County, cities prepare for economic growth

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County is seeking input from cities for a plan that could reduce the heavy tax burden on residents by enticing more businesses to locate here. Seminole County has been working on an Economic Development Action Plan. The Sanford City Commission will hold discussions on some of the proposals during Monday night's commission work session.

County Manager Ron Rabun has submitted a number of proposals on which he is requesting city input.

"We've sent a similar package of information to all of the local municipalities for review," Rabun said. "If this is to work, we will need everyone's cooperation, and as such, we need input from See Plan, Page 5A

What we need to do is take steps to turn around the heavy residential taxation base, and move it toward more commercial areas."

Home starts remain steady, commercial up

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — New home starts in the unincorporated areas of the county took a slight dip in May, although year-to-date activity continues to grow.

A total of 77 new home permits were issued in May, according to the monthly report issued by the Seminole County Building Department. That compares to 98 permits issued in May 1993. Since October, 688 permits were issued for single-family homes, compared to the 637 permits issued during the same October-to-May period a year ago.

The county tracks building permit activity each month. A total of nearly $16 million in construction was permitted by the county in May, down slightly from the $17.8 million in activity in May 1993. Construction during the first eight months of the county fiscal year has increased 10 percent to $151 million.

Commercial construction permits continue to grow. Eight permits were issued for new commercial construction in May, double the amount issued in May 1993. So far this year, commercial construction is up 87 percent over last year. A total of 140 new commercial permits have been issued since October, compared to 88 permits during the same period a year ago. See Building, Page 5A

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Oyster bed test insufficient

ATLANTA — Routine testing for bacteria in oysters beds apparently is insufficient to prevent food poisoning, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The CDC reported Thursday that despite testing just days prior to oyster harvesting in northwestern Florida's Apalachicola Bay, 45 people came down with food poisoning last Nov. 20-30. Ten people were hospitalized for more than a day.

Most of those who became ill — 91 percent — had eaten more than five dozen raw oysters.

The CDC said no evidence that the oysters were improperly handled was found, but three of those who became ill had bought from unlicensed seafood dealers. No environmental pollution source was identified.

Water drawn from 39 sites on Oct. 3, Nov. 21 and Nov. 24 met federal requirements for testing of the bacteria known as fecal coliform, but after the outbreak, the Florida Department of Environmental Protection closed the shellfish-harvesting area of the bay for a week.

The CDC made no specific recommendations on how to improve testing for contamination, but said that future outbreaks should be monitored to assess the federal laws.

Police officers convicted in coverup

MIAMI — Four police officers face up to 10 years in prison after they were convicted of misleading investigators in the cover-up of the 1988 beating death of drug dealer Leonardo Mercado.

Pablo Camacho, Charlie Haynes Jr., Nathaniel Veal Jr. and Andy Watson are to be sentenced Aug. 31.

In 1990, the four officers were acquitted of federal charges they conspired to violate Mercado's civil rights by killing him. The verdicts sparked rioting in Wynwood, a Puerto Rican neighborhood in Miami where Mercado lived.

The officers never faced state murder charges in the case.

In the current federal prosecution, the officers, part of a special Miami Police narcotics squad, were charged with several counts of obstruction of justice and misleading law enforcement officers.

They were acquitted of all but one count. "On perjury and conspiracy, I was acquitted," Camacho said after the verdict. "So what am I guilty of?"

Attorneys for the police officers vowed an appeal and said they would ask U.S. District Judge Stanley Marcus to set aside the verdict, calling the charge they were convicted of vague.

"It's incomprehensible," said Milton Hirsch, Camacho's attorney. "The search for justice will continue in the appeals court."

Women's conference being organized

MIAMI — A hemispheric women's conference is being organized to coincide with a summit of the political leaders of the Americas in December.

Miami-Dade Community College plans to host the gathering on the two days before the Dec. 9-10 summit called by President Clinton for all leaders of the Western Hemisphere except Fidel Castro.

"We felt it would be a good complement to the summit," said Wolfson campus President Eduardo Padron. "We'll have leading women from Canada to Argentina who are distinguished representatives of those countries come together."

A tentative invitation list includes First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, Nicaraguan President Violeta Chamorro, Chilean author Isabel Allende and Costa Rican Vice President Rebecca Grynspan.

The conference will address women's roles in business, culture, education, health, law and other areas.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Supreme Court rejects extension Ruling affects civil charges of child abuse

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A state law that allowed victims of child sexual abuse to come forward years later was struck down Thursday by the Florida Supreme Court.

The justices ruled unanimously that lawmakers acted illegally in 1992 when they gave anyone who believed they were victims of abuse or incest a four-year "window of opportunity" through April 1996 to file civil lawsuits.

A woman who had sued her grandfather for alleged abuse and lobbied the Legislature to pass the law said she was dismayed by the decision.

"I'm numb," said the 36-year-old woman, who claimed she was abused when she was 15 and her relatives kept it quiet. "Where are my rights? I'm still being victimized."

The woman sued her grandfather, Calvin Wiley of Pinellas Park, and claimed he sexually abused her as a child. She said her father, stepmother, grandmother and uncle knew about the abuse, failed to report it and refused to help her get medical care.

A circuit court dismissed the woman's lawsuit in 1991 because the time limit on civil claims had expired.

She appealed the decision to the 2nd District Court of Appeal in Lakeland, which agreed to let her claim proceed after the Legislature passed the law allowing victims to file claims even if the time limit had expired.

In its ruling, the Supreme Court said the provision violated an alleged abuser's right to due process under the state constitution.

"The Legislature cannot subsequently declare that 'We change our mind on this type of claim' and then resurrect it," Senior Justice Parker Lee McDonald wrote in the opinion.

Christopher Jayson, the woman's lawyer, said he will consider appealing the ruling to federal court. He said there's no way to know how many people with abuse claims may be affected.

"I think they're a lot more than anyone ever imagined," Jayson said. "We've received dozens of calls."

Martin Rice, a lawyer who defended Wiley against his granddaughter's suit, said the court's decision upheld longstanding rulings that lawmakers can't expose people to claims once the statute of limitations has expired.

"The infirmity of this is it likely opened claims from the beginning of mankind as long as they're brought within four years," Rice said.

The court upheld other changes in state law that extends the time limits for child sexual abuse charges. The revisions don't affect legal time limits on criminal charges for child sexual abuse.

The 1992 changes upheld by the court say civil claims may be made within seven years after a youth reaches age 18, within four years after an abused child is no longer dependent on the adult abuser, or within four years from the time a person realizes their injuries were caused by sexual abuse.

"The Legislature may appropriately determine and modify the period of time for filing actions in abuse and incest cases," McDonald wrote. "This does not mean, however, that it may revive a cause of action that has already been barred by the expiration of the pre-existing statute of limitations."

The woman said she wants to ask justices why she doesn't have the right to get her claims heard in court.

"I'm sitting here with these scars. I live with this hell every day of my life," said the woman, who is married and lives in St. Petersburg. "All I want is for these people to be punished for what they've done to me."

Net-ban organizers claim to have enough names to make ballot

By JACKIE MALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Organizers of a campaign to ban big commercial fishing nets from Florida waters haven't won a spot on the November ballot yet, but they feel victory is just a few days off.

More than 11,000 volunteers across the state have collected an estimated 540,000 signatures during the past 20 months, according to Bill Coletti, campaign manager for the Save Our Sealife Committee.

Election supervisors already have verified that 428,380 of those signatures came from registered voters. It takes 429,428 to qualify for the ballot.

