first U.S. Navy vessel to be christened with Kentucky Bourbon. Hopkins said, "We like to make our own history and launch our own

Magellan's Venus arrival heralds decade of exploration

By WILLIAM MARWY UPI Science Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — The Magellan probe's arrival at Venus heralds a new golden age of planetary exploration, a decade of discovery in which U.S. spacecraft will journey to the far corners of the solar system to learn more about humanity's home in the cosmos.

"This is the beginning ... of one of the most exciting eras in planetary exploration," Lennard Pisk, NASA's associate administrator of space science, said Friday when Magellan dropped into orbit around Venus.

"The plan has been to put an orbiter about every accessible body in the solar system and Magellan is the beginning of that. From this day forward, there will be a U.S. planetary mission continuously in orbit about a significant body of our solar system to well into the next century."

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has been under harsh criticism all summer because of problems with the $1.5

billion Hubble Space Telescope, trouble with the shuttle program — no flights have been launched since April because of fuel leaks — and concern about the feasibility of the agency's planned space station.

But the shuttle program is scheduled to resume flights next month and Hubble's blurry vision ultimately will be corrected. Fisk said NASA's problems this summer should not cause the public to forget about the agency's triumphs. "I hope the public's faith in NASA has not been

New law takes aim at boaters

By MCK PPEPAUP Herald staff writer

SANFORD - There are state and local regulations that say boaters cannot dump garbage overboard while in Lake Monroe, the St. Johns River or other waterways in and around Florida. Fines, and even jail terms could be imposed. Now, however, there is even more reason not to dump garbage: a federal law that imposes civil penalties of up to $25,000 and criminal penalties of up to $50,000 plus five years in jail.

The law became effective July 31 and covers commercial and recreational vessels in any any navigable

"It sort of came up on us unexpectedly," said Bob Arnold of Sea School, a U.S. Coast Guard Licensing School in St. Petersburg. "We didn't know anything about this until we received a copy of the law," he added.

A spokesman for the Florida Marine Patrol, headquartered in Titusville said the new law is basically aimed at cruise ships, but would apply to any garbage dump-ing. "And we certainly have plenty of it along this coast," he added.

Currently the state imposed fines to go along with the state's litter laws, with a $50 fine for dumping □See Beaters, Page 5A

Local Soap Box in national run

AKRON, OHIO - Local representatives Anna Morris and Matt Mabry failed to finish in the top 10 of the All-American Soap Box Derby run in Akron yesterday.

The event attracted over 16,000 spectators for the 53rd annual race at the newly-renovated Derby Downs, according to Lois Howell, the race's operations manager.

Howell said Derby Downs was built in 1935, but it this was the first time the facility has been renovated. She said spectator seating was expanded and the asphait racing surface was redone.

She estimated that the crowd had about 2,000 spectators more than last year.

"We've been getting bigger and bigger every year." she said. "There'd been a real full in the 70s and the early 80s, but we've been doing well lately." ☐See Seep Boz, Page SA

Bush also acknowledged during a news conference at his vacation home here that a de facto U.S. naval blockade is in place to stop fraq from shipping oil exports out of the Persian Gulf, but he would not use the term "blockade" because of differences among U.S. allies about the legality of the naval action. □See Bush, Page 8A

Gas prices decline here and elsewhere

From staff and wire reports

Gasoline prices in Seminole County as well as elsewhere in the nation dropped Saturday, the first raul tanks Kuwaiti oiifields, while angry protesters marched on Exxon Corp. headquarters and politicians uppealed to the industry to roll back prices.

At select stations in the Sanford-Lake Mary-Longwood area Saturday, prices ranged from $1.09 to $1.19 for regular unleaded, $1.22 to $1.29 for premium unleaded and $1.27 to $1.38 for super unleaded.

The American Automobile Association, in its daily survey of gasoline stations, said the average price for self-serve, unleaded fuel dipped nationwide by 0.3 cent to $1.25 per gallon -- the first decline since the Aug. 2 invasion.

The decline follows steps taken by several oil companies to freeze or cut prices.

Motorists, nonetheless, expressed concern.

Plane crash kills two

MCDONOUGH, Ga. — A World War II vintage plane crashed in a wooded area near a Henry County subdivision Saturday, killing both people aboard the small aircraft, officials said.

The Henry County Sheriff's Department identified the victims as Mary Bird of Canton and William Yarborough of Dunwoody. Both victims were 43.

Yarborough was the pilot. Henry County Sheriff Department Maj. Keith McBrayer said the plane went down in a wooded area near the Mallard Landing subdivision, a housing complex that incorporates a landing strip.

The sheriff's office said the plane took off from the subdivision in the county southwest of Atlanta around 12:30 p.m., circled once and went down in thick woods near the development, erupting in flames.

The cause of the crash also was not immediately known, but Federal Aviation Administration officials were called in to investigate.

SANFORD - The Seminole County Democratic Executive Committee has come out against the proposed First Annual Air Bost Jamboree, schedulet for Labor Day weekend at Lake committee, said a letter has been sent to the Volusia County Commission recommending that permits to allow the jamboree be denied.

"If they allow it." he said. "we want the anti-noise ordinances enforced to the fullest. If the wind is just right, people in Sanford will probably hear the airboats all the way from Lake Harney.

Gilmartin said. "We took a pontoon boat trip from Lemon Bluff to Lake Harney last week, and saw all kinds of wildlife, many on the endangered species list, along the shorelines. Can you imagine what several hundred airboats would do to the wildlife?" He added, "When they first wanted this air boat jamboree, they said there would be 60 to 70 boats. Now we hear there could be as many as 700 of Gilmartin, who is a member of the Friends of the St. Johns, said he is also concerned about safety during the gar gigging competi-tion scheduled during the first

Mike Stubblefield, assistant director of the Florida Airboat Federation, said he didn't know where the figure of 700 airbosts came from. "We expect to have between 80 and 100 entered in the races," he said, "and of course many folks will be bringing their own boats, but nowhere near 700 of them. As for people, we estimate possibly 2,500 total over the weekend, with an average of 1,500 to 2,000 at any one time."

He acknowledged there would be an additional number of boats on display. "We have a dozen or so manufacturers who will be setting up displays," he said, "and many of them will be showing off new innovations designed to make the airboats eter. We will also be conducting some scientific noise testing during part of the jam-

Stubblefield, in defending air boats accused of ecological damage, said, "People have a poor concept of how an air boat works. They ride in only three to four inches of water, even less when they're moving rapidly. and there is no prop in the water. If one accidently runs over a manatee or gator, there's not going to be any damage." As an example, he cited the Orange County Airboat Association. whose members have T-shirts printed with the words, "Ride an Airboat, Save a Manatee".

"Our course is only one eighth of a mile," he said, "and we are having it out in Lake Harney especially to stay away from the populated areas. We'll have our own fuel truck so no one has to leave the area, and we will be packed with all types of law enforcement people to be sure all safety precautions are taken."

The Jamboree will be discussed by the Volusia County

Council at an Aug. 16 meeting. and has been submitted to the Sanford City Commission for information at the Aug. 13

Meanwhile, Seminote County Commission Chairman Sandra Glenn has received a letter from Florida Senator Winston W. Bud" Gardner, Jr., concernis "Bud" Gardner, Jr., concerning a communication from Marvin J. Miller who lives on Lake Harney and strongly opposes the air boat races. Gardner, who has lived on the lake for twenty years, reports airboaters runni through reeds of nesting birds, and noise that has produced many sleepless nights.

