Solutions Class Offered For Parents Of Teenagers

By Kathy Tyrity
Herald Staff Writer

Have you ever considered letting your teenager do as he pleases and then letting him face the natural consequences of his actions?

That is among the suggestions to be taught at Sanford's first class for parents of teenagers beginning Tuesday at 7 p.m. at Sanford Middle School.

"Self discipline is the goal," said therapist-instructor Bob Dixon, associate director of Psychological Technologies in Longwood, who will be teaching the course.

"I feel very strongly a child can only learn his responsibility by being given the opportunity to make decisions for himself," he continued. "Parents need to be available to advise if things go wrong."

For instance, a teenager may decide to forego his homework to go out with the gang. When he gets an F and asks, "Did I get this because I'm not any good, or because I had my priorities mixed up?" the parent must be there to talk, Dixon said.

"No preaching or criticism. Use reflective listening to help him understand... Let him know you understand he has bad feelings about it and help him to verbalize those feelings. Show him he can change those unpleasant feelings by behaving differently next time."

Unfortunately for many parents, Dixon said, "By the time our kids are teens we have pretty well established a pattern of relating and the style generally doesn't work." The parents generally want automatic authority instead of having a 'democratic family' in which both the parent and child have input into decisions, he said.

More and more, Dixon said, teens are being influenced by their peers and the media, despite their parents' attitude. "Parents become frustrated because they no longer have the automatic authority, so you just now communicate. The child is not going to just automatically accept your views on how things should be done. When there is a disagreement, parents look at it as a challenge to their authority and say, 'You're not listening to me.' The issue is the parents are not listening to the child."

Dixon said the trick is to focus on the solution rather than the problem itself. "Learn to listen and deal with conflicts; the secret is understanding and communicating."

He uses a book/course called, "Parent Effectiveness Training" (PET), by Dr. Thomas Gordon. In this, the issues are "discipline and responsibility," instead of punishment.

Discipline, Dixon said, teaches him to take some responsibility for his actions. "The child recognizes his rights are limited by the rights of others."

Basically, the parents have to give up a little authority, recognize that their authority isn't absolute, and give their children room to make decisions, mistakes and progress on their own, he summarized.

"Teenagers' 'misbehavior' is only that which we don't approve of. We must remember, their objective is often to get attention, to be accepted by peers, or sometimes to exert control over parents. And sometimes because he feels he's not a very adequate person, he behaves to reinforce that."

"Let them suffer the natural consequences of poor decisions. But be available and establish a willingness to listen."

Teen Parenting Classes coming up this week are free and co-sponsored by the Parent Resource Center, Seminole Community College, and the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. They are directed for parents of children ages 11 through 18.

Classes will meet every Tuesday night for five weeks, through Feb. 24, from 7-9:30 p.m. each night. To reserve a place in the class, call the school at 322-3083.

Fondling In Church Charged

A 70-year-old Sanford man remained jailed today in lieu of $2,000 bond charged in connection with allegedly fondling a 14-year-old girl during Sunday morning church services in Sanford.

The incident occurred at All Souls Catholic Church, 810 Oak Ave. Parishioners pointed out to off duty Sanford police Lt. William Bernoski that the girl was being fondled. Bernoski saw the girl being fondled. He immediately separated her from the suspect and, as discreetly as possible, called for a marked patrol unit to come to the church for the man at about 9 a.m. Sunday, Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett said today.

Harriett said the girl was frightened by the man.

Jennings L. Hurt Jr., of 1011 Oak Ave., was charged with lewd and lascivious or indecent assault or act on or in the presence of a child, sexual battery, after questioning at the police station at 9:47 a.m. Sunday.

Off-Duty Fireman Saves Man

A quick-thinking, off-duty Sanford firefighter dragged his neighbor from a burning house and told reporters he was only responding to his sense of duty.

Richard Lazar, a 14-year veteran of the Sanford Fire Department, said his first thought was "Is anybody in there?" after he noticed a fire inside a house in his neighborhood while on his way to the grocery store on Saturday at about 9:45 p.m.

Lazar said that after he noticed a fire at the home of Clarence Williams, 38, 830 Valencia

Waite Reported Safe, Negotiations Continue

LONDON (UPI) — Hostage negotiator Terry Waite, who vanished from public view nearly a week ago in Beirut, was reported safe today and continuing his efforts to free Westerners kidnapped in Lebanon, a Church of England spokeswoman said.

"Our latest information is that Terry Waite is still engaged in the humanitarian mission which took him to Lebanon a fortnight ago," said the spokeswoman at Lambeth palace, residence of the Archbishop of Canterbury.

"People in a position to know have assured us here in Lambeth Palace of his safety and well-being. We have continued assurances today that Mr. Waite is still in good hands and that he is continuing his work out of the public eye."

She had no further comment. Since Waite, the archbishop's special envoy, arrived in Beirut on his mission two weeks ago, 10 more foreigners have been kidnapped, including four Beirut University College professors — three Americans and an Indian U.S. resident — during the weekend and two unidentified foreigners today.

The new abductions bring to 29 the total number of foreigners missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon.

Waite has not been seen in Beirut since Tuesday when he slipped out of his hotel in Moslem West Beirut to meet members of the Islamic Jihad organization to bargain for the release of two American hostages, Terry Anderson and Thomas Sutherland.

The spokeswoman also said Waite has no immediate plans to give up his work on behalf of the hostages, despite a newspaper report Monday that he was planning only one more trip to Lebanon after his current mission.

"Terry Waite has said (in the past) that the time has come when he needs to take stock and to consider the future," the spokeswoman said. "However, there are no immediate plans for him to give up the work on which he is now engaged."

2 More Foreigners Believed Kidnapped

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Gunmen kidnapped two men believed to be foreigners in west Beirut today, hours after a deadline set by a Shiite Moslem group to kill one of its four Western hostages passed without any word on their fate.

The abductions brought to 11 the number of foreigners kidnapped since West Germany arrested a Palestinian wanted for the 1985 hijacking of a TWA flight and the death of an American passenger.

Witnesses said two gunmen stormed into the An Najjar Photocopy shop on Bustros street in the commercial district of west Beirut, grabbed the two men by the hair and put guns to their stomachs.

The gunmen ordered the two men outside, bundled them into their car and sped off.

There were no immediate claims of responsibility for the kidnapping.

State-run Beirut radio also reported the abduction, saying the victims apparently were foreigners.

The shop in which the men were seized is next to the entrance to a building housing the Beirut offices of a Western news agency, television and radio station. It is often frequented by foreign journalists.

"They are foreigners but I do not know their nationality," said a woman sales assistant in the photo-copy shop who witnessed their abduction. "Whenever they used to come to the shop they always spoke to me in English."

"One of the men was blond, tall and has blue eyes. I would say he is 23 years old. The other is shorter, has black hair. He must be 20 years old," she said. "The gunmen looked at me as if warning me not to say a word."

"I was really scared," said the woman, who only gave her first name as Ahlam.

POLICE

IN BRIEF

Alleged Sale Of Cocaine To Undercover Agent Brings Arrest

A 22-year-old man who at about 11 p.m. Friday allegedly sold 1/2 ounce of marijuana for $70 to an undercover City/County investigation bureau agent was arrested immediately following the reported sale.

The arrest was made behind the Handy Way on Orange Avenue, Longwood, where the agent said he met the suspect. Recovered from the suspect was marked money which the agent said he had used to pay for the pot.

Charged with possession of over 20 grams of marijuana and sale of marijuana was Robert Joseph Bush, who was being held in lieu of $1,000 bond.

Cake Theft Leads To Jail

Sanford police reported spotting a 31-year-old man and a youth exiting Manna Haven soup kitchen, 519 S. Palmetto Ave., Sanford, at about 11:22 p.m. Friday. The kitchen was closed at that time.

Police reported finding a $2 pecan cake hidden in the coat of the youth. The cake is believed to have been taken from Manna Haven. Both were taken into custody. Johnny Lee Acree, 31, of 516 E. Fifth St., Sanford, has been jailed on charges of burglary to a structure and petty theft. He was being held in lieu of $4,500 bond.

Driving Under Influence Arrest

The following person has been arrested in Seminole County on a charge of driving under the influence:

—Barbara Ann Holtz, 25, of 525 E. Semoran Blvd., Fern Park, was arrested on Interstate 4 in Lake Mary at 10:48 p.m. Friday by Lake Mary police after her car, which was traveling erratically, was pursued into Lake Mary by a Volusia County sheriff's deputy.

Burglaries And Thefts Reported

Don Albert Wilson, 49, of 3342 Main St., Sanford, reported to sheriff's deputies that a $175 television was stolen from his home Friday.

The 1982 motorcycle of James M. Lingenfelter, 20, of 769 Hillview Drive, Altamonte Springs, was stolen Thursday. A sheriff's report valued the vehicle at $600.

A $5 package of sausage was stolen along with a $250 video recorder and a .22-caliber pistol valued at $100 from the home of Holly A. Switzer, 26, of 312 Sandpiper Drive, Casselberry, Friday. Sheriff's deputies have the name of a possible suspect.

Jon Paul Graham, 46, of 819 River Bend Blvd., Longwood, reported to sheriff's deputies that a $289 radio, about $300 worth of tools, two battery chargers valued at $50 each and a $21 case of soft drinks were stolen from his office at Auto Emporium, Inc., 9505 U.S. Highway 17-92, Maitland, Thursday or Friday.

A $650 motor was stolen off a sailboat in a fenced compound at the business of owner William R. Foster, Foster's Auto Clinic, 2590 W. State Road 434, Longwood, Thursday or Friday, a sheriff's report said.

Sanford Police Reports

Jerry E. Landwehr, 56, of Orlando reported to police that on Tuesday unidentified persons removed a Hotay Pressure Cleaner valued at approximately $4500 from outside the Croger Truck Cleaning Co. located at 200 S. Persimmon Ave., Sanford.

Landwehr said the machine had been leased to Industrial Waste Service at 555 Hope St., Longwood, and that they in turn had leased the machine to Croger. Landwehr is a salesman for Lee Chemical Corporation in Orlando.

The director of food services for Seminole County School Board, Eldon K. Chambers, 40, reported to police that about $12,000 worth of foods and meat from the food service warehouse at 407 W. 4th St. were unaccounted for and that there were no signs of forced entry into the building.

Donna Jean Allen, 26, of P.O. Box 234, Lake Monroe, told police that someone took her purse from the front seat of her white, Volkswagon Rabbit that was parked at a gas pump at the Circle K convenience store, 1903 Country Club Rd., Sanford. Allen said the purse was on the passenger seat of her car while she went into the convenience store to pay for gas on Wednesday at 5 p.m. When she returned, the purse was gone.

A thief who possibly entered Discount Wallpaper, 585 N. U.S. Highway 17-92, Longwood, through an unlocked back door Wednesday or Thursday stole $700 from a cash register according to a report owner Clifton E. Meadows, 53, of 202 Fountain Tree Apartments, Winter Springs, filed with sheriff's deputies.

Two Arrested In Home Searches

In unrelated cases City/County investigation bureau agents with warrants reported searching two Seminole County homes and arresting a woman and a man in connection with possession of illegal drugs.

In the first case, Linda Diane Nelson, 30, of 204 Williams St., Altamonte Springs, was arrested at her home at 7:30 p.m. Friday after a police search turned up 10 slabs of crack cocaine, marijuana and additional cocaine. She has been charged with possession of cocaine and less than 20 grams of marijuana and was being held in lieu of $1,000 bond.

In the second incident, Aidoph Comer, 28, of the McAllister Motel, 1221 Southwest Road, Apt. Q, Sanford, was arrested at his workplace, Royal Oldsmobile, State Road 436, Winter Park, after his home was searched at about 2:30 p.m. Friday.

The arrest was made at 4:45 p.m. and Comer, who is an automobile deteller, has been charged with trafficking in cocaine, possession of cocaine and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon.

In addition to six ounces of crack cocaine reportedly found a .38-caliber hand gun in a crawl space above a closet in Comer's home. Police said he is a convicted felon, on homicide and armed robbery charges, so he was charged for having the gun. He was being held without bond.

Republicans Seek Immunity For North

By Dana Walker
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republicans on the House and Senate select committees investigating the Iran arms scandal are pushing for limited immunity for Oliver North and other key witnesses despite objections by special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh.

Republicans, responding to questions in interviews over several days, also said witnesses could be called and hearings formally held by the House select committee as early as Feb. 20 and completed in 60 days. The Senate committee probably would not hold hearings until March.

Committee Republicans, citing broader goals than the independent counsel's task of prosecuting lawbreakers in the controversy, said they have reached a general consensus that granting immunity to North, the fired National Security Council staff member, and others would expedite the process and allow the administration and Congress to get on to other business.

Democrats, leery of being seen as politicizing the situation with hearings drawn out into the election season, appeared to be in general agreement.

Those most likely to be granted "use" immunity, protection from prosecution on only those answers to limited questions made in the hearings, would be North, his former boss, John Poindexter, and retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord.

