STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

BY CHARLES P. STEWART

NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Congressman Charles J. Esterly of Pennsylvania—he aims to be his state's next lieutenant governor, by the way—is full of sympathy for the American farmer, in his present troubles.

Why wouldn't he be? He's a farmer.

However, there are farmers and farmers. Most of the agricultural lamentation we hear just now comes from the west; some of it from the south. Esterly is of the east—not the far east, like New England, but pretty eastern.

HENCE you get from him quite a different line of talk from the variety emanating in the corn belt. Good for Esterly, for being original.

Eastern agriculture isn't suffering to any such extent as western. Esterly himself appears rather more than moderately prosperous.

What's the reason?

"THE reason," explains Esterly, "is that the west had a land boom and the east didn't."

"So now, here in the east, we're not so badly off."

"But the westerner who paid for his farm a good deal more than it was worth and then mortgaged it on that basis, naturally can't get enough for his crops to keep up with his payments, since deflation's set in."

WELL, what's the remedy? "The remedy for insolvency," said Esterly promptly, "is to start over again."

Which is comforting or not, depending on how you look at it.

YET Esterly agrees that American agriculture, as a whole, has real grievances. He considers it as much entitled to protection as the industries.

"We import hatter, for instance. True to form again—a Republican; therefore a protectionist. If anything ails you, cure it with a tariff."

BUT how will protection help the American farmer? He's an exporter, isn't he?

"Not necessarily," dissented Esterly. "We import hatter, for instance. At one time, when American meat producers ought to have been making money Argentine imports prevented it."

"In so far as protection will help our farmers, they should have it."

ESTERLY speaks for co-operation, both by the farmers and their customers—reducing the producer-consumer price spread, giving the farmer more for what he has to sell, the latter more for what he has to pay.

Protection and co-operation will solve the farm problem, Esterly thinks.

He means sectional co-operation, not national. That, he believes, would be top-heavy, unmanageable. Nor would he have the government's hand in it—unnecessary, un-American.

ALL of these views, while a farmer's and therefore pro-agricultural, are somewhat different from the bulk of the farm bloc's.

They stress a point or two in which the bloc members seldom dwell.

"At best," concluded Congressman Esterly, "agriculture's an extra hazardous occupation, physically and financially."

Schooner Sinking Off Miami Harbor

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 19.—(AP)—The schooner James E. Newsom of Boston, loaded with lumber, was pounding to pieces in the surf off Miami beach at noon today. Her crew deserted her Thursday.

Exactly a week ago the schooner grounded upon entering the port and became waterlogged. The schooner was blocked for one day, and harbor officials ordered the ship towed to sea. This was done over the protest of the Newsom's master, who contended that with assistance he could make port. Seamen say the ship cannot last 24 hours. Launched at Booth Bay harbor, Maine, in 1919, of 707 tons gross, 78 feet long and with 23 foot beam, the schooner is said to have been one of the fastest ships of her class.

OPERATIC DEBUT OF MISS TALLEY DECIDED SUCCESS

Young Kansas City Girl Is Crowned One Of America's Leading Prima Donnas Following New York Triumph

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Marion Talley, once a choir singer in Kansas City, Mo., today at 19, stands acclaimed America's newest and youngest prima donna of the first rank.

Monday night she swept to brilliant triumph in her debut at the Metropolitan Opera House as 5,000 persons outside stormed the doors and a house of more than 4,000 gave her an ovation rivalling those accorded Enrico Caruso.

Twenty times the young soprano was called to the curtain when the opera was finished. The Africa "Caro Nome" the high spot in her performance as Gilda in Verdi's "Rigoletto" brought nine calls.

Though New York took the singer to its heart with enthusiasm, none was happier than Miss Talley's parents and 200 friends and relatives who came from Kansas City to see her triumph. The young singer herself was least demonstrative of all.

"I'm awfully happy that I have pleased these wonderfully kind and friendly people," she said.

Police Keep Back Crowd. While those within the huge auditorium were hearing her first notes, mature and full, mounted police were riding, four abreast, along the sidewalks to clear them of the crowd.

With every available seat sold days ago, belated would-be patrons offered speculators as high as $100 a seat. Eight men were arrested as ticket scalpers.

Across a little corridor from the stage, Charles Talley a telegraph operator for the Missouri Pacific and once an organizer for the Associated Press ticked out on a wire installed by the Associated Press that the dreams of the family had come true.

Asked if his daughter had inherited her voice from him, Mr. Talley remarked: "I guess it's from Heaven."

Called American Nightingale. Mayne J. Beach, of Kansas City, failed to share Miss Talley's call. "I've had an awfully happy, though rather nervous evening," he said.

Metre Avitable, Marion's first Metropolitan director said, "I am satisfied." "The American Nightingale" was what Arturo Bodanza, the conductor, called her. He predicted that she would become as popular as Patti.

SHADE TREES TO BE PURCHASED FOR CITY PARKS

The City Beautification committee today authorized the purchase of trees and plants for its program of supplying the necessary planting along the streets and in the parks and also decided to employ a horticultural expert to assist in the matter of designing the plan for park beautification and for the pruning of trees both in the parks and on the streets of the city.

W. B. Williams, city manager, who is chairman of the committee, stated during the meeting that owing to the necessity of expert advice relative to the removal of trees in the parkways along the streets he deemed it necessary to employ the services of an expert. The committee agreed to the idea and immediate steps are expected to be taken in the matter.

Many cases of inexperienced planting were cited to show that expert advice was necessary to secure the proper and healthy growth of all plants set out in the city limits. Mr. Williams advised the committee that the construction of the new greenhouse at the recently established city nursery was to be started in the near future...

Municipal Freight Basin Plans Will Be Passed On By Famous Marine Engineer

Government and railroad engineers are expected to be present at the regular meeting of the City Commissioners next Tuesday for the hearing of the plan to construct a municipal harbor and a bridge spanning the Seminole Boulevard, when the latter project is completed, city officials said today.

The chief engineer of the Florida East Coast Railroad, who recently supervised the construction of a $2,000,000 span over the St. Johns River, is expected to be retained by the city to investigate the feasibility of the plan for the new harbor and to assist in preparing the plans.

The City Commissioners are expected to add the sum of $400,000 to the proposed bond issue to finance the project, although various estimates place the figures for the cost of such a harbor at a lower figure. The addition is said to be provided in order that

Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker Tells Of Experiences At League Of Nations' Sessions Held At Geneva

Visitors from Orlando, Eustis, Deland and many nearby cities in addition to scores of local citizens attended Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker's lecture on the League of Nations held Tuesday evening at the City Hall under the auspices of the Sanford Woman's Club.

Following the invocation by Dr. E. D. Browne and patriotic songs led by Mrs. A. M. Phillips, Mrs. W. F. Blackman, president of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs, introduced Mrs. Pennybacker as one "who had rendered invaluable service both in this country and abroad in the services of international friendship."

In outlining her experiences at the League of Nations' sessions at Geneva, Mrs. Pennybacker told of the spirit of the League and the part it was destined to play in the prevention of conflicts between the nations of the world. She alluded to Woodrow Wilson, dwelling on the reverence with which his memory was held abroad, and sketching his actions in forming the League, which she declared was "the only practical organization for the insurance of world peace."

Mrs. Pennybacker told of the improved condition of the Near East sufferers in the devastated areas where she has visited and held the capacity house spell bound by her eloquent description of the terrible conditions that existed in Armenia before the United States came to the refugee's rescue.

Occupying the platform with Mrs. Pennybacker were: Mrs. W. P. Blackman, Mrs. W. J. Carney, state chairman of literature; Mrs. Erwin L. Schumacher, vice-president of Section Seven; Mrs. E. M. Galloway, state federation parliamentarian; Mrs. Henry Wright, president of the Sanford Woman's Club.

The hall was gaily decorated with flags of many nations.

Fires In Australia Claim 31 Lives In The Past Few Days

MELBOURNE, Australia, Feb. 18.—(AP)—The death toll from bush fires in Australia has now reached 31. Four persons are missing. A strong wind is fanning the fires in many places and rain is anxiously awaited.

The township of Toolang in the Healesville district of Victoria, was saved after a desperate struggle with the fire which traveled with alarming rapidity through the forests. Women and children were sent out of the fire zone to places of safety.

Only the determination of the fighters to save homes saved the township from being razed. Now and again a huge tree would crash to earth and the fire fighters had narrow escapes from death. Under the illumination provided by blazing huge oaks witnessed the burial of six fire victims last night.

