

Florida's First General Assembly Met in Tallahassee On June 23, 1845

By R. W. PATRICK
Member of the Governing Board
P. K. Yonge Library of Florida History, University of Florida.

GAINESVILLE, June 25 (Special)—On Monday June 23, 1845, the usually quiet streets of Tallahassee were crowded with visitors sent to witness or participate in the convening of Florida's first General Assembly.

All during the previous week they had arrived in the State capital. Some had reached their destination after days of travel by stage-coaches which ran over cross roads, often little more than clearing. In the forenoon of nine others had sailed from distant ports to St. Marks where they had continued their journey by coach, or horseback, or by the Tallahassee-St. Marks Railroad, the only operating railway in Florida.

From the nearby plantations and towns a few had arrived in private carriages, those huge vehicles with their bodies hung on springs between high, spoked wheels, and attended by Negro coachmen and footmen. The presence of wagons had even excited the interest of the common man in the coming events.

These visitors in Tallahassee were representatives of the people of Florida. Planters, lawyers, doctors, and merchants, dressed in fashion and proud of their social distinctions, discussed current problems and berated their political opponents. Strikingly independent farmers, clothed in jeans made by their wives or daughters and filled with a knowledge gained from stamp specimens, "pulpit preaching," or an occasional newspaper, boasted of their rights of citizenship. Here and there among the bystanders were a few poor whites, the representatives of a relatively small class in Florida, whose ambition and physical energy had been sapped by malnutrition and intestinal parasites. Although they lacked many of the material benefits of slaves, they glorified in the fact that they were free. Slaves, who could be seen everywhere, as they attended their masters or trotted on the way to accomplish some errand for their masters.

The rich and the poor, and the slave, the official representative and the interested onlooker were stirred by the thought that Florida was becoming a self-governing community.

On this June morning of 1845, the elected representatives of the people of Florida pushed through the crowded Capitol square to their assembly halls. Fourteen senators and thirty-three representatives answered the first roll call of the General Assembly. Other legislators arrived the following day, and by July 1 seventeen senators and forty representatives from the sixteen senatorial districts and twenty counties of the State were at work on the problems of organizing a government.

In both houses of the legislature, the first concern was that of organization which included the election of presiding officers. The Senate chose Andrew J. Berthold as their president, but the representatives were unable to elect a speaker on the first day, for their time was taken up with the report of the Constitutional Convention which reported on the general election that had been held in May.

On the following morning the House selected Hugh Archer as Speaker and invited the Senate which had been seated by the Territorial Council after 1839 to a joint session to canvass the election returns. The Senators, however, had agreed to transact no further business during the day as a mark of respect to the memory of Andrew Jackson, the news of whose death on June 8 had been received in Tallahassee on the morning of the twenty-fourth.

On the morning of June 25, the election returns were canvassed and Hugh Archer declared that William D. Moseley had been elected to the governorship of Florida.

Public interest in the organization of the State government reached its apex on June 25, but the activity of the new government was only beginning. For a month that body remained in session with the avowed purpose of planning a functioning government and before dissolution on July 26, the Assembly passed twenty-six acts and thirteen resolutions. Four executive departments were established, namely state attorney-general, controller, and treasurer, salaries of from $2,000 to $3000 were provided for these offices, and the governor's salary was fixed at $1,000. The State was divided into four judicial districts, the judges of these circuit courts in joint session made a supreme court.

The first General Assembly of the State of Florida did not accomplish all that the people desired, in fact it did not provide some things necessary to the functioning of a government, but it lay a foundation upon which succeeding assemblies could build a more nearly perfect edifice of government.

