

Give Postal Service Back To Congress?

The question recently put to letterwriters as we understood it, was whether they preferred higher postage rates or surrier service. We never heard what the consensus was about that. But it doesn't matter. The Postal Service now says they will have to take both.

And soon. Postmaster General Ben Franklin Bailar told his board of directors recently he isn't waiting for action either by Congress or President Carter. He is putting in now for a 16-cent stamp and for cutting deliveries to five days a week, both to take effect early next year.

For another, the ink on the commission report was barely dry before Bailar announced his intention to rush ahead with the steps he was already planning and which he has been saying for months were inevitable unless Congress wanted to give him additional billions of dollars.

According to the Wall Street Journal's report of the meeting Bailar was told by one board member he ought to wait at least until Congress had time to study its commission's report. And Bailar undoubtedly was aware that President Carter also has his own postal reform plan in the works.

But Bailar said he will present his board members next month both a rate boost and a service cutback, to take effect at the earliest possible date. For whatever comfort it is, the rate-raising machinery can't grind out the rate boost until April. The service cutback could take effect sooner but Bailar kindly said he would hold that up until after Christmas.

There is any good news in all this it is that both the White House and Congress seem to be thoroughly irked at Bailar's decision. A Carter aide said pointedly it wouldn't seem prudent for this semi-independent agency to ignore the views of government leaders. And Rep. James Hanley, chairman of a House postal subcommittee, warned against any "high-handed and shortsighted" action.

Maybe too much shouldn't be read into that. But we hope it means that Congress will quit gesturing the admission it goofed when it decided to get the government out of the business of delivering mail.

The Old Post Office obviously had plenty of troubles. And the idea was that an outside agency, to be run like a business, could do the job better and cheaper. This was an idea worth trying. Our hope is that Congress and President Carter now will conclude that Bailar and Co. finally have proved it was wrong.

So maybe, with proper encouragement from the voters, they will give the mail delivery chore back to the Post Office Department, with instructions to provide the best possible service at rates that will encourage maximum use. And reasonable losses then will be made up from tax funds, just like other essential government costs.

Nader Versus Nader

WASHINGTON - (NEA) - Only a few years ago, the "consumer movement" in this city consisted of a handful of professional gadflies who compensated with enthusiasm for their lack of real political influence in the policy-making councils of government.

Today those consumer advocates need no longer resort to shrill proclamations in the press to express their views because they now lead a rapidly maturing coalition of pressure groups which are respected both on Capitol Hill and in the White House.

But there remains a lack of political sophistication, particularly in those groups led by Ralph Nader, which manifests itself in a tendency to view issues and people only in starkly contrasting blacks and whites, ignoring the realities of a gray world.

Nader is a purist who seldom forgives or forgets after someone commits what he views as an unpardonable act. His great strength is his dedication to principle but the other side of the coin, willingness to compromise, can be a serious weakness.

A current case in point involves a nasty little fight which is brewing over President Carter's choice of a chairman of a little known but highly influential government agency, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board (FHLBB).

The process of filling the $2,500-a-year chairmanship traditionally has been a semi-private matter involving only the White House and the nation's $400 billion savings and loan industry - the business the FHLBB is supposed to regulate.

That "sweetheart" arrangement has allowed the industry to maintain a poor record on issues such as civil rights, consumer protection and "redlining," the practice of arbitrarily depriving inner city neighborhoods of mortgage loans.

But during the process of seeking an FHLBB head this year, President Carter's staff consulted with Nader, the Consumer Federation of America and several other consumer groups.

The front-runner for several months was John Heimann, New York State Banking Commissioner in mid-1976. Although he wasn't perfect in the eyes of consumer leaders he was, as one of them described him, "at least a B-minus candidate."

But during his tenure in Albany, Heimann antagonized New York's Public Interest Research Group, one of the grass-roots consumer organizations which Nader has established throughout the country.

As a result, Nader refused to seriously consider Heimann as any other contender for the post except St. Michael Elliott, chairman of the California Housing Finance Agency.

Nader's only candidate was rejected by the White House as unsuitable for the job, however, and the administration turned to Robert M. McKinney, a Carter classmate at the Naval Academy who personifies the pro-industry attitude which the consumer groups fear most.

The trouble goes back two years ago when the NRA initiated the Institute for Legislative Action to oppose gun controls on Capitol Hill. Now the lobby has taken over the parent organization.

This means the militants will be unleashed like modern Minutemen to fight for the right to bear arms. Their evangelistic leader, Harlan Carter, has displaced the more moderate Maj. Gen. Maxwell E. Rich as the NRA's chief honcho.