A destructive fire has broken out in the Toora hill country in southern Victoria where flames reach in some places 60 feet high. The fire is traveling with great rapidity and is threatening the township of Poreporekan. Fire fighters had to run for their lives, from the fire in Yallourn township.

Investigation Into Death Of Convict Continued As Jury's Report Is Awaited

TUSCUMBIA, Ala., Feb. 18.—(AP)—Investigation of the death of Hooto Taylor, convict, shot back to Tusculumbia today, where authorities awaited the official report of the coroner's jury which yesterday visited the body of Taylor who his grave was opened at Town Creek. The body also was examined by a physician.

In its report, to Coroner W. F. Hicks, the jury said bruises and cuts were discovered on Taylor's body, and although the charge that these blows produced death was avoided, the findings of the jury are declared to be in sharp contrast to the official report filed with the prison board setting forth that the prisoner died of heart trouble.

It was said this morning that Attorney General Hatwell G. Davis who is conducting an investigation into the death of James Knox, who also died at Flat Top prison, will be asked to take a hand in the Taylor case.

Charges by J. Y. Taylor, aged father of Hooto Taylor, that his son was clubbed to death by two negro trustees, led to the present investigation. The elder Taylor directed the exhumation of his son's body, and saw in his bruises and wounds the marks of the blows which substantiated his charge.

He had made formal demand that the jury's report be made the basis of further investigation and grand jury action.

It was also indicated this morning that the findings of the coroner's jury would be placed in the hands of prosecuting officers. The report was sworn to before Justice of Peace J. A. Almon, and delivered to the sheriff last night.

The jury found that Taylor's left jaw was larger than his right, and that six bruises or cuts were noticeable on various parts of his body. Several of the marks still were about "hot," it was declared, indicating that the blows caused the flow of blood when they were dealt.

Taylor died at Flat Top mine last Nov. 21. He was convicted of second degree murder in Colbert County Oct. 31, 1925, and sentenced to 10 years. He was 39 years old at the time.

and pleasurable also increases the use of gasoline as the automobile, no longer remains idle during inclement weather but is used the year round.

Weather conditions, prosperity and other factors may alter the estimate to some degree, but taking the country as a whole, it is believed that a decline of the use of gasoline in some districts will be compensated for in others.

Crude Oil

Improved refining methods, increased cracking facilities and a desire among refiners not to increase stocks of gasoline makes it difficult to estimate the amount of crude oil that will be consumed during 1926.

However, Stafford estimates that if the amount of crude oil charged to stills in 1925 is in the same proportion to 1925 charges, approximately 837,000,000 barrels of crude oil will be needed.

Replaces Dog Teams

Even the husky trail dogs of the arctic regions must give up their place to modern industry's inventions. This one is of the snow-motors which will be used in an expedition to the North Pole.

Horse-Drawn Fire Wagons Approved

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 15.—Mayor D. W. Hoan believes that the horse-drawn fire carriage remains a modern necessity and will block all efforts for completely motorizing the fire department.

Mayor Hoan's objection is based on the theory that motor apparatus cannot negotiate heavy snowdrifts and that some horse-drawn equipment should be maintained for use in stations near recently annexed suburbs where heavy snow is apt to be encountered in winter.

Motor vehicle men here maintain that a properly powered fire truck can go through any mud or snow obstacle as well as horse-drawn vehicles, if not better.

TRADE-IN PLANS

A Kansas City auto dealer has a novel way of determining the trade-in price for a used car. His plan is to clip from the daily newspaper a list of want ads, offering for sale a certain automobile of a particular model. The average price listed for these cars is the amount he allows on a trade-in.

Bus Lines Must Get City Permits

BOSTON, Feb. 15.—Motor bus companies in Massachusetts are facing a difficult situation as the result of a state ruling which provides that bus lines cannot operate from Massachusetts to a point in any other state unless a permit has been obtained from the town or city authorities in every locality through which the busses pass in this state.

Several bus lines have discontinued their service in the state and others have been forced to change their route and make long detours because of the difficulty often experienced in getting permits from cities.

Pedestrians Suffer In Auto Accidents

CHICAGO, Feb. 15.—Seventy-nine per cent of the people killed in auto accidents during the month of December, were pedestrians, according to Carol E. Rohb, statistician of the National Safety Council.

Although 569 persons were killed in automobile accidents during December, the daily death rate per million population shows a reduction of 15 persons per day when compared with the records of the preceding month.

QUIT GETTING UP NIGHTS

A Healthy Bladder Acts During the Day.

C. N. Shuman, Republic, Ohio, says: "Before taking Lithiated Buchu (Keller Formula) had to get up six or seven times each night. Now I do not get up at all. You may use my name if it would benefit anyone with bladder trouble." Be careful not to take drugs that check the action of the bladder. You may have to continue its use. Lithiated Buchu (Keller Formula) increases the action during the day. It cleanses the bladder as poison salts do the hawks driving out foreign matter, neutralizing excess acids, thereby relieving the irritation which causes "Getting Up Nights." The tablets cost 25 cents at all drug stores or Keller Laboratory, Mechanicsburg, Ohio.

London Man Suggests Storing Car Under Sidewalk To Relieve Congestion

LONDON, Feb. 15. It started with a man who strolled to work with a large roll of newspaper and slowly into a hole in the sidewalk. It is clear again.

It must have been a city dweller, for he never would have thought of it. And he must have been terribly in need of garage space for his machine, or he never would have broached it.

As it is, here's his scheme: free for the street of those who have similar trouble, with their cars. They're mostly of the all-city dwellers, living in close quarters, that they can't have their private garages, and still being considered by the police as keeping their cars off the roads at night.

It's nothing but the simple expedient of making the auto enter a hole in the sidewalk.

Why not? It's common on the front sidewalk of the houses and from time to time the cars of the tenants in the apartment house cars. In fact, a large part of the apartment houses could be set aside for this purpose.

A car coming up the sidewalk flat on the sidewalk are opened up, the car rolls upon the platform and down it sinks. Then the doors close and the sidewalk is clear again.

And no more space occupied, either!

The suggestion is made, in addition, that this sidewalk lift could be operated under the power of the auto engine.

MISS ELEANOR BOLLY IS HOSTESS AT SHOWER FOR MRS. FRANK BRADLEY

Mrs. Frank Bradley, a recent bride, was honored by a "kitchen shower" given by Miss Eleanor Bolly Tuesday afternoon at her home on Laurel Avenue.

The living and dining rooms were beautifully adorned with baskets of calendulas and ferns.

Piano selections were given during the afternoon by Miss Lucile Echols, and Miss Katherine Van Ness.

Several contests afforded much merriment, one of especial interest being the word contest, in which the guests were asked to see how many words they could make out of the words "Echols-Bradley".

Miss Helen Jenkins proved the most clever and was awarded the prize, a hand made handkerchief.

After the contests, Little Miss Louise Hooker entered the living room, drawing a small wagon decorated with orange and green, heavily laden with gifts of all kinds for the bride's new kitchen.

Refreshments of candlestick salad, saltines, cakes and coffee were served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Nicholson and Miss Ethel Bolly.

Mrs. Bradley wore for this occasion a smart frock of pencil blue crepe de chine.

The guests were Mrs. Frank Bradley, Misses Thelma Dobbins, Eillian Thorpey, Martha Wallace, Marjorie Smith, Mary Helen Morse, Betty Bronson, Luella Mahoney, Helen Marantette, Mary Kinlaw, Evelyn Cust, Minnie Beck, Harriet Rossiter, Helen Jenkins, Rebecca Jones, Hilda Butler, Marion Hand, Lucile Echols, Katherine Van Ness, Beatrice Powell, Elizabeth Knight, Alice Elder, Thelma Powell, Mrs. Richard May, Mrs. L. 10 Feet of Abe

IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Four enterprising "cabbies," their usual cab business gone to pot because of the heavy snows, managed to dig up some old-fashioned cutters, sleigh bells and all, and are reaping a harvest.

They are charging $10 to $12 an hour for sleigh rides and can't handle the business.

The appearance of one of them in Central Park caused more excitement among youngsters than a circus parade. Most of these children had never before seen a cutter nor heard a sleighbell.

"And I can't but feel very sorry for youngsters who have never 'hopped a bob' or hitched a sled to a cutter runner or, best of all, snuggled warmly in bed on a blizzard night listening to the tinkly music of the man-toned bells as they jangled by through the night. Winter for the youngsters on my block in Port Huron, Mich., started not with the first snowfall, but the first sleigh drift. It meant that nice fat snow drifts awaited outside and the street was 'sleek' for sled riding.