Regarding disturbing the nesting birds, Gardner wrote, "I admit that preventing that type of occurrence is extremely ficult. The noise however, is another issue."

He has recommended that Seminole County may wish to consider some type of noise ordinance, "so that those who live on Lake Harney and other lakes in Seminole County might enjoy the quiet of the event

NASA's planetary exploration program is unmatched by any space agency in the world. The goal is nothing less than to send advanced robotic probes to Venus, Jupiter, Saturn and a comet that will build on the past success of the Voyager program

NASA also plans to launch a continuing series of astronomy satellites, including a suite of advanced space telescopes to explore the entire electromagnetic spectrum, putting the U.S. space program in a class by itself among the world's space-faring nations.

Since the shuttle program got back off the ground in September 1988, NASA has launched the $551 million Magellan probe to Venus, the $1.5 billion Galileo probe to Jupiter and the $150 million Cosmic Background Explorer - COBE satellite to study the faint glow left over from the big bang explosion thought to have created the universe. The $1.5 billion Hubble telescope was launched in April.

followed by the launches of a NASA-German X-ray satellite called ROSAT and a satellite to study how Earth's magnetic field interacts with the planet's atmosphere and the supersonic solar wind.

On Oct. 5, the shuttle Discovery is scheduled to carry the European-built Ulysses probe into space on an unprecedented mission to fly over the poles of the sun. And in March, NASA's $500 million Gamma Ray Observatory, the second in a series of four "great observatories," is scheduled for liftoff. In 1992, a new acience satellite will be launched to orbit Mars. A Hubble-class $1.5 billion X-ray telescope will be launched later this decade, along with an equally capable $1 billion infrared observatory. Closer to home. NASA plans to send new interplanetary probes to Saturn and a comet that together will cost some $1.6 billion. All in all, the United States is spending nearly $9 billion over the next decade to explore the universe with robotic probes and satellites. While the price tag is high, astronomers say the payoff is nothing less than an astronomical renaissance unrivaled in the history of modern

Minority job rights

Sometime this year, the House of Representatives will almost certainly pass the job discrimination bill that the Senate approved in July. The only question is whether a few key words can be revised in such a way that the president will accept it and sign the bill. The key to that may be nothing more than a willingness by the White House and Justice Department to negotiate the issue in good faith, something they seemed unwilling to do before the Senate voted.

The administration says that, as worded, the bill would force employers to follow quotas in hiring and promotion. The support-ers of the bill argue just as vehemently that the bill does nothing more than restore employment rights for minorities and women to where they were before the U.S. Supreme Court issued a series of adverse decisions last

The most perverse of those decisions was one overruling the court's own unamimous precedent in the 1971 case, Griggs vs. Duke Power Co., which held that where there was a clear disproportion between the racial composition of the work force in a plant or office and the composition of the labor force in the community, the employer could be required to show that the employment criteria he used were reasonably related to the requirements of a job. thus, where a utility required a written I.Q. test for maintenance workers, it had to show that it really needed the test to get competent people.

The Griggs standard was the fuel for some 18 years; it was one that most employers accepted and which, it's generally acknowledged, did not lead to racial or gender quotas in employment. The question now is whether the new job discrimination bill imposes a more stringent test than Griggs and thus could lead to quotas and open employers to endless legal harassment, as the administration has charged. And that, in turn, hinges on the meaning of some technical language.

But surely there must be enough legal wisdom around Washington to come to some agreement on that. If the administration accepts Griggs, it should not be impossible to compromise. If it doesn't, then all its claims about its support for civil rights will look like so much rhetoric.

Over-ripe airwaves

As cable television programmers and the Fox broadcast network test the limits of tolerance of this country's self-appointed censors, what are the big networks to do? CBS has an answer: Try to out-sleaze the competition.

Thus, come autumn, viewers will hear a 6-year-old girl in a new sitcom expostulate: "You suck!" Or they may rub their ears after hearing actress Sharon Gless say, in another series: "I'm thinking about maybe having my t--- (breasts) fluffed up a bit."

We hesitate to repeat the tastelessness, but the examples make clear just how far television will go to keep its bottom line "fluffed up," you should excuse the expression. And it's not just CBS, or even just the programming - check out those commercials — or even just television.

But TV and radio are the media that come directly into the home, where anyone of any age can switch on at any time (If you stay tuned to that precocious 6-year-old, you'll also hear her say, about her 16-year-old sister, "Ignore her. She's ovulating.")

No one should mistake this for a refreshing new boldness in a medium that, for decades. too frequently offered a squeaky-clean utopia. No, this is desperation, impure and simple. One must await the new TV season to know how typical these anippets of bad taste will turn out to be, though heaven knows they're consistent with much of what's already on cable, in nightclubs, on records and at the movies, not to mention in the way too many Americans talk to each other.

Apart from being offensive even to people who think of themselves as tolerant, this stretching of the limits is bound to draw the fire of those TV watchdog groups who would impose standards so chaste as to accelerate the flight of viewers to cable, leaving the networks in an even more precarious fix.

More ominous, the Federal Communications Commission now proposes to expand its ban on "indecency" on the airwaves from 14 hours to 24 hours a day, in words so vague that even some classic works might not pass muster. And, of course, Congress, through the National Endowment for the Arts, is already demanding an oath of propriety from artists who receive federal grants.

is this what the TV producers want? Are they so bereft of imagination that they can keep an audience only by having 16-year-olds use the language of the barracks?

McMillan menagerie helps community

The land in Central Florida is generally flat, however, in Oviedo there is a house that sits on a hill. The home belongs to David and Paula McMillan. The McMillans moved to Seminole County from Polk County in 1986.

Yards from the McMillan home are some exotic endangered animals which they own. Their menageric includes Bombay, a royal Bengal tiger from India: Santos, a Siberian tiger: Pancho, an African lion: Nina, a black leopard; Sasha, a spotted leopard, and Rudi, a fallow deer. Collectively they have an extensive repertoire of appearances including charity benefits for Kellogg Corporation, Saturday Night Live, Merv Griffin. Universal Studios, Superbowl 1961, commercials for Yves Saint Laurent jeans, Winn Dixie, several animal videos, and Liza Minnelli's birthday party. They also have two African goats and Misha, a baby snow leopard.

Housing for the animals was clean and well kept with ample exercise areas. There was also an enclosed area for training the animals.

an enclosed area for training the animals.

David McMillan has been a performer for big theme parks worldwide. His last employment was with Circus World and Ringling Brothers. David and Paula McMillan founded Tiger's Eye Productions Inc. in 1988. Prior to founding Tiger's Eye Productions, the McMillans owned Flying Tigers, Inc.

The McMillans believe that promoting respect for nature and all living creatures is critical at this stage of the earth's development, when ...

many species of plants and animals are passing into extinction.

David and Paula are committed to educating individuals and the public about the plight of endangered animals and preserving these for future generations. They conduct a small school for five months on weekends (Saturdays and Sundays) for 18 students. They have two classes with seven students in one class and eleven students in the other.

One of the students, Gregg Wheeler, is a junior at the University of Central Florids. He has always possessed an affinity for animals and considers himself an environmentalist. The training he receives here is invaluable. Students experience the A to Z's of animal husbandry and handling, from capturing and restraining primates, to bottle feeding a baby tiger.

