Fishermen save manatee's life

Fishermen who accidentally struck a month-old manatee with their boat are being credited with saving the sea cow's life.

The fishermen scooped the injured animal out of the water and rushed it to a nearby state wildlife park.

The animal has been moved to Sea World in Orlando where animal experts say it is well on the road to recovery.

The manatee suffered cuts, a broken rib and a collapsed lung in the accident.

Post drops Golden Age Games

SANFORD — Post Bran Flakes will drop sponsorship of Sanford's Golden Age Games, Parks Director Jim Jernigan said yesterday.

In addition to dropping the Sanford games, Jernigan said Post will also drop sponsorship of five seniors competitions in Texas and California and the U.S. National Senior Olympics in St. Louis.

Post has sponsored the seniors athletic games for 14 years, Jernigan said.

Jernigan said the Golden Age Games would seek local community sponsorships for the competition, scheduled for Nov. 4 through Nov. 10.

The Golden Age Games is one of the oldest seniors games in the nation. The games include a broad range of events, from swimming, track and tennis to ballroom dancing, checkers and pancake races.

McClanahan to seek reelection

SANFORD — City Commissioner A.A. McClanahan announced Monday he will seek reelection when his term expires this year.

McClanahan, a land developer and executive director of Seminole Self-Reliant Housing, was elected in 1988. He served two previous terms from 1972 to 1979.

McClanahan represents District 3, which roughly includes an area east of Mellonville to the city's eastern city limits.

The city primary election will be Dec. 4, with a runoff election scheduled for Dec. 18.

Bond dead; now what?

Voters send county school officials back to the drawing board

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Following Tuesday's resounding defeat of the school board's $520 million bond referendum, school board chairman Ann Neiswender said the board will have to start from scratch with a new school plant survey to determine the extent of their needs.

The failure leaves the district with the money to build only two elementary schools within the next year rather than the four that would have been constructed had the bond issue been approved.

"We'll have to go with the two which will help relieve the most severe overcrowding problems," said Neiswender.

Tentative plans call for one of those schools to be built in Oviedo, to relieve Stenstrom and Lawton elementary schools, and the other in Heathrow, to relieve Wilson Elementary School.

"That's where our most pressing needs are," she said.

The two schools will be completed sometime during the 1991-92 school year, Neiswender said.

Supt. Bob Hughes said that the board's only solution to the overcrowding elsewhere will be double sessions in many elementary schools.

"People who voted against the bond were not here 10 years ago when we had double sessions," he said. "They did not see how bad it was for our children."

Neiswender predicted that the double sessions would be "widespread" by the fall of 1991.

Neiswender said that the district will concern itself with preparing a new educational plant survey as soon as possible and formulating plans to levy the optional two-mill tax.

That two-mill increase will raise property taxes on a $75,000 home with homestead exemption by $100 per year. Had the bond issue passed, the taxes on that same home would have been

Voters just say 'no' to $520 million debt

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — Seminole County voters shouted a resounding "no" to the school board's proposed $520 million bond referendum Tuesday.

Nearly 29 percent of the county's registered voters cast ballots in the special election.

The controversial bond issue, which would have paid for the construction of 27 new schools, the renovation of the existing 43 school facilities, a $17 million administrative building and $31 million worth of computer and other educational technology, was defeated by a 70.5 to 29.5 percent margin.

School board chairman Ann Neiswender did not expect the final results to be so lopsided. "I expected the percentages to be the other way," she said. "I thought the voters of Seminole County would vote for the long-range plan, but obviously they don't like the plan."

Schools superintendent Robert Hughes said he had been more "cautiously optimistic," but he was still surprised at the results. "Everyone thought it would be much closer," he said.

Neiswender said she believes the board's next

Controversial movie expected to draw protests

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — Demonstrators plan to picket tonight's Seminole Community College's presentation of the movie "The Last Temptation of Christ."

The movie will begin at 7:30 p.m. and small protests are expected to begin earlier, according to a representative of radio personality Rev. George Crossley.

Originally scheduled to be shown in the fine arts auditorium, the film will be shown in room L-001 of the school's library. The library room holds fewer than 100 people.

The movie is being shown as a part of the SCC Winter Film Series and is being used in conjunction with a humanities class titled the Art of Film.

School officials said that a wide variety of movies, from "2001: A Space Odyssey" to "Time Bandits" are shown as part of the curriculum in several English and humanities classes.

"The Last Temptation of Christ," directed by Martin Scorsese, portrays Jesus Christ as a human plagued by temptations and sexual desire.

Christian groups, calling the movie "blasphemous," have protested the film since before it was released by Universal Studios in 1988.

"It does not portray Christ truthfully," said Crossley, a radio personality for WTLN in Orlando. "It is not the Christ that I know in my heart."

Crossley objects to the showing of the movie without any regard to the Christian community's point of view, he said.

SCC officials are not expecting an unusually large crowd for this evening's show.

"I think the controversy is not as big as it once was," faculty advisor Gary Diler of the Student Governance Association said. The SGA is partially responsible for which movies are chosen for the film series.

County commission endorses proposal of treatment-not-jail war against drugs

By J. MARK BARFIELD

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioners yesterday pledged support for a proposal to increase treatment and rehabilitation for convicted drug offenders.

Commissioners directed Acting County Manager Bob McMillan to form a committee of judicial, law enforcement and social services officials to determine the costs and methods of creating a "Court Alternatives" program to meet drug crimes with treatment instead of a jail sentence.

Chief among the proposals is the construction of a work-release center separate from the county jail.

Seminole Chief Circuit Judge O.H. Eaton Jr. told commissioners the Florida law enforcement agencies will receive $17.8 million in federal funds to combat drug traffickers, Attorney General Richard Thornburgh said Tuesday.

"We're not committed to it yet, but it's possible we might get some of the funds," Seminole Sheriff's Lt. Donald Eslinger said today. Eslinger who heads the City County Investigative Bureau, the area's drug task force, said grants would have to be applied for and that the procedure is a long process. He said federal funding may also require matching funding on the local level. Eslinger said the increase in the funds for this year is part of President George Bush's plan to beef up the war on drugs.

"That's a drop in the bucket," Seminole County Sheriff John Polk said of the $17.8 million. "But if it's distributed down to where it's really needed, that's great."