Those who know Carter expect him to shoot off his mouth like a one-man firing range. He has pledged to give no quarterm in the battle against gun controls. But he is expected to produce more fireworks than that.

The National Rifle Association is housed in an eight-story, chrome-and-glass building only a rifle shot from the Baptist church where President Carter worships. Its top executives, known as the Inside as The Trunks, occupied the eighth floor.

They remained aloof from the minions on the lower floors, whose discontent erupted into the

"The Cross Florida Barge Canal has only two chances of becoming reality - slim and none." That's the way Seminole County port administrator Jim Ryan rates the chances for construction of the canal, originally intended by the Army Corps of Engineers to provide a shipping route from the Gulf of Mexico at Yankeetown to the St. Johns River at Palatka.

It seems that more and more public officials are lining up against the canal's completion. Florida's two senators, Lawton Chiles and Richard Stone, introduced legislation May 24 that would withdraw authorization for future construction on the project.

If that weren't enough, President Carter announced he supported the legislation and recommended the Oklawaha River, which environmentalists claim would be destroyed by the canal project, be studied for protection under the federal Wild and Scenic Rivers Act.

The President went further, directing the Department of Agriculture and the corps of engineers to work with Florida officials to develop a list of ways to dispose of canal lands and structures. The congressional action follows by six months a vote by the Florida Cabinet ending the cabinet's support of the project and asking Congress to halt further authorization.

Gov. Reubin Askew was reported "very pleased" by the introduction of the bill to deauthorize canal construction.

And bills are now pending in both houses of the Florida Legislature to abolish the Florida Canal Authority, an action supported by the governor. Ryan doesn't expect to see the canal built at all. If the canal had been constructed, it would have been a boon to Sanford's economy, he says.

The port itself was built on the assumption it would serve the canal. In fact, "Seventy-five per cent of the port's feasibility was based on building the canal," says Ryan.

Youth Jobs Study Not Suppressed

WASHINGTON - For four months, Dr. Walter Williams, a black associate professor of economics at Temple University, had been left twisting slowly in the wind. The Lynch party was led by liberal Democrat, Rep. Richard Bolling of Missouri, chairman of the Congressional Joint Economic Committee (JEC), and liberal GOP Sen. Jacob Javits of New York, the Committee's ranking Republican. Dr. Williams' crime: he had the temerity, the unmitigated gall, to write a study about youth unemployment whose conclusions fly in the face of the conventional, liberal, Big Labor wisdom on this subject.

But, all is well that ends well. Prof. Williams lives! His report will be issued within the next few weeks. He has been cut down by a group of the Committee's conservatives, led by Rep. Clarence "Bud" Brown, R-Ohio, who was supported in his rescue mission by Sen. Jim McClure, R-Idaho, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Rep. John Rostenberg, R-Calif.

As Dr. Williams explained it to me in an interview, his ordeal began in January of last year when the JEC's senior GOP economist Charles Bradford asked him if he'd write a paper on youth unemployment. Sure, said Dr. Williams, and he handed in his paper the following October. The major thrust of this document is "market restrictions exacerbate employment problems of youth and minority workers."

To promote "voluntary and free exchanges between workers and employers in a manner consistent with democratic values," Dr. Williams recommends:

- 1. The abolition of federal and state minimum wage laws, or at least the lowering of this wage for young people.
2. Revision of child labor laws and a reduction in the school-leaving age.
3. Radical modification of the National Labor Relations Act to allow the use of independent worker-contract negotiation between the individual worker and his employer.
4. Re-evaluation of current union licensing and certification requirements to promote opportunities for on-the-job training and to improve market opportunities for individuals who already possess requisite skills.

In his conclusion, Dr. Williams predicts that his recommendations "are no doubt radical and will touch on the sensitivities and nerves of many vested interest groups."

Well, the good professor is a very perspicacious man. A month or so after he turned in his study, he was called to Washington by Mr. Bradford of the Mets and Frank Robinson of the Indians. And Mark Fidrych, the eccentric, electrically charged pitching phenom from Detroit, came from a bird of paradise into a cranky crane.

Has the lanky, kinky-haired "Bird" flown the cuckoo's nest? Let's hope not.

When the spring-bean righthander burst on the major league scene a year ago, he was like a puff of fresh air in a sport reeking with dissension, revolt and lawsuits.

There was a boyish naturalness and impetuousity about him that completely captivated fans. He became an immediate folk hero not only in Detroit but also in every corner where a wireless picture could reach.

More than doubled turnovers wherever he played. Standing ovations became his trademark.