Tiger's Eye Productions is licensed by the United States Department of the Interior, the United States Pish & Wildlife Commission, The United States Pish & Wildlife Commission. The Florida Department of Education, and the Florida Pish and Game Commission. The McMillians rehabilitate animals for the Florida Pish & Game Commission. They also have a lisison with the Central Florida Zoo.

The McMillians have conducted seminars about the preservation of endangered species at Cypress Gardens and for Seminole and Orange County school systems. They have sponsored many programs for the community without charge. For example, Bombay appeared in Volume V, Issue I of the February/March 1967 issue of Camero Corral as a favor to his neighbors, the Gentrys. There have been appearances for the Rotary Club International, Oviedo Chamber of Commerce, University of Central Florida, numerous public and private schools in Seminole and Orange Counties, John Knox Village, Bahia Temple, American Cancer Society, Shrinera, Tuscawilla Women's Club. Rudi (the deer) appeared with former United States Senator Paula Hawkins for a Variety Club function.

Currently, the McMillans' school is in jeopardy because of a recently evolving problem of obtaining a variance from the Seminole County Commissioners. We certainly hope the problem can be resolved amicably since the McMillans and their exotic, endangered animals are an asset to this community. The McMillans may be - contacted at 407-365-1571.

ELLEN GOODMAN

S&L turns bargain basement

BOSTON — Let me say up front that I am a passionate devotee of sales. I was taught the value of a dollar at my mother's knee, or at least at her side, in the dungeons of Filene's Basement where Fifth Avenue fashion could be had for First Avenue prices. To this day, I believe that buying any item at its original price is an indication of serious moral failing.

So, like other inveterate bargain hunters, I felt my blood begin to race when it was announced last Wednesday that a giant national corporation planned to hold a truly massive clearance sale, an inventory reduction of unprecedented dimensions.

This all-point shoppers alert came from the Resolution Trust Corp. This name may not be quite as familiar yet as Leohmann's, but wait a while. The RTC is the agency set up by Congress to manage the failed savings and loan banks and their assets. Each time we bail out a bank, it appears, we are left holding their holdings. Now, according to the RTC, Everything Must Go!

So we have an event this fall that promises to be more than your ordinary yard sale. Banka don't do yards. They do houses, hotels, shopping centers, skyscrapers. The owners also do quite well for themselves, thank you, but that is another matter.

The centerpiece of this sale is going to be an international auction televised in Tokyo. London and across the United States. Seventy-one properties, valued at $300 million, will be going, going, gone. Get 'em while they last...

The theory is that the more the RTC sells off. the less the average person will have to pay for the entire debacle. The numbers are, after all, slowly penetrating our national innumeracy. With the banks deregulated and the deposits insured, high-rolling managers spent the 1980s playing with house money. Now we all are paying their gambling debts - somewhere between $90 billion and $350 billion.

But despite my enormous love for a good sale. I am not at all sure that having bought so dear, the government should begin selling cheap. It finally occurs to me that this stuff being sold in November is OURS. Ours, as in the taxpayers.

In the coming years, every American is going to pay somewhere between $2,000 and $5,000 for the bailout. If it's not going to cost us that much, we ought to get something out of it. Why not hang on ot the Kings Crossing Golf Course in Corpus Christi? Every American should be allotted 18 holes for their troubles.

Okay, you don't play golf. Neither do I. HOw about one night with the kids at the Rolling Hills Hotel in Davie, Florida? A nap at the Monroe Inn in Monroe, Louisiana? Lunch at the Radisson in San Antonio? Why not? We paid for it.

There are other things to be considered before we sell. Last week, at their annual conference, the governors said that the taxpayers in the North and East are angry at paying for mismanagement in the South and West. Why not give Illinois a neat little building in Austin as a way of saying howdy and thanks? If there are some Disney fans in

New Jersey, let's hand them the keys to a professional building in Orlando.

The worst effect of the S&L scandal is that it's coming out of the peace divi-dend. We may not have any more money for the homeless, for child care. for social programs. But we will have buildings.

Why auction them off to the Brits or the Japanese? Why not make The American Street People's shelter out of the Knights Inn in North Ft. Myers Florida? Why not have a Bide-a-Wee Childcare Center instead of a Cedar Park Plaza in Lakewood, Colorado? A Go-Straight Rehab Center in the Centax Business Park in Dallas.

Banks don't do houses,

ping centers,

skyscrapers.

do yards. They

The National Park Service might even add an urban ranger to accommodate visitors to our office parks. As for the repossessed houses in the RTC, we could give every low- and moderate-income taxpayer one lottery ticket to win a home of their own.

The bailout of the banks is a worst case example of private and public partnership. Having been stuck holding the bag (not to mention the clubs and the golf course), we are going to get rid of it all at a tag sale price to another set of private owners. They will try to turn a profit, the taxpayer will pay the difference, and we'll get nothing except the right to be banned from the golf course.

May I suggest we save at least one building? The Western Savings Corporate Center in Phoenix is a honey. A few bars on the walls, an extra set of keys or two and we'll have a place to stash all those swell bank managers who got us into this mess. We'll call it the S&L Memorial Incarceration Center.

A good buy at any price.

Goodman is insightful

As a Christian Scientist who has been reading and appreciating Ellen Goodman's columns for yours, I'd wondered when she would take up the Twitchell case in Boston. Her recent column on the subject reflected the usual Goodman characteristics — insight. sensitivity, an eye for human complexity, an effort to get to the heart of the hard public issues bearing on private lives.

frontcally, the column may also have been as much an expression of faith for her as turning to spiritual healing is for Christian Scientists.

The faith Goodman voices, of course, is not denominational but cultural: faith in modern science. Not necessarily science as savior (H-bombs and AIDS have punctured that illusion), but science as the realm of pure reason, the primary definer of truth. Medicine is a central expression of this faith, but also as Goodman herself has often htdped us nee the science in which "hard facts" are most entangled with values, objective results most often affected by subjective human nature.
Christian Scientists don't belittle either the modern acientific outlook or its stunning technological fruits. Many of us have had ientific training; many if not most of us have known physicians whose friendship we've enjoyed and whose humanity we admire. Still, we're skeptical of the culture's changing certainties and (at least at our best) reluctant to worship its gods. We don't feel genuine prayer is equatable with believing in lactrile, nor do we dismiss as mere pseudo-science the connection between healing and spirituality. The fact that so many of our contemporaries apparently do worries us profoundly.

The death of a child is surely the worst possible context to raise mega-concerns about where humankind is going in what is often considered a postreligious era. Simply as human beings, we can't pretend to be immune to the pathos of the Twitchell case or to the soul-searching such a tragedy inevitably causes. What it doesn't change, however, is the immense meaning this spiritual pathway has had for us and continues to have - not only the physical healings (yes, including healings of a signifi-cant number of children and adults whose lives by all reasonable projections would have been lost under medical care), but also the dimension and light that some breakingthrough of the reality of God's love always Christian Scientists are convinced that this reality isn't a dispensable relic from the religious past, but the very wellspring of human caring. The legal issues are complex because spiritual healing does involve both head and heart. These issues can't easily be legislated away.

She's going back to school, and in one year she'll be qualified to teach art classes.

"I've always had a love for art.
I've been raising a family and the time was just never there."

That time element is an important subject in her artwork, which adorns the walls and tables of her home at 236 Shady Oaks Circle. Her second painting, a lush green oil full of trees and depicting a boardwalk in New Smyrna Beach, hangs above a tropical fish tank in the living room. The 6-by-4-foot painting was displayed during dedicaton week at Lake Mary

City Hall.
"It was the biggest one there," she said. "It's definitely a well-traveled painting. The movers just loved it — they had to make a special crate for it."