Of all the citizen initiatives to make the ballot in Florida in past years, the net-ban proposal is the only one that hasn't paid people to collect signatures, Coletti said.

"The Save Our Sealife campaign is the only one that has done this solely on the sweat equity of hard-working volunteers from Pensacola to Key West," he said Thursday.

"These volunteers have gathered petitions at carnivals, art festivals, rallies, church corners, street corners, shopping malls and on Election Days," Coletti said.

The measure would ban the use of entangling gill nets in state waters and the use of nets larger than 500 square feet in mesh area from inshore and near-shore state waters.

The goal of the petition drive is to protect fish stocks in Florida waters from depletion and to help save marine mammals that get trapped by the nets and drown.

The measure has passed muster in the state Supreme Court, which reviews citizen initiatives for compliance with procedural requirements dealing with wording and scope.

Two other citizen initiatives have been struck down by the high court this year, while the fate of yet another two measures still is pending.

The state's top court doesn't review measures until election officials have verified that 10 percent of the signatures needed to make the ballot actually have been collected.

Included in that last group are four proposals promoted by the Tax Cap Committee.

But the chairman of the Tax Cap Committee, David Biddulph of New Smyrna Beach, announced Thursday that volunteers have collected about 3 million signatures from more than 738,000 voters who support the four measures.

One of the proposals would require voter approval of all new taxes. Another would assure compensation for people whose property loses value because of government action.

Another would require a two-thirds vote to change the taxing authority already provided in the state constitution.

The last one would make it easier for citizens to get revenue-related initiatives on the ballot.

Election officials have verified anywhere from 52,000 to 85,000 signatures on each of the four amendments.

Biddulph told reporters that the Tax Cap Committee has been verifying the signatures internally and that he's confident nearly all of the petitions will be found valid.

Honored for his dedication

Ted Barker, who is retiring at the end of this month as principal of Greenwood Lakes Middle School, was honored by Gov. Lawton Chiles and the full cabinet for his 36 years of service to the education profession. Barker started off as a teacher at Sanford Junior High (now Sanford Middle), spent 18 years as principal at Lakeview Middle School and has been principal at Greenwood Lakes for the last eight years. Barker will now pursue a career in politics as he is running for a seat on the school board in District 5.

Infant lives 6 months in squalid conditions

By Associated Press

TAVARES — After the first warning, welfare workers visited a young mother's home 24 times to help her clean and raise her children. But it wasn't enough.

The mother's 6-month child, Nikki Corbett, died June 10 at an Orlando hospital of internal head injuries that authorities said resembled "shaken baby syndrome."

Records released by the Florida

Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services show the conditions that surrounded Nikki in her short life. Her mother, Lesa Orthmann, 19, lacked the parenting skills to care for two young children, the records indicate.

The mother agreed to cooperate after the first visit in February to clean up the squalid conditions under which the kids were living, especially the infant.

Two months after HRS began working with the mother, a caller reported that the house "was not fit for a dog." Roaches were everywhere, dog feces and garbage were spread about the house and the baby was filthy.

Lesla Orthmann showed progress, but her caseworkers thought she spent too much time worrying about her boyfriend, James Corbett, 22, rather than her children. They referred her to Family Builders, a nurturing program run by the University of Florida.

That agency closed the case June 9, the same day Nikki was rushed to the hospital.

Family Builders' final report showed caseworkers concluded that "it is highly probable future reports of neglect will be investigated."

IRS officials said Wednesday more could have been done.

Investigators have not charged anyone in the case.

Cocaine possession

Jerry Neil Roberts of Sanford was arrested on a cocaine possession charge by two Seminole County deputies after he allegedly first told them he was going to buy the drug, then showed it to them. The deputies report they were in Waffle House on West State Road 48 at Interstate 4 at about 5:30 a.m. Thursday morning when they were approached by a man who told them he was going to a room at a nearby motel to buy cocaine and turn it over to the State Attorney's Office. A few minutes later, the deputies reported they received a call from the man, saying he had the drugs. The deputies met the man at a nearby pay telephone and when he revealed a medicine container found to contain two "rocks" of cocaine, they arrested him. Davidians' new camp: Colorado

By ROBERT WELLEN
Associated Press Writer

BALDWIN, Colo. — Three Branch Davidians are holed up in a remote log cabin with semi-automatic weapons, a police scanner and night vision equipment. Three-thousand rounds of ammunition are on order.

But the local sheriff says he won't tolerate a repeat of the cult's bloody standoff in Texas.

"If they break the law I'm going to hammer them," says Sheriff Richard Murdie.

Sheets of camouflaged cloth or black plastic cover some of the windows of the log house occupied by three Davidians looking for a new home base after last year's shootout and fire at their Mount Carmel compound near Waco, Texas.

"We wanted to be able to look out without being seen. Some of the people killed at Mount Carmel were shot through windows," said Wally Kennett.

Kennett, 31, was outside the compound when federal agents raided it on Feb. 28, 1993.

The gun battle left four agents and six Davidians dead. A 51-day armed standoff ensued, ending April 19, 1993, with a shootout and cataclysmic fire in which cult leader David Koresh and 78 of his disciples perished.

Kennett, who played bass guitar in Koresh's band, Seraph, acknowledges that the remaining Davidians are stockpiling weapons again, and have ordered the ammunition. He admits to a siege mentality.

"When you have ... your friends murdered you start to think that way," said Kennett, a cult member since 1985.

He is joined by Ron Cole, who joined the group after the Waco fire, and at least one other Davidian, whom they would not identify. The three had accused federal agencies of spying on them in this virtually deserted old mining town 20 miles north of Gunnison in southwest Colorado.

But Kennett said a barrage of calls and faxes from their supporters to Murdie appears to have guaranteed their safety.

"I'm not going to prejudge them — but I will enforce the laws of the state of Colorado," said Murdie. "I'm not going to allow what happened in Waco to happen in Gunnison County — on either side of the spectrum."

Denver FBI spokesman Dick Schussler denied federal agencies have been monitoring the group. "We have no interest in them at all."

But their new landlord does. He wants them out by July 4.

Kennett said they will try to remain in Colorado, where they expect to be joined by some if not all of the 25 to 30 Davidians who survived Waco and are not awaiting prison sentences.

District attorney, police clamp information lid on Simpson case

By JULIE YAMAMOTO
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — A day after frantic 911 calls from O.J. Simpson's ex-wife were broadcast worldwide, the city's top prosecutor said he would impose a blackout on the case and challenged news organizations to fight him.

"It is time to cut it off," District Attorney Gil Garcetti said Thursday. "I am now trying to put a lid on this from my position."

Garcetti promised to reject any future requests for public records, saying it would harm Simpson's shot at a fair trial.

Some critics claim Garcetti himself has contributed to the media feeding frenzy with frequent televised news conferences. Garcetti appeared virtually nonstop on television throughout the weekend after Simpson's arrest on murder charges.

"He's thinking more with his ego than his brains," said Harland Braun, a criminal defense lawyer who once worked with Garcetti in the district attorney's office. "You can't make political hay out of this tragedy. It's going to boomerang. It's a sad, sad case. People don't like to see you gloating on television about it."

Simpson, 46, has pleaded innocent to the first-degree murders of Nicole Brown Simpson, 35, and her friend, Ronald Goldman, 25. He could face the death penalty if convicted.

A Los Angeles County grand jury was to convene again today. A grand jury indictment would preclude a preliminary hearing, which is scheduled June 30, and send the case straight to trial.

