Three car collision

Tow truck driver Joe Litton of Seminole Paint and Body Shop, picked up debris this morning following a three vehicle collision along Sanford's lakefront. City Employee Paul Bibby was reportedly turning into the entrance to the city water plant, and was struck in the rear by another vehicle. The force is believed to have pushed Bibby's vehicle to the other side of Highway 17-92, where it was struck by an on-coming truck. Bibby was taken to the Central Florida Regional Hospital for treatment of injuries. He was expected to be released later this morning. Charges are pending the completion of investigations by Sanford police.

Stalking law upheld

Local judge won't dismiss charge, appeal expected

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A case challenging the constitutionality of Florida's stalking law will move to the Fifth District Court of Appeal now after a Seminole County judge denied a motion to dismiss a stalking case.

Judge Alan Dickey denied a motion by defense attorney Eugene Feliciano to dismiss a stalking case because the law is unconstitutionally vague and too broad. The state stalking law has been challenged in several other counties. Feliciano said he will file an appeal of the decision within 30 days with the appeals court. The final decision on the validity of the law may rest with the Florida Supreme Court.

In his ruling, Dickey referred to a similar decision by Brevard Circuit Court Judge Kerry I. Evander, who states, "The Florida Supreme Court has consistently held that legislative acts are presumed to be constitutional and courts should avoid declaring a statute unconstitutional if the statute can be reasonably construed in a constitutional manner."

Assistant Public Defender Feliciano challenged

Teens jailed for murder won't get to go to school

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Bond on first degree murder charges was denied again Thursday for two Sanford teenagers who wished to continue their education.

Seminole Circuit Court Judge O.H. Eaton, Jr. denied the request from attorneys representing Terrance (Jeffery) Brooks, 15, and Benjamin Scott, 14. Brooks' attorney, Gary Andersen and Scott's attorney, Ian Gilden claimed their clients do not have access to educational classes offered at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility because they are under 16. The attorneys contended since classes are offered to inmates over 16 but not younger prisoners, their clients are being denied their right to equal protection under the law.

Brooks and Scott are charged with the death of Mark Edward Marsh November 7. They are also charged with armed robbery with a firearm. Originally held in the Juvenile Detention Center, the pair were charged as adults in February and moved to the juvenile pod of the jail.

Before their arrest, Brooks attended Seminole High School and Scott was a student at Crooms School of Choice. Classes are conducted at JDC for those who qualify. Brooks and Scott have not attended any classes since their transfer to the jail when they were charged as adults in February.

Previous requests for bond in both cases have been denied. Requests to move the pair back to JDC until their trials have also been denied.

Former mayor dead at 84

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The man in the Stetson hat has passed away. Former Sanford Mayor Earl L. Higginbotham died at his home last night.

Higginbotham, 84, was extremely active in government, oil and cattle for almost his entire life.

The Stetson was one of his trademarks. Over the years, his home has contained many shelves of hats and he often considered hat collecting one of his favorite hobbies.

Born on Nov. 11, 1908, he received his education at Southern Methodist College in Dallas, Texas, where he majored in law and accounting. He moved to Sanford in 1947.

During World War II, Higginbotham served in the Auxiliary Civil Air Patrol. Concerning his service he once said, "I flew missions to find people who were lost in battle."

After moving to Sanford, he was elected Mayor in 1954. During his two terms in office, he was credited with being responsible for the city obtaining the former Sanford Naval Air Station property from the federal government. The land is presently the Central Florida Regional Airport.

AVERAGE ANNUAL RAINFALL

Rainfall falls below 40-year average but Sanford is soggiest

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Local rainfall in June fell below 40-year averages but Sanford remains, officially, the soggiest location in the 19-county area monitored by the St. Johns River Water Management District.

Only 2.67 inches of rain fell last month into a Sanford gauge monitored by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. That's 3.79 inches less than the 6.46-inch June "normal" established between 1961 and 1990. It's also 3.72 inches less than the normal established between 1951 and 1980, which was 6.39 inches.

The information was released this month in a district report.

Despite the parched conditions last month, above-normal rainfall fell during the past 12 months, giving Sanford a precipitous surplus for the year. While monthly, quarterly and biannual averages are below normal, Sanford's annual rainfall for the year ending in June was more than a foot above the 1951-1980 normal amount and nearly 15 inches above the 1981-1990 normal.

The summer drought reached a height, or low, early in July when the Wekiva River fell below 6.9 feet above sea level. That would have normally triggered "Phase Two" irrigation restrictions for the areas west of Interstate 4, but district

Look for a hot time in Sanford

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — It'll be a hot time in downtown Sanford on Saturday afternoon.

Beginning at 11 a.m., firefighters from across the state and from other locations across the southeast will be competing for the Firematics Championship.

Chief Tom Hickson said the contest is a fun day for firefighters who work hard every day honing their skills in the line of duty.

"This is something they can do to show off their skills and have a fun time at the same time," he said.

While Hickson described the event jokingly as a "May Day Play Day" he said the firefighters who will compete take the contest very seriously.

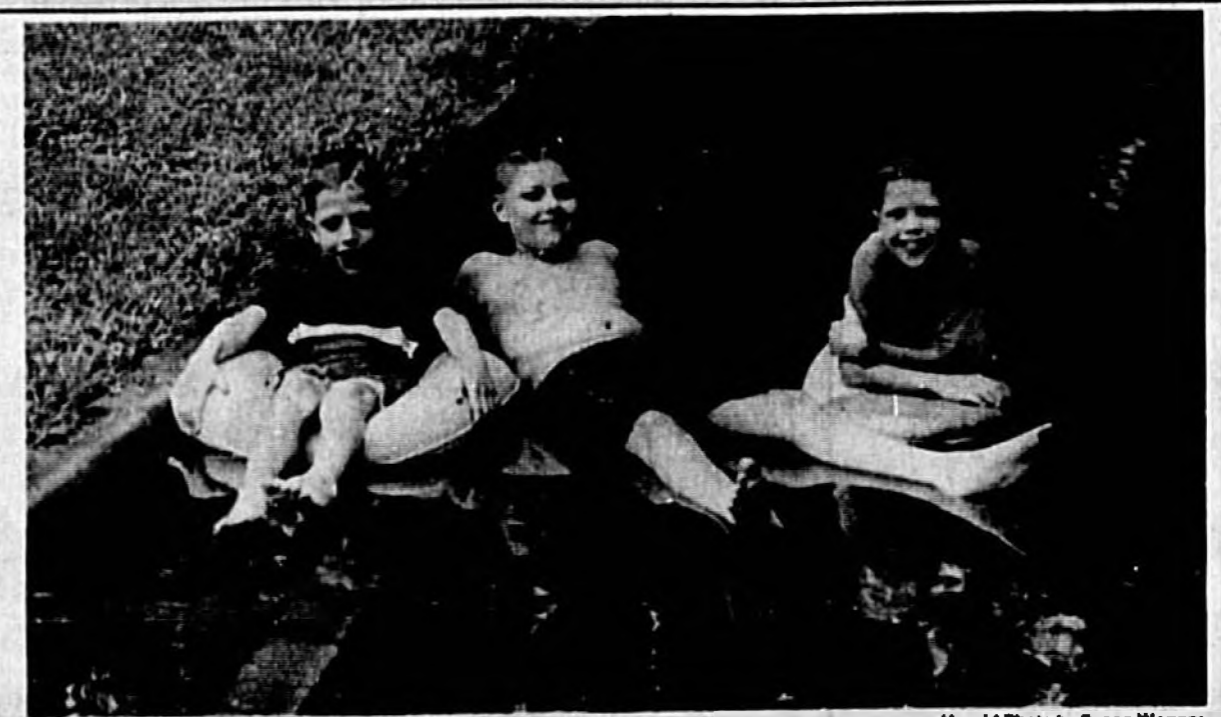

"This is not a joke to a lot of them," he said. "Having good skills with ladders, hoses, pumps...that's important business. It could mean the difference between life and death in many situations."

Hickson said that the competition will take place in the parking lot of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce on First Street.

There will be teams from 14 fire departments.

Study of Andrew's winds to be released

MIAMI — A study that could confirm that Hurricane Andrew's most vicious winds struck Dade County farther north than previously thought is due for release on Aug. 24, the hurricane's one-year anniversary.

The author, University of Chicago meteorology professor Ted Fujita, said Thursday the study will also identify the areas where extremely fast and destructive bursts of wind — called "swaths" — crossed Dade County.

A recent federal government study was the first to make that assessment. Fujita's study confirms the government's finding.

Andrew caused $18 billion in insured losses when it slammed into South Florida last August.

Though south Dade County — particularly Homestead and Florida City — bore much of the brunt of the hurricane's fury, the strongest winds may have blown across areas to the north, the studies show.

Fujita said the winds could have reached 200 mph for short periods of time in some areas. Researchers have said Andrew's maximum sustained winds reached 141 mph.

Spermicidal gel approved

HOLLYWOOD — A spermicidal gel that would protect women from pregnancy for 24 hours before intercourse has been approved for sale in the United States, the manufacturer said.

Columbia Laboratories Inc. announced Thursday that it has received Food and Drug Administration permission to market the new product named Advantage 24.

Testing has shown no harmful effects on condoms when the two contraceptives are used in combination, said Margaret Koell, Columbia's chief financial officer.

Spermicides already on the market must be used two hours at most before intercourse.

The new spermicide does not offer protection from sexually transmitted diseases.

Columbia's timed-release technology uses bioadhesive technology to enable the spermicidal drug nonoxonyl-9 to adhere to the cervix.

Child rescued from sewer pipe

ST. PETERSBURG — Rescuers were able to pull a 9-year-old boy to safety after following his screams while he was trapped in an underground drainage pipe in swirling waters.

Christopher Dominguez floated and tumbled through the water-filled pipe for 15 minutes Thursday. He was finally rescued by firefighters who had followed the sounds of his screams and pulled him to safety through a manhole two blocks away.

"When we pulled him out, he just kept saying 'Thank you,'" District Fire Chief Gerard Chalmers said. "He was happy to be alive."

The boy was treated at Bayfront Medical Center and released Thursday evening in good condition.

Lightning may have caused death

LAKE WORTH — An autopsy could determine if a truck electrically charged by lightning contributed to the death of a bicyclist who hit the vehicle.

Palm Beach County Medical Examiner Investigator Tony Mead said the bicyclist had no outward signs of being hit by lightning, but an autopsy scheduled today could determine what role lightning played in the death. "There were no burn marks," Mead said Thursday.

The unidentified bicyclist was in a thunderstorm on Thursday when his 10-speed rammed the pickup truck that may have been hit by lightning.

"We were just through the intersection and lightning hit," said Pete Musacchio, a passenger in the truck that was driven by his son, Andrew, 24.

"The truck kind of lit up on the inside like electricity was in it. And I felt this bump," Musacchio said. "I looked back, and this kid (the bicyclist) was dead than a mackerel."

