

Clerk Chastises New Councilman

By DONNA ESTES
 LONGWOOD—Onnie R. Shomate, beginning her 14th year as city clerk and the only elected municipal clerk in Seminole County, has issued a statement taking a new councilman to task for remarks made by him at a recent zoning board meeting.

Richard (Dick) Crenshaw, elected Dec. 7, and to receive oath of office at the City Council's 7 p. m. meeting today also has been a member of the city's zoning board. His resignation from that advisory board becomes effective today.

Crenshaw, at last week's zoning board meeting, said paid staff would be held for as long as two weeks in Mrs. Shomate's office before being turned over to the zoning board.

Madon was then made that any correspondence, any plan or any business channeled through the clerk's office that concerns the zoning board be turned over to the zoning board secretary. The zoning board secretary, Shirley Halsip, was instructed to then prepare a typed agenda to be sent to zoning board members, along with copies of requests and back-up information.

Mrs. Shomate said, "Regarding the statement made by Dick Crenshaw at the zoning board meeting held Jan. 6, 1972, that for as long as two weeks before getting to the zoning board. For Mr. Crenshaw's information the Laws of Florida 1969, states that I have 30 days in which to prepare matters regarding annexation of property into the city.

"If Mr. Crenshaw had taken enough time, or cared enough to read the laws or ordinances of the city, he would not have found it necessary to make such remarks. In the past I have taken as little time as possible to get this matter before the Council and Zoning Board when I was sure everything was in order. However, in the future I will take the entire 30 days as allowed in the law.

"The matter Mr. Crenshaw was referring to was only completed late in the afternoon of the Zoning Board meeting. I have no reason to hold matters in my office longer than absolutely necessary," the clerk concluded.

The items referred to by Crenshaw was an annexation request for property in the Longwood-Markham Road area. When petition was first submitted for annexation of the land, as previously reported in The Herald, certification as required by city charter, was refused by Tax Assessor Guy Allen's office because the petition did not bear the signature of the landowner. Subsequent petition along with plans for development in the area was submitted under

Contaminated Water Feared

LONGWOOD — Possible pollution of city lakes and streams is the fear in this community as new construction activity appears to have accelerated in the first month of the 1972 year beyond the same period in the boom year of 1971.

Major reason for the fear is the fact the city has no sanitary sewer system, is completely served by septic tanks and the date when the sewer system will be built is some time in the future.

When one builder unveiled plans for an $18 million planned development lately the pollution possibilities were noted by concerned citizens. Beautiful Fairy Lake, now known as one of the purest and most serene spots in the city, is becoming polluted, one property owner near the body of water declared.

"Every now and then it is evident the lake is in the first stages of pollution," the man said. "We have had fish killed in the lake recently and rising to the surface. Not too many years ago Fairy Lake was a clean lake."

If the lake is becoming polluted, he said, it is a matter of time before new living in the city, what can we hope for if additional development is permitted?" he queried.

Middleville City Superintendent Ralph Flaker said he has no knowledge of city lake pollution. "The thing I'm scared of is that the heavy concentration of effluent in the ground will reach our water-ground water supply," he stated.

Longwood had its biggest building boom in history in 1971 when building permits were issued for new construction valued at $2,200,703. Most of the construction was single another signature and Lie petition was certified by Allen's office. Council then referred the matter to the zoning board, but requested the builder furnish a map of the area wished annexed. When the item came before zoning board and the developer was not present, it was tabled.

Between last week's zoning board meeting and today, the petition for annexation has been withdrawn.

At the 7 p. m. meeting of the Council today, re-elected Councilman E. E. Williamson, Councilmen-elect William Kiooky and Crenshaw are to receive oaths of office. It is expected Council Vice Chairman Eugene Jacques will be elected chairman of the board, to replace Williamson in the office, on a three-to-two vote.

Mayor Kenneth Brown is expected to reappoint Police Chief R. E. Swank, City Attorney S. Joseph Davis Jr., Municipal Judge Gene R. Stephenson and City Assistant Prosecuting Attorney James Fisher.

Neophyte Planner Gets 'Baptism'

By MARION BETHEA
 Neophyte Planning and Zoning Board member William Kirchhoff received his "baptism of fire" last night when he took a stand against a regulation governing the operation of carport sales in the county.