"The war on drugs must be fought at all levels — local, state, federal and international," said Thornburgh.

Atlantis finally gets off the ground

By ROB STEIN
UPI Science Editor

CAPE CANAVERAL — The military crew of the shuttle Atlantis blasted into orbit Wednesday, streaking up the Eastern Seaboard like a fiery comet in a spectacular nighttime launch visible from Florida to Delaware.

Carrying a top-secret military satellite in its cargo bay, the $2 billion spaceplane vaulted away from launch pad 39A at 2:50 a.m. EST, six days and five delays behind schedule, and majestically thundered toward the heavens atop incandescent jets of fire.

"Roll program, Houston!" commander John

"J.O." Creighton radioed mission control in Houston as the 4.5-million-pound spaceship wheeled about to line up on a trajectory carrying it closer to the East Coast than ever before.

Running exactly two hours late because of rain and low clouds, Atlantis knifed through a thin cloud deck and arced northeast over the Atlantic Ocean toward an orbit allowing its hush-hush satellite payload to fly over more than 80 percent of the Soviet Union.

"It was the brightest object in the sky," said Mike Robertson, 29, of Charleston, S.C. "It was unmistakable."

A series of delays in launching the shuttle Atlantis will not affect the nation's space program for the rest of the year if a liftoff can be made this week, NASA Administrator Richard H. Truly said Tuesday.

Truly held a news conference and spoke to the Economic Club of Detroit, saying America is beginning an era of unprecedented accomplishment in space.

"Since our return to space flight following the recovery from Challenger, we have completed eight superbly successful space shuttle missions ... and Atlantis is on the launch pad at this very moment."

Trash utensils issued to group

From staff reports

SANFORD — The city is offering free trash pickup, trash bags and trash sticks for residents who participate in the Make Sanford Shine campaign, a month-long effort to rid the downtown area of trash.

The city has made the offer for free trash pickup during March to encourage residents to spruce up their neighborhoods and other areas of the city. At a meeting of Make Sanford Shine organizers today, the city public works department issued trash bags and trash sticks made by the department for the cleanup project to community leaders pledging their labor.

The cleanup will target the area between Lake Monroe and 13th Street, from Mellonville Avenue to French Avenue.

The campaign begins tomorrow and will culminate March 31 with a cleanup blitz throughout downtown, when community organizations and local residents will meet at the Sanford Women's Club, 309 S. Oak Ave., at 8 a.m.

For more information on Make Sanford Shine, call project chairperson Martha Yancey at 323-0794. For free trash pickup this month, call the city at 330-6681.

School board approves nine-month calendar

By VICKI DeBORNIER
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Despite talk about a longer school year and year-round school, the Seminole County School Board approved yesterday a standard nine-month, 180-day calendar.

Classes will begin next year on Wednesday, Aug. 22 and end on Tuesday, June 11.

The first two grading periods will be 45 days long, the third would last 44 days and the last would cover a 46 day span.

The winter break is scheduled to begin Monday, Dec. 17, with students returning to classes on Thursday, Jan. 3.

Board vice-chairman Nancy Warren had argued to shorten the winter break by three days, with students attending classes until Wednesday, Dec. 19 and returning to school on Wednesday, Jan. 2. She also proposed the school year open a day earlier, on Tuesday, Aug. 21. The pared down winter holiday would allow classes to end for the year on Wednesday, June 5.

"I just thought it would be better to end the year a few days earlier in June so there could be more preparation time for summer school," Warren said.

A survey of teachers, students, parents and administrators by the Seminole County Council of PTAs showed, however, that most preferred to have Jan. 2 as a non-attendance day. That same survey showed teachers preferred a full two weeks off during the winter to prepare for upcoming mid-term exams and the rest of the school year.

The approved calendar includes a two-day break in mid-January following the conclusion of the second nine weeks. The break includes a non-attendance day in celebration of Martin Luther King Day on Monday, Jan. 21.

Monday, Feb. 18 will also be a non-attendance day in honor of Presidents' Day.

The calendar approved yesterday allowed for a four- or five-day week option for the summer schedule. Under the five-day week plan, classes would begin June 24 and end August 5; on the four-day week plan they would begin the same day but end on August 1. In both cases July 4 would be a non-attendance day.

Europe on fast forward

Foreign ministers of NATO and the Warsaw Pact went to Ottawa the other day to discuss an "open skies" agreement for verifying arms control treaties now in the works. They made progress in that area, but most of the session dwelt on larger questions, and in the end, the Soviet Union surprised everyone by giving ground on American proposals that would reshape Europe closer to Washington's design than Moscow's.

In a surprising turnaround, the Soviets agreed to the Bush administration's proposal for reduced troop levels in Europe that Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev had rejected only days before. Perhaps in recognition of the fact that the numbers — 225,000 Americans and 195,000 Soviets — may become irrelevant very soon anyway, Gorbachev agreed that the United States could keep 30,000 extra troops in areas peripheral to Central Europe, such as Britain or Italy.

At the same time, the Kremlin agreed to a U.S. proposal for a two-stage process of German unification, clearing the way for talks between the two Germans, following next month's elections in East Germany, on the shape of a unified state. The Germans would then join the four victorious wartime allies — the United States, Soviet Union, France and Britain — in talks aimed at producing agreement on a security plan that would firmly commit Germany to recognition of its border with Poland and that would determine military force levels, German and non-German, in the new unified state.

Moscow still formally objects to the inclusion of a unified Germany in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, but that objection seems to be giving way to ambivalence generated on the one hand by pressure from Eastern Europe for the removal of all Soviet troops from the region and, on the other, by the historic Russian fear of a strong, unrestrained Germany.

West Germany's solid 40-year democratic record argues against such fears; it reinforces West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher's pledge, repeated at Ottawa, that "We seek a European Germany, not a German Europe." As both Western and some Eastern European leaders have argued, a unified Germany solidly anchored in Western institutions such as NATO and the European Community is far less likely to embark on foreign adventures than an isolated, neutral German state.

The Bush administration deserves credit for its troop reduction proposal, for sticking to it in the face of initial Soviet rejection and for abandoning its reticence on German unity by offering a formula to achieve it. These initiatives were impelled by events in Central Europe, just as Moscow's were driven by those same events and by economic problems and separatist threats inside the Soviet Union.

