Seminole Among Fastest Growing Counties In Nation

MIAMI (UPI) — Seminole is the 19th fastest growing county in the nation and seven Florida counties are among the 25 fastest growing in the U.S., according to a study of population growth by Dun & Bradstreet Corp. The study, released Thursday, estimated changes in population between the 1980 census and 1984. The growth rates in Florida ranged from 25 percent in ninth-ranked Marion County to 19 percent in Volusia County, ranked No. 21. Seminole County grew 19.5 percent from 179,752 to 214,785.

County Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff, a lifelong resident of Seminole County, attributes the county's high rate of growth to "the sunshine, the fact the air-conditioner has been invented, because it's downhill from up north and because the cost of living is cheaper here." He added that another factor in the growth rate is that the "impact of the influx of new people here is not being born by them but by the people presently here." Meanwhile, Dun & Bradstreet attributed the rapid population growth in spots in Florida and around the nation to various factors, including the emergence of a strong service sector and the continued development of retirement communities and recreational facilities. The study ranked two Texas counties — Fort Bend and Montgomery — both near Houston — as the fastest growing counties. Both had growth rates of 45 percent. Among the 20 counties with the largest population decreases since the 1980 census, most were in the industrial Midwest and 10 were in Michigan. In Florida, Marion County, which includes the metropolitan area of Ocala, grew 25.2 percent from 122,486 to 153,367. No. 10 Lee County, which includes Fort Myers, grew 23.2 percent from 205,266 to 253,082. Number 13, Palm Beach County, grew 20.7 percent from 576,863 to 696,725. Brevard County, ranked 14, grew 20.6 percent from 272,959 to 329,345. Pasco County around Tampa and St. Petersburg, was ranked 16th. It grew 19.7 percent from 193,643 to 231,859. Volusia, including Daytona Beach, grew 19 percent from 258,762 to 308,105.

Head Start In Doubt

Anti-Poverty Agency Dead

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole Community Action, created as an agency to fight poverty during President Johnson's administration, is dead.

All that is left of it is a state charter which its board of directors are preparing to change to try to keep the $500,000 federally-funded Head Start program alive, said Paula Spencer, the executive director of the local Head Start program.

And William Sadler, chief of the Head Start Division of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Region IV, Atlanta, said today. "As far as the state of Florida and we are concerned Community Action doesn't exist. It has no programs and no staff."

He added that unless the board of the defunct agency comes up with a budget and a plan for the Head Start program by May 31, that program will be shifted to some other group.

Noting he fully expects those documents will be submitted by the deadline, Sadler said the problem is that when Community Action was operating with several federally funded programs, the costs of utilities, accounting and other administrative expenses were shared by all the programs. If Head Start is to exist on its own, it may have to bear all those expenses alone and this may not be acceptable, he said.

Mrs. Spencer said today this means that some $32,000 must be raised locally. Longwood City Commissioner Perry Faulkner, a member of the board of directors, has been trying to raise that money by asking cities in the county to give financial assistance.

However, his colleagues on the Longwood City Commission directed him this week to make it clear in his efforts that he is acting as a private citizen. While he was originally appointed to represent the city on the board of directors that appointment has been withdrawn. Faulkner has said he will continue to serve as a private businessman.

Since the Head Start program was founded by Community Action in June 1968 it has served 200 children a year in its classes in poverty stricken areas around the county. It is a program designed to give disadvantaged children the opportunity of attending special pre-kindergarten classes to get a head start on their formal public school education.

Sadler said today whether Head Start continues under its present management or not, he expects new Head Start classes will open in September as usual either under the present program or under the auspices of some other community service agency in Seminole or a nearby county.

Meanwhile, County Administrator Ken Hooper and County Planning Director Tony VanDerworp said Thursday the county has been asked by the state's Department of Community Affairs to set up a meeting to consider what agencies the county might recommend as likely candidates to take over the program.

Hooper said the state agency also wants to talk to the county about providing some funding for the program.

The county cut off funding to Seminole Community Action several years ago after the state took over administering federal grants to community agencies and balked at giving SCA any more money.

Rev. Amos Jones, then SCA executive director, said conflicts with the state were due to bookkeeping problems. Today telephone calls to the Community Action office on Pine Street in Sanford are answered by an operator announcing "Head Start."

She says Jones is no longer employed there but that he picks up messages at

Slide Show

Seven year old Bobby Barbafo prepares himself for a little bit of May Day mayhem by smearing on shaving cream, prerequisite for the "slip 'n slide." The sport consists of making one's body as slippery as possible, taking a running start and diving onto a plastic mat, showing how far one can slide. Scott Vanhusen, inset, shows how it's done. The May Day Play Day Thursday was part of the first of the month celebration at Idyllwild Elementary School, supervised by physical education teacher Kathy Phillips. Kindergarten and first grade students also participated in a sack race, finger painting, relay and sand play and were treated to ice cream and a Disney movie. Second through fifth graders have their Play Day today.