Prior to the controversial item, Robert Deahn, a Democrat, was elected unanimously by a Republican-controlled board to the chairmanship. Vice Chairman is Richard Hanks.

Deahn displayed considerable expertise in moving the meeting along the lengthy agenda with rapidity.

The real lion, governing the carport sale, flea market sales, details of a $2 fee must be paid for a permit to hold the sales, for not more than three days and no permits for the same parcel shall be issued more often than every two years. Also the resolution sets forth that no merchandise may be stored or displayed outside the carport or garage.

Kirchhoff contended that he could "not go along with" the resolution in that "too many people are in the carport business." Clifford Banks said that "bureaucracy is making it more difficult for people to operate... people should be able to operate freely... all the red tape is getting worse."

He suggested that the fee be reduced, to which Hanks interjected that since persons pay $4.45 for advertising, another $2 would not hurt anyone.

Electric Chair Bid For Cole performed on Cole and analyzed by a Washington expert, which showed that he had fired an automatic weapon within three days prior to the test.

This was contrary to Cole's statement. Eaton argued, that he had not fired a gun in three days, was not with Cummings and did not own a gun. Expert testimony disclosed that Cole fired a gun more than once, Eaton pointed out.

Eaton also said of the testimony of Det. Robert Grant that he found the defendant's fingerprints on the car in which the decedent was found.

The testimony of Ervin Rich and Beverly was also recalled in which he testified that he waited for Cole, upon his instructions at Big Tree Road, where he saw Cole walking through his eyes. This showed, Eaton said, that when Beverly met Cole it was exactly seven hours from the time the body was discovered, and outlined testimony from Dr. G. V. Gary, county pathologist, that rig or mortis usually sets in within 8-12 hours, but that it does so more rapidly in cases of trauma and those precipitated by adverse weather conditions in which case it would be seven hours.

Eaton also said that the five shell casings found at the scene and slugs removed from the deceased were from the same gun. He again received ejaculations of "oh my God," when he said that the fifth shot at a downward angle, penetrated Cummings' face and emerged through his eye. This showed, Eaton said, that the murderer followed Cummings into the car to "get the last shot." Eaton, in closing said that the state did not need to prove a motive, although they would "love to know what the motive was."

Defense Attorney Ned Julian Jr. contended that the state has not proven its circumstantial case, and cited the total absence of explanation of motive. All testimony showed that Cummings and Cole were friends.

Julian said. He contended that it is "illogical and inconsistent" that even the "most ignorant" person would hire someone to drive out and pick him up at the crime scene.

The case was to go to the jury this morning, following the charge by Circuit Judge William Altridge.

Smuggled Smokes Is Big Industry In Italy Bootleg Cigarettes Have Hit The Big Time In New York

By CIMA STAE
Copley News Service
NEW YORK—New York's tobaccoists want the city and state to put a tax on crime. Not all crime, just on the cigarette bootleggers who make fat profits smuggling cigarettes into the state. The tobaccoists claim that they have lost over $1 billion in gross revenues since 1965 as a result of bootlegging of cigarettes, primarily by organized crime.

All this is nothing new. In Italy it's being going on for years. On the Italian peninsula, the peddling of smuggled cigarettes is virtually an industry. By train, boat, bus and car, bootleggers smuggle cigarettes from Switzerland, where low taxes keep the price at about 22 cents a pack, to Italy, where high taxes boost the retail price to about 80 cents a pack (the highest in Europe). The smugglers can afford to sell the cigarettes at 50 cents a pack, and make a healthy profit.

In some Italian cities, the peddlers of smuggled cigarettes, "Sigarette", "sigarette", "are heard on almost every street corner in the downtown piazzas. Certain unscrupulous entrepreneurs even manufacture "fake" smuggled cigarettes. They gather together large quantities of old butts, roll them into new cigarettes and pack them in counterfeit brand label packets.

In better policed cities, the peddlers are more discreet. They either stand in appointed doorways several afternoons a week, or have a regular round of large office buildings they visit, taking orders. Others, neatly dressed in business suits, make the rounds of the local shops quietly selling the contraband from attach cases a couple of packs at a time.