REPORTS FROM RADIO TOKYO insist that U. S. invasion forces are locked in battle with Jap defenders of Kume Island, which lies 50 miles west of conquered Okinawa. Enemy sources are assuming apprehension over the approaching invasion of China or Malaya, pointed out that Kume, which is about 30 miles square, could provide air and supply bases to supplement the main Ryukyu bases now being established on Okinawa. (International) and a probate court was created for each of the twenty-six counties. County governments were authorized, and the several counties which had been created by the Territorial Council after 1839 were recognized as valid political subdivisions of the State. To pay the expenses of government a comprehensive revenue measure levied taxes on real and personal property, business enterprises and professional incomes, and on slaves and free Negroes. Executive departmental heads were elected two United States Senators chosen and provision made for the popular election of a representative to Congress to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of David Levy Yulee, who had been honored by selection for the Senate. As a final act the Assembly voted its members the sum of three dollars for each day they had served and ten cents per mile for travel to and from Tallahassee.

Knowing the varieties which produce success under favorable conditions, it behoves the farmer to obtain his seed with care, let him get seed which are inferior, seed that are not pure, that are not viable, or contain a large proportion of trash or weed seed.

Experience over the years and painstaking tests by Agricultural Experiment Station workers have shown what types and varieties of crops are best for Florida conditions, and the wise farmer will plant these varieties.

LAND MAY BE RICH, THE WEATHER GOOD, BUT POOR SEED WILL NOT DO WELL. It matters not how rich his land may be nor how favorable the weather, the farmer can't produce satisfactory crops unless he plants good seed of varieties suitable for his conditions. The first requirement for success in producing crops is good, suitable seed.

If he plants inferior seed, his whether they have been tested crop will be inferior. The law provides that all seed must be sold in a package which bears an analysis tag or they must come from a package bearing such a tag. This tag gives the name and variety, percentage of purity and germination, and the date on which the seed were tested. The seed must have been tested not earlier than the month of July and not later than the month of August. The tag must indicate also whether the package contains noxious weed seed and, if so, the percentage of such seed.