Painter May Lose Foot, Ear After Near Electrocution

By Deane Jordan
Herald Staff Writer

A Tampa painter shocked when 7,800 volts jolted through his body has a 50-50 chance of losing a foot and an ear because of wounds the charge made when it surged through his body.

In satisfactory condition today at Central Florida Regional Hospital, Sanford, is 33-year old Robert Young II.

Young and Pat Holt, also of Tampa, were injured and splattered with paint May 2 when a long handled roller, one of the men was using to paint a convenience store roof touched a power line.

Holt, 17, was discharged from the hospital May 3.

Young and Holt, working for Hanaway Painters of Tampa and Brooksville, were painting a roof at the One Stop Center, 4800 State Road 46 when the incident occurred.

According to Young's father, Robert Young, of Illinois, doctors want to operate on the man's right ear to prevent it from dropping off caused by impaired circulation and inspect the foot to determine if it can be rebuilt with back and buttock muscle. Young's ear was injured when the electricity entered his body and the foot when it left his body, the elder Young said.

He said it is not known to what extent his son's hearing was impaired by the injury.

He said investigators for Florida Power and Light said they were amazed Young was not electrocuted.

Young said his son moved to Tampa a month ago and has no relatives in the area which is why he and his wife Joy came to Sanford while he is in the hospital recovering. They arrived Saturday and are staying at a local motel.

He said authorities are still puzzled as to how the accident occurred, adding that he and his wife have had a difficult time finding out details about the mishap.

"I'm wandering around out here like a ball in a pinball machine," he said.

Young said his son does not know how the incident occurred. He said he and his wife do not know the exact name of the company their son worked for nor where the other injured man lives.

"He's a witness," Young said.

Contacted today by the Evening Herald, a spokesman for Hanaway Painters confirmed the men were working for that company when the incident occurred. A Mr. Hanaway, who answered the business phone, said he was too busy to talk about the incident but he did say that Holt had returned home.

FP&L officials contacted today would not discuss the incident.

Already Facing Life, Man Gets 10 Years In Lewd Assault

"He has practically molested a neighborhood of children in Longwood," said a state prosecutor who asked that child fondler John Semmons Worling, 52, receive 15 years for his third sex crime conviction. The judge gave Worling 10 years to serve concurrently with a life sentence issued last week for the sexual battery of a girl.

Worling, of 318 Heather Ave.,

pleaded guilty Thursday to a lewd and lascivious assault on an 8-year old girl. Besides the life sentence and the 10 year sentence, Worling faces 30 years in a third case involving lewd assaults on a third girl. And the state may be considering a fourth case against him.

According to court records, Worling took liberty of the all children in the same manner, by molesting them while they were at his house playing with computer games or a swing. The incidents occurred during recent years until his arrest in September.

At Thursday's plea and sentencing hearing Assistant State Attorney Kurt Erlenbach called Worling a fixated pedophile, an adult who views children as sex objects.

Erlenbach asked Circuit Judge C. Vernon Mize Jr. to sentence Worling to the maximum sentence of 15 years — far more than the usual guideline-recommended sentence of one year — because of Worling's history of molesting children. Erlenbach said the sentence would be purely symbolic since any sentence Mize issued would be less than Worling's life sentence handed down by Circuit Judge S. Joseph Davis Jr.

Compromise Budget Squeaks By Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Relying on the vote of a hospitalized Republican and the tie-breaking ballot of the vice president, the Senate early today approved a new White House-backed budget that would curb defense spending and freeze Social Security payments for a year.

The dramatic 50-49 passage of the plan came at 1:48 a.m. EDT after a marathon Senate session that began Thursday morning and ended with Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., being brought to the Capitol by ambulance from the Bethesda Naval Hospital where he was operated on Wednesday for a ruptured appendix.

Wearing a brown bathrobe, with an intravenous tube in his arm, Wilson was pushed into the Senate chamber in a wheelchair to a standing ovation from both Republicans and Democrats.

"What is the question?" he jokingly asked as he entered the chamber through the double doors in the rear to vote on a package he would later call "a turkey."

Wilson's appearance to vote in favor of the newly fashioned package allowed the plan to tie at 49-49 and set the stage for Vice President George Bush — who can only vote to break ties — to cast the deciding ballot. Bush returned from a trip to Phoenix to attend the session. Wilson, a former Marine, gave him a quick salute.

Only one Democrat, Sen. Edward Zorinsky of Nebraska, voted in favor of the plan. Four Republicans voted with 45 Democrats against the package. Two other senators — John East, R-N.C., and James Exon, D-Nebr. — were also hospitalized.

The plan, designed to cut about $56 billion from the more than $200 billion deficit, was pieced together by Senate Republican leader Robert Dole after the Senate spent the last two weeks tearing apart the original compromise agreed to between President Reagan and Senate GOP leaders. That plan was designed to

Oakland Missed Again

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — It happened again. Another air traveler who thought he was headed for Oakland wound up thousands of miles off target.