The same kind of high tax conditions make New York, especially New York City, a favored area for similar bootlegging. Cigarettes cost between 55 to 60 cents at the stores and 65 cents through vending machines. But cigarettes can be purchased legally for 30 to 33 cents a pack in some southern states.

By avoiding tax on sales, the smugglers can reap a reasonable profit selling at 45 to 48 cents a pack.

Some members of New York tobacco trades are seeking a court order in the state Supreme Court to require the city and state "to collect a tax on all cigarettes possessed in the state by any person for sale."

The legitimate sellers claim that cigarette sales have fallen 35.4 per cent since 1964, with a sharp drop seen since the higher New York City tax was imposed last July.

Meanwhile, according to Leonard Schwartz, spokesman for the tobacco trades group, "National cigarette sales have actually gone up." The tobacco group estimates that the city and state have lost some $327.6 million in tax revenues to bootleggers since 1965.

The state Legislature is currently considering adding an additional three cents tax on cigarettes.

have dealers state that "the state of New York, to the detriment of all residents, including petitioners, will continue to lose revenues in excess of $120,000 each day, which can be realized from impartial, vigorous enforcement and collection of cigarette taxes."

Would Do It Again On Stamps

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department said today it does not plan to spend an additional $198 million available for food stamps this year but will not hesitate to do so if it is needed.

Congress allowed $2.2 billion for food stamps in the year ending June 30. The department, however, says only a little more than $2 billion will be required to take care of needy recipients.

Department officials, asked to comment on reports the money had been intentionally withheld from food spending, said the charges are "not correct."

"It's news to me," said Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Lyng, who oversees the food program. "We haven't had any limit put on us for what we can spend for food stamps."

Frank B. Elliott, assistant secretary for administration, also reports that the extra money being held up are in error.

"The money, if it is needed, will be spent," Elliott told a reporter. "This is not impounded money. We have it available from the Office of Management and Budget anytime we need it."

But at this time, Elliott said, food stamp costs for the current fiscal year are not expected to be the full $2.2 billion appropriated by Congress.

Instead, Elliott said, projections call for $2.087 billion to be spent. The exact appropriation for 1971-72 was $2.2 billion, according to a department budget official. In addition there was a carryover from the previous year of $85 million, making a total of $2.285 billion available this year.

Elliott, calling it a "technical budget matter," said the food stamp spending projection was based on the assumption the present law and regulations would remain in effect.

Business Mirror 'Should Be Glad'

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — As "anonymous" once said, "The Internal Revenue Service should be mighty glad the taxpayers have what it takes."

The taxpayers always have come through. They always have had what it takes and the government has always taken what they had, although sometimes not without considerable resistance.

Every so often that resistance reaches the point of rebellion, and one of those times seems to be now. Smoldering tax revolts have erupted from time to time, especially in regard to expensive school bond issues.

Does this mean that taxes will have to be appreciably lowered? Likely not. But the nature of the tax, the type of tax and the taxed may have to be changed. That's the game's name. Innovation knows no limits in taxation.

One of the newer candidates for consideration is the value added tax, under which a product is taxed according to the value added—cost versus selling price—at each stage of production, thus assuring a constant relationship between tax and product value.

All Are Pulling In Different Ways

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP)—Restructuring Florida's "Rube Goldberg" education system and controlling the state's budget have top priority in the 1972 legislative session, political leaders told the state Chamber of Commerce today.

House Speaker Richard Pettigrew, D-Miami, likened the education system to a Rube Goldberg contraption with the governor, cabinet and education commissioner all pulling different levers.

Senate President Jerry Thomas, D-Jupiter, called for caucusing "because what's presently happening is not bringing about the results that should be expected."

Thomas said the state should no longer funnel money into education without "reevaluating the education structure to see the optimum return for the money invested."

Environmental issues revved heavy stress from the Democratic leaders and their Republican counterparts in a panel discussion at a Florida Chamber of Commerce legislative seminar.

Thomas called for land use planning controlled by the state, but added, "It must be done in such a way that it's not confiscatory to the land owner."

Pettigrew warned that "unless this state exercises a strong role in planning and leading growth, it's going to lead us into a situation involving the kind of mess southern California finds itself in."