All are said to have extensive knowledge of the reported diversion of money from the sales of arms to Iran to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua and all have refused to testify on grounds of self-incrimination before other congressional committees.

"The key to it is Poindexter and North. Once we can get them immunity, at least use immunity, to work in coordination with the independent counsel, we could wrap this up very shortly," said Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich.

"I think that's one of the earlier decisions we have to make," added Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho.

Walsh has asked the special House committee probing the affair to delay granting immunity to any witness until he completes his investigation.

Treasurer's Suicide May Save Pension For Family

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — State Treasurer R. Budd Dwyer may have saved his state pension for his widow with his suicide one day before his scheduled sentencing on bribery-related charges, officials say.

Dwyer had been ruined financially as well as politically by the charges, and two of his close associates said Friday the treasurer may have killed himself in part to ease the financial burden on his family.

In the weeks leading up to his public suicide, Dwyer expressed concern that under state law he would lose the pension upon sentencing, one of the associates said. But by committing suicide before the sentencing, the pension may have been saved, officials said.

Also, it was disclosed the treasurer made a plea for a presidential pardon on the eve of his suicide.

A first of two memorial services for Dwyer was scheduled for today in nearby Hershey.

Dwyer, 47, shot himself in the mouth with a .357 Magnum pistol at a news conference Thursday morning in front of aides, reporters and television cameras.

The two-term Republican treasurer was to be sentenced Friday in federal court for his conviction in a far-reaching government scandal. He faced up to 55 years in prison.

At the news conference, Dwyer repeatedly denied his guilt and called for reforms of the judicial system. He said he had little chance of winning on appeal and added, "I couldn't afford another trial if I did."

With his suicide, Dwyer's widow, Joanne, may be eligible to receive the treasurer's state pension, said John Brosius, executive director of the State Employees' Retirement System.

Under the state Public Employee Pension Forfeiture Act, a corrupt government official is stripped of his pension upon conviction. But most lawyers agree Dwyer would not be officially convicted until sentenced.

Chicken Bone Injuries Provokes Damage Suit

An Orange County woman has filed suit against an Altamonte Springs restaurant claiming a chicken bone in a sandwich injured her lower lip, teeth and jaw when she bit into the sandwich.

Patricia Allen filed suit against Multi-Foods Corp., doing business as Shoney's Restaurant at Lee's Famous Recipe Restaurant, 300 State Road 434.

Ms. Allen is seeking unspecified damages in excess of $5,000.

According to the suit filed this week, Ms. Allen purchased a "boneless" chicken sandwich at the restaurant on July 7 and took it home to eat. When she bit into it however, she says a chicken bone concealed in the sandwich grievously injured her by puncturing her lower lip, and damaging her teeth and jaw.

As a consequence, she said, she has suffered pain, physical handicap, and has had to pay medical expenses and had her working ability impaired.

No hearing date has been set.

Snow Halts Schools, Planes

The second major winter storm in less than a week dumped up to 13 inches of snow on Virginia and rumbled up the East Coast today, closing schools, airports and all federal government offices in the nation's capital.

The storm spread snow today from the Tennessee Valley and the mid-Atlantic states to southern New England. Freezing rain fell in North Carolina, and travelers advisories for snow or icy roads spanned much of the Southeast.

Forecasters warned the storm would intensify as it moved up the coast and out to sea, dumping heavy snow in time for the morning rush hour in New Jersey, Virginia and Washington, where roads remained icy from last week's storm.

Schools in Washington, Virginia and Maryland canceled classes today, giving many students a five-day weekend because of the back-to-back snowstorms. Officials said all federal and Washington government offices were closed today except for essential personnel.

The cold and snow closed Washington's National Airport and Washington Dulles International Airport early today. Stores in the nation's capital reported brisk business as shoppers hurried to stock up on groceries. Hospitals in the Washington area asked for volunteers with four-wheel vehicles to take nurses and doctors to work.

Snow and arctic cold since Wednesday have been blamed for at least 17 deaths nationwide.

The latest storm-related death occurred Sunday when a Bolton, Mass., man died while clearing snow in Lexington, Mass. Peter LaMontagne, 26, apparently leaned too far out of the front-end loader he was operating and was struck by one of the machine's arms, police said.

Gale warnings covered the northern Atlantic Coast and the winds were expected to create near blizzard conditions in some areas. Up to 14 inches of snow was expected over Cape Cod, and wind chill temperatures down to 20 below zero were forecast for the middle Atlantic states.

By early today, snowfall amounts included 13 inches at Roanoke, Va., 9 inches at Lynchburg, Va., 8 inches at Boone, N.C., 5 inches at Bluefield, W.Va., and 2 to 3 inches throughout the Washington area.

"I've never seen this much at one time — one on top of the other," said Kevin Donovan, a 12-year resident of Boone. "This snow is a bad snow. It started off warm so there is a half-inch layer of ice at the bottom of it and the roads are slick. It's pretty treacherous."

The weather service in New York warned of "blizzardlike" conditions in the city and the Sanitation Department appealed to commuters to leave their cars at home and take public transportation.

"We could have a super mess in the wake of Super Bowl," said Vito Turso, a Sanitation Department spokesman. Last week's snowstorm, coupled with the commuter rail strike on Long Island, reduced travel on New York roadways to a crawl with many drivers abandoning their cars.

The cold storm followed a weekend cold snap that created icy patches where snow covered streets from Thursday's storm, which dumped up to 20 inches on the East Coast.

The National Weather Service in New Jersey warned commuting today could be "a real nightmare."

Returning America To Space Flight

By William Harwood
UPI Science Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — The shuttle Challenger blew up one year ago Jan. 28, killing a school teacher and six crewmates and forever changing the very foundations of American civilian and military space policy.

The disaster shocked America with the brutal reality that its prized technology cannot be taken for granted and served as a reminder that exploring the final frontier can exact the ultimate toll.

Never again will the United States rely solely on the high-

'I can guarantee you there isn't a single person in this agency who would for a minute launch us on Feb. 18 if they thought that could result in any kind of disaster.'

—Commander Frederick Hauck

cost, high-risk shuttle system to gain access to space. A new era of "mixed fleet" operations using the shuttle and new unmanned rockets is just around the corner.

"The nation is really in a bad situation," said Rear Adm. Richard Truly, NASA's chief of the shuttle program. "We've created a backlog (of payloads) that's going to take into the 1990s to get back to anything approaching normal."

"But I think 10 years from now, you'll look at the nation's space program and we'll have a robust mixed fleet. We'll have a shuttle that's safe and operating routinely and by that time we'll have probably on the drawing boards a replacement for the shuttle."

NASA's climb out of the depths of guilt and paralysis that smothered the agency in the aftermath of the worst disaster in space history has been marked by slow but steady progress toward safely returning America to manned space flight.

And the Challenger anniversary, in a sense, is a watershed for NASA, a clear if imaginary line separating the painful work of finding out what went wrong that cold day in January from the work required to implement the necessary changes.

"We're getting our house in order, we're getting our act together, we have turned the corner in our recovery efforts," said NASA Administrator James Fletcher, named by President Reagan to lead the agency back to stability. "Step by step, in a systematic and orderly way, we are reshaping and rebuilding the agency to prepare the nation for a new era of space flight."

The first post-Challenger shuttle flight now is scheduled for Feb. 18, 1988, with the shuttle Discovery to carry a $100 million NASA communications satellite into orbit identical to one lost with Challenger at the end of its 73-second flight.

In a clear step toward that long-awaited day, a crew of five veteran astronauts has been selected to man Discovery — commander Frederick Hauck, co-pilot Richard Covey, David Hilmers, George Nelson and John "Mike" Lounge. Flight training in earnest is about to begin.

"I think really what our mission will symbolize is the fact that we have decided to press ahead and I think much in memory to the bravery of the crew of Challenger and that we have not let those deaths be in vain," Hilmers said in an interview.

But many agency insiders say the February 1988 launch date will be impossible to meet given the sheer number of safety modifications required and a tight test schedule in 1987 to make sure the shuttle's re-designed booster rockets are safe for flight along with a host of other critical systems.

Discovery alone faces 30 mandatory modifications ranging from major fuel valve re-designs to improved brakes and maneuvering rocket systems. More than 100 other modifications or design changes are on the back burner and many could end up being required before first flight.

Hauck said the launch processing schedule is extremely optimistic and he stressed blastoff will be delayed if the work is not completed to everyone's satisfaction because the stakes are simply too high.

"I can guarantee you there isn't a single person in this agency who would for a minute launch us on Feb. 18 if they thought that that could result in any kind of disaster," Hauck said. "I really think that might be the end of the manned space program."

Cautious Optimism

Even so, agency managers are cautiously optimistic and whether the February launch date can be met or not, 1987 will be an intense year of work for NASA to regain the high ground of space.

"I think there was a natural grieving and shock period and low morale for a good part of last year," Truly said in an interview in his office at NASA headquarters in Washington. "I guess that was natural."

"But within the program today, boy, we've got a lot of hard working people from the top of this program to the bottom. We're trying to make February '88. We think we can do it. If we can't do it, we'll make the first month after that that's safe to fly. We've got a lot to do this year."

First, however, NASA will pause to honor the memory of Challenger's fallen crew: commander Francis "Dick" Scobee, co-pilot Michael Smith, Judith Resnik, Ellison Onizuka, Ronald McNair, civilian satellite engineer Gregory Jarvis and New Hampshire high school teacher Christa McAuliffe.

Ironically, the first anniversary of the Challenger accident comes one day after the 20th anniversary of a launch pad fire that killed three Apollo astronauts and prompted a rebuilding program much like the one currently under way.

On Jan. 28 flags at agency field centers will be lowered to half staff at 11:38 a.m. EST, the time one year ago that Challenger blasted away from Earth on its final flight, and NASA employees across the United States will pause in their work to observe 73 seconds of silence.

There will be no formal NASA ceremonies, no speeches and no agency memorial services in a conscious attempt by NASA to put the past to rest in order to concentrate on the future.

But during those 73 seconds, all of those who watched or participated in Challenger's launching will remember the delays that postponed blastoff to Jan. 28, the thrill that always accompanies liftoff and the belief and horror that followed the shuttle's strangely silent detonation nine miles above the Atlantic Ocean.

They will remember the Rogers Commission findings that record-cold weather that day compromised an already faulty booster joint and that Challenger's right-side booster ruptured as a result, triggering the shuttle's disintegration.

And they will remember that an insidious chain of faulty decision-making by NASA's managers, fostered by complacency, tight budgets and a brutal launch schedule, ultimately was responsible for the deaths of seven Americans and the loss of one quarter of the nation's manned spaceflight capability.

They will remember and perhaps renew their vow to do everything humanly possible to minimize risk and prevent another space tragedy even as work crews continue lowering Challenger's wreckage into a pair of abandoned missile silos for what amounts to permanent burial.

"I don't think we'll ever get over the loss, those were folks we've all known for a number of years," Hilmers said. "It's difficult to view an ascent on film without thinking ... of the point in the trajectory they were in when the accident happened. The sadness will never go away."

Ultimate Risk

"The fact is, this risk involves the ultimate risk for some people and therefore only the highest level of personal commitment and dedication is adequate for this program," said Eugene Kranz, director of mission operations at the Johnson Space Center in Houston. "I mean, there is no alternative to that."

The roadmap for NASA's return to space was drawn up by the presidential commission appointed to investigate the tragedy, a panel of distinguished scientists, engineers, astronauts and academicians headed by former Secretary of State William Rogers.

The Rogers Commission's report, submitted to President Reagan June 6, made nine sweeping recommendations that forever changed the way NASA does business.

"On the whole, it seems to me that they're doing a very fine job," Rogers said in a telephone interview from his law office in New York.

"I think they're making a serious and determined effort to carry out all the recommendations of the commission, so based on what I've seen and what I've heard, I think they're doing an excellent job. I'm quite satisfied."

The recommendations can be broken down into two categories: management and hardware.

process of being implemented.

A new safety office has been established, astronauts are in positions of management authority and communications have been streamlined to ensure a clear if not universal dissemination of information about key systems.

Nearly every top manager involved in the decision to launch Challenger has been replaced, including Jesse Moore, who was associate administrator for manned space flight, and Lawrence Mulloy, then chief of the booster program at the Marshall Space Flight Center.

Nowhere To Hide

It was Mulloy and other NASA engineers who pressured Morton Thiokol the night before takeoff to reverse a no-launch recommendation despite fears that cold weather could degrade the performance of key O-ring seals in the giant boosters.

"As the manager in charge of the (boosters), I was the one with nowhere to hide," Mulloy said in an interview in Huntsville, reflecting on his role in the disaster. "I was the guy who recommended we fly even with the evidence of O-ring erosion that we saw and I was the guy who was telling NASA management it was an acceptable risk."

"I'm not the guy who made the final decision. But I was the spokesman who was presenting the problem and the rationale for living with that problem. In that way I guess I became sort of the focal point."

Faulty Vision

When the shuttle program was approved in the early 1970s, it was envisioned as the answer to the nation's space needs, a single vehicle that could launch scientific, commercial and military satellites.