The first wrong-way passenger last month ended up in Auckland, New Zealand, because he misunderstood a boarding announcement in Los Angeles.

Paul Singleton, a veteran air passenger, had a different problem. He is deaf. Guided only by an Oakland flight sign posted by the boarding gate and mistakenly not changed, Singleton got on the wrong aircraft in Phoenix and ended up in Austin, Texas, 1,730 miles southeast of his destination.

"Really, I can't believe all the airlines don't have a sign in the airplane while all the

A crumpled Yamaha motorcycle is left at the scene where early this morning it ran into a garbage truck at county Road 427 and Silver Lake Drive, Sanford. Earl Wienke, 26, of Sanford, was taken to Central Florida Regional Hospital where he was treated and released, a spokesman said. Florida Highway Patrol trooper J.L. Smith said the motorcycle was eastbound on CR 427 when the westbound garbage truck pulled in front of it towards Silver Lake Drive. The truck driver, Edwin Hernandez, Fern Park, will be cited. +

County Puts Several Restrictions On Apartment Complex Approval

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

An Atlanta developer, Post Partners III Limited, got the Seminole County Commission's blessing for a proposed 742-unit apartment complex off state Road 436 around Mirror Lake after pledging to spend $100,000 to clean up the lake and to pay more than $200,000 in impact fees.

The developers, represented by a partner, Michael Morris, also agreed to pay 75 percent of the cost of a traffic signal to be installed at its only entrance onto SR 436 across from Forest Lake Academy and to create a 150-foot buffer zone, in which nothing will be built, between the development and the highway.

Some $148,400 of the impact fees will go to the school system and $55,550 will be split between the sheriff's department and the county fire department.

The developer had requested 880 housing units on the 82.9-acre parcel being sold by the Florida Conference Association of Seventh-day Adventists for a reported $5 million. Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff elicited from Morris the information that the purchase price paid was to be based on the number of units approved by the commission.

Commissioners, however, balked at the requested density of 15.4 units per acre. The 742 units finally approved represent 13 units per acre.

Morris also promised that 60 percent of the apartments will have one bedroom, and thus will have single persons or couples occupying them.

He also said that no children under 14 years old will be permitted to reside at the complex.

Commissioner Fred Streetman insisted on the commitment about the single-bedroom apartments after residents in the area protested that the proposed development would further overcrowd area schools, especially Lake Brantley High School.

Commissioners unanimously approved a change in zoning from single-family dwelling district to planned unit development for the property and a change in the county's comprehensive plan from commercial-low density residential preservation to planned unit development.

Morris said that Post Partners, over its 15 years in the development business, has built 30 projects containing 9,000 apartments in the Atlanta area and has sold only four. They still own and manage the others. He said his firm intends to own and manage this new complex. Its first in Florida.

Commissioners imposed the lake clean-up requirement after residents living near the proposed development voiced concerns about the future of the lake, noting that they have been trying to clean it up and have stocked it with a weed-eating carp fish.

Morris's company is to take over responsibility for the lake restoration and will submit any applications required to the state for approval.

Justice System On Trial In Dotson Case: Governor

CHICAGO (UPI) — The "whole world" is watching how the criminal justice system treats Gary Dotson, convicted of a rape the victim now claims never happened. Gov. James Thompson told a clemency hearing.

Dotson asked the Illinois Prisoner Review Board and Thompson to set him free Thursday, and Cathleen Crowell Webb repeated she had fabricated her rape allegation in 1977.

"The whole thing was a big lie," said Webb, who was 16 when she identified Dotson as the man who abducted and raped her.

"What else can I do ... except to say I'm innocent?" said Dotson, 28, who has served six years of a 25- to 50-year prison term for his 1979 rape and kidnapping conviction.

"The Illinois criminal justice system is being analyzed by the whole world," Thompson said at the outset of the seven-hour hearing. "I want to assure the people of Illinois ... we will do justice in this case."

Dotson, of suburban Country Club Hills, and Webb was questioned by the governor for nearly three hours each.

The governor, who has been asked to pardon Dotson or commute his prison term to time served, said he will announce his decision after he receives the secret recommendation of the 10-member board.

No Mercy For 'Mercy Killer'

Elderly Man Gets Life For Shooting Terminally Ill Wife

FORT LAUDERDALE (UPI) — A 75-year-old retired engineer said he killed his terminally ill wife as an act of mercy to end her anguish and suffering. But the judge called it an act of murder and sentenced the silver-haired man to life in prison.

Roswell Gilbert's lawyer blamed his "stoic" testimony for the first-degree murder conviction Thursday.

"Jurors are human," attorney Joseph Varon said. "They would prefer to see a man get on the stand and cry his heart out. He has no tears left anymore."

Varon said he would appeal the verdict today.

Saying he shot Emily Gilbert, 73, his wife of 51 years, "to terminate her suffering," Gilbert called the March 4 slaying an act of love.

"I don't feel like I committed a crime at all," he said. "I thought I'd be acquitted. Justice is on my side, but the law is on

'I don't feel like I committed a crime at all. I thought I'd be acquitted. Justice is on my side, but the law is on somebody else's side.'