Wasn't it the grandest sound of all the year?
I defy anyone to find anything stimulating and romance-stirring in the gruff honk of auto horns. These hardy annuals shiver winter and summer alike. Nor can I see any reason why the motor should supersede the cutter and bob on stormy days.

I counted in New York from three to five motors stalled per block while a cutter spun briskly by and the driver twiddled his fingers at the stranded cars.

Elsewhere—California, Florida and southern points excepted—hockey has long been recognized as one of the sport of sports. It officially arrived in New York this season, with the result that up to 20,000 persons jam the new Madison Square Garden for an important match.

When hockey caught on Tex Rickard, who runs the great arena, was having his troubles with prize fighters who were demanding fancy prices. Now he can snap his fingers at them and there are many worried "box fighters" about the town.

To give the ice an effect of silver whiteness workers pour barrels of white paint over the huge floor surface and then flood the arena.

IT could rather plausibly be said of Lotta Halprin that she had grown into her fortieth year a little bitterly.

The bitterness of frustration of plans. Frustration of the year-after-year hope that somehow a combination of circumstances would arise that would release her from the monotony of routine.

The routine of head night nurse in a children's hospital ward.

How many hundreds of thousands like her! Pressing on. Hoping on. Dreaming on! Bearing with the day on the strength of that hope of the morrow.

To Lotta, even when the monotony had her by the throat as if it would throttle her, that little hope sprang eternal. Release! Somehow.

Twenty-one years in Dr. Grengall's Children's Hospital. And a down-at-the-mouth hospital at that. Forever short of funds. Pressed for ward room. Ill supplied with apparatus. An old four-story shanty of a house, kept together body and soul by the indefatigability of Dr. Grengall, who had let himself, as the years of his struggle for the existence of his hospital wore on, become as mouldy looking as the old dilapidated building itself.

Sometimes when she reported for duty at dusk, the sight of that scarred-looking old veteran of a building smote actual nausea to the spirit of Lotta.

The dingy, formaldehyde-smelling halls. The dingy little iron cribs. The poor little nubs of suffering babies. The doctor prowling around half the night. It was difficult to get up-and-coming young doctors to bring cases to the Grengall Baby Hospital.

Most of the time there were not enough doctors to go around. And the nurses were middle-aged. Like Lotta. Most of them grown old in service. Tired in service. Gray in service.

That was what Lotta dreaded. To become one of the old gray-moth nurses who were reconciled!

Lotta fought against being reconciled. At forty, her hair still had plenty of red in it and her figure was the figure of a woman fifteen years younger. Night service, which she preferred because it gave her part of the day out of doors, had not told on her. On the contrary at forty, Lotta looked thirty-five. And yet—the morrows—they brought her nothing. Nothing but the routine—the routine of a second-rate hospital.

Her windfall came finally through the commonplace medium of the Sunday advertisement page of the newspaper.

It could be said of Lotta Halprin that she had grown into her fortieth year a little bitterly. The bitterness of frustration of plans, made as head night nurse in a children's hospital ward. Lotta dreaded becoming one of the old, gray-moth nurses who were reconciled to their lot. Lotta fought against being reconciled.

Then the chance came. At the end of a month Lotta has slid successfully into a position that countless of her predecessors had tried unsuccessfully to fill before her—as companion to Mrs. Jelenko.

Thirty-four hands served Mrs. Jelenko. Mrs. Jelenko's two hands served no one.

Mrs. Jelenko was the loneliest woman in the world. With her, Lotta was lonely. Lotta was afraid.

"Elderly woman alone on Long Island estate, wishes companion who is preferably also a practical or trained nurse."

For at least the fiftieth time in her experience of answering advertisements of this type, only to find this or that impediment in the way of her obtaining the position, Lotta answered this one.

Here actually was the ideal change she had been seeking. Companionship to a solitary but not bed-ridden woman of sixty. Surroundings of luxurious beauty. And enough time to herself to catch up with life, as Lotta put it.

Mrs. Jelenko, her employer, a smooth-faced woman with black hair at sixty-five, really only desired her services during the three hours of the morning and for driving periods in the afternoon. The remainder of the time Lotta was to have to herself.

Even Dr. Grengall, when she finally mustered up the courage to tell him, took her sadly enough by the hand, but with a smile across his gray, old, tired old face.

"You're right, after all, Lotta. This work of ours can grind you down if you let it."

"You've been awfully good all these years, Dr. Grengall. I'll always remember you as one of the best men in the world. Big enough not to be afraid of getting sucked down by life. As I am."

"I am sucked down, Lotta. I'm on to myself. But what's the use? If I had Mr. Rockefeller's money, I guess my days would find me right here. The youngsters will miss a good night nurse, Lotta. You never failed them."

"I'll miss them too, Dr. Grengall. They've made these years livable."

"Good luck to you, Lotta, and come back and see us and remember I'm glad for you!"

"Indeed I will come back, Dr. Grengall, and don't you keep up this pace of over-working."

"Lord love you, it's all that keeps me happy enough to be alive. Over-working."

The new environment of course that you had to get accustomed to, credible, waking up mornings in a trimmed room, with an apple tree in the window and the clear air out of their warm little throats.

Getting accustomed to beauty in the narrow city bedroom and the of day-sleep was just as much as getting accustomed to other aspects of work.

Mrs. Jelenko, as was to be expected, garrulous, peck-sniffy, difficult and was prepared for that, too, and let it defeat her.

After all, an inevitable price for so much beauty, peace and pleasure her lot here.

And so Lotta, almost from the with meticulous fidelity to detail, difficulties in the way of coping with and successfully, too.

Around the solitary figure of revolved a household composed of vants. In this little kingdom of hers in the garden of Westchester county reigned supreme.

It was a dynasty of men and around a central figure to do her had the good sense to ally herself.

At the end of the first month, successfully into a position that her predecessors had tried unsuccessfully before her.

Mrs. Jelenko liked Lotta. And days, except for the morning and afternoon period, were her own.

Lotta went to town twice a week to her parlor. Lotta "touched up" her hair and goes. That is, the red spots where going were brought back to youth, manipulations of a beauty specialist, down into her savings for a smart and a fitch coat with a gay brocade.

It was quite a different Lotta back occasionally to visit Grengall on some of the children in the ward.

It was after these visits that she could cast an appraising eye on her Household.

Something tugged at Lotta back to Grengall's. The realization of a querulous woman around whom a kingdom revolved. A woman whose position was by accident of inheritance who in no wise contributed toward world a better place in which to live.

Thirty-four hands served Mrs. Jelenko's two hands served no one.

And suddenly, living there in luxury with her, a horror began to Lotta.

This woman, in the midst of her servants pandering to the temporary brood, the upholstery of her limousine, the hour of her flowers, the hour of her temper.

Horror of this woman smote Lotta's selfishness. Her indulgences. Her in its worst form.

Mrs. Jelenko was the loneliest woman in the world. Compared to her, those who back in Grengall's, when children's hands to her when she reported there were as years in a garden.

A frenzy waylaid Lotta. A frenzy to return to Grengall's. To the waiting faces of children when she the ward. Children who needed her, curved, duty-ridden back of Dr. Grengall, slept on a pallet in the children's ward, meals most of the time in nibbles from charity patient's well-filled tray.

Lotta was lonely. More lonely ever been in her life. And Lotta was too. Obsessed with horror of Mrs. Jelenko's loneliness in the world.

The day that Lotta returned to her uniform under the cloak, she saw the hall just coming out of the ward.

"The children are waiting for me," he said, before she could explain.

ARTS ON LETTER

The last game he ever played in Scanlon's Billiard Parlor.

"He was a good player, too," continued the old man. "I installed a table for him at the White House. It cost $1100, which was a lot of money in those days.

"I suppose you know Grant was a Democrat, though the Democrats, by mistake, as usual, let the Republicans nominate him for president.

"He didn't like to be called 'president,' though. He preferred the title of 'general.'

"GRANT was a kindly man," reminisced Scanlon, "and very democratic, besides being a Democrat. So was Lincoln. He'd often stop on the street for a chat with some little boy, such as I was, then, and always gave him a pat on the head, as he left him.

"But Washington was livelier during Grant's two terms than ever it had been before or has been since. It was full of the general's war friends, like Phil Sheridan, and they kept things moving."

"ONE midnight, just as I'd closed up," related the old-timer, "Sheridan and some of his friends called and made me let them in. 'They called for wine and I served it. But just as they were lifting their glasses, 'What kind of whiskey gave you?' asked Sheridan. 'Just your kind, I think,' I answered. 'What is it?' 'Old Stag.'