Investigators on Thursday also sealed affidavits for search warrants conducted after the killings. Some media reports about evidence — such as a bloody ski mask found at Simpson's home and a bloodstained spade believed to be the murder weapon — have turned out to be false.

But the flood of pretrial publicity continued.

ABC-TV and the Los Angeles Times reported that Simpson allegedly smashed a car windshield with a baseball bat during an argument with Mrs. Simpson shortly after they were married in 1985.

"I broke the windshield. It's mine. There's no trouble here," Simpson said, according to police. Mrs. Simpson declined to prosecute, but the incident was cited in court in 1989, when Simpson pleaded no contest to battering his wife.

Robert Shapiro, Simpson's attorney, said only that Simpson struck his wife's car with an object.

Paula Barberi, a close friend of Simpson's who spoke to him by phone since his arrest, told ABC-TV's "PrimeTime Live" in an interview broadcast Thursday night that he denied committing the murders. She said she believed him.

"He's not a violent person," said Barberi. "He's never, ever hit me."

Reports of the Simpsons' turbulent relationship escalated with the release of tapes of the 911 calls Mrs. Simpson made on Oct. 25, 1993. She told police that her ex-husband was "raving" and "crazy"; Simpson is heard shouting and swearing in the background.

Garcetti said he was "confident that we can find 12 jurors who know very little if anything about this tape."

In other developments:

— Authorities in Buffalo, N.Y., said they investigated Simpson twice for possible cocaine use while he played for the Buffalo Bills in the 1970s. Simpson wasn't charged.

— A friend of the Simpsons, speaking to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, said Mrs. Simpson had decided to break off her relationship with Simpson about three weeks before her murder.

— About 25 people attended a candlelight vigil Thursday in Omaha, Neb., sponsored by the local National Organization for Women chapter. "We should not be focusing on some football heritage, but rather on the victims of this heinous crime," Omaha attorney Susan Koenig-Cramer said.

Gathering of the troops

This weekend will see many memories recalled. Old friends will once again share their lives with each other.

This is the 26th annual reunion of men and women who were at one time stationed at the Sanford Naval Air Station, now the Central Florida Regional Airport.

Sitting at the tables of the Fleet Reserve Association headquarters on W. S.R. 46, this Friday, Saturday and Sunday, old times will be brought back into focus. As in the past, few bad times are remembered .. only the good times.

The only tears that may be shed will be in honor of those who may no longer be with us.

One of the commanding officers of the base, Rear Admiral Bob Jackson is among them. Jackson became CO of SNAS in June, 1955, and remained until June 1957. He, as many others like him, chose the Sanford area for his retirement. Jackson passed away on Oct. 31, 1993.

Officers and enlisted personnel are no longer divided according to rank. Each person, regardless of grade level, shares a common interest with others. They all served in Sanford, once known as the finest duty station in the Naval air command.

For those who served at the Sanford base during its operation from 1942 until 1968, we thank you, not only for your service to your country, but for doing much more than many people realize, in helping to make Sanford a better community in which to live.

LETTER

Environmental Issue

This is an open letter to Seminole County Board of Commissioners, Dick Van Der Weide, chairman. In May of '93 I offered my services to Seminole County by submitting my name to the Natural Lands Advisory Committee. My concern is the rapid destruction of the above lands in Seminole County. My on site experience over the past 30+ years qualified me as being knowledgeable on the subject.

I first became concerned as I became aware of SCEA (Seminole County Expressway Authority) actions which disregarded navigational laws and the proper use of sovereignty lands. Methods used to determine the ordinary high water line were not proper and keeping with state and federal standards. Because of this, regulations protecting these lands were not adhered to. I have attempted to point out to the SCEA that this is not in the best interests of the public.

I have been told by members of the commission that I am "beating a dead horse." I do not see it that way. As long as Article 10, Section II of Florida's Constitution states that these sovereignty lands are to be held in trust for all the people I will be concerned when they are used in a manner contrary to the public interest. I felt I could be an asset to the Natural Lands Advisory Committee in this regard.

The Planning Department in Seminole County has a policy which allows 10 percent encroachment into wetlands. This is allowed after encroachment has seemingly occurred as far as possible through draining. This is a clear violation of the Federal Clean Water Act. I have attempted to point out to the commission that these issues need to be addressed. I pointed out that you were given personal opinion, rather than points of law, when you asked a county attorney to explain the ordinary high water line.

I have been berated for this and other efforts I have made to bring problems to your attention. I was disappointed that most of what was said, was after the tape player ran out, during the agenda review on May 24. Coincidence or not, it is typical of the operation of Seminole County as I view it! Each member of the commission took an oath to defend the Constitution. I do not feel the board of commissioners is doing so by failure to address the above issues. Unless decisions are made by the BCC to uphold the protection of sovereignty lands, and wetlands and described by state and federal laws, the purchase of "natural lands" is a useless and futile effort. Therefore I withdraw my offer to participate on the Natural Lands Advisory Committee.

I realize some of my methods, of bringing the problems in focus, may seem abrasive. I tried asking for a review of the issues and met with deliberate efforts by the SCEA, the Turnpike, and the DOT (Florida Department of Transportation) to suppress the facts. I feel there has been a deliberate cover-up concerning the method used to determine the OHWL of Lake Jesup and the St. Johns River. I do not feel the board of commissioners can represent the SCEA and the citizens of the county unless the time to delve into and understand the issues is taken. I do not feel you have the time; and thus the SCEA is simply a "rubber stamp" for the DOT to permit the roadway while deleting environmental laws. I have been told the SCEA legislation supersedes all other laws and that the members have insurance against suit. I recommend that you draft legislation to abolish the SCEA. I am asking you to represent the citizens, protect our resources, and review the above issues.

Major decision-makers say 'oops'

Although I continue to support capital punishment, I also recognize the most powerful argument against the death penalty — its irreversibility.

Once an inmate — later found to be innocent — has been executed, the state cannot simply shrug its shoulders and lament, "Oops! We made a mistake." There are no appeals from death.

Retired Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell — one of the great justices of all time — acknowledges in a current biography by law professor John Jeffries, the "oops" factor in one of his irreversible decisions.

In the 1987 decision, McCleskey vs. Kemp, the court rejected the relevance of statistics that showed that courts are more likely to impose a death penalty if the convicted murderer's victim is white and not black. This ruling has helped send disproportionately more black men than white men to the electric chair. When Jeffries asked Powell if he would change his vote on any case, the stately Powell replied, "Yes, McCleskey vs. Kemp."

He even went one step further and, like retired Justice Harry Blackmun, declared that he believed capital punishment was unworkable and was now opposed to it.

In the Kemp case, the NAACP Legal Defense Fund had put together an irrefutable set of statistical evidence that showed Georgia's courts were four to 11 times more likely to impose the death penalty if the victim was white.

Powell's one major mistake is being redeemed. The Racial Justice Act, a component of the pending crime bill, will permit condemned killers to show racial patterns in sentencing before they can be executed.

A few weeks ago, an entire court said, "Oops!" The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in D.C. reversed itself on a libel decision when one of the judges confessed he, too, had made a mistake. Judge Harry T. Edwards' reversal in this past

There are no appeals from death.

February's libel case of author Dan E. Moldea vs. The New York Times made the full court reversal possible.

It was a stunning triumph for the First Amendment's protection of freedom of speech. Moldea had sued the Times because of an unfavorable review that accused him of "sloppy journalism." The court upheld his contention that he had been professionally damaged.