New Life Pumped Into 'Key City'

By BILL HILL

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash. — A man's home may be his castle, but for Josh Norris his castle is his restaurant. That's what Norris has done with a 40-bedroom castle situated high on a hill overlooking this picturesque Olympic peninsula town in northwestern Washington — remodeled it turned it to use as a restaurant.

Norris' castle is one of many elegant old homes here. It dates back to 1892 when Charles Eisenberg, a wealthy industrialist, had it built for his small family. Nobody ever really understood why the man wanted 40 bedrooms — but he lived here for 30 years.

Not long after his death the building was sold to the Society of Jesus to be used as a school. That was in 1925. The Jesuits added a wing to the building which provided even more rooms, a chapel, classrooms and recreation area.

In addition, with its graceful mansard roof, blends in neatly with the massive stone walls and high-peaked roof and spires of the original building. The massiveness of the structure and its commanding position on the skyline give it the appearance of a medieval castle.

Pedestrians Barred From Bridge?

By LIZA BAKER

OVIEDO — Take heed, the bridge crossing the Little Econochatchee River on Snow Hill Road has been closed to pedestrians. Signs read: "Pedestrians prohibited at all times—Strictly enforced." And other signs read: "No parking at any time."

(Editor's note: J. C. Laverdet, county road superintendent, "misinterpreted" the signs to mean that pedestrians may walk across the bridge but that motorists and others may not park and enter on the span.)

Constable Chester Boyd says he has so many complaints from motorists about congestion on the bridge and using the narrow berm for parking at night time, making it hazardous for motorists to drive across the bridge.

He has given many warnings and made several arrests for teenagers and adults for obstructing traffic, public drunkenness and minors in possession of alcoholic beverages.

Boyd felt, if the folks would not heed his warnings, something had to be done to save a life. He had complaints on charging firearms at the bridge during all hours of the night.

Boyd says, "People expect a lot of law enforcement but they don't want to get involved. Yet, they make complaints and refuse to sign them. Therefore, the hands of the law, so to speak, are tied."

Boyd and his deputy, Richard Lease, receive no pay from taxpayers' money; their income is on a fee system. Both men average 16 hours per day, answering calls, patrolling, slowing speeders and road violators, patrolling school crossings and watching out for school buses while delivering children to and from school.

Boyd appeared before the Board of County Commissioners Jan. 4 to decide what to do about the situation at the bridge crossing the Econ River. They

Foster Mother Tends Wounded Bald Eagle

APPOKA, Fla. (AP) — In the past two years while playing foster mother to wounded bird eagles, housewife Doris Mager has become an expert at bird talk.

"You have to talk to them a lot," she said. "It helps to soothe and calm them down."

Mrs. Mager's latest ward is a bald eagle named "Halle," grounded last week by a hunter's bullet which smashed into her wing and shattered the bone.

The eagle has been installed in a walk-in cage in the backyard of Mrs. Mager's home in this tiny Central Florida community of 4,000.

"In two years I have nursed six bald eagles back to health," said Mrs. Mager. "The real thrill comes the day you open the cage door and they fly free."

"At the moment Halle gets one big fish a day," she said. "I just put it in the cage and she eats it as she would in the wild."

"I try to have as little contact with the birds as possible," Mrs. Mager said. "I just talk to them when I go into the cage, but otherwise I try not to handle them because I want them to remain wild."

Purchase Weekly Paper Executives Become Newsmen

By MICHAEL GERRARD

GLENNVILLE, W. Va. (AP) — Not too long ago, Robert Arnold was a senior vice president of the world's second largest bank. He had nearly 4,000 people working under him. Now there are two.

At the same time, Stain Meseroll was managing editor of one of the nation's leading sports magazines. One-and-a-half million people read his product. Now there are 3,500.

The two men, both in their early 40s, say they became disillusioned with the corporate life of New York and found themselves more involved with commuting than with enjoying life.

As an alternative, they've become publishers of The Glennville Democrat, a weekly newspaper which serves this sleepy county seat of 1,800 in central West Virginia.

"We're absolutely pleased that we came back," Arnold, a Glennville native, said. "I don't want to go back to New York, no ever."

"People here care about people," Meseroll said. "People up there care about something else."

