Call Her Senator

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Muriel Humphrey, taking over the job her husband held for almost a quarter-century, will not be a "cavewoman" as the only woman in the U.S. Senate and the first woman senator in more than five years.

Mrs. Humphrey, a petite 65-year-old mother of four and grandmother of 18, was to take the oath of office this afternoon in a simple and traditional Senate ceremony.

Minnesota's senior senator, Democrat Wendell Anderson, was to accompany her down the center aisle to the podium, to take the oath from Vice President Walter Mondale, a Humphrey protege and close friend, who is the senator's permanent officer.

Mrs. Humphrey was elected to the Senate Jan. 22 by Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich. She has been serving in Florida and the Virgin Islands since her husband, Robert H. Humphrey, died of cancer on Jan. 13.

Mrs. Humphrey's appointment lasts only until a special election is held in November and she has not said whether she will run for the remainder of her husband's term which ends in January 1981.

The last woman to serve in the Senate was Margaret Chase Smith, R-Maine, who was defeated for re-election in 1972 and left office in January 1973.

Despite the end of Humphrey's long battle with cancer and his death, Mrs. Humphrey said she was in good health — although she was hospitalized briefly for exhaustion last fall — and plans to tackle the duties "in a vigorous manner."

Mrs. Humphrey says she wants to complete "some important business Hubert hoped to finish."

And her friends say it won't take her long to immerse herself in that work. She was a close confidant of Humphrey during their 28-year marriage, and knows the ways of the Senate as well as do most veteran members.

She also has her husband's experience at staff.

Mrs. Humphrey already has received a high-priced subscription to the Foreign Relations Committee, of which her husband was a member, and the Governmental Affairs Committee.

"They had been having problems, as he told it to me," said McGee. "That's why they were there. He said he wanted to show her the black cemetery and he said he told her, 'now you think we've got problems, these people had problems. They were treated as second-class citizens.' When he saw the graves and what had happened, he said 'now, they won't even let them rest in peace after they're dead.'

"It was kind of touching the way he told it."

Val Robbins, county director of sanitation for the health department, said a complaint was filed in his office Friday. McGee said viewing the grave left him with a strange feeling.

Summit Over, Sadat Takes Message To The People

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a gesture of at hand on how to resume the stalled peace talks with Israel, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat today undertook to argue his case with the American people.

Sadat and President Carter returned to Washington Sunday afternoon after two days and three long talks at Camp David, a secluded presidential retreat in the snow-covered Catoctin Mountains of western Maryland.

An interview with Sadat on NBC later made it clear the Carter-Sadat summit did not succeed in what American officials had described as a minimum goal: achieving early resumption of the foreign ministers' talks broken off by Sadat on Jan. 18 in Jerusalem. Instead, Sadat said, it was agreed that Assistant Secretary of State Alfred Arlen Jr. will shuttle between Egypt and Israel in an effort to create some compromise language that would permit a resumption of the talks.

In the meantime, Sadat said, talks between the defense ministers in Cairo will continue.

The Egyptian president, meanwhile, scheduled two days of meetings, appearances and interviews in Washington before a final session with Carter Wednesday.

Sadat's schedule called for meetings with American Jewish community leaders of Black Hebrews this morning and a speech and question-and-answer session later at the National Press Club.

On Tuesday, he is to meet key congressional leaders, do at least two more television interviews and have a private "background" session with American editors and columnists.

Israel Defense Minister Moshe Dayan has been invited to Washington soon after Sadat leaves Wednesday evening.

The Egyptian president said he would be willing to resume the foreign ministers' talks, but with a necessary precondition: an agreement with Israel on a basic set of principles. The weekend session had been designed, among other things, to produce such a declaration.

Sadat repeatedly made two points in Sunday night's interview with NBC's David Brinkley:

— He expressed gratitude to the American people, particularly American Jews, for the "sentiments that have been expressed" toward him.

— In one point he said, "I shall never fail them, or all the American people."