Yet statesmanship doesn't emerge from a vacuum.

Leaders in Moscow and in Washington are constantly adapting their thinking to reality. That may seem obvious, yet for four decades of Cold War it was not the way things were done. In that context, their response to events is no small thing.

Virile females and a new death threat

Until now, a great debate has been raging over which group is an "endangered species" — white males (due to the expanding emphasis on pluralism in the work place) or black males (due to a deadly combination of self-destruction and social ostracism). Argue no longer. A major cigarette company has resolved the question. The new endangered species is a heretofore uncategorized species known as the "virile female."

If R.J. Reynolds has its way, this group could be targeted for extinction. Maybe your immediate coterie of friends includes one or more VFers. If not, you are a culturally deprived snob whose membership in the Sunday Morning Wine-Tasting, Quiche-Sampling and Caviar-Nibbling Society of Middle-Aged Bibliophilic Conversationists could be subject to revocation. Your group — the VFers (virile independent thinkers) — has a problem. It thinks for itself. Virile females are susceptible to being conned and brainwashed. That's why R.J. Reynolds is going after the virile females in an effort to expand its share of the SBS (Suicide by Smoking) market.

To attract virile females to its cash registers, R.J. Reynolds is developing a new cigarette, Dakota, that neatly fits into the virile-female mindset. Whatever your feelings about cigarette smoking, R.J. Reynolds deserves your respect. It epitomizes the never-say-die spirit that built one of the world's most dynamic economies, able to withstand any catastrophe except Japanese competition and hostile takeovers.

By choosing to market Dakota, a resilient R.J. Reynolds bounced back from the Uptown debacle. The company recently tried to market Uptown, a proposed new cigarette aimed almost exclusively at African-Americans. But a coalition of Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan, the American Cancer Society and a ticked-off African-American community shot down the R.J. Reynolds strategy faster than an American P-47 in a dogfight with a German World War II fighter plane. They sent Uptown downtown.

But not to worry. Dakota will soon be taking the "A-train" back. Still, you've got to give the company credit for being truly egalitarian. They make no distinctions between race or sex at R.J. Reynolds. If they can't persuade dumb black people to self-destruct, hey, how about dumb white broads. That kind of noble commitment to democracy causes my eyes to water. So what if the company fattens its wallets on the skinny lives of lung cancer patients? The cigarette industry provides employment, and that's better than welfare. Isn't it?

But who is this virile female? According to a market survey, she is a white woman of 18-20, a non-smoking blue-collar worker with a limited education and a devotee of TV's "Roseanne," drag races, tractor pulls, wrestling and heavy-duty libidinal activity with her boyfriend. If virile females are the future of America, the Japanese won't have to bother getting a Sumo-hold on the U.S. economy. They'll simply sit by quietly and watch us go down the tube.

I don't count a lot of R.J. Reynolds' virile females among my acquaintance. But the census says there are 14 million of them: that's a lot of virility. Somewhere in this country, I hope there is another coalition that loves virile females enough to help bury Dakota.

DAVID S. BRODER

Put sanity back into elections

WASHINGTON — Last month, I warned you that I was about to become a crank on the subject of corruptly financed and crudely manipulative campaigns. An exceptional number of you wrote in to say, "Pour it on." Apparently you share my fed-up feeling about incumbents tapping huge amounts of interest-group money to intimidate possible challengers and assure reelection. Apparently you are tired of being assaulted with negative ads on matters of dubious relevance and want to hear your real concerns intelligently discussed by those seeking your votes.

And apparently you think, too, that the press and television need to clean up their act and help voters understand what candidates believe and propose to do.

I'm back today to tell you that we are not alone — that many people in politics and in journalism share that anger and that determination to act.

Inside a month, we should know how serious Congress is about passing campaign-finance legislation. The backstage negotiations have been going on a long time. The people pushing this cause have been House Republicans under Minority Leader Bob Michel (R-Ill.) and Senate Democrats under Majority Leader George Mitchell (D-Maine). We'll know soon if the necessary bipartisan and White House support are available.

Even if Congress acts, the great turnout will continue unless we find a way to make candidates talk about the voters' concerns, instead of spending their money on TV ads designed to blacken each other's reputations. The assault-weapon ads of 1988 and 1989 are already spinning off clones in 1990. In the Texas Senate race, for instance, state Sen. Hugh Parmer (D) open with a radio ad that spent 57 seconds in ripping Sen. Phil Gramm's (R) abortion views, using highly emotional language, and giving listeners exactly three words — "I'm pro-choice" — about his own stand.

Some candidates, however, are acting much more responsibly. In Iowa, Sen. Tom Harkin (D) and his challenger, Rep. Tom Tauke (R), already have agreed to debates on seven major issues. In Michigan, where gubernatorial candidates receive public financing, state Sen. John Engler, the likely Republican nominee, has sponsored a bill, passed by a bipartisan majority in the state senate, to make participation in eight televised debates a condition for receiving the taxpayers' money.

Of course, it does little good for the candidates to talk substance if the press and television focus on personal trivia. Rep. Bill Schuette (R), a Michigan senatorial hopeful, set a good example when he publicly criticized the priorities of the media in his state. The press and TV "jumped on the story" when Roll Call, a Capitol Hill semi-weekly, named Schuette one of the "Hunks of the Hill." But those same news organizations did only short stories or none at all about his recommendations on the drug problem, probably the voters' biggest concern, after he made an official trip to the Andean countries. Schuette called it "insulting to the voters," and he was right.

Happily, the media performance is better than that case might suggest. Here are some examples from the last few weeks:

Ron Casey of the Birmingham News wrote an editorial reminding readers that four years ago the focus in "the most expensive, most negative" campaign Alabama had seen was the irrelevant fact that Gov. Guy Hunt (R) "doesn't have a college degree and once was an Amway salesman."

"If we allow the consultants and pollsters to set the agenda" for the 1990 race, he wrote, voters will hear the same "kind of sound and fury...There are too many real problems in Alabama" to permit that, he said. And then he outlined five concerns he and his readers take seriously, challenging the candidates to treat them with equal seriousness.

M. Charles Bakst, political columnist for the Providence Journal, set a noteworthy example with a piece alerting readers to the track record, including misleading negative ads, of the consulting firm of Robert Squier and Carter Eskew hired by Sen. Claiborne Pell (D-R.I.) for his campaign. A shot across the bow like that can make consultants think twice about using the same shoddy tactics again.