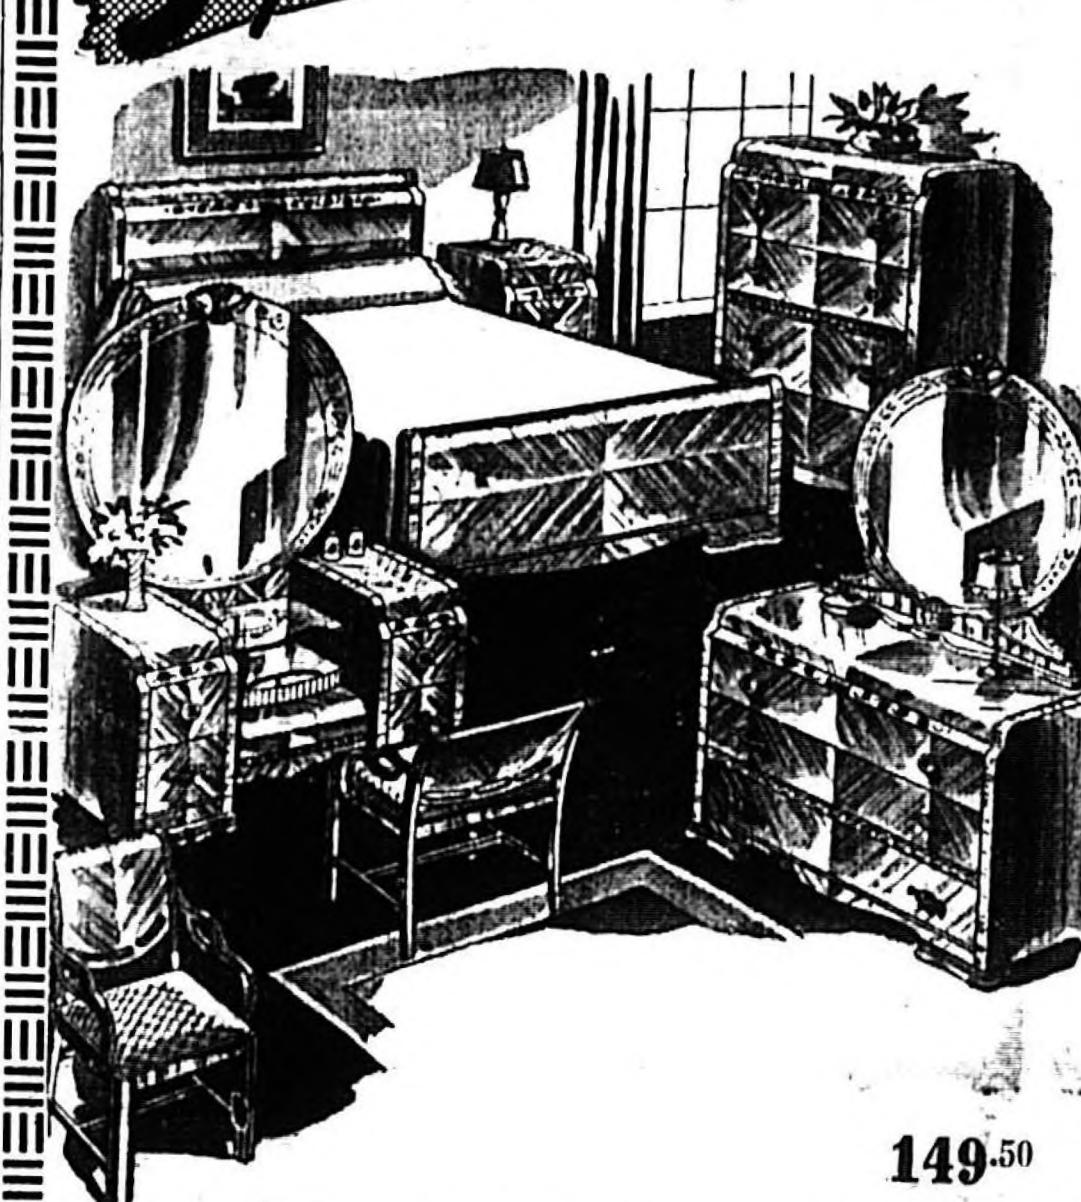

To be sure that he is starting his crop right—with good seed—the farmer should be careful that he gets the right variety and accurate information as to their seed law.

If he has any doubt about seed he obtains or if he has seed left over from the previous season which he might use, he should take advantage of the services offered by the State Seed Laboratory in Tallahassee. For a small charge, he can have a representative sample tested for viability. With the results of a test he will then know whether he will have to plant a maximum amount of seed for a maximum stand or plant more than would be necessary if the seed were 100 percent viable.

Plans Completed For Building Of Freezing Lockers

Contract Is Awarded And Site Is Chosen For First Project Of Kind In Florida

Official announcement of completion of plans and preparations to build and staff the Seminole County Frozen Food, Quick Freezing, Locker, and Commercial Storage Plant, the first of its kind in Florida, was today made by Edward Higgins, manager of Seminole County's Chamber of Commerce and Philip S. Cole vice president of the Bush Insulation Co., Inc. of New York.

The site taken, after a careful survey of sites which included land at the Sanford State Farmer's Market, will be the entire block facing the railroad tracks on Commercial Street and extending towards Lake Monroe between French Avenue and Maple Avenue, it was announced.

The corporation has been formed by Fred R. Wilson, Sanford, president of the company under the name of "Country Life Frozen Foods of Seminole County, Inc." This will be under the general direction of Country Life Frozen Foods of Florida, Inc., 303 Exchange Building, Jacksonville, a wholly owned Bush company.

The management of the Sanford plant is vested in a board of directors, and a new office, Forest Hatch, W. A. Patrick, John Brunley and Alex R. Johnson.

The contract for building the plant has been awarded to H. L. Long of Fort Myers. Architecture of the plant will be thoroughly modern and attractive with flat roof and exterior decorative treatment to include glass brick to make this the most modern and attractive of plants. Construction will be of limestone and concrete block with waterproof white stucco encrusted by a canopy.

The interior rooms, where all lockers are to be wall-lined with white tile for perfect sanitation, good light and easy working conditions. All rooms where meats are chilled, aged and packaged for short storage are equipped with interlocks that destroy all airborne bacteria and prevent mold.

These operating rooms will be the most attractive possible.

Commercial producers, produce dealers, stores, hotels, restaurants or other similar institutions may have facilities for the same processing and zero or other temperature storage in their own individual storage room, that may range in size from 150 cubic feet up to carload space as may be wanted.

