

that Senator Nixon has done anything morally indefensible, he certainly should get out of this race.

Official of the Florida Department of Agriculture, H. S. Flynn, assistant director of the state vegetable and fruit market and marketing in Florida.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE RECORD

G. O. P. Version of the Stevenson-Sparkman Campaign Song
"DON'T LET THEM TAKE IT AWAY"
We're sitting on a pot of gold From minks and freezers that we sold Don't let them take it away We've got our 20 years of loot Lamar, O'Dwyer and Hies to boot Don't let them take it away We've got the biggest debt in history What we spend is still a mystery Don't let them take it away We want to get more tax Take the shirts right off your backs Don't let them take it away We try to spend what we can't lend You're never going to see the end Don't let them take it away We're busy loading payrolls now To try and win this thing some-who Don't let them take it away We tried to grab the big steel mill And add them to our Federal till Don't let them take it away We've got you on our sucker list For four more years of greedy fiat Don't let them take it away Yalta was not our fault, so-o-o-o Don't let them take it They want to take it PLEASE DON'T LET THEM TAKE IT AWAY! (From the Monrovia, California News-Post)

Push button warfare is all right just so long as the enemy doesn't get hold of the buttons.

Have you been out to the new Wynwood subdivision yet? That's one of Sanford's newest and most attractive residential areas.

The town of Inverness is holding a referendum to decide whether to give the Florida Power & Light Co. a 30 year franchise.

Senator Holland pleads for unity on Florida's flood control projects. Getting unity on a project like that is as bad as trying to unscramble eggs.

Remember the "Miracle Day" we had here in Sanford a few years ago? Well, they had one down in Wauchula the other day. It was reported to have been quite a success.

The old Green Tree Inn, a landmark in Daytona for nearly 50 years, is being torn down to make way for progress. In its place will be constructed a series of modern attractive store buildings.

Speaking of Governor Byrnes coming out for General Eisenhower, the Times-Union says, "His forthright decision to vote for General Eisenhower will encourage many citizens to abandon blind partisanship and vote according to their fundamental principles." Another prominent southerner who has recently come out for Eisenhower is Douglas Southall Freeman, Richmond, Va. newspaper editor, and author of "R. E. Lee" and "Lee's Lieutenants."

Former Senator Claude Pepper is back in the headlines again. This time, it seems, Lamar Caudle, former assistant attorney general, testified the other day that Senator Pepper brought considerable and constant pressure to bear against the government prosecution of some people who had brought 200,000 cases of whiskey and sold it on the black market. The Senator didn't think they had done anything wrong. However, they were later indicted, pleaded guilty and paid a $250,000 fine.

Eisenhower's headquarters was closed down when the post office was closed. The news black and white. The news black and white. The news black and white.

A Near Miss

Last week's highway accident, in which one person was injured, and after which three ambulances rushed the victims to the Fernand-Laughton Memorial Hospital, only to discover that there were no accommodations there for them, serves again to emphasize the desperate need of this community for a new hospital.

The ultimate consequences in this particular incident were not as tragic as they might have been. One of the victims would have died anyway. One of them was a Marine who was taken care of at the Naval Air Station. Two of them who had to be sent to the DeLand hospital managed to survive the ordeal. And the four who were not hospitalized at all were at last reports getting along all right.

But if our present hospital could not provide for the victims of such a minor mishap as this, what would it do if a really serious catastrophe occurred? Only last week a bus load of school children was hit by a train at a grade crossing in Pennsylvania. Three children were killed and 40 injured. They were rushed to a nearby hospital where they were given emergency treatment and put to bed. They all recovered.

We have been extremely fortunate in this community during the past 25 years, while our present hospital has been utterly inadequate to meet the needs of a progressive community, that we have had no major accidents of this kind, or any large epidemics, that would render this community virtually without any hospital at all, but we have had innumerable instances at various times when one or two patients desperately needing attention could not be given a bed at the hospital.

Back in 1938 when the people here first voted in favor of a county bond issue to build a hospital, the existing facilities were wholly inadequate. Then the city was suffering from the effects of a deep depression, half the houses in town were vacant, and parents who had babies wondered how they were going to feed them. If we needed a hospital then, how much worse do we need one now!

We don't suppose there is anyone today who would deny that such a need exists. But there may be some who would question whether a new hospital is worth the cost. To them we say, suppose it were you who, battered, bleeding and dying, were rushed to the Fernand Laughton? And they did not have room to take you in? Would a new hospital be worth the cost then?

Sanford does need a new hospital. If we cannot get it one way, we must get it another, but get it we must.

Better Health

Death rates among the aged have dropped substantially during the last 20 years. Metropolitan Insurance Company reports. Between 1930 and 1949, the death rate for women in the United States fell 25 percent in the age group 65 to 74 years, and 20 percent at 75 to 84 years. Men of advanced age also showed a drop in mortality, but not as large.

Particularly significant, the Metropolitan adds, is the fact that nearly all the gains have been made since 1938—that is, in the period following the introduction and development of the sulfa drugs and later of the antibiotics.

