LAKE MARY — Competitors from 14 high schools spent more time battling the rain, cold and high winds than each other at the 10th annual Lake Mary Track and Field Invitational Friday afternoon and evening at Lake Mary High School's Don T. Reynolds Stadium.

About the only time it didn't rain was during the short ceremony just before the running finals began in which ex-Lake Mary quarter-miler Fran Gordon, ex-Lake Mary high jumper Mike Rouse, Lake Brantley Coach Charles Harris and former Lake Mary boys' coach Mark McGee were inducted into the Lake Mary Invitational Hall of Fame. See Page 1B

Stumped clergy get help

BALTIMORE — Ministers no longer need wrack their brains for a Sunday sermon, thanks to a Baltimore reverend's computer bulletin board for clergy who are at a loss for what to preach from the pulpit.

Each week, up to 125 Christian clergy and laypeople in the United States and Canada use Sermonshop to share ideas about sermon topics, said the Rev. John Sharp, the service's founder and editor.

"Imagine you're a minister in some far-off rural area and you want to get to a theological library to research an idea," said Sharp, pastor of Covans Presbyterian Church in suburban Baltimore.

"It's just not a physically easy thing to do if you're in the boonies," he said. "Through Sermonshop, you can send out an SOS and get feedback from ministers of about 15 denominations in two large countries."

Users of the service must subscribe to a Connecticut-based computer network called Networking World Information Industries, which operates Sermonshop with Bizlink software. They pay about $7 an hour to use the service and must sign on for a minimum of $9 each month, said Sharp, who edits Sermonshop from his church office and home.

The Revs. Curtis and Kathleen Ackley, a husband-and-wife pastoring team at First Congregational United Church of Christ in Corning, N.Y., said they have used Sermonshop nearly every week since it was established in 1984.

FBI arrests Sanford Wells-Fargo driver

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

ERIE COUNTY, Pa. — Six months ago, authorities thought Wendy Segarra, a Wells-Fargo driver making her rounds in Sanford, had been abducted.

On Friday, she was arrested by federal agents in Pennsylvania on outstanding warrants for her arrest.

Officials at the Pittsburg office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation said agents took in Segarra and her two former roommates in Bradford, Pa., where they had fled when the robbery attempt failed.

Segarra was last seen on Sept. 13 of last year, when she dropped her partner off at the K-Mart store on Airport Boulevard and U.S. Highway 17-92 in Sanford to make the daily pick up.

When her partner got into the store, he saw the truck — with Segarra in it — speeding away. Segarra had radioed back to the Wells-Fargo dispatchers that she had been abducted.

The truck was found a few hours later about three miles away at the Seminole National Bank on Airport Boulevard. A failed attempt had been made to break into the truck's vault, but since Segarra's partner had the only key, nothing was missing.

Segarra became a suspect in the botched robbery when officials found her home abandoned and empty and her pickup truck missing.

Her former roommates Brian Thompson and Louis Grater were arrested along with Segarra on Friday.

The three are being held at the Erie County Jail near Bradford without bond, according to a spokesman for the Pittsburg office of the FBI, which made the arrest.

The FBI will not release any other information about the case, except to say that the investigators got help in finding the trio from an unexpected source. See Driver, Page 5A

Festival goes on in the rain; tournament off

By J. MARK BARFIELD

DeBARY — A soggy Saturday didn't dampen the spirits of the more than 100 folks attending the DeBary Springtime Festival.

But it did force the cancellation of the Sanford Lions Club fishing tournament for the blind for the second time this month Saturday. An event organizer said the tournament may be scrubbed until next year.

Although a slight drizzle held its pace all day Saturday, a National Weather Service spokesperson reported only one quarter of an inch of rain fell on Sanford yesterday.

Dan Hall of DeBary wasn't too happy to be at the "Celebration of Old Florida" spring festival at Lake Monroe Park.

"No," was the 11-year-old's grumpy response to the question "Are you having a good time?"

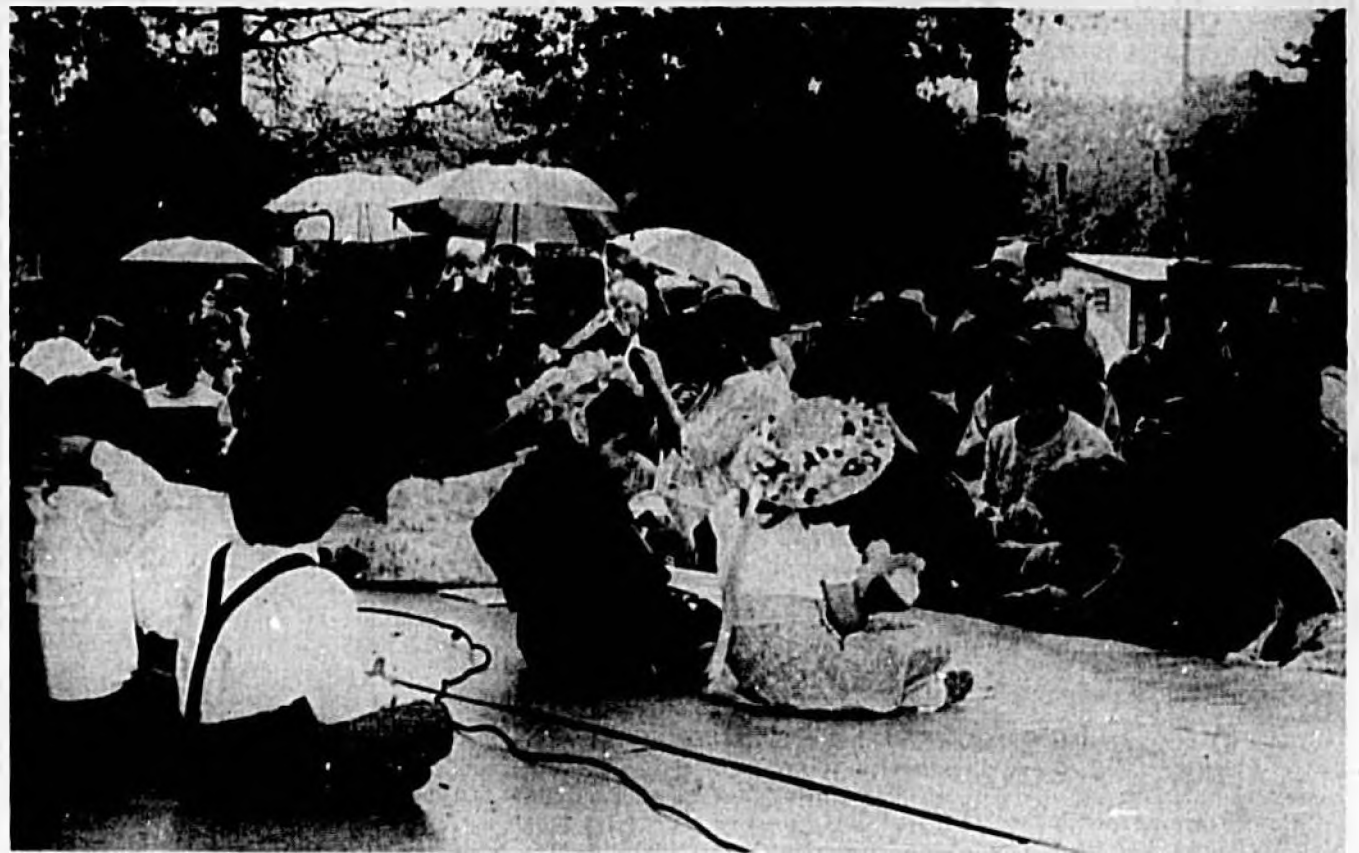

"He has to be here for one hour as part of his Boy Scout Troop 560," explained Dan's mother Nancy Hall. "I don't think he's quite begun to have a good time yet."

The couple splashed off down the puddled "Pirates Alley" craft section of the festival.

A short distance away on "Explorer's Trail," Wekiwa River "river rat" Eddie Willford of Apopka showed off petrified alligator "scat" — dung — his wife found in the river along with the skulls of buck and mastadon he found.

George Scott of Sanford showed off his bottle collection, many found in long-gone communities and attractions of Seminole County, such as Woodland Park at the Central Florida Zoo site.

Nearby, a smiling Dorothy Mietz, 6, of Deltona stood in line to register for the Easter Bonnet Contest. Her straw hat was circled in red silk posies with a big-eyed bee perched among them. Dorothy's mom Diane explained the hat was her daughter's handiwork. Dorothy said she was enjoyed the day. See Festival, Page 6A

Drought forces year-round water ban

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — As rainfall and water levels continue to decrease, district water managers are preparing to begin a year-round daytime watering prohibition.

A total of 1.34 inches of rain fell at Central Florida Regional Airport during February, said Bill Osborne of the St. Johns River Water Management District. That amount is 1.92 inches below the 3.26 inch average for February during the last 30 years. It is 16.33 inches below normal for the preceding 12 months, he said.

A district monitoring well in Geneva recorded water at 17.05 feet above sea level, nearly two feet below the highest level the wellwater reached during the last 12 months. A monitoring well in Longwood was nearly three feet below its highest level during the last year.

Osborne said the state has been drying out since the mid-1970s, although the years 1983 through 1985 were "quite wet." He said there are no indications wet conditions have returned.

If a draft of the "9 to 5" rule is approved next month, the permanent restrictions could go into effect sometime in July, said district spokesman Cindy

Johnson. Action on the draft, which had been scheduled this week, was delayed so new district board members could have time to review the proposal.

Under the 9 to 5 rule, all residential, commercial and agricultural irrigation would be prohibited from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day, even during times of normal rainfall. During times of water shortages, mandatory restrictions such as those in place now would replace the 9 to 5 restrictions.