He accused Israel, at length, of taking the "wrong direction" after his visit to Jerusalem in November, and said the Israelis accepted his offer of recognition, direct talks, and full diplomatic relations as part of a comprehensive peace settlement without making any similar response in turn.

Indeed, he said, the Israeli response had been to expand

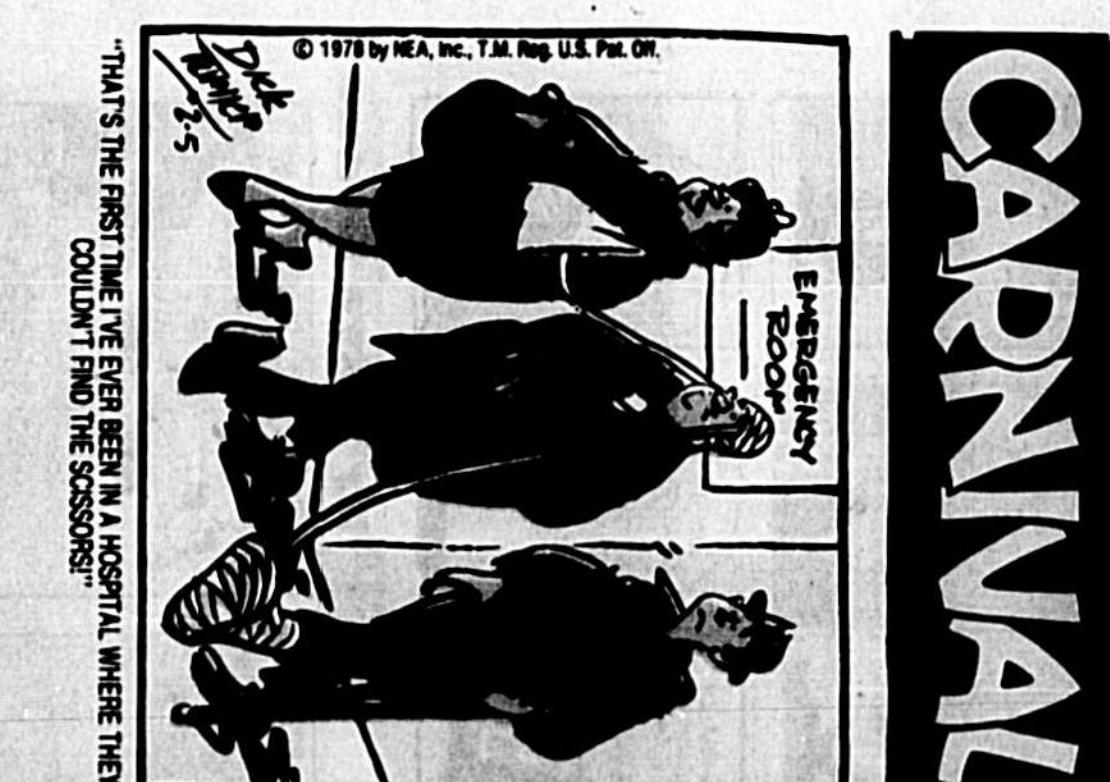

crus of the problem."

The unusual Camp David summit had been designed by the Americans to end the momentum in the direct peace talks. Carter apparently resisted pressure from Sadat to use U.S. leverage against Israel to force concessions.

ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI) — Hard-line Arab leaders failed to announce any concrete decisions at a three-day summit, but a Palestinian diplomat said they secretly agreed to reopen guerrilla training and supply camps in Syria.

The so-called "Front of Firms" conference, attended by Algeria, Libya, Syria, South Yemen and the Palestine Liberation Organization, ended by condemning Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's peace initiative.

The conference statement said Sadat had no right to speak on behalf of Palestinians and rejected any accord "reached to the detriment of the Arab nation's higher interests."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Czech With Fake Bomb Skyjacks, Asks Haven

FRANKFURT, West Germany (UPI) — A 24-year-old Czechoslovak who claimed to have a bomb in his suitcase today hijacked a Czech jet from East Germany to Frankfurt, where he asked West German authorities for political asylum, police said.