—Roswell Gilbert, 75

somebody else's side." The jury deliberated less than five hours Thursday before convicting Gilbert. Judge Thomas Coker Jr. immediately sentenced him to life in prison.

"He will spend the rest of his life in prison, which I'm not happy about. But I didn't commit the act," Assistant State Attorney Kelly Hancock said.

Gilbert spent 70 minutes on the witness stand Wednesday calmly telling how he fired two bullets into his wife's brain because Alzheimer's disease and osteoporosis destroyed her mind and left her body wracked with pain.

"The only solution to me was to terminate her suffering. I did a terrible thing, but I had to do it."

Hancock called Gilbert a cold and calculating scientist who felt no mercy or compassion when he shot his wife to death with a rusty pistol.

"Emily became a problem," Hancock told the jury. "He had decided that Emily was a psycho — that's the word he used. 'psycho.' Don't let sympathy get in the way of the cold, hard facts."

Varon told jurors Gilbert acted out of mercy and love.

"Based on this great love Roswell Gilbert had for his wife, it hurt him to see her disintegrate before his eyes. The only option was to end her suffering," he said.

How To Choose The 'Right' Begonia

Choosing the right begonias for your landscape or house plants can be very confusing. This family of ornamentals offers a wide variety of shapes, sizes, and colors. And, in addition to being excellent, showy flowering and foliage plants, begonias are rarely bothered by insects or diseases. Each variety is suited for a different landscape or home use and each requires a different method of propagation.

Begonias grown in our area can be divided into three types—fibrous rooted, tuberous rooted, and Rex begonias. The fibrous-rooted types, also known as wax begonias, have a fine root system and waxy green or bronze leaves and stems. Tuberous-rooted begonias are grown from underground storage tubers, and produce large flowers and foliage. The Rex begonias, which have underground stems, called rhizomes, come in a variety of colorful foliage types.

The fibrous-rooted types make excellent bedding plants for flower beds. They look best when massed with at least five in a group. They bloom the year-around, although summer growth is not as great as in other seasons.

Their white or brilliant pink and red flowers contrast with their dark green or bronze leaves, making them excellent display plants. They need at least a quarter of a day of sunlight.

Tuberous-rooted begonias can be used in flower beds, too. But, they're more often used as pot plants or in hanging baskets. They are quite light sensitive, and require about 12 hours of sun a day to bloom well. During the shorter days of winter, you can encourage flowering by using artificial light.

The old standby, Rex begonias, are mainly grown as house plants. In very protected areas, such as an atrium, Rex begonias do very well. Their foliage is often cut for use in flower arrangements. The variety of leaf shapes and colors make the Rex begonia a highly prized house plant.

Urban Horticulturist

Begonias can be propagated by seeds, by leaf or rhizome cuttings, as well as by division and tubers, depending on the type of begonia involved. Seeding methods are difficult—if not downright tough! Good seed is very expensive, and extremely small. And, unless you have special germinating chambers, you'll have a tough time germinating them. Begonias can be grown from cuttings, but this method has its drawbacks, too. Those plants started from cuttings won't branch freely and you'll end up with unattractive garden center or nursery should have a good selection. Be sure to choose disease-free plants that appear to be healthy and vigorous. Such plants should produce many branches and become thick and bushy as they mature.

Since most of our soils don't hold nutrients or moisture very well, you'll need to improve the soil before planting your begonias. Adding two or three inches of peat moss or compost to your flower beds and thoroughly mixing it in will help the soil hold the nutrients and moisture in the root zone. In addition, about three ounces of superphosphate, four ounces of dolomite lime, and two ounces of a minor element fertilizer mix should be added for every two square feet of soil surface.

If you plan to grow your begonias in pots or planters, make sure the containers have adequate drainage. If begonias are allowed to stand in excess water, the roots will suffocate. A soil mix of one-half perlite and one-half peat moss will provide adequate aeration and allow good growth.

Begonias are not heavy feeders. Apply fertilizers sparingly. Two pounds of a 6-6-6 or 8-8-8 completely fertilizer per 100 square feet of garden bed will meet their basic nutrient requirements. You container-grown plants should be fed once a month with a half-teaspoon of complete fertilizer. Hanging baskets and pots can be fertilized with the convenient liquid fertilizers available at garden supply stores. Be very careful not to exceed the recommended rates of application.

Begonias do best between 70 and 80 degrees F. Remember, high temperatures will retard growth and flowering, but if the plants are in the ground, you can prune them back in early fall to increase branching for better flowering.

Container-grown begonias react the same to high temperatures, but will survive the heat if placed in a light airy spot for the summer. Rex begonias seem to tolerate the heat much better and may be placed outdoors during the summer, as long as they don't get any direct sun.