Currently, residents of Seminole County and a dozen other counties in northeast Florida are under mandatory watering restrictions. Most counties in the 19-county district have been under continual watering restrictions since they were first imposed Aug. 19, 1989.

Seminole County was briefly under voluntary restrictions between November 1989 and May 1990 before mandatory restrictions were reinstated.

Under the current restrictions, residents can water their lawns three days a week and then only from 4 a.m. until 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. until 8 p.m.

Residents at odd-numbered addresses can water Saturday, Monday and Wednesday, residents at See Drought, Page 5A

Family who came to Sanford from Italy operated local grocery store downtown

Columns we've done about brothers have produced a ton of suggestions about other Sanford families in the days of old. Today let's look at another family of boys — the Rotundos.

There were five of them (plus two sisters) — the children of Mike and Carmella Rotundo. They were Charles, Louis, Mike, John and Clarence. The sisters were Margaret and Maria. All of these were the grandchildren of Louis Villano who came to Sanford from Naples, Italy. From S.M. Tucker he purchased an entire block of property where Bram Towers is now situated. The deed is dated May 11, 1899.

The Rotundo children's parents also owned property on East Union Ave., (Second Street). For example, on Feb. 7, 1914, John and Demaris Musson bought an entire block for $1,200 from Mike and Carmella and built the home which today is occupied by Mrs. Vallie Cox. Musson built a swimming pool in the rear yard. It was filled with sulphur water. Other occupants of the Rotundo property were Bill Vincent Sr., and John Woods who delivered ice.

The eldest Rotundo brother was Charles who once worked for the city's gas plant. Later he was employed by the Winn-Lovett

WAY BACK WHEN

Grocery Company out of Jacksonville. The firm operated Piggly-Wiggly grocery stores and Lovett's Groceries throughout Central and South Florida. The company had a distribution center in Sanford. It was a big warehouse located just about at the foot of Oak Avenue and out over the waters of Lake Monroe. Grocery products were shipped from Jacksonville by water to Sanford, warehoused and distributed by trucks to all their stores. When the Sanford operation closed down, Charles went to Jacksonville. Later Winn Lovett came to be Winn Dixie.

The second brother, Louis, is now 85. But he can rattle off names, dates and places like a computer. Way back when, Louis was a trainer for a local stable of pugilists. Among them were Jimmy Hoolahan, Marvin Leavitt and Carson Cooke, brother of the now deceased but well remembered Jesse Cooke. And, read this, back in the early 1920's boxing cards were promoted about twice a month on the second floor of Harry Kent's auto repair service and garage. The building is still located at Commercial and Hood Avenues.

Louis and his group of fighters went to Illinois and were there for awhile. Louis returned to the state and enlisted in a DeLand unit of the Florida National Guard that was on active duty maintaining inspection stations throughout north Florida during the fruit fly crisis. Later Louis went to work for H.B. Pope Company until he retired. He's married to the former Doris Nolan and they reside in Sanford.

Another brother, Mike, worked for R.L. Cornell's pre-cooling plant and later was in the produce business in the Zellwood area. He was the father of Sanford Police Lieutenant, Mike Rotundo Jr.

Johnny worked for many years with the A&P Tea Company and later for other grocery stores. He resides in downtown Sanford in a second floor apartment. The youngest brother, Clarence, was better known in his younger days as "Rusty." He also worked for the A&P. For quite a spell he was See Family, Page 5A

Card-loss company loses files

FORT LAUDERDALE — A company that notifies creditors when charge cards are lost or stolen had thousands of its files lost or stolen, an FBI official has confirmed.

SafeCard Service Inc. of Fort Lauderdale discovered the files were missing from a storage room in January, according to a company filing with the Security and Exchange Commission.

"To the best of my knowledge, they took immediate remedial action, as best as they could, to prevent use of the data," FBI spokesman Paul Miller said Friday.

He said it is not known whether any of the missing files were used to commit fraud either before or after the discovery.

SafeCard chief executive Steven Halmos told the SEC in a Feb. 25 filing that the company "discovered the apparent theft of a substantial amount of active and inactive credit-card data from a locked area."

SafeCard operates a hot line which will automatically notify subscribers' credit companies as soon as consumers find their charge cards are missing. It's two biggest corporate customers are Citicorp and Sears, Roebuck & Co., which together constitute 48 percent of its business.

Premature baby weighed pound at birth

DUNEDIN — Cassandra Oler, born prematurely at a weight of 16 ounces, was fighting for her life Saturday in Mease Hospital where a nurse called her "a strong little girl."

Her middle name is Hope.

"They let me touch her right hand and right then I knew her name was going to be either Faith or Hope," explained her mother, Lisa Oler, 25, of New Port Richey.

The baby was born March 5, more than two months early. The foot-long bundle was more than four pounds under the average weight for newborns. And since then, the infant has lost 2 ounces.

Cassandra is the smallest baby to have been born and survive at Mease in 53 years of deliveries.

She is currently hooked up to a number of machines that help her breathe and eat and keep her tiny heart beating.

"You can't see the baby for the wires," said Dr. Mary Newport.

"I feel optimistic about her," added the doctor, one of three neonatologists caring for the baby.

Panel says reprimand suicidal judge

TALLAHASSEE — A judge who attempted suicide after his children were sent photos of him engaged in a homosexual act should remain on the bench, but receive a reprimand, an investigative panel has recommended.

The report on Circuit Judge William A. Norris Jr. was submitted Friday to the Florida Supreme Court by the Judicial Qualifications Commission.

Norris, 58, of Bartow, a 19-year veteran of the bench, violated three canons of proper behavior for judges, said the 18-page recommendation.

"Judge Norris did not uphold the dignity and integrity of the judiciary," the panel wrote.

But the commission added that the damage to himself and the judiciary "has been significantly minimized and sufficient," rehabilitated "by Norris' job performance before and after the attempt on his life."

The commission also cited Norris' own efforts at rehabilitation.

If the court agrees to the recommendation, Norris would appear before the justices for the reprimand.

Norris had reportedly offered before last month's hearing to settle the case against him by receiving a public reprimand.

The judge was hospitalized March 10, 1990, after hooking a hose to the exhaust pipe of his car, running it through the car's window, and inhaling carbon monoxide while parked in his carport. He was despondent and began drinking three days before when he was rejected by his grown children.

The rejection came after the children were sent a snapshot of him engaged in what police called a homosexual act.

Hepatitis infects elementary students

IMMOKALEE — Health officials are inoculating children and adults after an outbreak of hepatitis surfaced in a school in this South Florida farming community.

Since mid-February, 11 cases of the viral disease have been diagnosed, said Mark Crowley, epidemiologist for the Collier County Health Unit. Currently, officials list eight active confirmed or suspected cases.

The department has been providing inoculations at Lake Trafford Elementary, a focal point for the outbreak. Health officials inoculated more than 500 people Thursday and Friday and said they would continue next week if there is demand.

The disease, marked by inflammation of the liver, is passed hand to mouth after contact with contaminated food, water or human feces. Symptoms can include a loss of appetite, fatigue, nausea, vomiting, fever, dark urine and pale, clay-colored stool.

DAYTONA BEACH — The bikini may be a little smaller and the music a little louder, but not much has changed in three decades of spring break rites.

The same scene that NBC newsmen Chet Huntley described in 1962 exists today on "the world's most famous beach."

"Did you notice, as I did, a determined and defiant pursuit of fun — as though it might at any time become outlawed or out of style?" he said then.

Or, as a New York spring breaker put on his back car window this year: "Tap the keys. Unroll the condoms. Spring Break '91."

This beachside community began making a concerted pitch for spring break business in 1962 after the successful beach movies of York World Telegram columnist Inez Robb calling the goings on in Daytona Beach "a national scandal" promoted by "adult delinquents." The local ministerial alliance blasted a "Twist" dance contest as immoral.

A then-amazing 30,000 students showed up in 1962. This year, the figure is expected to top 400,000, spending $180 million. And the "Twist" has long since given way to wet T-shirt contests.

The primary daytime activity in Daytona Beach is turning red and ogling the opposite sex while listening to pounding rap music. Strict enforcement of the laws which prohibit drinking on the beach and the Spring Break Festival Task Force theme of "Party Smart" keep most breakers sober on the sand.

Nighttime finds students partying, going to night clubs or seeking romance.

MAYPORT NAVAL STATION — A boiler accident Saturday left a Navy frigate dead in the water while on a routine Caribbean patrol, and a U.S. Coast Guard cutter was preparing to tow the warship to safety.

No one was hurt aboard the 441-foot W.S. Sims in the early morning accident, said Lt. Cmdr. Brad Osoforth, spokesman for Mayport Naval Station outside Jacksonville, where the ship is based.

"But they are dead in the water — they don't have any power at all," he said. "They are operating the radio on battery power."

The cause and extent of the damage are still under investigation, he said, and no other details were available. There are no plans to remove the 19 officers and 289 crew members, he added.

The disabled ship was sitting 30 to 50 miles east of the Guadeloupe in the Leeward Island chain southeast of Puerto Rico, said Lt. Cmdr. Osorio Hartshorn at the Navy's Atlantic fleet headquarters in Norfolk, Va.

Senator outlines five-bill coastal protection package

Associated Press

NAPLES — U.S. Sen. Bob Graham, who said he wants to protect the U.S. coast "as a national treasure," told a conservation group Saturday that he will introduce a five-bill package of legislation to make that possible.

In a major departure from federal policy, the Florida Democrat wants individual states rather than the federal government to have the final say on lease decisions. Neighboring states also would have input.

"On the question of whether this has support or not, the answer is yes," said Graham alde Ken Klein. "Whether it is controversial and will be debated, the answer to that is yes also."

The Interior Department, which manages offshore drilling, currently must consult with states about drilling plans but makes the final decision.