"JOHN L. SULLIVAN," he called Scanlon, "was a good customer of mine, and a family friend too. No better heart of man ever lived. About 200 pounds was his fighting weight. He was 322 when he met Corbett in condition. Corbett's fat enough to weigh 350. I went in a bit for sport myself. I was on the National Baseball League board of directors in 1887."

ADVERTISING DID IT

Wrigley, the chewing gum man, has explained how he built up a business of millions of packages a day.

He has done it by sticking to his one line and advertising it. He spends over a million dollars a year in buying newspaper space to tell the world about 5 cent chewing gum. He has educated people to chew gum and to chew Wrigley's. He did not stop shouting as soon as he attracted attention.

He says you must keep it up or the buyers will forget you. Whether yours is a 5 cent or a $50,000 business, keep telling about it.

EVERYBODY WANTS TO LIVE

is the Highest Class Development in Sanford. There is no other with so many attractive features.

and for these reasons, many people without funds are acquiring lots in Highland Park are beyond their reach. These could be no greater mistake.

PRICES IN HIGHLAND PARK ARE NOT HIGH

On the contrary, you can buy some of the most desirable

lots in Highland Park for actually less than prices asked for lots closer to Highland Park that are without any restrictions whatever and that are wholly lacking in the distinctive features which set Highland Park apart in a class by itself.

Terms of payment for lots in Highland Park are easy, and special inducements, both in prices and terms, are offered to builders of high class homes.

The distinctive design of Highland Park gives a great diversity in the size and shape of lots, inside lot dimensions from 50 to 100 feet frontage and more than 150 feet deep. Some lots have areas double other lots that of the usual city lot, and do not in the least interest parties who the better on these lots the prices of lot without calling attention to their unusual size or its in many ways its strategic location. Come and see for yourself, and let us drive you over the property. We will show you some of the most desirable inside lots are willing to close to $2000. And do not forget that prices of lots in Highland Park include sidewalks fully paid for and planting of trees, flowers and tropical trees and shrubbery between the curb and sidewalk and the restrictions which give you absolute protection against every undesirable feature and insure the development which will be a harmonious and artistic lines. If you are looking for a great staff.

You will not find it in Highland Park! But if you are expecting to find high prices, you will be thoroughly disappointed, and when you consider WHAT YOU GET, prices in Highland Park are exceedingly low and not half what they will be in a year from now. Remember that city utilities all over the property are already in—sewers, water and gas, and that the paving of every foot of the street in and convenient to everything, schools, churches, stores and their delivery routes, only ten minutes walk from the domestic help and labor supply of Goldsboro and yet with an approach direct to the center of town through its best residential section, free from every objectionable feature and with many distinctive features of its own which you can find no where else.

No matter what may happen to land and town lot houses, close in, high class stuff is never affected in such a town as Sanford, which is sure to grow and grow, sometimes rapidly as at present, but steadily on its unequalled agricultural and industrial and commercial foundation into its destined place as one of the two largest cities of Interior Florida. Buy safer. Buy gilt edge property, close in, and you can never lose, but are sure to make big profits.

And when you buy, buy the best you can get, for there is always a demand for the best of always increasing prices. And in Sanford, that is Highland Park. Telephone 177 and a salesman will take you all over Highland Park and explain all its attractive features.

Prices are very low, investors who have faith in the growth and expansion of the city have already invested great sums. Don't procrastinate, be one of the shrewd investors who will reap these generous profits.

Sun Spots Interfere With Plans Of Mankind from day to day.

"Sunspots may not be the direct cause of magnetic storms," he adds. "It seems more probable that both are caused by a stirring up of the solar activity from a cause, probably electrical in its nature, of which we really know nothing. It is observed that in times when there are the most spots that there are many other signs of increased solar activity. It is this increased activity that probably causes both the sun spots and the magnetic storms."

Solar activity means heat and when there are the most spots the sun usually is hotter, asserts Dr. P. E. Fowle, Jr., of the astronomical observatory of the Smithsonian Institution. This does not mean a hotter earth, he explains, recalling the Humphrey statement. Reasons for this paradox are long and complicated, but Dr. Fowle gives a hint as to how this might happen:

"If the sun got hot enough to cause more evaporation from the oceans there would be more cloudiness and more rain on land and cooler weather."

Advance Predictions

Smithsonian officials believe that small changes in solar heat have a fairly close relation to ensuing weather on earth, but do not think it possible for advance weather predictions.

"That there is a definite, although as yet not clearly defined relationship between sunspots and weather, is thought likely by Dr. Robert De C. Ward, professor of climatology at Harvard University.

"The discovery of an eleven year sunspot periodicity in the magnetic phenomena of the earth," he says, "naturally has led to investigations of similar periods in weather. Numerous studies have been made back even into the Seventeenth century, but the problem is difficult and obscure because weather itself is a complex."

"Predicting sunspots is something like predicting snowstorms on earth, declares Prof. Charles C. Wylie, astronomer at the University of Iowa, who adds: "You know that in the long run you will get sunspots every 11.17

Printing Press Of 125 Years Ago Gift To College Museum

SEATTLE, Feb. 18. (AP)—A printing press built 125 years ago by Adam Ramage is a prized relic in the University of Washington museum here. This press printed the first newspapers in four Pacific Coast cities—Monte-rey, Cal., Portland, Ore., Olympia and Seattle, Wash.—and gave to San Francisco, then called Yerba Buena, its second publication.

In 1815 the Ramage was shipped to Mexico from New York City. In 1834 and was used to print official orders of the Mexican government. Twelve years later it printed Monterey's first newspaper.

By 1847 it was turning out the Star in San Francisco and in 1850 it had gotten as far north as Portland, Ore. In 1852 the Columbian was being run from the Ramage in Olympia. Next it went to Seattle where its last useful days were spent in printing the Gazette.

Although it has seen 50 years of active service the press still is in good condition mechanically.

years, just as you know that you will get snowstorms every twelve months. But you may miss the storms by a month or so and you may miss the spots by a couple of years."

Prof. S. A. Mitchell, director of the Leander McCormick Observatory at the University of Virginia, sees no relationship between sunspots and weather.

"When spots are varying in number as they are, it is sometimes easy to juggle figures in order to prove a connection with some other event that also varies. In ninety-nine percent of the cases the connection is illusory."

Weather at the earth's equator becomes warmer at times of sunspot activity and cooler near the poles, in the opinion of Henry Helm Clayton, meteorologist working in co-operation with Smithsonian at Canton, Mass.

The bureau of agricultural economics does not believe cooler weather conditions will be sufficient to influence wheat prices. Several attempts have been made to work out cycles of prices, but none has approximately coincided with sunspot cycles.

Nice thing about working in a bank is half the time when you get down there you find it is a holiday.

A cigarette made with P. A. burns better

P. A. makes one of the finest cigarettes a fellow ever smoked. It rolls easier because Prince Albert is crimp-cut and stays put. Doesn't blow all over the place. For the same reason, a P. A. cigarette burns better . . . doesn't die the instant you lay it down.

Try rolling 'em with P. A. Me-o-my, what a smokel Cool as a cucumber. Fragrant as locust blossoms. Sweet as a melon. Never a tongue-bite or a throat-parch, because the Prince Albert process took a firm stand on that matter right at the start of P. A.'s career.

The more you know about rolling cigarettes, the more you appreciate this better cigarette tobacco. Yes, Sir—Prince Albert for home-rolled cigarettes every time. Get yourself a tidy red tin or a tippy red bag of P. A. before you do another thing!

Incidentally, if you want to get genuine pleasure out of a jimmy-pipe, pack it with P. A. Many a man has learned that he can smoke a pipe (and enjoy it) with good old P. A. for packing. There's a P. A. sunshine shop just around the corner! Get going, Man!

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tin and tippy red bags. And always with every tin of bits and packs reserved by the Prince Albert process.

"Furnishers to Men Who Know"

First Pictures of Women Who Contest Clark Will

The three women who are seeking a share in the estate of the late Senator William A. Clark of Montana, claiming to be his daughters. At the right is Mrs. Effie McWilliams of Clarkdale, Mo. Below, at left, is Mrs. Alma Hines, of Orrick, Mo. Above, at left, is Mrs. Addie Miller of Denver, Colo.

By NEA Service. CLARKSDALE, Mo., Feb. 18.—Existence of a hitherto unsuspected chapter in the life of the late Senator William A. Clark of Montana, copper baron and multimillionaire, was charged here when three women filed suit to break the will which disposes of his $50,000,000 estate. These women declare they are daughters of Clark by a marriage he entered into in 1859 when he was a struggling school teacher in Missouri—a marriage that, if it really took place, remained a secret to Clark's friends and relatives. The contestants are Alma Hines of Orrick, Mo., and Addie L. Miller of Denver, Colo. Their story is as follows: In 1859, they say, while Clark was still a poor man, he went to Missouri to teach school in a small town in DeKalb county. There he met and married a woman who bore him three daughters—the three women who are now contesting the will. Several years later, they claim, Clark left their mother and went farther west, never to be seen or heard from again. The mother died several years ago, according to their story.

