Annual ball fills a large order

HEATHROW — The Seminole Ornament Society will be able to fill all of the estimated 750 requests for toys and clothing from Seminole County children, said the society's "Santa Claus" this morning.

SOS held their annual ball at the Altamonte Springs Hilton and Towers Sunday evening. with more than 500 people attending, said Arlene Walther, the society's donations coordinator. Guests at the formal ball are admitted with the donation of a toy. Specific toys are requested by area children through local agencies, including the school board and the Good Samaritan Home. Walthers said more than 750 requests had been received. Between the three large piles of toys received Sunday and various cash contributions, all the requests will be filled. Many of the requests this year were for clothing, including single items of underwear. Walthers said she is uncertain how many of the donated items were clothing because they were wrapped. SOS will still accept toys, clothing and cash contributions through Christmas. Walthers said residents can call 333-1717 for specific needs.

County employees promoted

Rabun commends 2 senior staffers for job excellence

By J. MARK BARFIELD lerald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Seminole County Manager Ron Rabun has promoted senior employees to department director positions.

Cindy Wright, who began working for the county in 1977 as the Employee Relations office manager, has been named director of Rabun's new Central Services Department, which com-bines the county's computer, purchasing, fleet and building maintenance, and other support divisions. She assumes her duties Jan. 26.

Jean Kassab, who has worked as a senior budget analyst since 1986, has been named the new director of the Office of Management and Budget, to replace Don Carter, who resigned in October. Her title becomes effective Dec. 29. Rabun had high praise for both employees. "Cindy's a rising star," Rabun said. "She liad a good future in environmental services and she could've stayed there. She's quick-witted, speaks good before citizens' groups and she works good under pressure.

"She's been the acting director of environmental services and she went out and drove garbage trucks and went to sewer plants and did things trucks and went to sewer plants and get there. She will really roll up her sleeves and get in there. That builds respect from her peers and from her subordinates as well."

Rabun said Kassab brings both fiscal and management skills to her new role.

"Jean has proven herself and she has got the skills and the experience," Rabun said. "She has the technical skills and the people skills for melding a good organization down there. She's quick, works good with the board. She'll make a good director."

The promotion is especially sweet for Kassab, 35, who has spent much of her life in Seminole County. Kassab first worked for Winter Springs for four years as assistant city clerk.

Although Kassab worked in the Orange County

Office of the Comptroller for four years prior to coming to Seminole County, she completed her four-year college degree in accounting at University of Central Florida in 1989 by attending night classes.

"I've been waiting for this for about 14 years," Kassab said Friday. "After all those years of night school, I'm real happy."

Father saves five children, sixth died

GIBSONTON, Pla. — A father who pulled his young children from a burning trailer counted their tiny heads just to make sure he had saved them all.

One, two, three, four, five - the sixth, he realized, never made it out.

Mark Desautels' 2-year-old daughter, Jessica, died in the Friday morning blaze, which he said apparently started after he turned on the electric oven in the kitchen in an attempt to heat the chilly trailer. The exact cause of the fire hasn't been officially determined.

"I sit here and ask God how he made me forget my baby." Desautels, 25, said afterwards.

He ran to the back of the two-bedroom trailer to wake up his two oldest boys. Timothy, 4, and Harvey, 3, then returned for the others — Heather, 5, Mark, 1, and Brian Michael, born three weeks ago.

Miss Bergalis died at her family's home in Fort Pierce, a coastal town 100 miles north of Miami. She was 23.

In the last couple days of her life, her parents, George and Anna. watched as Miss Bergalis could no longer eat or speak and had problems breathing. As they put her to bed Saturday night, they told her that perhaps it was time to stop fighting. "My wife said. 'We want you to go to sleep, get

They found their daughter had stopped breathing before dawn.

"I think she had been ready to die for quite some time, but she was worried about whether her mom and sisters and I were ready to accept it." Bergalis said.

Miss Bergalis' plight stirred a bitter battle over whether mandatory testing and AIDS disclosure among soctors, nurses and dentists would improve patient safety.

The world has lost a great deal, but the world will never, ever forget how brave and how caring and how determined that lady was," said Barbara Webb, a retired English teacher who is among four others also infected by the late David Acer.