Improved methods of treatment have reduced the death rates in the 65 to 84 age group from all the principal causes—the principal cardiovascular-renal diseases, cancer, pneumonia and influenza. In addition, progress has been made in reducing the death toll from accidents among old people.

The pneumonia and influenza death rate dropped 60 percent among men and 73 percent among women at ages 65 to 74 between 1930 and 1948, the latest year for which comparable data are available; even at 75 to 84 the reductions were 51 and 64 percent, respectively.

Recent improvements in the death rate from the cardiovascular-renal diseases have been especially large among women, further increasing the excess in male mortality from these diseases. For example, whereas the death rate at ages 65 to 74 was 20 percent higher for males than for females in 1930, the difference was 50 percent in 1948.

The trend of mortality from cancer shows an even greater sex difference; for men the trend has been definitely upward since 1930 in the 65 to 84 age range. For women, an improvement is evident in the death rate at 65 to 74 years, and at ages 75 to 84 the rates have been fairly stable.

"It appears likely that further progress will be made in reducing the general death rate among the aged in our country," the Metropolitan adds. "For one thing, the control already achieved over the infectious diseases ensures that in the years to come a decreasing proportion of people entering the older ages will have serious organic impairments of infectious origin."

"At the same time, medical care and public health facilities are improving in quality and are spreading into all areas of the country. Official and private health agencies are giving added support to health education, community programs, and medical research; and the rapid growth of voluntary hospital, surgical and medical-care insurance is encouraging large numbers of people to give early attention to their ailments, when they are generally most amenable to treatment."

"All these developments should help men and women to survive to extreme old age. This means, of course, that the problems of our aging population will become more intensive and challenging."

Sandy Anderson Reports On Meeting

Problems and methods of improvement in state markets were discussed in a Market Managers Convention held last week at the Citrus Building in Winter Haven.

The meeting was very beneficial, enlightening and educational to all of us. Sandy Anderson, manager of the Sanford State Farmers Market, said Saturday.

Improvements and standardization of inspection service in state markets led off the discussion. G. E. Hogan, manager of the Pompano Market, assisted by M. E. Williams, manager of the Port Pierce Market, and Mr. Anderson, led the discussion in outline of problems of market managers.

Enforcement and improvement of the bond and license law were explained by B. L. Berry, field auditor of the Florida Department of Agriculture.

Ralph B. Aronson, assistant director of the State Market, led the discussion of rental and fee collection. William L. Wilson, State Market Director, called the meeting to order.

A breakfast market was provided over by J. H. Lewis, Jacksonville Market manager. A luncheon was served by the market managers.

Editor, The Sanford Herald:

Enclosed is the letter that I called about.

NO TURN ON RED... Understandable, but different.