FIVE POSTS ARE TO BE VACATED BY U. S. ARMY

Historic Garrisons Are To Be Sold At Auction Because They Are No Longer Needed Along The Atlantic Coast

TAMPA, Feb. 18.—The Quartermaster General of the United States army has announced that five military reservations on the South Atlantic coast are to be sold at public auction. The tracts involved in the proposed sale are Fort Fremont, Hilton Head and Bay Point, South Carolina; Beaufort Island, North Carolina; and Point Peter, Georgia. These five reservations are no longer needed for military purposes and are no longer garrisoned. The purposes of which the land can be used are varied, and it is expected that several different classes of bidders will be in the field, as the War Department is advertising the land as suitable for country estates, hunting and fishing clubs and deepwater terminal lines.

The vicinity of Fort Royal Sound, on which Fort Fremont is located, is richly endowed in Colonial, Revolutionary and Civil War historical data. One of the early settlements made by the Scotch-Irish colonies under Lord Cardross in 1681. In December 1778, Colonel Campbell with 3,500 regular British troops landed at Fort Royal Sound, which was the beginning of the southern campaign which resulted in the various battles of that section during 1779.—At the beginning of the Civil War the Confederates erected two fortifications at the entrance, one on Paris Island, named Fort Walker and Fort Beauregard, which made this one of the most important bases of operations for shipping south of Hampton Roads. Captured by Union Forces. Under Admiral DeLeon, on Nov. 12, 1862, with a concentrated fleet, which had sailed from Hampton Roads under seal orders in midsummer of 1862, bombarded and destroyed the fortifications and captured the harbor. Commodore Tatnall set fire to that portion of the Confederate fleet in his command and made his escape. The Navy Department has virtually been in possession of these two islands since that period, and the collection of the income resulting from the Port Royal Sound, which contains the entire area of Paris Island, approximately 6,800 acres, which was acquired by proclamation of the President, Aug. 7, 1918, No. 1,472. The active post consists of 824 structures, which is directly across Beaufort from Fort Fremont. This sound has always been considered the best natural entrance along the South Atlantic coast, having a draught of 27 feet can enter across the bar at high tide. The tract comprising the Hilton Head reservation was purchased by the War Department from the Tax Commissioner at a sale for direct tax in 1862, and was recommended for military purposes by the Chief of Engineers. This recommendation being approved by General U. S. Grant in 1867. There is no record of any garrisoned military forces, except during the Spanish American War, when a temporary camp occupied a small portion of the reservation. It is located at the south entrance to Beaufort Sound, Beaufort county, S. C., and has an area of about 802 acres. Bought From Tax Commissioner. The Bay Point reservation is located on Phillips Island on the north side of the entrance to Port Royal Sound. As in the case of Hilton Head, the land was obtained by the War Department from the Tax Commissioner. The reservation contains 129 buildings and 80,363 acres.

Killed Two From His Barricaded Room

When Springfield, Mo., police tried to arrest Clinton W. Hollingsworth, 20, for possessing weapons, he barricaded himself in his home and for four hours stood off 50 officers. He killed two men and wounded four more before the police finally broke in and captured him. Note how the walls are bullet-riddled, with doors nailed over the windows. Insert shows Hollingsworth.

Agricultural Notes

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Feb. 18. (AP)—Alertness of the State Plant Board probably prevented the invasion of Florida by the Argentine ant, J. C. Goodwin, the board's nursery inspector, looked over a shipment of plants consigned to Sanford and found living Argentine ants. The ants are as yet little known in Florida. It is, however, one of the most pernicious of pests. Doubt that good farm produce can be, and is raised, in Florida was quickly dispelled with a visit to the South Florida Fair, held at Tampa, according to "Spook" Johnson, in his "Rural Common Sense." Out of state visitors were amazed, Mr. Johnson states. There were too many "non-agricultural" booths at the exposition, however, he asserts. Two additions to the agricultural extension staff here were made when K. C. Moore, former county agent of Marion county, and Gus York, agent in Georgia and South Carolina, joined Florida agricultural workers. Mr. Moore will be district agent, with headquarters at Gainesville, and Mr. York will succeed J. W. Mathison as county agent for Walton county. Sufficient seed trees should be left on cut-over areas for the return of the "pine woods," foresters are advising the people of Florida. Stripping an area clean in lumbering is a wasteful practice from the standpoint of future generations, they say. Eighteen counties of the state were represented in the Negro Building at the South Florida Fair. The exhibits pronounced of splendid character, were all largely the result of work of local Negro agents over Florida. Many counties of Florida, scattered over a wide area, captured honors at the South Florida Fair, according to J. Francis Cooper, publicity director for the College of Agriculture. 89 Lucie ex-

Movie Folks Have Many Hobbies To Pursue During Vacation Periods

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 18. (AP)—Lew Cody has achieved new fame in Hollywood—not as an actor but as a cook. Cooking is Cody's hobby and corned beef is his favorite dish. Many are the evenings that he has a few friends in his home to eat the dinners he has concocted. So famous have these "corned beef affairs" become that a reporter started on a trail to learn the hobbies of the other stars. Here are some of the things that came to light: Mae Murray confessed that she reads the newspapers every day and is well-grounded on such subjects as reparations and international relations. Riding and golfing are her favorite sports and she has a constant desire to go shopping for beautiful clothes. Working out new style designs, and following new modes takes part of Marion Davies' time while not working on pictures. Many of her discoveries are used on the screen. Lou Chaney, the "man of a thousand faces," seldom is recognized as he goes sans makeup about Hollywood. He collects rare examples of hand-made jewelry and his pet pastime is deer hunting. Norman Shearer puts in much of her spare time on the tennis courts, and does Charles Fox Jackie Coogan just at present has a fondness for baseball and stunts. A pet rabbit also demands attention. Embroidery, old books and music attract Lillian Gish. She turned out several elaborate pieces of embroidery between scenes in the making of "The Bohemian." She spends most of her time at shops buying curious little objects and she gathered a large collection while in Italy. As for John Gilbert, he studies and an one he could be surprised if he took a bar examination one of these days. He also likes to read out of the way authors, while auto races add foot ball races always lure him. One of the best athletes in the colony is Roman Scazzero. Running, jumping, shot putting and playing tennis are a few of his favorite sports. He also likes boxing but under his contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer he is barred from being a participant. Eleanor Boardman likes to paint. She studied art many years and expected to become a painter until the screen upset her plans. The Swedish star who confessed a fondness for "spunk" pie" soon after arriving in this country—Greta Garbo—has as her present hobby the exploration of California.

Loses Hands, Gains Mother

Francis Murray, 15, lost both his hands when a torpedo ship exploded as he was handling it at the Houston, Tex., fair grounds. But newspaper stories about the accident resulted in his reunion with his mother, Mrs. Margaret Murray Long of Indianapolis, who had placed him in an orphanage years ago and lost track of him. She has taken him home with her, and he says: "I'm worth losing my hands to have a mother."

CARS BECOME BURDEN

A state law in Oregon, which provides that the relinquishment of title on an automobile must be signed by last owner, is making it difficult for dealers who own repossessed cars. Four in one of autos who have lost title on their cars because they failed to make payments have refused to sign certificates, making it impossible for dealers to obtain licenses on the cars.

CARS FOR GERMANY

Germany's automotive figures for 1925 show an increase of 45 per cent more vehicles than recorded in the country during the preceding year. The present number of passenger cars is 175,665; motorcycles, 161,508 and trucks, 80,363.