My paper, The Washington Post, has made a year-long commitment to monitor campaign advertising. Paul Taylor did a hard-hitting first piece last week, including a "story-board" graphic detailing the distortions in a 1989 New Jersey gubernatorial ad. Taylor's story was a deliberately blunt message to the consultants to expect similar scrutiny by The Post of their handiwork this year.

On the television side, Timothy J. Russert, head of the NBC News Washington bureau, recently told the Barone Center at Harvard that in the next presidential campaign, political commercials should be dissected weekly on the evening news.

It does little good for the candidates to talk substance if the press and television focus on personal trivia.

Diplomat's children get pricey education

WASHINGTON — If you want the best education for your child, and you want someone else to pay for it, join the diplomatic corps.

American diplomats serving abroad get a $14,900 per year, per child education stipend — three times the amount that taxpayers pay to educate children at home or children of military personnel stationed overseas.

The high rate is apparently based on the lofty notion that children of foreign service officers are entitled to attend the best boarding schools.

Never mind that the State Department policy, worth no more than the paper it is written on, says the children should attend the "least expensive adequate schools nearest to the posts."

In a fit of philanthropy, Congress designed an elaborate system of fringe benefits to encourage overseas service. In addition to cash bonuses for hazardous duty and stipends for schools, diplomats get vacation, sick leave, home leave and rest and recuperation leave.

An internal State Department audit obtained by our associate Jim Lynch indicates that the State Department has gone overboard with incentives.

Along with the sky-high education stipend, auditors found an array of inflated perks. Diplomats are entitled to a dizzying 84 possible allowances which cost the government $1.3 billion a year.

Only nine of the 84 were audited in the recent study. The auditors came away skeptical about some of the alleged hardships at some overseas posts.

Diplomats can pocket up to a 25 percent salary bonus just for working in outposts where "unusual hardships exist." The auditors had their doubts about whether the 25 percent bonus was warranted for 127 of the 145 posts that qualify for hardship pay. The government pays $58 million in hardship bonuses alone each year.

The audit won't warm any hearts in the diplomatic corps, but it will vindicate the people at the Pentagon. Military personnel have long complained about the second-class treatment they get on overseas assignments when compared to diplomats.

No issue is more divisive than that of schools. Children of the soldiers overseas almost always attend Defense Department schools. Those schools try, but don't always succeed at giving students an education on a par with stateside public schools. That program costs about $5,000 per pupil per year.

Our sources say some diplomats look down their noses at the Defense Department schools and instead take advantage of their $14,900 stipend to send the kids to fancy boarding schools back home. The auditors found that the State Department set the stipend after averaging the cost of 21 private schools overseas — two thirds of which were pricey European boarding schools.

The bureau chief for the State Department's African posts bristled at the suggestion that the school stipend should be "cost beneficial" to the government. "This is an insult to employees," Irving Hicks wrote in response to the audit.

On the contrary, it is the taxpayers who are insulted when public servants expect an education three times more expensive than the children of the people paying the bills.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Report: Infant mortality could worsen

WASHINGTON — Infant mortality in America could increase because of social problems such as poverty, drug use and lack of access to medical care, the National Commission to Prevent Infant Mortality reported Wednesday.

The congressional commission said infant deaths declined throughout the 20th century thanks largely to scientific advances, but progress "stalled" in the 1980s and "infant mortality disaster areas" emerged in the inner cities.

Preliminary data indicates infant mortality and low birthweights are rising in Washington, D.C., and Los Angeles County, the report said, and other areas could follow as increasing numbers of babies are born to women who use drugs, suffer from AIDS or go without adequate prenatal care.

Chairman: Serious crimes at U.S. thrifts

WASHINGTON — William Seidman, chairman of the government agency taking over insolvent thrifts, estimated that "serious criminal activity" took place at 80 percent of the more than 300 seized savings and loans.

Seidman, who heads the Resolution Trust Corporation created last year to help untangle the S&L crisis, told a House Ways and Means oversight subcommittee hearing Tuesday that a special "fraud squad" has been formed to prosecute culprits.

100 ABA members resign over abortion

CHICAGO — More than 100 members of the American Bar Association have resigned to protest a resolution on abortion adopted by the ABA's House of Delegates earlier this month, an ABA spokesman said.

Richard Collins, director of policy and presidential communications, said ABA Treasurer Joseph Nolan of New Jersey was among those who have notified the ABA they intended to resign. Reports said John A. Carpenter, president-elect of the Pennsylvania Bar Association who is a member of the House of Delegates, also has submitted his resignation.

The resolution said: "Be it resolved that the ABA recognizes the fundamental rights of privacy and equality guaranteed by the United States Constitution and opposes legislation or other governmental action that interferes with the confidential relationship between a pregnant woman and her physician or with the decision to terminate pregnancy at any time before the fetus is capable of independent life as determined by her physician or thereafter when termination of the pregnancy is necessary to protect the woman's life or health."

Nightclub expands 'lexicon of sleaze'

TOLEDO, Ohio — Not only did the Deja Vu nightclub win its battle over erotic dancing with a zealous prosecutor, but the judge gave credit to the striptease joint for contributing to "our ever-burgeoning lexicon of sleaze."

Deja Vu caught the attention of Lucas County prosecutor Anthony Pizza because of its popular "couch dancing" attraction that involves semi-nude dancers wriggling above fully-clothed customers who lie on a short couch.

County Judge William Skow, in a biting 21-page ruling Tuesday, refused to close the club and instead castigated Pizza for his "publicity stunt" prosecution.

Skow said the club benefited from the publicity but expressed hope it would eventually close its doors.

"If so, then Deja Vu's significance in Toledo's entertainment chronicle will be notable only for having added the term couch dancing to our ever-burgeoning lexicon of sleaze," Skow said.

Exxon indicted in Alaska oil spill

United Press International

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — A grand jury threw "the environmental book" at Exxon for causing the nation's worst oil spill, indicting the world's largest oil company on criminal charges after a controversial plea bargain fell apart.

The federal grand jury handed up the indictments Tuesday after negotiations that would have prevented criminal charges broke down.