Arnold and Meseroll were neighbors in Highland Park, N.J., who became close friends when they discovered a common love for hunting and fishing.

Meseroll, then managing editor of Sports Afield, said they found themselves spending their days in Manhattan office buildings and their early mornings and evenings in suburbs, taxis and buses, keeping them away from home for as much as 14 hours a day.

Arnold said it was the city—and not his job which placed him in charge of personnel at National City Bank of New York—which began to wear on him. After living through a summer of both threats, threatened power shortages, and strikes he said he "began to feel like a cipher, a number."

It was then that Arnold put in a call to the retiring Democrat editor and learned he could buy the paper and do a little writing.

Meseroll, as vice president and editor, handles most of the writing, although both split the remaining chores as there are only two other employees.

"We've had to learn to operate the press, to do the bookkeeping and other jobs," Arnold said. "You don't have a problem so."

"We're still in over our heads, but our circulation is growing. We're beginning to get the feel of things."

After the new publishers have a firm grasp of their new jobs, Arnold says the paper may become a "conscience-pricker. I think we've formed some opinions and seen some things that will affect our outlook," he said.

Though one of the principal reasons Arnold and Meseroll came to West Virginia was for the opportunity to hunt and fish, they've found little time for those pleasures.

"We haven't had time to do enough hunting and fishing yet," Arnold said. "We did get out three or four times, but we didn't get anything."

Despite that, both men insist they're happy in their new environment.

"Before, I was writing for one-and-a-half million people. Now I'm writing for people who walk into my office."

"This is not an escape from something," Arnold said. "It's an opportunity."

Residence Controls Voting

By FRANK MACOMBER
Copley News Service

States are proud of their laws and guard them jealously against encroachment by the federal government. This is good, even in a presidential election year like 1972. But it gets a little confusing as the dates for state-by-state presidential primaries begin to roll around and some 18 million young new voters are eligible to cast ballots for the first time.

Just as people differ in dress and habit, so do state preferences, even though they all are aimed at the same ultimate goal—selection of a candidate for president of the United States. Let's take a look at the variety of ways a American voter across the land may cast his or her primary ballot for a presidential candidate.

First off, there are two kinds of presidential primaries. The traditional preference poll determines which of the prospective candidates listed on the ballot is most favored by voters of a political party.

In the delegate selection primary, voters choose delegates to the party's national convention. They may be selected by state or individually, depending on state election laws. Delegates may be pledged, favorable or pledged to a particular presidential candidate, again according to the laws of the state they represent.

In some states, delegates must by law support the winner of the statewide preference poll or preferential primary.

Other state laws provide for a nonbinding primary election in which they is no legal responsibility placed on a convention delegate to vote on convention ballots for his declared presidential choice.

The loosely drawn language of some primary laws often leads to pitched battles within delegation caucuses at convention time.

Most presidential primaries are closed or direct. In a closed primary only those voters registered as members of a specific political party are entitled to vote in that party's primary election. Individuals registered, for example, as independent or nonpartisan may not vote in the primary election of another party.

In a direct primary the names of the candidates appear on the ballot and the voter casts his vote directly for one candidate. This is in contrast to a few indirect primaries in which the voter casts a ballot for the individual who, if elected, will vote for the candidate to whom he or she already is pledged.

European Marts Eyed By Jeno F. Paulucci

DULUTH, Minn. — Duluth-based Jeno's, Inc., America's leading hot snacks company, took a major step toward international expansion when a group of Jeno's executives left for London to explore the possibilities of introducing Jeno's pizza and other products to Great Britain, Italy and other European markets.

In the inaugural Duluth-to-London flight by private aircraft from Duluth International Airport, Chairman Jeno F. Paulucci led a delegation to participate in the International Hotel and Catering Exhibition at Hotel Olympia, London, Jan. 8-14. The charter flight in a Gulfstream II aircraft "is consistent with plans for international expansion of various elements of Jeno's Paulucci Enterprises, beginning with the Foods Division," Paulucci said.

"We look at the London/Great Britain market as one of the most sophisticated societies in the world today," Paulucci said. "The American hamburger has become one of Britain's most popular foods, and carry-out fried chicken has just begun to make its mark in the Greater London area."