A police spokesman said the man commanded the plane, which was carrying 60 persons, shortly after takeoff on a flight from East Berlin to Prague.

The 24-year-old Czech who seized the plane has since left the aircraft and turned himself over to German authorities, asking for political asylum, a police spokesman said.

Debris Search Continues

EDMONTON, Alberta (UPI) — Scientists recovered the most radioactive fragment from a crashed Soviet spy satellite and ordered increased radiation detection flights today in a search for more debris.

Scientists, protected by 1,000 pounds of lead shielding, braved 40-below-zero temperatures to recover the fragment from frozen Great Slave Lake Saturday and load it aboard a Chinook helicopter.

Ethics Panel Seeks Kim

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite the opposition of the South Korean government, the House Ethics Committee still has hopes of questioning former South Korean Ambassador Kim Dong Jo about payoffs to congressmen.

Leon Jaworski, the committee's special counsel, said Sunday he thinks the panel eventually will get testimony from Kim.

The South Korean government has agreed to allow rice merchant Tongsun Park to testify before Congress but has refused to permit questioning of the former ambassador.

Voting Held Amid Strike

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaraguans voted in a virtual state of siege Sunday amid growing reports of an insurrection and to a two-man presidential ticket in protest against the regime of President Anastasio Somoza.

Returns were expected today from municipal elections and observers said the turnout by Nicaragua's 1 million eligible voters appeared very light.

Nicaragua took on the appearance of a city under a state of siege. Artillery rumbled through the streets and helicopters flew overhead. National Guard troops patrolled Managua, Leon, Granada, Matagalpa and Rivas and artillery was deployed throughout the capital.

New Leader For Costa Rica

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — Rodrigo Carazo, who quit the ruling National Liberation Party when he despaired of ever being its candidate, today won the presidency of Costa Rica as the head of a four-party opposition coalition.

Although pre-election polls showed a tight race, Carazo easily defeated the government candidate, Luis Alberto Monge, by an unofficial margin of 52-43 percent. The other votes were split among six candidates.

N. Viet Recall Envoy

HONG KONG (UPI) — Vietnam has given in to an unprecedented U.S. expulsion order and recalled its chief representative to the United Nations, but it denied that Ambassador Dinh Ba Thi was a spy.

The allegedly was involved with U.S. Information Agency officer Ronald Humphrey, accused of leaking state secrets on Southeast Asia, and David Truong Hung Dzu, a Vietnamese who has been living in the United States for more than a decade. Both have been charged with espionage.

Knowles, responsibility for repairs lie with the family of the deceased. "One of the peculiarities of the law is that the family owns the graves," said Knowles. "It's like a little subdivision. The family buys the lots and we provide care for the upkeep of the streets and perpetual care."

A representative of the state's attorney's office said the law does not cover the return of remains in a grave or repair of vandalism. However, to damage a grave or tomb is a misdemeanor, according to the spokesman.

Mrs. Katherine Bellamy, the dead man's daughter-in-law, said she has been informed that the burial service was held Nov. 10, 1960 at the cemetery.

"We don't have the money to do that (repair the grave)" Knowles said today. "To tell you the truth, if they catch the ones who did it, they should talk to them about paying for it. We are really not able to."

Coal Miners, Bosses Talk

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal mediators, having spent the weekend talking to both sides in the longest U.S. coal strike in history, resumed their efforts today mid-morning to indicate a settlement was near.

United Mine Workers President Arthur J. Getz told the Senate (W.Va.) Committee on Energy it "pretty good" about chances of reaching a contract settlement by Tuesday. The strike began Dec. 6.

Miller said there are only a few areas of disagreement left with negotiators for the Illinois Coal Operators Association.

Negotiating sessions between the coal workers and the soft coal industry resumed Friday morning after getting close to agreement.