Announcement was made that

BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY

WE MAY CHEAT OTHERS A LITTLE, BUT WE CAN CHEAT OURSELVES OUT OF GLORIOUS MEMORIES OF KINDNESS DONE. WE WILL TAKE NOTHING FROM THIS WORLD BUT OUR MEMORIES. James 5:14: Behold the hire of the laborers who mowed your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth out.

Happy Fourth of July.

In Kansas City a 21 year old man, who had been working the next morning to find his head securely lodged between the five inch bars of the footboard. It took his wife, his mother-in-law, ten neighbors and two policemen a solid hour to get him loose. Anything can happen in this country, and does.

The whole world watches the United States as it ponders the World Security Charter for an example of democracy in action. Will its ratification be blocked by a little group of willful senators? Will it be debated and ultimately pigeon-holed until ultimate approval is given to it? Or will the Senate round itself from its time-honored lethargy and ratify the proposals with such speed and unanimity that other nations may be moved to do likewise?

Pope Pius XII issues a timely warning which all thoughtful people would consider. "Leaders in all fields," he says, "should realize it as their duty to protect such masses (of people) against themselves and against those who are only too ready to make capital of critical periods in a nation's life to satisfy unworthy blind passions." We in this country like to think that the people are always right but it is worthwhile remembering that the people can be misled again, as they have been many times in the past.

If you wonder about the cost of operating a municipal swimming pool, read these figures gathered by Martin Andersen, publisher of the Orlando Sentinel: Last year St. Petersburg spent $23,193 on its swimming pool and $24,376. Fort Lauderdale spent $12,000, total, in $15,000. But most municipal pools are not built for fun. Most of them cost more to operate than they can hope to take in. But their real returns are in health, physical development, and the swimming ability which they provide the young people of a community. You can't measure this in dollars and cents.

England votes tomorrow on the question of socialism; whether to turn the country over to those who would have the government take over the basic industries and operate them, presumably in the interest of the people, or whether to continue time-tested methods of free enterprise in plotting the post-war future. Most people think that they can have state socialism and personal freedom, freedom of speech, freedom of press, and assembly, freedom to work where they choose at what they choose, but they can't. If England is to have socialism and make it work, it must give up all the rights and privileges it has won from the government ever since King John signed the Magna Charta at Runnymede. But because many people do not understand this, the socialists will get a good vote tomorrow.

We have heard so much in recent weeks about what should be done for returning war veterans and war workers and others—and no one begrimed them a single—but we have been wondering why someone doesn't launch a program for doing something for the men who stuck to the job in private business throughout all the rumpus. Too old, or not physically strong enough to be drafted, so they continued to work at the same old stand, serving lunches in restaurants, waiting on the trade in department stores, filling up at gasoline stations, with their salaries frozen at pre-war levels while the prices of things they had to buy continued to mount. People say, "The same thing will still go on, we'll work in war industries, the fabulously wealthy, or even just across the street at more than they were writing. They could have done the same, but they stuck, and it seems to us they deserve some kind of special medal or honor."

World Independence

On July 4, 1776, a handful of men who believed not only that human beings were entitled to live in freedom under a government of their own choosing, but also that that government must be based upon a solid foundation of justice, presented to the world a Declaration of Independence in which they stated:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed... But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evidence a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security."

During the intervening years their sons, and those of others who came here in search of the same freedom, have built a mighty country upon those principles; and built it so well that today the whole world looks to it for strength and guidance. They have not looked in vain. Twice in this century its citizens have rallied with tremendous power to the defense of weak and oppressed nations far away.

And now, on this Independence Day of 1945, a new declaration is being presented to the world which pledges that all peoples on the earth will one day enjoy the "Life, Liberty and pursuit of Happiness" of our ancestors.

A successful United Nations, like our own United States, will take much work and infinite patience to achieve, but it will, it must, be worth the cost.

Discussing The Labor Law

With something like 90,000 workers on strike in the country, labor leaders at the very least show poor timing in their all-out attacks on the three United States senators who are attempting to streamline the federal labor relations law. If the country can have so much disorder between capital and labor at a time when it is still engaged in mortal combat with a desperate enemy, the outlook is disturbing for what may happen following final victory.