As a consequence, America's once active unmanned rocket programs were slowly phased out as the United States put all its eggs in one basket, relying on the shuttle to be an economical and reliable space truck.

In the year since Challenger blew up, it quickly became obvious that such reliance on a single vehicle was folly. With the shuttle program grounded for two years, only a handful of "expendable" rockets were available to carry a tremendous backlog of grounded payloads into orbit.

To make matters worse, an Air Force Titan 34D rocket, one of just a half dozen left in the nation's military inventory, exploded April 18 seconds after launch from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., and on May 3, a NASA Delta was destroyed 91 seconds after launch when its first-stage engine failed.

"People don't realize that for a frightening period of time, for months, the United States was unable to even launch a beer can into orbit," said one NASA official who asked not to be named. "We had nothing, the United States of America."

On August 14, President Reagan approved construction of a replacement shuttle, but the $2.1 billion ship will not be ready to fly until late 1991 at the earliest.

The Pentagon has moved to ensure access to space for high-priority military payloads. Even before Challenger's demise, the Air Force had won approval to build a dozen upgraded Titan 4 rockets to serve as backups to the shuttle.

Now, another dozen Titan 4s have been approved and the Air Force is pressing ahead with plans to develop a new medium-class unmanned launcher to carry military navigation satellites into orbit. Those rockets are expected to form the backbone of a new commercial rocket fleet.

Eventually, the Air Force plans to build a Saturn moon rocket-class launcher to lower the cost of delivering payloads to orbit. Such a rocket could become operational in the late 1990s.

"We need to get the cost for access to space down," said Air Force Secretary Edward "Pete" Aldridge. "It's getting to the point where the launcher is getting far more expensive than the satellite that we're flying and that's the wrong answer."

That, perhaps, is the single most important lesson to emerge from the Challenger disaster.

"I think we always needed a mixed fleet," said Nelson. "I think it was a mistake to put all our eggs in the shuttle basket. It doesn't make sense to rely on one machine to do all your work."

Citizens' Role

But the scope of manned space operations has been changed. McAuliffe was the first ordinary citizen to win a flight on a shuttle and NASA had planned to launch a journalist on a mission that had been scheduled for September 1986.

The role of citizens in the shuttle program will be sharply reduced. Barbara Morgan, McAuliffe's backup space teacher, may one day complete her colleague's mission, but it will not happen any time soon.

"Let's say the astronauts are a little uncomfortable having a civilian aboard," Fletcher said in a Washington interview. "We're going to respect their discomfort. Until we're over that hump we cannot talk about civilians in space."

Other more critical issues remain unresolved as well, including the cost and development of NASA's long-planned space station and whether Congress will support such a multi-billion dollar project in times of fiscal constraint.

The same applies to space science, which has been devastated by the Challenger accident.

Some observers point out that without a clear commitment from the president and Congress, NASA stands in danger of seeing its overall capabilities reduced at a time when military space endeavors, especially the ultimate deployment of Strategic Defense Initiative spacecraft, are ascendant.

'The Sadness Will Never Go Away'

The crew of the Challenger leave crew quarters and head for the van that will take them to the launch pad on Jan. 28, 1986 — (from left to back) Judy Resnik, Dick Scobee, Ron McNair, Michael Smith, Christa McAuliffe, Ellison Onizuka and Greg Jarvis.

Redesigning the shuttle boosters' faulty fuel segment joints leads the list of hardware changes that must be designed, tested and certified before the next flight.

Four full-scale test firings are planned for 1987 with the first on tap in March at Morton Thiokol Inc.'s Brigham City, Utah, plant.

Summing up the failure that doomed Challenger, J.R. Thompson, who directed the agency's internal investigation, said: "The simple answer to the public is I think NASA has taken an awful lot of bows on these prior launches. On this one, we just fumbled."

Other schedule-pacing items include the possible implementation of a rudimentary crew bailout system and work to make the shuttle's temperamental liquid hydrogen-fueled main engines more reliable.

"As a pilot-astronaut, I always worried about those guys, because those are the things that if you talk about high technology, fast moving parts and high pressures and stuff, boy, that's where it is and we're very dependent on those engines working correctly every time," Covey said.

Another threat to the schedule is the strong possibility NASA will elect to test fire Discovery's three main engines at the launch pad before the first flight.

That could add four to six weeks to the shuttle's processing flow and planning documents at the Kennedy Space Center show March 21 as a more realistic launch date in that eventuality.

On the management front, retired Air Force Gen. Samuel Phillips, former chief of the Apollo moon program, conducted a thorough review of all aspects of management and made more than 100 recommendations for change, all of which have been or are in the

Playing Chicken Is Risky Strategy

That whooshing sound of the plunging U.S. dollar is being heard around the world nowadays. It has lost approximately 40 percent of its value against other major currencies during the last two years. And the other day, unnamed members of the Reagan administration let it be known they are willing to allow the dollar to decline still further.

In the generally low-key world of international-currency diplomacy, such comments were looked upon as war whoops. They upset U.S. allies, and this prompted a halfhearted denial from the Reagan administration. But currency traders didn't believe the disclaimer. They kept right on selling dollars, whose value of course dropped further until finally some market correction occurred.

What does all this mean? The administration seeks to redress the U.S. trade imbalance by tinkering with the dollar, making foreign goods more expensive here and U.S. products that much cheaper to overseas consumers. This, it is hoped, will stimulate U.S. business, perhaps even restore some of the jobs in U.S. manufacturing — more than a million — that have been lost since 1980. The administration also figures that, at some point, trading partners such as West Germany and Japan will become so alarmed by the sliding dollar that they will take action to spur their own domestic demand, which ought to help U.S. producers sell goods there.

So far, the policy doesn't seem to have worked, inasmuch as last year's U.S. trade deficit approximated a record $175 billion. At the same time, we are not suffering from serious inflation either. So the administration keeps right on doing what it has been doing. Some economists have likened the U.S. policy to a game of chicken with its trading partners.

Among those who are displeased is Paul A. Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. Volcker, a kind of Horatio at the bridge of inflation, helped drive the prime rate above 20 percent the last time he did battle. He does not wish to experience that again. A plunging dollar threatens renewed inflation primarily because imports such as petroleum become so expensive to U.S. consumers. At the same time, producers of domestic goods, faced with less competition from exporters, feel freer to raise their prices.

In economics, just about anything you do to pursue a gain also incurs risk of a loss, which is one reason it is called a dismal science. And the plunging dollar poses threats of recession as well as inflation. Remember stagflation? The persistent federal budget deficit is heavily financed by foreigners. To do that, they must convert their currencies into dollars. But if the dollar keeps falling in relation to foreign currencies, the foreign investors could well decide to back off. This would fuel a rise in U.S. interest rates, and, likely, produce a business downturn, which in turn would shrink federal revenue. And even if federal spending remains constant, the net result would be an even bigger federal deficit.

To its credit, the Reagan administration has generally — except for a recent and regrettable round of punitive tariffs — stood bravely against shortsighted congressional demands to wage a trade war. But artificially devaluing the dollar in pursuit of increased U.S. exports could be almost as risky. The real answer for a better trade balance is to increase productivity. This, of course, is much more demanding than playing a game of chicken.

BERRY'S WORLD

BEN WATTENBERG

'Slowly, The World Is Becoming More Free'

Stephen Vincent Benet's story "The Devil and Daniel Webster" has a memorable scene where the ghost of the fiery Sen. Webster asks, "Neighbor, how stands the union?" and then Benet suggests, "You better answer the union stands as she stood, rock-bottomed and copper-sheathed, one and indivisible."

Well, that's one form of rating system. It's an old game; people always want to know, as Lincoln asked, "where we have been, and whither we are tending?"

A small organization, Freedom House, each year tries to answer and quantify that question for the whole world, in regard to one of the most ineffable of substances: human freedom. They've been doing it each year since 1973 and their scorecards and observations are fascinating and relevant.

Their main conclusion is this: Slowly, perhaps very slowly, the world is becoming more free.

Nations, as seen through the lenses of political rights and civil liberties, are ranked by Freedom House from 1 to 7, with 1 being the most free and 7 the pits. Among the conditions surveyed are press freedoms, labor union activity, the ability to vote in real elections and the ability to travel or emigrate.

Back in 1973, 32 percent of the population of the world was categorized generally as "free." By the beginning of 1987, the rate had climbed to 37 percent.

Moreover, the number of nations categorized as "partly free" has also gone up: from 21 percent of the global population in 1973 to 24 percent now. Only the "not free" have dropped: from 47 percent then to 39 percent now.

The current numbers make for a striking, graphic display called "The Map of Freedom," published by Freedom House. The map shows the free countries in white. The partly free countries are cross-hatched. The unfree nations appear on the map in solid black.

The first thing that hits your eye is a solid black (unfree) mass, representing the Soviet Union and mainland China. Most (but not all) of Africa and the Moslem world are also painted as unfree.

By contrast, almost the entire Western Hemisphere is depicted as free, in white. There are a few major exceptions, most of which are rated "partly free," and these include a few Central American states, Chile, Paraguay and our neighbor Mexico, which is rated 4 on both political and civil rights. And then there is Cuba, which is unfree, rated 6 and 6.

Western Europe is all free. The communist-dominated nations of Eastern Europe are either unfree or partly free. (Hungary gets a 5-5, Poland a 6-5 — both "partly free.") A few African states are partly free. Australia (1-1), Japan (1-1) and India (2-3) are rated free.

Now, what actually happened in this tri-polar world in 1986? There were a few setbacks. Nicaragua closed down the newspaper "La Prensa," the last serious voice critical of the Sandinista government. In Paraguay, the opposition radio station was closed down. The parliament in Kuwait was closed down.

But most of the momentum in 1986 was toward freedom. The most publicized advance occurred in the Philippines when the authoritarian regime of Ferdinand Marcos was dumped. Argentina and Brazil were liberalized. A tyranny was brought down in Haiti, although no one seems to know what will happen next.

Cancer Marker Identified

By Deltha Ricks
UPI Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Tiny markers isolated in tumor cells from women with breast cancer may soon help doctors predict with a high degree of accuracy both the course of the disease and chances for long-term survival.

In a study conducted jointly by UCLA, the University of Texas and genetic engineers at Genentech in San Francisco, scientists discovered that women who possess multiple copies of the marker inside tumor cells have a poor prognosis for long-term survival.

Multiple copies of the marker also correspond to frequent recurrences of the malignancy when compared to women who possess only one or two copies, the study showed.

The markers, known more technically as oncogenes, were detected in tumor cells of 189 women with breast cancer. An oncogene is a cancer-causing segment of a DNA molecule that can trick a normal cell into the reckless and uncontrolled divisions of malignant disease.

Scientists have named the marker "HER-2/neu" and say that it is related to a family of genes that regulate normal cell division and proliferation.

Dr. Dennis Slamon of UCLA, the project's chief investigator, said the findings may ultimately influence treatment strategies for breast cancer patients and provide further evidence of how the malignancy develops.

"What we found, rather surprisingly," said Slamon, "was that multiple copies (of the marker) correlated with relapse and survival in such a way that a patient who had many copies of the gene had a quicker time to relapse and a shorter time of survival."

For many years doctors have used other factors to make the same prediction. By detecting the number of malignant lymph nodes adjacent to a cancerous breast, they have been able to determine prognosis.

Generally, the more diseased lymph nodes detected, the more likely the woman will experience relapses and have less of a chance of long-term survival.

Slamon and his team found that the number of oncogene copies proved as reliable as the number of diseased lymph nodes in predicting breast cancer recurrence and survival.

North May Have Fought 'Competition'

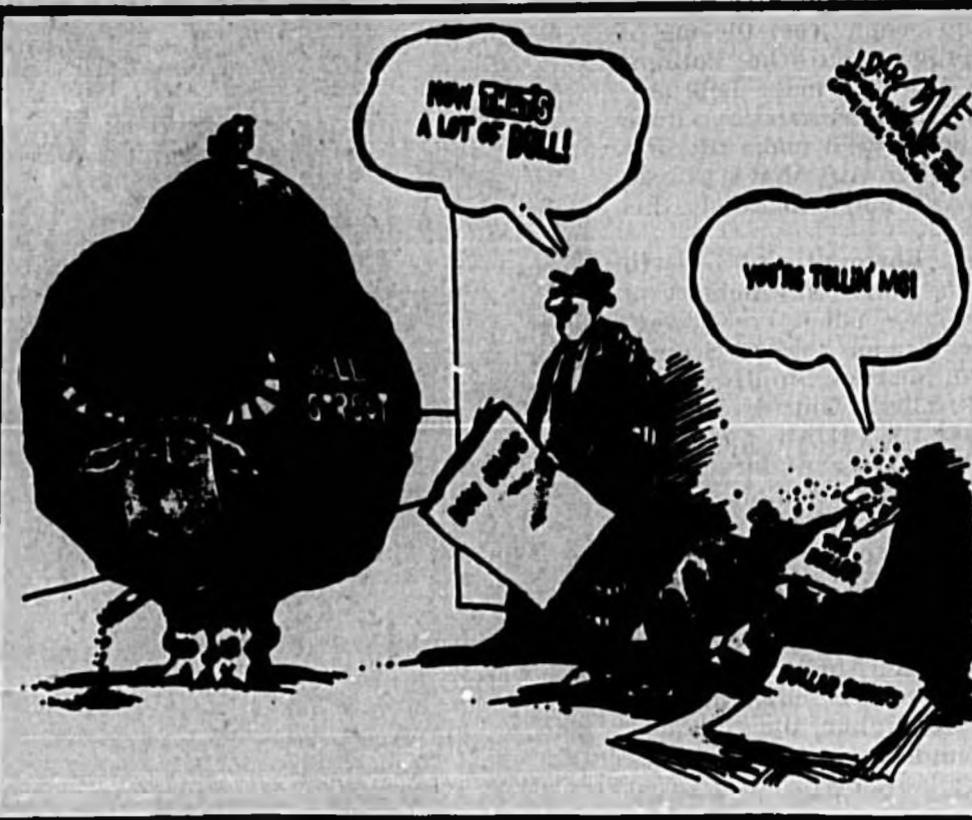

By Jack Anderson
And Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — Lt. Col. Oliver North knew well in advance of a secret "sting" operation that led to the indictment of 17 international businessmen last April on charges of trying to sell $2 billion worth of arms to Iran, we have learned. It was the biggest arms smuggling case ever brought by the U.S. Customs Service.