Exxon was charged with knowingly employing unqualified and incompetent crewmen who ran the supertanker Exxon Valdez into a rocky reef, where it spilled nearly 11 million gallons of oil that polluted pristine Alaska waters and killed tens of thousands of birds and animals.

Exxon faces a maximum $700 million in fines — double the amount of the estimated environmental damage — plus a restitution order if convicted of all five charges.

"This is an indictment that throws the environmental book at Exxon," Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said in Washington. "The Justice Department believes that the pristine environment in Alaska has been severely damaged due to the negligence and unlawful conduct by Exxon Corp. and Exxon Shipping.

"By pursuing criminal charges in this case, the federal government is sending a strong signal that environmental crimes will not be tolerated," Thornburgh said.

The indictment names Exxon Corp. and its subsidiary, Exxon Shipping Co., in all five charges. No individuals were named in the indictment nor were any other companies, but the grand jury is not finished and resumes work next month.

Exxon was charged with misdemeanor violations of the Clean Water Act, the Refuse Act, the Migratory Bird Treaty Act, and felony violations of the Ports and Waterways Safety Act and the Dangerous Cargo Act.

The indictment came after negotiations broke down over a plea bargain in which Exxon would have avoided indictment by agreeing to pay $550 million into a restoration fund, plus a substantial criminal fine.

A draft agreement of the plea bargain called for a seven-year installment plan payment in which a White House administrator would manage the Exxon restoration fund. The agreement would have resolved Exxon's criminal case and placed a four-year moratorium on federal civil suits.

Alaska Attorney General

Douglas Baily said the plea bargain would have been "a very, very favorable deal for Exxon."

But what some called a "sweetheart deal" caused a firestorm of protest in Washington and Alaska, and Gov. Steve Cowper emerged from a meeting Tuesday with Thornburgh to applaud its collapse.

"We need to recover whatever it takes to restore our environment to what it was before the Exxon Valdez," Cowper said.

The Exxon Valdez left the designated shipping lanes late on the night of March 23 on a detour to avoid icebergs in Prince William Sound. Capt. Joseph Hazelwood — now on trial on state criminal charges including operating the tanker while intoxicated — had gone to his cabin. He left the ship in the hands of a third mate.

Northrop pleads guilty; fined $17 million

United Press International

LOS ANGELES — Northrop Corp. pleaded guilty Tuesday to 34 felonies and agreed to pay $17 million to settle a defense fraud case involving sales of defective weapons and parts to the military. It was one of the largest fines ever levied in a defense fraud case.

U.S. District Judge Pamela Rymmer accepted the pleas and dismissed 141 remaining charges against Northrop, including allegations against two management executives from Northrop's Precision Products Division in Massachusetts.

A former employee at a lower level of Northrop's management tier, Clarence Gonsalves, was allowed to plead guilty to eight charges alleging he overruled the falsification of tests on Air Force-bound Cruise missiles at Northrop's Western Services Department in El Monte and Pomona.

Gonsalves faces a maximum sentence of three years in prison and a $1.28 million fine when he is sentenced May 1. About 150 charges remaining against him were expected to be dismissed.

Prosecutors also anticipated dismissing charges against another Northrop employee, Cheryl Hannan, a former quality assurance supervisor at WSD.

Barry drug arraignment set

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Mayor Marion Barry, facing federal drug and perjury charges, slipped into the city following a month of treatment at substance abuse clinics in Florida and South Carolina.

Barry, 53, who arrived in Washington Tuesday under a cloak of secrecy, is to appear in federal district court Wednesday for arraignment on three felony counts of perjury and five misdemeanor counts of cocaine possession.

The three-term mayor was indicted on Feb. 15 by a federal grand jury and he is expected to plead innocent to all counts at his arraignment before U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson.

Barry's lawyer, R. Kenneth Mundy, said Barry was in Washington, and he was expected to appear at the arraignment. Mundy has said he would seek a jury trial and proceedings could start this spring.

The arraignment was to be Barry's first public appearance since a speech on Jan. 21, three days after an FBI sting at the downtown Vista International Hotel resulted in his arrest on drug possession charges.

Barry was lured to the Vista by Rasheeda Moore, reported to be a former lover of the mayor, and an FBI affidavit said Moore and Barry were videotaped smoking crack cocaine in the woman's hotel room.

The investigation of Barry was prompted by an aborted raid on a room in another downtown hotel, the Ramada Inn, in December 1988 when police learned that the mayor was in the room with Charles Lewis, the target of the raid.

Koop says AIDS policy a decade late

United Press International

WASHINGTON — In a rebuke to the administrations in which he served, former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop told a House subcommittee that a federal policy on AIDS is "almost 10 years overdue."

Koop said Tuesday current education efforts have not been as successful as hoped and called it "incredible" that the government has not begun work on projecting the costs of the epidemic and figuring out who will pay them.

Saying he is worried Americans are becoming complacent about the deadly disease, Koop warned the epidemic of acquired immune deficiency syndrome is not over and the "number of rural cases will exceed those found in the urban areas" in this decade.

Koop appeared before the House subcommittee on health and the environment to support a bill proposed by the panel's chairman, Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., to expand Medicaid coverage for people infected with the AIDS virus, which destroys the body's natural disease-fighting ability.

"Unless there is a congressional intervention, the situation will only get worse," said Koop, who stepped down as surgeon general Oct. 1 after serving in the Reagan and Bush administrations.

"We don't have a federal policy on AIDS, period," Koop added later in the hearing. "There are ample opportunities for the Congress, for the executive branch, to get together and establish an AIDS policy in this

C. Everett Koop country and I think it's almost 10 years overdue."

Warriors whip Lions

By TONY DeSORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

OVIEDO — It doesn't take a great baseball tactician to figure out what happens when you give a team 10 hits, six walks and six errors. Unless you're undeservedly lucky, you get whipped.

And that's exactly what happened to the Oviedo Lions on Tuesday night, when they played the West Orange Warriors in the delayed championship game of the Oviedo Invitational. The Warriors gladly took advantage of Oviedo's largesse to win 11-4.

"Right now, we're in a little bit of a rut," said Oviedo coach Mike Farrell. "We played an excellent team tonight. Right now, they're playing good and we're not. They just did a number on us tonight. We'll come back from this. We have too good a team to shy down very long." The first half of Tuesday night's game was played like a championship contest as West Orange starting pitcher Randy Doerges worked on a no-hitter through the first three innings. Oviedo's only baserunner reached on an error and he was immediately erased when he was caught stealing.