An electrical engineering professor at Florida Atlantic University said it is possible the bicyclist died from an electrical charge, but the cyclist would have had to hit the truck almost the same time lightning struck the vehicle.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Weather service changes zoning

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County residents keeping a watch on zonal weather forecasting take notice: The National Weather Service is changing zone numbers.

The changes go into effect as of 10 a.m., Oct. 1.

In the past, Seminole County has been considered as zone 11. A weather warning for that zone however, would also include Orange, Osceola, Lake and Sumter Counties. Residents could not determine if serious weather problems were coming to Seminole County, or located at Dunnellon, located approximately 70 miles due west of Sanford, but still in zone 11.

As of Oct. 1, Seminole County will have its own number, zone 46. Each of the others in what has been zone 11, will have separate numbers. Locations of specific counties in a weather warning area will be much easier to determine.

A few larger counties in Florida will have more than one zone to identify north versus south, or some other separation. Monroe will be divided into four zones. Escambia, Dade, Collier, Okaloosa, Palm Beach, Santa Rosa and Walton counties will be divided into two zones each for the mainland and coastal areas.

Osceola County will have one zone number, 53, but be declared as northern and southern 53 when referred to by the weather bureau.

The changes in zones will also affect persons who rely on specific agricultural zone forecasts, especially regarding frost or freeze warnings.

The changes, publicly announced Wednesday, are the result of several months of work by the U.S. Department of Commerce, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and National Weather Service in Melbourne.

HRS must pay $19.5 million to state disabled children

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Thousands of disabled children whose Social Security money was taken by the state's social service agency while they lived in state-run homes will get that money back.

The Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services will have to find about $19.5 million from its budget to settle a 1978 class-action lawsuit.

HRS was ordered by a federal appeals court in 1991 to return the money, which was kept from disabled children ages 5 to 17 who lived in state homes from March 1977 to June 1991. About 2,100 people can lay claim to the money, said HRS attorney Dennis Crowley.

Officials said they don't know exactly how the money will be distributed or how the financially strapped agency will come up with the funds.

Anne Swerlick, the attorney who filed the federal lawsuit, said HRS kept the $300 to $400 monthly checks and gave the children an allowance, usually about $35 a month.

The courts ruled the children couldn't be charged those fees, because they were entitled to the state-provided special education services. The state also has to pay about $225,000 to parents who also had been charged fees for the services, Swerlick said.

Swerlick said the case has dragged on because HRS has been unable to determine exactly how much it owes the children and how many people are eligible to collect on the judgment.

"Unfortunately, it's gone on much too long," she said. "The children really need this money."

Swerlick said the money kept from the children didn't directly go to their care, but was added to the agency's budget and went to cover other costs.

Crowley said once the agency works out the details of its proposal for distributing the money, the plan needs to be approved by the plaintiffs.

Need a home? It's yours if you move it

By Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE — Want a house?

It's yours — but you have to move it.

The First Evangelical Lutheran Church wants five houses off its property, and soon.

All but one of the tenants have moved out, and Robb Grimm, pastor of the church, fears that the abandoned homes will attract vagrants and drug users. The houses, built in the 1930s and 1940s, are adjacent to the church.

"We certainly don't want that in our backyard. We're doing this to improve the neighborhood," Grimm said.

Group forms to push spending cap

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A proposal to keep state spending from growing faster than the average personal income of Floridians wouldn't mean large government cutbacks, a sponsor said.

That's because the proposed constitutional amendment includes a list of exemptions as well as an override provision — and also because the increase in the average personal income in Florida has sometimes surpassed the growth in the state budget.

"You're not going to see a big dip in the amount of money to run state government," said Bill Bryant, a Tallahassee attorney and former member of a defunct citizens' panel on tax reform.

But the proposed cap is a serious one because it would force lawmakers to be more conservative when it comes to writing the budget, Bryant said.

For example, if the average personal income of Floridians rose only 3 percent one year, then the budget could only increase 3 percent.

Bryant filed papers Thursday with the state Division of Elections to form a group called Enough Is Enough to promote the measure. It'll be another week before the language of the proposal is worked out, he said.

There will be a number of exemptions in the draft as well as a clause that would let state lawmakers override the limit by a two-thirds vote.

A major exemption is for state taxes spent to match federal dollars in joint programs, like Medicaid. The massive health care program for welfare recipients is the fastest-growing part of the state budget, which has nearly doubled in the last six years.

Other exemptions include money needed to pay for bonds and charges, like tuition.

The average personal income in Florida has varied from only a few percentage points to the double-digit range — and some years the growth of revenue to state government has not kept pace, Bryant said.

Bryant, a Republican, is chairing Enough Is Enough along with Democrat Parker Thompson, a Miami lawyer and former member of the tax commission.

Three other ex-commission members have also joined the effort: state GOP chief Tom Slade; Democratic fund-raiser

Allan Katz; and Tom Rankin, chairman of Lykes Brothers, Inc.

The Taxation and Budget Reform Commission, created by voters in 1988, had the authority to put reform measures directly before the voters. The idea of a spending cap tied to personal income was debated by the group, but fell three votes short of the 17 needed to put it on the ballot.

Also on board are Ken Wilkinson, Lee County property appraiser and the leader of last year's "Save Our Homes" amendment limiting the rise in property tax assessments; and Phil Handy, organizer of the 1992 referendum on term limits. Both were successful.

To get on the ballot, Enough Is Enough will need about 430,000 voter signatures.

SANFORD — One of two teens charged in the restroom explosion at Lyman High School pleaded no contest in two cases against him Thursday in Seminole Circuit Court.

Eric Forgy, 17, entered the no contest plea to two cases charging him with possession of an explosive device. He had previously pleaded not guilty to the charges. No plea agreement was made between the state attorney and the defendant in exchange for the plea. Judge Alan Dickey said he will decide after reviewing the pre-sentence investigation and other pertinent information whether to impose adult or juvenile sanctions.

Under adult sanctions, the maximum sentence for the third degree felony charge is five years in the state prison. Under juvenile sanctions, the maximum time he would be supervised is until his 19th birthday.

Originally, Forgy and Gabriel Lovasz, 16, were charged as juveniles in the April 2 explosion at Lyman High School. An explosive device went off in a boys restroom causing $364 damage. Although no one was injured in the blast, band director Donald Schmaus was shaken up. Lovasz has pleaded not guilty.

In June, the cases against both teens were transferred to adult court.

Under questioning by the judge, Forgy said he participated in the making of the device which exploded at Lyman. In the other case, Forgy said he examined the device made by someone else, then gave it back. He did not name the individual who made that bomb. He said a third youth bought the device during a class. Forgy attended that class but did not participate in the sale, he said.

"I was present in the class when it was sold," the teen told the judge.

The bomb was sold to a 15-year-old in a Spanish class for $5 about two weeks before the explosion in the high school restroom. The youth kept the device in his bedroom dresser. He became concerned after watching a televised report about the school explosion and reported he had a bomb to officials. The bomb was removed from the teen's home by Longwood Police and federal Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents and destroyed, according to police records.

Judge Dickey withheld adjudication of guilt and set a September 2 sentencing date. Dickey told the teen's parents, Brenda and Dennis Forgy, that the pre-sentence interviews should not interfere with a trip to the islands the family had planned.

Calvin Bryant, who's been a Sanford resident since 1926, sits back to watch his town in action on a recent afternoon outside Touchton's Drugs on First Street. Sarah Reese of Altamonte Springs is ready to get up and move into the action, but Bryant is content to watch it all pass by.

Prostitute killings investigated

No suspects but police say deaths may be linked

By RON WOOD
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE — Police are looking into four unsolved slayings, including the killings of three prostitutes, to see if there are any connections.

One of the bodies was found earlier this week in nearby Baker County, while three others had been found in Duval County.

The murders of the two prostitutes — one killed in January and the other slain this month — have striking similarities, police said. The body of a third woman, found Sunday in Duval County, was identified Thursday as Cenia Smith, 39, who police said had been previously arrested on prostitution charges.

"We are looking into the possibility that they are related and we don't have any leads or suspects," Sgt. Gus Carlson, a police spokesman, said Thursday.

The first slaying occurred in January. Sharon Sangster, 27, identified by police as a prostitute, was found dead New Year's Day. She had been stabbed, strangled and left on a fence near a road. Police think her body was displayed purposely.

She disappeared New Year's Eve. She was last seen getting into a white van after leaving a bar.

Hunters discovered the body of a 28-year-old prostitute, Toni Acosta of Yulee, on July 3 about five miles from where Ms. Sangster's body was found. She had been stabbed repeatedly and her body was displayed. She was last seen June 25 getting into a large white car.

Carlson refused to detail how the bodies were displayed. "We don't describe crime scenes. We don't want to give out any information that we may need if we make an arrest," he said.

A man chasing his dog found skeletal remains Ms. Smith on Sunday in Northeast Jacksonville. She was reported missing July 15, Carlson said.

The woman's mother, Wonell Smith, 66, said her daughter had spent most of the past three years living on the streets. "I had a feeling sooner or later something like this would happen," she said. "I would tell her. The last thing I can do for you is give you a decent funeral..."

Lou Eliopolous, chief investigator for the Duval County Medical Examiner's Office, said Thursday the cause of her death was still under investigation.

Baker County authorities are awaiting word from the Florida Department of Law Enforcement and the medical examiner's office in Gainesville as they try to identify a woman whose body was found Monday in a shallow grave beneath an underpass on Interstate 10. The body was wrapped in plastic bags and stuffed in a duffel bag, said Lt. Charlie Sharman of the Baker County Sheriff's Office.

Although the body had been there for 18 months to two years, authorities were able to get fingerprints and dental information from it, Sharman said, adding it looks like it may be the body of yet-another missing Jacksonville woman, who was about 25-years-old. Carlson refused to discuss whether a serial killer might be at work.

"I am not qualified to say if that is the case," he said.

NAACP bombing was part of a skin head terror campaign

By KARYN HUNT
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — A blast that tore through a Washington state NAACP meeting hall was part of a terror campaign planned by white supremacists against rap stars, synagogues and military installations, the FBI said.

Jeremiah Gordon Knesal, a 19-year-old charged in the July 20 bombing in Tacoma, Wash., told the FBI he belonged to a neo-Nazi group that planned to carry out the attacks throughout the Northwest, according to an affidavit unsealed Thursday.

Knesal told the FBI the targets included Jewish organizations, military facilities and rappers Ice-T and Ice Cube.

possible links among the attacks.

Knesal, of Auburn, Wash., was arrested along with 19-year-old Wayne Paul Wooten of Tacoma in a Salinas parking lot Monday after a security guard said he saw them shoplifting socks, underwear, jeans and T-shirts at a department store.

Both were charged in federal court with making and possessing explosives. Police found pipe bombs, rifles and racist literature in Knesal's car. They could get 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine on the bomb-related charges.

Knesal and Wooten fled to California after the attack because they were afraid to take part in more bombings, the affidavit said.

Knesal told the FBI he and a third member of the neo-Nazi organization Church of the Creator, a man he knew as Mark Stevenson, threw a pipe bomb into the NAACP hall. He said he made five pipe bombs under Stevenson's direction.