In fact, North helped the Customs Service case along for an interesting reason: He wanted to eliminate the competition. At the time, he was actively trading arms for hostages, and the $2 billion, straight-cash deal was undercutting his operation. North was later fired from the National Security Council staff for masterminding the Iran-contra deal.

North's manipulations were kept so secret that Customs Service officials won't know about his intervention until they read this. Nor have congressional investigators uncovered so much as a hint of North's hand in the Customs Service sting.

The businessmen were indicted April 22, and Customs Commissioner William von Raab's dramatic

Arms Budget Legacy

WASHINGTON (NEA) — When Ronald Reagan steps down in 1988 he will leave his successor not only a staggering national debt but a military budget that has to remain sky-high for at least the entire first term of the next president.

Though the budget only concerns itself with the coming fiscal year — the one beginning next Oct. 1 — many programs contain obligations that carry over into future years, the so-called "out years." The federal government is obligated to spend this money, but it is not carried as part of the current budget total.

This is especially true of the Defense Department budget. Almost always, when the Pentagon orders a new weapons system, the order is for a specific number of planes, missiles or ships to be delivered each year for up to a decade. However, the only money actually carried in the current budget totals are for those to be delivered in the coming fiscal year. Nonetheless, the government's obligation has been incurred, and the future president is stuck paying for what has been ordered.

This happened with a vengeance in the early years of the Reagan defense buildup, from 1981 to 1984.

Almost all defense services, but especially the Navy and Air Force, placed orders for very expensive weapons systems set for delivery in the second half of this decade and well into the 1990s. Although each budget was submitted one year at a time, what the Pentagon actually embarked upon in 1981 was a 10-year, $2.7 trillion rearmament program, one that carried very heavy obligations for the period from 1988 to 1992, the first term of the next president.

Bureaucrats have coined a name for this phenomenon: "the bow-wave effect."

The Congressional Budget Office now estimates that procurement programs approved in the early years of the Reagan buildup have obligated the Pentagon to spend $1.59 trillion between 1988 and 1992. Actually, Ronald Reagan has obligated his successor to spend more on the military between 1988 and 1992 — about $372 billion more — than Reagan himself has spent on the Pentagon between 1982 and 1986.

Even if Congress decides to hold military spending completely flat — that is, give the Pentagon no new funds over what increases will be necessary to keep it even with inflation — the military budget will have to be increased from $279.5 billion in fiscal 1987 to $331.8 billion in fiscal 1991.

But more money than that will probably be imperative, since present plans for the "Star Wars" Strategic Defense Initiative call for many research projects to be moved from the laboratory into expensive testing modes by the early 1990s.

If SDI keeps to its present schedule, military budgets in the early 1990s will be mind-boggling.

Already the bow-wave effect is forcing Pentagon planners to make some hard decisions about military programs in order to keep their overall money request at a level Congress might be expected to approve.

President Shielded In Scandal

By Helen Thomas
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan has a strategy of distancing himself from the Iran arms-contra aid scandal that was hatched in the White House.

And the modus operandi is not so new to his style. Although he is the man in charge he has always been above the fray, detached, uninvolved even when major administration figures were going down the tube.

More of his top political appointees who ran various government agencies have been forced out of their jobs under allegations of wrongdoing than in any administration in recent history, if ever.

None of this has rubbed off on Reagan, not at least until the current scandal that has come too close to home. The scandal, under three separate investigations — two in Congress and one by independent counsel Lawrence Walsh — involves the secret selling of arms to Iran, which had been on Reagan's list of "terrorist states," and the covert funneling of the profits to the Nicaraguan rebels, known as Contras.

Reagan has acknowledged he approved the sending of arms to Iran. He said in a nationally televised broadcast Nov. 13 that it amounted to one plane-load of spare parts and other arms. According to inquiries, there were six plane-loads of weapons sent to Iran.

But the president contends that he was not privy to the diversion of money to the Contras. Attorney General Edwin Meese said that was the brainchild of Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, a deputy on the National Security Council staff, who has refused to testify on grounds of self-incrimination. Deposed national security affairs adviser John Poindexter, who apparently knew of the secret financing of the Contras at some point, also has refused to testify.

The Senate committee has turned up nothing in its report to contradict the president in terms of the illicit financing of the Contras. But it has found the clandestine operation skirted the laws in several instances, particularly laws that required the White House to inform Congress of its covert operations in a timely fashion.

Even without Hashemi, who died mysteriously last July, North still would have had a contact with the businessmen. An American lawyer indicted in the scheme, Samuel Evans, was an associate of Adnan Khashoggi, the Saudi Arabian billionaire who was the key financier for North's arms deal. In fact, Evans' lawyers say their client only went along with the private arms transaction because Khashoggi assured him the U.S. government had approved it.

In a 34-page memorandum, the lawyers said Evans met in June 1985 with Hashemi and two others — Manucher Ghorbanifar and Roy Furmark — and discussed the White House-sanctioned arms sale to Iran. Ghorbanifar was North's Iranian middleman; Furmark was the New York businessman who told CIA Director William Casey last October about possible diversion of profits from the White House arms sales to Iran.

Footnote: North's attorney said neither he nor his client are answering any questions about the Iran affair.

NATION IN BRIEF

Poll Says Hart, Bush Lead In Respective Parties

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York Gov. Mario Cuomo could pose a serious challenge to early front-runner Gary Hart among Democrats vying for the party's presidential nomination, a New York Times-CBS News poll says.

Among Republicans, Vice President George Bush leads Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas by better than 2-to-1, said the survey, released Sunday.

The poll, taken a year before the Iowa party caucuses begin the nation's presidential nominating process and 22 months before the general election, found only 18 percent of those questioned said they had made a choice they would not change.

But the Democratic Party overall appeared to have the edge, with 39 percent of respondents saying they expected to support that party's nominee next year, compared with 27 percent for the Republican Party.

Gas Prices Expected To Rise

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The average retail price of gasoline increased 3 cents a gallon in the past two weeks, and will continue to rise if retailers pass on their costs to consumers, the authoritative Lundberg Survey said.

The biweekly survey of about 16,000 gasoline stations nationwide showed the average price of all grades of gasoline, self-service and full-service, is now 90.96 cents per gallon.

The price reflects an increase of 3 cents per gallon in the period from Jan. 9 to Jan. 23.

At self-service pumps, which account for three quarters of all gasoline sales, the average price of regular unleaded, the biggest seller, is 83.39 cents a gallon, regular leaded is 78.75, and premium unleaded is 97.14.

Dwyer To Be Buried In Country

MEADVILLE, Pa. (UPI) — State Treasurer R. Budd Dwyer, "at heart a country boy," asked to be buried beside his parents in the Allegheny farm lands he left behind to follow the political career that ended with his public suicide.

Dwyer made the request in a note he handed to an aide just before he shot himself Thursday at a news conference. He was to be sentenced Friday in federal court for a bribery scandal conviction.

Hundreds were expected to attend his funeral today at the Meadville First Baptist Church, a Victorian brownstone on the town square in the Crawford County community where Dwyer began his career as a teacher, then turned to politics.

A private burial was planned in the family plot at a cemetery in the nearby community of Blooming Valley, near where Dwyer's family once had a farm in the northwestern Pennsylvania hills.

Kissinger Faults West Germany

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Henry Kissinger faulted a West Germany official today for attempting to negotiate release of West Germans kidnapped in West Beirut and said the United States should use military force against terrorists and countries supporting them, notably Iran.

Asked if the West German ambassador to Lebanon had erred in his talks Friday with leaders of Hezbollah, a radical Moslem group, Kissinger, replied, "I think so" in an interview on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Kissinger also told ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" Sunday he believes West Germany should bite the bullet and extradite to the United States suspected Arab terrorist Mohammad Ali Hamadel, a Palestinian wanted for the 1985 hijacking of a TWA Flight 847 and the death of an American Navy diver.

Two West Germans were abducted last week in a bid to force West Germany to free Hamadel.

Reagan's Focus Said To Have Been Fate Of Hostages, Not Big Picture

By Sean McCormally

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, when approached by top aides about the overall policy of secret arms sales to Iran, was more interested in the fate of U.S. hostages in Lebanon — despite his public claims about improving relations with Tehran, a published report says.

The Washington Post, citing the investigation by the Senate Intelligence Committee in a report Sunday, said Lt. Col. Oliver North told Attorney General Edwin Meese that whenever he or former national security adviser Robert McFarlane tried to discuss with Reagan the overall picture of the arms sales, "The president would steer the conversation to the hostages."

North made his statements to Meese Nov. 22, during the attorney general's initial inquiry into the Iran arms sales, the newspaper said.

The Post, citing an anonymous source familiar with notes of the Meese-North interview, also said the Senate committee staff has obtained other evidence, including notes from National Security Council meetings, that support the conclusion that Reagan's advisers "were thinking in larger terms, but Reagan wasn't."

Reagan has insisted his goal in the arms sales was improved relations with Iran and that winning freedom for the captives was a by-product of the deals. The president also has said he knew nothing of another by-product — secret efforts to slip Iran arms-sale profits to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Three days following his interview with North, Meese disclosed Nov. 23 that $10 million to $30 million from the arms sales had been diverted to help the Contras. North was fired and his boss, Vice Adm. John Poindexter, McFarlane's successor, resigned that day.

Meese told the Senate committee his version of his interview with North, the newspaper said. North and Poindexter have refused to answer questions, citing their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

The committee, which conducted the most extensive investigation to date of the Iran arms-Contras aid scandal, is preparing a new version of its report on the probe, and it may be completed this week.

Whether it is released to the public will be up to a special select committee the Senate set up in early January to explore the affair. A special House panel also has been formed and a special prosecutor, working with a grand jury, is investigating the controversy as well.

Reagan, who has not answered questions about the affair for more than two months, is to deliver his State of the Union speech Tuesday night, and White House aides have said he will touch on the Iran-Contras issue.

But Reagan made clear over the weekend he will press again for aid to the Contras, who are battling the leftist Sandinista government of Nicaragua that the president has warned poses a serious threat to U.S. national security.

Three more Americans were taken hostage in Lebanon over the weekend, underlining warnings when the scandal erupted that the sale of weapons to Iran and negotiations for release of the captives could encourage more terrorism.

While those kidnappings appear linked to the possible extradition of a suspected hijacker from West Germany to the United States, their occurrence on the eve of his State of the Union speech could serve to further embarrass Reagan in his first major public appearance since the scandal broke.

The Post also said the final Senate committee report will contain information about Vice President George Bush that had been left out of the earlier version primarily because it was "embarrassing."

It is possible that is the material reportedly excised from the report's earlier draft detailing contacts between Bush and an Israeli official closely involved in the arms and hostage deals.

Tambo: ANC Destroying 'Nazi System'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The president of the African National Congress, warning that "verbal persuasion" will not work, says his group is resorting to violence in its battle against apartheid because of South Africa's "murderous behavior."

ANC President Oliver Tambo, in the first of a series of public appearances that will end with a meeting Wednesday with Secretary of State George Shultz, also said "verbal persuasion" is no longer effective in fighting apartheid.

"Apartheid is another word for relentless violence. It cannot exist except in the practice of violence. Remove the element of violence from the apartheid system and we are left with no apartheid system," Tambo said in a Sunday sermon at the New Bethel Baptist Church in Washington.

"The issue in South Africa is how does mankind rid itself of this crime against itself," Tambo, who has long espoused violence as a means of conquering apartheid, said the 75-year-old ANC, which has been exiled from South Africa since 1960, had little success during decades of non-violent efforts to defeat apartheid.