One of the sponsors of the new labor relations law, Senator Ball of Minnesota, says: "The makings for a knock-out, drag-out fight to the finish between management and organized labor are at hand." His opinion is fully supported by all authorities who have no chestnuts to pull out of the fire.

If that is the case, something is needed. If the streamlining of the industrial relations machinery proposed by the three senators isn't what the patient requires, then what is? The senators have made clear that the primary purpose of their proposal is its use as a basis for discussion. Then why not discuss it?

Not only the nature of the proposal of the three senators, but their liberal records, are guarantee that they are not trying to destroy the federal machinery set up to deal with relations between capital and labor. They are trying to make it work. That alone should persuade management, labor and the general public to give the new proposal an objective looking over.

Covenant And Charter

Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, prime minister of the Union of South Africa and a delegate to the San Francisco Conference, is definitely pleased with the proposed world charter. A veteran of the conference which drafted the League of Nations Covenant after the last war, he has expressed his views in a signed newspaper article which is of interest to everyone.

Marshal Smuts feels that the trouble with the old League was that it was based upon an unrealistic idealism which thought pacific settlement of disputes would always be possible, and regarded force as unnecessary. As a result, it had no power to enforce peace when discussion failed. The writers of the present Charter, on the other hand, have learned that it is often necessary to use force to maintain peace, and have provided for such use in case of need.

Another weakness of the old League, he thinks, was the way in which it frowned upon smaller defense groups within itself. This time, there is a provision for the encouragement of such local groups, to help preserve peace within their area boundaries when that is necessary.

With these, and the insistence upon great power leadership and unity as expressed in the voting agreements, Marshal Smuts is sure that the new United Nations organization may well succeed where the League failed.

Certainly it must be given every chance to do so.

5th Army GI's Suggest Coat Of Arms Showing Mud, Mules And Kesselring

By SID FEDER

(AP) Newsfeatures
ROME.—The other day a GI suggested the 5th Army adopt a coat of arms showing mud, mules and Kesselring on a field of mud. Such a shield, with possibly a pack mule tossed into one corner and in the other the leering face of Albert Kesselring, field marshal of the German armies in Italy until the end, might come near to telling the story of men, mud and mountains—and the rugged warriors of the 5th.

For 20 months and two bitter winters, over nearly 600 miles—yard by yard from Salerno to Switzerland and Austria—they fought through the pick of the Axis armies led by field marshal who may go down in the books as one of military history's masters of defensive warfare.

And when the shooting stopped the 5th was the first army ever to have conquered Italy from the south. All the way it has been a rough and rugged outfit. The 34th Division, for instance, has been at war since the Algers landings in 1942—celebrated its 500th day of combat in the line April 16. Its men believe that is more than any other outfit in the whole armed forces—Army, Navy or Marines.

Months of training followed the organization of the army Dec. 1, 1942. On Sept. 5, 1943, it left for Salerno.

Italy's bowing out of the war didn't soften the Italian beaches. At Salerno and Paestum, the 5th went ashore in the shadow of mountains which may go down in the books as one of military history's masters of defensive warfare.

But reinforcements came. And inch by inch, the 5th pushed its way toward Naples, 33 miles away.

By Oct. 6 there were close to 100,000 casualties for the 5th, more than 12,000 of them Americans. Casualties were particularly heavy in the crossings of the Arno, where the crossings of the Tiber, which cuts through where the Germans had lured in a bowl. It was crossed so often that doughfoot used to grin ruefully when they reached other streams far northward months later and remark "Wad-dya know? The Volturno again."

There was a task to beat the weather to the German winter line, hinged at Cassino.

When the 5th finally reached the Rapido early in 1944 the 36th tried to cross below Cassino and ran into the enemy's prepared fire.

The men had to pull back, leaving the Rapido virtually running blood.

The same day, Jan. 21, 1944, the Anzio beachhead landing where Nove once landed in a marble palace. The landing was so easy the men were open-mouthed with wonder, Kesselring quickly recited.