Nosal moved from California back to Lake Mary four years ago, after having spent six years here before her husband. Michael, a sales director with Stromberg Carlson Corp., was transferred to San Francisco. Originally from New Jersey, she speaks with a moderate accent and recalls with a sigh fog rolling over the San Francisco Bay.

Although nature plays an important role in her artwork composed mainly of pencil sketches, oils, acrylics, and some ceramic sculptures - her most original work deals with human emotions through symbolism.

A lively scupture called "Jumping Lady" sits on a coffee table alongside a ceramic

Most of Nosal's work deals with the struggles women have today — struggles for more time, more freedom, more education.

A dark, cerie "self-portrait" shows only a forearm gripping a tube of paint, some of which has cosed onto a clock with no hands. A half-open book towers next to the clock.

Another painting ahows a woman trapped inside the hull of an eye socket, with the canal to the brain stretching out in front

"There's never enough time to do what you want to do," she said of the self-portrait, and in describing the other. "She's trapped within the limits of her mind."

But Nosal wants to show other women of her generation and before that there are no limits, that they can go back to school after 20 years. In 1986 she tried one class at Seminole Communi-ty College, "And that was all it took." Refusing to go the normal route and choose night school, she attends UCF during the day as an art education major. She's had a few classes with her daughter, Donna, a liberal studies major, and next fall they'll sit together in two of

"At least we have study buddies," she said. "She cuts sometimes and it's O.K. I cut sometimes and it's O.K.

the same things."
Nosal credits her husband and family with supporting her in her decision — in more ways than one.

"Now he's got three of us in college," she said.

But more importantly, he seems genuinely proud of his wife's determination.

"Did she tell you she's on the dean's list?" he saked, to a reply of "Mike!!"

"He pushes me," she se "He's very supportive and he gives me ideas. The thing about artists is you need someone to tell you when to stop."

Her latest creative plans include a Southwestern theme; a friend from Arisona is bringing some "skulls" for her to model, and she's already aketching cows. She does not show her cows. She does not show her work professionally, but gives it away as gifts to friends and "People tell me I should show them...maybe a couple of years down the line I will."

But right now the most im-portant thing for Nosal is getting her degree, thus proving to herself and others that women should be able to do whatever they want.

"I think what I'm doing is important, because after getting married and raising a family, it's hard to go back to school," she said. "Women need to know that it can be done, because a lot of them are afraid to make that

And as for herself? "I can see the light at the end of that tunnel."

permantly in city hall. About 17 local artists dislayed their work — mostly lorida scenes, wildlife, and city history - the week of the dedication, but the city has yet to choose its designated painter. City Manager John Litton says it could take until next year.

"It's just not a pressing matter right now," he said. Litton also said the city must first decide what it wants depicted and select a medium before it picks the artist.

"The original intent got misconstrued. We ended up trying to select the artist before the type of rendering." he said. "The type of painting is extremely important. It's like the hardware versus the software."

Margaret Wesley, who planned the city hall art display and is a member of the Lake Mary Historical Commission, said the city told her it was looking for a collage-type of painting that depicts city history, from the Indians up to the present.

"I'd love to see one of these good local people get it," she

Although the new federal fines pertain to dumping of all types of garbage, the strongest portion of the law deals with dumping plastic products overboard. According to Arnold, "Plastics have been fouling the world's oceans and coastal waters at an alarming rate and have resulted in the death of more than one million birds and 100,000 marine mammala and sea turtles each

By KATHLESS Messes United Press International

WASHINGTON - Mayor Mayor Marion Barry's conviction on only one cocaine possession charge from a 14-count indictment was lauded as a victory by his supporters and could pave the way for rejuvenating his political career.

Barry was convicted on one miedemeanor cocaine possession count and acquitted of another Thursday by a federal jury that declared itself hopelessly deadlocked on 12 other drug and perjury charges after a 10-week trial.

That led U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson to declare a mistrial on the 12 counts and set a Sept. 17 status hearing to allow the prosecution to say whether it wishes to retry

Barry on those charges.

Barry refused to speak to reporters outside court, but he scheduled a news conference Saturday. Barry announced ouring the trial he would not seek a fourth mayoral term in this fall's election.

The Democratic primary filing deadline has passed, but Barry would have until midnight Monday to switch parties to independent and either run for mayor or an at-large seat on the City Council Nov. 6.

Barry, the city's mayor since being elected in 1978, reportedly had been considering a bid for council to attain another year of city service and qualify for full pension.

Impact on consumers of Middle East crisis

Here are some answers to questions consumers are asking about the potential oil impact from Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Question: Why is Middle East oil so vital to the economic health of the industrialized na-

Answer: The Persian Gulf oil producers supply about 25 percent of the free world's oil needs. The United States, the world's largest oil-consuming nation, imports roughly half the oil it uses. Saudi Arabia, where the United States has stationed troops, supplies some 15 percent of U.S. oil imports.

Before the United Nations embargo, Iraq was the United States' second-largest foreign oil supplier, providing 7.3 percent of total U.S. petroleum imports, 7.3 percent, and Kuwait 1.4 percent. Or What does the embargo against Iraq and Kuwaiti oil mean?

A: The embargo is worldwide. That means no country can buy Iraqi or Kuwaiti oil. Turkey. through which Iraq exports some of its oil, has shut down two pipelines. Iraq also ships its oil through a pipeline in Saudi Arabia which so far has not been closed.

The embargo hs removed about 4.5 million barrels of oil a day produced by Iraq and Kuwait from world markets. The action is designed to punish Iraq for its invasion and annexation of Kuwait.

If Iraq knocked out Saudi Arabia's oil production in retaliation against the embargo, there would be a severe supply disruption and the consequences to the Western economies would be catastrophic. That is the reason the United States has committed such a large military force to

At The world currently has surplus oil inventories of about 100 million barrels, which will help cushion any immediate disruption.

Saudi Arabia has indicated it to willing to pump an extra 2 million barrels a day over and above its current output of about 5.1 milion barrels a day. Fellow OPEC member Venezuela is ready to increase its output by another 500,000 barrels a day.

Experts estimate additional production from other sources would be able to more or less make up the remaining shortfall of 2 million barrels a day.

© What will the impact be of higher crude oil prices on the economy as a whole?

At Some economists feel the Persian Gulf developments have brought the U.S. economy closer to a recession. Higher crude prices would cause interest rates go up and also heat up inflation. Consumers would stop buying big ticket items like automobiles. the housing market would worsen and unemployment would go up. Additionally, if oil prices reached and remained at $28 a barrel, the federal deficit would go up by another $80 billion by 1992.

St What is the Strategic Petroleum Reserve and how can it help the current situation?

At In 1975, in response to the energy crisis caused by the 1973-1974 Arab oil embargo. Congress authorized the creation of a reserve of up to 750 million barrels to reduce the impact of future oil supply disruptions.

In August, the United States had 587 million barrels of crude oil under the SPR program stored in salt-dome caverns in the Southwest. Another 35,000 barrels are being added every day. The current capacity of the SPR is 627 million barrels.

Under the law that created the SPR, the president can order the prevent that from happening.