Graham told The Conservancy gathering that his comprehensive coastal-protection legislation to be introduced this week also would incorporate a 100-mile ban on drilling off Florida, a change that has the support of Gov. Lawton Chiles.

Existing leases within the 100-mile buffer would be canceled, and the federal govern-

SARASOTA — While Hollywood works to bring the story of babies "Switched at Birth" to the screen, the real-life players are heading to court in a bitter tug of war over a 12-year-old girl.

The preliminary script we reviewed for the movie had a happy ending and it's our hope that the real-life story will have a happy ending also," said John Blakely, an attorney who is seeking visitation rights for the biological parents of Kimberly, a hazel-eyed sixth-grader.

But Bob Mays, who raised the girl from birth only to discover he was not her biological father, is worried Ernest and Regina Twigg want shared custody of his only child.

"We're still on our roller coaster ride," Mays said.

The stories of two families who unknowingly raised the other's child for more than nine years is being made into a television miniseries to be aired over two nights on NBC, likely in early May, producer Michael O'Hara said.

Kimberly, born at a tiny rural hospital in central Florida, went home with the wrong parents — Mays and his late wife, Barbara, who died of cancer in 1981. The girl born to the Mayses, whom the Twiggs named Arlena, died of a heart defect in 1988.

Just before Arlena's death, genetic tests showed she was not the Twiggs' biological daughter.

Delinquency programs least effective

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Juvenile delinquency programs have the lowest success rate of the children's services provided by the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, an internal review shows.

High repeat offender rates, violence among youths and ineffective services are plaguing Florida's $117 million juvenile justice program, according to an annual state report.

"The system is a mess," Budd Bell, director of the Clearinghouse on Human Services, a Tallahassee-based advocacy group, said on Friday. "HRS still doesn't know how to run these programs. The traditional, orthodox programs are not working and we're spending millions of dollars to keep them alive."

The 1990 Outcome Evaluation report, mandated by the Legislature and obtained by the Sun-Sentinel of Fort Lauderdale this week, monitored the effectiveness of dozens of HRS programs that served 182,000 children from July 1989 through June 1990.

Areas evaluated include child abuse, mental health and foster care. But the program with the lowest success was delinquency services, which handled about 120,000 cases last year.

The study, conducted by HRS, recommended one South Florida delinquency program be axed and six other statewide programs be improved.

John Criswell, HRS chief of delinquency services, said he has taken the findings seriously, but he cautioned that recidivism alone can be misleading without looking at the severity of crime and length of time between arrests.

"We're on top of the problems. We're on the road to correcting some of them," Criswell said on Friday. "Resources are the major problem."

Last year, legislators approved a $52 million juvenile justice reform bill aimed at adding residential programs and diverting youths from entering the criminal system. Some of the new programs have been scaled back or killed. Two-thirds of the money disappeared because of state budget problems.

Targeted for elimination was the $653,483 Treatment Alternatives for Youth (TRY) Centers programs in Dade, Broward and Palm Beach Counties after reviewers found that 83 percent of graduates were re-arrested within a year, one of the highest recidivism rates among such programs.

High recidivism rates were also shown in the $16.5 million community control and furlough program.

More than 67 percent of youths released on furlough and 50 percent on community control were re-arrested within a year.

Anchorman booked for sex with minor

Associated Press

TAMPA — WTVT anchorman Hugh Smith, nearly nine years after a prostitution arrest he promised would not be repeated, has admitted to new charges he had sex with two prostitutes — one of them a minor.

"I'm guilty," Smith said in a prepared statement prior to turning himself in Thursday. "In light of the integrity of WTVT television, I have resigned."

Smith, 56, was named in a three-count information charging he had sex with a prostitute under age 16 in June 1980 and then solicited the same girl last Friday. He was also charged with having sex with a second prostitute last year.

Smith was released on $3,000 bond soon after his booking at the Hillsborough County Jail.

Sheriff's investigators said the underage prostitute was a 15-year-old runaway from a local shelter and the other prostitute was her 21-year-old pimp.

"He would contact this 21-year-old female who was working as a prostitute and she would take the 15-year-old to a described location or take her to his residence," said Hillsborough County Sheriff's Capt. Garry Terry. He added that when the 15-year-old was unavailable, the 21-year-old would "provide the services herself."

Smith's attorney, John Lawson, said his client cannot run from the truth he has devoted his life to reporting. "He is guilty and therefore in light of that he has entrusted me to enter the appropriate plea."

If convicted of the most serious charge — procurement for prostitution under the age of 16 — he could face a maximum of 15 years behind bars. But under sentencing guidelines, Smith likely would face anywhere from probation to 3½ years if convicted.

Smith, who is currently divorced, joined WTVT in 1963 and anchored its evening newscast until 1989. For the past two years, he has served as noon co-anchor and evening news commentator.

In September of 1982, he pleaded guilty to a charge of solicitation for prostitution.

Coroner rules death not from beating

Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — A coroner has ruled that a man who died after fighting with police outside the Duval County Jail suffered a heart attack and was not beaten to death.

Sheriff Jim McMillan said the ruling vindicates his officers, who he has maintained didn't use excessive force in restraining David Michael Sharp when he began to fight Feb. 2.

Police reports said Sharp's head hit the pavement when officers wrestled him to the sidewalk. Sharp also had a blood alcohol level of 0.26 — more than twice 0.10 considered intoxicated under Florida law.

An attorney representing the victim's parents disputed the medical examiner's findings and said an autopsy done for the family showed Sharp died from a blow to the head.

The State Attorney's Office is still investigating, focusing on actions of police who waited 1½ hours after the scuffle to take the man to University Hospital, where he died the next day.

Glenn Allen, an attorney representing the Sharp family, said results from the other autopsy showed numerous injuries to Sharp's skull and indicated the damage to Sharp's heart was caused by hospital officials using electric shocks to revive him.

Sharp had no history of heart problems and had been healthy prior to the fight at the jail, Allen said.

Allen would not identify the pathologist who conducted the autopsy for the family.

City officials were notified last month by Allen that Sharp's family plans to sue the city for wrongful death.

Soldier convicted in stabbing death

Associated Press

TAMPA — A soldier who lost a bid to wear his uniform in court has been convicted of manslaughter in the stabbing death of a prostitute.

Circuit Judge Edward H. Ward decided it could unfairly influence a jury if Army Sgt. Jonathan Jones wore his uniform before jurors.

Jones had been charged with second-degree murder in the November death of a 26-year-old woman whose body was found dumped on busy Kennedy Boulevard.

A jury Thursday found him guilty of a lesser charge of manslaughter with a weapon, said Assistant State Attorney Cass Castillo.

Jones faces from nine to 12 years under state guidelines when he's sentenced April 17.

Jones, who was stationed at MacDill Air Force Base at the time of the killing, told police he killed the woman. A knife with a five-inch blade was found in his car.

Despite the dress restrictions imposed on the sergeant, the jury was aware of his military background, Castillo said.

Bush's agenda

President Bush recently unveiled a broad and promising agenda for helping America's underclass. The White House plan includes initiatives on civil rights, education, housing and urban crime.

The administration and Congress often have clashed on domestic policy during the last two years. But with Mr. Bush riding a tremendous crest of public approval after the allied victory in the Persian Gulf, the White House is presented with its best opportunity to date to get a major domestic initiative enacted.

Most of the proposals offered in the new Bush program have a familiar ring. They would, for instance, promote wider parental choice in education and provide incentives for schools to raise standards. They would create enterprise zones in poor communities, attracting businesses through tax incentives and regulatory relief.

There is a White House proposal for grants, vouchers and other forms of assistance to help poor Americans become homeowners and the homeless to obtain basic shelter. The program would strengthen law enforcement by, among other things, relaxing the exclusionary rule regarding evidence gathered in good faith by police officers.

Mr. Bush sees his new program as an effort "to expand opportunity and choice for all Americans," but especially for those, like America's underclass, "for whom hope lies dormant."

Shortly after Mr. Bush announced his domestic empowerment agenda, some critics dismissed it as a retreat of proposals that Congress has rejected on previous occasions. However, the fact that Congress has not shared the White House's enthusiasm for parental choice, enterprise zones, housing vouchers and anti-crime measures does not mean these initiatives are without merit.

With the president's popularity among voters at a record high, Congress may be more receptive now to the idea that the Bush empowerment agenda can help break the cycle of poverty that prevents the underclass from entering the mainstream of American society.

It is time to test whether parental choice can improve the quality of education received by poor kids; whether enterprise zones can encourage businesses to take a chance on locating in urban ghettos; whether housing vouchers can make poor people homeowners and give them a stake in their communities; and whether refinement of crime laws can reduce violence in poor communities. Congress has an obligation to give Mr. Bush's proposals a fair hearing.

Deby-for-nature copycats

In 1987, an environmental group called Conservation International arranged the first debt-for-nature swap with Bolivia. Since then copycats have abounded. More than 15 swaps have been arranged in nine developing countries, whose foreign debts have been reduced by more than $100 million in exchange for new investment in conservation.

That's the kind of mimicry the planet needs. And now the group that started it has set a new standard to copy with a big swap aimed at saving North America's last tropical rain forest.

Conservation International is paying off $4 million of Mexico's debt with foreign banks. In return, Mexico will set up a fund using pesos to pay for conservation work over the next four years.

It's the biggest swap yet and with the biggest country. And Mexico's endorsement is as helpful for prospective debt-for-nature swaps as this swap is helpful for Mexico's ecology and economy.

Some developing countries are reluctant to participate in swaps because of political pressure to deny the legitimacy of their foreign debt. Mexico instead underwent tough economic reforms and debt restructuring.

The swap provides tangible evidence that those ordeals have rewards. And it officially recognizes the importance of factoring environmental protection into debt relief.

Swaps are not the solution to debt problems, but they do free up money for indigenous environmental work that otherwise would go unfunded.