For four months, hour by hour, week by week, the Luftwaffe made living in foxholes a career and the enemy entrenched in the hills threw thousands of shells.

Months later when one of the huge railroad cars used against the 5th at Anzio was captured at Civitavecchia far to the north, one soldier began heaving stones at the 40-foot barrel.

"I've been waiting a long time to throw rocks at you," he muttered. "You're the best ease of somnia a guy ever had."

Meanwhile on the main front a Rapido crossing was made north of Cassino. The 34th Division, tired and demoralized after fatigue from the steady grind of battling through the mountains, it came within an arc of striking the Cassino battle right there.

The men got to the outer walls of the hilltop abbey and took half the town in fighting. They could have cleared it but could often hear the Germans moving around in the next room when they stopped for the night. But the limit of human endurance was reached. The infantry was withdrawn and the town flattened by the air force.

When the British 8th Army finally took Cassino after the Allies cleared the mountain hills they took five divisions to do what the 3rd almost did alone.

The 5th stopped by the Germans winter line for three cold muddy, bloody months, needed 100 truckloads of clothing a day just to keep warm and often couldn't get it.

Finally, May 11, under a 2,000 gun artillery preparation that "changed the face of nature" as one artillery officer put it, the 5th leaped off from Garigliano on the road to Rome.

The 88th Division, the first World War II effective division outfit in combat, broke the Gustav line at Santa Maria Infante and wasnick named the "Blue Devils" by the Berlin radio because of a blue cloverleaf shoulder patch.

May 23 the Anzio beachhead was taken and the 5th joined with the main armies one two days later in the Pontine marshes.

The Americans steamrollered through Rome as the enemy fled, bewildered, more than 100 miles behind Kesselring pulled his men together again.

The 34th Division, which didn't have time to buy presents, dashed nearly 50 miles in four days to take the supply port of Civitavecchia.

With the crossing of the Arno, there was another race against winter when the 5th plowed into the Gothic line. After an artillery preparation so heavy it tore the side of Mt. Cimino, the 88th cracked the line itself and the 91st took Futa Pass.

The 88th and the 34th daug the enemy off mountains after mountain. Casualties were heavier than at Cassino. Monte Grande was the autumn's closest approach to Highway One into Bologna. Like the 34th the 88th needed just one fresh regiment to finish the job, but didn't get it.

During six months in the snow and cold of the Apennines with the highways in miserable condition and through 65 mile patrol fights, the Italian campaign became the forgotten front despite the almost daily toll of lives.

It was here that Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, Jr., took command of the 5th and Kesselring went to the western front for the Germans. Gen. Truscott replaced Gen. Mark W. Clark.

The 10th Mountain Division, including some of the world's greatest ski jumpers and mountain climbers, went into action at Monte Belvedere in the winter's biggest advance for the 5th Army.

April 18, 1945, the front exploded under a 7500-round artillery avalanche, in four days

Britain's General Election July 5th Has Many Aspects

By W. W. HERCHER

AP Newsfeatures
LONDON.—The British general election, July 5 will be fought between Conservatives and Socialists or labor against capital, but it may boil down to a contest between Churchillites and anti-Churchillites.

However, the parliamentary election system, which permits thousands of Britons to vote twice by proxy, and imposes unusual restrictions on candidates, is a process that still is unique to the average American.

Candidates for the House of Commons may run for office in any district they choose, and frequently seek the support of voters who never heard of them.

The voter must be a British subject, at least 21 years old, and hold a national registration card. He may be placed on one or several registers—civilian residence, business premises, university, city or armed service.

Those on civilian and business registers may vote twice if registered in different constituencies.

Members of Parliament, if an alumnus of the Briton may vote from that register. In no case is he permitted more than two votes.

Dated July 26

There is a delay of three weeks in announcing the results of the election because of the necessity of collecting the service vote from all parts of the world. (This time it will be July 26.)

The Conservative Party there is no much change among primary. Anyone can "stand" for Parliament if he conforms to the electoral law, but the party will not recognize candidates not "adopted" by local associations.