Begonias are rarely troubled with insects or disease. But, you could have a few problems—especially if the plants are crowded or overwatered. Remove any dead or diseased leaves right away and keep the plants well-spaced to allow for air circulation. If fungus is a problem, most broad-spectrum fungicides will control it. But, if you have such problems, you might take a look at your own cultural practices. Errors in cultural practices may be the key to the problem.

Happy Gardening!

Women Alerted To Restroom Peepholes

DEAR ABBY: When I was a 16-year-old girl, I discovered a semi-concealed peephole in the wall of a ladies rest room at a gasoline station. The hole had been strategically drilled at a level that would afford the "viewer" on the other side of the wall a pretty good peep show. Since then I have examined the walls of hundreds of gas station rest rooms and have found a surprising number of peepholes!

I think gas station owners who are aware of this disgusting invasion of privacy should be held accountable by law. What agency should I contact to put a stop to this? And if I can't do anything to stop it, perhaps a letter in your column will alert women to the fact that they may be inadvertently the "star" of some creep's peep show.

DISGUSTED IN CALIFORNIA
DEAR DISGUSTED: Write to the consumer relations department of the oil company that owns (or leases) the gas station.

And until some action is taken to ensure privacy, men as well as women should be on the lookout for such peepholes. (A view is possible from either side of the wall.) P.S. An instant remedy: Stuff the hole with a wad of toilet tissue. Here's looking at you, lechers!

DEAR ABBY: You often advise people to talk to counselors, but let me ask you something: Can counselors help people to decide whether to have children or not? I've seen two counselors about this problem, and they were no help at all. They've seen so many kids with problems that their stock answer is: "When in doubt — don't."

I could be happy with or without kids, but my husband loves kids and he would make a wonderful father. I like kids, too, but they walk all over me; I've never been able to exercise authority over anyone. Even 2-year-olds push me around.

I told this to one counselor, and he said, "If you had a kid, by the time he was 10, he'd be kicking your rear end."

What do you think, Abby?

WEAK IN WATERLOO, IOWA
DEAR WEAK: No. Kids who have a "wait 'til your father comes home" kind of mother usually grow up hating their fathers and walking all over their mothers.

Some Bruises May Linger, But Eventually Disappear

DEAR DR. GOTT — I slipped and fell two weeks ago. The impact was all on my right leg. I developed a big bump five inches below my hip. It has not impaired my mobility and there are no cuts. Will this bump go away by itself?

DEAR READER — The blow to your leg probably produced bleeding into the muscle, a sort of huge bruise called a hematoma. The blood that leaked into the muscle will eventually be reabsorbed and reused by the body, but weeks may pass before the bump disappears.

In some people, calcium forms in large muscle bruises. Calcified hematomas are more painful and take longer to disappear. If the swelling you describe is due to your fall, leave it alone and let your body take care of it naturally.

I should add that some people bruise abnormally easily because of defects in blood coagulation. If you bruise excessively in the absence of injury, check with your doctor for an exam and blood count. Ordinarily, however, bruising reflects a minor injury to the body and does not require medical attention.

Ice packs or cold compresses can reduce bruising if applied promptly at the time of the accident.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 14 and overweight. When I try to lose weight by going on a diet, my brothers tease me and then I get depressed and gain back even more weight. How can I lose weight and not gain it back because of this teasing?

DEAR READER — Tell your brothers to bug off. Sooner or later you will have to take responsibility for yourself, and the issue of obesity is a good place to start. Peer pressure probably gets more kids in trouble than does any other adolescent influence. If your brothers are no insecure that they have to project their bad feelings on you, they have a major problem. If you want to lose weight and you feel that decision is right for you, do it. By sticking to a decision and achieving a goal, you will gain self-respect. Your brothers might learn to respect you more, too.

One final word: You are not overweight because you are depressed. You are overweight because you eat too much. The depression is an excuse for overeating. I would be depressed, too, if my brothers were picking on me all the time. Once you exercise control over your eating habits and are able to slim down, your brothers will lose their hold on you — and your depression may evaporate.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, Ohio 44101.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

We have long been teaching that it's right more often than not for strength to be concentrated in declarer's hand rather than in the dummy. There are good reasons for this rule: The location of honors and aces is concealed from the opponents, and the opening lead comes up to strength, not thought.

There are times when the stronger hand does end up as dummy, usually because artificial bids have been used. Today's deal contains an ironic twist, since declarer succeeded only because the powerhouse was in dummy.

With nine winning tricks in his hand, North opened the bidding with two clubs, strong and artificial. South's two-heart response, also artificial, showed 4-6 points and made South the declarer in six hearts.

When declarer ducked the opening lead of the spade king, West made the "safe" exit of a club to dummy's ace. Declarer now cashed the club king and spade ace, and ruffed a spade in his hand. He then ruffed a club in dummy, establishing the suit. After drawing trumps, he returned to his hand with the diamond ace and claimed.

Note what happens if North opens with a strong two-heart bid, and South gets to be dummy. Should East lead a spade, it becomes easy to lead a trump when declarer holds up his ace.

A trump lead or diamond lead defeats the slam since it removes a vital second entry to South's long clubs.