Meanwhile, Oviedo starter Danny Mello was throwing the ball hard but having trouble with his location as the Warriors pushed across single runs in the first and second innings. "Danny wasn't able to get the pitches where he wanted them," said Farrell. "For him to be effective, he has to get the ball in his spots. He wasn't able to tonight. But maybe the next time will be his time." Oviedo was able to tie the score with two runs in the top of the fourth inning as Jason Hulsh poked an RBI double, then scored the tying run on a single by Kevin Twigg. But the Lions' momentum was short-lived as four of the first five batters Mello faced in the bottom of the fourth reached base.

Brian McCluskey came on to pitch and got Oviedo out of the inning, but not before giving up a two-run single that made the score 6-2.

Lake Howell shuts down Seminoles

From staff reports

CASSELBERRY — Using a six-run first inning and three pitchers, the Lake Howell Silver Hawks cruised to an 11-0 shutout of Seminoles in a high school slow-pitch softball contest Tuesday at Lake Howell High School.

After retiring the visiting Seminoles in the top of the first inning, the Silver Hawks exploded for six runs on three hits in the bottom half of the inning to take control of the game.

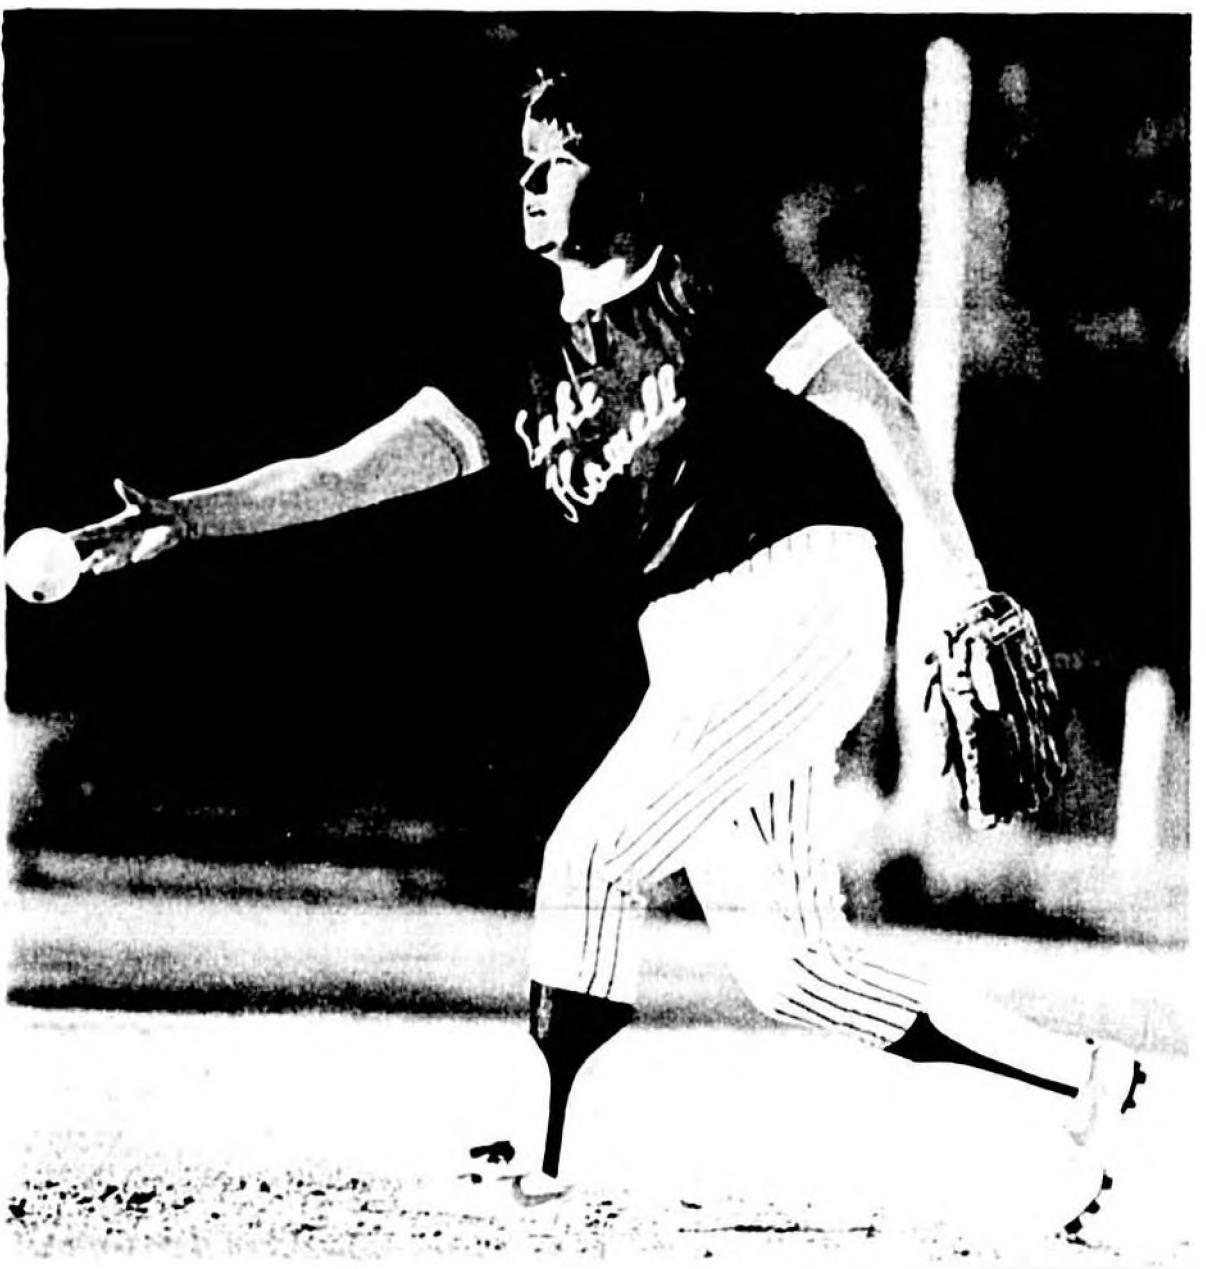

That would be more than enough offense for Lake Howell as starting pitcher Lee-Anne Trimble and relievers Diann Lowe and Jodi Pinyan combined to shut out the Tribe on four hits. Lowe, who worked the third through fifth innings, was the winning pitcher.