In doing so, ironically, the D.C. court overruled a 1983 D.C. court decision, Olman vs. Evans, and Novak, which affirmed the protection of opinions.

The Rehnquist court disagrees. Chief Justice Rehnquist, who seems determined to reverse most of the Warren Court decisions, is not convinced about the sanctity of opinions.

"If a speaker says, 'In my opinion John Jones is a liar,'" Rehnquist wrote in the majority opinion, Milkovich vs. Lorain Journal (1990), "he implies a knowledge of facts which lead to the conclusion that Jones told an untruth. ... 'In my opinion Jones is a liar' can cause as much damage to reputation as the statement, 'Jones is a liar.'"

There goes the First Amendment neighborhood! Fortunately, Rehnquist is declining as a major intellectual force on the Supreme Court.

North is primed for a second war

WASHINGTON — As the Clinton administration plays nuclear brinkmanship with North Korea, the specter of war has Pentagon planners thinking the unthinkable: a surprise North Korean invasion of South Korea, where more than 35,000 American troops are stationed.

For the last year, the head of the Defense Intelligence Agency, Lt. Gen. James R. Clapper, has believed North Korea is the greatest threat the U.S. military is likely to face in the next few years.

North Korea would probably prevail in the initial phase of a second Korean war, according to Top Secret Pentagon assessments we have reviewed, because dictator Kim Il-Sung has designed his armed forces to meet the specific tactical needs of the Korean peninsula.

Since November 1970, Pyongyang has sustained a massive program of military modernization which has reversed the balance of forces on the Korean peninsula dramatically in its favor. North Korean armed forces personnel has tripled from 393,000 in 1970 to 1.2 million today. Meanwhile, the South Korean army has not similarly expanded, giving the North a greater than two-to-one advantage. "By nearly every measure of relative combat power, the North Koreans enjoy significant advantages over the South," says a highly classified DIA estimate.

DIA calculations note, however, that South Korea's equipment is much more modern than the North's. American troops and air power would eventually carry the day — but it would take two months and result in tens of thousands of casualties.

The DIA's biggest concern is the massive North Korean buildup in the area along the demilitarized zone (DMZ). More than 8,400 artillery pieces and 2,400 multiple rocket launchers have been positioned near the border.

As we have reported, the North has already dug an intricate network of tunnels along the DMZ in preparation for an assault on the South. "The discovery of the tunnels and continued searches for others reduce somewhat their ability to effectively contribute to a North Korean offensive," one classified DIA report allowed. "Nevertheless, until all are located and neutralized, North Korean-built tunnels represent a potentially significant military threat to the South."

DIA officials believe they would be used "to place specialized troops behind (South Korea's) forward defense line." In their reports, the DIA believes North Korea has a huge special forces unit, some 100,000 men who would tunnel under the DMZ or be dropped behind South Korean lines by air.

"The North Koreans have an excellent chance to achieve surprise in an attack on the South," one DIA estimate laconically observed. "South Korean intelligence services would probably not discover the North's plans before an invasion."

Two geographical features dominate the Korean battlefield, at this point. The first favors the defender, South Korea, since the rugged, mountainous terrain running the length of the DMZ means that an invasion spearheaded by armor must progress down three corridors.

But the second geographical factor favors the attacking North — Seoul is only 30 miles from the DMZ. The fact that this city, the economic and strategic heart of South Korea, is so close favors the invader: It denies forces protecting the capital room for defense in depth, or even much space for tactical retreat.

Saga of O.J. ugly, ungodly

WASHINGTON — Listen to just a few of the off-the-cuff comments I've heard about the continuing O.J. chronicle:

"The media has already tried and hung the guy. What if he didn't do it?"

"The brother was set up!"

"Women get treated like that all of the time. Why are people so shocked?"

"What could she have done to make him do that?"

So many thoughts. The Saga of O.J. has something for everyone: blood and gore for the "life's a horror movie" crew; love-gone-wrong for TV talk show devotees; an improbable-but-evolving conspiracy angle for the blackness-equals-innocence posse.

And, for the "all men are barking dogs" crowd, we have a guy whose romantic resume may be summarized thusly: "Left his pregnant wife for an 18-year-old homecoming princess. Married princess, roughed her up, divorced her, then appears to have stalked and clung to her — while dating a young Julia Roberts look-alike."

And for me? Now that I'm past believing that O.J. in a mug shot had to be some "Naked Gun" joke, now that phrases like "blue steel revolver" and "death penalty" have a real connection to him, my mind is mush. Maybe I'm still worn out from a few nights ago, sitting with my hand over my mouth, terrified that O.J. Simpson might blow out his brains in the Bronco on my TV screen.

The present is so surreal, I keep going back — to my earliest conversation about O.J. It wasn't about him as a sports legend, but as one of those rare people who in the late '70s appeared to have transcended race.

This was before a Michael Jordan poster hung on every boy's wall; before Michael Jackson's "Thriller" catapulted him into hyperspace; before it was imaginable that Bill Cosby would in a few short years be America's ideal dad.

The '70s were a different world entirely. I was in college and my best friend, Jeff, and I were talking about racism, wondering if skin color would ever be moot. Very few people, we decided, had amassed enough good will that their color seemed unimportant. One was O.J., who was omnipresent and adored.

Now it's the '90s and the whole world is again watching O.J. this time, everyone sees something different.

I was trying to make sense of it when the phone rang. It was a friend, a black man and the most devoted dad I know.

"This thing with O.J.," he says "has me thinking about my boys. And about Marlon Barry and Mike Tyson and Magic Johnson. Thinking how it feels like we can't afford to make mistakes."

He pauses. "My father used to talk about a double standard. ...At the same time, I realize that what happened to the men in these situations resulted from their own failings. ...Still, I feel pain for any black man who has achieved and then fallen. ...I felt connected to their success, so I feel some connection to their failure. ...Do you understand?"

I think so. I also understand that some black men get so focused on other black men's publicized problems that they overlook the troubles of non-black males — the Roses, the Rostenkowskis, Packwoods, Cobains, Phoenixes and Buttafuocos. If these guys were black, many brothers would have taken them on too, and felt somehow diminished. So many thoughts. I think of how some people, like the woman who asked, "What could she have done?" seem primed to give O.J. a pass.

Such people are outraged by the notion of slavery but have little problem with some men acting as if they have full ownership rights to women.

I think about the energy spent musing about the man behind the smile while the woman behind the celebrity-wife-and-mom image is an afterthought. I think of how Nicole Brown Simpson, for all her money and resources, was completely devalued by the authorities, and perhaps by herself.

Despite my friend's concerns, I think that O.J. has again transcended race. If he had anything to do with what happened on those stairs in Brentwood — and we can't ignore the "if" — it wasn't a black thing. It was a macho thing, a human thing, a haven't-we-come-further-than-this? thing.

Which brings me to a half-thought that won't go away, however, I suppress it.

Considering the inevitable — years of sordid "Hard Copy" and "Inside Editions," endless tabloid revelations, jailhouse updates and desperate witness-stand recriminations — part of me can't help thinking:

If he's guilty — if he's guilty — maybe he should have just pulled the trigger. Then it would be over.

The thought is ugly, ungodly and I hate it. Which makes it like everything else about this mess.

So many thoughts. The Saga of O.J. has something for everyone.

game involving a cabinet level post, state Senator Toni Jennings (R-Orlando) and state representative Bob Starks (R-Winter Park), none of the players decided to move from their current positions.