"The issue was and remains: How do you stop a criminal who will not listen to arguments and persists in his criminal conduct, persists in his murderous behavior," he said.

"We were opposed to violence without being pacifists," he added. "When the correct moment came, we embraced violence. ... Does anyone think it is still verbal persuasion that will do the trick?"

Tambo rejected charges by American conservatives that the ANC is a communist organization, saying the group embraces members from all political beliefs, and compared the anti-apartheid movement with the U.S.-Soviet alliance that helped defeat the Nazi Germany in World War II.

"Who cared among the allies whether the Soviet Union was a socialist state or not? That did not mean all allies are socialists. It meant there was an issue which was overriding which took dominance over all other issues that might divide," he said.

"The issue was the destruction of a Nazi system. The issue today is the destruction of a Nazi system in South Africa."

Tambo ridiculed the Reagan administration's constructive engagement policy toward South Africa as "a disaster," but said U.S. sanctions against South Africa are "a victory of the American people as a whole."

"Apartheid is in trouble, and we can begin to see light at the end of a long, gloomy and deadly tunnel," he concluded. "The hour of the liberation of South Africa ... is not far off. We shall get there."

Cars Kill Pedestrian

A pedestrian was struck and killed on Interstate 4 near the Maitland Interchange late Sunday.

Florida Highway Patrol investigators have not yet identified the white male who was walking in the eastbound lane of the Interstate around 7:15 p.m.

He was struck by several unknown vehicles just south of the Maitland Interchange, according to the preliminary report.

'The Problem Was Bigger Than Forsyth'

By Holly Planelis

CUMMING, Ga. (UPI) — The barricades are down, the National Guard and state police have left and what remains in Forsyth County after the biggest civil rights march in two decades are emotions, which run from hatred to hope.

Black leaders said the only thing Saturday's march "proved" was that with sufficient numbers — of marchers and police — blacks can assemble in all-white Forsyth County without being physically attacked.

Saturday's march, which organizers expected to draw 2,000 but attracted 20,000, was staged to protest the breakup by rock-throwing Ku Klux Klansmen of a "brotherhood march" Jan. 17 in honor of Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday.

"We did solve the problem of freedom of assembly," Joseph Lowery, the president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said Sunday.

"But the problem was bigger than Forsyth, Forsyth and Cumming are more than places — they're attitudes."

"There were as many white people as blacks [marching]," Lowery added. "They've been looking for some moment to express themselves on the level of insensitivity and the escalating racial harassment and tension around the country."

The marchers were greeted Saturday by Confederate flags and shouts of "Nigger, go home!" by hundreds of Klan-led counter-demonstrators.

More than 2,000 National Guardsmen and hundreds of state troopers and Georgia Bureau of Investigation agents were on hand to keep the peace and they arrested 60 people, mostly for carrying concealed weapons.

"I don't think this did any good at all," said a young, white Forsyth County man who asked not to be identified. "I think this just sparked another fire."

Don Black, 33, a Klan leader from Birmingham, Ala., who was in Cumming Saturday, called the counter-demonstration "a tremendous victory for us" and said the Klan had enlisted 300 new members.

Forsyth County ministers, meanwhile, gave thanks Sunday for the absence of violence and complained about media coverage of the town.

"I'm grateful to God nothing happened," said D.V. Franklin of the Cumming First Baptist Church. "I am severely disappointed in the news media for all the negative things they said about our town."

Lowery said he will ask lawyers to research getting compensation for relatives of blacks who fled Forsyth County in 1912 after one black man was lynched and two others, convicted of raping and killing a white woman, were hanged.

The march attracted hundreds of reporters, including Cynthia Pryor, a black reporter for WBRC television of Birmingham, Ala., who was surrounded by whites who yelled racial slurs and threw mud in her face.

"I had never seen people filled with so much hatred," Pryor said Sunday. "It was so bad the police had to intervene and get us out of there and secure us so a riot wouldn't break out. I had someone put a rebel flag in my face, and ask, 'Nigger isn't this the most beautiful thing you've ever seen?'"

Philippine Troops Brace As Leftists March On Palace

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Military troops and riot police were on "full red alert" today as thousands of leftists marched on the presidential palace to protest the killings of 13 people at a similar rally last week.

The government also announced today that followers and troops "presumably" loyal to ousted President Ferdinand Marcos had infiltrated the demonstration last week in which the protesters were killed.

Today's demonstration was part of a "National Day of Indignation" called by leftists to protest the violence at the land reform demonstration, which was staged by leftists and farmers last Thursday.

Some 4,000 protesters today marched from various points in the capital to the central post office for speeches before the final push to the palace. Organizers said they expected 20,000 to take part in the march.

Indian Troops On Alert

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — India sought high-level talks with Pakistan today to defuse tension along their common border but kept its army and air force on full alert for a fourth day.

A government spokesman said India had not deployed any more troops along the border in northern Punjab state since Saturday. New Delhi, claiming a buildup of Pakistani forces on the frontier, moved troops to the area Friday.

Pakistan has denied massing troops on the border but said its forces — reportedly 250,000 soldiers — have taken "minimum defensive precautions."

In Islamabad, Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo said Sunday the Indian troop movements were "unwarranted and provocative" but said Pakistan is "striving for peace" with India.

Border Clashes Continue

AHWAZ, Iran (UPI) — Iran is preparing 100,000 fresh troops to bolster its 18-day-old offensive against Iraq on the southern front near Basra, Iraq's second largest city, Tehran radio said.

Iranian forces fired two surface-to-surface missiles at Basra Sunday and its ground troops pressured the southern Iraqi city.

The missile attack on Basra was the most recent of several since Iranian troops crossed the international border east of the city on Jan. 9 in an offensive code-named "Karbala 5."

A group of foreign correspondents landed in Ahwaz in a U.S.-built Hercules transport plane Sunday en route to the front-line areas, despite a warning from Baghdad that Iraqi planes would begin intensive attacks on the city.

China Expels Reporter

PEKING (UPI) — China today expelled an American reporter for the French news agency Agence France Presse for "activities which did not accord with his status as a journalist," the official Xinhua News Agency said.

Xinhua reported Sunday that a student had been arrested in the northern port city of Tianjin for providing AFP reporter Lawrence MacDonald with intelligence information.

Xinhua said the Foreign Ministry's Information Department, which deals with the affairs of foreign journalists in China, had "required AFP to transfer as soon as possible its Peking-based reporter, Lawrence MacDonald, out of China."

"The Information Department said in an announcement that the Chinese Ministry of State Security had obtained conclusive evidence of MacDonald's recent activities which did not accord with his status as a journalist and were harmful to friendship between the Chinese and French people," Xinhua said.

AFP's Peking bureau had no immediate comment on MacDonald's expulsion, the second of a foreign journalist in seven months.

In July, British reporter John Burns of The New York Times was expelled for allegedly gathering military secrets.

Security officials today refused to comment on Sunday's report by Xinhua that Tianjin University student Lin Jie had been arrested for "secret collusion with and providing intelligence to Lawrence MacDonald."

The report said the Tianjin bureau of the Ministry of State Security — China's intelligence gathering and counterespionage agency — had "conclusive evidence" of Lin's activities but gave no further details.

Not Enough Buckets For Champs

MOST VALUABLE PLAYER, 1986
PHIL SIMMS,
NEW YORK GIANTS

VITAL STATISTICS:
6'5", 215 POUNDS
30 YEARS OLD
8TH YEAR PRO
3,467 YDS. PASSING
259 COMPLETIONS
466 ATTEMPTS
21 TOUCHDOWNS

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — There weren't enough water buckets on the New York bench to honor the many players who brought home the Giants their first NFL title in 30 years.

Phil Simms got doused for the first time this year after it was announced he was selected the Most Valuable Player of Super Bowl XXI. And Coach Bill Parcells was drenched once more, surprised — for a change — by linebacker Harry Carson disguised as a security worker.

But Sunday's 39-20 thrashing of the Denver Broncos featured many heroes, guys who managed to escape a sideline shower simply because there weren't enough tubs to go around.

Tight ends Mark Bavaro and Zeke Mowatt each caught a TD pass; Phil McConkey grabbed a deflected pass for a TD and set up two other scores with a 25-yard punt return and a 44-yard pass off a flea flicker; and Joe Morris rushed for 67 yards to prove he can run well on natural turf.

"No more grass problems, no more we can't win the big one," said Morris, who had 20 carries and a TD. "No one gave us anything. This team held together. Our quarterback showed what kind of player he was today. He rallied us back and we won the game with him."

Simms completed 22 of 25 passes — a postseason-record 88 percent — for 268 yards and three touchdowns. He was not intercepted, sacked just once and was New York's second-leading ground-gainer with 25 yards.

"Everything was right, that's the way this team has been all year," Simms said after guiding the Giants to their 17th victory in 19 games this year. "Both sides of the ball really got it going."

George Martin may have turned the game around with a second-quarter safety, and that came after the Giants stopped Denver from scoring from the New York 1 earlier in the period.

Martin, who returned a John Elway interception 78 yards for a TD in the regular season, slipped around right tackle Ken Lanier to sack Elway and make it 10-9. It was the only score of the quarter.

Earlier, with the Broncos one yard from a 17-9 lead, Lawrence Taylor stopped Elway for a 1-yard loss on first down. On second down, Harry Carson stuffed Sammy Winder for no gain. On third down, Carl Banks swept outside to nail Winder for a 4-yard loss.

Rich Karlis then missed a 23-yard field goal, and followed with another unsuccessful try from 34 yards with 13 seconds left in the second quarter. It wasn't too long before the Giants wrested control.

"It's the realization of a dream come true for not only me but for the whole Giants' organization," said Carson, who joined the club out of South Carolina State in 1976.

"It has been a long time coming. I just wish I didn't have to wait so long. It was a hell of an experience for us. I loved every minute of it."

GIANT CELEBRATION

A Super Bowl victory by the New York Giants triggered a giant celebration Sunday in a region hungering for a championship football team for almost two decades.

Car horns blared and cab drivers yelled out windows on the streets of New York and delirious fans clapped and hugged each other in bars in New Jersey as the Giants downed the Denver Broncos 39-20 in Super Bowl XXI. It marked the first New York area football championship since the New York Jets won Super Bowl III in 1969.

At Manny's, a restaurant and bar in Moonachie, N.J., that is a favorite of Giants' fans, bartenders served a special vodka and orange juice drink. "Orange Crush," in mocking respect for the Broncos' defense.

About 300 people, most wearing Giants' blue and red, shoehorned themselves into the bar. The crowd was reserved in the first half but the noise became deafening as the Giants rallied after halftime.

Thomas Greco married his longtime girlfriend, Claudia Briscoe, in a halftime ceremony at Manny's. Greco had bet two friends he would marry Claudia at halftime if the Giants made it.

Super Simms Flings Giants Past Broncos

Football

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Phil Simms, whose eight-year journey through injuries, boos and heart-breaking losses symbolized his franchise, Sunday delivered the New York Giants their first NFL championship in 30 years.

Simms staged the most accurate passing performance in the league's postseason history in lifting the Giants to a 39-20 rout of the Denver Broncos in Super Bowl XXI.

Simms, the first player General Manager George Young drafted after taking over in 1979, completed the turnaround he and Young were hired to mastermind. He completed 22 of 25 passes for 268 yards and three touchdowns and helped the Giants survive a sluggish effort by their normally dominant defense.

"This dispelled the myth for the last time about Phil Simms," Giants Coach Bill Parcells said after his team won its first NFL championship since 1956. "He was absolutely magnificent today. He quarterbacked as good a game as has ever been played."

Simms, who had four straight seasons ended by injuries before 1984, has helped the Giants in the playoffs for three straight years. Before he joined the team, they had not made the playoffs since 1963. Giants fans booed when he was selected in the draft out of Kentucky's Morehead State, and continued to boo much of this season.

On Sunday, Simms guided a turnover-free offense. He threw TD passes of 6 yards to Zeke Mowatt, 13 yards to Mark Bavaro and 6 yards to Phil McConkey. Morris added a 1-yard run. Ottis Anderson scored from the 2. Raul Allegre kicked a 21-yard field goal and George Martin sacked John Elway for a safety to round out the Giants' scoring.

"In my wildest dreams, I couldn't have hoped it would work out this way," Simms said. "The only thing that bothered me is that people didn't talk about our passing game and we had it working for us and we've come up with a lot of big plays."

"I just told everybody, 'I've got it today.' What makes it great is hitting the plays when I needed them."

The Giants showed their appreciation for Simms in the final minutes when offensive linemen Brad Benson and Bart Oates drenched him with Gatorade.

Rams Collect Second SAC Crown

Richards Tips Turner In OT

By Sam Cook
Herald Sports Editor

LAKE MARY — Lake Mary's Rams, who plan on peaking at the state tournament this year instead of fizzling, laid the foundation for their championship climb Saturday night by capturing their second Seminole Athletic Conference crown before 801 fans at Lake Mary High School.