McDonnell Douglas has tentatively agreed to sell 40 percent of its commercial aircraft husiness to Taiwan Aerospace Corp., which is financed by the Taiwanese government and the private sector. The $2 billion deal would please the sector of clearly benefit the struggling U.S. aerospace giant. But it raises anew the question of whether this country should be doing more to hold onto its key industries.

If the U.S. and Taiwanese governments approve, St. Louis-based McDonnell Douglas would spin off its commercial aircraft division into a new company that would have both U.S. and Asian manufacturing plants. As this nations's largest defense contractor. McDonnell Douglas would retain majority ownership and management control and keep ità military business separate.

The arrangement could rejuvenate McDonnell Douglas, which the Pentagon's chief auditor recently warned was lumbering toward bankruptcy.

The firm would gain a big cash infusion to reduce its neavy debt, along with the ability to produce a new wide-body jet that could rival aircraft made by Boeing and Airbus Industrie, a European consortium. Other benefits include access to low-cost labor and the growing Asian market. On balance, the advantages of the proposed deal outweigh the drawbacks.

Indeed, analysts and industry experts say McDonnell Douglas had to find a partner or face losing more of the market and eventually its existing business. The company said it was unable to find a U.S. investor. International joint ventures are becoming more commonplace. The nation's two biggest jet engine makers. General Electric and Pratt & Whitney, both have joint ventures with European firms, Boeing has subcontracting partners in Japan and Italy.

At the same time, the proposed sale draws attention to the ahrinking U.S. share of the world's market for commercial airliners and the rise of government-subsidized competitors like Airbus. According to the Aerospace Industries Association, in 1987 Boeing had 64 percent of the market, McDonnell Douglas 23 percent and Airbus 8 percent. Today, Boeing has 50 percent. Airbus 21 percent and McDonnell Douglas 20 percent.

*Some analysts raise fears that the American aerospace sector will experience the same fate as steel, automotive, machine tool and other manufacturing industries in which the United States has lost market share, technological leadership and jobs to foreign competitors. They say deals such as that with Taiwan Aerospace can lead to the transfer of valuable American technology.

The Bush administration is rightly opposed to government meddling in the free market and international trade. But many in the aerospee industry believe the government could play a greater role in aiding research and development and fighting the predatory practices of government-subsidized competitors abroad. The Taiwan Aerospace deal cannot be put on hold while issues vital to the aerospace industry's competitiveness are resolved, but it certainly increases the need to address them.

What's spirit of Christmas lights?

Some very bright people have turned my neck of the woods into an enchanted forest. Hills and valleys twinkle like a miniature Lionel train village throughout miles of southwest Missouri.

They call it the "Festival of Lights" and for the second year it began in early November, first the giant snowflakes appearing on utility poles, then strings of sparkling white lights spreading along outlines of commercial buildings, then to the huge colored rooftop extravaganzas on the giddlest businesses.

It was the brainchild of local business people who were associated for a many to make the lights.

who were searching for a way to rev up declining holiday-shopping revenues, as well as create year-round employment for seasonal employees left out in the cold in our heavily tourismdependent economy. They fashioned it from the example of another community that did the same thing when their normal industry failed.

It was sound economic thinking, and I'm proud of their resourcefulness. Thousands of shoppers make the pilgrimage to our lights and spend their money with us, and people have jobs who would not otherwise. Next year there will be more of both, and the next year even more.

And it truly is beautiful. As I drive home, a corridor of the giant snowflakes lights my way along miles of a major thoroughfare, Lights line all the shopping malls, the gothic bed-and-breakfast on the old convent grounds and the woods behind it. Even our zoo is done up in business, too. Their job is to beef up our economy Christmas lights were the lights my parents and my friends and I drove to see in residential neighborhoods where each family said something about itself by its decorating. They are the lights I see at my friends' houses during the holidays — not because they are part of my childhood or because the lights belong to people I love, but because they are put up with purpose and the best emotions we share in this life.