"Our involvement in this major international exhibition will give us the opportunity to test European reaction to various American products, in contrast with European items which also will be offered during the exhibition."

Paulucci and Lee Vann, as Cornelius Company directors, also will participate in the Eastern Hemisphere meeting of the Cornelius Company in Milano, Italy, along with Joe Blood, president of the Cornelius Company, Anoka, Minn., international manufacturer of beverage dispensing and vending equipment, and Ole Bach, who directs Eastern Hemisphere activities for Cornelius.

Citizen Patrols, Guards Check Street Crime In New York City

By BETH MOHR
Copley News Service

NEW YORK — Street crime influences life-style in New York City.

Average New Yorkers are alert, anytime of the day for muggers, purse snatchers and panhandlers. At night, they avoid buses and subways and are advised by the police department to walk in pairs. They make it a practice to carry little money.

While police constantly seek to improve protection, many citizens organize volunteer patrols or hire private patrolmen for their neighborhoods or apartment buildings. Once in their apartments, they close themselves in with two or more locks.

In September alone, 147 murders, 7,190 robberies and 230 cases of forcible rape were reported to police.

According to a report from the crime analysis unit of the police department, this represents an increase over September, 1970, of 70.6 per cent in murders; 21.4 per cent in robberies; and 30.1 per cent in rape.

"All crime has gone up constantly since World War II," said Sgt. John L. Collins, the department's public information supervisor. "We have had periods where some crimes have gone down, but it's almost negligible."

"In September, crimes against the person went up 17.4 per cent and crimes against property went down 2 per cent. That decrease is certainly negligible and not enough to have much effect on crime in general."

One of the problems frustrating department's prevention efforts is that almost half the crimes occur inside buildings, where police do not patrol. In September, 49.1 per cent were inside crimes.

"Crimes are unpredictable unless you see them," Collins said. "It is impossible for police to prevent what happens behind closed doors."

The police force is constantly initiating new approaches to combating crime, Collins said. "We have over 30,000 men and that is larger by far than most infantry divisions," he said. "In fact, that is one of our greatest assets in this city. We can provide wall-to-wall cops if necessary."

Buenos Aires Has Problems, Too

By ROBERT D. OIHMAN
BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Buenos Aires, once a sleepy settlement on the Spaniards' gold route to Peru, has enough smoke, smog and congestion to day to rival other major capitals.

The glut of autos may be a source of pride to the man who started Argentina's automobile industry some 17 years ago, but it is something less to the pedestrian, his eyes smarting from the fumes, trying to weave his way across an auto-clogged street.

The problem comes into smoggy focus in the federal district of Buenos Aires—the national capital with 3.5 million inhabitants and 460,982 registered vehicles, including 8,000 buses and 25,000 cabs.

Figures for both people and autos more than double with the inclusion of surrounding bedroom neighborhoods and industrial suburbs.

Buenos Aires has drawn its culture along with its driving habits from Europe, and the Roman influence appears to prevail.

Broad avenues, like Rome's ancient Appian Way, funnel streams of autos, trucks and buses into the 70-block heart of the capital with its narrow streets and broken sidewalks that are two shoulders wide.

At 6 p.m. on a weekday when everyone is in a hurry to get home, horns blare and tempers flare as taxis and buses inch their way into jammed intersections to force a crossing.

Many busy crossings are without traffic lights or signs and the challenge is to bluff out the other driver. The one who blinks first at the last moment loses.

Signal lights aren't taken as seriously as they should be. A taxi driver apparently felt "if the light wasn't green it wasn't working."

Most of the sidewalks, which are made of tile panels on a thin base, are either under repair or repairs are needed.

GENEVA—Mr. and Mrs. Jack Burney entertained their friends and members of their family at a New Year's Eve celebration and retirement party (Jack has retired from Florida Power and Light Company after more than 31 years where he served as central control operator). A cocktail hour preceded the buffet dinner.

The Burney home on the Old Mims Road in Geneva was a blaze with glittering decorations. The dining table was covered in a lovely blue-green lace cloth and was ornamented with a center arrangement of softly glowing candles in sterling candleholders and blue and green flowers.