Coach Doug Peters' grapplers ran up 198 points to outdistance Seminole which finished second with 155. Lake Howell (134 1/2), Lake Brantley (110), Lyman (63) and Oviedo (53) completed the

While the Rams' repeat was noteworthy, so was Seminole's ascent. The Tribe, coming together under second-year coach Glenn Malolini, was last a year ago.

"Next year is going to be our year," Malolini said. "Our inexperience hurt us in the big matches tonight. Our guys will be a year older and wiser next year."

For the present, however, the Rams continue to rule. "It's tradition with us," Peters said. "Seminole may have more talent, but we work hard with the wrestlers that we have. Our wrestling skill comes through."

Lake Mary's skill prevailed in three of four showdowns with the 'Noles.

Senior captain Bill Richards scored a 2-0 overtime victory over Seminole's Tracy Turner at 149 pounds. Mays was unbeaten going in.

Junior Enrique Carbia held off a closing rush by Seminole's Sheraton Mays for a 7-6 decision at 130 pounds. Mays was a state runnerup at 116 last year.

Senior Troy Jackson pinned Reggie Butler in 4:18 at unlimited. Jackson ran his mark to 10-0 for the year.

Seminole sophomore Larry Nathan rallied for three points in the closing seconds to trim Wayne Clayton, 7-6, at 123 pounds.

Along with Bill Richards, Carbia and Jackson, Lake Mary claimed championships at 115 with Jesse Flores, 136 with Rob Richards and 224 with Todd Wright. At 101, Robert Doniero was runnerup.

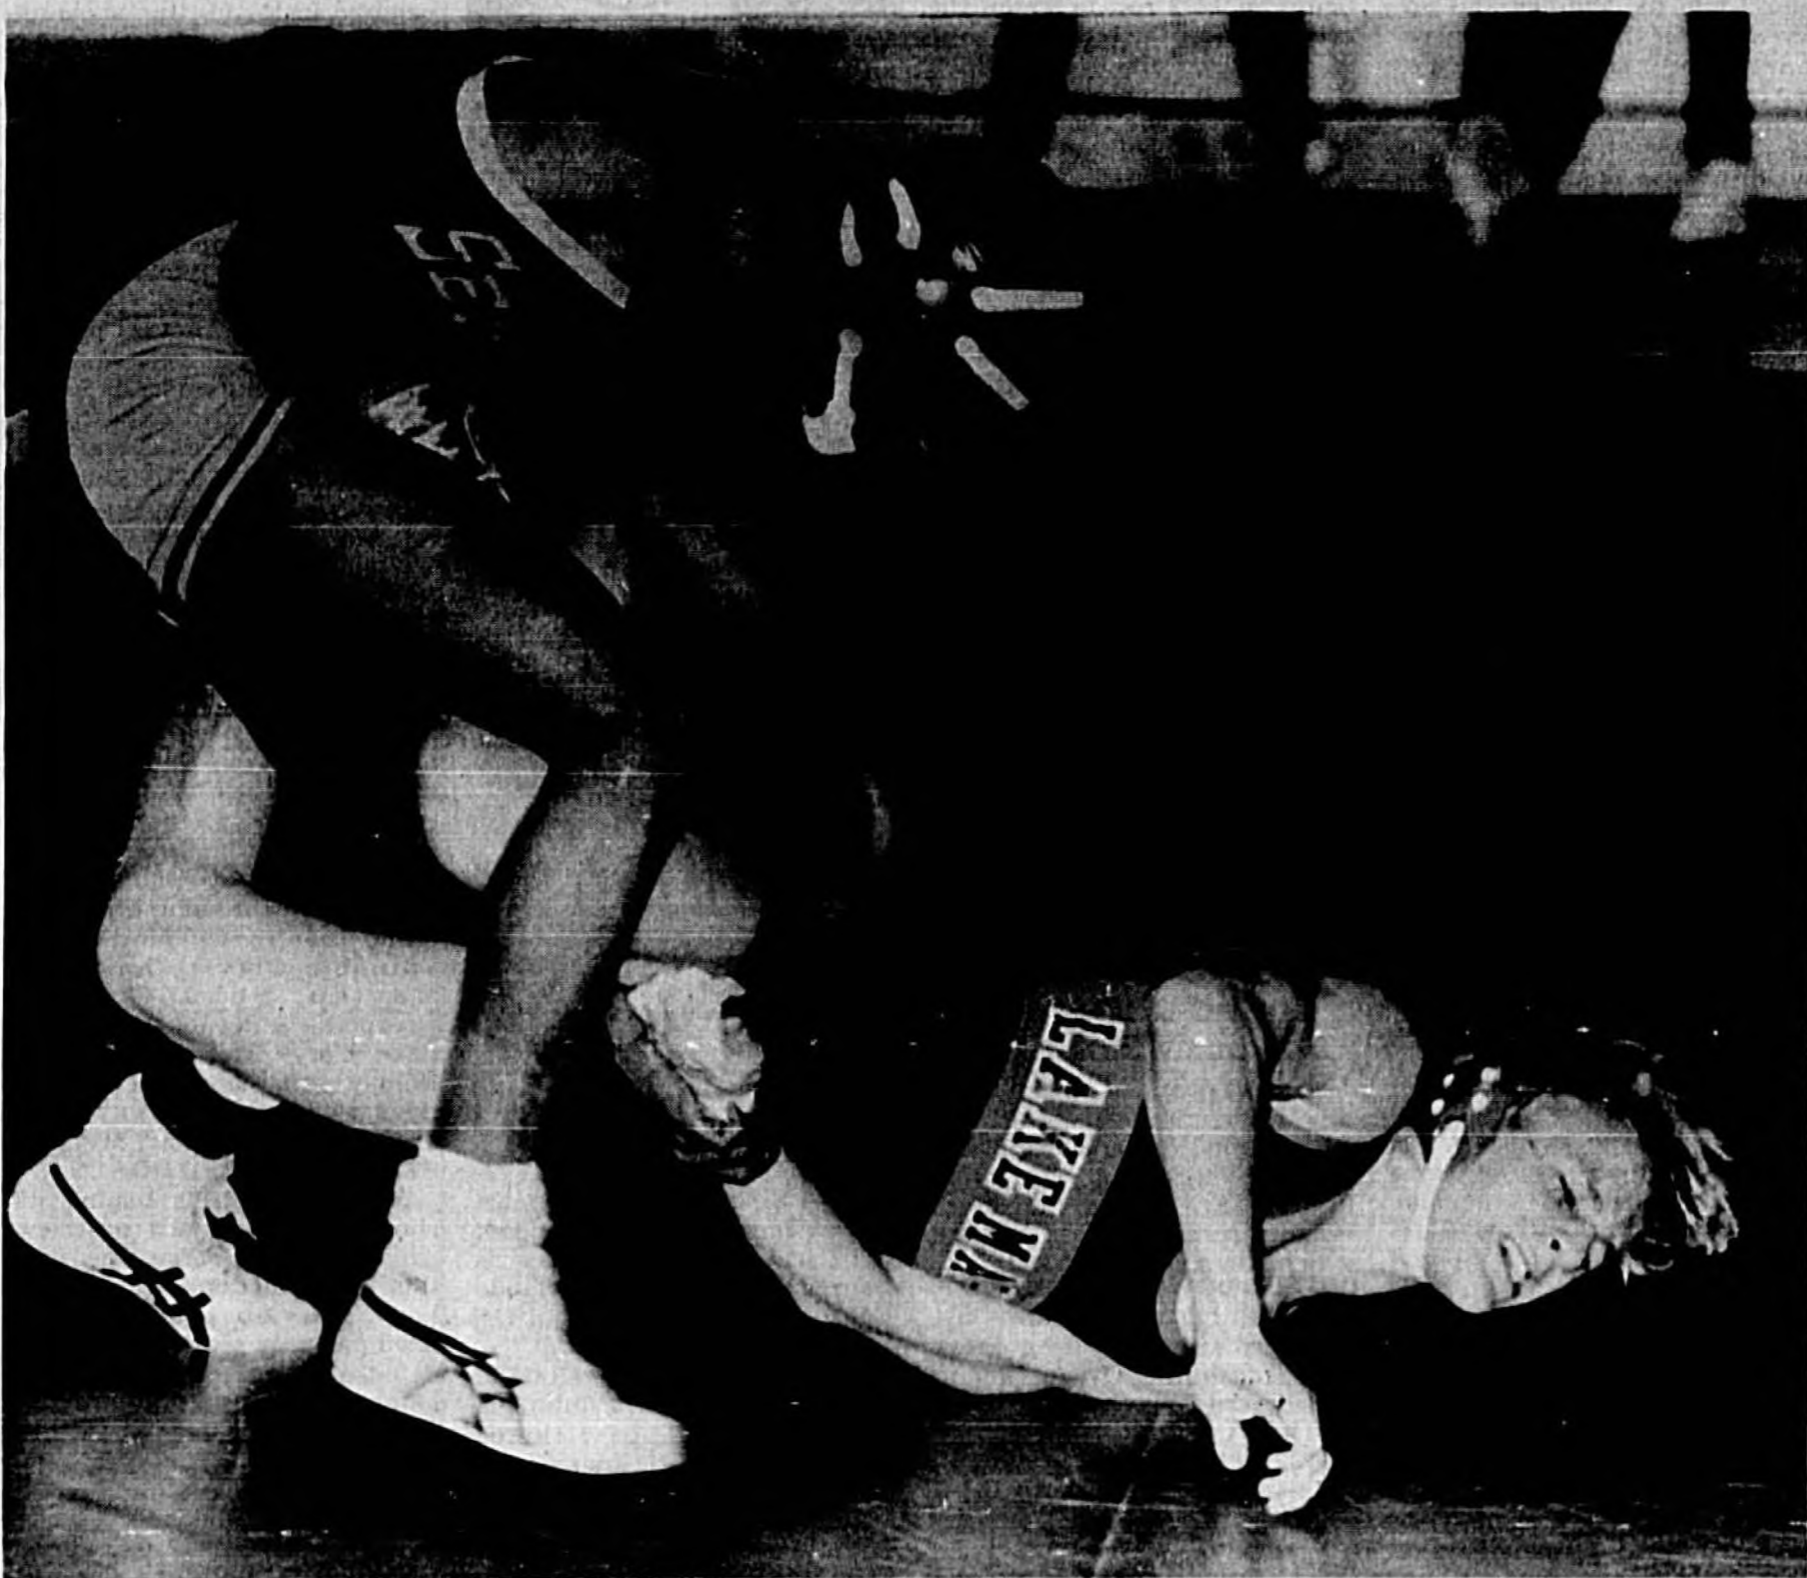

Nathan and 171-pounder Troy Turner were Seminole's other SAC champs although Mays, Tracy Turner, Keith Denton (189), Randy "Pork" Bryant (Heavyweight) and Butler were second-place finishers.

Lake Brantley's Dan Roth (101), Oviedo's Kenny Schrupp (106), Lake Howell's Chris Cina (140), Tim Randolph (159), Lake Howell's Henry Heim (189) and Lyman's Jimbo Smith (224) also collected SAC titles.

The Richards-Turner 149-pound showdown was the highlight of the evening. The hotly-contested match had the fans on their feet, cheerily wildly on several occasions. In the end, Richards' better conditioning pulled out the overtime decision.

"I could have wrestled 20 minutes if I needed to," Richards said after the nine-minute battle. "That's the way it is with Tracy"

Edberg Atones, Drops Cash

Tennis

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — Stefan Edberg, partly responsible for losing the Davis Cup to Australia in December, atoned Sunday by keeping the Australian Open a Swedish possession.

At Kooyong Stadium last month, Edberg lost to Pat Cash in the Davis Cup finals. Sunday, he weathered a comeback and took a five-set victory over Cash to retain the Australian Open crown. His Davis Cup teammate, Mats Wilander, took the title in 1983 and 1984, while Edberg defeated Wilander in an all-Swedish final in 1985. The championship was not played in 1986.

"I feel great. I am so happy to defend my title like that and I am thrilled at the way I came back," said Edberg, who won the first two sets, dropped the next two, then rebounded to claim a 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 5-7, 6-3, 3-hour, 40-minute victory in the $1.65 million championships.

"I was out of the match ... he had 5-1 on two breaks (in the fourth set) and he was in full control. I got very tired."

"But Pat let me off the hook. That was the best match I have ever played. I just went out on court in the fifth set thinking 'I'm going to give it everything' and I'm so happy I gutsed it out."

Edberg said the handful of Swedes who continually waved their national flag throughout the match gave him a boost. At one point in the fourth set, when Cash appeared to be taking control, a fan yelled out: "Come on Pat, the wheels have fallen off his Volvo."

Edberg said after the match he had to laugh to himself when he heard the remark.

Edberg became the last champion to win the title on the hallowed Kooyong blue couch grass center court. He will have to make his second defense of the title on a synthetic surface at a yet-to-be completed $45 million complex being readied near the Yarra River in downtown Melbourne.

Cash, who returns to world prominence after carrying a world ranking of 413 at Wimbledon some eight months ago, earned his berth in the final with a five-set upset of Ivan Lendl, the world's No. 1 player.