With more plant and animal species than all but three other countries, Mexico is a top candidate for that type of investment. A prime focus of the new conservation spending will be in Chiapas, home to the Lacandon rain forest.

Already 50 percent consumed by logging and farming, the forest would last only 10 more years at the current rate of destruction. Now its survival odds are improved. Mexico benefits; so does the world.

Abuse at other end of spectrum

Seminole County had 17,816 residents over 65 years old in 1980. It was estimated that in 1989 this number had increased to 28,800 or 63.5 percent. There are 57,704 residents of Seminole County between 45 and 64. In twenty years a greater proportion of our population will be over 65.

Abuse has practically become synonymous with children in our thoughts. The media both print and broadcast have done an excellent job raising the communities' level of awareness relative to child abuse. Abuse at the other end of the age spectrum will be a growing phenomenon.

According to the report by the United States House of Representatives Select Committee on Aging, abuse of elderly citizens is increasing. It is estimated that 1.5 million Americans 65 and older are abused each year, with the highest incidence of abuse at age 75.

A society is expected to care for its youth and its elderly. However the frenzied pace of life today and the change from a rural to a more urbanized society has created a situation where members at both ends of the age range are abused and neglected.

Elder abuse is one of the most under-recognized and under-reported social problems today. Abuse of senior citizens take many forms:

SEMINOLE OPINION

physical, verbal, financial, abandonment and withholding the necessities of life.

Financial abuse ranges from utilizing an elderly person's annuity, social security or other income to converting their real and personal property for their own personal use.

Physical abuse may occur in a variety of settings. Relatives, friends, unrelated people and individuals working in facilities may be the source of physical abuse. Older persons living alone are subject to violence in their own homes or when they travel throughout the community. Their reflexes are slower and others may view them as easy prey. This situation may be more prevalent during times of economic distress.

Earlier in this century an agrarian society lent itself to the extended family concept. Elderly relatives were an integral part of the family structure. Mechanization and the movement from a rural to more urbanized society changed this. Today two career families are in vogue. Emphasis upon career advancement and economic security leaves little time for the elderly. Time not spent at work is scheduled to accommodate children, recreation and necessary chores.

Research reveals that the average age of the abuse victim is 75. Illness, and the aging process serve to make persons of that age more vulnerable. Sons and daughters dependent upon their parents are the chief abusers. The aged victim is frequently too ashamed to report the abuse. They feel it would disgrace the family for others to know how they are treated.

As people age they sometimes are rather difficult to manage, they may be forgetful or obstinate. For senior citizens living in institutions this may cause caregivers to be abusive, by withholding food and/or medication.

Regardless of age, mental or physical state, every individual needs love, affection and attention. Let's all remember those friends and relatives at the other end of the age spectrum and visit them regularly.

Life, death and comparisons

BOSTON — There is a father in Missouri who wants to take his daughter shopping. The trip he has in mind is a grim one. He wants to find a doctor and a state that might allow her to die.

The father is Peter Busalacchi. The daughter is Christine, the second most-famous patient in the place where Nancy Cruzan once lay.

It took a Supreme Court decision and then some, before Nancy Cruzan won the "right to die." The feeding tube was removed only after her family proved that the young woman had left "clear and convincing evidence" that she wouldn't want to live in a persistent vegetative state.

Christine left no such evidence before the car crash that severely damaged her brain at age 17. So last fall her father decided to move her from the strict and highly charged atmosphere of Missouri to a doctor he trusted in Minnesota.

Now the Missouri Court of Appeals has said that Peter Busalacchi doesn't have that right. Recently, the judges ruled that a lower court must look into the father's motives and the daughter's condition before they decide whether to let this unhappy pair out of the state's borders.

Christine Busalacchi has become a ward — or is it a prisoner? — of the state of Missouri. Peter Busalacchi, who could take his child to any doctor anywhere if she were competent, has lost that chance because she is not. And the state of Missouri has determined that it doesn't trust the morality of the state of Minnesota.

As Judge Gerald M. Smith wrote in a harsh dissent, "There is a parochial arrogance in suggesting, as the state does, that only in Missouri can Christine's medical, physical and legal well-being be protected."

The dilemma that faces this Missouri father was set up by the Supreme Court's decision. The justices left the life-or-death fate of people like Christine — those who never stated their wishes — to the "laboratory of the states." As a result, they insured that we would go shopping through these laboratories for a full selection of our rights.

Indeed, this is now part of the process for "consumers of health care" and their families. At either end of the life cycle and often in between, Americans are learning to be comparison shoppers. We go across the border from one ethical marketplace to the next.

Back in the 1970s, families traveled with brain-dead children to a state that would recognize their death. Today a couple in search of a surrogate mother will find one state open for business and another closed. A teen-ager can find an abortion in one state without her parents knowing but not in another.

Last summer, an Oregon woman went to Michigan to use the suicide machine because there was no law against assisting suicide there. If Roe vs. Wade is overturned, abortion would be the next right that became a mere matter of geography.

But when you talk about ending treatment and ending life, you have entered a Middle-Eastern bazaar of medical ethics. It is as if every state carried a different message on its license plate, some macabre variation of the theme on cars in New Hampshire: Live Free or Die.

Not only do states have different laws and guidelines, so do counties, hospitals, even doctors. In some places, a family can walk down a hospital hallway and find a second and third contradictory opinion. As Arthur Caplan at the University of Minnesota says, "if consistency is a fundamental prerequisite of ethics then it is taking a long holiday with respect to the termination of treatment."

Few of us are comfortable with the idea of ethical border-crossing in this case. Some say 20-year-old Christine Busalacchi smiles and feels. Others say that her responses are just reflexes. If she is in an irreversible vegetative state, Missouri would keep her alive forever. Minnesota has no such blanket law.

How can it be right to remove a feeding tube in one place and not in another? How can it be right to stop treatment here and continue it there?

But if the states are to be the "laboratories" in which we experiment during a time of uncertainty, if these labs reflect the range of our moral debate, then we cannot be forbidden access. In the end there is something worse than the difficult, disturbing, free-ranging ethical marketplace. What is worse is a ban against shopping for medical rights.

Christine is the second most-famous patient where Nancy Cruzan once lay.

Necessity mother of reconciliation

WASHINGTON — Through backdoor diplomacy, the long estrangement between the United States and Iran is beginning to break down. Necessity was the mother of this attempt at reconciliation.

Iran is worried about the ease and speed with which the United States filled the desert with troops. And the United States is anxious to keep Iran from becoming the once and future Iraq — a threat to the Persian Gulf's vast oil reserves.

This has led to a friendly exchange of messages through the Swiss Embassy in Teheran.

A few hours before the ground offensive was launched against Iraq, for example, the United States notified Iran. The message asked the Iranians to remain neutral and promised that U.S. forces would not linger in the Persian Gulf region once the job was done.

The Iranians responded with a reminder that Iran had joined the world in condemning the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, and reassurances that Iran would remain on the sidelines during the conflict.

It was an odd exchange of greetings between old enemies who have a new enemy in common, with all parties knowing that the rules could change and the alliances shift at any moment.

Iranian radicals still gag at the notion of any relationship with the "Great Satan" United States. But the pragmatists point out that Iran was able to kiss and make up at least conditionally with Iraq after an eight-year war, so why not with the United States?

The risk for the United States is picking the right people to make friends with in Iran, and reading them correctly. Reading Middle Eastern despots correctly has never been the Americans' forte. George Bush and Ronald Reagan thought they had a read on Saddam Hussein — that Saddam could be controlled and used to America's advantage. But Bush and Reagan were wrong. For a time Reagan even thought he had a read on the Ayatollah Khomeini — that the United States could trade arms for hostages and make both sides happy. But Reagan was wrong about that too.

The United States could brand the Ayatollah's successor, Hashemi Rafsanjani, a moderate, and go on the assumption that he could be molded into an ally. But no matter what face Rafsanjani chooses to put on, Iran is not a moderate Islamic nation.

In fact the biggest beneficiaries of the Persian Gulf War could turn out to be the last people Bush wants to benefit — the Iranian fundamentalists.

They have moved swiftly to take advantage of the power vacuum caused by the military defeat of Iraq. Iranian-backed fundamentalists precipitated the uprising against Saddam Hussein in southern Iraq. The Iranian government has denied having anything to do with the revolt, but intelligence reports claim that Iranian fundamentalists — if not the government directly — are backing the rebels.

The Iranians also may be behind fundamentalist unrest in other countries such as Jordan and Algeria. The Iranian goal, according to intelligence reports, is to establish Iranian-style Islamic states in Iraq and other Arab nations.

COLLECTION AGENCY — The United Nations is puzzling over how to get out of Iraq the money it has promised for war reparations in Kuwait. One proposal calls for setting up a special U.N. commission which would dole out the money. Iraq should be able to produce enough oil to pay reparations and still rebuild its demolished infrastructure. But there wouldn't be enough money left for Iraq to rearm.

Iran worries about how quickly the U.S. filled the desert with troops.

Reba McEntire band's plane crashes

Associated Press

OTAY, Calif. — Seven members of country-western singer Reba McEntire's band, along with her road manager and a pilot, were killed when a private plane crashed in a mountain area near the Mexican border early today, officials said.

The crash occurred about 1:45 a.m., shortly after the Hawker Siddeley aircraft had taken off from Brown Field, a private airfield about 15 miles southeast of San Diego and about four miles north of the Mexican border.

Miss McEntire was not aboard, said her spokeswoman, Jenny Bohler.

There were no survivors, Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Elly Brekke said.

Ms. Bohler said those on the plane included tour manager

Jim Hammon and band members Kirk Cappello, Paula Kaye Evans, Michael Thomas, Terry Jackson, Joey Cigalnero, Tony Saputo and Chris Austin. She did not know the identity of the pilot, who worked for the company that leased the plane to the singer.

The band members all were under 30 years and lived in Nashville, she said.