Jennings was reportedly considering a run for the office of insurance commissioner after Tom Gallagher announced he would run for governor, leaving Starks the opportunity to move from the House to the Senate by seeking Jennings' former post.

On Wednesday, Jennings announced she would stay in the Senate. Starks is expected to seek re-election to the House.

Lovestrand said Thursday he will not run against the popular conservative Republican incumbent in the district 34 race. "I'm not going to go against Starks," Lovestrand said. "So I'm dropping out. It was a great experience. I learned a lot."

Asked if he will run for another term as city commissioner, Lovestrand said, "I'm keeping my options open, that's the answer to that one. I'm not inclined to," the mayor said. "but I'm keeping all my options open."

Lovestrand said he is closing his state representative campaign account, paying the bills and refunding money to contributors on a pro rated basis. He had raised close to $2,000 and has approximately $400 to $500 in expenses.

"Yes, it was a good experience. Yes, I learned a lot," Lovestrand said of his short-lived campaign. "Yes, I realize Bob Starks is a popular incumbent and a lot of work to defeat him. And my voting record would be very similar to his. I'm not going to attempt to go up against someone who is so popular with the same philosophy. If I didn't care for his stance, then I would think about it, even though I might be an underdog, but how can I argue with him? He's a conservative Republican and I am and I have no basis for any debate."

Lovestrand said he has until September to decide about the commission race.

everyone in helping prepare the overall plan."

Rabun said Seminole County is in need of not only such a plan, but the improvements it is capable of bringing about. "Living in a bedroom community might be nice," he said, "but bedroom communities are generally more expensive. What we need to do is take steps to turn around the heavy residential taxation base, and move it toward more commercial areas, by doing whatever we can to provide more jobs and more business competition."

Rabun said the plan would help bring manufacturers or large employment operations into the county by helping supply more incentives, without lowering any of their tax base.

In reviewing the proposals, Sanford Director of Planning and Development Jay Marder says the documents are consistent with the city's comprehensive plan.

Regarding the document's discussion on mass transportation however, Marder has questioned rail transportation. "There is mention about retaining Autotrain and general mention of Amtrak," he said. "It may prove impossible to retain Autotrain in the long-term future."

Marder added, "Alternatives such as a major maintenance facility for the eastern United States, as well as for LYNX for the north Orlando urban area should be mentioned in the North Seminole/Sanford Intermodal Transportation Hub report."

The DOT is already planning on the rail alternatives for mass transit, as discussed this

Regarding zones of major development, Marder is urging strong consideration should be given in the redevelopment and revitalization of economically disadvantaged areas, specifically Goldboro and Midway.

The city has already made arrangements to apply for large grants with which these two areas might be improved.

Marder also suggested, "A policy about encouraging financial institutions to participate in providing commercial loans in these areas is needed."

Rabun has outlined the approach to be taken by the county in pursuing the Economic Development Plan. While it has come before the Land Planning Agency for a public hearing on June 1st, a second public hearing has now been scheduled for July 8th.

"In preparing the county budget which will be coming up in July," Rabun said, "I've put in about $1 million which would be used for a development fund to get this project underway."

A briefing of the Seminole County Commission is set for July 26, with a Transmittal hearing planned for August 9th, and the possible adoption to be considered on December 13th.

The matter is scheduled for discussion at the beginning of Monday night's work session of the Sanford City Commission, at 5 p.m. in the city manager's conference room.

The regular commission meeting will follow, beginning at 7 p.m. in the commission chambers of city hall, 300 N. Park Avenue.

Officials questions about chemical weapons

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials are concerned that a Soviet chemical weapons program seems to have disappeared with no acknowledgement from Russia of the dangerous chemical agents it may have produced. Russia's failure to provide information about the binary weapons program has the CIA and diplomats wondering whether Russia itself secretly may be developing chemical weapons as its parliament considers ratification of a Chemical Weapons Convention.

The question came up Thursday in the U.S. Senate, which is also set to consider ratification of the treaty signed by 157 countries and ratified by eight.

"The sooner we have the Chemical Weapons Convention, the sooner we can get to the bottom of this issue," Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing.

He was responding to a question from Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., who suggested that the United States might want to hold off on ratification of the treaty until Russia provides information on the binary weapons program.

Binary weapons programs use two chemicals that may be harmless on their own but deadly when combined.

Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, in Washington to sign agreements for cooperation on space and economic development, reacted testily to questions about a binary weapons program.

"We're not concealing anything at all," he said during a joint news conference with Vice President Al Gore. "This comes from U.S. officials? What sort of officials?" The U.S. concerns were first reported Thursday by The New York Times, quoting unidentified officials.

State Department spokesman Mike McCurry said that the binary weapons question is a "legacy of the Cold War." He said it is known that the Soviets were working on such a system, but Russia has not admitted its existence.

U.S. officials are questioning the fact that Russia has made no reference to binary chemical weapons or agents in its disclosures since the dissolution of the Soviet Union, McCurry said.

"That is contrary to our understanding of the program that was initiated by the former Soviet Union," he said, adding that an international convention would increase U.S. ability to resolve the issue.

Shalikashvili, CIA Director James Woolsey and Arms Control and Disarmament Agency Director John Holum all called for the treaty's quick ratification at the Senate hearing.

"The Chemical Weapons Convention will not, at least in the near term, rid the world of chemical weapons," said Woolsey. "Outlaw states" that have not signed the treaty — including North Korea, Iraq and Libya — will still have to be watched, he said.

investigation into money laundering and drug investigations.

Other areas where arrests have either been made or are expected to be made include New York and Tennessee.

U.S. Attorney Donald Stern in Boston commented, "This case is the culmination of a lengthy investigation in which FBI special agents and assistant U.S. attorneys in several states coordinated their efforts to bring down a nationwide drug importation and distribution organization."

Special Agent Richard Swensen added, "The investigation and arrests effectively close down an entire, significant drug distribution network."

On June 18, complaints and warrants were issued in Boston for 23 people. Each was charged with one count of conspiracy to distribute marijuana, and one count of conspiracy to launder money. On June 20, arrest warrants were issued for six more people in Tucson, Arizona.

An affidavit filed in support of the arrest warrants alleges that the people charged were engaged in a large-scale marijuana distribution network bringing in marijuana from Mexico to Arizona, then distributing it to various locations in the U.S.

The FBI said the organization employed tractor trailer trucks, motor homes and other vehicles to transport the marijuana.

The group reportedly "laundered" over $3 million in drug profits through the undercover operation. Some of the money was converted into assets.

Seizure warrants have been issued for over 40 of these assets, including cars, boats, homes, bank accounts and property. Over $300,000 has been recovered by undercover agents.

Over 1,000 pounds of marijuana have been seized during the course of the investigation. Swensen said the drugs were intercepted while a delivery was in progress, which resulted in the arrests of four persons.

The maximum penalty for conspiracy to distribute marijuana is 40 years imprisonment and a fine of $2 million. Conspiracy to launder money has a maximum penalty of 20 years imprisonment and a fine of $500,000.

The FBI however, said that while the case is considered as solved, the investigation is continuing in all five of the states.

Shalala blasts conservative critics of welfare reform plan

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala attacked conservative critics of President Clinton's welfare overhaul Thursday, saying their plan would "create a generation of children who will grow up on the streets."

In a speech to the National Press Club, Shalala fired back at Empower America, which this week began running nationwide radio advertisements denouncing the Clinton reform proposal as "cynical and deceptive."