SPR, the president can order the reserves to be released in the disruption, how will the shortfall event of a severe energy supply

Continued from Page 1A in Washington, the Pentagon confirmed that elements of the 101st Airborne Division, based at Fort Campbell, Ky., were joining forces already in Saudi Arabia. There also were unconfirmed reports that an array of missiles were being shipped to the region to help U.S. troops defend against possible Iraqi air attacks. Bush, however, refused to divulge details of his military plans except to say that he would "guarantee the integrity of Saudi Arabia" from an Iraqi invasion.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III, who met with Bush, said U.S officials continue to seek the release of more than 3,500 Americans trapped in Iraq and Kuwait but are still unwilling to describe them as hostages so long as they are not mistreated and negotiations with Iraq proceed.

Earlier Saturday, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater confirmed that 11 Americans. including 10-year-old Penelope Nabokov, had left Iraq across the border to Jordan.

Bush, addressing the prospect of Saddam's ouster for the first time, said, "My feeling is that whatever it takes to have our objectives met is what should take place" when saked if he would like to see the Iraqi president overthrown.

There have been several reports in the last week that Bush is hoping that increasing in-ternational economic and military pressure on Saddam would foment a coup. But Bush avoided a direct answer during a 20minute talk with reporters on the porch of his oceanside compound.

An uprising "sometimes happens when leaders get so out of touch with reality that they commit their country to outra-genus acts," Bush said. "That does happen, and I know that some countries around the world are hoping that that will happen in this situation but we'll have to wait and sec.

Asked if his objectives specifically included overthrowing Saddam, Bush replied, "I'll just leave it sit out there and everybody can figure it out."

He later said his administration is "not prepared to support the overthrow" of Saddam.

But I hope these actions that have been taken will result in an Iraq that is prepared to live peacefully in a community of

Arabs feel little sympathy for Kuwait

By JOHN PHILLIPS United Press International

ROME - Few ordinary Arabs outside Kuwait will shed tears for billionaire Kuwaiti Emir Sheikh Jabar Al Ahmad al Sabah if U.S. forces fail to reinstate him as head of his oil-rich strip of sand and skyscrapers.
"I don't mind if Iraq invades Kuwait or if Syria attacks Egypt or if Iraq attacks Israel. or even if there is a third world war," said Salah Abu Lawi. 35, a doctor at the Ahli Hospital in the Bureij Palestinian refugee camp in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip. Hundreds of thousands of Palestinians work or have worked in Kuwait. But many see the Kuwaitis as rich and corrupt. Some complain they never were offered citizenship even though they contributed much to building the country.

In Lebanon, members of the Kuwaiti ruling family and other Kuwaiti millionaires each still own at least one or two palaces in the mountain resorts of Bahmadoun, Aley

Many Lebanese were deeply offended when the same well-heeled Kuwaitis, who used Lebanon as a playground before the Lebanese civil war, imposed strict travel restrictions on Lebanese citizens after a TWA jetliner was hijacked to Beirut by Shiite guerrillas in 1985.

Lebanese Shiite Moslems have long called for the overthrow of the conservative Arab Gulf regime. An Iranian-sponsored assassination attempt on the Kuwaiti Emir near the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait City on May 25, 1985 narrowly missed its target.

Despite their unpopularity with many ordinary Arabs, nobody who has visited Kuwait could deny the deep-seated loyalty of the majority of Kuwaitis themselves to the Emir and his Sabah family.

Ordinary Kuwaitis responded briskly to a call to volunteer for civil defense training in 1987 when windows in Kuwait City rattled from the Iranian bombardment of the nearby Iraqi port of Basra.

Many were overweight civil servants used to cushy jobs pushing gold-plated pens. But their sincerity and patriotism were evident to foreign observers.

Despite Iranian-inspired subversion that led to the bombing of the U.S. and French embassies, the Kuwaiti Shiite community also remained overwhelmingly loyal to the Sunni Moslem Emir.

Kuwaiti society was liberal politically by comparison with, for example, Saudi Arabia and Bahrain. A measure of public debate on sensitive issues and criticism of the government was tolerated. A National Assembly or parliament was founded though the Emir dissolved it during the Iran-Iraq war.

Until the mid-18th century. Kuwait was part of the Wilayet of Basra, a province of the crumbling Ottoman Empire.

The Sabah and other families settled in the bay of Kuwait, which means "little fort." arriving from the deserts of the Nedj (central Arabia) in the early 18th century. Sabah negotiated Kuwait's semi-independent status with the Wali of Basra. Kuwait's independence was confirmed during the 19th and early 20th centuries when Kuwaiti rulers signed a series of treaties with the British Government of India, guaranteeing British protection.

The AAA also said there are "adequate gasoline supplies to meet all current travel needs as well as those over the upcoming Labor Day holiday unless conditions significantly worsen in the Middle East."

But scores of protesters, some carrying placards that read.
"Stop the Rip Off." and "Hussein is Insane: Don't Make it Worse," converged on the midtown Manhattan headquarters of Exxon to protest the rise in oil prices.

"The oil companies should be rolling their prices back," said Rich Goldberg, a spokesman for the protesters. "And it's up to consumers to pressure them to keep costs down."

In Raleigh, N.C., Attorney General Lacy Thornburg filed a deceptive trade practices lawsuit against Exxon, alleging the oil giant recently raised wholesale

"When Exxon or any other company unfairly raises its prices to the distributors, it sets off a chain reaction of price increases which hit the consumer in the pocket."

Exxon had no immediate comment on the suit.

In Michigan, Goy. James Blanchard charged: "There's absolutely no justification for what they've done except for foolish panic or price gouging."

Like other officials, Richard Kessel, the New York state Consumer Protection Board chief, personally asked oil companies to cut prices. "I think it's a hoax. I think it's a rip-off of the consumer and everybody knows it." Kessel said.

Indiana Lt. Gov. Frank L. O'Bannon and Rep. Philip Sharp, D-Ind., also held a session with industry representatives in Indianapolis. "I think the question is, who's doing the goug-ing?" Sharp said. "(Iraqi Presi-dent) Saddam Hussein was the first big gouger."

In Rhode Island, Gov. Edward gasoline prices by as much as 6 D. DiPrete set up a consumer cents a gallon before informing ·hotline to report complaints of distributors of the moves.

Grady leads PGA after three rounds

United Press International

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Because he has been through it before, Wayne Grady knows the pressure that awaits him in the final round of the PGA Championship.

And he considers himself just the man for the job.
"I don't think anybody is going to shoot a real great round out there tomorrow," Grady said after securing a two-shot lead 54 holes into the final major championship of the year. Then, he grinned and said except me.

Two spectacular chip shots on the 10th and 11th holes steadled Grady Saturday and helped him shoot an even-par 72 over the brutally tough Shoal Creek Golf Club course. He owns a two-shot advantage over Fred Couples and defending champion Payne Stewart.

At last year's British Open. Grady took a one-shot lead into the final round and eventually lost in a playoff to Mark Calcavecchia.

He will be paired Sunday with Stewart, who is trying to become the first man in 53 years to successfully defend a PGA title.

"This will be more difficult than last year's British Open because of the premium on driving." said Grady, a 83-year-old Australian who □See PUA, Page 3B "" don't understand," said Lovel. who can be found at Dr. Phillips/Windermere Little League this week cheering on the Oviedo Junior All-Stars in the Southern Regional Tournament. "You start car-ing about these kids like they were your own.'

And when you've been around a league since its inception, as Lovel has been with Oviedo, you see lots of kids come and go. On Tuesday night, several stopped by to pay their respects.