"Needless to say Reba is very upset," Ms. Bohler said. "They all had been with her a long time. They were like family. She's lost eight family members."

Two other band members and several of Miss McEntire's road crew were on another flight that left before the one that crashed, she said.

Ms. Bohler said Miss McEntire and her band had performed in San Diego Friday night. The singer stayed behind in San Diego and was going to take another flight today. The band's concert in Fort Wayne, Ind., tonight and Evansville, Ind., on Sunday night were canceled, she said.

Miss McEntire, 35, is the only singer ever voted female vocalist of the year four times by the Country Music Association, from 1984 through 1987. Her hit records include "Whoever's in New England," "Little Rock," "Walk On" and "Rumor Has It."

The pilot was filing his flight plan over the radio with air traffic controllers when contact with the plane was lost, Ms. Brekke said.

The plane bound for Amarillo, Texas, went down in a remote area about five miles northeast of Otay Mountain. The peak is just east of the airfield.

"Personnel at Navy North Island reported seeing a fireball," she said. The naval base is several miles northwest of the crash site.

Many modern musicians killed in plane crashes

Associated Press

The seven members of country-western singer Reba McEntire's band who were killed in a plane crash in California Saturday are the latest in a string of prominent musicians who have met early deaths in air accidents.

Here is a list:

— Aug. 27, 1990: Grammy-winning blues guitarist Stevie Ray Vaughan, 35, was killed when a helicopter crashed into a hill in East Troy, Wis., after departing from a concert.

— Dec. 31, 1985: Rick Nelson died in a New Year's Eve plane crash near DeKalb, Texas. Nelson, 45, achieved rock 'n' roll stardom in the late 1950s and early '60s with hits like "I'm Walkin'" and "Travelin' Man" after appearing in his parents' TV series "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet."

— March 19, 1982: Randy Rhoads, lead guitarist for heavy metal star Ozzy Osbourne, was killed when the plane in which he was flying buzzed Osbourne's tour bus and crashed into a house in Lecaburg, Fla. He was 25.

— Oct. 21, 1977: Lead singer Ronnie Van Zant and guitarist Stevie Gaines of the Lynyrd Skynyrd band, which carved a niche in the rock world with its image as hard-drinking, hell-raising Southerners, were killed in a plane crash in McComb, Miss.

— Sept. 20, 1973: Jim Croce died in an air crash near Natchitoches, La., at age 30. He put together a string of rock hits such as "Time in a Bottle" in the 1970s.

— Dec. 10, 1967: rhythm and blues artist Otis Redding died in a plane crash in Wisconsin along with members of his band, the Bar-Kays. He was 26. His greatest hit "Sittin' on the Dock of the Bay" was released just three days before the crash.

— July 31, 1964: country music singer Jim Reeves, known for hits like "Welcome to My World" and "He'll Have to Go," died at age 39 in a light plane crash near Nashville along with his manager, Dean Manuel, 30.

— March 5, 1963: Patsy Cline, whose country hits included "Crazy" and "She's Got You," died in a plane crash near Camden, Tenn., at age 31. Also killed were Grand Ole Opry stars Cowboy Copas and Hawkshaw Hawkins and pilot Randy Hughes, Miss Cline's manager.

— Feb. 3, 1959: A plane carrying singers J.P. (The Big Bopper) Richardson, Buddy Holly and Richie Valens crashed near Mason City, Iowa, en route to a show in Fargo, N.D. The Big Bopper, whose big hit was "Chantilly Lace" in 1958, was 29. Holly, whose hits included "Peggy Sue," was 22. Valens, famous for songs like "La Bamba" and "Donna," was 18.

— Dec. 15, 1944, big band leader Glenn Miller was in a plane flying over the English Channel en route from Bedford, England, to Paris where he was to give a show. The plane never arrived. Two members of the British Royal Air Force said the musician's plane might have been hit by bombs jettisoned over the English Channel by RAF bombers.

advertisers baked meatballs and French onion soup. Just days ago, it read "God Bless our Troops." The local business types who used to hunker down over eggs and hash browns to talk about the front lines now chat about the back nine.

The night the bombing of Iraq began, the Milwaukee Bucks players and coaches joined hands in a pre-game tribute to the troops. The war bothered Bucks coach Del Harris. He found it difficult to concentrate.

"I found myself at times depressed," Harris said. "I never asked the players, but I know they had to have concerns about it because they knew people who were involved."

The end of the war was a relief, he said. He no longer checks CNN before heading to a game.

Neither do millions of other Americans. The Atlanta-based network's audience gains are gone with the war. Its staffers are gone on long-delayed vacations, and public tours of CNN headquarters — stopped for security reasons — are back on schedule and sold out.

So was the Los Angeles Dodgers-New York Yankees spring training exhibition game in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Advance sales were down this year. People weren't as willing to stand in line for hours, as they had in the past. But the end of the war brought them running back.

"We've never had walk-up business like this before," said Mark Zettelmeyer, veteran spring training general manager for Yankees.

"I'm a real-estate appraiser, and that's really sold right now," said Frank Kasper, who wore a Dodgers' cap. "As you can see, I'm spending my afternoon at the ballpark."

More than half of Americans think the economy is bad and getting worse, a recent New York Times-CBS News Poll showed. One out of three people interviewed in a Los Angeles Times poll this month thought the economy would be the nation's most important problem during the next five years.

At the Bull & Finch Pub in Boston, the bar that inspired the show "Cheers," the most important problem during the next five minutes is who's buying the beer. Talk turns to the war that was, and how it feels now that it's gone.

"The fans packed the stands, soaking up the sun, trying not to think about all the worries they didn't even follow it," Jim Riveria said. "I'm sorry it ever started," Ruth Gifford said. "I'm embarrassed by the whole thing."

The end has been too vague for some people, unfinished business that puts them on edge. Saddam Hussein is still in power, the region is still in turmoil. Candace Davis and her kids don't trust uneasy endings.

"I have two older children who won't have kids because of the way the world is," said the 42-year-old, a new grandmother anyway. A younger daughter's daughter is the sixth generation of women in their Quincy, Mass., family. She has a great-great-grandmother who's 101, a survivor of five — make that six — wars.

"They don't believe it's over," Davis said of her kids. "I still don't think it's over."

assistant manager of the A&P at the southwest corner of First and Sanford. The manager of that store at the time was Haskell Brown. One of the sisters, Margaret, married R.C. Whitten Sr., long time chief deputy to several Seminole County sheriffs.

Margaret died, however, but later Whitten married her sister, Maria.

Louis can recall the old Sanford & Everglades trolley that ran on tracks from downtown to Fort Reed which at that time was located near what is now the Sanford airport. Louis says the trolley was powered by electricity. Yes, there was electricity in those days. I have a photo of that trolley taken in downtown Sanford and there's a sign on what I believe to be the southeast corner of First Street and Magnolia which read, "Light with electricity, cook with gas."

The father of all these children once had a small grocery store on West First Street in or near what is now Sanford Auto Parts. He catered not only to the local trade but also passengers who got off the trains at the railroad terminal now known as the PICO building. In those days when the trains reached Sanford they stopped near the Atlantic Coast Line shops and backed into the downtown railroad station.

Later the ACL built a new railroad station about six blocks west of French Avenue on Ninth Street. When the station moved so did the Rotundo grocery store. There was a wood frame structure on the southeast of Ninth Street just before reaching the new depot. It had space for four stores. The Rotundo grocery occupies one of them.

A personal note: Thanks for all the phone calls and mail with information and suggestions for future columns. It will take some time but I'll get around to writing about the people and the events we all recall from Way Back When.

Dorothy's five-year-old friend Christy Lowe, also of Deltona, was sporting a bonnet complete with two fuzzy rabbit ears, silk flowers and small brown bunny sitting on top. Dangling around the rim was an array of colorful plastic eggs. She shyly nodded that yes, she decorated the hat.

Festival chairman Edie Smith of the DeBary Area Chamber of Commerce, said she was pleased at the number of people who did brave the drizzles to attend the event.

"We've had all kinds of logistical glitches," Smith said from her golf buggy. "A bus got stuck because somebody parked in the wrong place. The sheep got loose and was all over the place. But I'm amazed so many people stayed and families keep coming. It's amazing, the spirit that was here today."

Organizers of the Lions Club fishing tournament were not so lucky. They cancelled their fishing tournament Saturday which had been already rescheduled once due to a rainout last week.

Event assistant chairman Al Gillin said event chairman Norm Hart may decide to cancel the tourney this year and hold it next year. Picnic food donated by Publix may have spoiled and cannot be used, he said. Lining up 15 boat captains may be more difficult to secure, he said. Hart was not available Saturday.

"When you cancel each week, you get an erosion of more and more participants dropping out," Gillin said.

Gillin said the decision whether to reschedule the tournament or cancel it could be made by Tuesday.

Saddam vows political reform

MONA ZIADE
Associated Press Writer

COSIA, Cyprus — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein promised Friday to allow multiparty democracy for the first time in 12-year-old regime, apparently bowing to popular uprisings unleashed by the Persian War.

His first nationally televised address since losing the war, Saddam also said his government had crushed a rebellion by the Muslims in the south and would soon defeat Kurdish rebels in the north.

"With God's help, we have ended the secession in the northern cities, and we are working with the help of the people ... to uproot the remnants of treason and sabotage," Saddam said.

However, rebel sources outside Iraq maintained fierce fighting continued, and Saddam's promises of political reform were met with skepticism in the West.

President Bush said at a news conference in Bermuda after his meeting with British Prime Minister John Major that he could not envision normal relations with Iraq under Saddam because "his credibility is zilch, zero, zed."

"If he's proclaiming Iraq will be a democratic nation, fine," Bush said. But then he added: "The proof of that pudding is in the eating."

Previous promises by Saddam to open up his government have gone unfulfilled.