Bridge score table with North, South, West, East hands and tricks won.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY MAY 11, 1985

An ambitious objective that you have been secretly harboring has an excellent chance of being realized in the year ahead. Don't give up your dreams under any condition.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today your pride and ego may be extremely vulnerable. Make it a point not to take yourself too seriously.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There's a chance that the frustrations you encounter today will be of your own making. Think your moves through so that you aren't painted into a corner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An influential contact who is usually rather helpful will resent being imposed upon today. Try not to burden others with your demands.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Strive to be flexible when dealing with others today. If you take an unyielding position, you may cross swords with someone more stubborn than yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Guard against tendencies today to make undesirable tasks even more unpleasant than they need be. There's no reason to punish yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Usually you're not a demanding or possessive person, but today you might step out of character and create incidents that can be avoided.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If there are domestic rumbles at home today, do not involve outsiders. You could put a pal in an embarrassing position where he has to take sides.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be extremely tactful when dealing with co-workers today. If you come on as too strong or bossy, it may provoke something unpleasant.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Usually you're very adept at getting proper mileage out of the dollars you spend, but today could be an exception where you deplete your own purchasing power.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Matters that you and your mate disagree on should not be aired in the presence of others today. Each could look bad by saying things he shouldn't.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A positive attitude is imperative today. If your outlook is negative, it will lead you to take a course of action that will produce undesirable results.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This is one of those days where friends could make unreasonable demands on you. Be careful that you don't impulsively get yourself into something expensive.

Old Pickups Have Classy Chassis

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

They were workhorses once, hauling seed to the fields, tools to the building site, groceries to old Mrs. Jones' house. And when they had outlived their usefulness they were beat up, tore apart, and junked out. But a few survived the trash heap and have been reborn.

And boy do they make great conversation pieces.

Sanford truck fancier Bob Kennedy said when he drives up in his partially restored 1931 Model A Ford pickup truck it's almost sure to draw a few smiles and a succession of questions.

His answers:

"Yes, it's fun to drive.

"No, it wasn't all that expensive.

"I found it in a barn in Georgia about five years ago.

"Most of the restoration work I did myself."

Today's trucks are in most cases treated and driven as cars, but yesterday's trucks saw some rough handling, much rougher than that given the family sedan, Kennedy said, and few have made it through to today.

Such a short life expectancy makes

Kennedy's pickup relatively rare. And that translates into bucks. His $6,000 vehicle is twice as valuable as a car of the same year and model, he said.

Even today Kennedy doesn't pamper his truck, which represents an initial investment of $2,000, about another $1,500 for parts and repairs and many hours of his labor to get it back on the road.

Kennedy makes deliveries in the 54-year-old vehicle that looks as if it just drove out of a Norman Rockwell painting.

"The exposure is good for me and good for the truck. I've put 21,000 miles on it," he said.

Another Sanford trucker, who was drawn to his 1956 half-ton pickup because of the novelty of the machine as well as its obsolete Studebaker brandname, Erving Schreiber drives his precious find to his job at Seminole Community College every day.

He also trucks in the vintage vehicle on far-a-way vacation runs to Minnesota, Oklahoma and Nebraska. He prefers the pickup over his 1956 Studebaker car for long runs, he said.

Eileen Brennan Back On Track With 'Off The Rack'

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — The indomitable human spirit. Life must go on. You can't keep a good woman down. You take a licking and you keep on ticking.

All those clichés and more are illustrated heroically by Eileen Brennan, who has come back from terrible injuries to walk again, act again and even laugh again. She was practically killed by a car and the many months of recuperation have been pure hell.

But here she is, smiling and looking great, and acting her usual marvelous self in the new ABC series "Off the Rack," in which she co-stars with Ed Asner. Most people didn't give her a chance to live, let alone walk let alone act.

And now she says it was an experience that she wouldn't have missed.

"It was an odyssey," Eileen says. "The accident and its aftermath were good things. They made me realize what was most important in my life."

Obviously those important things were her two sons, the joy of being alive, the chance to work and enjoy work.

She still has some residual pain and discomfort from the accident. There is, she says, a steel plate in her knee that is the most bothersome.

CBS Bringing Back Some Old Favorites

NEW YORK (UPI) — CBS is rearranging its Wednesday night schedule for the 1985-86 television season, bringing back some old favorites, and designating Saturday as movie night.

The new season will include old favorites George Burns, Flip Wilson, Gladys Knight, Polly Holliday and Cynthia Sikes, the network said.

The network has canceled "E.R.," "Charles in Charge," "The Dukes of Hazzard" (now it is off-the-air) and "Cover Up," along with such limited series as "The Lucie Arnaz Show" and "Detective in the House."

"Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer," suspended after star Stacy Keach was jailed in England on a narcotics charge, may return to the schedule at midseason.

The new CBS shows consist of four one-hour series and two half-hour sitcoms.