Meant to launch the administration's campaign to sell its $9.3 billion plan to reform the welfare system, Shalala used her remarks to attack conservatives who believe welfare subsidizes illegitimacy and want to end cash benefits to young, unwed mothers.

She called their solution "unamerican," said it would bring back the orphanages of the 19th century and let men who father children out of wedlock "off the hook."

"They are seriously proposing that the best way to deal with temporary dependency is to render people permanently destitute," she said.

She also described Empower America's proposal as a 1994 version of Jonathan Swift's "A Modest Proposal," which argued that the best way to deal with food shortages and overpopulation was to eat the children of the poor.

Empower America, founded by Republican Intellectuals and presidential hopefuls William Bennett and Jack Kemp, lashed back with more stinging criticism of Shalala and the administration.

Peter Welner, the group's policy director, described Shalala's comments as the "hysterical rantings of an HHS secretary" and "partisan venom."

"We're hearing the reckless and shrill statements from an administration that's losing its grip and its popularity," he said.

AROUND THE STATE

Cubs win; Caray stumbles

MIAMI — Mike Morgan came off the disabled list and pitched six strong innings in Chicago's 9-3 win over the Florida Marlins Thursday.

Morgan (1-7), who has already served two stints on the disabled list, gave up two runs on seven hits and won his first game since Sept. 20, 1993. Morgan, whose ERA dropped from 7.75 to 7.11, had lost nine straight.

Not only did the Cubs beat the Marlins best starter, David Weathers (7-6), but they overcame a pregame scare when beloved announcer, Harry Caray, fell near the bullpen steps. Caray was taken to a hospital for tests, which were normal, and was expected to accompany the team back to Chicago after the game.

FSU's Cowart injures knee

TALLAHASSEE — Florida State senior defensive end Chris Cowart, who had been expected to compete for a starting spot this fall, has been lost for the season after injuring his knee this week while playing basketball.

FSU trainer Randy Oravetz said Thursday that the full extent of Cowart's knee injury is not known but there is enough damage to require surgery and keep him out all next season.

AROUND THE WORLD

Forget outlasts Courier

WIMBLEDON, England — Every newly seeded lawn carries the admonition: "Keep off the grass." Jim Courier should have listened.

The sod sank Courier on Thursday, tumbling him out of Wimbledon when Guy Forget pulled a stunning upset, 3-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Forget, out of tennis for a year because of a devastating knee injury, came in ranked No. 1,130 in the world. That didn't matter much against the fifth-seeded Courier, who knew the potential for trouble.

"I think everyone agrees grass is an equalizer," he said. "Guys that have big games certainly are much more dangerous on this surface than any other."

Varitek voted collegiate player of the year

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Georgia Tech catcher Jason Varitek, who smashed school batting records while leading the Yellow Jackets to the College World Series title game, was named Thursday as the college baseball player of the year.

Varitek, a 1990 graduate of Lake Brantley High School, beat out Louisiana State second baseman Todd Walker and Florida State pitcher Paul Wilson for the 1994 R.E. "Bob" Smith Award, which is chosen by the National Collegiate Baseball Writers Association.

Georgia Tech lost to Oklahoma, 13-5, in the championship game of the College World Series.

Varitek, a first-round pick of the Seattle Mariners, led Georgia Tech to its first CWS appearance by hitting .426 with 17 home runs and 86 RBIs. He also made only nine errors with 600 chances.

He left the Yellow Jackets as the school's career leader in home runs, RBIs, total bases, at-bats, runs scored, hits, games played and doubles. The school retired his No. 33 in the final home game of the season.

Varitek also left as the all-time Atlantic Coast Conference leader in homers and doubles.

He was a member of the 1992 U.S. Olympic Team and was a 1993 first-round draft pick by the Minnesota Twins, but returned for his senior year at Georgia Tech.

Previous winners of the award are Darren Dreifort, Mike Smith, Bobby Jones, Mike Kelly, Ben McDonald and Andy Benes.

Beer:30 blasts way to Thursday title

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Enough is enough. Beer:30 played a tight content with Mobilite for five innings, but finally ended any doubt as to who was the best team in the Sanford Recreation Thursday Men's Slowpitch Softball League at Pinehurst Park by plating four runs in the sixth inning and 13 runs in the seventh to clinch the title, 21-1.

In the second game, the Wayne Densch Budmen took over sole possession of second place with another late inning surge, breaking away from a 3-2 lead over Briar Corporation with five runs in the fourth inning and six runs in the fifth to end the game by the mercy rule, 14-2.

In the other scheduled game, The Utter Guys claimed a 7-0 forfeit victory from Ryder-MLS.

SANFORD — It wasn't easy, but the race is still on.

On a night on which the visiting teams won all three games, league-leading Roinco/Florida Sport Wear and second place M.A. Erectors both dominated the middle innings to post victories in the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Spring Thursday Night Slowpitch Softball League at Chase Park.

M.A. Erectors fell behind Stiffey's Affordables 2-0 and the game was still tied at 3-3 heading into the fifth inning. But M.A. Erectors came up with the go-ahead run in the fifth inning and added five insurance runs in the sixth inning and won 9-4 to put pressure on Roinco/Florida Sport Wear.

After Desk-Mate collected a 7-0 forfeit from Touchdown Pub., Roinco/Florida Sport Wear and Ken Rummel Chevrolet hooked up in a run-scoring battle.

Both teams scored three runs in the first and third innings. Roinco/Florida Sport Wear also added a single run in the second inning to hold a 7-6 lead after three innings.

The score stayed 7-6 until Roinco/Florida Sport Wear put the game out of reach with two runs in the fifth inning and five in the sixth inning to win going away 14-6.

Reduce, reuse, recycle

Consumers can reduce energy investment

The consumer has personal control over approximately seven percent of the total quantity of fossil fuels used in the U.S. food system. That's an average energy expenditure of 23 million Btu* per person per year invested in grocery shopping and cooking. Use of private cars for grocery shopping consumes 12 billion gallons of gasoline and emits 131 million tons of carbon dioxide, 734,000 tons of sulfur dioxide and 22.5 million tons of carbon monoxide every year.

Consumers can reduce the energy investment in the U.S. food system by reducing the amount of unnecessary packaging they purchase in stores or restaurants and selecting products packaged in recycled materials. For example, more energy is used to make the plastic pouch for two crackers than is used to make the crackers. Approximately 7,000 Btu of energy are required to make an aluminum soda can from "raw" materials; approximately 2,500 Btu of energy are required to make the same can from recycled aluminum.

Energy Efficient Food Tips: 1) Think "environment" when making purchasing decisions. 2) Choose fresh foods grown locally whenever possible. 3) Minimize the number of times you drive to the store by making a list of what you need during the week. 4) Match the burner and the pan size to the quantity of food to be cooked. 5) The flame on a gas stove should be blue; a yellow flame indicates that there is not enough air for energy efficient combustion. 6) Consider purchasing a gas oven with an electric ignition the next time you go shopping for a new stove. 7) Use the self-cleaning feature on an oven right after baking or broiling to use the heat already built up in the oven. 8) Avoid ceramic top electric resistance ranges; they are generally less energy efficient than ranges with the resistance elements exposed. 9) Preheat an oven for only 5-8 minutes. 10) Open the oven door while cooking as few times as possible. The air temperature drops 25-50°F. every time the door is opened. 10) Defrost foods in the refrigerator before you begin to prepare them. Frozen foods need more energy to cook than completely thawed foods. A defrosted roast requires 33 percent less cooking time than one that is still frozen. 11) Use as little liquid as possible when cooking to conserve both energy and nutrients. 12) Save the juices that cook out of foods and use them to make soups. Food juices frequently contain a great deal of the nutrients that were originally in the food when it was fresh. 13) Cut foods into small pieces to decrease cooking time. 14) Maximize surface area to heat source, minimize depth and cook for as short a time as possible to conserve food nutrients. The greatest losses of Vitamin C and Thiamin take place when food is kept hot. 15) When shopping for kitchen appliances, look for and compare the energy efficient ratings on the Energy Guide stickers. Energy efficient appliances save money, on a long-term basis, because the electric bill for operating the appliance is less.