FBI agents in Seattle later arrested Stevenson — also known as Mark Frank Kowalski, 24, of Miami — and charged him in the NAACP bombing and with making and transporting explosives.

John Cover, FBI agent in charge in San Francisco, said the bureau is investigating connections between the NAACP bombings and an alleged plot to bomb a black church in Los Angeles. That plot was foiled by the FBI earlier this month.

Lulann McGriff, president of the San Francisco branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said her group is worried about the attacks but not surprised, because employees get daily hate mail and harassing calls.

"I think the people involved in this are some very sick people," she said.

Ice-T and Ice Cube had no comment on the alleged plot, according to a spokeswoman with their record label, Priority Records.

Good idea if used properly

The Seminole County School Board is considering installing a complaint phone line. It is an excellent idea, providing it is used properly.

The concept is not untested. At the beginning of this year, the City of Lake Mary established a telephone hotline to receive complaints from residents. It has proven to be valuable both to the city and to the citizens.

Complaints are taken, written up, and forwarded to the proper department. The department head takes action if required, and submits a report to the city manager. The response to the complaint and action taken are then presented to the commission for information.

In most cases, the complainant is notified when the problem is resolved.

Citizens no longer have to concern themselves over which department to contact about a complaint. The assignments are made at the city staff level, and no call is overlooked.

An approach such as this would be excellent for our school system. Parents as well as teachers could report problems, which would be forwarded to the proper authorities for action.

Difficulties however, could result if the telephone calls were unfounded or based on rumor or speculation. Making such calls may be unwarranted and time consuming for school officials.

We suggest the school system undertake an approach similar to that used by Lake Mary. Records of complaints and actions taken should be supplied to the school superintendent and school board. They would be a valuable asset.

If calls made to the school system are valid, and if people can rely on some type of response, the concept will prove beneficial to all concerned.

Code problems

The city of Sanford Code Enforcement Division would like to remind its citizens of code violations which have a tendency to occur during the summer months and would like to encourage everyone to comply.

We all know that spring and summer are times for cleaning our yards and disposing of unwanted items. It is also the time of year when vines, underbrush, weeds and/or wild growth can easily exceed the 18-inch height limit, and grass can grow to over its height limit of 12 inches almost overnight, especially during our rainy months. In some cases, these conditions can create a menace to life, property and/or the public health and welfare. It can create a fire hazard as well as a nest and/or breeding ground for sand flies, mosquitoes, rats, mice, snakes and other types of pests and vermin. These conditions are deemed unlawful. Therefore, they are prohibited and are declared a public nuisance. These rules also apply to any vacant lots that are considered by the city of Sanford to be "developed lots." This description is defined as "any lot, tract or parcel that contains or has contained any structure and/or improvements."

We would also like to take this time to remind citizens who have swimming pools the importance of keeping the water properly treated so it does not become stagnant. There are several reasons for this request. First, stagnant water causes a breeding place for mosquitoes which we all know have become more life-threatening over the past several years. Therefore, keeping the water clean does deter the breeding activity. Second, we all know how children are attracted to water during the hot summer days. There have been several instances where a child has fallen into a stagnant pool and no one was aware because the child could not be seen. We ask that you please keep this in mind because accidents do happen no matter how inaccessible you may think you have made your pool. We also ask that if you have a screen enclosure that you maintain them in good repair.

If you have any questions concerning these ordinances or any other city ordinance, please feel free to call 330-5657.

Thank you all for your help and continued cooperation in making Sanford a cleaner community.

An argument for the death penalty

On abortion rights and the death penalty, President Clinton's historic Supreme Court nominee, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, was both judiciously forthright and evasive during her nomination hearing before the Senate Judicial Committee.

"This is something central to a woman's life, to her dignity. It's a decision that she must make for herself," she informed the senators. But on the death penalty, Judge Ginsburg judiciously tap-danced. "My own view on the death penalty is not relevant to any question that I would be asked to decide as a judge."

In respectful deference to her wishes, however, I'll answer for her.

I support the death penalty — in some cases, strenuously.

During this month, there were three murder cases, so horrible, so outrageously contemptuous of the sanctity of human life that they mercifully screamed out for the most severe retributive punishment permissible under law.

In Austin, Texas, a jury brushed aside Ronald Ray Howard's ludicrous defense that hard-core rap music had inspired him to gun down a state trooper during a routine traffic stop, and sentenced Howard to death.

In Fort Bragg, N.C., Army Sgt. 1st Class Ervin Graves has been charged with the killing of 2nd Lt. Lisa N. Bryant because, according to witnesses, she had rebuffed Graves' attempt to dance with her.

Later, he followed her down the hall, took out a .357-caliber Magnum pistol and shot the 21-year-old Bryant several times in her face and body. Only months prior to her death, Bryant had graduated from Princeton University with honors.

In Chapel Hill, N.C., Anthony Simpson, 18, jumped out of some roadside bushes and attempted to rape Kristen Ann Lodge-Miller during her 6 a.m. jog. When Miller, a highly regarded speech therapist, broke away and began to run, witnesses say Simpson pursued her. Simpson shot her several times. Miller fell and Simpson shot her a fifth time.

At Simpson's hearing, he did not show a shred of remorse or contrition. When a photographer took his picture, he belligerently held up a defiant middle finger.

If Simpson and Graves are convicted, there is absolutely no reason why both of them, like Howard, should not be sentenced to death.

Given America's intractably racist criminal justice system, innocent black men are convicted of crimes far more often than white men.

During my 19 years as a Philadelphia Daily News columnist, 75 suspects wanted for murder turned themselves in to me. I negotiated the release of hostages five times, including during a week-long prison takeover.

I know the criminal mindset. I also know that some convicted murderers or rapist-murderers cannot be rehabilitated, nor can they be educated to lead productive lives.

Rather than oppose the death penalty, we need to work more strenuously to make the criminal justice system racially fair, then tougher. There are several ways to do it, but that's another column.

I support the death penalty — in some cases, strenuously.

Election landscape may change

WASHINGTON — Major changes are occurring that could alter the American political landscape well in advance of the next presidential election in 1996. In unrelated but interconnected moves, the religious right is attempting to broaden its appeal; the Republican Party is looking for more than a few good women; and women's political organizations are asking if they should put ideology ahead of gender.

Since the November elections, virtually every political organization has been polling extensively, trying to figure out exactly what the electorate wants and how to put together some kind of majority. All the results are strikingly similar. There is no doubt that the politician with the momentum today is Ross Perot, and that his movement is taking voters away from both the GOP and the religious right.

Ralph Reed Jr., executive director of Pat Robertson's Christian Coalition, was frank during a recent news conference. In a major poll of Christian fundamentalists — both Protestant and Catholic — the coalition was surprised to find that "their top five issues were the same as everybody else's — the economy and jobs, welfare, the budget deficit and crime." As for the traditional social issues that have been the coalition's main focus, "abortion ranked eighth as an issue; gay rights, 12th or 13th," admitted Reed.

In other words, the Christian Coalition's seeming core constituency was finding its major concerns most directly addressed by Ross Perot, and his new movement. As Reed put it to a reporter: "Our message has been directed too much to our activists and donors, not to our voters."

So the coalition is going to respond by trying to broaden its appeal. Its first attempt will be to organize a massive campaign to defeat the Clinton budget on the basis that the president has gone back on his campaign promise of helping the middle class through a tax break and that the Clinton energy tax "is a jobs killer."

Then, in the future, the coalition will push its own version of welfare reform — raising the tax exemption for dependent children — and, with somewhat twisted logic, will support passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement. On that score, Reed says, the coalition is supporting the troubled pact because it will create jobs. A better reason may well be that opposition to the treaty is now a central Perot position.

The coalition will also, for the first time, open a Washington office and reach out to other conservative organizations to work with them on economic and non-social political issues.

Meeting in Chicago, the Republican National Committee spent an inordinate amount of time and energy talking about how the party might be able to recruit stronger candidates for the 1994 congressional elections. The GOP's polling has shown that a majority of voters still want more change, and that change in many voters' minds is equated with sending more women to Congress.

A record number of women were elected to the House of Representatives in 1992 — 24 were newly elected, but 21 of these were Democrats. The GOP knows that, while it needs to put forward more women candidates, they must have broad appeal. That means, several speakers told the RNC meeting, GOP candidates must avoid campaigning on conservative social issues.

Several at the Republican meeting pointed to Colorado state Rep. Michelle Lawrence — who will try to unseat Democratic incumbent Rep. David Skaggs — as a model potential GOP candidate. The state legislator is a fiscal conservative who owns a small business. But she is also pro-choice, and is generally liberal on social issues.

Paradoxically, while the GOP met in Chicago to talk about finding more pro-choice, socially liberal women to run for office, the National Women's Political Caucus met in Los Angeles to face the question of whether it really supports its oft-stated goal of electing more women to public office or only supports electing women who fit into a narrow, feminist-liberal mold.

The NWPC, and several other groups supporting women candidates, are becoming fractured over the question of whether any woman in office is better than her male opponent, or whether it is only doctrinaire feminists that these organizations should support.

In some ways, NWPC's president, former Missouri Lt. Gov. Harriett Woods, is very much like the Christian Coalition's Ralph Reed. Both are reaching out in an attempt to lead their respective organizations to broader acceptance. It could cause the American political landscape to look very different by the time voters go to the polls in November 1994.

There is no doubt that the momentum today is Ross Perot.

Mitchell priming for a close race

WASHINGTON — Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, has issued a call to arms to campaign contributors. He tops the Republican hit list and needs $2 million by Election Day 1994 to retain his seat.

"As Majority Leader, I am targeted for defeat — and that could mean millions of dollars for my opponent," reads one of his recent fund-raising appeals. "... as a friend and supporter, you know how critical early money is, especially for a candidate who is being targeted by well-financed opposition."

Somebody forgot to tell Rick Bennett that he's the "well-financed opposition."

The 30-year-old Bennett, who's Mitchell's likely and perhaps sole opponent in next year's Maine race, hardly fits the giant-slayer profile. He's a struggling modular-home salesman who says he has a negative net worth (after figuring in his mortgage and car payment), hasn't yet raised a dime to defeat Mitchell, and who has been written off by national and state Republicans. The extent of his political experience is less than three years in the part-time Maine legislature.

What seems like the mismatch of the century is a metaphor for the advantages of incumbency.

Bennett penned his April 26 plea. As Mitchell was just beginning to contemplate the race, and recalls his reaction to the two-page letter, "I was amused. I knew from being active in the Republican party that there weren't any candidates besides me," he said.

What about the specter of "millions of dollars for my opponent" that Mitchell's letter raises? Bennett says that national Republicans "haven't really belied up to the bar with me yet." Kevin Keogh, chairman of the Maine Republican party, sees the race as a lost cause. "He's (Mitchell) going to kill (our candidate)," Keogh told our associate Andrew Conte. "... It's absolutely duplicitous for George Mitchell to pass himself off as a David versus the Republican Party's Goliath."

What seems like the mismatch of the century is a metaphor for the advantages of incumbency in the current system of campaign finance. Mitchell's strategy is a time-tested tactic for incumbents trying to discourage challengers, and to dry up their national fund raising. In short, he's trying to preclude the prophecy invoked in his letter.