They can symbolize religious sentiment or just the simple recognition that once a year we celebrate the joy of caring about and being with each other. They can be strung on trees in small cases or beauty salons or at office parties — last year I cut one of my trees and toted it and my lights to town for our office party — but as long ights to town for our office party - just as long Christmas lights need the individuality of every person who buys and strings them, not city work crews to put up identical lights over identical poles, or businesses who hire lighting designers to enhance their images. Those displays can be aesthetically beautiful and worth seeing ... just not enough for someone used to seeing Christmas lights that bring a personal message from the people who put them up.

How WW II changed America

December 7, 1941, was "a date which will live in infamy," as Franklin Roosevelt put it. That aspect of the Japanese surprise attack on Pearl Harbor has been much noted over the past week or so.

But Dec. 7, 1941, was something far more important for the United States and, therefore, for the world. It was a day of departure from custom, tradition and practice in fundamental aspects of American life.

At the moment Pearl Harbor catapulted the nation into World War II, the nation was emotionally attached to isolationism; indifferent, when not passionately committed, to racial segregation: and still in thrall to the notion of women as the weaker sex. a breed whose proper place was home and hearth.

By the time the war was over, all three ideas were doomed, though there was little clarity and no unanimity about their future at the time. The necessities of wartime mobilization liberated women, the rhetoric of a global crusade for democracy furthered the freedom of black Americans, and the results of the war produced American internationalism.

What happened to women is the stuff of history, legend and countless family stories. My own mother, accompanying her serviceman husband to wartime Washington, joined thousands of other bright young women in the agencies that proliferated in the nation's capital. They were called "girls" by the men and tended to call themselves "girls" as well but they proved that their ideas, stamina and productivity matched the best that their male coworkers could offer.

Their counterparts in other offices across the nation learned the same. So did the tens of thousands of "Rosie the Riveters," women who were suddenly deemed qualified to hold assembly-line jobs formerly reserved for men. Ten million able-bodied American males were in military service, so necessity dictated policy. but the result of policy was revelation. There was virtually nothing in the economy that a man could do that could not also be done by a woman.

Most of the women returned to their homes when the men came home, but many women didn't. All their children, male and female, grew up knowing that where mother or aunt or grandmother had led in the early 1940s, other women could follow. The Rubicon had been crossed and there could be and would be no turning back.

There was no sudden conversion of white American attitudes about the proper "place" for blacks in the national scheme of things, but the war nonetheless created several nails for segregation's eventual coffin. Under pressure from black leaders, FDR banned discrimina-tion in war-related employment. More importantly, the slogans and reality of the fight for survival against the fascist Axis could not be squared with racial practices at home. If notions of a master race were unacceptable when voiced by German Nazis, they were even less acceptable within democratic America. Black soldiers who went off to die for liberty overseas came home from the war determined to live for freedom here.

What were the Four Freedoms about if they did not apply to the United States? President Roosevelt read from the words of Stephen Vincent Benet during special Allied ceremonies on June 15, 1942:

Grant us a common faith that man shall know bread and peace, that he shall know justice and righteousness. freedom and security, an equal chance to do his best, not only in our own lands, but throughout the world. And in that faith let us march

The nation emotionally attached to isolationism toward the clean world our hands can make." Note that the invocation spoke to needs at home and abroad. Our domestic practices clearly did not measure up to our professions of democracy and equality. My father won a Pulitzer Prize in 1946 for editorials drawing the obvious conclusion that what we had fought so valiantly to defend in other lands must now be guaranteed within our borders. and he spoke the sentiments of millions of Equally apparent to the war generation. America's feckless withdrawal from the world after World War I had helped facilitate the slide into World War II and had endangered the nation's most basic interest, its independence. After Pearl Harbor, "never again" became an implicit slogan. As the war ended and the threat from Moscow suddenly materialized. that slogan was transformed into a lasting commitment to world leadership. We marched "toward the clean world our hands can make." however haltingly and imperfectly.

At the height of the Great Depression. Roosevelt spoke of his generation's "rendezvous with destiny." The words were more prophetic than he or any of his contemporaries could have imagined. When he uttered them. the nation was turned inward, struggling with economic survival and largely uninterested in the world or (racial) reform. After Pearl Harbor. the goals were expanded and deepened.

America is losing the economic war

WASHINGTON - The sneak attack on Pearl Harbor half a century ago started a war that may not have ended with the Japanese military defeat. Some Central Intelligence Agency analysts believe the Japanese are continuing the struggle with economic weapons.