The cuisine, served in sterling silver, was an epicurean delight and ran the gamut from chips and dips to exotic Hawaiian fruited chicken, hostess ham croquettes, broccoli and cheese casserole, orange-honey glazed carrots, fresh asparagus, a melange of tropical fruits, assorted breads, relishes, stuffed dates, coconut balls, assorted nuts, celery and cauliflower.

Later a delicious cherry cheese cake and coffee were served. Coffee and liquor were served throughout the evening as were other beverages.

Jack and his charming wife, Virginia have been active supporters of the Seminole Mutual Concert for many years. He is a member of the Sanford Lodge of Free Masons, Number 62, Eastern Star Chapter, 2, and of the First United Methodist Church of Sanford. The Burneys have one son, Larry, and two grandchildren. Mrs. Burney teaches at Seminole High School.

By LIZ MATHIEUX

I have racked my feeble one cell to think of how I would start this column but all I can come up with is that the holidays have come and gone and I am still wondering where they went?

"I was all so beautiful while it lasted but as the saying goes—"It didn't last long enough!" Yes, sentiment is really taking over folks, I just cannot keep up with the time anymore. . . . The only thing I can say is that time is just what I had more of it.

Joe and I went up to Marietta to be with the children for the holidays and we had a marvelous time, the trip up was so beautiful not too much traffic going north and it was the same coming back.

The weather was as beautiful as it was in dear old Florida, the children were well and just as happy to see us as we were to see them! Enroute to Marietta, we stopped over at Jacksonville Beach to visit with my mother, Mrs. W. H. Westphalen, and my brothers Jim and Tom, and their respective families.

The nearest we came to a blot on a perfect holiday was the weather when we left Geneva on Dec. 21. Honestly it was raining torrents when we got out on highway No. 1 and we were forced to take shelter at the Belair Plaza at Ormond Beach and would you believe that it took us almost two hours to get from Ormond to Jacksonville!

Speaking of the Kinnairds, if

Lynne Kinnaird and her two youngsters, Timmy and Tammy, accompanied by her father, John Stone, visited with relatives up in Sanford, N. C. during the holidays. While there they visited with Lynne's aunt, Mrs. E. W. Westerland who had been confined to the Lee County Hospital after suffering a stroke. Upon their return home, the Kinnairds and Mr. Stone were accompanied by their cousin, Jack Stone.

She is currently attending University of South Florida, Tampa, where she is Kappa Sigma little sister, Chi Omega sister and USF basketball hostess.

Mr. Clonts is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Lee and Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Clonts, all of Oviedo.

At Oviedo High School, where he was graduated in 1967, Mr. Clonts was a member of the basketball team and a class officer. He attended USF where he was president of Kappa Sigma fraternity and is employed by C. R. Clonts and Associated Growers.

Futuristic House Of Foam

By FREDERICK DICKER

ARGYLE, N.Y. (AP) — Like a futuristic dream house of some modern day genie, the South Argyle foam house arose from a bottle into the air. It challenged anything in its path with its sticky presence, and wrapped itself with a hard persistence to stay.

The bottle from which it came was not the proverbial, delicately coaxed one of mystic fame, but a 50-gallon chemical drum.

How does one describe an initial reaction to the recently built foam house of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Lapolt?

"Incredible," "Unbelievable," "Never seen anything like it," "Like four giant pumpkins." Those comments from people who have seen the house.

"We needed a place to live for the winter," is the way Mrs. Marie Lapolt put it from the vantage point of her new calisthenic living room.

"We needed a place quickly and we had been interested in farm houses. We saw pictures of one of them in a recent magazine article and wrote, seeking more information."

"The Lapolt home is a four-bedroom complex built on a platform supporting four round columns. The entire structure is built around lightweight forms covered with layer upon layer of polyurethane foam, upwards of five inches thick, easy to form and an excellent insulator.

"In fact, the current use of polyurethane as an insulator is what led the Lapolts on an extended, roundabout search for a contractor that eventually ended back home.

"The Lapolts went to Canada, Boston, called California, and Georgia in a search for contracting and building suggestions.

"Then, one day, we saw this truck go by," Mrs. Lapolt said. "It was from Carruthers Contractors in Argyle and it said on the side 'work in foam.' So we followed it all the way to
