Raising The Drinking Age Gains Some Local Support

Herald Staff Writer

Proposed legislation to raise the legal drinking age in Florida to 20 or 21 was met today with widespread support from local educators, law enforcement officials and legislators.

"Alcoholism is one of the greatest problems in high school today," said Don Reynolds, principal at Seminole High School, endorsing legislation proposed by Rep. Fran Carlton, D-Orlando and cosponsored by Rep. Bobby Hattaway, D-Altamonte Springs, and Rep. Bobby Brantley, R-Longwood, to raise the legal drinking age from 18 to 20.

The legislation is to be considered in subcommittee today, said Hattaway. "A serious problem exists in our schools. The Legislature made a serious problem a few years ago by lowering the drinking age to 18 years old," he said. "As of a week ago there were 50 co-sponsors on the bill and it will be quickly passed by the House when it comes out of committee," Hattaway said. He said the committee is considering today not only the bill he is co-sponsoring but two others as

Paul (not his real name) and his neighbors have reached the boiling point and aren't going to tolerate the vandals any longer,

"It just got to the point where the people were afraid to say anything for fear of retalistion," Paul explains. The vandals, he says, are a group of about 10 teen-agers who congregate on street corners or sit in the street night

Amin Arrives In Iraq Seeking Military Help

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) - Deposed Ugandan President Idi Amin has arrived in the radical Arab nation of Iraq in an apparently futile bid to get help for his ousted government, high-ranking diplomatic sources said today. The sources said Amin, who saw Tanzanian troops and Ugandan exiles topple his eight-year dictatorship in four months of fighting, arrived in Iraq Saturday from Libya. The Iraqi response was not known, the sources said, but the capture Sunday of Jinja — Uganda's second largest city — by Tanzanian troops appeared to destroy any hope Amin may have of staging a military comeback.

Senate Considers Budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress is about to break the pattern of rising federal spending which has characterized American government for decades. Consumer Discipline Gas Shortage Key

Amid the bloody and depressing news from Iran comes a dispatch that might warm the hearts of American motorists worried about where their next tankful of gas is coming from. The National Iranian Oil Co. reports that its production has reached 4.7 million barrels a day - nearly 80 percent of the 6 million barrel level sustained under the deposed shah.

There is other news in the pipeline, however, which suggests this will have little or no effect on the oil-supply "crunch" now highly visible on weekend. Iranian officials say they deliberately over-produced to fill back-orders and relieve a traffic jam at their export terminal. Production will be scaled back to about 4 million barrels a day and held there in the future.

And from Saudi Arabia comes word that oil production is being scaled back to the 8.5 million barrels a day it averaged when the shah of Iran was in power. The Arabs, it appears, are not going to continue pumping extra oil to make up for an mIranian shortfall.

by The exporting countries are looking out for of themselves, as might be expected. Iran will produce only as much oil as it can without hiring foreign workers who are anathema to the new government. Revenue will be less, but the Islamic Republic thinks it can get by on less without financing the ambitious economic zeprograms of the shah or his now-cancelled arms

The Saudis and other members of the OPEC cartel will keep their production at a level which assures a "tight" market — tight enough to sustain the recent 9 percent increase in the base price, plus whatever surcharges the member countries can squeeze out. Iran currently is collecting an extra $1.90 a barrel on its light crude, for instance.

The result is still what President Carter described in his recent energy message - less oil at a higher price. It remains the official policy of the United States and other oil-importing countries in the International Energy Agency to reduce their petroleum consumption by five percent to absorb the cutback.

Drivers impatient with no-gas signs or weekend closings of service stations may be wondering who to blame - OPEC, the oil companies, the government or them clves. The companies have been accused of exaggerating the effect of the Iranian crisis to bolste: their case for decontrol of domestic oil prices, or of holding back supplies until prices

The industry denies such charges of course, and it taxes the minds of mere mortals to follow a barrel of Middle Eastern crude through the maze that leads to a service station in the United States, or is supposed to. Suffice it to say that when an oil company rations gasoline to its dealers even while it is stockpiling crude oil outside its refineries which is happening in some cases — it doesn't necessarily mean a conspiracy.

It may only mean that the company is abiding by Standby Regulation Activation No. 1," issued by the Department of Energy last Feb. 28. It urged srefiners to restrict production and deliveries of gasoline if necessary so they would have enough scrude on hand to meet demand during the peak summer driving season. That makes sense, even if DOE's own entitlement and allocation system may the aggravating a refinery problem that existed before the trouble in Iran.

There's no comfort in the news from Middle Eastern oil capitals. The oil exporters have their energy policy" well in hand, a policy of keeping supplies just close enough to demand to give them the power to control the going price for oil. So far they have shown the discipline to make it work. It will keep working until an energy policy of sour own reduces our dependence on their oil - and our discipline as consumers has more than a little to do with its success.

A meeting between Winter Springs city officials and county commissioners this week saw the ageold problem of being unable to communicate rearing its ugly head again.

Mayor Troy Piland and City Administrator Dick Rozansky were trying to get commissioners to approve the paving by county crews of Edgemon Avenue in the city with the city paying the full costs. County Public Works Director Jack Schuder said his department could do the job without any other county project suffering as a result.

Commissioner Dick Williams kept saying he is opposed to spending money on city roads such as Edgemon when other county roads are going begging. Commission Chairman Bob French said he was not interested in getting into a maintenance program in a city and Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff said Schuder's written recommendations did not include Edgemon. Kirchhoff also said the city has apparently chosen to leave the road as it is and doing the project would be opening a can of worms. County Administrator Roger Neiswender said if the county is going to create a new type program where a city would pay all costs of paving a city street, a new policy would have to be created by commissioners. He added if by some chance the public works department should run out of work before the end of the fiscal year it could offer to do paving at cost for all of the cities.