Baseball has had its share of pitching giants - the Lefty Grove, Dizzy Dean and Bobby Fellers - but few captured the imagination of the people as did this 22-year-old rookie out of New England.

(He talked to the ball - in a language only he and the horsehide (now cowhide) knew. He did gardening on the mound. He twirled. He puffed. He jabbered. And he won - 19-0 for pure.

It obviously wasn't an act. It wasn't vaudeville, it was 1976. Fidrych - unadorned, unrestrained, completely natural. "My way of concentrating," he said.

The baseball world bought him, body and soul. The "Bird" - as they called him after a character on TV's Sesame Street - began showing signs of edginess before he was signed to a major league contract.

He began dodging the crowds. He did his best to avoid autograph seekers. His informal news conferences became more terse and edged.

Now, back in action and facing the so-called "sophomore jinx," the Bird's patience appears to be running more thin.

Over the week-end, during which he lost his comeback 5-2-1 CBA headquarters, where it was taken as a joke. But the FBI took for the FBI emblem.

An FBI spokesman said the agent's call to Werner was not meant to intimidate him but merely to inform him that federal law prohibits the use of the FBI shield. Both agencies, by the way, are indeed Equal Opportunity Employers.

Trinity Steals Jamboree

Saints Win By 6-0, 8-0 Behind Matthews, Miles

By ANDY GIRARDI, Herald Correspondent

Trinity Prep's varsity football team posted victories Saturday in a Jamboree held at Lake Howell High School.

"I told you it would be interesting," said coach Joel Kelley after his team had won quarters against Heritage Prep and Luther High by 6-0 and 8-0 scores.

Most of the Jamboree was sloppily played. Easy passes were dropped, handoffs were muffed, wobbly passes were thrown and it took as if all teams needed a lot of work before the fall.

In an unimpressive Jamboree Trinity's play was easily the most impressive.

In the third quarter, in a match up between Heritage Prep and Luther High, the breakers to get on the board.

MIKE SEGRIST BROUGHT TO HALT AFTER SHORT GAIN

Finally on second down Palmer Miles blasted his way through a small hole and pranced 10 yards for the score. Since Heritage had already failed on its attempt to score, Trinity needed no conversion and won, 6-0.

The fourth quarter was highlighted by a Scott Schneider-to-Bruce Burnett scoring strike on a picture-perfect play pattern. The play was good for 23 yards and when Schneider drilled his way over the goal line from the two, Trinity Prep had itself an eight-point lead with more than half the quarter already played.

The rest of the game had Trinity stopping Luther High School on two consecutive drives and in the final seconds of play saw Trinity rip off big chunks of yardage on the ground that brought back haunting memories of Norbert Seals.

As far as starts on the ground, things look pretty good for Trinity's Brent Matthews, had 50 yards in just seven carries, an average of over nine. Most of Matthews' rushing came on a sprint of 37 yards down the left sidelines setting up Trinity's

TD in the fourth quarter. Palmer Miles played well chalking up 54 yards in nine carries.

"We need a lot of work," said Saints Coach Joel Kelley, "we will have a lot to work on this summer."

"It's about what I expected, our backs played well but otherwise we had some problems," Kelley stated.

"I was disappointed in the way our offensive line played. I really feel they can perform better than they did. We will just have to see what happens in drills early this fall.

In all it was a confusing afternoon, one could not be sure if it was Trinity's ability or the other schools' shortage of manpower that produced the outcomes.

More than likely it was a combination of both.

If one is looking for answers as to whether Trinity will have a good, hot or mediocre season, the results of Saturday's Jamboree won't tell. The defense didn't allow a point but its opponents had trouble running very simple plays.

Nelson-Youngson Wins In Seminole Pony Loop

Markham, Booth Hurl Pinto 1-Hitter

Only two divisions were in action Saturday as the Seminole Pony Baseball season winds down to a close. In the Pinto division Gregg Markham and Scott Booth of Nelson-Youngson managed to give up only one hit, and Boyka's went on to win anyway, 8-1.

Scott Bowlers and Kirk Rozek allowed three hits but only gave up one run.

Jason Bray, Philip Ingram and Markham had the hits for the losers. Donny Johnston had the lone hit for the winners.

In other games in the Pinto Division Walt New Builders whipped Pools by Max, 12-3; Larry Johnson, Land Topped Sunshine T.V., 10-7.

Casey Hatfield had two hits to lead his team Florida Land. David Brooks, John Gately and Bob Burns all had one hit for the winners.

On the losing side John Ludwig had two hits and Paul Evans and Steve Sapp had one.