These backroom strategists think they have detected a pattern in Japanese history of 100-year wars. The Japanese approach to warfare, they contend, is to continue fighting with economic and diplomatic weapons when military force fails.

The analysts quote a Japanese general who surrendered to the British in Singapore at the end of World War II. He is alleged to have said. "We have merely lost the first battle. We still have 96 years to go."

The Japanese have done more damage to American industrial centers with their economic weapons than they ever achieved with bombs, the analysts say. They speak of an economic Pearl Harbor that has devastated such targets as Detroit, Pit-need bashing but our own political leaders.

tsburgh, Houston and Silicon Valley.

We don't subscribe to this conspiratorial view. It's not the Japanese who need bashing but our own political leaders. America's economic predicament, we suggest, is the work of failed policies, self-serving politics and myopia. The connecting thread has been the postponement of inconvenient consequences until the next fellow's term.

We are only willing to regard America's economic struggle as an extension of World War II if it will help mobilize the nation. In a sense, the United States is engaged in warfare. World War II was the hot war, which America won. World War III turned out to be the Cold War. America won that too. If World War IV is an economic war, then the United States is losing it.

Our country faces an economic crisis that could drastically change our way of life. The 1990s have arrived with a turbulence that has shattered a long complacency - the federal budget shambles, the savings and loan flasco, the Persian Gulf eruption, the skidding economy.

Yet these are merely the advance tremors. Before this decade is over. Washington will be rocked by debt explosion, credit collapse, foreign commercial supremacy, economic plunge and a dozen other stored-up reckonings.

The populace, long lulled by sleeping neglect, will be jerked awake to violent turmoil as paper fortunes disintegrate, as a sinking standard of living rekindles class warfare, as fiscal stringencies cause the young to revolt against tax support of the old. as those who compete with imports demand protection against those who depend on

The timing mechanisms are ticking remorselessly. They will go off when certain tolerances are breached by the mathematics of multiplying debt, by the falling line on the competitiveness graph, by the dead stall of the productivity meter and by the erosion of confidence in American institutions.

We say while proclaiming that it is not too late. Winning World War IV will demand sacrifice, not the supreme sacrifice of the soldier who gives his life, but the sacrifice of time, luxury and self-indulgence.

The black clouds we have sighted on the horizon can still be dispelled. The approaching calamities can be averted. It is not too late. But it will take the toughness that built America in the first place.

Mideast talks to resume

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Israelis and Araba are finally ready to get down to peace talks. But the week-long delay appears to foreshadow further procedural bickering that could sidetrack substantive negotiations.

Barring unforescen hitches. three delegations of Israelis and Arabs will face each other across rectangular tables at the State Department on Tuesday morning - six days after the United States opened up the negotiating facilities. Arab delegations were here, but Israel's negotiators arrived only on Sunday after saying they needed more preparation time.

Both sides informed the State Department over the weekend that they would attend the talks Tuesday.

In response to Israel's insistence on three completely separate sets of talks -Israeli-Syrian, Israeli-Lebanese and Israell-Jordanian-Palestin ian - each delegation will enter through a different entrance. The talks will be held on three different floors, said officials from both sides.

But the Palestinians are demanding separate talks with Israel, without their Jordanian partners, in a bid to emphasize their independent identity.

israel, for its part, insists on one delegation composed equally of Palestinians and Jordanians. said Elyakim Rubinstein, who heads his country's team to those talks.

Rubinstein said the joint team might break up into subcommittees to deal with different issues - some relating only to Palestinians and some only to Jordanians. But even on the subcommittees, Israel will insist on representation for both Palestinians and Jordanians although it wouldn't have to be equal, said other israeli officials. Another looming problem is that of a future venue for the talks. Israeli officials say they might stay here only until Fri-

"We're happy to be in this hospitable city." said Yossi Ben-Aharon, the sentor Israeli negotiator for talks with Syria. But, he added in brief arrival remarks, the talks should have been in the Middle East and "we still hope they'll come to the region eventually."

Palestinians should not tell Israelis where to live. Israeli Ambassador Zalman Shoval countered during a joint interview on CNN's "Newsmaker Sunday."