CONSUMER FOCUS

*Btu: British thermal unit, approximately the energy in one burning wooden match.

Heavy woman insulted when assigned chair

DEAR ABBY: I have a family, friends, mortgages, bills, and all the other joys and sorrows that affect human beings. I'm just like everyone else, except that I am what is medically termed "morbidly obese." There are thousands of people out there like me — and even more for whom it's open season for anyone not fitting their opinion of "normal." Now you've given them even more ammunition by suggesting that everyone should try to have at least one chair to accommodate a heavy-set guest.

Abby, our egos are bruised enough; please don't grant permission to "subtly" lead us to a particular chair in the house. I'd prefer not being invited at all. What an insult! I'm fat — not stupid! I would never dream of sitting on a piece of furniture unless I knew it would support my weight.

Expanding on your advice, most of us have ramps, wheelchairs and Braille typewriters installed in every home in case a physically challenged visitor drops in? Get a life, Abby! MICKI POPP, BALTIMORE

DEAR MICKI: Get real. Not every heavy person is as aware as you. I've received numerous letters from readers whose furniture was damaged by a heavy-set guest. I'm sure the furniture was not intentionally broken, but nevertheless, chairs and sofas have collapsed under the strain.

How much nicer for the guest to sit where he (or she) will be comfortably supported than risk the embarrassment of crashing to the floor.

I have always championed the rights of the physically challenged and those who are overweight.

DEAR ABBY: I don't remember seeing this in your column. I have been a fan and reader for more than 20 years.

Do married folks sleep on a certain side of the bed — like on the left or right?

I have always slept on the left — my husband on the right. We have been wed for 23 years and moved many times.

You many think this is a silly question, but humor me: I'm not getting any younger.

AUDREY KNIGHTON, BUCKINGHAM, VA.

DEAR AUDREY: No question is "silly" if one sincerely wants to know the answer. The answer is yes! The wife usually sleeps on the "outside" — so she won't have to crawl over her husband when the baby cries; it's usually the wife who checks to make sure the children are covered and tucked in. However, one spouse may prefer to be near the telephone, or bathroom, the open window or whatever.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me settle a dispute between my mother and me.

My good friend of many years is expecting, and I would like to give her a baby shower. This is her second child, and my mom says that it is not customary to give a shower for a second child.

She was 19 and unmarried when she had her first child and was not given any showers. Are my wishes acceptable?

WONDERING IN KANSAS

DEAR WONDERING: Yes.

They are also generous, gracious, heartwarming and commendable.

Parent puzzled by son's new behavior

DEAR MARY: I've noticed some distressing behaviors from my 15-year-old son recently and I can't tell whether it's just the usual teen-age craziness or if I should really be concerned. He's always been somewhat thin, almost frail. Of course, this made him an easy target for bullies. About six months ago, a couple kids at school were really giving him a hard time. He asked us to buy him a membership at a gym for his birthday so he could get in shape to protect himself better. He goes to the gym six days a week and eats a high calorie, low fat diet. The changes in his physique have been dramatic. In the last several months he has developed a great deal more muscle mass.

While we're very proud of his achievements, there have also been some troubling changes in his behavior. He has become very aggressive and has had several explosive outbursts that really scared us. Also, he has developed acne, especially on his back and chest, despite his healthy new eating and exercising habits. I don't really know what to look for, but I'm beginning to wonder if he's using steroids. How can I find out without risking another one of his rages?

PUZZLED PARENT

DEAR PUZZLED: It's important that you explore the reasons for your son's behavior change, regardless of the cause. Get him to a doctor immediately for a physical exam. Be sure the exam includes a lab test for steroids in his urine. The changes that you describe certainly warrant concern about possible steroid use. These powerful drugs can be very damaging to both physical and mental health over time. The lab tests are highly accurate and can detect even tiny amounts of anabolic steroids.

No one should have to live in fear of a family member, whether parent or child.

FIRST STEPS...

Have you ever watched a baby learning to walk? Its first steps are hesitant. It often falters, but, slowly gains more confidence. Soon, mother can no longer keep up.

First steps of spiritual growth are like this, too. Our faith, at first, is quite uncertain, but as we become more certain of God's love, we gain more confidence. Soon our faith plays a part in every decision we make. Faith in God becomes the guiding principle of our whole life.

You can help others to take their first step toward God. Help them understand that God can make a difference in their lives, too. Invite a friend to visit your church or synagogue with you. This could well be just the support they need.

Grads honored on Children's Day

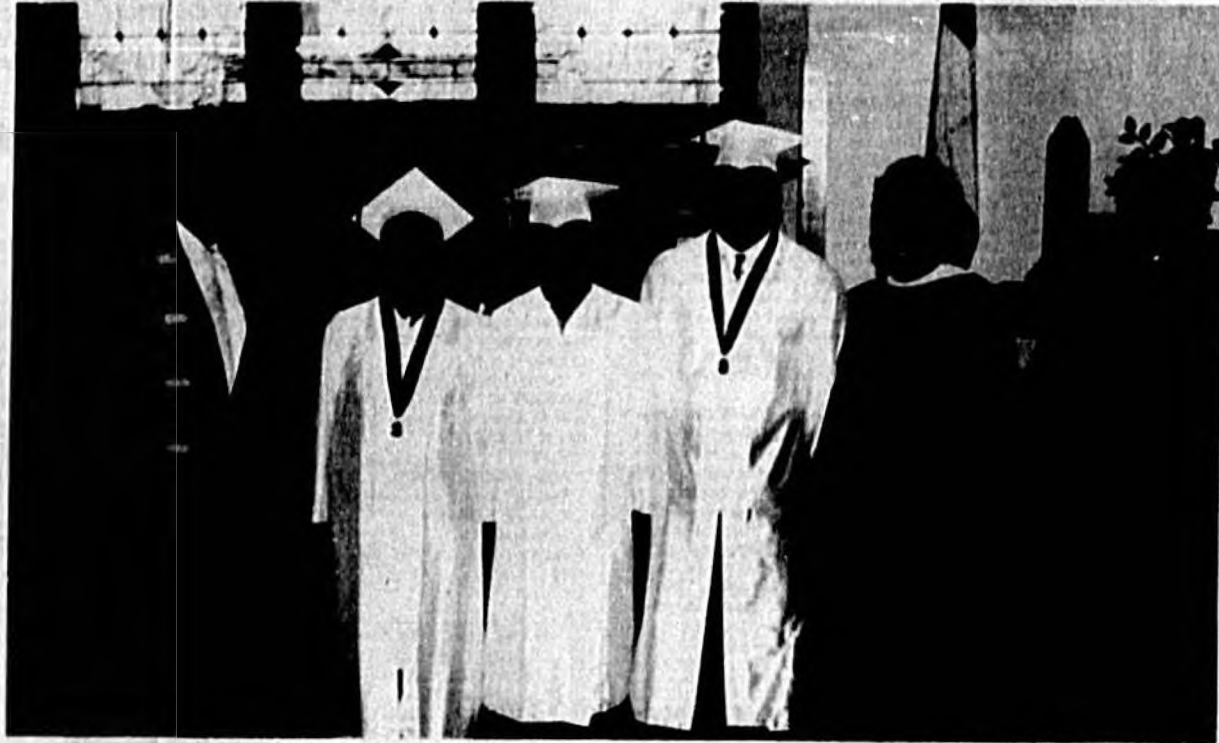

By SHIRLEY K. BAKER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — On June 11, Children's Day at Historic St. James A.M.E. Church, recent Seminole High School graduates, Teneisa Charise Connelly, Gerard N. Shine, and Valarie Melissa Turner received special recognition.