In the Bronco Division Doug Berlin had two hits for Greggin and Kevin Stanley pitched a three-hit shutout. Ron Hill was the loser, giving up five hits and one run.

Gregg Hill had a team high two hits for the losers.

The youth baseball season at Five Points is in the home stretch. A few games remain, but the major test on the horizon is the top-team tournament and the naming of all-stars in the various age groups.

For Prosser Ford, Casey Hawthorne, Mike Sawyer and Buddy Smith had the hits, one each.

The first Sam Snead Open, a tournament for seniors, was completed at Yorba Linda Country Club Sunday, and while Snead came close, it was Tommy Bolt who captured top honors.

Bolt, 59, carded a one-under-par 70 in the final round for a 54-hole total of 508 in the Journey for golfers 50 years and older. Snead, 65, tied for fourth place with Bob Duden at 213.

Jack Hardin, 53, who led after two both the first and second rounds, faded to a 74 Sunday and finished second, three strokes behind Bolt. Charlie Siford, 53, was third at 212.

Bolt won $15,000, an automobile and a $3,000 scholarship for a youngster of his choice.

Gun Control Pledge May Bring Fireworks

WASHINGTON - The National Rifle Association has been struck by its own backfire. Footnote: Last year, the top brass at the National Rifle Association produced seven confidential "assumptions" to guide their policies for 1977. They solemnly concluded, for example, that "there will be no war or other major international development that would disrupt the domestic economy." Their sixth secret assumption was that no major changes would occur within the NRA. Hopefully, their now-wrong prediction will turn out to be more accurate.

CARTER'S RINGERS - Buried in the fine print of President Carter's energy program are two ringers which could cost the consumers more than $9 billion in the first year and $3.6 billion thereafter. The beneficiaries, as usual, would be the oil-and-gas industry and the private utilities.

The first ringer was slipped into a Senate government affairs measure; it could allow the utilities to begin charging off the cost of new plants as they are being built.

This little technicality, along with other charges that Carter is willing to pass on to the consumers, could add up to a whopping $3.6 billion annually.

The second ringer, which reposes among the complex clauses of Carter's energy bill, would abort the appeal of nuclear gas controversies now before the courts.

This is another technicality, which might escape the unlighted. But the experts tell us this provision could wind up costing up to $5 billion. Thus the total would soar past $9 billion, with a lesser but continuing annual effect on the pocketbooks of the consumers. The Carter administration is pushing the proposals in the name of streamlining the national energy apparatus.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES - We recently reported that Control Data was preparing to sell the Soviets a sophisticated Cyber 76 computer supposedly as a weather aid. In fact, this advanced electronic brain could be used by the Soviets to improve their ability to track U.S. missiles, build nuclear bombs and decode U.S. intelligence messages. We have now learned that Rep. Robert Dornan, D-Calif., has written privately to Commerce Secretary Justin Krespijger her not to license the machine for export. Dornan was secretly encouraged by top Pentagon strategists.

As a lark, novelty maker Steve Werner sent a T-shirt to FBI headquarters. The shirt bore a FBI shield and the motto, "An Equal Opportunity Employer." He sent a similar CIA shirt to the CIA headquarters, where it was taken as a joke. But the FBI took for the FBI emblem. An FBI spokesman said the agent's call to Werner was not meant to intimidate him but merely to inform him that federal law prohibits the use of the FBI shield. DISPLAY YOUR FLAG PROUDLY ON MEMORIAL DAY

A Time to remember and pay grateful tributes to the men and women who throughout our nation's history, answered the call when trouble threatened, who gave their time, energy, courage and their very lives to protect the principles upon which this country was founded. A Time to count our blessings, to cherish our sacred heritage and put it to protective use.

Sanford Landfill Plan: County Eyes Challenge

By ED PRICKEIT Herald Staff Writer. The Seminole County Commission today instructed County Attorney Joe Mount to look into the legal possibilities of opposing the City of Sanford's plan to operate a sanitary landfill on an 85.45-acre site at SR-4A and Oregon Avenue.

'Much more deadly circumstance'. Representatives from the same group are expected to attend a public hearing Thursday at 8 p.m. of the Sanford Planning and Zoning Commission considering a request to rezone land for the proposed landfill from residential to agricultural.

'No excuse for another dump'. Sanford needs approval from the state Department of Environmental Regulations (DER) to operate the landfill. Paul said 40 or 50 persons belong to the 46A association. He said he has petitions with 500 signatures of residents near the proposed landfill site opposing the landfill.