Without mentioning it by name, Saddam accused Iran of encouraging the southern rebellion. Tehran has long sheltered dissident Iraqi Shiite groups, but has denied any part in the insurrection.

"I feel bitter that some of our neighbors with whom we have been trying to establish peace have made their territory a springboard for treachery against Iraq," Saddam said in a reference to his 1980-1988 war with Iran.

Dressed in a military uniform and reading from a prepared text, Saddam called the rebels "stooges and agents of foreign enemies" and said the Kurds were fighting to serve their own interests and those of Israel. He spoke for a little more than an hour.

He said his country was faced with rebellion while it was still "bleeding from the consequences of the vicious aggression committed by 30 countries," a reference to the U.S.-led allied forces that drove Iraq out of Kuwait.

The twin rebellions began soon after President Bush declared on Feb. 27 that Kuwait was liberated, Iraq's army was defeated and that all United States and coalition forces would suspend offensive combat operations.

Saddam said the Iraqi government would move into a "new political era" and added that a new constitution will be offered for discussion and debate before it is endorsed in a general referendum.

A new parliament would be elected, he added.

"Iraqis will find in this new era more liberty to express their wills and their interests through political parties, societies, and press," he said.

The concept of political pluralism is foreign to modern Iraqi political life. The only legal party is the ruling Baath Arab Socialist Party.

He said a new cabinet will be formed to carry out national reconstruction and to provide basic services to the populace. Arab diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the cabinet would be opened to technocrats and others not belonging to the ruling Baath Party.

Saddam did not give any timetable for forming the new cabinet, holding elections or drafting the new constitution. Similar pledges made last year before Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2 were not carried out.

He also renewed his call for resolving all Middle East conflicts, and said the Palestinian issue ranked first. He reiterated Iraqi support for Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Bush faces roadblocks to lasting peace

Baker's talks offer president little hope

TERENCE HUNT
White House Correspondent

HAMILTON, Bermuda — President Bush, trying to coax lasting peace from the aftermath of war, faces the unwelcome reality that the road to reconciliation of Arab-Israeli differences is riddled by old hostilities, distrust and reluctance to compromise.

Reading cables sent back nightly by Secretary of State James A. Baker III from his travels in the Middle East, Bush last week was unable to report any willingness by Arab or Israeli leaders to take concrete steps to end their longstanding hostility.

"I can't tell you about radically shifting positions, but it is my view that we ought to move forward," Bush said during his own journey of postwar consultations with leaders of Canada, France and Britain.

"I do think that we ought to seize the moment," Bush said at a Saturday news conference with British Prime Minister John Major. "There isn't one formula yet and I don't think there will be a single formula until a lot more consultations have taken place."

There is a palpable sense of urgency within the administration to press ahead on a two-track process that calls for gestures of reconciliation by Arab nations and Israel, and steps by Israel toward a dialogue with Palestinians.

Despite the absence of any fundamental change by any of the parties, administration officials say the Gulf War had produced an air of hope — a "window of opportunity" — in the Middle East for settling old disputes.

"The climate is now better than it's been in a long time for making progress," the president said.

Halfway around the world, Baker echoed his boss.

"There is a better chance than there was before of real reconciliation, real peace," the secretary reported.

One administration official said: "A lot of this is tea-leaf reading. What we want to see is, how far are they willing to go with this? There's a new world here. What are you going to do about it?"

Explaining U.S. optimism, administration officials say the radical Palestine Liberation

Organization and Yasser Arafat have been discredited because of their enthusiastic support of Saddam Hussein. The hope is that moderate Arab states will abandon the PLO as the official voice of the Palestinians.

Moreover, the officials note that Egypt, the only Arab state that has made peace with Israel, emerged from the Gulf War with new respect and political clout. Bush hopes President Hosni Mubarak will be a catalyst for a wider peace.

The administration also believes there is a sense of appreciation in the Arab world that the United States and its allies were willing to pay with blood and money to liberate beleaguered Kuwait and defend Saudi Arabia.

Finally, Bush believes the war demonstrated to Israel that its security is not guaranteed by holding on to the occupied territories. "Their security can't come from military superiority and geography alone," one official said.

Bush wants Israel to give up land in exchange for peace. But Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir is determined to hold on to the West Bank and Gaza, proposing instead limited self-rule for Palestinians.

Anderson marks sixth year of captivity; Shiites say no prospect for his release

MOHAMMED SALAM
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon — American hostage Terry Anderson marked his sixth year in captivity Saturday and, despite increased U.S. hopes for his freedom, Shiite Muslim clerics in Beirut said no release was imminent.

Lebanese newspapers Saturday published letters from his family and friends to Anderson. The longest-held of the 13 Westerners missing in Lebanon.

It was not known if Anderson would see the messages, but his Shiite Muslim captors are known to have sometimes allowed him to read newspapers and see television appearances by his family.

His sister, Peggy Say, who has campaigned tirelessly to secure Anderson's freedom, said she hopes this year will bring his release.

"Soon, God willing, you will all be free," she wrote. "But until then, know that your fellow Americans salute you and pray every day for your continued strength and courage."

Beirut's six Arabic language dailies published the letters, and the leading paper, An-Nahar, also published the original English texts. Anderson did not speak Arabic when he was kidnapped.

The pro-Syrian ash-Sharq daily headlined its report: "The dean of Western hostages begins his seventh year in captivity."

Anderson, 43, of Lorain, Ohio, is chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press. He was kidnapped on March 16, 1985. The pro-Iranian Shiite group Islamic Jihad said it holds him.

The other missing Westerners are five Americans, four Britons, two Germans and an Italian. Most are believed held by fundamentalist Shiite factions.

The anniversary of Anderson's abduction coincided with renewed optimism in the United States that the new political climate following the Gulf War will speed the hostages' release.

After Secretary of State James A. Baker III met with Syrian President Hafez Assad in Damascus last week, Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa promised his country would exert "maximum effort" to help win the hostages' release.

"We have the feeling that the hostage issue has to be resolved," al-Sharaa said.

The weekly magazine ash-Shiraa quoted an unnamed senior Syrian source as saying that Syria and Iran also "agreed ... on the need to work for the release of the foreign hostages in Lebanon."

Syria has been instrumental in previous hostage releases. It maintains good ties with Iran and its 40,000 peacekeeping troops in Lebanon are deployed in areas where the hostages are believed to be held. And it improved relations with Washington by sending 19,000 troops to join the U.S.-led coalition against Iraq in the Gulf War.

But Shiite clerics familiar with the kidnappers' thinking said they saw no real signs of progress toward the hostages' release.

Soviet referendum meant to save union

BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW — President Mikhail Gorbachev is trying something old, something new, and something borrowed to save his shaky union by means of a national referendum on Sunday.

He is appealing to Russian pride to preserve what he calls a 1,000-year-old state. He is pushing for a new Union Treaty binding the 15 restive republics. And he has borrowed the Western idea of a referendum, the first in Soviet or even Russian history.

Even Gorbachev's critics believed most voters would say "yes" to preserving the Soviet Union. But the vague wording of the referendum left them guessing exactly how Gorbachev might translate a victory into policy.

Activists in the Russian Federation, which has declared sovereignty from the central government, and the three Baltic republics, which have declared independence, feared that Gorbachev would use a referendum victory to forebly suppress their aspirations.

Six republics, representing 10 percent of the estimated 200 million Soviet voters, are boycotting the vote. They are the Baltic republics of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, plus Moldavia, and the Caucasus republics of Georgia and Armenia.

Gorbachev sought to calm fears and rally support in a speech that was broadcast nationally on Friday night and repeated Saturday afternoon.

"Our 'yes' will preserve the integrity of the state, which is 1,000 years old and which has been created by labor and wisdom (and) incalculable victims of many generations," Gorbachev said.

Public opinion polls indicated that up to 70 percent of those casting ballots would answer "yes" to the main referendum

Despite a short week Lake Mary keeps busy

LAKE MARY — This week was a short one for Lake Mary High School seniors, as they used their seniority to take a day off on Senior Skip Day, Wednesday, March 13.

The Class of 1991 took a leave of absence and headed for the beach despite the rainy and overcast weather.

Lake Mary students were on their best behavior for the visit by a group of members from the National Association of Secondary School Principals, which was holding its convention in Orlando recently. A group of principals from all over the nation and the Soviet Union toured the school, listened to presentations from students and faculty members, and traded gifts with the students and teachers.

Lake Mary was also the host for the Student Government Seminole County Workshop held on Friday, March 15. Students and advisors from all over the county attended the workshop held in the media center and exchanged ideas about Prom, Homecoming, fundraisers, and other school functions with their peers.

Jake Vest, Orlando Sentinel cartoonist ("That's Jake"), gave the group a speech on leadership motivation.

Winners of the Diversified Cooperative Training (DCT)-sponsored Talent Show were senior Matt Sherk, who played the piano and sang an original song, "Angels in the Wind," which was about the war in the Middle East; the band Porraz, which was led by lead guitarist and senior Corey Lund and junior dancers Kortney Lane and Sheri Corino.

Seniors ask questions and persue answers

So many questions, so few answers. Many seniors felt that their last year of high school was one big question.

Whether to further their education, join the armed forces or start working were usually the first questions that demanded answers. Since school became a way of life for many seniors, they found out that they had to prepare themselves for the working world.

"I've never had a job and know there is a lot I need to learn before beginning a career," said Melanie Betts.

The next questions were what college to attend, how to pay for tuition, or what branch of service to go to.

"University of Florida has one of the best advertising programs around and that is the field I want to go into. So, I've decided I want to go to UF," said Nathan Cook.

Seniors have answered many of these questions. They are setting short term goals in hopes of meeting a greater goal.

Senior Tony Chaver was frightened entering his last year of high school. Tony faced pressures concerning studies and college. As a member of the football team, baseball team, and Tribe, Tony remains busy.