"It was really ironic that while I was staying in Washington ... my wife and children were confined" to their home in the West Bank by a week-long Israell military curiew on the region. Al-Khatib said.

The curiew was in response to escalating violence of recent weeks. Shoval said. "If we want to create the right atmosphere. stop violence, we will not have to impose curfews." he said.

He said he came by the chance only by accident when a fellow instructor told him that the city commissions the work of local artists on a regular basis.

in addition to the paintings Orlando has purchased, he has also been given the opportunity to display some of his work in the City Hall gallery.

At the time, he said, he did only a few sketches, but the memories are very clear of those

"I don't paint from photographs," he said. "The memo-ries are so clear in my mind."

Priest said he attended the University of Louisville and that because he was working long days and attending school at night, it took him a decade to earn his undergraduate degree in drawing and painting.

"But the money on the railroads was good," he said.

He said he does not regret the decision to work his way through college on the some-times rough railways.

"It was hard work," he said.
"But I would not have done it any other way." Priest, 33, went on to earn his versity before moving to Sanford a year and a half ago to take the job at BICC.

He said that his painting style is still evolving.

He said his use of color is traditional, but he is trying to use it in "more sophisticated"

Priest said he is still trying to get to know the area and to find a gallery where he can exhibit his work and have shows at least once a year.

The two paintings purchased by Orland, a 30 by 15 inch piece called 'The Call Back' and a 14 by 14 inch piece called 'Rail Out" depict some of the hard working conditions on the railroad. Priest said they are much more than that, however, saying that they are aesthetic expressions of the vibrant colors

Priest will not discuss what he was paid for the two paintings. but said he was pleased with the opportunity and the exposure the sale has brought him.

Top-ranked Church of God of Prophecy claims title

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Dominating play the way the top-secded team should. Church of God of Prophecy won its first title as the Sanford Church Softball League Fall Tournament concluded Saturday at Chase Park.

Their were no surprises in the tournament as the top seeded team in each of the 11 games was victorious.

Prophecy (12-1), the A Division champion, shutout the B Division champions. All Souls Catholic (9-4), 11-0 in the finals to claim their 12th straight win. The winners' only loss of the season was a season-opening 5-2 defeat at the hands of St. Stephen Catholic of Winter Springs.

The champions scored two runs in each of the first, fourth and fifth innings to take a 6-0 lead before breaking things open with a five-run seventh inning.

The first inning runs scored when Carl Platt led off the game with a single and scored when Steve Frazier reached on a two-base error. Frazier then scored on Kevin Welch's single.

All Souls never really threatened as they only had on runner reach third base and were limited to seven singles by the Prophecy defense.

Sailfest able to get in several heats

By TONY Desormier Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — How about this for a bizaare turn of events? This weekend's weather was too nice for the Florida Citrus Sailfest.

"At this time of the year, we count on the cold fronts moving through to provide the wind," said executive director John Gardiner Jr. "The last two years, the wind was too strong at times for some of the smaller crafts."

This year, the milder-than-normal temperatures meant light breezes hardly strong enough to stir the large American flag that flies in Memorial Park on Seminole Boulevard.

As a result, only three of the six courses on Lake Monroe were able to get in one of the three scheduled heats on Saturday. Late Sunday morning, it didn't like they would get that in.

"We were scheduled to start at 9:30 a.m.," Gardiner said. "About 9:35 a.m.," Gardiner said. "About 9, 9:15, there's a nice breeze blowing. So the boats start heading out to the courses. When they got out there, the wind just died."

So they sat and waited, looking for some sign that the wind would come back up. Some watched the many flags and banners hanging in the area while others kept on eye on the smoke rising from the power plant across the lake. Defiantly, the pennants didn't move and smoke rose in a straight vertical line.

"We had set a deadline of about noon to call it quits if the wind didn't come up." said Gardiner. "A little after 11, the flags started to flutter a little bit. And then a little more. Finally, a nice breeze came up."

While the wind wasn't the type of gale that produces blistering times, it was strong enough for all the boats in all classes to get in at least two heats.

"Some people bailed out Sunday morning," said Gardiner, "But overall, everybody got some racing

The thing is, despite the size of the regatta — a record 654 boats were entered, the eighth year in a row that a new participation record was set — the racing almost seems to be secondary in importance to the more than 1,000 participants, fans, family and friends who took part in the event.