At this point Commisstioner Sandra Glenn asked how Montgomery Road in Altamonte Springs had been paved by the county, snapping the county could do Edgemon the same way. Neiswender said Montgomery was done by agreement with Altamonte and Altamonte paid all costs and with no formal county policy.

And, Commissioner Robert Sturm said paving by the county of city streets would fall into a third category which should be created. Piland, meanwhile continued to note the city was not asking the county to pay anything. Winter Springs would pay the full costs. Nobody seemed to

The request was turned down on a consensus of 3-2 with Williams, Kirchhoff and French opposing and Mrs. Glenn and Sturm in favor of granting the

At a later meeting of the Winter Springs City Council, after hearing Piland's report that no help would be given by the county, it adopted a resolution to pave the street on a 100 percent assessment

"I was extremely pleased with the support from Sturm and Mrs. Glenn," Piland said. "What disturbed me was the constant mention by some commissioners of the cost of manpower and equipment for the project. We weren't asking them to expend any county tax dollars. I couldn't see the rationale behind the decision of the majority. What I was hoping for was a way to save the taxpayers some money," he said.

WASHINGTON (NEA)—Any doubts about the congressional view of the health hazards posed by saccharin should have been dispelled when Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Tex., strolled into a recent House hearing on the subject waving a diet soda

While Gramm's grandstand act was hardly a class performance, it pretty much typified the skepticism of most members of Congress towards scientific evidence identifying the popular artificial sweetner as a carcinogen, or Despite the findings of a National Academy of

likely that Congress will extend the moratorium for another two or three years — health hazards WASHINGTON WORLD There is, in fact, still considerable scientific controversy about the exact nature and scope of the cancer risk posed to humans by sacchari One National Academy of Sciences panel, after

Nonetheless, a second NAS panel stopped short of urging an immediate ban on saccharin — the only action available to the FDA under existing food safety laws - and recommended instead that the laws be changed to permit a more

Indeed, if there is a single form of saccharin use that seems logical to curtail, it is the diet soda. By no stretch of the imagination can soda oop, diet or otherwise, be considered essential or even desirable from a nutritional standpoint. For a thirst quencher, nothing beats plain old water. And for weight control, there is no substitiute for simple self-restraint. Diet-conscious eaters don't expect to consume heaps of candy, ice crea, and other calorie-laden goodies. So why should they view the unlimited consumption of Anyone who really cherishes the stuff can drink the regular kind, in moderate quantities, and cut

Three citizen subcommittees have been organized to scrutinize offensive programming and advertisements on radio, television and newspapers and report their findings

This action was taken Monday when 19 of 24 members attended the first meeting of the sex education of at the Seminole County school district office. Their mission was to organize their ranks and devise strategy to "cleanup" the environment of offensive advertisements and programs they deem suggestive and

At a recent meeting, school board members supported Supt. William Layer's recommendation to cleanup the environment first before institution iex education program in the classroom. He called for the citizens' support to influence the media, boycotting it if necessary, to change offensive programs they deem harmful viewing Layer, who had been designated as temporary committee chairman, relinquished his leadership Monday to elected co-chairmen Gordon Nelson of 1209 Winter Springs Blvd., Maitland, and Anne Boston of 1935 Japonica Road, Winter Park. Boston is the president of the Seminole County Parent, Teacher, Students Association (PTSA). One member of the audience protested: "I think we will radio and television as well as in newspapers. Committee members will "brainstorm" together and make a list of offensive material in their particular medium, Nelson said. They will present their report at the next committee meeting to be held at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, May 8 at the Longwood Elementary School. Layer explained the concerned citizen group would never totally agree on programs that are offensive but there are "some common grounds." "We all have different opinions of what is acceptable and what is not," Layer said. "To be successful, we will find those things that are so bad that everybody is in Jean Michels, of Box 738 Miller Road, Sanford, said she is a mother of three and finds acceptable family programs scarce even during prime time television. "I was watching 'Eight is Enough' ", said Mrs. Michels. "They were covering the subject of living together before getting married. At the end of the program, I asked my five-year-old daughter, Wendy, what she thought of it. She said she thought it's okay." When the three media committees report their findings, each member of the citizens committee will be responsible for waging a telephone-calling and letter-writing campaign to media carrying offensive material. "Every member is responsible for writing 10 letters," Layer said. "If you can get another person to agree to write another 10 letters, this thing can really multiply. "People will have so many letters flowing in, the represent the state in national competition in 1980. The winner is Karen Whigham Coleman, 32, who teaches gifted students in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades at Tuskawilla Middle School.

"It's such a wonderful experience," said Mrs. Coleman, who had learned she was selected Florida Teacher of the Year 1980 just fifteen minutes before reporters contacted

"Supt. William Layer just called and offered his congratulations but anything like this is a joint effort,' Mrs. Coleman said. "My school has been so supportive." Mrs. Coleman was selected from among 38 nominees from throughout the state in March before being named one of the six finalists in the program. She has been teaching for 12 years.

The six nominees for the state honor were chosen by a screening committee composed of representatives of the Florida PTA, the Florida Association of District School Superintendents, Florida Education Association, the Florida Teaching Profession and the Department of

The selection of Mrs. Coleman for Florida Teacher of the Year 1980 was a unanimous decision, said A Erzleben, coordinator of the program for the Florida Department of Education. The committee based its criteria on the same standards the national committee will be using when it makes its selection in 1980. Erzleben

"The national committee is looking for a teacher having a superior ability to impart love of learning in students of all backgrounds and abilities," said Erxleben. "Of course, we take into account the teacher's own background, education, school and community involvement and extra-curricular activities," he said.