"The year is going by so quickly and many decisions had to be made quickly," said Chaver.

Chaver has based his career goal on his interest. "I enjoy working with my hands." He aspires to go into electronics and attend Florida A&M University.

Chaver encourages next year's seniors to, "Make the best of your last year, do as much as you want to. You are only a senior once."

Joint replacement surgery helps restore quality of life

By MICHAEL J. SMIGIELSKI, M.D.
Orthopaedic Surgeon

Joint replacement surgery is one of the most successful operations that physicians have to relieve debilitating pain and improve the quality of someone's life.

In the United States over 300,000 joint replacements are performed each year on hips, knees and shoulders. A stiff, painful joint can often prevent one from enjoying many of life's simple pleasures such as walking, swimming and even reaching for a child. Thanks to medical and technical advances, the orthopaedic surgeon can often relieve all of the pain and discomfort.

Joint replacement surgery began in the 1960's in England. In the past 30 years dramatic improvements in surgical techniques, as well as the design and materials of the artificial components have been made.

The space program has contributed significantly to the various materials used in the joint replacement prostheses. Prior to joint replacement surgery, patients with severe arthritis ended up in wheelchairs with a limited activity level and constant pain. By replacing someone's hip, knee or shoulder, the patient receives a painless functional joint, in essence, curing the arthritis.

Osteoarthritis, or wear-and-tear arthritis, occurs when the cartilage in the joint begins to break down. The bones rub against each other causing friction resulting in pain.

Before your orthopaedic surgeon recommends an artificial joint, your problem will be carefully diagnosed and evaluated. If you and your physician agree that an artificial joint is the best solution to your problems, surgery can be scheduled. Most orthopaedic surgeons wish to have people donate a few units of their own blood prior to surgery so they receive their own blood back after surgery.

Total joint surgery often takes between two to three hours and involves removing, reshaping and resurfacing the bones of the joint to allow the implantation of the prostheses. The muscles, tendons, nerves and arteries are not removed, but the bone ends are resurfaced with metal and plastic components to create a new joint.

The primary goal of your hospital stay after surgery is to begin walking or bending the joint which has been replaced. Most patients get out of bed the day after surgery as physicians have learned that early movement is of great benefit following joint replacements. Therapy is often used upon the patient's return home to improve their function.

As with all major surgery there are risks which fortunately are very low. These certainly should be discussed with the physician prior to undergoing a major operation of any sort. Because an artificial joint is never as good as your original one before arthritis, certain restrictions are imposed on activity level. In general, patients are able to walk, swim, bicycle, golf, bowl and dance. Activities such as basketball and tennis are not encouraged as they cause the joint replacement to loosen prematurely.

The miracle of joint replacement is truly a triumph of modern medicine. In a relatively short time, a person's life can be changed from one of pain and limited function to a pain-free existence.

Rain soaks Invitational

By PHIL SMITH Herald Correspondent

Lake Howell junior Ken Times won the discus at the Lake Mary Invitational track meet with a throw of 153.1. In the final team standings, the Silver Hawks were a close second to host Lake Mary, trailing the Rams by a final margin of 14 points, 120-118.

LAKE MARY — Competitors from 14 high schools spent more time battling the rain, cold and high winds than each other at the 10th annual Lake Mary Track and Field Invitational Friday afternoon and evening at Lake Mary High School's Don T. Reynolds Stadium.

"The weather turned nasty on us and it took a lot of energy from the kids," said Lake Mary boys' coach and meet coordinator Harry Nelson. "We also had a rain delay that made the meet run way too long."

With all the delays, the meet, which was scheduled to begin with the preliminaries in the field events around 4 p.m., didn't end until after midnight.

About the only time it didn't rain was during the short ceremony just before the running finals began in which ex-Lake Mary quarter-miler Fran Gordon, ex-Lake Mary high jumper Mike Rouse, Lake Brantley Coach Charles Harris and former Lake Mary boys' coach Mark McGee were inducted into the Lake Mary Invitational Hall of Fame.

On top of that, there were problems in the scoring of the boys' section of the meet that took nearly 24 hours to unravel. Ultimately, Lake Mary edged Titusville-Astronaut by one-sixth of a point, 121-120.5/6.

There was no such problem in the girls' half of the meet. Astronaut easily out-distancing second-place Lyman 175-80.

Anush Collins, who won the meet's MVP award, led the way for the Lake Mary boys by winning won the 220-yard dash and establishing a new meet record of 10.8 in winning the 100-meter dash.

Titusville-Astronaut's Lavera Green claimed the girls' MVP trophy by setting a new meet record in the triple jump (36-1½), taking second in the long jump (17-0¼), finishing third in the 110-yard high hurdles (16.4) and coming in fourth in the 220-yard dash (28.5).

Other event winners for the Lake Mary boys were D.J. Lewis in the mile run (4:36.4) and Bob Robertson in the 880-yard run (2:04.1). Lewis also anchored the Rams' winning two-mile relay team (8:41.0) that included Tad Burkhardt, Chris Taylor and Toby Ayers.

For Lake Howell, Ken Times won the discus (153-1) and Matt Bowman took first in the pole vault (13-0).

Lyman received first-place finishes from Todd Cleveland in the triple jump (43-9¼) and the quartet of Cornelius Cotton, Todd Cleveland, Herbert Jenkins and Chris Cotton, who won the 440-yard relay (45.8).

Mike Goins was a triple winner for Oviedo, taking firsts in the high jump (6-0), the 120-yard high hurdles (15.7) and the 330-yard intermediate hurdles (41.9).

Defense comes through for weak-hitting 'Noles

From staff reports

WINTER PARK — Still struggling at the plate, Seminole turned to its defense to pull out a 3-2 win over Trinity Prep in a high school baseball game Friday afternoon.

Trailing the Seminoles going into the bottom of the seventh, Trinity Prep put runners at second and third with two out. The next batter ripped a line drive to center field. Tony Chavers came up throwing and hit first baseman W.L. Gracey, who made the relay to catcher Steve Wilbur, nailing the second runner.

Seminole managed just five hits against Trinity Prep pitcher Jason Steiner. David Eckstein had a single and a double to lead the Tribe while B.J. Osborne added a double.

"Steiner pitched a great game," said Seminole Coach Mike Powers. "Our hitting woes are still haunting us. We had six hits all week and we won two of three."

Jeremy Chumat threw a complete game to earn the win for Seminole, limiting Trinity Prep to six hits.

"He pitched a good game," said Powers of Chumat. "He got tired in the seventh inning because of cold."

Seminole, now 6-10, will play Lake Brantley on Wednesday.

FCC-J ends Raiders' streak with doubleheader sweep

Plant manufactures new machines

Cans made here to fill shelves round the world

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Simplimatic Engineering Company, 500 Airport Boulevard, is now constructing new machines that will eventually provide improved steel and aluminum cans for the food and beverage industry throughout the nation as well as in various parts of the world.

A new, fully automatic bulk palletizer that loads up to 3,000 empty cans per minute, was initially introduced during the 1991 International Exposition for Food Processors held in Chicago early this past week. The unit, called the Simpli-Pal 3000, is to be built at Simplimatic's manufacturing plant located in Sanford.

Ron Wolfe, Senior Project Manager at the Sanford plant said, "These machines will be going to such companies as Anheuser-Busch, American Can, National Can, and several other major companies both at home and abroad." Wolfe said that while the Sanford plant currently has approximately 100 employees, there is a chance the number can be increased to 130 or 150 as the new palletizers are constructed.

An overall view of the Simpli-Pal 3000 automatic bulk palletizer viewed from the operator's side. The huge machine can load up to 3,000 empty cans per minute.

In addition to the 3000 model, a second machine, called the Simpli-Pal 2000 will be offered by the company for lower speed can manufacturing lines. Identical in construction to the larger unit except for the electronics package, this machine will palletize 2,000 empty cans per minute.

Although designed primarily to meet the needs of American can makers, the palletizer has also been conceptualized for use in Europe where slightly different machine modifications are required.

According to Stephen E. Price, general manager of Simplimatic's Sanford plant, the new can palletizer also incorporates a highly advanced electronic control system. Price said the system makes it "exceedingly easy to operate." The electronics not only guide the equipment, but quickly identify any machine problems that might occur, giving operators an on-screen fault indicator which shows them where the fault is, allowing for a more rapid return to normal operations.

Price said both the Simpli-Pal 2000 and 3000 will be built at the Sanford plant on Airport Boulevard. The main office of the company is in Lynchburg, Virginia.

He's been easing pain of death for loved ones almost 51 years

By LACY DOMEN
Herald People Editor

SANFORD — Oren "Shorty" Smith squares his shoulders and stretches to his full five feet one and one-half-inch height. His eyes twinkle like one of Santa's elves. He grins amiably, extending his hand.

"Hi, I'm Jones," he teasingly says, as he invites you into his parlor. His funeral parlor.

Smith, who "has been called Shorty since boyhood," is considered an institution at Brisson's Funeral Home in Sanford, where he has been employed for almost 51 years.

"I'm only 79. I'm not old enough to retire," Smith says.

"He knows so much. I thought he was 803," fellow employee Rick Walker says.

Smith says over the years he has been an embalmer, bookkeeper, manager and ambulance driver. He enjoys all facets of his job except one, he says.

"Meeting the people is my favorite part of the business," he says. "The worst part is working with children," he admits.

"You don't know how much it meant to me when I was doing the embalming and makeup and a loved one would say 'Shorty he looks nice.' That's how families would always remember a loved one. I did what I thought the family would want," he says. In 1940, Smith quit his job with the City of Sanford Water Works Department after working part time for the funeral home.

"I kind of got to likin' this so I came here for less money. I stayed," he says.

Smith says the business hasn't changed a lot.