"Everybody had a good time," said Gardiner, himself a former racer before taking over the administration of the regatta 11 years ago with his son, John III.

'We set a record for attendance

Wind? What wind?

The patience of the more than 1,000 competitors in the Florida Citrus Sailfest this past weekend paid off late Sunday morning when a breeze strong enough for racing finally began to blow. But the real fun began when the masts were struck Sunday afternoon and everyone gathered poolside at the Holiday Inn Lake Monroe for the awards ceremony and cookout (above). Getting their craft ready for the trip home (left0 were Tammy Cook, Bill Hutcherson, Rebecca Gillette and Dean Magglo.

for the eight consecutive year. The reason that people come here isn't because of the stressful, gutwrenching racing. They're all very serious about racing, but the reason they like coming to this event is because they have fun. That's why they come here. This is a fun

Largely, it was probably those "peripheral" distractions — the parties, seminars and workshops — that prevented Saturday from being an unqualified disaster. That kept most everyone in a positive spirits until they were able to get some sailing in on Sunday.

As Gardiner pointed out. Sunday afternoon's wind couldn't have been better timed.

"When you're playing golf, you can go out and blow 17 holes," he said. "But if you make a great shot on 18, that's the one you'll remember. Most of the people here came in with a good wind today. That's what they'll remember."

Gardiner said that the regatta wouldn't have happened had it not been for the support, financially and morally, of the Seminole County Tourist Development Council.

"They deserve a whole lot of credit," Gardiner said. "They stepped in when Red Lobster decided it was getting out of sports marketing. Also, the City of Sanford did a real nice job getting the beach ready. They've been real friends of ours, they really have. We owe them a lot.

"Overall, everything was just outstanding. It was first class."

Plants solution to gift-giving

CELESTE WHITE

Are you stumped for a gift for the person who has everything? Christmas shopping can be quite a challenge — to your brain, as well as your budget, in addition to the consideration of cost, the consideration of cost, there's always that old question of what to give. For some of those on your list, plants might offer a nice solution. A healthy, vigorous plant usually is a welcome addition for either home or landscape. But, before you rush to your favorite nursery, you should consider what to look for, and what to avoid in plant selection.

Whether you're shopping for a gift plant for a friend, or for an addition to your own collection. you should choose your purchase carefully. Plants come in a wide range of grades, conditions, and standards, and it's sometimes hard to tell which ones have the best chance for survival. Usually, better plants will cost you more money. But, this isn't a hard and fast rule. When nurseries have sales, they often offer top quality plants at bargain prices. The important thing is to be able to tell what sook for compact, rather than spindly plants. An abundance of foliage is usually a good sign. A spindly plant without a good supply of leaves may be the victim of various leaf spot diseases or insect problems which have caused leaves to fall. Make sure the leaves have a good, uniform color. Check tipe of leaves for brown or yellow dis-coloration. Inspect the trunk and branches to see that they are well-formed, without cracks, peels or scars.

Carefuly examine each plant for any signs of insect or disease problem. Some things to look for are speckling on the leaves, which indicates spider mite injury; curied or distorted leaves. caused by aphid injury; and small bumps on stem and un-dersides of leaves, resulting from a scale attck. Common disease problems often show up in yellow or brown leaves, rotting stems, and brown roots. Check the soil to make sure it has good ly compacted. Pick each plant up and make sure that roots aren't growing out of the bottom of the

Some other considerations involve where a gift plant will eventually be grown. If the plant is to be kept indoors, you should determine whether it requires special lighting. If the plant is to be grown outdoors, you must determine whether it's adaptable to the climatic conditions of its eventual planting site. Your nurseryman should be able to help you in making such dehelp you in making such de-

The following are some suggestions of the most common gift plant selections.

Poinsettia, the most popular Christmas flower, is the most obvious suggestion. Purchased potted and in bloom, the flowers will last from 2 to 3 weeks. After the bloom dies and the danger of frost has passed, the plant may be transplanted outside where it will provde beautiful blooms during each Christmas season in the future.

Azaleas, which are usually forced to bloom in pots at Christmas time, also may be transplanted to the yard. They are very popular for landscaping.