"I played well, he swarmed all over me in the first two sets but I knew he had to come down, he couldn't keep that sort of tennis up for the match," Cash said.

Edberg, the fourth seed who turned 21 last Monday, went over the $2 million mark in career earnings when he collected the winner's check of $103,875.

Hana Mandlikova, who has applied for Australian citizenship, won the women's crown Saturday from Martina Navratilova, 7-5, 7-6 (7-1).

Fister Prevails
Sanford Herald sports writers "Fearless" Chris Fister correctly picked the Giants to beat the Broncos in Sunday's Super Bowl. Sports Editor Sam Cook went down with the Broncos.

Tearful Karlis Offers No Excuses

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Rich Karlis, fighting back tears, simply had no excuses.

"It just shows you that you can go from the penthouse to the outhouse real quick," the Denver kicker said. "And that's how I feel right now."

Karlis missed two short field goals, both when they mattered, and the New York Giants capitalized for a 39-20 Super Bowl victory Sunday over the Broncos.

Only two weeks ago, Karlis became a hero, kicking a 33-yard field goal in overtime to lift the Broncos over the Cleveland Browns for the AFC title. The fifth-year player began Sunday's game with a 48-yard field goal in the first quarter, tying the record for the longest Super Bowl field goal.

Then came trouble. The 23-yarder he missed would have given the Broncos a 13-7 lead. More important, it would have given the Broncos three scores in as many possessions against the supposedly impregnable Giants defense. Instead, Karlis pushed the easy shot wide and right, setting a Super Bowl record for shortest field goal missed.

"I don't think I lost any concentration," he said softly. "I just didn't hit them as well as the 48-yarder. I think that on a shorter kick you have a tendency to want to steer the ball, and I know better than that."

"I had a good year inside of 46 yards this year because I swung clean on everything, and I just didn't do it today for one reason or another. Hindsight is 20-20 and if I had those kicks back, I probably could make them. That doesn't mean anything now."

Karlis' second miss came in the final moments of the second quarter when Denver led 10-9. The miss seemed to be too much for the Broncos to overcome. Denver Coach Dan Reeves did not refer to Karlis by name, but he did talk of the mistakes.

"I thought we should've scored about 10 more points in the first half," he said. "We knew going into the game that if we didn't take advantage of every opportunity we had, we would be in tough shape."

FIRST-HALF CLARK KENTS
PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Standing in a Superman jersey and a red cape in the winning locker room Sunday, Lawrence Taylor said the Giants defense played the opening half like 11 Clark Kents.

The NFC Defensive Player of the Year and his teammates played listlessly through two periods against Denver in Super Bowl XXI before a dominant third quarter triggered New York's 39-20 triumph. Taylor, a Pro Bowl starter at outside linebacker in each of his six NFL seasons, finished with four unopposed tackles and one assist. "This was almost reminiscent of our opening game against Dallas this year," Taylor said, referring to New York's 31-28 loss. "Dallas and Denver are fine teams and we're a physical team. We tried to play the Cowboys' game and in the first half today, we tried to play Denver's game."

The Broncos rolled up 186 yards in the first half and didn't have to punt in building a 10-9 advantage. Denver's Rich Karlis missed field goal attempts of 24 and 34 yards in the second quarter to undermine two other drives against a Giants defense that yielded just three points in two post-season games.

Taylor alternated between the left side and the right side as the Broncos used tackles Dave Studdard and Ken Lanier to aid a back in blocking him. The strategy worked well before intermission as John Elway had ample time to complete 13 of 20 passes.

SCC's Jackson, Hall Maul St. Johns River

By Mark Blythe
Herald Sports Writer

Claude Jackson and Vance Hall controlled the paint for the second game in a row as they combined for 36 points and 16 rebounds in Seminole Community College's 116-78 Mid-Florida Conference basketball blowout of St. Johns River Community College Saturday night before 151 fans at the SCC Health Center.

The Raiders improved to 23-2 and 7-1 in the Mid-Florida Conference with their ninth consecutive victory. The Vikings fell to 8-12 and 1-7.

Seminole travels to Florida Community College-Jacksonville Wednesday in what could decide the MFC champion. The teams are tied for the conference lead at 7-1 and Florida owns the only home loss this year at SCC.

"I'll worry about them in practice Monday," Seminole coach Bill Payne said. "We've been taking each game one at a time and this one is no different."

Jackson finished with a team high 20 points working well inside and connecting on the break. "We were struggling in the first half before we regrouped," Jackson said. "We can't afford to come out flat, if we come out flat a good team can take us out of a game early."

Hall fired up the team in the second half with his work inside.

Basketball

blocking seven shots and intimidating the smaller Vikings. "We need to come out and play hard every game," Hall said. "We came out flat but got things rolling in the second half."

St. Johns came out scrapping and played well up to the halftime. The Raiders played sluggishly and held a 45-34 using an 11-2 run to widen the margin before the break.

"We talked about pride when we were in the locker room," Payne said. "The team is full of pride and showed they can play when they want to."

SCC convinced the Vikings, breaking loose for 71 second-half points while earning its ninth consecutive victory.

Hall came out and scored four straight points before Mike Davis who scored a game-high 25 points put down a short jumper with 18:47 left.

Malcolm Houston then connected on a three pointer to tie the lead to 52-36. James Morris then grabbed a rebound and went coast-to-coast for a layup. Houston then stole the ball and slammed it home as the Raiders picked up the tempo.

John Nixon then hit a long jumper to cut the lead to 56-38 with 16:55 remaining.

Rams Put 7-Game Streak On Line

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer

Lake Mary's Rams, 13-2-3 overall, take a seven-game unbeaten streak into their biggest week of Seminole Athletic Conference play. The Rams, 4-1-1 in the SAC, take on a pair of teams ranked in the top 10 in the state as they go to ninth-ranked (Class 3A) Oviedo Tuesday night and eighth-ranked (Class 4A) Lake Howell Thursday.

Lake Howell leads the conference with a 6-0 record while Oviedo stands at 2-2-2 but has played exceptionally well the last few weeks.

Lake Mary's unbeaten streak almost came to a crashing halt Saturday but the Rams held on for a 1-1 tie against Winter

Soccer

Park's Wildcats at Lake Mary High.

The Rams' lone goal came on a header by Steve Sapp off a throw in from Ernie Brocchini. Marj Helman scored for Winter Park which now stands at 12-2-4.

OVIDEO DOWNS HIGHLAND
After sitting out the team's last game with the flu, Greg Brick returned to the Oviedo lineup and booted home two goals to lead the Lions to a 4-1 victory over Lake Highland Saturday.

The Lions improved to 9-3-3 overall with their third consecutive victory. Oviedo hosts Lake Mary Tuesday and goes to Lake

Anderson, Vickery Key Lake Brantley's Crown

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer

Shannon Anderson and Wendy Vickery have been overlooked for Lake Brantley this season, but no two players were more valuable to the Lady Patriots in Saturday's championship game of the Gainesville Burger King Tournament.

Anderson, a junior fullback turned forward, scored the tying goal with two minutes left in the game and Vickery, a junior goalkeeper, saved a pair of penalty kicks in the shootout that gave the Lady Patriots a 3-2 victory over Lake Mary's Lady Rams.

"Shannon (Anderson) had a tremendous tournament," Lake Brantley coach Wolfgang Habig said. "She played as well as any player in the tournament."

"And Wendy (Vickery) is a remarkable story," added Habig. "She's never played keeper before this year and she now has 11 shutouts. On Saturday she made two outstanding saves on penalty kicks and that was the difference in the game."

Lake Brantley, ranked third in the state, now stands at 17-1-2 overall while Lake Mary, which won its first two games in the tournament by shutout, improved its record to 14-3-2.

For the tournament, Anderson had two goals and two assists for the Lady Patriots while Vickery had two shutouts and 27 saves in three games. Vickery has given up just 13 goals in 20 games.

Lake Brantley placed four players on the all-tournament team led by Offensive Most Valuable Player DeRusso, Maren Schaefer and sweepback Reenie Deaver. For Lake Mary, Broen and Donna Rohr were all-tournament selections while sweeper Amy Alexander was the Defensive MVP.

SEMINOLES NEED GOALS
Seminole High is hoping its shortage of goals the past few games will not carry over into this week's action. Because the Lady 'Noles are going to either need plenty of scoring or perfect defense when, in consecutive games, they battle the third and second ranked teams in the state.

The Lady Seminoles, 9-7-3 overall, host number three Lake Brantley Tuesday night in a Seminole Athletic Conference game, then go to Lyman Friday to face the defending SAC champs and number two team in the state.

"We're going to have our hands full this week," Seminole coach Suzy Reno said. "We've already come close to beating Lyman so we know we can play the big teams close. I've been really happy with the work the girls have been doing lately and maybe we'll surprise somebody before the season is over."

Seminole has a tie and a win in its last two games but only two goals to show for it. On Friday, Seminole and Oviedo battled each other and the bitter cold in a 1-1 tie. On Saturday, Seminole's only goal in a 1-0 victory over Winter Park came on Cindy Benges' penalty kick.

LYMAN TROUNCES VERO

Maye Belle Bryant, Randi Huddleston and Karen Abernethy scored two goals each as Lyman rolled to a 7-0 victory over Vero Beach Saturday at Lyman High.

Lyman, 13-1-5 overall, is at Lake Howell Wednesday night and hosts Seminole Friday.

Bryant ran her season total to 19 goals while Abernethy now has 13 for the season. Linda Schultheis also scored for the Lady Greyhounds while Kim Mitchell contributed a pair of assists and Bonni Steeves, Dana Boyesen and Jennifer McAvoy had one assist each.

The Lady Greyhounds, who gone 16 games without a loss, outshot Vero, 19-7. Goalkeeper Sarah Cobb made six assists in registering her ninth shutout of the season.

LADY HAWKS FALTER

Sixth-ranked Melbourne got a pair of first-half goals from Kelley Barnes and held Lake Howell scoreless in the second half en route to a 2-1 victory at Lake Howell High.

Melbourne improved to 14-1 for the season with its only loss to Lake Brantley in the semifinals of the Burger King Classic. Lake Howell now stands at 8-7-3 overall.

Heather Brann scored the goal for Lake Howell on an assist from Tori Campbell but the Lady Hawks could not get the equalizer in the second half.

Stocks Open Mixed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened mixed today in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which climbed 24.89 points last week, was up 4.92 to 2108.44 shortly after the market opened.

Declines led advances 745-332 among the 1,436 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Early turnover amounted to about 11,098,000 shares.

The Dow Jones Industrial average swung wildly from unprecedented peaks to sharp losses in the heaviest stock trading on record Friday, as futures-related trading programs rocked the market.

The Dow, which jumped a record 51.80 points to a record high Thursday, fell 44.15 Friday to 2101.52.

In the last two hours of trading Friday, the Dow dropped from a gain of 80 points to a loss of 50, then erased most of that loss, and finally slid down again before the closing bell.

Big Board volume amounted to about 302,469,040, up from 188,680,000 Thursday and far surpassing the former record of 253,133,400 shares traded on Jan 15.

Gold Strengthens; Dollar Flounders

By United Press International

The U.S. dollar opened mixed on major world money markets today. The price of gold was higher.

In earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar closed at 152.75 yen, down 0.50 from Friday's close of 153.25 in moderate trading.

In European trading, the dollar gained strength in Frankfurt, opening at 1.8240 German marks, against Friday's close of 1.823, and in Milan at 1,295.50 lire, against a previous close of 1,292.45.

The dollar fell slightly in Zurich, opening at 1.5285 Swiss francs, against Friday's close of 1.536; in Paris at 6.0895 French francs, against 6.0925; in Brussels at 38.35 Belgian francs, against 38.48; and in Amsterdam at 2.049 Dutch guilders, against 2.054.

In London, the pound sterling opened at $1.5355, against Friday's close of $1.5255.

Accord Could Benefit Bus Drivers

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI) — A tentative labor agreement that could benefit bus drivers in the long run has been reached between Greyhound Lines' future owner and union leaders, a joint statement said.

Five days of talks resulted in Sunday's accord that contains job guarantees, a reduction in mileage rates for bus drivers and provisions that somewhat would offset the mileage rate cut, said a statement by prospective owner Fred Currey and union chief

Gold strengthened in Zurich, opening at $405 per troy ounce, against Friday's close of $401.50, and in London at $405.25 per troy ounce, against $403.

The morning fixing in London was $405.35, up $2.35 from Friday's close.

Silver opened higher in Zurich at $5.55 per troy ounce, against Friday's close of $5.50, and in London at $5.55 an ounce, against $5.52.

In earlier trading in the Far East, gold closed at $405 an ounce on the Hong Kong Bullion Exchange, off $1.55 from Friday's close.

In early trading on New York's Comex, a 100-troy-ounce gold futures contract for current delivery in January opened at $404.90 an ounce, unchanged from Friday's close. A 5,000-troy-ounce silver futures contract for delivery in January opened at $5.555, unchanged.

Dominic Sirignano.