Absent real demons to help spur donations, Mitchell has had to invent them to meet his target of $2 million. "Sen. Mitchell believes there is no such thing as a sure winner and a sure loser in politics," said a Mitchell spokesperson. "The senator feels he needs to be prepared for a competitive contest and in this day and age that means fund raising."

That "fund raising" usually means overkill. In 1992, incumbents raised nearly nine times the amount of PAC money and three times as many individual contributions than did challengers. In 21 of the 26 Senate races, incumbents outspent challengers by more than $1.5 million.

This is a speech Mitchell himself could deliver — and it's one he actually has delivered during his crusade for campaign-finance reform. Perhaps, no senator has been more impassioned about the need to level the playing field. "The most significant factor in encouraging competitive elections and reducing the advantage that incumbents enjoy in fund raising is to impose a spending limit which drastically reduces the gap in spending between incumbents and challengers," Mitchell said.

Like most incumbents, Mitchell is willing to exploit the advantages until new laws are enacted. According to Public Citizen, if the current Senate-passed legislation takes effect, senatorial candidates in Maine would be limited to spending just over $1.6 million — $400,000 less than Mitchell told contributors he must collect to win.

Major David Brierton, who is in charge of the jail, testified he is trying to establish a program of individualized computer instruction for jail inmates too young to qualify for the regular GED classes. There are nine inmates in the juvenile section at the jail 16 years old or younger, he said.

At one time, Brierton said an attempt was made to offer a GED program to young offenders but the attempt failed. "The teacher left and didn't come back," he said.

Eaton asked Andersen for case law supporting the contention the two teens were being denied equal protection because they were too young for the classes offered. Andersen said he did not have any.

"I just don't think there's much merit to this," Eaton said. "I really don't."

The judge said he did not have the authority to tell the sheriff how to run the jail. He added that public schools are not in session now so even if bond was granted, classes would not be available. Eaton said he did not think there is an obligation for the jail to provide education for anybody.

Anderson agreed, but argued that since classes are available for some inmates, they should be available to all, except those individuals considered security risks.

Trials for both youths are set for September but the defense attorneys said pre-trial preparations will not be completed by then. Eaton left the cases on the September docket suggesting the attorneys try to complete trial preparations.

Other political activity included his service as former Florida Governor Ferris Bryant's campaign manager.

In his business life, he was the representative for Standard Oil, for a total of 52 years before his retirement.

He also was the president of the R.J. Reynolds race track in Longwood during its early days. The track eventually became the Sanford/Orlando Kennel Club.

For many years, he raised prize beef cattle. He also taught a senior citizen Bible class at the First Presbyterian Church in Sanford.

Regarding that, he once remarked, "I taught those old codgers how to get out of hell."

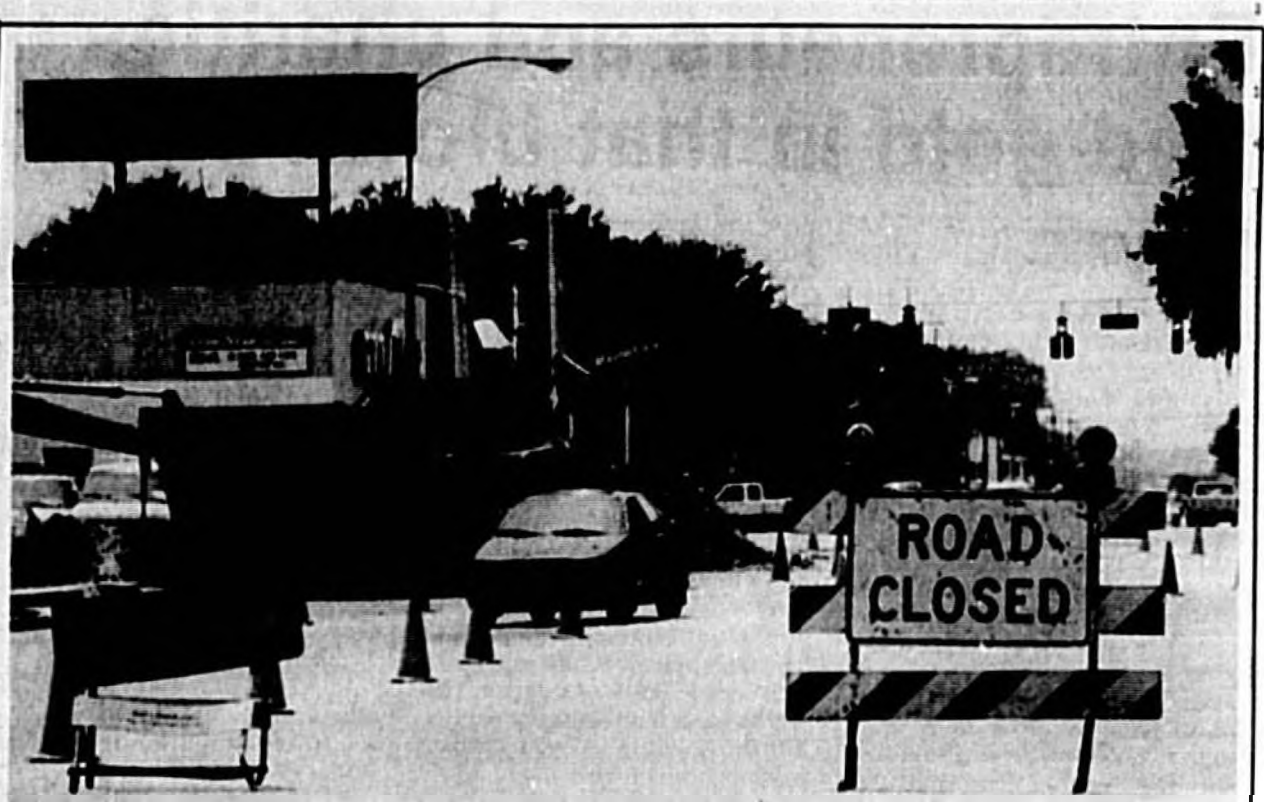

He added, "There is very little I haven't done, and I've done some of 'em twice."

When he officially declared he was retired in November of 1989, Higginbotham commented on it. "I had sense enough to know when to quit. Age has slowed me down a bit, but I like retirement just fine."

He added, "Anybody who tells you they love to work is lyin'."

Higginbotham is survived by his wife Alene, two daughters, one son, 12 grandchildren, 18 great-grandchildren, two brothers and five sisters.

Funeral arrangements are being handled by Gramkow Funeral Home in Sanford. As of this morning, details had not been announced.

School bus with hunger strikers detained on its way to Cuba

By SUSANA HAYWARD Associated Press Writer

LAREDO, Texas - A yellow school bus with flat tires perched near the Rio Grande today with 14 people staging a hunger strike after U.S. Customs refused to let them cross the Mexican border on their way to Cuba.

"We think we might be engaged in a war of attrition," said The Rev. Lucius Walker, an organizer of the Pastors For Peace convoy.

Some 70 other group members of the convoy carrying computers, medicine, wheelchairs and school supplies across the border to Nuevo Laredo, Mexico began a hunger strike after the bus was impounded on Thursday.

Customs officials only seized a token amount of goods prohibited under the 33-year-old trade embargo against Cuba. Most of the 200 people in the caravan paid a quarter to cross the border, carrying boxes of prescription drugs and huge computers.

"We don't want to create a mob scene. We don't want of-ficers and civilians to be in 'danger,'" said U.S. Customs spokesman Steve Duchesne.

But when the school bus tried to cross International Bridge 1 in Laredo, they were told to pull into an export lot next to the bridge.

After a two-hour standoff, the bus was towed in. "Viva Cuba!" some 200 caravan members shouted. "Cuba Si. Bloqueo No!"

Thursday night, immigration officials deflated the tires and took the bus's battery out to force the passengers to get out. But they vowed not to leave until they are allowed to bring the bus and its cargo to Cuba.

Walker said the passengers were being denied toilet facilities and pillows for the night.

"Our intention is to out-wait them," said Walker. "In due course, Customs will find it made a mistake."

The last caravan crossed in November after a lengthy dispute with customs officials.

The convoy of some 95 vehicles and 200 people - twice as big as last Fall - had been rallying on the American side in Laredo since Sunday. Again, organizers refused to allow pre-crossing inspection of the 100 tons of medicine, wheelchairs, bibles and school supplies.

"We got more than $100,000 worth of medicine through," exclaimed Baptist Minister, Lucius Walker of New Jersey, who drove one of the trucks across the border.

The convoy was accompanied by 35 observers, including former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark, who called on the Clinton administration to end the embargo.

"We're causing malnutrition and punishing a whole people. It is morally wrong," said Clark, who served in the Johnson Administration.

All of the trucks, cars and vans in the convoy made it across except for three school buses. Only one tried.

Linda Wilcox, assistant district director for U.S. Customs, said the bus was impounded because the pastors had declared it as an export item, while the other goods were undeclared.

But group members clearly shouted "Heart medicine" or "Penicillin for children" as they crossed into Mexico.

Stalking

the stalking law on behalf of two Sanford men, Daniel A. Emerson, 31, and John Polson, 32. He presented his arguments in late April. Challenging the law as vague, Feliciano argued innocent people could be arrested for stalking if they dressed unconventionally and happened to walk or drive the same route every day. Another individual who traveled the same way at the same time, the attorney said, might feel they were being stalked even though the situation was merely a coincidence of two people going on their way at the same time.

Assistant State Attorney Allan Campbell countered that the law is specific in identifying actions willfully, maliciously and repeatedly made as stalking.

Emerson's ex-girlfriend claimed he looked into her windows and stood in front of her home and continued to harass her despite a judge's warning to stay away. Polson's estranged wife claimed he shouted obscenities and threatened her. She claimed the problems have continued.

Dickey's ruling denying a motion to dismiss the stalking charge applied only to Polson. Last week, Emerson pleaded no contest to trespassing and was sentenced to 17 days time served in jail after his arrest.

After the judge's ruling, Polson pleaded no contest to a misdemeanor, disorderly conduct and was sentenced to the four days he served in jail.

On Wednesday, the state attorney dismissed a stalking charge against Seminole County Deputy Sheriff Frank Johnson on the condition he have no contact with his former girlfriend or her family. Johnson was charged in March with harassing his ex-girlfriend who claimed he followed her and called constantly.

A Seminole County Deputy for nearly 20 years, Johnson, 41, who lives in DeLand, is on paid leave pending the outcome of a department investigation of the incident. Johnson worked as an internal affairs investigator in the sheriff's department.

Adoption hunter convicted of stealing info

By Associated Press

AKRON, Ohio - A woman who made a business out of helping adopted children and their birth parents find each other was convicted of stealing confidential government information.

A federal jury Thursday found Sandy Musser, 54, of Cape Coral, Fla., guilty of theft of confidential government records, conspiracy and fraud. She was cleared of four other charges of fraud. No sentencing date was set.