DRUID PARK

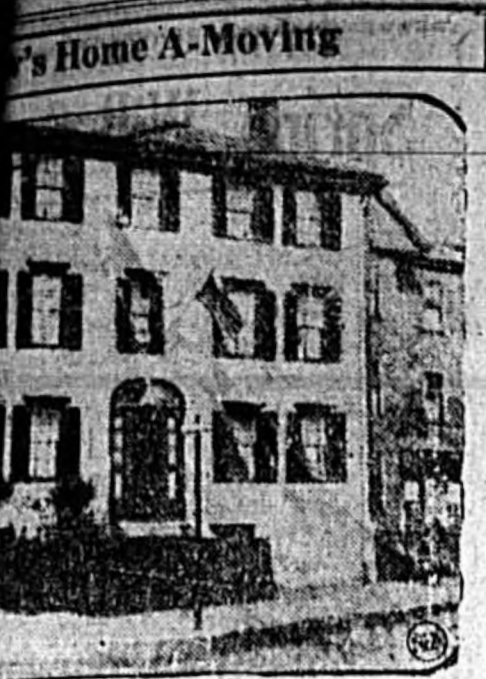

Most of the fortunes that have been made in Florida real estate have gone to those who were in at the beginning—those who had the foresight to pioneer, which enabled them to purchase inclining property at attractive prices. And any investor who will check the far reaching beautification and improvement program of Druid Park cannot possibly question the wisdom of investing now. We urge you to investigate these possibilities. Our representatives will be pleased to accompany you to the property that you will fully understand the development program. Why Operations?

In many cases where women suffer from the various ills peculiar to their sex, operations are not necessary. Some of the highest authorities agree that many women's ills yield to proper therapeutic treatment. Remedies made of herbs have always been used by the Indians, among whom operations are rare. The nervous system when disordered develops many symptoms which can be greatly relieved by taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, an old, reliable, restorative tonic, made of herbs brought to Dr. Pierce's laboratory by Indians from nearby Reservations.

Dorothy Gish Giggled Her Way To Matrimony; And Then She Wept

BY VIRGINIA SWAIN
 NEA Service Writer
 NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Dorothy Gish never had an engagement ring, for the good reason that she was never engaged. She just got married, without five minutes' warning.

That was James Rennie's way of doing things. For a year he had been proposing to her all over New York and most of Westchester, Jersey and Long Island, and she had been answering, "Take care. Some day when you spring that little joke, some woman will take you up."

For he was a handsome Broadway matinee idol, and she believed that proposals had become a habit with him.

Then They Elope
 Miss Gish and Rennie were two of the principals in a double elopement five years ago, in which the other actors were Constance Talmadge and John Pialoglou.

They were on a motor trip through Connecticut on the day after Christmas, 1920, in Dorothy's car.

At noon, Rennie said: "Shall we get married, or have lunch first?"

"Lunch," said Dorothy. ("I'm always hungry," she explains.)

So they had lunch.

Then at Greenwich, the two men suddenly disappeared into the court house.

"They're trying to kid us," said Dorothy, with her hand on the wheel. "We'll show 'em. We'll go back to New York and leave 'em stranded."

With that she swung the car around. But it was too late. Rennie and Pialoglou jumped on the running board.

"Come on," they cried, and the girls jumped out, giggling.

Still Bluffing
 They were still giggling, determined to bluff the thing out, when they entered the clerk's office.

"And then," says Miss Gish, "at six o'clock, Constance was married, and at 6:53 I was married, and we were still giggling."

They came back to New York, determined to keep the marriage secret, but the papers soon got wind of it.

"I think we were the maddest idiots in the world," says Dorothy. "We had no idea what a serious escapade it was. I liked Jimmie, but I certainly hadn't liked to marry him."

She had some panicky moments in the weeks that followed. Her mother insisted that Dorothy leave their hotel and go to live with her husband.

"I spent most of my time for weeks crying and bringing my clothes back from Jimmie's apartments to the hotel," she says. "I didn't want to be a married woman, all settled down. But as fast as I brought my suit case back, mother sent it away again," Dorothy tells it.

At last, she allowed Rennie to establish her in his bachelor apartment on East Nineteenth street. And then she fell in love with him—"hopelessly, idiotically in love."

World's Worst Wife
 "I guess I am the world's worst wife," she says. "I have never felt that the apartment belonged to me. I shift responsibilities on the Japanese houseman. I flit away on my own business where and when I please. I'm worse than useless to my husband."

"Nobody in the world but James Rennie would have put up with me six months. And still we are in love."

The Talmadge-Pialoglou marriage lasted only ten months. Miss Gish and Rennie still are good friends with both Constance and her ex-husband.

"We were shocked when the other half of the elopement failed," Miss Gish remarks, "and we still shiver for ourselves."

"We didn't deserve happiness."

There was no reason why we are no rules for marriage. It's a game of catch-as-catch can, in which the loser is wretched and were good to us. The winner is—well, darn lucky!

Man Who Developed The Rubber Industry Received Little Reward For Efforts

LONDON, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Rubber's great romance, which has proved to be a tragedy with automobile tire buyers in the United States, began with an old man in London, Sir Henry Wickham. However, he has shared none of the profits rubber boomers have made out of wild speculation.

Sir Henry Wickham developed scientific rubber cultivation in the Orient by transplanting the hevea, or rubber plant of the Amazon, to the Far East, thus making possible the rubber monopoly which now lies in the hands of the British.

Para was the center of the rubber trade when Sir Henry Wickham began his investigation back in the sixties. His was a voice crying in the wilderness in those days, when he tried to interest Britishers in rubber cultivation.

But he finally enlisted the sympathy of Sir Joseph Hooker, at Kew, and showed him the first drawing which was probably even made from nature of a leaf and seed of a Para rubber tree.

A little later Sir Henry got the ear of Sir Clements Markham, of the India office, who gave the young explorer a roving commission to bring the rubber tree seed back to England.

The rubber seed was so short-lived that this was a difficult task. Sir Henry was then engaged in cultivating rubber at Santarem, over 300 miles from the mouth of the Amazon. One day an ocean liner, the Amazonas of the Immaculate Line, arrived in the river to the great astonishment of the little British colony. By a strange fate, which probably prevented Brazil from holding the grasp on the rubber trade which is now in the hands of the British, the steamer was stranded in the river by her two superchargers and lay empty in the river with no cargo for her return trip.

Although Sir Henry had no money, he wrote to the captain and chartered the ship in the name of the government of India. Then he rushed back into the forest with Indian assistants and collected the seeds of the full-grown hevea trees. The seeds were packed in banana leaves and loaded into the ship.

Unfortunately the ship was obliged to call at Para on its way out of the river, and Sir Henry Wickham feared the "Brazil" was then the possession of Portugal) would stop his precious cargo. In fact he knew they would hold it up if they discovered what it was.

So the steamer merely halted at Para and conveyed to the port officials the message that they were carrying rare botanical specimens to "Her Britannic Majesty's own Royal Gardens at Kew."

The ruse worked, and the ship set sail for England and made a fast trip. In June, 1876, Sir Henry Wickham had the satisfaction of seeing the orchids turned out of their house at Kew Gardens to make way for the precious rubber seeds, and two weeks later the plants which grew from those seeds are now bearing rubber in Ceylon and Singapore, and the hevea has scattered over India, Malaya and Borneo.

More than 10,000,000 pounds of British capital is invested in rubber growing, and millionaires have fattened on Sir Henry's pioneering work on the Amazon.

"CAREFUL WALKERS"
 When pedestrians were brought before a Washington (D. C.) judge recently for "jawkalking," he organized the "Careful Walkers' Club" with administration of this oath: "I solemnly promise I will not deliberately violate any of the traffic regulations made relative to pedestrian control."

Adventures of the Twins

OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"Trying to steal a march on me, were you? Pretending you are a duchess and a what-you-may-call-it just so I'd let you in! Out, you go and your tongues may stay twisted forever."

Nancy tried hard to tell Blue Whiskers how it had happened that she and Nick had given the doorkeeper cards from a game they had been playing, but all she could say was, "London Bridge is falling down."

Poor Nick tried, too, to explain the whole matter, but all he could say was, "Sing a song of sixpence. I have an idea, sir!" suddenly said Jupe. "Your Royal Highness is very fond of stories. Suppose these children should know some funny stories. How can they tell you about them unless you untwist their tongues?"

"That is true, sir," said the saggy bear. "They very possibly know something funny."

"Bring in the by-laws and the constitution," said Blue Whiskers suddenly. "We shall see what that says about it. The Duchess of Holdraums! Count von Byanbow! Hum!"

PRODUCTION OF BOOKS GAINING, MOSTLY REPRINT

Number Of New Titles Below That Of 10 Years Ago Says Publisher's Weekly In A Recent Survey Article

NEW YORK, Feb. 18. (AP)—Book production in the United States is on the increase, but the low that of ten years ago.

This fact, says the Publisher's Weekly, indicates that editors are continuing their careful winnowing of manuscripts in order that the market may not be unduly pressed with new titles and that the increased production is found in the reprints.

"The total of book production in the United States for the last year shows an increase of 4.7 per cent in bound books as compared with a two percent increase a year ago," the publication continues.

"The rate of increase in new editions has been much more rapid than the new titles and this seems to be an admirable symptom."