Lovel's caring for the players and dedication to the league was recognized last week by the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company, which honored him as Oviedo Little League's 1990 Volunteer of Mike Walker, a 1985 graduate of Seminole Community College, won his first major league game in a 5-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers at Cleveland Memorial Stadium Friday night. Walker gave up seven hits over 8 and 1?3 innings and struck out four in only his eighth big league start.

ex-SCC hurler Walker gets first major league triumph

United Press International

CLEVELAND - Ever since John Farrell went on the disabled list, the Cleveland Indians have been looking for a fourth starter.

After watching ex-Seminole Community College player Mike Walker yield one earned run in 8 1-3 inning in Friday night's 5-2 win over the Detroit Tigers, manager John McNamara said he's found him.

"He's the fourth starter." McNamara said of Walker, a Brooksville resident who graduated from SCC in 1:385.

Walker, who gave up seven hits while striking out four and walking two. "His last two performances are very, very encouraging." said McNamara. Mitch Webster hit a grand slam to cap a five-run Cleveland fourth and Doug Jones got the final two outs to earn his 30th save for the Indians. "His one swing of the bat turned out to be the difference offensively." McNamara said of Webster.

Walker, 1-3, gave up three runs in seven innings in his last start but the Indians had lost in all eight of Walker's previous major-league appearances.

"I wouldn't say it's the best (start)." Walker, 23, said. "It's the one I'll remember. It was great. I can stop worrying about that this first win) and start pitching now."

Walker had given up just four hits and had not allowed a runner past second until the ninth, when Cecil Fielder led off with a double, went to third on a groundout and scored on Larry Sheets' third single of the game.

Dave Bergman then singled to knock Wilker out.

"Going into the ninth, I would have loved to get the complete game, the win and the shutout all at once," Walker said. "I guess now I have something more to look forward to."

Jones came in and got Chet Lemon to hit a potential double play ball to Felix Fermin at second. But Cory Snyder, in his fourth start at shortstop, threw the relay to first in the dirt for an error that allowed Sheets to score and sent Lemon to Jones then struck out Mark Salas to end the game.

'He pitched outstanding." Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said of Walker, a right-hander. "He certainly deserved the shutout."

But asked if he had ever seen Walker pitch before. Anderson said: "I've never seen him before in my life."

Farrell was placed on the disabled list June 25 with an elbow injury and, ever since then, the Indians have had a difficult time filling his spot. But the performance of Walker See Walker, Page 3B people and you will most likely hear ten different replies. In my opinion, most great fishermen have several characteristics in common. First of all. they are equally adept at both fresh and salt water fishing, and feel just at home on the St. Johns River as on the ocean. These versatile men can catch speckled perch or wahoo with equal proficiency. Master anglers are also highly skilled with all types of tackle. and can handle an offshore trolling rod and reel with the same ease as an ultralight spinning outfit. These outstanding fishermen also match their tackle to the size of the species that they wish to catch, and they appreciate the feel of a wellbalanced outfit in much the same way as a musician values a well-tuned instrument. A quality reel and a matched rod are music to the ears of good fishermen everywhere.

Great anglers are alsc attentive to detail - reels are cleaned and lubricated, rods are in good condition, line is always fresh. and all tackle is neatly organized. When it is time to go fishing, no matter is left to chance, and no stone is left unturned. Good fishermen plan and prepare for success.

Exceptional fishermen are perennial students of the sport. They keep abreast of the latest tackle and techniques, and they do not hesitate to employ new ideas that will make them more efficient.

Really good anglers are also astute observers of nature, and their eyes are constantly looking for signs and clues that would lead them to success. Each trip they learn something new, and information is catalogued in their inquisitive brains to be used at a later date. These studious men are living encyclopedias of all they have seen and experienced, and they bring. a wealth of knowledge to each fi hing trip.

George, from George's Bait and Tackle, reports good bass fishing in the Wekiva River with worms and shiners. Lake Dias in Deland is also producing some big bass. Fly fishing for bream is good in the Dead River , and bream fishing with crickets is good around local bridges. Steve Gard, at the Osteen

The team finished the 16-team tournament with a perfect 8-0 record to earn the gold medal. Norman had defeated the Vipers earlier Saturday morning to earn the right to play Baseball World. The team was put together and managed by instructional league and summer camps. "I'm amazed that the kids played this well." said assistant coach Dan Bogeajis. "We've only played eight games together as a team while some of these teams have played 80-100 games."

The teams pitching was outstanding in this tournament as Bradley Ramtrez (Union Park Little League) was 3-0 with one save, Danny Hogeajia (Altamonte Springs Little League) was 3-0. Jason Gronert (Altamonte Springs) was 1-0 with two saves and Matt Huston (Goldenrod Little League) was 1-0. Bogeajis said Friday's game was actually the championship game. "They (the Vipers) came into this tournament 92-8. They played six games a week (three during the week and three on the weekend) during the year. Danny (Bogeajis' son) and Jason (Gronert) just pitched and awesome game."

Saturday's championship game proved to be of little trouble for the Baseball World bunch as they exploded for two home runs and five runs in the top of the first inning. For the game the All-Stars had 13 hits and hit five home runs.

"It was not a pretty sight," said Bogeajis of the final. "They (the Giants) had a very emotional victory over the Vipers in the morning game and I think they were just happy to be in the finals."

Peter Gill (Goldenrod Little League) led off the game with a single and scored ahead of Ramirez' home run. Gronert and Bogeajis were both hit by a pitch before Huston finished the big inning with another home run.

The lead was more than enough for Ramirez who won his third game of the tournament. He finished the game with a three-hitter, striking out 12 while walking only one.

Baseball World completed the scoring by scoring three runs in the third inning, two runs in the fourth inning and by adding single runs in the third and sixth innings. Norman's lone run came in the bottom of the fourth inning.

Pacing the Baseball World offense were Bogeajis, who was 3 for 3 with a home run and two doubles. Ricky Engleberg (Altamonte Springs), who was 2 for 2 with a double, Huston, who was 2 for 4 with two home runs and Ramirez, who helped his own cause by going 2 for 5 with a home run."

Also contributing were Dwayne Sanford. Nick Thomas (Both of Goldenrod) and Jonathan McDonald (Union Park), who were all I for 3 and Gill who went I for 5.

The Giants finished the tournament with a 6-3 record and 75-13 overall. Friday's game was a different story however. Baseball World only led 2-1 going into the top of the sixth inning.

With two out and one man on McDonald stood at the plate with two strikes on him when he belted a long home run to give Baseball World a 4-1 advantage.

"That was the key play," said Bogeails. "It gave us a cushion going into the bottom of the sixth inning and we needed it."

Danny Bogeajis had pitched a four-hitter, while striking out five and walking only two batters to that point. But an error and a walk put men on first and second with no-one out and Emanski went to the bullpen for Gronert.

A single and a fielder's choice scored two runs for the Vipers and they had the tying run on third base and the winning run on second base. Gronert intentionally waiked the next batter to load the bases and set up a force play at the plate.

Urinary tract infections prevented by antibiotics

By KARGH KLINGER UPI Science Writer

BOSTON - A bacteria-killing drug taken after sexual intercourse appears highly effective in preventing recurring urinary tract infections, in women, researchers said.

Women who took a combina-tion antibiotic drug after sex were far less likely to develop an infection of the bladder or urethra than those given a worthless placebo, said Dr. Ann Stapleton of the University of Washington in Seattle.