A spokesman for the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service said Sunday mediators had been "working with both sides separately since then — either in person or over the telephone."

It was expected that face-to-face talks would resume today. The mine's 20,000 members have been bargaining council, which means they are entitled to a 20 percent raise in the rank and file for a ratification vote, plans to meet Tuesday.

Miller said he would return to Washington in time to resume negotiations with the soft coal industry today.

The progress of the talks was being closely followed by

The Reason Why

Having feelings is one of the things that make us human... and our feelings need to be expressed. One of the reasons for funeral service is to enable family and friends to express their sorrow at a time of loss.

Did U.S. Personnel Wreck Missile Plane?

WARNER ROBINS, Ga. (UPI) — An investigation into vandalism of a Strategic Air Command B-52 bomber, reportedly armed with short-range attack missiles and nuclear warheads, is focusing on military personnel, according to the commander of Robins Air Force Base.

Col. Leslie Candee said Sunday the chances were "extremely remote" that an outsider could penetrate the area where the B-52 was parked. The damage was confined to the aircraft's electrical and hydraulic system.

Candee said the investigation involves SAC crew members, security guards, maintenance personnel and aircraft technicians at the base.

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (UPI) — Agents surprised a group of men unloading 20 tons of marijuana in the pre-dawn darkness Sunday, seizing the $12 million worth of drugs and arresting 13 suspects.

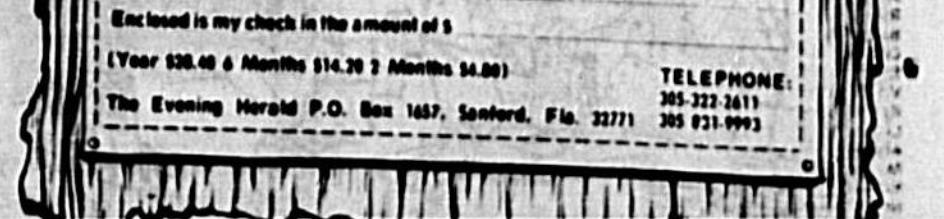

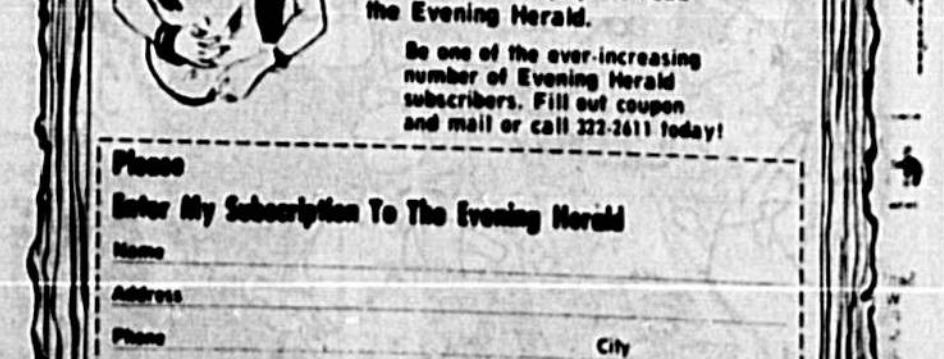

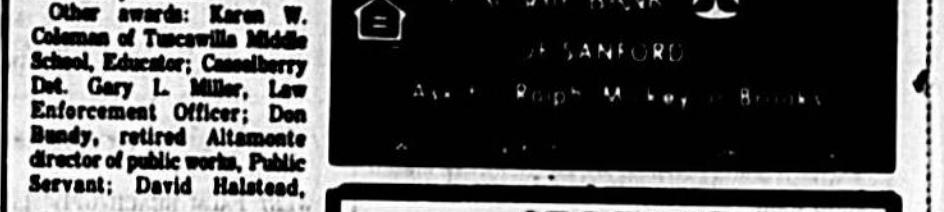

Some of the men escaped in the raid along the intercoastal Waterway and authorities are continuing their search today.

State Emergency Site For $2 Million?