"I will say that I was shocked, naturally, at the verdict because I'm not guilty," Ms. Musser said.

Ms. Musser, through her Musser Foundation, claimed to have helped about 500 adopted children and their biological parents find each other. She sells the information she finds for $450 to $2,500.

Ms. Musser advocates opening adoption records to adopted children and birth parents. Ohio and most other states seal such records.

The government's case hinged on whether Ms. Musser knew that a suburban Cleveland woman she hired to search records for adoptees or birth parents routinely broke the law and led to the Social Security Administration to obtain confidential records.

That woman, Barbara Moskowitz, pleaded guilty to fraud, lying to Social Security workers and conspiring with Musser to defraud the agency.

Tom Flavin, an investigator with the New York State Health Department who posed as a man seeking a child given up for adoption by a former girlfriend, made tape recordings of conversations with Ms. Musser.

including the Sanford Fire Department, the Seminole County Fire Department, the Winter Springs Fire Department, the Lake Mary Fire Department and departments as far away as Fort Rucker, Ala.

"There's a lot of interest in competitions like this," Hickson said.

The firefighting teams will be running against one another and the clock in contests that include connecting hoses, climbing ladders, using the pumps and knocking down walls.

"It's loads of fun," Hickson said, "but it's a lot of work."

Following the contest, firefighters and the public will be invited to take part in a "red hot" barbecue for the benefit of the Fireman's Benefit Fund.

Tickets will be $7 per person for a complete barbecue dinner that will be prepared by the firefighters who are experts in outdoor food preparation. Hickson said. The proceeds will go to help firefighters in a number of charitable works.

There will be no admission charge for the contest and the public is invited.

Rain

spokesman Ed Albanesi said early July rains bumped the river level above seven feet, the "Phase One" level.

Residents of the area have been limited to Phase One three-weekly watering since last month due to the lowered river level. Phase Two allows for only twice weekly watering. Albanesi said if the river level remains above seven feet by Aug. 10, the district governing board may decide to remove the restrictions.

Rainfall, after a period of months, replenishes central Florida's underground drinking water supply, the Florida Aquifer. In June, a Geneva well monitored by the district was about midway between the minimum and maximum levels recorded during the past 11 years. # Entrepreneurs and charities find gold in that brown water

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

ST. CHARLES, Mo. — Ten-year-old Paul Tipton was scooping floodwater into a bucket to send to his grandma in Texas when a thought dawned: If this stuff were packaged right, would people buy it?

Within a few days, he had his answer. He quickly sold the first 100 of his "Flood of the Century" souvenirs — a 2-ounce bottle of Missouri River water glued on a marble base beneath a replica of the St. Louis Arch.

And thus did the great Midwestern flood of 1993, commemorated as well in miniature sandbags and T-shirts, spawn another entrepreneur.

"I just couldn't go to sleep the night I thought of it," Paul said, seated at the suburban dining room table where he and 5-year-old brother Patrick assemble the mementos.

Like many others selling flood memorabilia, Paul is practicing capitalism with a conscience. Two-thirds of his profits on the $15 bottles go to the Red Cross and the Salvation Army, by midweek, he had donated $400.

Profit has become something of a dirty word in the flood souvenirs business. On the day he began peddling his bottles near the Arch, Paul said, "I was ragged out by a man who thought I was taking advantage of flood victims."

"That hurt my feelings," he said. "The first thing on my mind was to give some money to the people who need it."

Chas Anderson of St. Louis aims to raise $5,000 for flood relief from sales of 3-by-5-inch canvas sandbags stamped "The Mighty Flood of 1993." He's donating two-thirds of his profits and encouraging hotel and airport gift shops to follow suit. The bags sell for $3.49 to $4.99.

In drier days, Anderson, 29, works for a food delivery service, but the flooding forced a cutback in his work schedule. He had the idea for the little sandbags as he was helping fill the full-size versions.

"It's just been incredible," Anderson said of the response from gift shop managers, who he estimated have ordered 1,800 in the past week. Some purchasers think the sandbags "are in bad taste," he said. "But I ask them, 'What have you done for the flood?'"

"The first reaction is 'Gee, these are kind of cute,'" said Hilda Callahan, working Thursday at the gift shop in a St. Louis Holiday Inn. "Then they get sober about it and say,

"Maybe it's not so cute for the people who are living through it." But when they see some of the profit is going to flood relief, some of them buy it."

Around the Midwestern flood zone, companies that print designs on T-shirts and caps are flourishing, with many of the orders coming from groups of volunteers or companies involved in flood relief.

Some of the companies are producing their own designs, such as the popular "Lower A Place to Row" shirt made by T-Galaxy of Ames, T-Galaxy has sold 3,000 to 4,000 flood-related shirts and is donating some of the profits, marketing director Roger Ossian said.

In Manhattan, Kan., a company called It's Greek To Me is donating all the profits on its three $10 flood T-shirts to the Red Cross.

All other work is on hold at the company, which supplies T-shirts to sororities and fraternities at 220 colleges, and some employees are working 12 hours a day or more, chief executive David Dreiling said. His goal is to donate $20,000.

The attraction of disaster souvenirs escapes some, but Carol Griffin, owner of the Mark-It Top Shop in Jefferson City, has a theory.

Bargainers tentatively set on 4.3-cent gas tax boost

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Congressional Democratic leaders who have tentatively pined the gasoline-tax increase to 4.3 cents a gallon will try today to put the finishing touches on President Clinton's deficit-reduction bill.

Administration officials and House-Senate bargainers concluded Thursday that a boost of about 6 cents a gallon, which they had considered, could cost the votes of enough senators to bring the entire measure crashing down, said aides who spoke on condition of anonymity.

As a result, the total deficit reduction claimed in the compromise bill is expected to fall a bit below the $500 billion, five-year total Clinton and his Democratic allies have so often touted. But Democrats were expected to leave the figure above the $482 billion credited to the bipartisan 1990 budget agreement, the biggest such package in history.

"The probability is that the Senate gasoline tax will be where we end up, but not necessarily," Senate Finance Committee Chairman Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., told reporters, referring to the 4.3 cent boost the Senate initially approved last month.

Today's completion of the final bill would set the stage for a final congressional showdown over Clinton's legislative centerpiece for the year. Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, predicted that Congress would ship the final product to Clinton next week over solid Republican opposition.

But Democratic strategists, speaking on condition of anonymity, conceded that with conservative Democrats seeking deep spending cuts and liberals pushing for more generous treatment of social programs, the bill's fate would not be clear for days.

The measure's final shape will be determined by leaders' judgments of what it will take to muscle the measure through Congress. Its initial versions squeaked through the House by six votes and in the Senate by Vice President Al Gore's tie-breaking tally — leaving leaders little room for miscalculation.

Chief among the potential Senate Democratic defectors were Herb Kohl of Wisconsin and Montana's Max Baucus. Kohl said a higher gas levy would hit the middle class; Baucus wanted to protect Western motorists who often drive long distances.

The main burden of the package falls on wealthy and business taxpayers, on the U.S. defense budget and on Medicare, the health insurance program for the elderly and disabled.

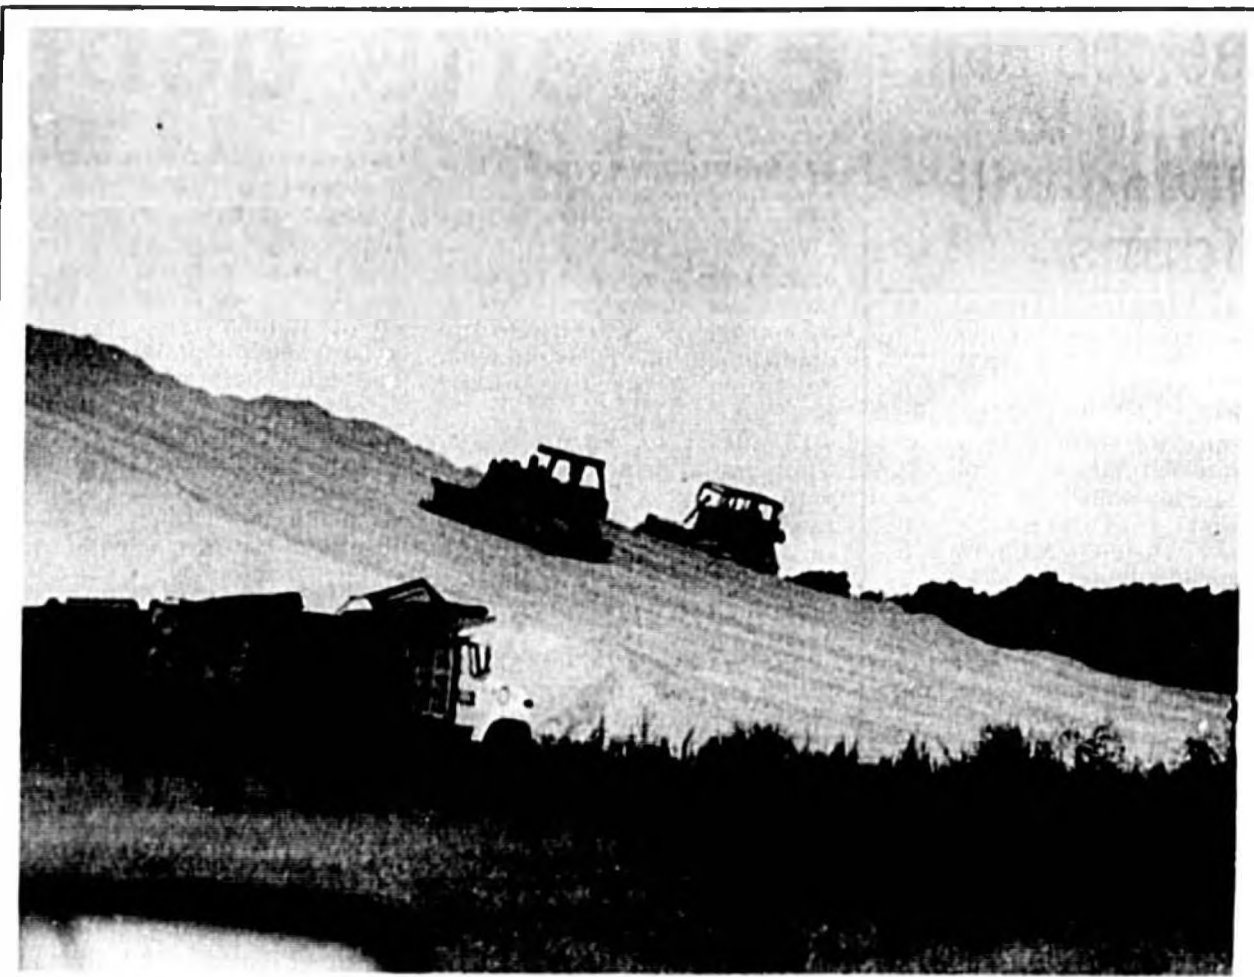

A gasoline tax increase of 4.3 cents, the only item in the bill that would hit virtually all middle-class families, would cost the typical driver less than $50 a year, according to the Clinton administration and the conservative Heritage Foundation.

House Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., and many liberals had preferred raising the 14.1 cent federal gasoline levy by 6 cents or 7 cents. Their goal was to pay for expansions of anti-poverty programs and tax breaks for business.

Now those initiatives are all but certain to fall well below the figures Clinton originally proposed, raising questions about whether liberals — especially in the House — might threaten to abandon the package.

"Hopefully, this will have no bearing on the things they care about," said one top Democratic House aide.

But earlier in the day, Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Md., chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, said that "99 percent of my members are holding fire on this" until they see what's in the final bill.

Clinton's huggy approach is therapy for the nation

By JILL LAWRENCE
An AP News Analysis

WASHINGTON — President Clinton has taken more than a little teasing for his huggy, talky, oh-so-sensitive approach to life. But it's served him well during a summer of tragedy and hardship.

In recent weeks Clinton has offered solace to discouraged flood victims, to friends and family stunned by the apparent suicide of Vince Foster, a White House aide — even to the parents of a Japanese exchange student shot to death in Louisiana.

And in what has to be a first, he turned up Thursday night on a flood-aid telethon, an 800-number on screen below his face, to encourage donations and assure flood-zone questioners that "we're going to work hard to help you."

Clinton is a different kind of chief executive, the embodiment of New Age empathy, in touch and at ease with his own feelings and everyone else's as well. But his people skills until now have attracted more ribbing than respect.

This is after all the president who put such a premium on bonding that he invited his Cabinet members to share secrets at a Camp David retreat, and whose wife preaches about finding a new "politics of meaning" at forums around the country. It's all very earnest and fortysomething.

Bring people together to talk, Clinton believes, and problems can't help but get solved. Or, at the very least, people won't walk away mad.

Thus his economic summit, his spotted owl summit and a flood summit this month at which he sometimes sounded more like a grief counselor than a president.

"There is almost a collective emotional process that people go through when it first hits. Folks are brave and good-humored and courageous," Clinton told embattled flood-state governors. "But then the reality of the losses sinks in, and a grief takes over. And then, if everyone is not at least doing their best, a lot of anger can come in the wake of that."

A recent, widely published photograph showed Clinton hugging a flood-weary Iowa woman who had burst into tears while telling him her problems.

The scene recalled another: Winter 1992, just before New Hampshire's crucial presidential primary. There was Clinton with wet eyes kneeling to embrace an elderly woman who had choked up as she described how she couldn't afford to buy her prescription drugs.

Nay-saying Republicans have a plan: No new taxes

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Republican opposition to President Clinton's budget bill goes well beyond a desire to defeat him and tag him a loser. It's a chance to re-establish the GOP as the party of no new taxes.

But when they vote "no" in unison, as they're expected to do on the budget next week, they'll also open themselves to attack as a bunch of do-nothings at a time when the nation needs action.

House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., says the decision to oppose Clinton's tax plan was basic — unlike some of the social issues that still cause rifts in his ranks.

"This one so fundamentally delineates the differences between the two parties, I think it's going to be practically unanimous," he said of his GOP colleagues' expected budget vote.

Such unity is a far cry from three years ago when President Bush abandoned his "no new taxes" pledge and agreed to tax increases as part of a budget deal with the Democrats.

Congressional Republicans who felt duty-bound to support their president then have no such compunctions with a Democrat in the White House, a Democrat who won in part because the GOP couldn't effectively use the anti-tax argument in 1992.

"Neither I nor any of my Republican colleagues were elected to be a rubber stamp for the president," said a defiant Sen. Bob Dole, the Republican leader in that chamber.

Common sense would suggest that opposing taxes is safe political turf. But the Republican position has been so rigidly hammered home daily with news conferences and speeches by its members, that Democrats say it could backfire.

"It's a lot easier to badmouth something like that and scream axes," Clinton said Thursday.

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okl., said he public doesn't care what's Republican or Democratic in the budget debate. "They just want this Congress to do something" about the nation's economic problems, Synar said.

If the economy recovers by next year's elections, Republicans will have a tough time asking any credit. But their bet is that all incumbents benefit from a good economy, while Democrats would take an extra dose of blame if people are still using their jobs.

A Wall Street Journal-NBC News poll released this week showed that people indeed eared Clinton's tax plan would hurt them. Still, the data indicated people viewed the GOP actives even less favorably.

When presented with a hypothetical matchup between a Democrat who voted for the Clinton plan and a Republican who opposed it, the Democrat was favored 49 percent to 40 percent.

Probe shows Pentagon farms out billions in defense contracts

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon is skirting its own rules by farming out defense contracts to other federal agencies — a practice that frequently avoids competitive bidding and drives up costs, department documents show.

The Pentagon routed at least $6.3 billion in defense work to other agencies in 1990 and 1991, according to an audit by the Pentagon's inspector general obtained by The Associated Press.

In one case, the Defense Department went through the Tennessee Valley Authority for $18 million in spending for a highly classified submarine-detection research. Pentagon auditors found they determined that TVA lacked "adequate security clearances and procedures."

And the Air Force went through TVA for a truck, walkie-talkies with headsets and boom microphones, designing a machine-gun range and clearing trees and underbrush — at a cost of $1 million.

At another agency, the Pentagon incurred $11 million in unnecessary costs by having the Energy Department oversee $100 million in research projects on hazardous waste and computer systems, an audit found. The Pentagon should have issued the contracts itself, the audit concluded.

The audits do not allege any violation of federal law, although a Senate subcommittee plans to review them at a hearing today.

"We identified hundreds of cases" where the Defense Department could have handled work, but shipped it out to other parts of the government instead, Acting Pentagon Inspector General Derek Vander Schaaf said in remarks prepared for the hearing.

The reason for going to other agencies, he said, is that it's "a means to circumvent procurement regulations ... and expeditiously obtain goods and services from designated contractors."

The federal Economy Act requires a determination that going to another agency is cheaper or more convenient than direct acquisition. But Vander Schaaf said that farming out the work to another agency frequently costs more.

It's "a trail of misspent funds," said Sen. Carl Levin, whose Senate subcommittee on oversight of government management was conducting the hearing.

35,000 call, write for living will forms

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

LALLAHASSEE — An estimated 35,000 people, most of them elderly, requested forms to fill out living wills in the last three months in an overwhelming response to a help hotline.

Under state law people can write special wills to make it clear in advance they don't want to be kept alive by certain procedures, such as breathing machines or feeding tubes, when they face probable death and can no longer communicate their wishes.

The state's doctors and lawyers set up a hotline three months ago to distribute a living will form and another one-page document that people can use to pick who will make health care decisions for them if they become comatose.

The response to the project overwhelmed the Florida Medical Association and The Florida Bar, spokesmen said Thursday a day before the hotline was scheduled to be closed.

When the two organizations announced the campaign in late April they expected anywhere from 1,000 to 15,000 requests.

By the time the hotline shuts down at 7 p.m. today an estimated 35,000 requests are expected, said Gerald Butterfield of the Bar. That includes nearly 10,000 letters received from people who couldn't get through on the hotline.

About 7,000 requests were received in the first two weeks, Butterfield said.

The first few weeks were hectic, happily so, FMA spokesman Gerry Soud said from Jacksonville.

At the beginning of the project the hotline consisted of one line open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and an answering machine for all other calls. Because of the flood of calls, however, two other lines were soon added.

Eighty to 85 percent of the callers were senior citizens, Soud said.

The cost of the joint project was about $70,000, with half going to produce two TV public service announcements and the rest to pay an Atlanta marketing firm to take the calls and send out the forms.

The Bar is working on an expanded pamphlet on living wills that will be available sometime later. But Butterfield said. Both he and Soud said people who want to make out a living will might ask their physicians or attorneys for advice.

Experts debunk fitness theory

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Fitness experts are aiming to persuade millions of Americans to change their lifestyles with their pronouncement that even moderate exercise yields big health benefits.

In fact, the experts said Thursday, a person can stay fit with a total of 30 minutes of moderate, intermittent exercise most days. And that could amount to walking briskly, climbing the stairs, gardening or raking leaves.

In other words, you don't need an hour-long, heart-pounding workout in the gym or some home exercise contraption just to stay in shape.

Past exercise editors overemphasized the importance of high-intensity exercise, said the new advice from the American College of Sports Medicine and the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The change of tone caught some fitness buffs by surprise. But at a big gym in downtown Washington, Mark Myrick said he didn't expect to see his business.

Some people exercise, rather than diet, to burn off excess fat

"and moderate exercise won't do that for them," said Myrick, 24, program director for a Bally's Holiday Spa that draws up to 1,000 people a day to its weight machines, step-climbers, cycles and treadmills.

Tom McMillen, the former Maryland congressman and now co-chair of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, said only 40 million Americans exercise regularly and the trend has been downwards in recent years.

The new advice could help convince the other 200 million plus that fitness is within their reach, he said.

The new exercise credo is: "Every American adult should accumulate 30 minutes or more of moderate-intensity physical activity over the course of most days of the week."

Activities that can contribute to the 30-minute total include walking up stairs instead of taking the elevator, gardening, raking leaves, dancing and walking part of all of the way to work, the experts said.

Logging, playing tennis, swimming and cycling will all do the trick, but so will a brisk two-mile walk at a pace of 15 to 20 minutes a day.

You don't need to be an athlete in order to get the health benefits of physical activity, said Dr. Walter R. Dowdle, acting director of the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Steven N. Blair, director of epidemiology at the Cooper Institute for Aerobics Research in Dallas, said several calorie-burning bursts of activity over the course of a day are just as good as one prolonged, sweat-drenched workout.

The American College of Sports Medicine's new recommendations were that people engage in at least 20 minutes of continuous aerobic activity, which stimulates the heart and lungs, three to five days a week.

The experts said the new recommendations were not meant to encourage athletes to abandon rigorous training.

No one is saying that the same, said Blair, who has a Ph.D. in epidemiology. But he added he would like to see the accumulation of short bursts produce significant and important changes in blood cholesterol and other risk factors.

Blair pointed to a study in 1970 and the fact that Blair said that, "It's important to note that the risk of death just from cardiovascular disease is still high."

Game wardens seek bear that ate man

By The Associated Press

GOLDEN, Colo. — Game wardens searched for a bear that ate the body of a man who had apparently committed suicide at a campsite.

The 41-year-old man, who was not identified, apparently shot himself, sheriff's spokesman Wayne Holverson said. He said a suicide note was found.

The man's body was found dragged about 70 feet from a campsite where his tent had been torn open and tracks, bite marks and excrement led authorities to conclude that a bear had been eating the body, Holverson said.

Holverson said there is no evidence that once a bear has eaten human flesh it will attack humans, but the animal will be trapped and destroyed to be safe.

Yates puts Speed in Allison's No. 28

By PAUL NOWELL Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. - Veteran NASCAR driver Lake Speed will take over for the late Davey Allison at Watkins Glen on Aug. 8 and likely will complete the rest of the NASCAR season in the No. 28 Ford Thunderbird, team owner Robert Yates said Thursday.

Speed, a 13-year Winston Cup veteran with one victory in 258 starts, will take the ride that Indy-car series driver Robby Gordon had in last week's Diehard 500 at Talladega Speedway.