Nomination requires only the signatures of 10 electors, plus $1,000 fee which the candidate forfeits if he fails to get a certain percentage of the vote.

Members of Parliament receive $2,400 annually.

Asst: Churchill

The Conservatives, who like the nickname "Tories", which was introduced in 1688, go into the election with a strong lead in seats. Winston Churchill and there is no doubt they will do their best to capitalize it.

Both the Socialists (Laborites) and the Liberals would have preferred an election in the fall when some of Churchill's war-time losses might be reduced.

Laborite Attlee, deputy Prime Minister in the coalition government, also has influential leaders. There are Ernest Bevin, coalition minister of labor, and Herbert Morrison, former home secretary and minister of home security, as well as Attlee.

The Conservatives held 359 of 615 seats in the Parliament which was dissolved June 15. The Laborites had 165 seats. The Liberal Party of Sir Archibald Sinclair, secretary for air in the old government, held 23 seats and the National Liberals, supporting Churchill, 19. There were 25 Independents.

Sinclair's Liberals stood with Laborites in refusing to continue the coalition government until the end of the war with Japan, which brought on Churchill's resignation.

Liberal: Beveridge

One of the most vocal and well-known of the Liberals is Sir William Beveridge, author of the famous Beveridge Plan for social security.

The Conservatives have not issued their party manifesto, but in a 12-point policy for peace they have come out for "the fullest opportunity for individual initiative and removal of wartime controls as the necessity for them disappears."

Churchill has put the party's program in three words: "Food, work, homes."

The Laborites stand for public ownership of mines, railroads and all forms of inland transport, of the iron and steel industry and the Bank of England. Later they propose to nationalize land.

Resignation Of Morgenthau Is Given Truman

Justice Roberts Also Resigns In Surprise Step Ending 15-Year Term On High Court

WASHINGTON, 6 (AP)— After 11 years as secretary of the treasury, Henry Morgenthau, Jr., will leave office after President Truman returns from the Big Three meeting, beginning in about three weeks in Berlin. The President also has announced acceptance of the resignation of Supreme Court Justice Owen Roberts.

They told President Truman that they wanted to quit public life and go home. The President accepted the resignations with regret.

Morgenthau, in his letter, said: "When Franklin D. Roosevelt came to Washington, he asked me to come with him, stating that when he was through, we would go back to Dutchess county (N.Y.) together."

Morgenthau said he would leave after Truman returns from his forthcoming Big Three meeting with Marshal Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill in Berlin.

The President told of the resignations at his news conference, said he had a successor in mind for the treasury post but didn't say anything about it now.

Names mentioned in speculation were Fred M. Vinson, war mobilization director; John W. Snyder, federal loan administrator; George D. (Ga.) Clegg, chairman of the Senate foreign committee; and Walter J. Cummings, of Chicago, chairman of the board of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company.

Before the news conference, the President announced another major resignation, that of Judge Thurman Arnold from the United States court of appeals, District of Columbia. Arnold, former justice of the Supreme Court, had wanted to enter private law practice and work for a "truly competitive" economy after the war.

Truman, in white and black overcoat suit and green necktie, opened the news conference with a wave of his marshal's baton, encrusted with gold and diamonds. It was presented to the President by Lt. Gen. Alexander Patch, commander of the Seventh army, who took Goering into custody.

Truman said the baton was worth perhaps $40,000, that Goering wept when it was taken from him, and that it would be presented to the U.S. military museum at West Point, N.Y.

He quickly jumped into a series of announcements, starting with the appointments of Edward C. Continued on Page 8A

Summer Meetings For Law Makers May Be Permanent

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C., July 6. The North Carolina legislature may become an annual affair. Several members of the body, taking their cue from Judge Parker, have reported on similar conflicts held by the judges in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals have proposed that the legislators meet each year for the kind of training-school session they are holding now.

Judge Parker suggested that such meetings be held annually in order that the legislators may be able to do a better job at their regular sessions.

Referring to annual meetings held by the judges in his circuit, Judge Parker declared that these sessions have been of "inestimable value" in improving the administration of justice in this State. Begun 15 years ago, they have given both the judges and the people themselves a better understanding of the job before the courts, he said.