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Florida is the only state not prepared to operate its state government if a major disaster strikes, says Herb Johnson, director of the state Disaster Preparedness Division.

Johnson and other officials are preparing a state emergency operation center to be used in case of a nuclear war, hurricane or other major disaster.

Officials said $200,000 would move into the center in case of disaster. These would include the governor, lieutenant governor, Cabinet and officials of the Civil Air Patrol, Florida Highway Patrol, Red Cross and Transportation Department.

The center also would serve as a permanent home for the state's disaster preparedness division, which now rents space in a building that officials say would be unable to survive a 10 years.

Jobless Drop: What Of It?

The drop in the unemployment rate to 6.4 percent is undoubtedly good news. The question is what are we to make of it? President Carter, for example, is making too much of it.

I think the slow impact of the programs we put into effect, that was disappointing for a while, is beginning to show up," he said recently.

One wonders whether President Carter would have us think that the $14 billion he poured into public job creation schemes — the largest amount for that purpose in history — are taking hold. And this result, despite the evidence — acknowledged by the Carter administration in December — that much of the funding has had little effect.

During the last year of the Ford administration, the unemployment rate dropped a full percentage point, and it did so without Mr. Ford's spilling billions of dollars into public jobs. We suspect that the natural recuperative juices of the economy were at work then, and they probably have been this past year, too.

Whatever, it is difficult to discern the effect of government policy on the unemployment rate, although politicians are obviously more adroit at this others.

The decline in the unemployment rate will influence the government's economic policy, and it is here also that the President is off-target.

Consider this exchange between Mr. Carter and Charles Schultz, his chief economic adviser. Mr. Carter asked whether, because of the new unemployment figure, it still was necessary to cut taxes by $25 billion.

Mr. Schultz replied: "The point was always (that) the tax cut was not to rescue an economy that was on the verge of recession or stagnation but to keep it going in the future."

The exchange indicates that Mr. Carter and Mr. Schultz are engaged in the business of trying to fix the economy so that it will perform in the short-term.

But clearly, it is the long-term that needs thinking about. The economy may seem all right on the surface, but the decline in the unemployment rate reinforces the impression. But in fact, beneath the surface are cracks.

Business is undercapitalized. Business is overregulated. Business and individuals are taxed without representation — via the hidden tax of inflation.

These cracks should be repaired now. One way to repair some of them would be to modify both the size and the shape of the proposed tax cut.

Congress should increase the total amount of the cut, and it should give more money back to middle and upper-income earners, and to business, than Mr. Carter has proposed.

We say Congress should do these things, for Congress seems the only institution now capable of considering them with any empathy. The administration apparently feels that the latest unemployment figure only confirms its economic thinking.

Meanwhile, the shocking unemployment rates afflicting blacks and Mexican-Americans are all but ignored in all this self-congratulation in Washington.

Clearly, the nation's business and government must, somehow, form a more effective partnership to bring these citizens into full production.

By MAX KIRKELIAN

On saying goodbye recently, a friend waved and said "bye". Always the impulsive reporter, my reply was, "what?"

He said that "bye" is an old railroad term for "that's it, boy, goodbye".

Indeed, I thought, how every group and government seems to have its own special language.

The most obvious example is the language of CB jargon. However, there are areas where language goes unnoticed by the average citizen.

Such a group is comprised of those diligent souls who work in government.

You know Seminole County is moving ahead when the people working in the courthouse begin to "adopt their own language".

Actually, they only speak a local dialect of a language unique to government employees on all levels. The language is most popularly known as "bureaucratism", although other interesting, but unpredictable names have been suggested.

Language may the language is Washington, D.C. No one seems quite sure when it was actually founded. Some say it began in the early part of this country when the government decided to institute a personal license test. That gave birth to the Internal Revenue Service, a function held for many terms as "bureaucratism".

Locally, little information is available to document the beginning of Seminole County government's bureaucratism dialect. Only one thing is certain: it exists.