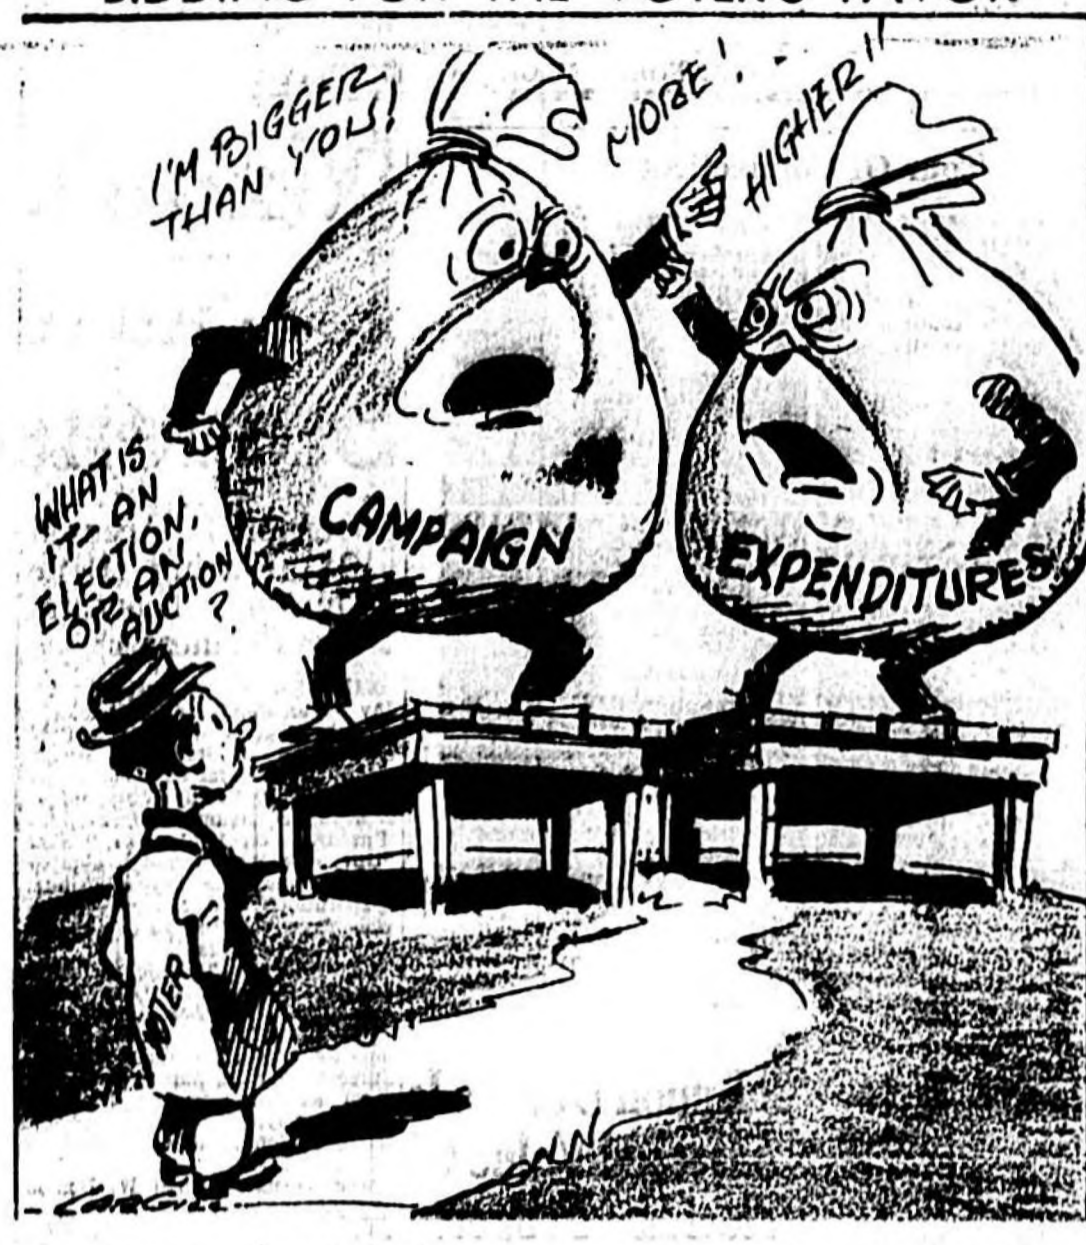

NO TURN ON RED... Not understandable, very confusing to everyone, explainable only to the few that everyone has a key to—me—and that was the other department and the one who almost got run over when he turned his back to go home.

NO TURN ON RED... Understandable only to the people who don't stop to try on the day they couldn't turn at all.

NO TURN ON RED—NO LEFT TURN... G. E. And what they should have done first. Only when the ball person starts and the whistle is out. Then, and only then, will they be going home.

MY SUGGESTION... I suggest that the market managers should be given the right to turn on red.

BIDDING FOR THE VOTER'S FAVOR

THE WORLD TODAY

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Sen. Nixon might not be in his present position—having to explain the $18,000 fund donated by fellow Californians—if Congress had listened to President Truman and Sen. Morse, Oregon Republican, more than a year ago.

They suggested Congress pass a law requiring members of Congress and all other government employees receiving a salary of at least $8,000 or $10,000 a year to list in a public record any other income or financial help.

If Nixon had had to list the $18,000 collected for him for political purposes, there would be no news or surprise now in the fact that the fund existed. This public record, at the same time, would have provided Gen. Eisenhower with more information about the man he picked as his running mate.

Truman made his suggestion Sept. 27, 1951, in a message to Congress. Morse has been introducing a bill for the same purpose since 1947.

Congress gave Truman the same treatment it has been giving Morse for five years: a good child. Although they spend a sizable amount of time investigating other people's financial dealings and disclosing them publicly, members of Congress have shown small enthusiasm for disclosing their own.

The President said the legislation he suggested would prevent "improper conduct" and "unfounded suspicions" and would be "unfounded" at the time a Senate subcommittee of which Nixon was a member, was investigating charges of political influence in government loans. At that moment the chairman of Truman's Democratic party, William M. Boyle Jr., was before the committee.

The President said the public record on income and financial help should be made not only by members of Congress and employees of the executive agencies, but also by judges, admirals, generals and even national party officials (which would have included Boyle).

But Sen. Millikin, Colorado Republican, called the measure "a tick" and a "cheap political trick."

CITY HALL FIRE
NEW BRITAIN, Conn. (AP)—A fire wrecked a number of offices and two court rooms in New Britain's ivy-story city hall Sunday night. Damage, estimated by Mayor John L. Sullivan, at from $75,000 to $100,000 was confined to an addition to the 77-year-old main structure which, designed by the late Stanford White, noted architect slain by Broadway playboy Harry Thaw, originally had been a hotel.

Signs Of Pyorrhea

By W. V. Blitting
Tochtown Drug Co.

Both types of pyorrhea produce loosening of the teeth. The first type is caused from lack of certain vitamins and minerals in the body.

Pyorrhea of the second type comes mainly from deposits of tartar on the teeth. When such deposits are allowed to remain and accumulate the gum tissue draws away from the bone structure and the teeth loosen. Tartar on the teeth also produces a very bad breath.

Routine dental checkups are most important to health and appearance. Keep an ample supply of good dental aids on hand. Purchase them from a trusted druggist.