"Sounding," a first novel, by A. Hamilton Gibbs, headed the list of "best sellers" in fiction in 1925. It never appeared at first place on the monthly reports, but because of its consistent high mark it won the best annual sales record.

For the fourth consecutive year, "Diet and Health," by Lulu Hunt Peters, topped the non-fiction list, ranking ahead of such books as "Twenty-five Years," by Lord Grey, and "When We Were Very Young," by A. A. Milne.

The lists follow:

Fiction: "Sounding," "The Constant Nymph," by Margaret Kennedy; "The Keeper of the Bees," Gene Stratton Porter; "Glorious Apollo," E. Brinton; "The Green Hat," Michael Arlen; "The Little French Girl," Anne Douglas Sedgwick, a 1924 book; "Arrowsmith," Sinclair Lewis; "The Perennial Bachelor," Anne Parrish; "The Carolinian," Rafal Sabatini, and "One Increasing Purpose," A. S. M. Hutchinson.

Non-Fiction: "Diet and Health"; "The Boston Cooking School Cook-

Book," by Fannie Farmer; "When We Were Very Young," A. A. Milne; "The Man Nobody Knows," Bruce Barton; "The Life of Christ," Giovanni Papini; "Ariel," Andre Maurois; "Twice Thirty," Edward Bok; "Twenty-five Years," Lord Grey; "Anatole France, Illusionist," J. J. Brousson, and "The Cross Word Puzzle Books."

"There goes the wicket again," thought Nancy as she scrambled to her feet and stood as still as her skates would permit.

At that moment Jupe arrived, for jump as fast as he could, he couldn't keep up with the Twins. He was all out of breath and looked worried.

D. P. Davis Properties,
Davis Shores,
St. Augustine, Florida.

Gentlemen:

The writer wishes to thank you for the expression of your confidence in our company in awarding us the $10,000,000 contract for development work at Davis Shores.

This contract, including as it does the erection of hotels, apartments, business buildings, club structures and distinguished homes - buildings of a high, artistic and substantial type - boulevards and streets, sewers, water lines, rain drains, an ornamental electric light system throughout the property, and other utilities, really means the building of one of Florida's finest resort and residential centers in the very heart of St. Augustine. And we appreciate very much the opportunity that has been presented to us to take part in this special development of America's oldest city.

With regard to speed of construction, I would advise that, having at our command an enormous amount of contractor's equipment, an organization of skilled engineers and construction men, and our long experience as world-wide builders, leads us to believe that Davis Shores can be completed faster than any development of this type ever attempted.