The study results indicate that for most infection-prone women. taking the drug only after in-tercourse is as effective a pre-vention measure as taking the drug daily. Stapleton and co-researchers reported Tuesday in the Journal of the American

An estimated one woman in five develops so infection of the urinary tract sometime in her life, and four out of five who seek medical treatment have another infection within 18 months. The infections can usually be treated effectively with antibiotics. But if left untreated, a urinary infection can lead to serious kidney damage or blood poisoning.

Women are far more likely than men to develop urinary infections, partly because their urethras — the tube leading to the bladder - are much shorter than a man's, so that bacteria can more easily reach the bladder. If bacteria are allowed to multiply, the resulting infection can cause symptoms rang-ing from abdominal pain to a burning sensation during urina-tion and blood-tinged urine.

Sexual intercourse is thought to increase the risk of infection by allowing bacteria to move more easily from the vaginal and bowel areas, where they can live harmlessly, into the urethra.

In the new study, 16 women who had experienced at least two urinary tract infections within the previous year took a drug combining 40 milligrams of trimethoprim and 200 milligrams of sulfamethoxasole each time they had sex.

The treatment is sold as Bactrim by Hoffmann LaRoche & Co. in Nutley, N.J., and Septra by Burroughs Wellcome Co. of Research Triangle Park, N.C.

Eleven other women who were included for comparison took the placebo after each intercourse. The women in each group had an average age of 23. Sixty-nine percent of women in the drug group and 91 percent in the assignation group used diaphragms, which have been linked to higher risks for urinary infection. infection.

After six months, nine of the women in the placebo group, but only two who had taken the drug had developed urinary infec-tions. Stapleton said. Both women in the drug group who experienced infections were found to harbor strains of bacteria resistant to antibiotics.

Researchers said that among women who took the placebo --but not those who took the drug a higher frequency of in-tercourse was associated with a higher rate of urinary infection. The finding supports prior studies indicating that sex in-creases the infection risk, they

Until now, the standard practice for treating women with frequent urinary infections was have them take antibiotics daily or three times a week. Stapleton said. But the study indicates taking the drug within two hours of sex can be equally effective in preventing infections, she added.

"Every Jan. 1," he explained, "I sit down and write out my goals for the year. This is the main one for 1990." In order to create the tape library, Newman hired Cindy Clegg, formerly with the production department of, WESH Television in Orlando, to oversee taping and editing. Part of Clegg's medical production facility contains two viewing rooms for Newman's patients.

"Most of what we have right now," Clegg said, "are commercially produced tapes, but we are adding localised introductions and explanations to them so that they will pertain specifically to our operation." Most of the tapes last 8 to 25 minutes. She added that plans for the immediate future call for some locally produced tapes that may include breast self examination, an introduction for obstetrics patients, and an overview of the entire nine months of preentire nine months of pre-

Newman is concerned about the members of his profession.
"Nationally, about 12 percent of all OB specialists give up their practice or change to a different field every year," he said. "Ad-ditionally, gynecology is getting so complex and malpractice in-threat, it's no wom'er we are decreasing in number." Newman, who said he has no intention of changing specialties, and he delivered 556 habies during 1950, and expects to deliver at least that many during 1950.

Born and raised in Sanford, Newman has been in private practice since 1995 and last year served as Chairman of the De-partment of Surgery at Central Florida Regional Hospital.

"Another of my goals," Newman said, "is to establish nurse midwives. At the present, they are not allowed to be on staff at CFRM, but hopefully that can be changed." And in conjunction with that, the doctor and his TV producer are already talking about another video tape presentation, "The Role of Midwives in the Birthing Process."

Researchers connect genetic links to lung cancer

DOGA KOLD

WASHINGTON — Smokers' genes may play a major role in determining their risk for lung cancer, but experts warn that people should not take new findings about heredity's influence as a carte blanche to

Two recent studies have uncovered the strongest evidence to date for genetic links to lung cancer, which kills more than 140,000 Americans annually and is the nation's No. 1 cause of cancer death.

In a study of nearly 200 smokers in Baltimore, National Cancer Institute researchers found smokers who quickly metabolized the high-blood pressure drug debrisoquine were six times more likely to develop lung cancer than those who metabolized the drug slowly.

Previous research had shown that how a person responds to debrisoquine is controlled by a gene which causes cells to make an ensyme that helps metabolise, or break down down, the drug.

'We are very, very worried that if people

EWe are very, very worried that if people get tested and it looks like they are in a low-risk group for lung cancer, they will think 'I can smoke.'

get tested (using the drug) and it looks like they are in a low-risk group for lung cancer, they will think 'I can smoke.' But the risk for all the other smoking-related diseases will probably still be there: heart attack, congestive lung disease," said Dr. Neil Caporaso, who directed the study.

Caporaso emphasized that only about 10 percent of smokers studied fell into the low-risk category for lung cancer, while 60 percent were considered high risk and 30 percent moderate risk based on results of the debrisoquine test.

Based on the findings, Caporaso said it appears that the debrisoquine metabolism gene, which lies on chromosome 22, either plays a role in how the body handles tobacco smoke or is located near another gene that triggers lung cancer development.

"Nowhere does it suggest that if you have the right kind of genes that it is OK to smoke. It only talks about who is at highest risk for developing lung cancer. People who do not have the gene still have some risk for getting cancer," said Dr. John Laszlo, vice president for scientific research of the American Cancer Society in Atlanta.

But Laszlo added that receiving a grim assessment on a lung cancer risk test could scare some die-hard smokers into kicking the habit. "Some people really do need such motivation," he said.

Each human being has about 100,000 genes on 23 pairs of chromsomes. This genetic material — half contributed by the mother and half from the father - bear the blueprints that determine everything from a person's eye color to his or her risk of getting diseases.

Metabolism not hurt by dieting

BOSTON - Very overweight people who go on stringent diets apparently do not experience long-term metabolic changes that work against efforts to lose weight, scientists said.

A study involving 18 obese women who were put on diets found that while their resting metabolic rates initially fell by more than twice the weight they lost, after 48 weeks their weight loss was greater than their metabolism drop, said Thomas Wadden of the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

The findings show that dieting combined with modest physical activity does not result in metabolic rate reductions.

Lion roars for his cause

New club leader is old hand at helping others

by BEVERLY BEST Herald correspondent

SANFORD - If ever there was a man with a cause, Stanley Rockey of Sanford, is that man. Being forced to retire from the Goodyear Rubber Company because of a back allment did not stop him from helping others.

His heart of gold outweighs his large physical stature, and his love for people is related to his deep involvement with the well-known Lions Club. His dedication and commitment to the organization that is known for assisting the visually handicapped has brought the Sanford native an appointment with prestige and honor. Rockey was recently chosen District Governor for the 67 Central Florida area Lions Clubs, with an estimated 2,000 members. His term runs from July 1 to June 30, 1991.

Rockey joined the Gainesville Lions Club in

He and his wife of 40 years, Maryann, moved back to Sanford in 1976. They have three grown children. Their two daughters live in Sanford. Their son, who is a dentist, lives in Palm Coast. They are also the proud grandparents of four grandchildren.

After moving back to Sanford, Rockey's involvement continued after moving his membership to the Sanford's Lions Club. As he recalls the different situations which have come before the club, some in particular stand out in his

Maude celebrates 'sweet 16' with a hay birthday cake

SANFORD - On August 18, 1990, the Central Florida Zoological Park will be celebrating a really big event. This is the day the zoo's Asian elephant. Maude, celebrates her 16th birthday. This promises to be a festive occasion including ele phant face painting, coloring sheets, educational displays, and a sweet sixteen hay birthday cake for the big quest of honor. As visitors, you are invited to bring a homemade birthday card for Maude; or you may even adopt her for the day. New adoptive "parents" will receive an adoption certificate and a photograph to commemorate the occasion, while also contributing to her care and feeding.