'I Knew He Would Try To Save Somebody,' Mom Says. CINCINNATI (AP) - Walter Bailey says, "I don't feel like a hero," but scores of grateful, impressed people have been offering money, gifts, jobs or just congratulations for his heroics in the midst of the Beverly Hills Super Club fire.

Axed Again, He Eyes Suit. Casselberry Realtor A. L. Seligman today said he would "consult with my attorney" after the Seminole County Planning Commission for the fourth time denied Seligman's request to clear 80 per cent of trees and vegetation from 25 acres he owns in the heart of Spring Hammock.

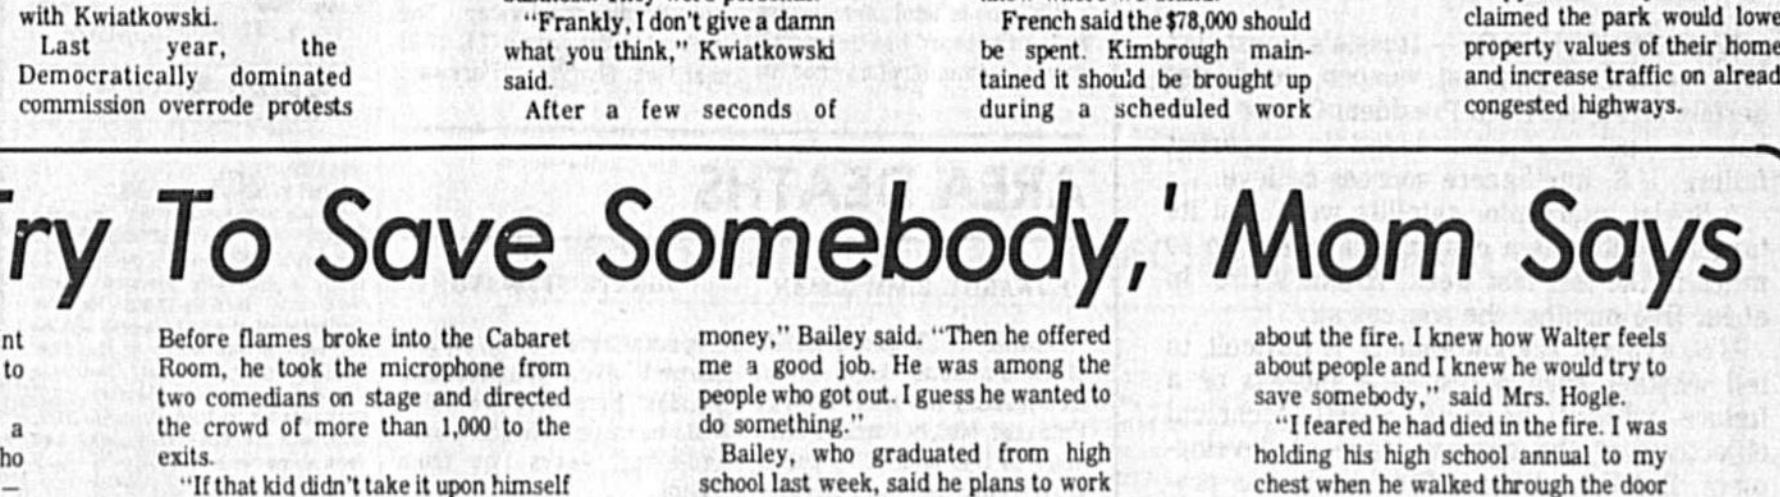

Courthouse Pond Shines. Up in the Florida panhandle, E. J. Shiver learned a lesson that has stuck with him all his life. He still remembers that day some 25 years back in North Florida's Wewa when his grandmother told him: "Do as good as you can do with what you got to do with."

PAYING THE PRICE. With Seminole County's motor vehicle inspection stations closed for the long weekend, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, the last day of the month of May kind of squeaked up on motorists as evidenced by the longer-than-usual lines at the Sanford MVI station today.

Partisan Lines Come Into Play In Apple Valley Park Rejection. By a 3-2 vote, the Seminole County Commission today decided not to spend $78,000 this year that was budgeted for construction of a park near the Apple Valley subdivision in northern Seminole County.

DICK WILLIAMS... 'remarks personal'. HARRY KWIAWKOWSKI... 'don't give a damn'. Referring to comments Kwiatkowski made two weeks ago, Williams said, "The comments you made were not business. They were personal."

E.J. Shiver: Mr. Clean. E. J. vacuums the bottom of the moat. A fat man totting a briefcase gets out of the car and walks into the courthouse. He does not notice E. J.