Speed started 11 of 18 Winston Cup races this season in his own Ford Thunderbird, but his sponsorship ran out after the Talladega race. Yates called as Speed was making plans for 1994.

"I don't think either one of us is concerned if this is a one-race deal or for 12 races," Speed said. "This is a win-win situation. I promise I'll give the best I can."

lost control in front of the pits and hit the outside wall hard.

Without criticizing Gordon for his performance, Yates praised Speed's knowledge of Winston Cup racing.

"Lake can step into our cars this week," he said. "He has plenty of experience with 3,500-pound race cars and he understands the elements of this kind of racing ... like pit road speeds and restart rules. The last time he competed on road courses was in 1991, and he qualified in the top 10 at both Sears Point (Calif.) and Watkins Glen."

"Talladega, not far from Allison's Hueytown, Ala., home, is where the 32-year-old stock car driver crashed his helicopter on July 13, suffering fatal head injuries.

"I would like to thank Robby Gordon for helping us through a difficult weekend at Talladega," Yates said. "He did the job for us, and we appreciate all the things he did for this team, on and off the track. He's going to be tough in anything he drives. If he ever decides to go Winston Cup full time, he would be hard to beat."

Michael Smith ended the game with 16 points, including four three-pointers, while Nathaniel Williams added 15 more as Sanford Housing Authority improved to 1-2 on the season. Also doing damage for the winners were Angelo Cashie (six points), George Beasley (five points) and Cedric Nelson and Randy Waldo (two points each).

Keith Evans totalled 10 of the Recreation team's 15 second half points to pace his team with 14 points.

"I spent a lot of time on the golf course," he said.

"Everything was wrong," Courier said. "Mikael played very well and let me beat myself."

"It's just that time of year for me. Last year at this time, I lost to Diego Perez (currently ranked No. 219) at Kitzbuhel. Hopefully, now I can get over the hump and start to play better.

"I've had three weeks off and I should be chomping at the bit to go," he said. "It's hard to say what it is."

"I enjoyed the time off more than ever before and I had a tougher time coming back. I just have to clear everything out of my mind and get back to what is the basis of my life - and that's tennis."

Herbal teas: Proceed with caution

Herbal teas conjure up images of health and tranquility, stomach aches soothed, respiratory ailments relieved, insomnia kept at bay. But herbal teas have their dark side, some causing allergic reactions, liver damage, and even death. Such incidents may be on the rise as herbal teas become more popular and manufacturers lure new customers with hints of miracle-working potions.

Traditional Medicinals touts its "Smooth Move," celebrated by television's Kathie Lee Gifford for keeping her regular. Smooth Move contains senna, a laxative found in over-the-counter preparations. The company's Breathe Easy, which is said to "temporarily relieve bronchial and nasal congestion," contains ephedrine, a bronchial dilator similar to the over-the-counter drug epinephrine which carries warnings about its use.

Although other brands like Yogi Teas are less brazen in their claims, they too suggest therapeutic value for their teas. Yogi's Bedtime Tea, for instance, promises to help "insure a sound, restful sleep with renewed vitality upon waking in the mornings." The ingredients include chamomile, spearmint, nutmeg, and passion flower extract. But chamomile, a popular ingredient in herbal teas, is a member of the same plant family as ragweed. If you're allergic to ragweed, you may have a reaction to chamomile.

CONSUMER FOCUS

BARBARA HUGHES/GREGG

Sassafras tea, once believed to cure rheumatism and syphilis, also causes cancer in rats when taken in large doses. Sassafras, an herb from the root bark of the sassafras plant and an ingredient in root beer 30 years ago, has since been banned from use in all foods.

What we don't know. It is true that herbal teas and medicines brewed from plants have been used in other cultures for centuries and that Western doctors are exploring the effectiveness of folk medicines as substitutes for the potent and expensive drugs in current Western pharmacology. But traditional recipes for the careful preparation and administering of herbal teas have been handed down for generations in non-Western societies.

No such body of knowledge yet exists in this country, where manufacturers are unregulated and herbal tea drinkers dose themselves whenever the fancy strikes.

Problems are most likely to occur when herbal teas are consumed in large amounts (on the theory that if a little is good, a lot must be better), used for self-medication or brewed at home from plants that have been incorrectly identified. Some years ago, a couple in the state of Washington died after mistakenly preparing what they thought was comfrey tea. The plant they had brewed into a drink was really foxglove, the source of digitalis, a powerful ingredient in the treatment of heart disorders.

Other common herbal ingredients about which little is known include peppermint leaf, cinnamon bark, eucalyptus leaf, ginger root, lemon-grass leaf, roasted chicory root, orange peel, and wild cherry bark.

How teas are regulated.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) treats herbal teas as food unless claims are made that the tea has medicinal properties. If such claims are made, the FDA has the power to reclassify the teas as drugs and must approve their safety. But inadequate money and manpower at the agency so far leaves herbal teas untouched.

"The FDA sees the half-billion dollar (herbal tea) industry as too small to bother with," says Varo Tyler, PhD, author of "The Honest Herbal."

However, the FDA is reported to have begun a surveillance of products sold in health food stores including herbal teas, collecting samples and checking for unsubstantiated claims.

The American Herbal Products

Association, a trade association for the herb industry, has also begun to evaluate eight commercial herbs including ephedra, comfrey, Siberian ginseng, and stevia. The organization's research foundation is gathering information on their history of use, chemical composition, pharmacological properties, and adverse reactions.

Overall, experts say that most major brands of commercially prepared herbal teas are safe to drink in reasonable amounts. In fact, with more information available, author Tyler believes that herbal preparations could provide an economical source of medicinal drugs in this country.

Until that information is available, Dr. Huxtable offers guidelines for reducing the risk of drinking herbal teas:

- Do not take a large quantity of any one herbal preparation.
- Do not take any herb daily.
- Buy preparation only when the plant ingredients are specified on the package (a precaution which carries no guarantee of safety, however).
- Do not take anything containing comfrey.
- Avoid products from Taiwan. They may be adulterated with chemicals.
- Do not take herbs if you are pregnant or attempting to become pregnant.
- Do not take herbs if you are nursing.
- Do not give herbs to your baby.

Warning signs of alcoholism

DEAR MARY: We have a crazy "debate" going on in our family that you may be able to help settle. My sister and I, both grown and with families of our own, disagree on whether our dad was an alcoholic or just "liked his beer," as he called it. Maybe it shouldn't even matter since he's been dead for 10 years, but I feel like it would help me make sense of things in my past to figure this out. My sister says, "Just forget it, and let the past be gone." How could I tell if he really was an alcoholic?

PROBABLY A COA
DEAR PROBABLY: There are as many different opinions on where alcoholism actually begins as there are people who espouse them. However, Claudia Black, in her excellent book, "It Will Never Happen to Me," listed some warning signs and signals of an emerging alcoholic. You will never be certain whether your dad was an alcoholic, problem drinker, or social drinker, but here are some of Black's warning signs to watch for in yourself and/or other family members. Do you:

1. occasionally lose time from work due to use of alcohol or other drugs?
2. use alcohol or other drugs to feel more self-confident?
3. need to increase the frequency and/or amount of alcohol or other drugs to attain the desired feeling?

4. use alcohol or other drugs to stop thinking about things that disturb you?
5. avoid social activities where no alcohol or other drugs are available?
6. promise or attempt to cut down or control your use without success?
7. sometimes become angry, aggressive, or violent when you use alcohol or other drugs?
8. sometimes lie about or try to hide your use of alcohol or other drugs?

A person exhibiting any of these characteristics is in need of further assessment.

Readers sink their teeth into debate over dentures

DEAR ABBY: In response to the lady who was offended at her church's annual mother-daughter banquet because a prize was given to the oldest mother present with her own teeth:

Obviously, she has never taken part in planning the games and entertainment. It's not easy to come up with something new and entertaining every year.

A couple of years ago, we offered a prize to the woman present with the largest bra size. It took only seconds for one of our good-natured members to jump up and claim the prize. I believe she was a 44 D. The applause was thunderous!

Please don't use my name. Not everyone present thought it was funny.

PROGRAM CHAIRMAN
DEAR CHAIRMAN: Not everyone who read the item in my column thought it was funny. For example:

DEAR ABBY: I was appalled at the letter from "No Town, Please," regarding the mother-and-daughter banquet where they made a joke about wearing dentures.

To many people, dentures are a more personal topic than one's artificial limb or one's underwear. They enhance a person's smile, contribute to one's sex appeal, not to mention that they help a person chew. I have known some women who have never let their husbands see them without their dentures.

ADVICE

Making a game out of the fact that one wears dentures is neither funny nor churchlike. I hope the insensitive woman who caused this unnecessary embarrassment can find a more appropriate game to play in the future.

WARD F. GRAVEL, D.D.S., BEDFORD, N.H.

DEAR ABBY: About the annual mother-and-daughter banquet at church where they asked all the mothers who wore dentures to stand up, then they were asked their ages, and the oldest mother who had her own teeth got a prize: I have never heard of anything so ridiculous — not to mention humiliating.

I am a 62-year-old grandmother who has worn dentures since I was 30 years old — and I had partial plates for years before that. Very few of my friends and relatives know this.

Just last week my next-door neighbor of 25 years mentioned something that caused me to tell her that I wore dentures. She was totally flabbergasted.

If anyone should be so crass as to ask me if these are my own teeth, I'll say, "They damn well better be: I paid enough for them!"

I agree with you, Abby; that contest was rude, crude and insensitive. The woman who organized it should be asked if she is still beating her husband.

FUMING IN AUSTELL, GA.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the lady who was sensitive about the fact that she wore dentures: I am somewhat amused that anyone would feel that way because I have always been very proud of mine. Perhaps it's because my natural teeth were very poor. They were also crooked and yellowish and gave me a lot of trouble. Out of necessity, I had them all pulled when I was quite young.

I am now 66 years young and people still ask me if those are my own teeth.

My reply: "Of course they are...who else's would they be?"

Forever...
Through Time

It was twilight in the forest... those misty moments when the Master Artist so skillfully and subtly blends day into tranquil night. Darkness approached while frogs croaked and crickets chirped, as the gently bubbling brook babbled through time.

Suddenly, in the distance, a deafening roar was heard. Miles above, framed by tall timbers, a fighter jet on an unknown mission intruded upon the pastoral scene with a mighty blast of power. Then, the jet was gone, leaving in its wake only a trail of vapor to meet the forest mist.

Still, the frogs croaked and the crickets chirped, as the gently bubbling brook babbled through time. Worship the Creator this Sabbath. God's gentle power has been and always shall be forever...through time.

Church lauds teachers, students

By KELLEY MITCHELL
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Pastor Henry Bradley, along with the parents of Full Gospel Church of God in Christ, Jerry Avenue, expressed their appreciation to Seminole and Volusia county school system faculty and staff for their contributions and also the children for their accomplishments.