The general public is victimized by this strange jargon in its everyday life and government services. However, members are subject to it daily.

Reporters and bureaucrats are in direct contact.

The primary function of a reporter is to inform readers clearly and concisely. The only reason I can figure bureaucratism came into being was as a method of confusing anyone who hears it.

As an example, I started a work session of the county commissioners during a discussion of the courthouse space study.

"If the faith of a standard could move mountains, I suppose I could do wonders for the County's transportation system," I thought.

"J.C. is not a reference to a deity," Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff told me later. "He works for the county road department."

Elise told me an agency that was "out, out" was not only out of its office, but out of the courthouse.

At the bureaucratism continued. Roger Neiswender, county administrator, made a reference to "J.C." in connection with county road improvements.

Elise told me an agency that was "out, out" was not only out of its office, but out of the courthouse.

At the bureaucratism continued. Roger Neiswender, county administrator, made a reference to "J.C." in connection with county road improvements.

"If the faith of a standard could move mountains, I suppose I could do wonders for the County's transportation system," I thought.

"J.C. is not a reference to a deity," Commissioner Kirchhoff told me later. "He works for the county road department."

I was almost afraid to ask about being "out, out."

"I did not know if it was something to talk about in public company."

Edna, Casey: Love Story Of Our Time Finally Ends

One of the great love stories of our time is now complete.

The passing of Edna Stengel drew no big headlines last weekend, unlike her husband Casey when he went to meet his maker back in 1975.

But I feel the loss, if only because I touched briefly upon the life of baseball's old professor while covering spring training baseball as a cub sports reporter for a Sarasota newspaper.

Stengel talked about his wife more than she knew. Not in a direct manner, because very little about Stengel was direct.

Reporters were constantly trying to get the inside story on Edna. Pennants, game-winning hits by Mantle, Berra, Howard or Shorow were getting all too commonplace.

"Well, me and Edna gonna sit in the shade on a park bench one of these days and just feed the pigeons," was the closest Stengel would come to divulging his personal life.

But there was a glow in his voice, and a respect in his eye when he mentioned Edna.

I never met the woman, but I know she was a lady. They were married for 32 years, and anyone who could stay married to a harried competitor like Casey Stengel for that long had to be made of quality iron.

Heaven may not be the same since Casey died. But perhaps now things can get back to normal with Edna there to keep an eye on Casey.

That spring day of 1960 is clear enough to have been yesterday. I was striping copy off the AP machine at the Sarasota News, one of the highlights of my daily tasks.

"Heynes, get out to the ball park and do a sidebar on today's game," followed the sports editor, whose bark was more severe than his bite.

"Who me?" I asked innocently. He answered with a thumb pointing toward the door.

That first assignment left chills up and down my back. Oh, the prospect of an assignment was nice, but the chills were the result of the Yankees being in town. I had figured on watching the last two innings from the stands. And the prospect of interviewing anyone in pinstripes was a dream come true for a lad who grew up listening to Dizzy Dean's radio accounts of the bubble-blowing rookie in center named Mickey Mantle.

Question Of Character

The Yankees were taking batting practice and the first thing I noticed was Mantle's neck, huge and powerful. Whitey Ford still looked like a kid. Roger Maris not yet having from reporters and Clete Boyer and Ralph Terry were checking out the blonde in the second row.

In the dugout, Casey was holding court. Half a dozen reporters were just breaking up and putting away their note pads.

Stengel looked at me, sized me over correctly and asked, "well, what do you want, to try out for the team or a story?"

Casey practically wrote my story, minus the Stengels.

"You didn't miss nothing, son," he said, motioning at the reporters now standing behind the batting cage. "I just told them what they wanted to hear... we will win the pennant."

"But what I didn't tell them — hey, write this down, now — is that we really gotta wait and see if the pitching is what we think it will be. Coates, Turley and Dittmar have to come through for it to be easy."

I don't recall how bad my first story was, but probably not too poor, because it made the front page with few minor editing changes.