One of the most novel plants is the Christmas cactus which will grow and flower for years to come with proper care. This perennial plant can be moved outdoors during the warmer weather, and the Christmas cactus can be purchased at most variety stores and nurseries. The Christmas Cherry or Pepper is also an unusual potted annual. This ornamental is available in a variety of colors, and the most popular color is red. Almost none of these plants are suitable for eating, and those that are edible taste very "hot." Once the plant bears, it will die. Chrysanthemums are available in several varieties, but the large flowering varieties are not disease resistant and require almost costant attention if the homeowner wants to keep this plant beyond its original flowering period. These plants are however, relatively inexpensive and produce beautiful flowers.

See a doctor about

DEAR DE. GOTT: I experince head pain that a CT dicated was due to calcium deposits. What causes these deits, and what can I do to cure

DEAR READER: From the limited information in your question, I cannot give you a definitive answer. A CT scan is a type of X-ray examination. Apparently, yours showed calcium deposits in the brain. Such eposits can be present in arteries, veins, the brain covering, or brain tissue itself. Depending on their location, pieces of calcium may indicate past infection or head injury.

On occasion, calcium deposits can interfere with the normal circulation of spinal fluid in and around the brain. Thus, before advising you. I'd have to know the location and size of the deposits.

Under the circumstances, I urge you to return to your doctor for clarification. He or she should inform you whether the calcifications are a likely cause of your headache; they may be an incidental, harmless finding of no particular significance or they may have to be removed surgically if they are causing a pressure build-up of spinal fluid. Should your doctor be unable to answer your questions, ask for a referral to a neurologist or a neurosurgeon.

DEAR DR. GOTT: 1 suffer from congenital amblyopia. Have there been any recent developments in the field of vision care that might prove beneficial to me?

DEAR READER: The term amblyopia refers to reduced vision in an eye that appears to be normal. This is common in individuals who have strabismus (crossed eyes), which is usually present at birth. When both eyes cannot focus on the same object. each eye sends a different image to the brain. Called diplopia, this condition is so unnerving that most children learn to rely on one eye or the other. The eye that is less used becomes weaker as the ima of covering the strong eye to force the patient to use the weak one. In order to avoid permanent eye damage, treatment must be initiated before 6 years of age.

EDICINE PETER GOTT, M.D.

Some cases of strablemus can be surgically corrected.

Iceland was the surprise winner of the 1991 NEC Bermuda Bowl, the World Team Championship. My guess is that. if betting were permitted. iceland would have begun as a 20-1 outsider. In the final, Iceland beat Poland by 415 to 376 international matchpoints (IMPs).

With 16 deals remaining. iceland led by a seemingly insurmountable 73. But Poland mounted a charge, steadily closing the gap until today's deal, which stopped the fightback. The Icelandic pair at the other table bid to six diamonds. South won the spade lead with the ace, ruffed a spade in the dummy, cashed the diamond king and took a diamond finesse. When it won and the trumps broke, he claimed 12 tricks.

In the auction shown. North's double of West's emaciated two-spade raise was responsive, indicating that he had values but had no clear-cut bid available. His three-spade cue-bid was excessive, propelling his side into six clubs.

Declarer, Adam Zmudzinski, won the spade lead, drew trumps and considered how to play the diamonds. He knew the percentage play, given East's opening bid, was to finesse through East. But he also knew that Poland was behind in the match. So he went for a swing. finessing through West. It lost and Iceland gained 16 IMPs, whereas if the diamond queen had been in the West hand, Poland would have gained that number - and would have lost the match by only seven. (C)1991. You may establish an extremely valuable alliance in the year ahead with someone who is older than you in both age and experience. This individual might show you shortcuts to success.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You might have to deal with some challenging developments today, but don't let this intimidate you. This is one of those times when you're apt to perform better when you feel a bit of pressure.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Ideas authored by your mate might be superior to yours today. Keep an open mind, therefore, when your partner offers a suggestion.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Profit shouldn't be considered a dirty word today. Being materially motivated will substantially enhance your effectiveness and LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're a good listener today, and this might work to your advantage. You could piece together two separate bits of information that. collectively, will prove beneficial.