"We are proud of our children because they have put forth a great effort to achieve the goals they had set for themselves during the 1992-93 school year," according to Pastor Bradley. "At Full Gospel we believe that children learn from what they are taught, because of that we feel it is important to announce their accomplishments."

Those recognized during the special service included: Corretta Jones, received an A.S. degree from Seminole Community College; Latifany Bradley, Carlata Montgomery and Tina Raines, all graduated from high school.

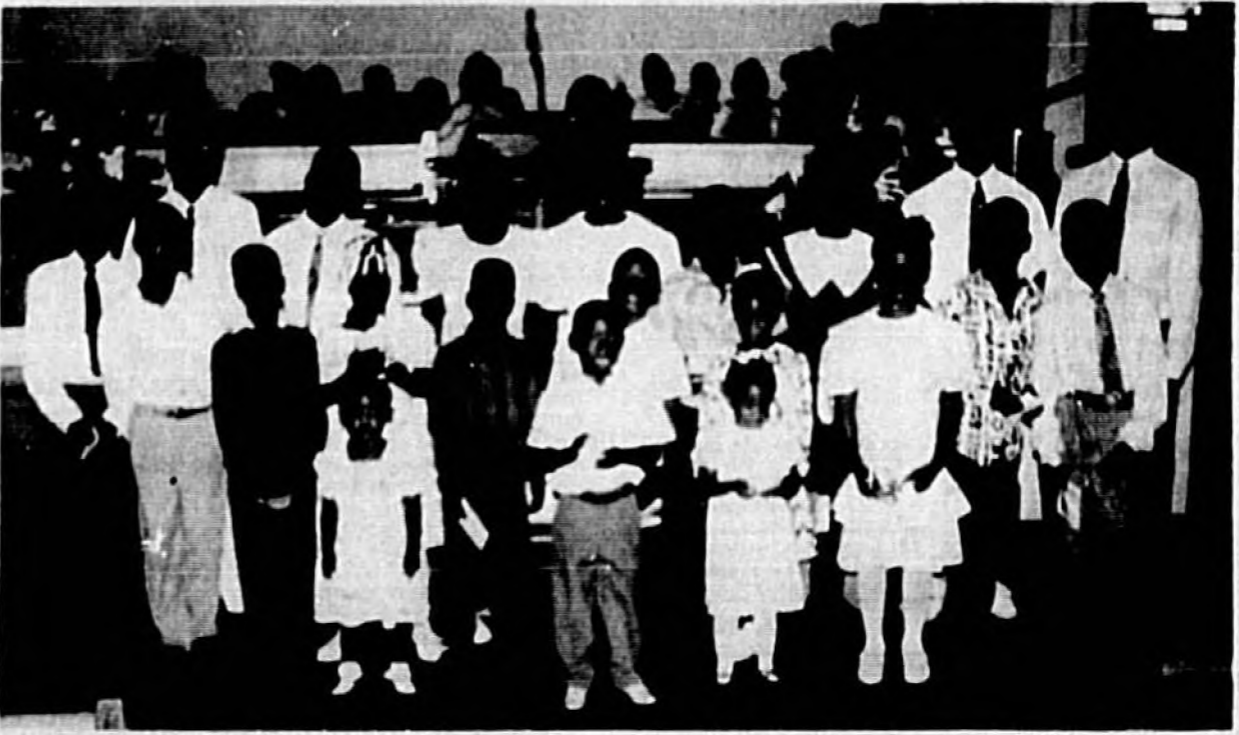

Also, Brandy Evans, Mary Owens and Lincoln Trice, members of the A-Honor Roll; Zantavia Collier, Alieta Lacy, Shecara Stokes, Alexis McGill, Shelton Eudell, Jr., Tamaya Johnson, Shantequa Frederick, Whitney Willingham, Emma Keys, Frances Keys, Christopher Haddock, Mary Owens, Porsche Trice, Brandon Brundidge, Maria Bradley, Candice Bradley, Eddie Keys, Andrea Keys, Shemeika Stokes, Author Bradley, Jr., Robert Bradley and Yarbonda Burden, were all A-B Honor Roll students.

"We also acknowledged the other children in our church who have worked hard during the school year to get promoted to the next grade," according to Pastor Bradley. "That in itself is an accomplishment."

Those students are: Shannon Williams, Devon Williams,

Youngsters from Full Gospel Church of God were encouraged to keep up the good work.

James Smith III, Kendrick Hall, Christopher Hall III, Thera Bradley, Senque Brundidge, Oren Williams, Eftren Williams, Jr., Reginald Williams, Tisha Smith, Carlos Miceil, Derrick Trice, Travis Montgomery and Willie Montgomery. "We commend each and every one of our children," said Pastor Bradley. "Because they are the hope for a brighter future. As the song says, 'Teach them well and let them lead the way.'" Each youngster received a token of appreciation, a Bible or other reading material, for a job well done.

St. Clare to dedicate new house of worship with special services

After working more than three years to provide a permanent place of worship, members of St. Clare Catholic Community will surround the blessing and dedication of that home with a week of celebration.

Starting Sunday, Aug. 8, St. Clare will combine the spiritual with the social and cultural for eight days marking the formal opening of Clare Hall.

Centerpiece in the observance will be the solemn blessing of Clare Hall at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 10, by Bishop Norbert M. Dorsey, Bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Orlando. Bishop Dorsey will celebrate the liturgy with Bishop Thomas J. Grady, retired Bishop of Orlando, concelebrating.

Since February of 1990, members have improvised in the celebration of Mass and other services and programs in a number of locations. Clare Hall, a 10,667-square-foot facility, is the first building on a wooded, 40-acre site.

Music will take the spotlight Sunday and Monday, Aug. 8 and 9. A piano concert by Mark Sibons, music minister of St. Clare, will launch the events Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

A concert is planned for Monday with Jon Stenkoski's Celebrant Singers, a California vocal and instrumental group which has sung and played around the United States and the world performing contemporary Christian music.

There is no admission charge for this event and St. Clare has invited everyone from the community to come and enjoy the evening.

The theme will move to spiritual Tuesday with the solemn blessing of Clare Hall and Wednesday churches from throughout the community have been invited to an ecumenical prayer service at 7:30 p.m.

The showing of the movie, "Brother Sun and Sister Moon" will highlight the activities Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

The Assisi Council, Knights of Columbus, will offer its "Summertime Swing Your Partner" dinner dance with a Western theme Friday, starting at 7:30 p.m. The program includes the installation of council officers.

Rebuilding for the future

Congregation Beth Am has planted a second garden in the Jerusalem Forest on the Western slopes of the capital city. Dr. Robert Rosenberg, president of Congregation Beth Am, displays the plaque received from the Jewish National Fund in appreciation of their efforts. They are grateful to each of the individual contributors to this garden, especially Paul and Betty Kobrin and all those who made donations in memory of the Kobrin's late son, Steven A. Kobrin.

How to treat an eating disorder

DEAR DR. GOTT: My niece has suffered from anorexia and now suffers from bulimia. Is there anything that can be done to control this situation?
DEAR READER: These are two serious eating disorders.

Anorexia is marked by a morbid fear of obesity. About 95 percent of cases occur in adolescent females. The girls, who have a distorted sense of body image and self-imposed high standards for achievement, virtually stop eating, although they remain preoccupied with food. Weight loss is predictable and severe, leading to a host of physical problems, including emaciation, cessation of menstruation, low blood pressure, slow pulse, loss of sexual interest, constipation, abdominal bloating, fluid retention, diminished cardiac function, mineral imbalances, vitamin deficiencies and malfunction of virtually every organ in the body.

In contrast, bulimia is marked by binge eating followed by induced vomiting or the excessive use of laxatives and diuretics. The consequences are the same as those of anorexia, except that bulimics also suffer from dental caries (because of the action of gastric acid on tooth enamel). Sudden death may occur because of dehydration, acidosis or mineral depletion. Patients with anorexia/bulimia are diagnosed by their weight loss and eating habits, once blood tests have ruled out physical disorders, such as thyroid diseases. Youngsters with these disorders tend to be meticulous and intelligent, they often hoard (hoarded) food and prepare elaborate meals for others. Characteristically, they manipulate people around them and deny their inappropriate eating practices. They are often depressed.

Treatment consists of intense psychological counseling, in conjunction with medical treatment of metabolic abnormalities (with temporary intravenous feedings, for example). Thus, therapy is divided into an acute phase (to restore

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

A friend, Peter Law, once said, "You can fool Alder people some of the time, but you cannot fool Alder people all the time." But at the bridge table there is nothing more pleasurable than fooling an opponent with a well-timed false-card. Several books have been written on the subject. One of the best is "Clever Bridge Tricks" by Englishman Brian Senior. It has just been republished as a Faber & Faber paperback ($12.45). The Bridge World, 39 West 94th Street, New York, NY 10025-7124.

The author deals with situations that occur with reasonable frequency. He keeps the text intelligible and he includes quizzes so you can check that you are getting the idea. This deal from the book features a play that is usually effective at the table.

Against your contract of six clubs, West leads the diamond two. If the heart finesse is working, you have no problems. But what if it is losing?

South's opening bid was an Ace-1 two-bid, strong and forcing for one round. Two no-trump was the negative response.

You could try to sneak a spade past East's ace. As you didn't use Blackwood, he might place you with a void. But whatever your plan, you must start by playing the diamond queen from the dummy at trick one. Make it appear as if you have ace doubleton. When East covers with the king, win with the ace, play a club to dummy's jack and take the heart finesse. West might well try to cash his partner's diamond jack.

Readers are invited to send card-play questions to Phillip Alder, in care of this newspaper. They can be answered only through the column.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Onol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 31, 1993

In the year ahead there are indications you could fare better in enterprises or endeavors where you can operate independently of others. Unproductive partners could do you in.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There's a chance today you might overlook persons you really should help, but reward the undeserving. This is because your judgment could be faulty in this sensitive area. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Avoid social gatherings today where you feel you're compelled or obligated to be nice to persons you really don't like. Doing so could lower your self-esteem.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

You'd better take a hard look at an objective you feel is of extreme importance at this time. Frankly, it might be something you won't want after you attain it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Underplay your knowledge instead of flaunting it if you realize you're a bit smarter than your associates today. You won't win friends if you belittle them.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Avoid joint endeavors today where the ante is not equal for the parties involved. If the contributions aren't comparable, it is not apt to work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Guard against inclinations today to be unreasonably suspicious of the motives of others. If you are, be honest with yourself and ask if you're projecting instead of evaluating.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your probabilities for being productive today will be substantially reduced if you take on more things than you can comfortably manage. It's best to do less, but do that well.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The worse thing you could do today is to try to cover up your mistakes, especially where your career is concerned. Don't hide what needs to be fixed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's best to keep relatives or in-laws out of your personal family matters today, especially situations where youngsters are involved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) What people say today should not be taken verbatim. For example, someone might ask you to tell it like it is while really meaning they want the bitter truth sugar coated.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) To be on the safe side today, don't take anything for granted in your business dealings. Just when you think you have everything locked down, a small detail might derail it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Persons who are usually in accord with your ideas and suggestions might be resistant to them today for strange reasons. Don't impose your thoughts on others.