The next day I was back in the wire room. There were other stories, many famous sports personalities. But none of them had the same nostalgic vibrations.

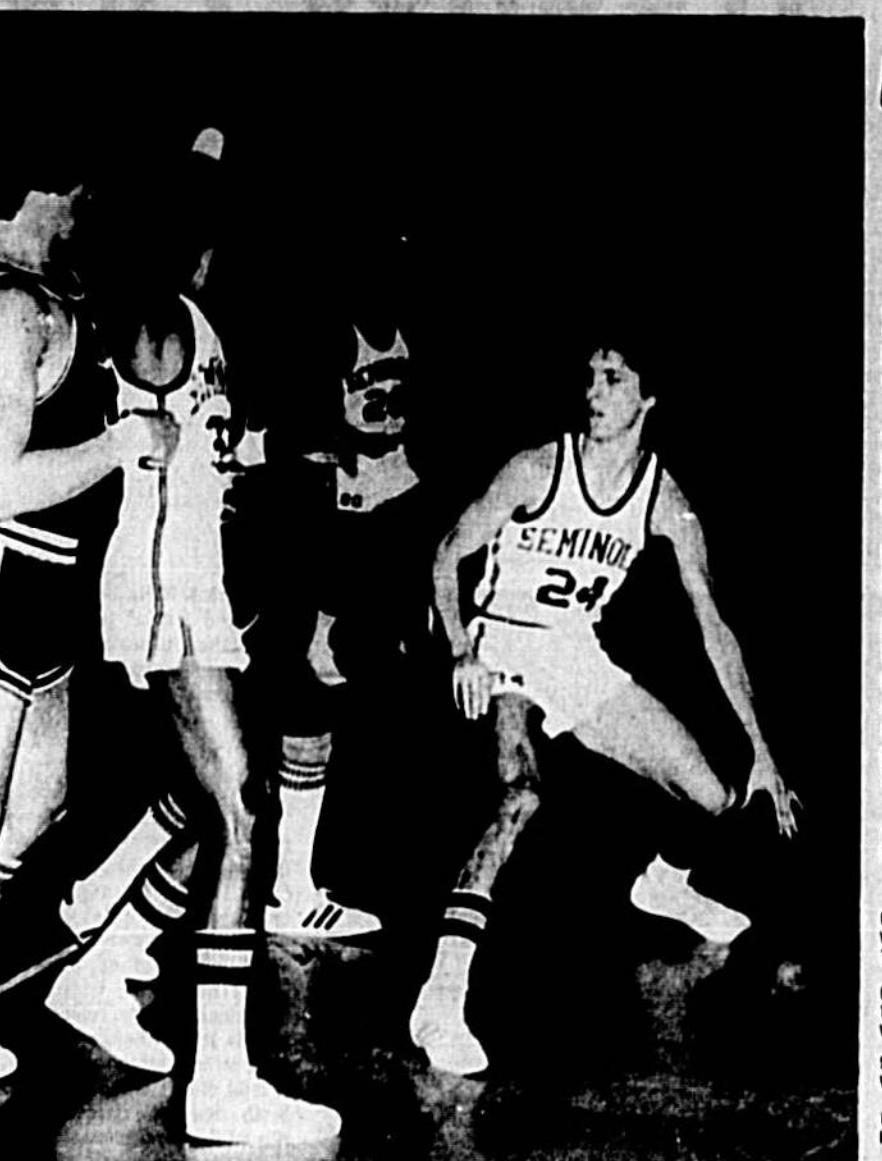

The pitching held up, and the Bombers won the pennant. And the meeting was the first of many with Stengel. The next time I saw him was at a Governor's dinner in Tampa, and I will never forget my elation over being recognized by him in a crowd. "Say, son, what did you ever do with those white suede shoes?" he asked. I had forgotten having worn them.

Which points out that whatever glamour there is in pinstripes, there's more in character.

That, I believe, is what made Casey and Edna inseparable even in death.