"Seminoles is much improved," said Lake Howell coach Jo Luciano. "It's nice to have three pitchers to choose from." Trimble, the only senior of the three, was injured most of last year. When she went down, Lowe, a junior, stepped in and was the Hawks' starting pitcher. Pinyan, another junior, comes to Lake Howell as a transfer from Virginia.

After taking a 6-0 lead in the first, the Silver Hawks bats were silent for until the fourth inning, when Lake Howell scored three more runs on five hits. The final two runs came in the fifth inning.

Trimble led the offense by going 2 for 2 with three RBI. Christy Dees and Kat Foldeak each had two RBI.

SANFORD — Brevard Community College scored five runs in the top of the seventh inning to come from behind and defeat Seminole Community College 5-2 to earn a split of their softball doubleheader at Raider Field Tuesday.

SCC had won the opener 11-3 as All-American Kim King went 3 for 4 and blasted a long, three-run home run.

The split takes SCC to 11-7 on the season. The Raiders are at home on Friday to play Florida Community College at Jacksonville Friday at 3 p.m. in

The loss was the Raiders fifth in a row and drops their record to 1-10 overall and 1-3 in the conference. SCC will now go on the road for a pair of conference contests,

Magic make free throws down stretch, end losing skid

United Press International

ORLANDO — The Orlando Magic, mired in their second longest losing streak this season, connected on eight of nine free throws in the last 32 seconds to secure a 115-109 victory Tuesday over the Charlotte Hornets.

Veteran guard Reggie Theus hit five of six of those free throws and scored a game-high 31 points, enabling the Magic to snap a seven-game losing streak before a sellout crowd of 15,077.

Jerry Reynolds delighted Magic fans with a three-point play that broke a 103-103 tie and gave Orlando the lead it never relinquished. The closest Charlotte came after that was two points, with Randolph Keys providing a three-pointer that trimmed Orlando's lead to 109-107 with 18 seconds showing.

Theus ended the suspense with four consecutive free throws that put the Magic ahead 114-107 with eight seconds left.

The victory was Orlando's first since the Magic dealt the Chicago Bulls a 135-129 overtime defeat on Feb. 14. Six of Orlando's seven losses were on the road.

Charlotte entered the contest with only one win in 24 games on the road, but the Hornets appeared poised for victory until the home stretch.

Eric Reid supplied 10 of his 24 points in the third period as the Hornets built a 80-74 advantage.

Orlando rookies Michael Ansley and Nick Anderson sparked a rally that gave the Magic a 93-91 lead early in the fourth period. Anderson scored eight points in the final period.

Rex Chapman's late three-pointer propelled Charlotte to a 101-97 edge before 16,000 fans. Theus and rookie Moulton Wiley went to work to wrap up the win.

Antibiotic therapy may prevent hysterectomy

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 33-year-old with pelvic inflammatory disease and have severe pain for one to seven days each month when I ovulate. What are your sentiments on hysterectomy as a cure?

DEAR READER: Pelvic inflammatory disease is a broad medical designation meaning infection of a woman's reproductive tract: the cervix (uterine opening), the uterus and/or the Fallopian tubes.

For practical purposes, PID rarely affects women before or after the child-bearing years. It is a common consequence of sexually transmitted diseases (especially gonorrhea and chlamydia) and can result from abortions or from intrauterine devices.

The Fallopian tubes are usually involved, often leading to infertility. On occasion, the infection can spread to the abdominal lining (peritonitis), causing shock and death. Symptoms include lower abdominal pain, a cervical discharge and fever.

If discovered early during a pelvic examination, the infection usually can be cured by large doses of antibiotics.

However, many women experience chronic low-grade infection with intermittent abdominal cramping; in such cases, PID may not be suspected for months or years. As a result of this chronic infection, pelvic abscesses may appear in conjunction with scar tissue, rendering antibiotic therapy ineffective. When this occurs, surgery is necessary to drain the abscesses and remove infected tissue.

Because of the extensive tissue damage caused by the infection, the operation of choice is usually a complete hysterectomy; removal of the uterus, the Fallopian tubes and the ovaries.

Therefore, in answering your question, I defer to the judgment of your gynecologist. If your symptoms have not been cured by antibiotics, surgery may be your only option. Obviously, at 33, you may wish to become pregnant in the future; a hysterectomy would make this impossible. Therefore, you may choose to try antibiotic therapy as a first recourse, before consenting to surgery, which is permanent. Your gynecologist can guide you in making such a difficult decision.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

It takes long enough to become familiar with the standard defensive plays, and then, having mastered them, you pick up your newspaper and find that the only way to beat a contract is to violate the basic rules you have learned. One such rule is not to waste an honor card on defense. In today's deal, both East and West had to waste honor cards to set the contract. Against four hearts, West led the queen of spades. Declarer won the ace and played a heart to dummy's jack and a heart back to his king. Then he played a diamond, inserting the jack from dummy. East won the queen. Since the original spade lead had denied the king, there was no future in that suit. Returning a spade would only allow declarer to win the king and force out the diamond ace. So the defense had to turn to the club suit. Unfortunately South surely had the club king to have gone right to four hearts. If East played a low club, declarer would play low and win dummy's jack. If East played ace and a club, declarer would win by either ducking the second club or playing the king, since West would not have another club to lead when he won the diamond ace. East finally hit upon the winning play — he wasted his queen of clubs by putting it on the table. Declarer played the king, and now West had to be on his toes. He unblocked his 10 of clubs. Declarer now played another diamond. West took the ace and led a club through dummy's jack. East won the ace and nine of clubs to set the hand.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Oso