Four of the new shows will air on Wednesdays, starting off with "Sir Crazy," a one-hour TV version of the Richard Pryor-Gene Wilder movie that stars Joe Guzaldo and Larry Riley, with assists from Holliday and Sikes.

Next comes the half-hour "Charlie and Company," starring Flip Wilson and Gladys Knight in a sitcom about middle class black family life — another middle class black comedy that probably owes its chance to the success of "The Cosby Show" on NBC.

It is followed by "George Burns' Comedy Week," a comedy anthology hosted by Burns, who will lead in and out with a monologue. Steve Martin is executive producer.

"The Equalizer" at 10 p.m. casts Edward Woodward as a former secret agent who works out of a Manhattan penthouse as an operative of last appeal for desperate clients. Robert Lansing keeps tabs on him for the government.

Anthologies are big on the fall schedule, and CBS will offer "The Twilight Zone" Fridays, 8-9 p.m., with new stories in the old Rod Serling format that hasn't been aired for 21 years. Ray Bradbury, Stephen King and Harlan Ellison are among the writers.

"Hometown," an hour comedy to air Tuesdays, 8-9 p.m., deals with a group of friends who met in the 1960s and are now part of the 1980s establishment. Gene Reynolds produced and directed the pilot.

On Saturday nights, "Airwolf" will be seen from 8-9 p.m., followed by a movie.

Bird Of Prey

Former teen heartthrob Rex Smith takes to the roads as Jesse Mach, a crimebuster who fights for law and order on two

Students Taking The TV Pledge

WATSONVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — Hundreds of public school students held fast rites for a TV set, kicking off a marathon of no television watching that school officials and pupils say improved their lives.

Carlos Garcia, creator of the youth boycott and principal of an elementary school, officiated at a memorial service earlier this week to kick off the city's second annual "No TV-athon."

Garcia said more than half the students at Hall and Allanaza elementary schools got pledges from friends and relatives to contribute money for each day they tune out TV. The funds go to a summer school recreation program.

Alas, No Laughs For Cheryl Ladd

By Vernon Scott

UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — When did you last laugh at a beautiful girl?

Probably a very long time ago because there is something curiously sacrosanct about beauty that sets this physical asset apart from humor and ridicule.

It's much funnier, say, to see Shelley Winters or Martha Raye take a pie in the face than Jaclyn Smith or Bo Derek. It would be blasphemous to see Miss America slip on a banana peel.

Beauties, for the most part, are isolated from verbal humor too. Few comedienne are mistaken for Raquel Welch.

Motion pictures and television perpetuate the tradition of separation of beauty and laughter. In Hollywood gorgeous women are imperiled physically but are rarely targets of laughter.

There are exceptions, to be sure — Lucille Ball and Marilyn Monroe.

It should come as no surprise, then, that Cheryl Ladd, one of the town's great beauties, has played nothing but drama (including her four-year stint as Kris Munroe in the "Charlie's Angels" TV series).

Since departing that show in 1981, Ladd has starred in heavily dramatic TV movies and feature films. Her most recent is "A Death in California," a two-part, four-hour miniseries to be broadcast Sunday and Monday.

Ladd was an embattled coal miner in "Kentucky Woman," a child abuser in "When She Was Bad," a rape victim in "Now and Forever" and a nurse in Vietnam in "Purple Heart."

Ladd's only surcease from pathos were in "The Grace Kelly Story" and "Romance On The Orient Express." Even then, she did not inspire laughs.

"I haven't done comedy since 1973 with Steve Martin and Cheryl Ladd portrays real-life Beverly Hills socialite Hope Masters, a woman whose life is nearly destroyed by rape and murder, in "A Death in California" airing Sunday and Monday on ABC, channel 9.

Teri Garr in "Wow." It was a summer TV replacement show.

"It's possible Americans put too much stock in beauty. Some people are in awe of beauty and the sort of dignity that goes with it. They see nothing to laugh about because beauty is a goal in itself.

"I can't imagine anyone laughing at Grace Kelly or Greta Garbo. Both of them played light comedy a time or two. But never pratfalls. For some reason it is offensive to see a revered beauty brought down.

"From what I can see, beauties can play bitches or heavies, but not clowns.

"My agent has put me up for a couple of feature film comedy roles, but I didn't get them. Goldie Hawn is one beauty who does get comedy parts.

"I suppose blondes play more comedy than brunettes. But I'm a blonde and it hasn't helped. Alfred Hitchcock's leading ladies were almost always blondes and they were those friends rallied around when she was so badly hurt.

For the first year back, when getting around was still something of a problem, she sent her older son, Paddy, 12, off to a boarding school. She says she felt it would make things a bit easier for her, and it has. Her younger son has a learning disability, and attends a special school, so he is still home with her.

One of the unexpected problems she had to face after she had recovered from the worst of her injuries was to rid herself of her dependence on pain-killing drugs.

"Quitting drinking was easy. I quit just like that. But it wasn't easy to quit those pain-killing pills. I kept on taking them even after most of the pain was gone. Just couldn't stop. I had to go into the Betty Ford Center for help in quitting."