"There's always been but one way to do things and that's do them right," he says.

Although surrounded by death on a daily basis, Smith's optimistic attitude comes from the people he meets and his close family.

"You can't let dealing with death bother you. You don't take it home with you," he says.

Home is where his wife of 60 years, Minnie, has raised "two wonderful children," according to Smith. Pat Epps, Sanford, and Dr. O.R. Smith Jr., Ft. Worth, Texas, have been "a joy to their father."

Smith has also been active in Sanford Lions Club "a good many years."

In his spare time, he putters. "I don't do anything. Maybe I work in my shed," he said.

Smith says he is grateful for a long and happy life.

"It's been a wonderful life," Smith says. "Living in this small town with my friends and my family..." he mused. "Wonderful."

SANFORD — On the first Sunday of every month the district officers of the Fraternal Order of Eagles and the Ladies Auxiliary meet at a pre-determined aerie.

Sanford was the host aerie for March.

Bernie Albert and his wife, Pat, arrived aboard a chartered bus along with other district officers from the Goldenrod Aerie Chapter No. 3496 for this month's district meeting.

Cassi Atcheson, president of the Sanford Aerie Ladies' Auxiliary, said. "The Eagles are people helping people."

Mary Lou Nordman, past president and secretary said, "We do a lot of charitable work. We help people when they need help and we'll always welcome women with high standards into our sisterhood."

Pat Albert of Chapter 3496 loves being a Lady Eagle and said, "It's great being an Eagle, it's also being with great people." Trudie Reynolds, vice president of Chapter 3496 offered that, "All of our U.S. presidents have been Eagles."

Without exception, every Eagle who commented, stated that they work hard for charity and contribute to all major charities but have a lot of fun doing the good work and quote what seems to be their motto, "people helping people."

On Saturday and Sunday, April 13 and 14, the Eagles will hold a benefit for Nancy Dukes who needs $75,000 for a heart transplant. They invite all of Sanford to attend.

There are more than 1,700 Eagle auxiliaries with membership totaling over 400,000 women Eagles in the U.S.

Support group helps children through divorce, alcoholism

DEAR MARY: I recently divorced my husband because his drinking problem was making life unbearable for all of us. My third grader began having problems in school during the divorce, so I talked to the counselor about what was going on. She put my daughter into a counseling group for kids going through divorce in the family, but she says that she may also need a support group for children of alcoholics. I can't see why that would be necessary, since my husband no longer lives with us. What are these groups for?

DRUG COUNSELOR
MARY BALK

SOBER MOM
DEAR SOBER: We know that children of alcoholics (COAs) are four times more likely to become alcoholics than others, and support groups for COAs may help break this multigenerational cycle of alcoholism. Children living in alcoholic homes usually learn 3 basic rules for surviving: "Don't Talk; Don't Trust; Don't Feel!" They feel guilty and responsible for the parent's drinking because they don't realize that it is a disease which they can't cause, control, or cure. Also, they are often embarrassed by the behavior of the alcoholic

The parents of one of our son's friends heard about our feelings on this, and told their son he cannot come to parties at our house. We are really insulted by this rigid attitude. Do you have some hints that we could share with them to help them understand what we're trying to do?

RESPONSIBLE PARENTS
DEAR (IR)RESPONSIBLE PARENTS: If I understand what you are trying to teach your teenagers, it is that it's OK to break the law if you do it at home with parental approval. Alcohol is ALWAYS an illegal drug for any person under age 21, and it makes as much sense to provide your teenagers with alcohol as it does to provide them with cocaine, marijuana, or any other illegal and addictive substance.

Finally it is important that you realize that you can be held criminally responsible for minors consuming alcohol in your home, and civilly liable for any injury or damage caused by an intoxicated underage person to whom you have furnished, sold, or served alcohol.

In a word, there is no such thing as "responsible" drinking habits for teenagers.

Let there be light, but not all the time

DEAR ABBY: The enclosed article was published in our local paper, and I thought it deserved a wider audience. If every parent and grandparent made this little jingle a part of a child's daily life, who knows how much energy might be saved!
YOUR FAN IN VERMONT
DEAR FAN: I agree. And here it is:
SINGING FOR EDISON
Annette Anderson, who died several years ago in Rutland, Vt., at the age of 99, was a singer. From 1914 to 1917, she worked with Thomas Alva Edison, singing song after song as he developed his phonograph recording system. He had stacks of sheet music everywhere, and would pick one out, saying "Here, Annette—sing this one."
I remember Annette telling me about Edison's eccentricities, and his small soundproof recording room (completely lined with horsehair), but the strongest memory is of a jingle I heard daily in my childhood. It was written by Edison, and it hung from the electric light chain in his recording room.
It went like this: "Save the juice, save the juice, turn out the light if it won't be needed for 10 minutes or more." Of course, the meter is all wrong, but the message is accurate.

prudent reminder near the light switches in our homes, we would be less dependent on foreign oil and could avoid situations like the one we are in right now.

DORIS ERB, CUTTINGSVILLE, VT.

DEAR DORIS: With all due respect to Mr. Edison, "juice" is saved only if the lights are switched off for 10 minutes or longer. According to a spokesperson for the Department of Water and Power in Los Angeles, there is a power surge when lights are turned on, so lights should be left on if one plans to be in and out of the room. Perhaps the jingle should be amended to read: "Save the juice, save the juice, turn out the light if it won't be needed for 10 minutes or more." Of course, the meter is all wrong, but the message is accurate.

For 93 years the F.O.E. has stood proud and tall. It is one of the first fraternal organizations to recognize women in the 20th century. They are known and credited for creating and recognizing Mother's Day.
The men formed the F.O.E. in Seattle on February 6, 1898. By 1908, they sponsored America's first Mother's Pension law; in 1911, the Workmen's Compensation law. They have consistently sponsored laws for the benefit of all Americans including the first Old-Age Pension law in 1923. They also supported the 1935 enactment of the Social Security law and inaugurated the Jobs After 40 program in 1957.
For the past 93 years the F.O.E. has supported, initiated, created, sponsored, dedicated, established and donated to well over 40 programs to benefit America and Americans as well as Eagles in foreign nations for the benefit of those in need.

The Eagles are one of the few organizations in which independent women can join without being required to have a male family member in the Eagles.
The Ladies are an auxiliary of the Eagles and fully support the men in their aerie. However, the women of the Eagles have independent programs that they support.
Presently, the Lady Eagles of Sanford are inviting local ladies to join their membership in an open drive to bolster their roster.

You may become closely involved with a very unique individual in the year ahead, someone who isn't overly popular but who selects you to be a special friend. This relationship could produce benefits.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A friend who is a good pal but a poor paymaster might try to stick you today with the lion's share of a bill, regarding something in which you're jointly involved. Be on guard.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you suffer from a lack of accomplishment today, it's not likely to be due to an absence of initiative. You'll have the drive, but your procedures could be counterproductive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's best not to take situations for granted today, even those in which you feel comfortable and familiar. There's a chance that uncertainties could present themselves in various developments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Even if the overfriendly behavior of someone you know only casually arouses negative perceptions, this should not be ignored. You may be dealing with someone with ulterior motives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't let companions or associates make important decisions for you today; they could impair your image if they use poor judgment. Think for yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even though your performance level might not be up to par today, you may not be very tolerant of those with the same problem. Don't mentally block out yours while emphasizing theirs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If possible, steer away from the complex financial or business problems of a friend today. If you don't, you may find yourself joining this individual beyond the looking glass, where things can get distorted.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be extremely selective regarding whom you go to for advice today. An ineffective counselor may get

By James Jacoby

Yesterday's deal featured declarer's need to unblock diamond spots from the dummy. Today's hand also involves a key unblock, but it is more difficult to spot, if you will excuse the pun.

The auction is typical of pairs tournaments - no one stops bidding after finding a fit. But North should have passed over West's three hearts. South would have doubled for a penalty of 300 (provided that North gets a club ruff).

Declarer won trick one with the heart ace and led a spade to the jack, queen and king. East continued hearts and declarer ruffed the third round. Now South played the ace and queen of diamonds, being relieved to see the 2-2 break. East returned a low club. After winning with the ace, how would you continue?

If the spades had been 5-1, surely East would have given his partner a ruff. So declarer correctly cashed the spade ace, dropping West's 10. But now South took his eye off the ball: On his spade ace he played dummy's four-spot. He overtook his diamond eight with dummy's nine and called for the spade seven, but East played the five. With no hand entry remaining, declarer couldn't avoid a club loser. He had lost a trick in each suit: one down.

If South unblocks dummy's seven of spades on the second round, he can triumph. He crosses to dummy with a diamond and leads the spade four, finessing the six when East plays the five. Dummy's club loser is discarded on the spade nine, and declarer is home.

Scrutinize those spots. When did you last finesse a six successfully?

More opportunities than usual may be available to you in the year ahead. However, you must be careful not to dilute your possibilities by jumping from one thing to another.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There is a possibility that you might be overly negative or unrealistically optimistic when assessing various developments today. Either extreme could be counterproductive.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to keep a tight lid on your expenditures today, especially those dedicated to non-essentials. If you are undisciplined, things could get a bit out of hand.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Placing too much emphasis on your own requirements while ignoring those of associates won't make you very popular at this time. Poor behavior could leave a bad lasting impression.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you are required to make a serious presentation today, be careful that you do not embellish the facts. It could darken your image, as well as cost you the deal.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You might be in need of financial or business counseling and, instead of seeking out experts, there's a chance you may go to friends who don't know even as much as you do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Lady Luck could be a trifle fickle today and, if you depend on her too heavily, she may let you down just when you need her the most. Be self-sufficient.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually, you're reasonably well-organized, but today you might be inclined to let chance manage your affairs. This could be a big mistake.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone with whom you're closely involved might draw you into a situation today that could incur unplanned expenses.