YOUR BIRTHDAY
March 1, 1990

There should be a definite upsurge in your social life in the year ahead. Important advantages can be gained from persons with whom you'll be associating.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Something for which you're presently hoping might appear to be a bit outlandish to the casual observer, but don't let this discourage you. Ways can be found to make wishes real. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail 82 to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You have good possibilities for improving your material position today, provided you're alert enough to recognize when to jump in and when to stand pat. Use your best judgment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Leadership, desire and initiative are numbered among your more dominant qualities today. With these attributes going for you, success is likely in important endeavors.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) For best results today, make it a point to keep your intentions to yourself. If you feel a need to discuss matters with someone, limit it to a contributor who is also directly involved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your expectations and enthusiasm will be contagious today. It won't take much on your behalf to get others aroused and interested in issues or causes you personally champion.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Meaningful objectives can be achieved today, especially if they pertain to your ambitions or material interests. Focus in on your desires and play to win.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You are both persuasive and perceptive today. These pluses should make it possible for you to influence someone who is in a position to convince others they should also support your interests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Conditions in general look favorable for you today, but you are likely to enjoy your greatest successes in joint ventures rather than those you do independently of others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your judgment is exceptionally keen today and there are indications you may make a critical decision that will turn out to be beneficial for others as well as for yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) What you start out to do today you are very likely to finish. You have the faculty for seeing things through to a conclusion that will both please you and do credit to your reputation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You are presently in a favorable social cycle. Persons with whom you'll be involved will find you charismatic and fun to be around. Don't be surprised if you're more in demand than usual.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your greatest gifts today are your abilities to either make or save money. Do everything you can to try to derive benefits from both areas.

Celery no longer a 'snob' vegetable, but still around

Celery is such a common vegetable that we take it for granted. How strange, though, that this member of the carrot family once had great snob appeal. Grande dames of the 17th century felt it quite stylish to eat and serve celery. In fact, fine hostesses served the ribbed vegetable in a specially made "celery vase."

Today celery is anything but exclusive, providing a healthy crunch to recipes of many different cultures.

Most celery on the market is the bright green Pascal. But also available is Golden Heart, a bleached white variety, usually packaged as celery hearts and ideal when poached and marinated in an oil and vinegar dressing.

When shopping, select a stalk that is firm, with a glossy surface. At home, trim the base and discard any damaged leaves and ribs. Wash and drain and refrigerate in a plastic bag and store in the vegetable drawer.

Celery may be freshened by trimming the base and placing it in ice water.

And to avoid bruising the vegetable, cut celery with a sharp knife or the slicing blade of a food processor.

Although many eat celery raw, it may be boiled, oven-braised, steamed, sautéed or microwaved. For any of these methods, cook celery only until tender-crisp.

Celery's texture makes it perfect for many stir-fry recipes. The cross-cultural Chinese "burrito" is similar to a moo-shu which in Chinese means yellow cassia blossoms, and is a shredded meat and vegetable dish from Northern China. Usually it is served with steamed pancakes (similar to tortillas) in which the crunchy filling is rolled.

CHINESE 'BURRITOS' WITH A CRUNCH
 1 cup chicken broth
 1/2 cup hoisin sauce
 1 tablespoon cornstarch
 Dash ground red pepper
 2 tablespoons vegetable oil

2 cups diagonally sliced celery
 1 cup sliced sweet red bell pepper, halved
 8 ounces boned and skinned chicken breasts (cutlets), partially frozen, cut into thin strips
 1 cup trimmed snow peas (4 ounces)
 8 (8-inch) flour tortillas, warmed

In a small bowl, combine chicken broth, hoisin sauce, cornstarch and ground red pepper until smooth; set aside. In a large skillet, heat oil until hot; add celery and red bell pepper; cook and stir until slightly softened, about 2 minutes.

Add chicken; cook and stir until chicken is almost cooked, about 2 minutes. Stir in reserved chicken broth mixture; add to skillet. Cook and stir until mixture boils, about 1 minute. Stir in snow peas; cook until snow peas are heated through, about 1 minute. Serve in warm flour tortillas or over rice. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 4 portions.

Cross-cultural 'burritos' are a take-off on the Chinese moo-shu.

games, and William sheath his play sword.

William does perch a small, translucent dinosaur by his dinner plate.

"Why is the dinosaur's stomach blue?" someone asks. "William squirted toothpaste in its mouth," Raymond answers.

Anthony, repeatedly checking his watch, nudges Raymond and explains, "We're timing my dad between jokes."

Margalie bursts into dinner table giggles and table chatter turns to school, karate classes, and Natalie's modeling class.

The Cuban meal savored and consumed, Farach indulges in a good cigar and a strong cup of espresso before he rolls up his sleeves to help with cleanup.

The children scurry to get ready for karate class, and Anthony, when asked about his dinner, says, "It was OK, but I wish he'd make plain old pizza once in awhile."

The rich sights, sounds, and smells linger as the door closes on Farach's home — his castle.

For the rich flavors of Cuban culture try some of Gene Farach's recipes.

NOTE: Because Farach never measures his ingredients, all amounts are approximate.

PICADILLO

1 large, Spanish onion
 1 bell pepper
 1 Cuban pepper
 1 clove elephant garlic
 1 large jar green olives
 1 cup raisins
 1-2 lbs. ground beef
 1/2 cup olive oil
 1 cup red wine
 2 large cans pureed tomatoes
 2 cubed potatoes
 Red pepper to taste
 Salt and black pepper to taste

In a large pot, saute diced onion, diced peppers, and garlic in the olive oil. Drain olives and add whole. Sauté ground beef separately and drain. Cooking on low heat, add meat, tomatoes, raisins, and red wine to pot. Correct the seasoning with peppers and salt. Fry cubed potatoes and add. Simmer. The longer you cook it, the better it is. Farach recommends using the wine you intend to drink in this recipe.

FRIED PLANTAINS

Plantains
 Olive oil

BOILED YUCA

Yuca is a root local to Central America, and available locally.

Yuca
 Garlic salt
 Olive oil to drizzle
 Boil yuca until just tender. Drizzle with olive oil, sprinkle with garlic salt, and enjoy as the vegetable with a meal.

American Red Cross

Every year, the people of the American Red Cross help victims of some 50,000 disasters - fires, floods, hurricanes, and worse. Over the years, the employees of Winn-Dixie have been proud to be able to respond to the needs of the community during these emergencies by supplying food and household items to the affected families through the red cross. And throughout central Florida, Winn-Dixie has been proud to help many other charitable groups, like the ones listed here. Together, we've worked to serve our community generation after generation. Winn-Dixie and the Red Cross is proud to recognize their efforts.