"We intend to have an aggressive growth strategy in this company," said George Gravelly, a spokesman for Currey. "As the passenger traffic grows, the drivers are going to be able to share in that growth."

Currey, a Dallas businessman, heads an investment group that has agreed to acquire Phoenix-based Greyhound Corp.'s domestic subsidiary, Greyhound Lines Inc., for an estimated $350 million in cash and securities.

She said the two foreigners entered the shop but did not ask for anything, standing whispering among themselves as if they were afraid and were hiding from people they believed were following them.

"Fifteen minutes later, six gunmen in civilian clothes and carrying pistols came outside," she said. "Two of the gunmen, who were bearded, came inside and each grabbed a man by their hair, stuck pistols in their stomachs and dragged them outside."

The incident came hours after a deadline set by the Organization of the Oppressed on the Earth movement to kill one of four hostages seized Saturday passed without any word on their fate.

A caller for the group that claimed responsibility for the kidnapping of three Americans and an Indian U.S. resident threatened to kill a hostage today unless West Germany frees an Arab wanted by the United States for the 1985 hijacking of TWA Flight 847.

The midnight Sunday deadline passed with no word on the fate of the four hostages — Beirut University College professors kidnapped Saturday by gunmen disguised as police officers.

In Washington, a White House spokesman said President Reagan was "deeply concerned" about the American hostages — identified by the State Department as communications professor Alann B. Steen, 47; accountant Robert B. Pohihl, 52; and mathematics professor Jesse Turner, 39.

The fourth hostage was identified by Beirut University College as Mithleshwar Singh, in his 60s, chairman of the college's business department. The school said Singh has resident alien status in the United States.

A caller claiming to represent the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth told the Voice of Lebanon radio that a hostage would be killed if West Germany does not release suspected Arab terrorist Mohammad Ali Hamadel.

"We have asked West Germany that it should not deal with the American administration concerning the extradition of Mohammad Ali Hamadel," the caller told the Christian radio station.

"If they don't release him after midnight, I assure you that we will get rid of one of the hostages."

Hamadel is wanted by the United States in the June 1985 hijacking of a TWA Flight 847 in Beirut that left Navy diver Robert Stehem dead and 39 Americans hostage for 17 days. Washington requested his extradition.

Two West Germans were abducted last week in a bid to force West Germany to free Hamadel, arrested at the Frankfurt airport earlier this month carrying liquid explosives.

The West German newspaper Welt am Sonntag said German officials believe the two Germans were kidnapped by Hamadel's brother, Abdelhadi Hamadel, security chief of Hezbollah, a pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem group. German newspapers have reported the government will reject the American extradition request because it fears for the lives of the hostages.

Today's abductions and the kidnappings of the four on Saturday brought to 26 the number of foreigners missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon. Eight of the missing are Americans.

Eleven of them have been seized since hostage negotiator Terry Wante, the special envoy to the archbishop of Canterbury, came to Beirut Jan. 12 for his latest attempt to win freedom for the hostages.

The motion to deny the site plan was offered by P&Z member Brent Caril and seconded by vice-chairman Jay Malone.

Caril said he opposed the proposal because the parking would destroy a natural area.

Another parking proposal, involving use of city right-of-way, is recommended for approval by city engineering staff. A hearing for input from nearby property owners is being held by commissioners tonight.

The request is from New Salem Primitive Baptist Church, which wants to develop a parking area using about 100 feet of vacated right-of-way on Olander Avenue, south of 12th Street.

According to staffs' recommendation, the church's site plan should include parking of the approach to the parking lot; hedges along the north boundary to create a buffer; and, the laying of railroad cross ties to delineate the lot's east, west and south boundaries and serve as bumper blocks.

Court, and found that all doors were locked, he drove to his home, a few doors away, and phoned 911. When Lazar returned, he said that he again looked through the doors and windows to see if anyone was in the house. When he got to the back of the house, he saw Williams lying on the floor near the sliding doors and said that he heard Williams moaning and told him to keep close to the floor. Lazar said that he found a piece of cement block which he threw through the sliding doors and was then able to get to Williams. Lt. Frank Culbreth of the Sanford Fire Department arrived in time to assist Lazar in dragging Williams to safety.

Culbreth told reporters that Williams was lucky to have a trained firefighter nearby. He added that firefighters put their lives on the line every day but the fact that Lazar dashed into a burning house while he was off-duty was "definitely beyond the call of duty."

Williams said today he "didn't know anything" until he heard Lazar pounding on the glass door. "I'm glad to be alive, but I have nothing to offer the officer except my gratitude.

The fire started from a pot of grease left on the stove, the report said. Sanford firefighters extinguished the fire which was contained in the kitchen about 10 minutes after they arrived, according to the report.

Paramedics treated Williams at the scene for smoke inhalation and there was no estimate of damage.

Junior Woman's Club Offers Singing Valentines

Semoran Junior Woman's Club will offer its Singing Valentines on Feb. 13 and 14. Club spokesman Susan Stringer said, "Surprise your Sweetie at the office, in the classroom, or anywhere with a sweetheart serenade by two Juniors, a love scroll, lollipop and photo keepsake to remember this special day for only $15.00." To place your order call 695-2988. Orders must be received by Feb. 11.

Proceeds from this project will help the Semoran Junior Woman's Club continue to serve and strengthen Central Florida with its unity projects. Among the club's list of achievements are the founding of Dividends in Seminole County, support of the Rachael Pace Therapeutic Riding Academy, Spouse Abuse, Winter Park Library, Depugh Nursing Home, and its newest art enrichment project in the Seminole County Schools, "Picture Lady."

Miss Jr. America Show Coming

The deadline for entries to be received for consideration in the 1987 All Florida Biennial Exhibition at the Polk Museum of Art is 5 p.m., Jan. 30. The Biennial is a fine arts competition designed to showcase the work of Florida's outstanding visual artists.

The museum has invited all Florida artists to enter the second Biennial, with original works of art created since 1985. All work must be available for purchase. Purchase awards up to $5000 will be presented, and works acquired will become part of the museum's permanent collection.

Interested artists are asked to contact the museum now to receive application forms with entry instructions and calendar dates. Call 688-7743, or visit the museum in downtown Lakeland off Lake Morton at 800 E. Palmetto St.

Susan Neiswender, W.E. Kirchhoff Exchange Vows

Susan Honor Neiswender and William Emil Kirchhoff, both of Tallahassee, were married at 2:30 p.m., Dec. 20, in the First Presbyterian Church, Sanford. The Rev. Dr. Virgil Bryant was the officiating clergyman for the traditional ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger D. Neiswender and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Kirchhoff, all of Sanford.

Given in marriage by her father, the radiant bride chose for her vows an exquisite white bridal gown and lace train highlighted along the slim silhouette. The fitted lace bodice featured a sweetheart neckline and long leg-o-mutton sleeves. The slim lace and satin skirt gracefully cascaded into a sweeping chapel train enhanced with lace insets and reembodyered lace inserts. The bride wore her mother's graduated strand of pearls and pearl and diamond earrings. She also wore her grandmother's gold bracelet and carried three handkerchiefs, two carried by her grandmothers on their wedding days and another purchased by her parents in Tallahassee, were married at 2:30 p.m., Dec. 20, in the First Presbyterian Church, Sanford. The bride wore a modified derby hat with a rolled brim caught at the side by a fabric flower. A pouf of illusion in the back held her tiered fingertip veil accented with pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses, freesia, ivy and fern showered with white satin ribbons.

Linda Neiswender of Birmingham, Ala., attended her niece as maid of honor. She wore a tea-length forest green gown styled with a V-neckline and dropped waist highlighted with a flounce. She carried a bouquet of freesia, fern and ivy in a shower of long satin ribbons and wore a spray of the same flowers in her hair.

Bridesmaids were aunts of the bride, Elizabeth Neiswender, Palm Beach, and Janet Neiswender Shipman, Lake Helen. Their gowns and headpieces were identical to the honor attendant's and each carried a single white rose interspersed with ivy and accented with a satin bow and long ribbons.

Eric Kirchhoff served his brother as best man. Ushers/groomsmen were James Dimartino, Lake Mary, and James McAlexander, Sanford.

The reception was held in fellowship hall of the church. A trio from the Florida Symphony Orchestra played continuous classical chamber music. Of added interest was a children's table with special foods and bride and groom coloring activities. A collage of photographs of the bride and bridegroom from their early lives to the present was a focal point at the reception.

Mr. and Mrs. William Emil Kirchhoff

Assistants at the reception were Libby Ferrell, Jocallen Kaiser, Sue Ellen Baird, Lori Neal, Cindy Smith and Debbie Anderson.

After a wedding trip to the Florida Keys, the newlyweds are making their home at 2600 Miccosukee Road, Apt. 8, Tallahassee. The bride is employed by PIP Printing Co., and the bridegroom is a staff intern for the Florida House of Representatives Committee on Transportation.

Tumor Removal Made Efficient, Less Costly

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — For several years my husband has had malignant tumors removed from his bladder, at four-month to one-year intervals. The doctor has used a burning or cutting procedure. Would laser surgery be appropriate for him?

DEAR READER — Probably not. Fulguration (burning) with or without excision (removal) can easily be done through a cystoscope, a lighted tube that the urologist passes into the bladder. This traditional method of treating bladder tumors is as efficient as laser treatment — and is less expensive.

DEAR DR. GOTT — A doctor at Vanderbilt University says that people should avoid margarine and cooking oils because they "contain hydrogenated fats which are contaminated with harmful trans-fatty acids." He recommends using small amounts of butter or lard. I thought that cholesterol and animal fats were bad news. Do you know the lowdown on this subject?

DEAR READER — Cholesterol should be avoided. Excess cholesterol has been shown to be related to heart disease. Experts are unsure whether cholesterol itself is the villain or whether high blood cholesterol may simply be a "marker" for a defective gene that causes heart attacks. In any case, Americans would be better off if they ate less animal fat.

I have great respect for scientists, and Vanderbilt is a fine university. However, until the doctors' views have been verified by other investigators, I would side with the current view that people should replace saturated fats with the unsaturated variety. I think that margarine is superior to butter and lard, despite the presence of supposedly harmful fatty acids. Alas, in this world, nothing is perfect.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I recently had an operation for "trigger thumb." I've had carpal-tunnel syndrome for years. Could this could have led to the thumb problem?

DEAR READER — Trigger thumb is a malfunction of the thumb joint due to joint disease or weak tendons. It causes a temporary partial dislocation of the thumb. Carpal tunnel syndrome is nerve compression caused by a constricting band of fibrous tissue at the wrist. Both conditions are treated by surgery to correct the abnormality, but there is no evidence that the two ailments are related.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
It's sad when a bridge player exhibits a kind of muddled vision that won't let him see the forest because of the trees. Declarer won the opening heart lead with dummy's ace and immediately played his diamond ace and then the diamond queen. When West failed to cover the queen of diamonds, declarer discarded a club from dummy. Then he played a low diamond and ruffed in dummy. East overruffed and returned a spade. Declarer gamely played out all his high trumps, hoping that West, who had to hold the diamonds, would be caught with club length and squeezed. But East had clubs well under control and South now had to get a trick.

Here is some good advice. When you are in a small slam, look for an easy, sure way to make your contract. If you find it, take it. Do not indulge in adventure for overtricks. Here South had a simple play. He should take his ace of diamonds at trick two and ruff a low diamond in dummy. Now he should draw trumps. Next he can play the queen of diamonds to force out the king. Although diamonds do not split evenly, he can get rid of his losing little diamond on dummy's A-K of clubs. That's 12 tricks without any pain. It's a line of play that a thinking declarer should take in this small slam contract.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...
YOUR BIRTHDAY
JANUARY 27, 1987
Broader interests will be developed in the year ahead through a friend to whom you'll become closely attached. His or her influence will be beneficial.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You won't have to keep others posted on your endeavors today, because someone who can't keep a secret may have already let the cat out of the bag. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Profit from your past experiences today. Don't blow money on something you vowed you would never waste it on again, no matter how tempting it may be.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll have some obstacles to overcome, but if you keep your mind on the high mark for which you are shooting, your goal can be accomplished within the next few days.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be sure to take adequate time formulating an important decision today. If you act in haste, you might ask yourself why you overlooked the obvious.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) All the stick-to-itiveness that you can muster will be required today to handle a nuisance chore that you have thus far left half-finished.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you can't stand up to the pressure today, you might buckle under to the wishes of an associate and do something against your better judgment. Be firm.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll be a good worker today if you're left to your own devices. When others start butting in, it could be your cue to drop your tools and exit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't let your sense of humor desert you today if you have to deal with a person who is a trifle obnoxious. Smile instead of growling back.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your judgment in financial matters today is likely to be more sound than that of someone who is advising you. Don't discount your own ideas.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Take pains to be extra tactful when directing subordinates today, especially if you have to deal with one with whom you've had cross words recently.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Funds for which you've been hoping look like they are going to be available. However, don't chalk up new expenses before they arrive.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be careful that you don't expose your ideas to the wrong people in career situations today, or the credit that should go to you will be claimed by another.