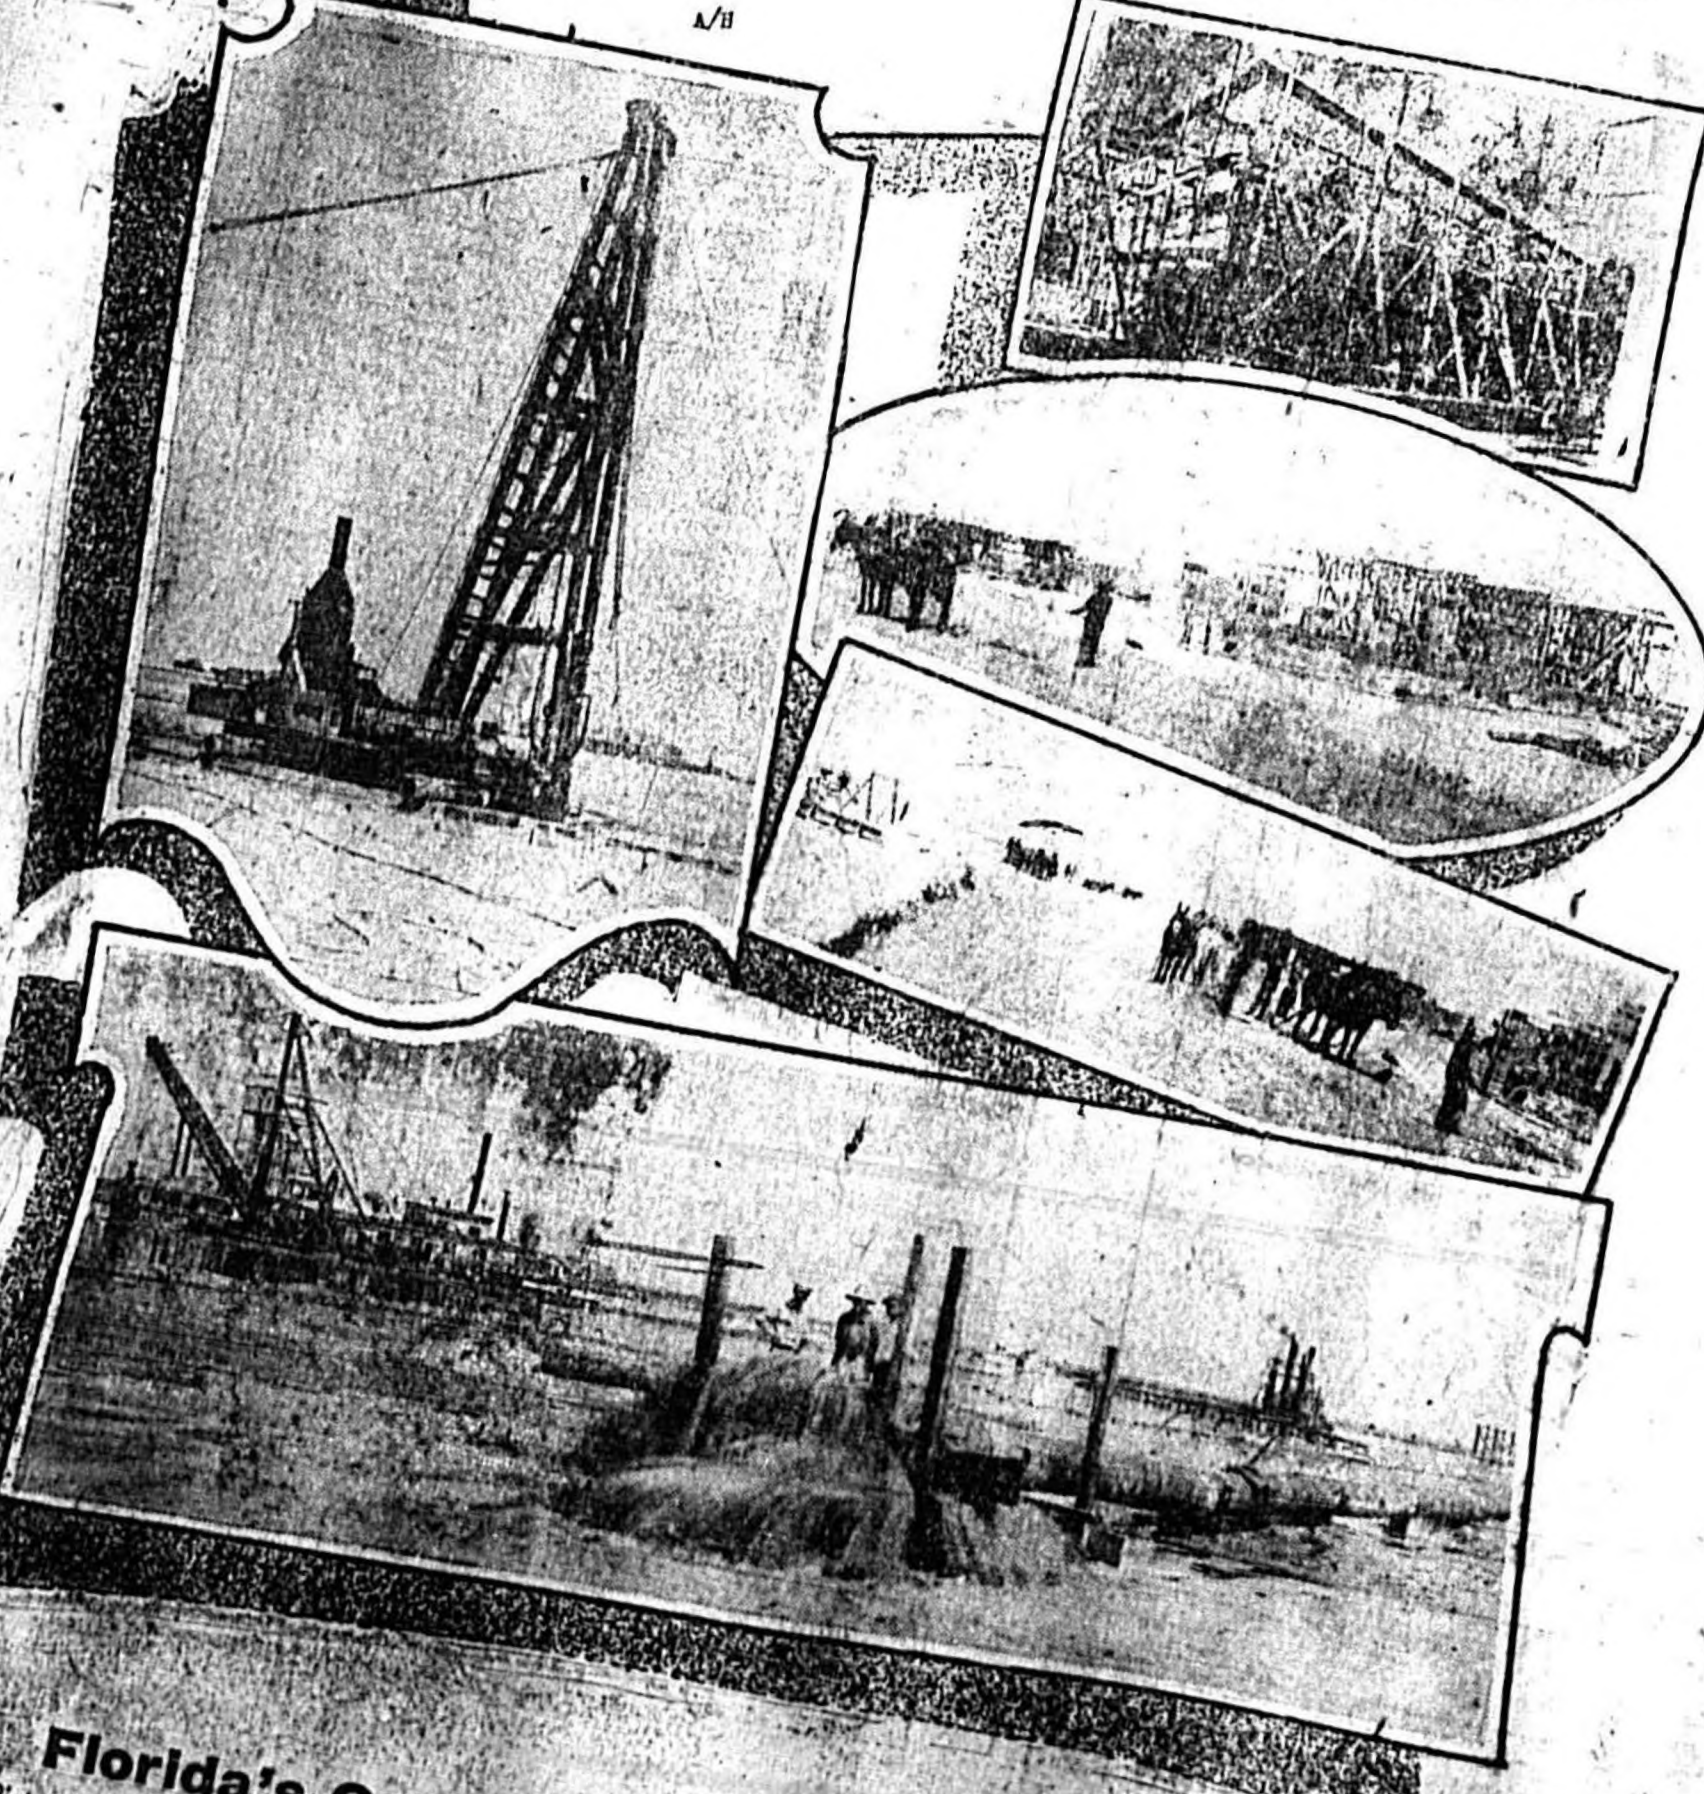

As you are aware, work started but a month ago. Already camps for the housing of men have been completed and the construction of five buildings, including one six-apartment building, one four-apartment building, two residences and a one-hundred apartment structure, are now under way. Within ninety days, many completed buildings will be in evidence on Davis Shores.

Sincerely yours,

THE FOUNDATION COMPANY, INC.

Florida's Greatest Development Contract!

Pictured above are some of the early building operations already under way on Davis Shores. Under the supervision of engineers and building contractors of the Foundation Company, streets are being graded preparatory to paving, sidewalks are being laid and other utilities started. Five beautiful homes and apartment buildings are under construction now with others to follow rapidly. The small insert shows how the fill is being dumped on to the property to raise Davis Shores to its final elevation several feet above the level of the mainland of St. Augustine.

We would not have awarded the Foundation Company this gigantic building contract if we not been certain that your concern was capable of giving us the desired speed of service necessary to quick and comprehensive development of

another DAVIS ISLANDS
St. Augustine On the Ocean

THE signing of a $10,000,000 contract with the Foundation Company of New York, for the construction of palatial apartments, club houses, business structures and beautiful buildings and for the installation of every modern improvement and amenity at Davis Shores means the rapid building of a great residential section in the center of America's oldest city. It is the beginning of a tremendous program of building activity in St. Augustine—the building news in Florida!

Davis Shores, since its very beginning, has been the most popular property in Florida—one of the fastest-selling properties in the South. The tremendous demand for lots in this latest Island development has resulted in P. Davis brought quick profits to many early purchasers. The rapid speeding up of the vast Davis Shores development operations, the volume of construction work representing many millions of dollars, is raising up values that soon will bring literal fortunes to investors!

Big, quick profits have attended every project of D. P. Davis. Tremendous development activity of Davis Islands in Tampa Bay and in other Florida cities has resulted in virtual fortunes in many instances to property owners in a few short years. Davis Shores—just 2,200 feet from the heart of the business section of St. Augustine—will be another Davis Islands. And what has been done at Davis Islands will be done at Davis Shores!

3 DIXIE STATES NOT FAMILIAR WITH S.A.L. PLAN

Information Has Not Been Given Out As To Whether New Lines Will Be Built Or Old Railroads Leased

Warfield Opposed To Continental Systems Corporation Plans To Keep In Personal Contact With These Using Its Service

(By the Associated Press) Georgia, Alabama and Florida cities affected by the Seaboard Air Line Railroad's expansion program announced Friday were still without information today as to whether they were to have railroads constructed through them or whether the Seaboard will lease lines already connecting them with other cities on the Seaboard's system.

In New York last night President S. Davies Warfield announced that the details of the expansion would not be made public until engineers have completed the newly drawn plans. When these are ready, Warfield said, he will give the exact location of each unit in the new addition to the Seaboard Air Line and their relation to the system, he said.

"As has been said, the construction of the leased lines, the tracks and the cut-offs to which allusions have been made are designed to mould all lines of the Seaboard Air Line Railway into a complete railway system. We are shortening the mileage to two-thirds of the important points reached by the Seaboard rails and in so doing we are engaged with the best method to accomplish this result. As to the financing in mind, there is awaited by the bankers the completion of these details, the negotiations with the bankers having been arranged to that point.

Long Systems Are Impractical

President Warfield called attention to the prevalent tendency to consolidate railroads into long cross-continental systems and said some of these constructions are "long impractical" in solution, the effect of which may be interference with the proper relations which railroad and railway shippers should have. He said that if the best results both economic and traffic are to be preserved to the people.

The Seaboard has no such plans in mind, President Warfield said. As stated by the letter to the stockholders, if the plan set forth therein are carried out, it would knit the Seaboard lines of railroads into a compact transportation system within a territory of a character and of such size as will preserve the personal contact between shippers and carriers and the efficient service and the comprehensive developments of the territory traversed.

Attention was called to the "importance" of keeping any consolidated railroad system within such an area as that traversed by the Seaboard which President Warfield said "contains over 18,500 square miles, larger than Germany, nearly as large as France and includes areas of undeveloped land."

Possible Routes Are Advanced

"Meanwhile persons familiar with the whole railway network of the southeastern states are advancing possible routes of the Seaboard can utilize, many of which contemplate established and active or proposed lines already in operation. One of the possible routes advanced concerns the connection between the western gateway at Montgomery, Ala., and Florida points, which could be effected by leasing the tracks of the Georgia, Florida and Alabama, a line connecting with the Montgomery-Savannah branch of the Seaboard, and extending to Tallahassee and (Continued On Page Two.)

Members of the playground commission have been active during the week in arranging for the program which Miss Clark ordered before going to Jacksonville, and a list of games and contests have been scheduled which will last throughout the afternoon.

It was announced, also, that most of the apparatus had been ordered by telegraph and that in a very short time the local parks would be as well equipped as any in this section of the state of Florida.