She still smokes. She says they can't expect a woman to stop everything

"I am never completely unaware that it is there," she says. "It's most annoying the first thing in the morning. When I wake up and try to get out of bed and take my first steps of the day, from the bed to the bathroom, that's hard. I have to walk slowly and it's only gradually that I am able to walk normally. But I do, every day."

There have been good days and bad days, she says, along the road to recovery. And sometimes, on the bad days, she does and says things she shouldn't do or say.

"But," she says, "at least I have had the good sense to apologize to my sons when that happens."

She thinks her strength to make it back has come from the support of her friends. She has always been a popular, well-loved member of the acting community, and many of

Who Was The 'High Noon' Lady In Room 3?

DEAR DICK — What was the name of the actress in "High Noon" who lived in Room 3 in the hotel? Her first name in the movie was Helen. She also played in "Arrowhead" later, with Jack Palance and Charlton Heston. Is she still living? — M.K.R., Joplin, Mo.

That is Katy Jurado, who is still distinctly alive.
DEAR DICK — I wish, just one time, the stations that show "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous" would show one of the films about the starving people in Ethiopia right afterwards. I watch the precious babies dying over there and my heart breaks and then I watch "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous" and it makes me sick to my stomach that the people shown on that show are so ridiculously self-centered and wasteful as to use the God-given income they receive in such self-serving, ego-building ways, while other people are starving to death. I guess you can gather that I'm angry. — G.W., Harriman, Tenn.

Yes, it is irritating, if you put it that way. But it's something like that warning mothers have always given when trying to get their children to eat — "Eat it all up, remember the starving children in China." If your child eats, it isn't going to feed the starving children in China. And if the rich and famous change their lifestyles, it won't directly help the starving babies in Ethiopia. The tragedy is that there are countries with so much and countries with so little, and there really is very little connection between the two.

DEAR DICK — There was a 1940s (?) film which may have been called "Fog Island" — in which a group of people in an eerie mansion disappear one by one. Do you recall the correct title of this film? — A.B., North Springfield, Pa.

You're right on the button. "Fog Island" was made in 1945 and started some of the great spooky actors of that era — George Zucco, Lionel Atwill and Jerome Cowan.

DEAR DICK — In the past few weeks, they have replaced the terrific show "Hunter" on NBC. However, I have read nothing about the show being canceled. Please let me know the good news — that it is still on. — G.N., Arcadia, Calif.

The news is neither good nor bad. The fact is that, as of the last time I checked with NBC, they just hadn't made up their mind yet whether to have "Hunter" continue or not. The cast is optimistic, and it has my vote, but that doesn't count for much.

DEAR DICK — I would like some information about the old "I Love Lucy" show. I believe they started to produce the show in New York, but got into a disagreement with the directors and then moved to Hollywood. And this set the trend for others to produce there. Is this true? — C.A., Katy, Texas.

Not exactly. It is true they started in New York and then moved to California, thus setting a trend for hundreds of other shows. But the reason they moved was purely economic. Hollywood has always been — at least in modern times — the film capital. And the Desilu people figured that if they could put the show on film, rather than doing it live and making a kinescope off the screen, they would have a show of sufficiently good quality so they could sell it all over the country to dozens of stations. And that's why they moved.

From 'Fatal Vision'

MacDonald Granted Book And TV Profits

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — A federal judge has ruled that Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald may keep the $83,101 he was paid for the book and television movie "Fatal Vision" about the 1970 slaughter of his pregnant wife and two young daughters.

MacDonald, a former Green Beret captain, was convicted in 1979 of the stabbing and beating deaths of his wife Collette, 26, and their two daughters, Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2, at their Fort Bragg home. He is appealing a ruling last month denying him a new trial.

Prosecutors filed a motion to take away MacDonald's proceeds from "Fatal Vision" between October 1979 and August 1984 as well as any future money from literary and television rights to the story of the slayings.

But U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree ruled April 26 that because MacDonald, 41, contracted with the "Fatal Vision" author in 1979 — five years before Congress voted to forbid convicted criminals from profiting on stories of dramatizations of their crimes — the statute may not be applied retroactively.

"The court imposed upon him the maximum sentence allowed under the law existing at that time, three consecutive life sentences. The government cannot now constitutionally impose upon him additional punishment even though he has profited from the events surrounding the crimes," Dupree wrote in denying the motion.

U.S. Attorney Brian Murtaugh said Tuesday the ruling also applied to MacDonald's suit against "Fatal Vision" author Jor McGinniss for breach of contract. Prosecutors had sought to stop MacDonald's getting any settlement from that suit filed in California.

"I have no problems with the decision," Murtaugh said. "You win some, you lose some."

Murtaugh said the Victims of Crime Act of 1984 provides that the government can grant victims rather than wrongdoers proceeds of any book, movie, or dramatization of a crime involving personal injury.

"But the court held that to apply that statute to MacDonald would be punishing him after the effective date of the statute," Murtaugh said.

He's got it. He's received the money.