Attired in their graduation cap and gown, the honorees were led to their seats of honor by Dr. Jean Jones, the speaker for this special program. Chairman Edward Wilson, and other members of the Christian Education Committee.

Following the opening ritual aspects of the service, Jones, director of Student Retention at Bethune Cookman College, was proudly introduced by her son, Richard Feacher. Jones appropriately began her speech with a dramatic recitation of Robert Frost's poem, "The Road Not Taken." She continued by admonishing the graduates to consider the various challenges they would encounter in their future, in college or at their place of employment. She said, "To succeed in life, it is important to express love, compassion and understanding, and faith in their fellow man."

attendance, especially the honorees, is a graduate of Crooms High School, Florida Memorial College, Rollins College, and Texas Southern University. She is also a member of Historic St. James A.M.E. Church.

Each graduate is excitedly looking forward to future educational plans. Teneisa, the daughter of Rhonda Easley, plans to attend the University of Central Florida in the fall and pursue a major in pre-law and a minor in Spanish. Gerard is the son of Obie Medlock and Caroline D. Shine and plans to attend Albany State College in the fall. Valarie, the daughter of John Ballem and Ida Mae Turner, will attend Euro Hair Design in Tallahassee.

The graduates gratefully accepted the Bible and financial gift given to each of them by Sunday School Superintendent James Webster and Edward Wilson.

Other students recognized were Jeffrey Fain, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Fain, and Renaud Brown whose guardian is Allie Smith. Jeffrey was honored for his outstanding academic achievement at Greenwood Lakes Middle School and promotion to eighth grade and Renaud was recognized for his perfect attendance at Sunday school.

The ins and outs of wax buildup

DEAR DR. GOTT: What causes wax buildup in the ears, so much so that it affects hearing? Could a sinus condition be the cause of the problem?

DEAR READER: Every body manufactures wax in the ear canals. This is Nature's way of protecting the delicate ear drums against injury. But, like many of our protective devices, this may cause problems if the wax becomes stuck (impacted) in the canal, causing loss of hearing. Some people seem to be particularly prone to this annoying but harmless condition, which has nothing whatsoever to do with the sinuses or inner ears.

Rather, a twisted canal (that we are born with) or excessive proliferation of hairs in the canal (that we may develop as we age) inhibit the natural expulsion of wax particles. Normally, pieces of wax work their way out of the ear and are washed away. However, in many cases, the wax builds up over the years and will ultimately block the canal, necessitating removal.

This condition can be vastly worsened by using cotton-tipped applicators in the ears. Not only will the applicators push the wax in further and compact it, these seemingly soft sticks can also rupture the ear drum when inserted too deeply into the canal.

In most instances, ear wax can be easily removed by a health professional after it has been lubricated by using oil (the night before) or a wax softener such as Debrox. Murine now markets a do-it-yourself wax removal kit, containing a softener and a bulb syringe.

Also, the regular use of hydrogen peroxide (half a capful in each ear every week or so) may prevent wax impaction. As the peroxide fizzes and foams, it dislodges particles of wax that are carried out by the bubbles.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Do you have any information on a product known as pure bee pollen? According to the explanation on the package, it seems as if it can cure anything.

DEAR READER: Bee pollen is, as you've discovered, touted to cure a variety of ills. It ain't so.

This substance is basically a health food. To date, there is no sound scientific evidence supporting the claim that it cures anything. Quite the reverse.

MEDICINE
PETER GOTT, M.D.

In the September 1981 Annals of Allergy, doctors reported the case of a man who suffered anaphylactic shock 30 minutes after ingesting a teaspoonful of the stuff. Other patients have developed asthma and other serious allergic reactions to bee pollen. Don't use it.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Some people are adept at saying the obvious in an amusing way. Take, for example, author Daniel J. Boorstin, who wrote, "A best-seller was a book which somehow sold well simply because it was selling well." (All right, not so amusing.)

Today's deal features a play that has been highlighted many times in the literature of the game — even in this column. Yet it is still overlooked by most players. The deal occurred during the 1986 World Championships in Miami. Supposedly only Frenchman Michel Perron found the right defense.

The contract is four spades. West starts with the heart king and draws a discouraging two from partner. How should West continue?

Apparently most Wests in Miami switched to a club or diamond, hoping for a minor-suit miracle. Yet from the auction it should be obvious that East isn't loaded with goodies. The best defense, therefore, is to campaign for two trump tricks.

West should continue with the heart ace and a third heart. Declarer will probably win in hand with the queen, play a club to dummy's king and finesse his spade 10. But West wins with the ace and leads a fourth heart, which East ruffs with the spade jack. Now West's spade nine is promoted as the setting trick.

Boorstin also wrote, "The celebrity is a person who is known for his well-knownness." Well, Perron is replete with well-knownness, having, inter alia, won world team titles in 1980 and 1992.

When defending against a suit contract and having no more side-suit tricks to come, try to generate trump tricks. Copyright 1994, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
June 25, 1994

If you're working for someone else in the year ahead, always strive to put forth your very best effort. Exemplary work could result in a big promotion and bonus.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Overindulgence is a basic inclination you may have to guard against today. Subdue temptations and don't exceed the feed limit. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail #2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your priorities and those of your mate might not be in accord today. If either is too insistent upon having his or her own way, a heated exchange may result.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Something potentially profitable might unexpectedly pop up today. However, you might have so many things on your mind that you'll fail to appreciate it for what it is.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your extravagant whims might vie for expression today. Leave your credit cards at home so you won't succumb to the plastic plague; it's a malady your budget may not be able to handle.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't feel it is necessary to put on airs in order to impress others today. It's their loss, not yours, if they fail to appreciate you for what you are.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Even though you might feel you have lots of interesting things to tell others today, be careful you don't try to totally dominate the conversation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Material opportunities might be of a fleeting nature today. If you waste time trying to determine what you should do, they may disappear before you're finally ready to act.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Ironically, you might experience delays in resolving your own problems today, yet have the ability to help others find quick answers to theirs.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It's best today to tell it like it is, without embellishing your accomplishments. If you start exaggerating your deeds, you may have to layer them with little white lies.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Even though your suggestions may be well-intended, it could prove unwise today to advise a friend regarding his or her financial affairs. Keep your thoughts to yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Instinctively you'll know what to do today to accomplish your ambitious aims, yet in spite of this you might let others dissuade you from your course of action.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Unfortunately, you might not be a good listener today, because you could be so busy talking you won't pay any attention to what others have to say. Later, you'll wish you had.