Judge Parker described this meeting of the colons as a "school for legislators." The learning here in the heart of Great Britain is being held to discuss Federal-State relations and dominant trends in legislation. It is the first such meeting ever held by a North Carolina Legislature. The body has no legislative power at this session; it is merely a training school.

Among the speakers have been George W. Taylor, Jr., chairman of the National War Labor Board, and Maj. Gen. Edward J. Brooks, commanding general of the Fourth Service Command, Atlanta, Ga.

Gen. Hugh D. Mitchell, Statesville, is chairman of the committee for this meeting and for the second session which is set for Statesville some time in October. President Truman is scheduled to address the body at the Statesville meeting.

Hopkins Is Named To Post In Garment Industry's Affairs

NEW YORK, July 6 (AP)— David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, said today Harry L. Hopkins, former special presidential adviser, had accepted the post of impartial chairman of the New York women's coat and suit industry.

Dubinsky said Hopkins was expected to assume the post after a rest of several weeks.

Hopkins, a slender, dapper New York Mayor James J. Walker, was welcomed to the post in June 1945 and occupied it until June 30, 1946. It was reported at union offices that Hopkins' salary would be "in the neighborhood of $30,000 a year."

Dubinsky said in a statement that as impartial chairman, Hopkins would oversee collection agreements covering 50,000 employees and 1,200 garment factories with an annual production output of $500,000,000. Dubinsky said the production covered 80 percent of the coat and suit output for the nation.

He said the collective agreements in the industry were formed in 1910 when machinery for the settlement of labor-management differences was established under a "protocol of peace."

Frank Evans Finds Weather In Boston Hot Upon Leaving

Frank Evans of Lake Mary recently returned from a trip to Boston, and reported that when he first arrived there, a month ago, the weather was quite cool, but that when he left it seemed hotter than Florida.

P. Hasky Wright, local publisher, on the other hand, recently wrote Mrs. Wright from Bradford, Vt., where he is spending his vacation, that it was so cool that he had worn a heavy sweater under his coat while attending a Kipling meeting.

"It must have been cold up there," commented Mrs. Wright today. "Hasky hardly ever wore that sweater down here—even on the coldest days."

New Manager Will Assume His Duties At Valdez Hotel

Ben C. Small, manager of the downtown hotel on Ninth Street and Broadway, New York, for the past 15 years, arrived in Sanford Tuesday with Mrs. Small and will take over management of the Valdez Hotel for the coming year.

Edward Hendrix, owner of the hotel, together with Mrs. Hendrix will leave soon for Black Mountain, North Carolina for the summer season.

Mr. Small, who will be associated with her husband in the management of the hotel, was born and raised in Sanford and has lived in New York for the past 15 years. She is an aunt of Edward P. Lane.

Mrs. R. F. Radcliff and Miss Lettie Caldwell will continue to reside at the hotel soon.

Horse Racing In County Is Being Planned

New Owner Of Seminole Driving Club Posts $1,000.00 To Cover Referendum

At the meeting of the County Commission held Thursday, David Hillman was recently purchased the Seminole Driving Club, advised the commissioners that he planned to open his track for horse racing, provided an referendum taken on the motion should prove favorable. It was announced today by O. P. Hermon, county check.

Mr. Hillman deposited with the Board the sum of $1,000 to cover the cost of such a referendum which will be held by the State Racing Commission, a procedure to be followed in all cases.

The Board approved the application by Mr. Hillman for a liquor license for a place to be operated at the proposed track. This license is to be used for consumption on the premises and in packages.

A liquor license by the Board is a matter of fact, as the County Commission held a hearing on the matter of the proposed driving club and the question of the proposed racing track.

At the meeting of the City of Sanford Board of Education, a motion was made to use a portion of the corner of Broad Street and Sanford Avenue and there be named a park for the site.

Mr. Hillman, who has started a new driving club and a new set of racing house grounds, requested the site for the new driving club.

A license from the County Commission was granted to the driving club to use the proposed racing track.