Let's find out more about Maude and her truly amazing Elephants are the largest living land mammals. At one time, at least 30 different species of elephants roamed the earth. Today, there are only two species of elephants: the Asian elephant talso known as the Indian elephant) and the African elephant. The Asian elephant is native to southeast Asia from western india to the Malay pentusula and Sumatra. It inhabits bush country, grasslands and jungles. The African elephant, once a common sight, is now restricted to the forests and savannas of central cast Africa.

There are several distinct anatomical differences between the two elephant species. African elephants can reach a height of ten feet, weigh up to 12,000 pounds, have much larger cars, a sloping forehead and a sway back. Asian elephants have a somewhat smaller frame, small cars, a domed forehead, and an arched back. The African elephant has two pronged, fingerlike projections at the end of its trunk: the Asian has only one.

The most distinguishing characteristic of the elephant is its trunk. Having thousands of

There's something about Mozart and ice cream on a hot night

On a hot summer evening recently Marcel and Dollie Snyder invited a mumber of their neighbors and friends to their home to be serenaded by their long-time friend, Hugh McGinnis. Hugh is a concert planist who works in England. The program was devoted to pieces by Mozart, Beethoven, Brahms, Bartok, Kodaly and Liazt, preceded by a short narration by Hugh. After the recital, brandled frozen ice cream was served in Bavarian punch-bowl cups. Everyone congregated in the kitchen and family room for the sip-and-chat session.

The Snyders originally met Hugh in Frankfurt. Germany. where both parties lived in 1955. They have remained friends and stayed in touch from different parts of the world. In 1972, while the Snyders were stationed in Moscow, they arranged to have Hugh play for the ambassador and the diplomatic community during Easter vacation.

Marcel and Dollie brought their Grotrian Steinweg piano from Germany in 1959. It survived the Atlantic crossing three times. Grotrian Steinweg is the original German name of America's Steinway, Dollic said. The Steinweg brothers who stayed in Europe kept the old name while the brothers who immigrated to America changed their name to Steinway. It was this plane that Hugh played. Among the guests were: Cris and Gabriela Koban, from Romania: Cris is also a planist: and Erica DeWijs, who teaches at the conservatory in Rotterdam.

Hugh continued his American tour, which included stops in Los Angeles, Seattle, Dallas and Tryon, N.C. before returning to his home in Lakenheath.

His friendship fortified McNeil's optimistic spirit, and it appeared that things would work out for him, even though it was predicted he would eventually go blind.

As time went on, the two men lost contact with each other. Several years passed. One day as Several years passed. One day as Rockey peered out his living room window, he noticed a man using a cane stop in front of his house. He was accompanied by two children. Curious, Rockey went out to inquire if they needed any assistance. After briefly talking, it was a shock to them both to learn they were old acquaintances. McNeil realized who Rockey was. He introduced himself as the man Rockey had tried to help. A happy reunion tried to help. A happy reunion took place in front of Rockey's Sanford home. (Debaserte, 200 pp., $18.06) pretty good living because he has a pretty good way of making his "clients" meet their obligations. He just fixes his gase on the object of his intention and says, "Look at me."

That kind of well-steeled approach serves him well when he enters the high-stakes of "high-concept" movies with all their attendant hoopis: taking meetings, pitching story ideas and playing the game. In fact, he plays it better than the movie mogule and the mega-stars who thought they had it knocked.

Of course, in the inimitable Leonard style, getting Chili from the collection business to show business is quite a journey. Pursuing a delinquent client who faked his death and collected a bundle in insurance money. Chili tracks him to Los Angeles and meets film producer Harry Zimm. who has gambled away a bundle that belongs to two men who run a limo-and-drug-running service, money that was supposed to be used for Harry's next picture.

Harry's investors aren't exactly pleased, but Chili sets into motion a scheme by which everyone should end up with what he wants except for the owner of a limo-and-drug-running service who wants to end up with everything, and preferably with Chili out of the picture permanently.

Leonard has called this "my Hollywood novel." Nearly all of his 20-plus books have been sold as film properties, several have been produced — but not, by and large, in keeping with the author's vision, as Leonard has said several times. (Remember, "Stick" with Burt

Education

IN BRIEF

Answers to school questions

SANFORD — Parents and students who have questions about the Seminole County school district will have several chances over the course of the next week to find answers.

On Saturday, there will be an information fair where district representatives will be on hand to answer questions and provide direction for parents and students who need information about the schools, at Longwood Village Shopping Center, on State Road 434 just east of Interstate-4.

All next week there will be a back to school "hotline" sponsored by the school district and WFTV-Channel 9.

Each day, Monday through Friday, from 5 to 7 p.m., guidance counselors from schools in seven Central Florida districts, including Seminole, will be on hand to answer the phones and respond to any questions that are called in.

SCC registration: on-line, not in line

Herald staff writer

SANFORD - Summer is almost over for Seminole Community College students. Classes begin on Thursday, Aug. 23.

Already, most of the students have begun meeting with their counselors and deciding which classes they should or should not take this coming fall.

Though we have on-line (computer) registration for our students," said Joe Roof, dean of admissions and record systems, "we want them to meet with the counselors to get some direction."

The on-line system of registration allows students to complete the process by simply typing the information regarding the classes they have chosen into a computer terminal located in the lobby of the school's administration building.

College registration often conjures up images of long lines of frustrated students sleeping in line and pulling out their hair over a tattered and well-marked catalogue of

It's not that way at SCC. "The on-line registration made it easy for me to see what classes were still open," said James Snyder of Lake Mary who was there in the early morning to beat the rush. "It's all hooked up to the main computer so there isn't any confusion about what's still whole lot of returning students who put off their class planning until the last minute this time.

-Joe Roof, SCC Dean of Admissions

Snyder, ready to begin his third semester at SCC said the computer system has worked out well for him.

"I guess there are some people out there who'd rather deal with a real person, face-to-face, but when it comes to getting things done, this is lots more efficient," he Kelinda Gorham of Sanford is one of those who'd rather have a face-to-face confrontation with the person charged with filling classes. This past week, she struggled a bit with the machine, scratching her head.

She said she would rather use paper and a pencil "with a real big craser" to figure out her class schedule, but she said she's muddled through before during registration. mostly relying on the kindness and computer experise of others.

"I don't know how to use this thing." she said. "I hope I don't erase anyone else's schedule."

happening.

"No. No. That couldn't happen." he said. Roof, who said the on-line registration system has been in place for nearly a decade, said he doesn't recall a time where the computer has malfunctioned and caused problems for students trying to get ready for

"I guess we've been lucky," he noted.

"We're running ahead of where we were this time last year." Roof said. "There haven't been a whole lot of returning students who put off their class planning until the last minute this time."

He added that he does not anticipate any problems as the new registrants work out their schedules over the next week and a

"We have every one of them who comes in talk to an advisor and work out several plans for what classes they need," he said.

According to Roof, most first-time students are much more flexible than returning students because they have taken nothing and their options are nearly limitless.

"They can always take something 'next time', but some of the students who are close to completing their studies may have only one or two classes that they need to graduate." he noted.
